THE LAYTON FAMILY OF DELMARVA

Setting the Scene
Archeological evidence indicates humans first entered the area now known as the Delmarva Peninsula at the end of the Ice Age, around 10,000 B.C. No evidence of settlements remains from these early inhabitants, but watermen dredging for oysters in Maryland's waters still bring up Paleo-Indian fluted points, or arrow heads.

Several European explorers reached the shores of the peninsula in their searches for a passage to the West Indies. Giovanni da Verrazano, a Florentine sailing under the French flag in 1524, is known to have landed on the ocean side and crossed to the bay side, later reporting that he had seen the "Western Ocean."

The records left by these early European explorers present a picture of an intensely vital and diverse native Indian culture. Unfortunately, they were a people doomed to all but disappear from their land within a few decades. Disease, warfare, forest clearance and migration all contributed to their decline and eventually their almost total absence from the historical record.

The people of the Eastern Shore belonged to the Algonquin-speaking group, which inhabited most of the lands bordering the Chesapeake Bay. There were four major Indian groups on the lower Eastern Shore — the Nanticookes, Pocomokes, Choptanks and Assateagues. Of these, the Pocomokes were the principal group in what is today Somerset County. Closely affiliated with the Pocomokes were at least three other groups known as the Annemesses, Manokin and Monie, who lived immediately to the north along the waterways that now bear their names.

The Pocomokes, in particular, were savagely harassed by a notorious figure in the 17th century history of this area, Colonel Edmund Scarburgh, who lived in the Virginia portion of the lower Eastern Shore. After repeated raids north against the Indians, the Pocomoke, Manokin and Annemesses Indians abandoned their land and moved to the east. There they joined the Assateagues, who were living in a village called Askiminikansen, located in present-day Worcester County. Continuous encroachment by the Europeans drove these dwindling groups north into present-day Delaware, and by 1770 all reference to Indian towns on the Eastern Shore of Maryland ceases.2

The Calverts and the Birth of Maryland
The land that would become the state of Maryland was a gift to George Calvert from King Charles I. George was born in Yorkshire, England, about 1580, son of a gentleman. He obtained his BA from Trinity College, Oxford, in 1597, and toured Europe, studying French, Italian and Spanish. In 1604, he married Anne Mynne.

In 1606, George began his public career as a secretary to Robert Cecil, secretary of state, who needed foreign language specialists on his staff. When Cecil died in 1612, George continued to aid King James I, eventually handling all Spanish and Italian correspondence. He was knighted in 1617, and named secretary of state himself in 1619. By 1625, Puritanism was forcing Catholics like George from state positions, and he resigned. James I rewarded him with a barony in the Irish peerage because he held lands in Ireland as well as in Yorkshire. George assumed the title Lord Baltimore.

George had been interested in the American colonization for some time, serving in the Virginia Company, among others. In 1621, he established a colony in Newfoundland, but after one winter, sought a warmer clime. In 1629, he went to Virginia, and by 1632, the crown, then Charles I, granted unsettled territory northeast of the Potomac to its friend. This vast region was fixed between the Virginia colony to the south and early Dutch and later Quaker settlements to the east and north.

George wanted the colony named Avalon, the same name he had used in Newfoundland. Charles thought it would be nice, however, if it were named after his wife, Henrietta Maria, and so it became Maryland.

Lord Baltimore drafted his charter to give the founders supreme power. But he also included statements expressing tolerance for all Christian religions, a bold and unusual move for the time. Unfortunately, he died in April 1632 before the charter was sealed. Therefore, the first charter of Maryland was issued to his son Cecilius, or Cecil, 20 June 1632.

The Charter of Maryland established a proprietary form of government. This meant that Cecil owned all of the land within the boundaries of the colony. Despite royal signatures on the Calvert charter, disagreements over the exact boundaries between neighboring colonies instigated armed and verbal disputes that lasted until the 19th century.

Cecil, the second Lord Baltimore, followed his father's path through Trinity College. In 1628, he married Anne Arundell. He inherited his father's charter when he was 26, and for the next 43 years, served as proprietor of Maryland. But because of personal and political enemies fighting over state and religious differences, he never was able to leave England to see his lands. He delegated the running of the colony to his younger brother, Leonard, whom he sent to Maryland with some colonists in 1633. During religiously turbulent times, Cecil guaranteed religious liberty to all who accepted the doctrine of the Trinity.

The earliest conflict over the authority of the Calvert charter involved William Claiborne, who founded a trading colony on Kent Island in 1631 under the auspices of William Cloberry and Co., an English mercantile firm. Claiborne was given the right to trade with the Indians in the Chesapeake region, and as a result, established a trading post on the southern tip of Kent Island. As might be expected, Claiborne violently opposed the Calvert charter, for it infringed on his claim to the Kent Island settlement.

Eventually, Claiborne's refusal to acknowledge Cecilius Calvert's proprietary right to the developed land on Kent Island resulted in armed conflict between three ships at the mouth of the Pocomoke River in 1635. Claiborne won the battle, but royal opinion in London sided with Calvert and he won the war for sovereignty over Kent Island.

Meanwhile, because Calvert's land was of little value without someone to live on it and work it, an incentive to settlement was proclaimed in 1633 — even before the first vessel had left for Maryland — called the first of his several Conditions of Plantation. Under these Conditions, he offered the one thing he had plenty of — land — as an inducement to those who furnished their own transportation or who provided for the passage of others to Maryland.

Settling the Eastern Shore

No colonial settlements had been established on the lower Eastern Shore prior to 1660. However, in March of that year, the General Assembly of the Virginia colony passed a law forbidding the expression of the Quaker faith.

In response to a petition from Virginia Quakers asking permission to relocate in the Maryland province, a proclamation was penned on 6 November 1661 welcoming them to Maryland.

Settlements were established during the following six months, first at Annemessex and shortly afterward at Manokin. The Annemessex settlement was located south of the Great Annemessex River and northeast of Coulbourne's Creek. The Manokin settlement along the Manokin River and Back Creek immediately became the seat of the Eastern Shore Commissioners, establishing a foothold in what was firmly believed to be the province of Maryland.

The first settlers erected makeshift shelters until more substantial accommodations could be assembled. They probably brought with them canvas tents or tools for building a temporary lean-to or hut of saplings and natural cover. The wealthier emigrants might have used their resources to hire carpenters who could fashion the parts necessary for a rudimentary house before they left Virginia. These materials would then have been transported to Somerset County by ship.

The more permanent homes lasted only 15 to 20 years. They were one-room frame dwellings, usually measuring about 15x12 feet. The roof was either clapboard, or thatched with local grasses. These early houses had a catted chimney, which was a wooden frame caulked with mud on the inner surface. Oak and cypress were the indigenous woods that naturally split to form clapboards, and the durable nature of cypress clapboards made them especially attractive as a local export product.

