LONDON, TUESDAY, APRIL 18.

The French papers of Friday arrived on Sunday night. Notwithstanding the confidence with which the fall of Missolonghi has been stated, it now appears that there are some reasons for doubting whether that calamity has really fallen on the Greek cause. The Journal des Débats, in an article from Ancona of the 2d of April, states, that it was on Poros, a place situated to the eastward of Anatolico, the attack was made which led to the belief that Missolonghi had been captured.

By a letter from Berlin it appears, that the Russian affirmation on the longstanding question relative to the northern provinces of Turkey, has been sent to Constantinople. The Emperor Nicholas is said to have communicated copies of the Ukase of the Emperor of Wellington, and to all the Foreign Envoys at the Court of St. Petersburgh. If within a fixed period the terms of the treaty are not fulfilled by the ambassadors of Russia, the Ukase, it is said to be the declared intention of Nicholas to march a division of his army to the frontiers of Turkey, and, in the event of the Porte not yielding to the Russian demonstration, he will cause possession to be taken of Wallachia and Moldavia, and place the government of them on the footing prescribed by the treaty with the Turks.

An arrival from Philadelphia has brought an important State document—the message of the President of the United States to Congress, on the subject of the mission to Panama, which was laid before that Assembly on the 13th ult. at Washington. The Congress of Commissioners to attend the South American Congress has led to much discussion in the Legislature of the United States, which was carried on with closed doors; yet it now appears, that the expediency of the mission has been determined in the Senate by a majority of 21 to 19 only. Two principles to be proposed at the Congress at Panama are—"Mutual benefit to Europe and to Asia, from their intercourse with America—and Asian Power shall colonize any portion of America—and that the Slave Trade shall be abolished throughout the whole Continent."

From the Paris Papers of Wednesday and Thursday.

The Constitutionnel mentions the following interesting occurrence, which took place on Tuesday at a party given by a Duchess, whose name is left in blank:—"The Sieur Joseph Lemaire, the unfortunate survivor of the wreck of the celebrated Canaris was one of the guests, when the horrible intelligence arrived of the Greek Missolonghi was the subject of the company. The unfortunate young man, after betraying signs of the deepest grief, fainted away, and became the sole object of universal sympathy. At that moment the Austrian Ambassador entered the Saloon, but perceiving at once the extreme agitation with which it was filled, and its cause, thought proper to make an immediate retreat. Nothing, says the Journal, "he should compromise himself by sympathizing with generous sentiments."

The Etoile contains extracts from the Austrian Observer of the 3d inst. which gives details of the capture of the forts and islands of Vassiladi and Anatolico, previously to the fall of Missolonghi. The first was lost in consequence of a bomb which fell into the powder magazine, and blew it up. The whole garrison of 200 men, after a most desperate resistance were all massacred. The fortified island of Anatolico was next attacked, and the Convent of Kimderos on the continent by whose fire it was chiefly defended, was also carried by storm, after a most gallant resistance: almost the whole garrison of 400 perishing in the conflict, or being put to the sword. The Turks also took several numbers, and burnt the whole of their dead. The garrison and inhabitants of Anatolico then begged to capitulate, and were allowed to retire to Patras after laying down their arms, to retire by Ibrahim Pacha after laying down their arms, to retire to Patras, during these events 700 unmolested towards Patras. During these events 700 Greeks made a desperate sortie from Missolonghi, and retired after having inflicted an immense loss on the assailants, comprising many of the celebrated Turkish Officers, and a number of the Turkish Cavalry.

The French Ministers and French Police are now very busy in endeavouring to suppress the clamours of joy which the people of the metropolis are giving at the rejection of the Bill of Indemnity; but they do not seem very successful. In vain do Police officers forbid the use of lamps, whole streets and parades are illuminated at lights, and numerous groups parade day and evening, shouting "Long live the Peers of France!" This is not the only way in which the aristocracy of the Peerage is paid in consequence one per cent. on Tuesday, and on Wednesday the Exchequer was shut that day being the anniversary of the King's return to Paris.

Private letters of a late date from Rio de Janeiro state, that all the officers of the Brazilian Navy, Sir Joseph Pinagre, who was arrived in England gave notice for so much speculation, have been confirmed in their rank to which Lord Cochrane had appointed them; in the rank to which Lord Cochrane had appointed them; the Emperor testifying thereby his approbation of their services, and his respect for the nomination of his late High Admiral.

Saturday's London Gazette announces that Augustus G. Stapleton, Esq. has been appointed one of the Clerks of his Majesty's Signet, with Colonel H. F. Turks has been appointed Consul in London for the Duchy of Oldenburgh.

The "gentleman high in the opposition" who is to offer himself for Newark at the next election, intimates to Mr. Colbert, the correspondent informs us, that at the "feast of the gridiron" on Thursday the 5th inst. it was mentioned that Mr. Colbert, the Sheriff, side at a dinner at Newark, and that "several in-dependent gentlemen of Newark and the neighbourhood would assist him in canvassing that borough."—Lincoln Paper.

Among the subscriptions towards bringing Mr. Cobbett into Parliament is one from Lord Cochrane of £20.—"the smallness of which is not more proportion of £20.—"the smallness of which is not more proportion of £20.—"the smallness of which is not more proportion