Border Disputes

Although these settlers thought they were in Maryland, the very same Colonel Scarburgh who had run the Native Americans from their land now attempted to claim the new settlements as part of the Virginia colony. First, he instigated the formation of Accomac County, Virginia, which was separated from Northampton County in March 1662. Then, in his effort to claim additional acreage for Accomac, the irascible Scarburgh disagreed with the location of the northern boundary between Maryland and Virginia. His principal argument centered on the exact location of "Watkin's Point," which he insisted headed the Wicomico River rather than the Pocomoke River. Watkin's Point was deemed to mark the dividing line between the two colonies and its location meant a difference of 30 miles north or south. In October 1663, Scarburgh led raiding parties into the settlements of Annemessex and Manokin, located in his words "on ye Eastern Shoare of Virginia."

The two colonies squabbled over the line for five more years before establishing the line at the mouth of the Pocomoke, giving the disputed land to Maryland.

Meanwhile, the political controversies and boundary disputes didn’t hamper the granting of land patents on the lower Eastern Shore. Lord Baltimore figured the best way to defend his land would be to establish a chain of settlers with allegiance to him across what he considered the southern boundary of Maryland. From 1661 to 1665, nearly 80,000 acres were surveyed and granted to settlers, almost 10 percent of the entire land mass of the region. Recognizing the extent of the settlement, on 22 August 1666, Lord Baltimore proclaimed that the entire area known today as Somerset, Worcester and Wicomico counties be given the "name of Sommersett County in honour to our Deare Sister the lady Mary Somersett."9

William Layton Arrives

Into this raw, tenuous settlement came William Layton in early 1667. But where did he come from? Straight from England, or up from Virginia? The book Early Virginia Immigrants 1623-1666 lists two William Laytons, one entering that colony in 1636, the second a year later. Either of these certainly could have been the father of the William who married Ursula. Unfortunately, there’s no solid evidence of the long-sought link between either of the immigrants in Virginia and the William who arrived in Somerset County. Yet. A tantalizing note appears in the records of the eminent genealogist J.B. Turner, who spent considerable effort a century ago studying the early Layton family. He wrote: "N.B. They came into Maryland from Virginia J.B. Turner," N.B. meaning nota bene, or "mark well." But on what did Turner base this conclusion?

A possible clue to William’s route to Somerset comes from the court records of Accomac County, Virginia, which is just below Somerset on the Peninsula. On 16 January 1666, William Layton confessed to committing fornication with Sara, lately the servant of Mr. Wise. The court ordered that she be brought before the next court when Mr. Layton was to receive corporal punishment. A month later, 18 February, the court noted that William Layton was found guilty of fornication and the court ordered that the sheriff take him into custody and give him 20 lashes on his bare back, with him posting bond on good behavior and paying court costs. Strict people, those early Virginians.

Hypothetically, William the immigrant started his family after his arrival in 1636 or 37, so his son William might have been born anywhere from 1638 to 1645 or so. On reaching 21 years of age, William leaves his mainland Virginia home, crosses the Chesapeake Bay to the Peninsula, sows a wild oat or two, then takes advantage of the free land in Maryland by heading further north.

And that’s where we start our account on a more factual basis. On 12 June 1667, William Layton bought Carny’s Chance. According to the land records of Somerset County, this 300-acre property was deeded to William by James Dashiell, who held power-of-attorney for Thomas Carny Jr., a mariner who went back to Bristol, England. Carny patented the property 14 February 1666.

In today’s terms, the property is located about two miles west of U.S. 13 just north of Princess Anne. The tract is a long rectangle lying roughly in the center of the loop formed by Ridge Road on the north side of Maryland Rt 362.

William Layton next appears in the Maryland Book of Arrivals: "Nov. 4, 1670 Came Cornelius Watkinson of Calvert County and proved rights to 250a for transporting Wm Layton into this province." The awarding of acres to those who brought in settlers was part of Lord Baltimore’s plan to solidify his claim to this land by settling it with farmers loyal to Maryland, not Virginia. The Book of Arrivals again mentions William on 20 December 1672. "William Layton of Somerset proves rights to 50 acres for his time of service in this Province. He also receives 250 acres by assignment."

Greener Pastures

William Layton left Carny’s Chance to move north and claim his rightful land. It would appear that he staked out his land, then claimed it by right of service. On 6 February 1672, he patented his 300 acres “on the north side Rokawalkin River on the west side of Otter Gut," calling it Friends Choice. This description — like so many from the old records — is at first frustrating because what’s today called the Rockawalkin Creek runs almost due north from the Wicomico River, making it difficult to have a north side. But it turns out that the area’s earliest settlers called the Wicomico River the Rockawalkin River. And a search of subsequent property records for Friends Choice turns up the one piece of evidence that clearly pinpoints the vicinity of the tract: it was immediately adjacent to Wicomico County’s most notable property, "Pemberton Plantation." In fact, in 1746, a 10-acre portion of Friends Choice was sold to Isaac Handy to enlarge the Pemberton tract. This plantation — situated just west of Salisbury on the Wicomico River — has just recently been restored to its 18th century splendor.

It's possible — and this is conjecture — that this move in 1672 brought William into the company of his future bride, Ursula. There's no record of the marriage, but on 10 April 1673, Ursula gave birth to their daughter Ursula.
William registered his cattle mark 5 September 1673 in Somerset County. The Book of Arrivals entry of 1 October 1674 shows that William proved his rights to 50 acres because his wife Ursula had finished her time of service in Somerset County. It's not known where those 50 acres might have been, but it's possible they were to the south, a guess based on events of 1677. In the meantime, son William was born 13 March 1675.

William Goes to Court
According to the proceedings of the Maryland Provincial Court15, on 25 April 1677, Thomas Jones leased to William Taylor 1,000 acres of land called Naseworthy's Choice, lying on the Manokin River. A few days later, 1 May, William Layton entered the property and ejected Taylor. Whereupon Taylor sued William for 10 pounds sterling. When William and his attorney Robert Carville attended the hearing 10 October, two neighboring landowners, Andrew Whittington and Richard Chambers, came forward to say the land wasn't William Layton's or Jones', but theirs. A survey was ordered and instead of 1,000 acres, there were found to be only 553. But Taylor argued that the court's order was carried out without his knowledge, so it was illegal. Another survey was ordered and this time there were found to be only 470 acres. Whittington and Chambers each received 836 pounds of tobacco from Jones for their costs and Layton was left with nothing.

William Layton was back in the Somerset Court for the August 1677 session, as well.16 Richard Higgenbothem swore the peace against Thomas Jones and William Layton for abusing David Browne, a justice, and his family. While at Browne's house, Jones "violently [fell] upon ... Higgenbothem ... to thrust him out of doores & did beate him severall blowes" after threatening "several civill neighbours draweing his rapier ... untill some left their hatts in their flight to escape him." After Browne broke up the fight (in which William Layton also was involved), Jones allegedly "laid upon [Browne] rending {his} shirt in pieces & often calling [him] a Scotts rogue," an ethnic insult that appears with some regularity in the Somerset records and is indicative of recurring tension between Scots Presbyterains and English Anglicans. The judicial record includes several pages of depositions about the events at Browne's houses, but no resolution of the case is found in the records.

And William's troubles didn't stop there. On 11 January 1678, William bought 250 acres of Horsey's Bailywick from Thomas Hobbs. Four months later, 13 May, William and Ursula sold Hobbs the original property William had purchased 11 years earlier, Carny's Choice.

But the purchase of Horsey's Bailywick didn't meet the letter of the law. William and his attorney "Kenelme Cheseldyne" had to appear in the Provincial Court 13 October 1679 to answer charges that the 250 acres William purchased actually were part of other tracts. Hobbs' title to the land was rejected and William Layton again had nothing. Adding insult to injury, William had to pay 700 pounds of tobacco as court costs.
On 25 May 1688, the Rent Rolls of Somerset County show that William was paying rent on Cuckolds Delight, a 500-acre tract in Nanticoke 100 "on the south side of Rokawakin, the land belongs to Major Peytons heirs in Glocester County, Virginia."
The paying of rent - called "quit rent" - was the payment Lord Baltimore collected in exchange for giving settlers the land. The original land patent would include an amount of annual rent, often two shillings gold or silver. Payment dates usually were religious holidays, such as the Feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary on 25 March and the Feast of St. Michaels, celebrated 29 September. In actuality, the rents were paid in the commodities of the province and tobacco was the only product stable enough in price to be used as payment.

The Sot Weed Factor
Tobacco — sot weed in 17th century slang — was the money crop of the colonies because there was a glutinous market for it back home in England. It was grown first in the Colony of Virginia and on the western shore of Maryland. When the next generation of English settlers moved across the bay to the land that would become Somerset and Dorchester, they naturally grew the one crop with which they were familiar, tobacco.
Tobacco was tremendously labor-intensive, providing a steady demand for indentured servants. These immigrants, who arrived in the Chesapeake region with their passage paid by others, were obligated by contract to work for their benefactors until their period of work had expired, often six to seven years. Most of the servants who arrived during the 17th century were yeoman farmers and trained craftsmen.

Unfortunately, almost as soon as the planters began cultivating tobacco on the peninsula, the tobacco market was glutted. In 1666-67, the governors of Virginia, Carolina and Maryland went so far as to propose a one-year hiatus on the growing of tobacco in order to command a higher price. Lord Baltimore argued against the idea, contending that the smaller growers couldn’t survive for a year without their tobacco income, no matter how low the price.

In an attempt to insulate themselves somewhat from the volatile nature of the tobacco economy, peninsula planters and yeoman farmers in general engaged in a diversified agriculture that centered on tobacco production, but also included market products such as wheat, corn and livestock. Seemingly endless stands of virgin timber supplied additional exports highly valued in England and the West Indies. Home manufacture of cloth, leather and other crafts contributed to the diversity of local production.

Politics and Religion
The 1680s brought permanent changes to the spiritual life of the colony, changes that left behind the religiously tolerant policies of the Lords Baltimore. After England’s Protestant Revolution of 1688-89 and the abdication of James II, a group in Maryland led by John Codde, known as the Associators, assumed control of the proprietary government. William and Mary, newly seated on the English throne, supported these rebels and replaced Lord Baltimore’s proprietary rule with a Protestant government.17

The inhabitants of Somerset County — including William Layton — felt obligated to let King William and Queen Mary know that they remained their loyal subjects by signing an oath of allegiance 28 November 1689. The paper also set forth their support of the “Protestant Religion” and disavowed “the French and other Papists that oppose and trouble us.”18 The “Protestant Religion” was the Church of England. However, Somerset County was called “a stronghold of Presbyterianism” by historian Steiner in the book Protestant Revolution in Maryland. There also were significant Quakers in the county.

A Turn for the Better?
William gave evidence in a Somerset court case 11 March 1692, and he registered his cattle mark in Somerset in 1694.19 On 22 March 1695, William patented Layton’s Discovery, a 300-acre tract on the south side of the “Rokiawakin.” The Somerset County Rent Rolls 1663-1723 call this land Laytons Recovery and later say that it was possessed by “William Layton Jr.” There seems to be no question, however, that it’s the same property as Layton’s Discovery.

The records of the Provincial Council of Maryland yield another tidbit about William. “At a meeting of the Council Oct 10, 1695, William Layton of Somerset County upon his petition for carrying an express over the Bay allowed 300 pounds of tobacco.”20

The Century Comes to an End
It was economic opportunity that attracted immigration and investment on the Eastern Shore during the settlement period. However, by the turn of the eighteenth century, it was the economy that was at the root of another social upheaval. Atlantic trade routes were disrupted by nearly 20 years of war between England and France from 1689 to 1713. The tobacco economy was suffering from overproduction and falling prices. Worse, in just one generation, the settlers had overworked the land by growing nothing but tobacco. This situation, combined with an increased population and decreased opportunities for new settlers, virtually ended the immigration of indentured servants. To augment the evaporating servant system, planters on the lower Eastern Shore were increasingly forced to invest in expensive, imported slave labor.21

Overlaying these turbulent economic conditions was a problem peculiar to the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland. The first wave of settlers had arrived about the same period, then started families. Now the younger generation was reaching the age when it had to start farming on its own, but most of the free land accessible to the rivers had been claimed. The state of the economy made it difficult to earn enough to buy land, so the young families had to look elsewhere. Fortunately, the state was still so new, they didn’t have to look far. As the 1700s began, so did a substantial movement of young English farmers out of Somerset County northward to western Sussex County, which was part of Maryland’s Dorchester County at that time. The Layton sons were part of this movement. This book is an attempt to trace every descendant of the Laytons who made this short migration in search of a new home.

William Layton was born 25 March 1675. Two Somerset Co records refer to “William Layton,” but it is unclear whether this is senior or junior. In 1700, William’s land was appraised at 15.13.11.

In the 1701 session of the Somerset County court, William settled an account with Thomas Wilson for “40 sterling.”

In 1702, the 28-year-old William Jr. moved his young family from the Salisbury area to a tract of land believed to be immediately south of Federalsburg. On 10 December of that year, the property Layton’s Chance was surveyed for William. The tract was described as “in the forest between the Great Choptank and the northwest fork of the Nanticoke, 100 acres.” The land description also seems to indicate that the land was immediately adjacent to the Marshyhope. Maryland records say this land now lies in Caroline County.

Six days later, White Oak Landing was surveyed for William “on the west side of the northwest fork of the Nanticoke River.” Helping pinpoint the location of these properties is a transaction that occurred 90 years after the original sale. On 28 April 1792, Anderton Brown and his wife Betty of Sussex County sold to Charles Brown “…their part of lands lying part in Dorchester County and part in Caroline County called Hopewell, Layton’s Chance, Crooked Ridge, Scholarship and Scholarship Improved.”

To be adjacent to the Marshyhope and straddle the county lines, the properties must be immediately south of Federalsburg.

Both parcels — Layton’s Chance and White Oak Landing — were part of a 2,389-acre tract owned by John Taylor. He was the son of Thomas Taylor, who accumulated massive tracts of land from one end of what was then defined as Dorchester County to the other in the last quarter of the 1600s.

Eventually, the children of William and Rachel would move in both directions on the Marshyhope, with most of the family heading north to the very head of the river. In general terms, they settled around Adamsville, Delaware, which is west-northwest of Greenwood.

[On 24 June 1784 Curtis and Rachel Brown of Sussex County sold the 100-acre tract Gladstower to Thomas Laws of Sussex for 457 pounds. The sale also included 94 acres of Clearance. The Northwest Fork 100 tracts were described as “adjacent a swamp from a bridge branch of Nanticoke River.”]

Before delving too deeply into the history of these Sussex County Laytons, it’s necessary first to understand the history of the area’s political boundaries. The southernmost portions of Sussex County were once part of Somerset and Worcester Counties, Maryland, and other lands as far north as the Nanticoke and Indian Rivers, plus most of Northwest Fork 100, were claimed by both the Calverts and Penns for several generations.

Somerset was created in 1666 with the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay as its eastern and western boundaries. Its northern boundary was the Nanticoke River — which today lies well inside Sussex County. The dispute over the location of Delaware’s southern boundary began in 1680 when William Penn received his charter. It continued until 1732 when both parties signed an agreement that the line would lie at 39°43’19" and be surveyed to continue to the midpoint of the peninsula, then turn north to a point 15 miles south of Philadelphia. Unfortunately for Lord Baltimore, his decision to agree to this compromise was based on an inaccurate map that showed 39°43’19" passing through Cape Henlopen. In fact, this line was 25 miles south of Cape Henlopen, and Baltimore had inadvertently signed away present-day Little Creek 100 and parts of Broad Creek, Dagsborough and Baltimore 100s that had never been claimed by Penn.

Realizing his mistake too late, Baltimore fought the agreement in the courts for the next 20 years. When Worcester County was formed in 1742 from the eastern and southern sections of Somerset, he set the northern boundary of Worcester at "Broad Creek Bridge" at the site of today's Laurel, Delaware.

In 1750, Baltimore was forced to capitulate. The survey was begun in 1751, but the death of Charles, fifth Lord Baltimore, and subsequent litigation of his estate, delayed further progress until 1763. From 1763 through 1768, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon conducted the final survey of the so-called Mason-Dixon Line. Finally, in January 1769, the new line was officially accepted.

Although the two proprietors had finally agreed, there was no mad rush to transfer records from Maryland to Delaware. Most southern Sussex residents continued to think of themselves as Marylanders and passively resisted the change. The story is told of one family in Little Creek whose farm was split in two by the new boundary — as was the case with many others, as well — with the home left just north of it in Delaware. Absolutely clear in his loyalties, he dismantled his house log by log and rebuilt it on the Maryland side.

Adding to the resentment of the transplanted Marylanders, the Sussex County seat of Lewes was northerly and remote from them, constituting a two-day ride by horseback for those living in the Little Creek region. Many new Sussex inhabitants simply stopped recording their legal papers. A few isolated deeds from lower Sussex are found in Lewes town record books during this period, but not many. During the chaos of the Revolution, few records were filed by anyone. After the war, beginning about 1782, there was a period of catch-up when people took time to record the land sales, wills and other events of the war period along with the records of contemporary events. A steady trickle of lower Sussex records appears in Lewes for this period.

In 1791, in response to numerous petitions and relentless pressure, a new, centrally-located county seat was erected at Georgetown. Southern Sussex residents finally began filing their legal papers in Delaware courts on a consistent basis.

Meanwhile, what later became Delaware's Northwest Fork 100 generally was considered part of Dorchester County until the Mason-Dixon Line was finalized. Both Lord Baltimore and William Penn made grants here, often issuing conflicting patents on the same tract of land.

Because the Laytons settled along both sides of Marshyhope Creek for a stretch of several miles, their lands were in four different counties — Kent, Sussex, Caroline and Dorchester — using today's political boundaries.

The Family Spreads Out

On 14 April 1711, William and Rachel sold their first Marshyhope property, calling it Layton's Choice in a transaction with Jonathan Clifton, a cooper. It was described as being on the south side of the Great Choptank River at the head of the northwest fork of the Nanticoke River. Since no other property acquisitions have been found for William and Rachel, it's assumed that they were living on the second property purchased back in 1703, White Oak Landing.

Then the next generation decided that the home farm was getting crowded. On 9 January 1721, William Layton of Somerset County, deeded 100 acres of Glad Tower from Thomas Collison and Margaret his wife at the head of the Nanticoke River. The witnesses to the transaction were John and Mary Dyer.

William and Rachel made their final break with Somerset County by selling Layton's Discovery, the 300-acre tract purchased by William and Ursula back in 1695. A deed executed 29 August 1723 recorded the sale to John Leatherbury. The land was granted to William Layton of Somerset County, deceased, 10 Nov 1695. "... and after decease of said William Layton his eldest son William Layton party to this deed, became by heirship seized." Thomas Layton was a witness to this deed. The land was patented to William on 22 March 1695 and it was granted to him 10 November.

On 7 May 1731, William moved down the Marshyhope a bit by buying 95 acres of Taylor's Neglect, which was adjacent to Lymster. Pinpointing the location of Taylor's Neglect is a challenge because the Taylor family used the name at least twice. The records for the first Taylor's Neglect are clear at least as far back as 1679, when Thomas Taylor had the property surveyed. It consisted of 1,000 acres, lying about two miles west of Vienna, in contemporary terms. In 1682, Thomas and Frances his wife sold part of the property to Charles Hutchins. In that transaction, it was described as "on Chicanocomoco River." In 1699, Colonel Hutchins bought the remainder of the property from Taylor. This time, it was said to be "on the east side of Chickenocomoc." And on 3 June 1700, Charles Hutchins sold 54 acres of Taylor's Neglect, again listed as being on the "Chickocomico River." Finally, in 1727 the land was resurveyed and renamed Ryder's Regulation for its owner, Colonel John Ryder.

Enter the second Taylor's Neglect. On 8 June 1730, Peter Taylor and his wife Mary sold to Owen

Connerly 406 acres, described as "part of a tract called Taylor's Neglect on a branch of the Northwest Fork." No mention of the Chickocommico River here. And, for an additional twist, it should be noted that an Elizabeth Layton and Owen Connerly obtained a marriage license in Caroline County on 25 August 1788. The date likely means this was another generation of Connerly than the one who bought the land back in 1730, but that fact that it was a Caroline County license, not Dorchester, indicates the land was located north of the original Taylor's Neglect, a point addressed by historian Calvin Mowbray of Cambridge.

Mowbray writes: "On September 18, 1673, a 300-acre tract was surveyed for John Bound. It was called Lemster and was located on the Northwest Branch of the Nanticoke on a branch called 'Bounds his Branch.' That branch is indicated on the Griffith's Map of 1794 as 'Payne's Mill Creek' and it is just south of Federalsburg and north of 'Skinner's Run Branch.' John Bound of Somerset County, carpenter, and Mabel, his wife, sold Lemster on 12 May 1685, to John Dyer of Virginia. The land records of Dorchester County indicate that Dyer moved to Dorchester and acquired some adjoining property to Lemster. In McAllister's abstract for Dyer's 12 May 1685 purchase, it is written Lempster. Mowbray's description of Lemster places it just to the south of the two tracts purchased by William and Rachel, Laytons Chance and White Oak Landing.

William bequeathed his portion of Taylor's Neglect to his sons Nichollson and Charles. Nichollson and his wife Rosannah sold it 16 January 1747 to Thomas Taylor. William's first five sons - William, Richard, Thomas, John and James - each received one shilling, six pence in the will. Daughter Mary got two shillings, six pence.

THE SECOND GENERATION

The descendants of William Layton and Rachel

For easy reference, William2 is the son born in 1675 to William, and Ursula. In order for William and Rachel Layton to have the following nine children born one side or the other of 1700, as listed in his will, this William must be William2. With that assumption, all of the known Layton family groups fit together nicely, as constructed here. However – and this is a huge "however" – there is a pair of 1723 documents that cast serious doubt on this family arrangement. Unfortunately, more than two decades of research has not resolved this conflict.

The conflict: The italicized portion of the 29 August 1723 document indicates that William2 died before 29 August 1723, not in 1740. Further, William and Rachel Layton are only found in Dorchester County records. The William Layton "of Sussex County in the Province of Pennsylvania" in the 20 November 1723 document is generally accepted to be William Louder Layton, husband of Priscilla Lofland.

  Whereas the Lord Proprietor did by his deed of grant date the 10th of November 1695 grant to William Layton all that tract or parcel of land called Discovery lying on the easternmost side of the Wicomico River beginning at a marked hickory standing on the westernmost side of and near a small gut or branch by the marsh side thence north to the side of the river … thence with the said river … to a marked white oak thence … to the first bounder cont. and laid out for 300 acres of land and after the death of the said William Layton, his eldest son and heir William Layton did become possessed of a good estate of inheritance in fee simple in the land and after the death of the last named William Layton, his son and heir, William Layton became possessed of the above land. Now this indenture, for the sum of 7000 lbs of tobacco, Layton sells to Letherbury all that tract or parcel of land called Discovery cont. as per certificate 300 acres.

   The question of name variations is introduced in a land commission 15 Nov 1748, when Richard and Anna are referred to as "Loyden." However, in the Final Distribution for this same family group, it is written "Layton." This same document makes reference to "eldest daughter Mary Loyden," who received Buck Harbor and Likeways, but she does not appear in later accountings. Shadrach received the dwelling plantation of 100 acres, while Richard received 56 acres, part of Venture. The remainder went to the other children. Anna was executor and the test. to this document were Patrick Qua__ and Charles Stafford/Stanford.
   On later accountings, Anna was executor, the sureties were John Sullivane and Henry Webster.35

   § Ann
   His will{38}, written 16 March 1775, was filed in Sussex County, but listed Thomas as “of Caroline County.”

   In 1750, Thomas owned all or parts of four tracts of land which he had patented between 1724 and 1740 in Dorchester County. These tracts were located between the Northwest and Northeast Forks of the Nanticoke River, near what was to become the Delaware line. At least three of them were on Iron Mine Branch which was then in Dorchester County but now is wholly in Sussex County, about a mile south of Woodenhawk Bridge. In 1760, Thomas Sr. conveyed half of two of these tracts - Plunder and Poplar Hill - to his son Thomas Jr. and the other half to Robert. The original patent for Poplar Hill says it was on the north side of the northeast fork of the Nanticoke, the first indication that the family moved a few miles eastward.

B. Thomas Layton
   § 1780 Rebecca Turpin {} d/o Solomon Turpin

We're able to gain considerable insight into this couple because Rev. John Lednum wrote of them in Rise of Methodism in America:

   “Mr. Thomas Layton married Miss Rebecca Turpin, one of Mr. Garretson's converts. Miss Turpin was the daughter of Mr. Solomon Turpin of North West Fork, in whose house these were preaching in 1779, and a society raised up, chiefly through Mr. Garretson's labors. In 1780 Mr. Turpin died, in the favor of God, and his funeral was preached by Mr. Asbury. Soon after, his daughter Rebecca was married to Mr. Layton. Concerning her, Mr. Garretson says: “A few months ago, she was the height of fashion, but now sees the evil and folly of these things, she is a very happy young woman.” Mr. Asbury declared her a “pattern of piety.” She was one of the holiest women of her age; while she fasted, prayed, and wept much, she was seldom, if ever, seen to laugh. Though in good pecuniary circumstances, she was so self-denying and plain in her dress, that she wore no other bonnet on holydays and Sundays, than the while muslin bonnet. If the gay and the merry should flippantly say that she erred to the extreme, we answer for her by saying, if she erred, it was on the safe side.

   In the beginning of the present century, Mr. Layton sold his land in Delaware and emigrated to Kentucky, but scarcely reached the place of his destination, when he was removed to a "better country." Mr. Minus Layton, who was received into the Western Conference in 1808, and died the same year, we are persuaded, was his son.”{39}
The fact that Rebecca married Thomas soon after her father died and then changed her entire lifestyle dramatically could mean Solomon Turpin objected to the wedding. It also could indicate that Thomas was a pious and strict individual.

Thomas was listed as a carpenter in two property transfers that shed some light on the family's movements. First, on 7 January 1786, Thomas and Rebecca sold to John Baynard, Turpins Conclusion and Turpins Choice, all bequeathed to Rebecca by her father, Solomon Turpin. They totalled 204.5 acres and sold for $239.40

Nine years later, on 11 April 1795, the couple sold to William Ross the property Poplar Hill, which the deed called the Layton's "dwelling plantation." They also sold the adjoining Plunder and Nutter's Neglect.41 This selling of the home property seems to lend some credence to Lednum's theory that the family was pulling up stakes and heading west.

Backtracking a bit, we learn quite a bit about Rebecca's line — the Turpins — from the work of genealogist Mary Caroline Turpin Layton.42 William Turpin was transported into St. Mary's County in 1661, later crossing the bay to Somerset County, probably about 1667. In January 1668, he married Margaret Ivory. Of significant interest to the Laytons, the couple lived in Manokin. It's reasonable to assume that William and Margaret knew William and Ursula Layton because Manokin was an extremely small settlement hugging the Manokin River and there were only a few families living in this area in the 1670s.

The Turpin's second son was Solomon Turpin, born 9 November 1673, making him a contemporary of the William Layton who married Rachel Nicholson. Like William and Rachel, Solomon and his wife Elizabeth moved north to what is now western Sussex County. Solomon and Elizabeth had a son Solomon, whose wife was named Lovey. It is this Solomon who was the father of Rebecca.

Lednum is emphatic in his book regarding the year of Solomon Turpin's death. There seems no reason to question the date because Solomon's will doesn't shed any light on the subject. It was written 10 February 1776, but never probated.43 In September 1785, Joshua Wright was granted the administration of Solomon's estate.44 This action may stem from the fact that Rebecca's brother Joseph died between 17 August and 1 October of 1785, the dates when he wrote his will and it was probated in Sussex County. However, Solomon's will named Rebecca and her sister Elizabeth as the executors. Taken together — no probate, a drawn-out settling of the estate, a change of administrators — these facts paint a picture of a confused and, possibly, contentious family situation.

About another Lednum assertion, that Minus Layton was the son of Thomas and Rebecca, there does seem to be cause for question. Although we don't know the birthdates of either of them, we do know when their grandparents were born, and some simple extrapolation based on typical generational spans of the 18th century indicates Thomas and Rebecca must have been about 50 when they married in 1780. Adding in the facts that both of their fathers and her brother had died supports the belief that they weren't in the first flush of youth when they married, so were unlikely to have had a son.

C. David Layton

David and brother Spencer were "minors" when their father's will was written in 1775. There is a David on the 1785 assessment roll of North West 100, which likely is this David. However, only the David in the 1800 census is in the 16-26 age bracket with two small children, probably David, son of Nehemiah. There is no David in the 1803-04 list.

The answer to the fates of David and Spencer may be found in Kentucky. Their names appear in the 1800 tax list for Scott County in that state.

D. Spencer Layton

Spencer was on the 1782 census and 1785 assessment roll of North West 100. His name does not appear on subsequent tax lists or census reports for the area. He left no estate in Sussex or Kent.

THE ORIGIN OF NAMES AND FAMILY CONNECTIONS

A glance at the index confirms what most Delaware Laytons have always suspected about the names Caleb Rodney and Daniel John. That is, they're popular. But where did they come from? The answer to this question also explains how several prominent Delaware families came together for the first time.

In 1978, Henry D. Sipple created a chart that maps the lineage of numerous Kent and Sussex families. On first inspection, the chart looks a lot like the wiring diagram for a computer chip. But by highlighting the names Rodney, Sipple and Layton on the chart, there is instant clarity. The names form the distinct shape of an hourglass, with just one couple — Louder Layton and Sarah Ann Sipple — forming the neck.

Louder (1770-1849) was the son of Louder Layton and Tabitha Laws. Sarah (1779-1850) was the daughter of Caleb Sipple and Alice Walker, and the granddaughter of Caleb Sipple and his wife Sarah. This is where the name Caleb Sipple gained entree into the Layton family. Louder and Sarah named their first son Caleb Sipple Layton (1798-1882).

Caleb Sipple Layton married Penelope Rodney (1799-1855), the daughter of Governor Caleb Rodney and Elizabeth West. This was the first connection with the Rodney family and the introduction of the name Caleb Rodney, which Caleb and Penelope bestowed on their fourth son in 1826. He lived until 1887.

Another line of Caleb Rodney Laytons originated from Caleb Sipple Layton and Penelope Rodney, but it was through their third son, Samuel Henry Layton, and his wife, Sarah Elizabeth Ann Long.

Samuel and Sarah also were responsible for perpetuating the name Daniel John Layton. The name was first given to Samuel's brother, who apparently never married. Samuel's son, Caleb Rodney Layton, mentioned above, named his first son Daniel John Layton in honor of his uncle. While the name Daniel had appeared at least once before in the Layton line, it was a distant branch. This first use of the name Daniel John by Caleb Sipple Layton and Penelope Rodney apparently comes from Penelope's uncle Daniel, the brother of her father.

Now let's return to the couple at the neck of the hourglass, Louder Layton and Sarah Sipple. They also named a son Garrett Sipple Layton (1808-1848), the first, but certainly not the last use of this name in the Layton line. Finding the origin of the name Garrett takes us back six generations to Garrett Sipple (1653-1718). To attribute the name Garrett to this distant relative is a bit farfetched, since most of the people of this era could neither read nor write, so would have had little chance of knowing about this man. He is, however, the only person in the Layton or Sipple line to have the name previously.

What all of this doesn't explain is why Mitchell Layton (1789-1839) — only a second cousin of this first Garrett Sipple Layton — would name his son Garrett Sipple Layton (1825-1901). There seems to be no connection in Mitchell's line to any Sipple line.

Obviously, trying to follow this maze of similar names brings one back to the image of the wiring diagram, so let's use a diagram of our own to make these lines more understandable.

Tabitha Laws

Louder Layton was born prior to 1732 and died 22 April 1795. He married Tabitha Laws before 1751. Louder and Tabitha possibly had as many as eight children: Tilghman, Hewitt, Louder, Tabitha, Priscilla, Amelia and two daughters whose names are unknown. This branch of the Delmarva Laytons has been studied extensively by numerous researchers so the following section is extremely long.

The descendants of Louder Layton and Tabitha Laws

1. Tilghman Layton (9 July 1751~13 Oct 1811)
   § Sarah Masten (c1762~17 May 1829)
   Tilghman received a warrant 13 May 1776 for 33 acres of Noble Quarter in Northwest Fork 100. A survey was ordered for the entire 70 acres of that tract. After the Delaware-Maryland boundary was settled by Mason and Dixon, it was necessary to confirm this grant under the Penns. Tilghman is listed on the assessment roll of the 100 in 1785, and in the 1790 census for the same 100.
   Sarah was the daughter of John and Sarah Masten of Mispillion 100. In 1789, Tilghman and Joseph Gray together witnessed the will of William Wilson. After Tilghman's death, Sarah married Gray.
   On 17 December 1796, 263 acres of the enlarged Noble Quarter were resurveyed to Tilghman and the tract was renamed Tilghman's Regulation. On 24 January 1797 Tilghman and Sarah made bond to convey this tract between Hughlett and Louder.
   A petition in the Sussex Orphan's Court 22 July 1823 shows that it took more than a decade to settle Tilghman's estate because he died intestate. The petition concerned 150 acres of land in North West Fork 100.
   Tilghman and Sarah had five children: Hughlett, Tilghman, Deborah, Sarah and John. This section is extensive because several of these children have large, well-documented families. Do not overlook Deborah, Sarah and John following the sections for Hughett and Tilghman.

A. Hughlett Layton (17 Nov 1779~15 Jan 1853)
   § c1805 Mary Tilney, widow of Stephen Hairgrove.
   §§ 12 Aug 1826 Hannah Kersey Carrow (25 May 1789~15 Nov 1856)
   Mary was the daughter of Stringer and Betty Tilney of Broadkill Neck, Sussex Co. Hughlett and Mary lived in Murderkill 100 of Kent Co. On 4 May 1820 the Laytons deeded to Hughlett's uncle Louder the land in Northwest Fork 100 that Hughlett's father Tilghman possessed at the time of his death. A Constitutional Convention was called for Delaware in 1831. Hughett was a representative for Kent County. The meeting began November 8 in Dover and by December 2 had completed a document that became the third constitution of Delaware.

Hannah was the daughter of Aaron Kersey. She married first William Carrow 9 Jul 1809. William had married first (2 May 1795) Sarah Pollin, who died Jan 1809. Hannah had five children by William Carrow: John, Thomas, Joseph, David and Sarah Ann.

      The Kelso records refer to Caleb Jackson as a traveling salesman at the time of his marriage to Florence, which took place at her home. His estate indicates he sold fabric and sewing notions and had a huge inventory at the time of his death. He had so many outstanding accounts, it took seven years to settle his estate.
      • Ada was the daughter of John Brook and Ellen Wallon. She was born in Pemeroy, Chester Co, PA.
      •• Florence shared her home in 1900 with her four step-children and her own two children by Caleb. In 1910 she was sharing a home on Railroad Avenue in Wyoming with her two children, and was living there alone in 1920. In 1930 she was living in Wilmington with son Caleb, his wife Mary, and widowed daughter Florence.

The Ralston Connection

Sarah Benn Ralston was the sister of Margaret Logan Ralston and daughter of John Ralston and Mary Benn. Margaret married Henry Davis, and, in turn, their daughter, Maria Rebecca Davis, married Dr. Garrett Sipple Layton. Therefore, in addition to sharing a Layton heritage, the Richards family group of Wilmington and the Grier family of Milford also are all descendants of John Ralston and Mary Benn.

Sarah Ann Layton and Dr. John Ralston Sudler had nine children: Elizabeth, John E., Dr. William T., Sarah B., Mary Catherine, Laura, Joseph, Joseph II and Horace.

He lost his father at the age of seven, at which time his mother moved the family from a farm into Bridgeville. Although too young for service in the Civil War, he enlisted in the Sixth Delaware Regiment, which was organized as state guards. However, the unit was ordered to the front during the second invasion of Pennsylvania by Robert E. Lee. Returning at the close of the war, he choose to enter the legal profession, pursuing studies at the Albany (NY) Law School, graduated with the class of 1868.. He was admitted to the bar at Georgetown, where he practiced for the remainder of his life from his home on the northwest corner of Bedford Street and The Circle. Charles Fleming Richards was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1897, where he had a part in framing a new constitution for Delaware. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ABOUT THE RICHARDS FAMILY
The Richards family has deep roots in Delaware. In 1675, Joanna Richards, widow of John Richards, came to Delaware with her son John from Maryland. John was born in Maryland and was a planter. He married 14 March 1676 Grace Dickson. They had several children, including a son John. He also was a planter and owned a large tract of land in Sussex County, part of which had been granted to his father by Sir Edmund Andros. This John also had a son John, who served as a lieutenant in the Revolutionary War. He married Jane White and among their children was David. He also was a planter and slave owner, like his father and grandfather. David married Tamsey Eaton and they had a son John. In 1801, this John married Anna Wilson and their son John married Ann Polk Carey in 1824.

Charles Fleming Richards grew up in a home near Adamsville, Delaware, called Locust Grove. It is the subject of the 1980 Columbia University master's thesis of Theresa Catherine Adams, a copy of which can be found at the Historical Society of Delaware. In addition to the obvious significance to the Richards branch of the family, this property is important to all Delaware Laytons because it is the same exact locale as the property of the early Layton settlers in the Adamsville area.

Charles Fleming Richards' mother, Ann Polk Carey, also came from early English immigrants to Sussex County. 190

ii. Jane Kellond Richards (16 Jun 1935~)
   Jane's career is chronicled in The Delaware Bar in the Twentieth Century in the chapter entitled "Diversity in the Law."198
   "The first woman appointed to the Delaware District Court also became Delaware's first woman to be named a judge on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Jane K. Richards graduated from Harvard University School of Law in 1965 and became the ninth woman admitted to the Delaware bar. A member of one of Delaware's oldest families, she was influenced to practice law from two different sources. The first, and most obvious, was her father, Robert H. Richards Jr. As the daughter of one of Delaware's leading lawyers of the 1950s and 1960s, Richards was exposed to the courtroom at an early age. It was a case she observed in England, however, that made the greatest impression upon her. She recounts the story with such vivid clarity that it is no wonder she became a lawyer.

196 Family group by phone: Margaret Boyer Proctor and J Moore 16 Dec 1994
198 The Delaware Bar in the Twentieth Century. Edited by Helen L. Winslow. Delaware State Bar Association 1994
“In her junior year in college Jane Richards spent a year abroad during which she observed a trial in the British courts. The plaintiff in the case was a handyman who, while cleaning an attic window, fell several floors to the ground, severely injuring his leg. The issue before the court was whether the window frame had been damaged by bombs during World War II or whether the handyman was careless in cleaning the window. Had his disability been caused by the wartime bomb damage, the handyman would receive a lifetime state pension. If the accident was caused by his own carelessness, however, the handyman would receive only national health care benefits. Judge Roth recalls that as she listened to the parties argue both sides of the case, she felt a surge of interest in the issues. At that moment, she began to consider a career in law.

At the age of 26, Jane Richards entered Harvard University School of Law. She was one of 25 women in a class of more than 500 students. During the early 1960s a professor of property at Harvard maintained a practice referred to as ‘Ladies’s Day.’ According to Judge Roth, this professor refused to call on women in his class except two days a year. On these two days, the women were required to field his endless questions in front of the class. Her tolerance and perseverance in the face of this archaic form of teaching were due at least in part to her determination to better her earlier career with the State Department as a typist-administrator. “After graduation from Harvard, Richards passed the Delaware bar examination, married William V. Roth Jr. and became an associate at Richards, Layton & Finger, all in the same year. In the early days of her career, her work focused almost exclusively upon domestic relations, the perception at the time being that a woman would be well suited to deal with domestic issues. She found her niche, however, in medical malpractice law. She recalled one particular medical malpractice case involving a rather notorious Philadelphia lawyer. Unnerved by a female adversary, the Philadelphia lawyer became belligerent and abusive. During the trial, after three of Roth’s objections to the same question had been sustained, the Philadelphia lawyer turned to Roth and shouted, “Stop yelling at me like a fishwife.” Unabashed by these histrionics, Roth methodically pursued and won the case.”

Bill Roth was born in Great Falls, Montana. He attended the public schools of Helena and graduated from the University of Oregon 1943, Harvard Business School 1947, and Harvard Law School 1949. Served in the US Army 1943-46. Elected as a Republican to the 90th and 91st Congresses and served from 3 January 1967 to 31 December 1970. He served from January 1971 to January 2001 as a U.S. Senator for Delaware. The Roth IRA was named in his honor.

    case. I will admit he was not one to waste words or to confide in others to any great degree. In private conversations he was a good listener — a virtue hard to come by these days. He might ask a few pertinent questions in order to get a full and complete expression from you of your opinion of the subject matter under discussion, but would not express himself if he did not believe it necessary or unless specifically called upon to do so, in which case this was done as succinctly as possible. he exhibited this same trait, but to a lesser degree, when sitting as a judge. He had what I must describe, for no better term that comes to mind, as a "puckish sense of humor."

    Speaking at the memorial proceedings, Justice James B. Carey remembered him as "...very deliberate in making decisions. He would try to get to the bottom of every point. Many people looked upon him as a conservative man, yet it was during his term first as Chief Justice and then President Judge of the Superior Court, that numerous changes were made in our substantive and adjective law. The outmoded civil rules of practice in this Court were fully revised. The criminal rules were likewise modernized through a committee which he appointed. He concurred in all these changes.'

    During the same memorial proceedings, William S. Potter, speaking on behalf of the state bar, captured Chief Justice Richards' judicial philosophy and temperament.
    "As a judge, Charles Sudler Richards was guided by basic principles. A conservative by nature and training, he was a strong adherent to strict construction. He was a common law judge firmly and steadfastly following the rule of stare decisis. Lawyers who appeared before him knew what would be required of them — comforting knowledge to the advocate. Above all else, he was a judge of outstanding patience and consideration to both lawyers and laymen. Throughout his 34 years on the bench he discharged his duties as Resident Judge, Associate Justice, Chief Justice and President Judge ably with dignity and firmness.'"

Most important, the census lists him as “student,” suggesting the 26-year-old was studying medicine under the tutelage of his brother-in-law. Tilghman next appears in Adairsville, Georgia. In 1860, he was listed as “M.D.” and “physician” in 1870 and 1880. In each census his state of birth was Delaware. It should be noted that the 1860 census calls him “Thomas,” but the 1870 census calls him “Tilghman M” while listing the same wife and son in both.

   Tilghman appears in the 1860 Slave Schedule for Adairsville as the owner of a 40-year-old black male. On 26 Sep 1862 the Congress of the Confederates States of America nominated Tilghman M Layton of Georgia -- along with several hundred other men -- to be assistant surgeons with the rank of first lieutenant, according to the Journal of the Congress. It appears two full families then lived in the home until 1849, when Louder died. Since Joshua had died in 1848, this left two widows living in the home. So the Louder who died in 1849 willed to his son Louder all the rights and privileges that he didn’t reserve for his wife Sarah. He willed Sarah $200 annually, to be arranged from the sale of 220 acres on the St. Jones River, and "...all those three several houses and lots..." in the town of Milford on the west side of North Street were to be sold and the proceeds given to the executor of Joshua’s estate to satisfy debts against him.

Because Louder had reserved rights for himself and Sarah when he sold the Mansion property to son Joshua in 1847, it took two deeds to dispose of the property after the death of Louder in 1849. In November 1849, Peter F. Causey bought from Sarah Layton all the rights and privileges in the property Louder and Sarah had reserved for themselves. Causey paid Sarah $500. The second deed was filed March 27, 1850. Henderson Collins, as administrator of the estate of Joshua, sold Causey the mansion and 81 acres for $8,378.

The buying and selling of what is known today as the Causey Mansion property is important because it marks the expansion of the village of Milford into what was then called the village of South Milford. During the nearly four decades the large tract was owned by Louder, it was marked off into lots that were sold in small parcels. The property once ran along the Mispillion River on the west side of what is today South Walnut Street. That property was sold, as well as lots at the southern end of the tract.

To Henry Louder, Margaret S., Frederick and James Layton, children of the late Garrett Layton, he willed a house and lot where Rhoads and Nancy Hemmons lived, known as the Purdue property. The children also received two houses and lots known as the Hudson property, one near Front Street and one on Second Street in Milford. Louder appointed Rhoads Hemmons as the children’s agent to collect the rents, make repairs and to invest the profits in a safe bank stock until the children reached 21. Then the properties were to be shared by the children.

Louder directed that 200 acres in Cedar Creek 100, purchased of William Williams, be sold to pay his debts. In conclusion, he gave $1 each to the children of his son Joshua, deceased, "...and no more considering that I gave Joshua his equal share of my estate with my other children of the tract of land on which I reside that I sold him at an under value."

[The estate papers were granted to widow, Sarah, as a result of her petition to Orphans Court, V-342.]

Caleb was born on the family homestead, but the family moved soon after his birth to Milford. He attended local schools, then the Philadelphia Grammar School. He first entered business with his father, then married Penelope in 1819. A year later, he was appointed Clerk of the Peace for Sussex County. Resigning this office in 1822, he began the study of law with Thomas Cooper of Georgetown, then one of the leaders of the Sussex bar.

Caleb served as Clerk of the Assembly in the Legislature of 1824-5. He was admitted to the bar in 1826 and was elected a member of the Assembly the same year. He was reelected to the same seat through 1829 and in 1830 was chosen for the Senate. During the administration of Governor David Hazzard from 1830 to 1833, he served as Secretary of State, and in 1836 Governor Charles Polk reappointed him.

In 1833, Caleb was one of four incorporators of a company "...for the purpose of cutting and making a canal between the waters of the Nanticoke River and Broadkiln Creek. The importance to the County of Sussex of a direct, safe and convenient communication from the waters of the Chesapeake to those of the Delaware Bay, has been long felt and acknowledged; and cannot be overrated in the advantages it would afford to all parts of the county." Although, at first glance, this might seem to be an outlandish undertaking, a study of old maps indicates these two bodies of water were navigable at that time to within 12-14 miles of each other.

He was made Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Delaware in 1836, a position he held until July 1844, when he resigned to reenter private practice. He cited the meager salary of the postion as his reason for resigning. On May 21, 1846, he was appointed aide-de-camp by Governor William Temple.

According to Conrad’s history of the state, Caleb exercised wide influence in politics from about 1825 until his death in 1882. Early in his career, he was a Federalist, then he moved to the forefront of the Old Line Whig movement. When it merged in the late 1850s into the Republican Party, he shifted his loyalties, as well. He was a lifelong friend of John M. Clayton. Continues Conrad: "To Judge Layton is assigned the high honor of being the author of the free school system of the State, for he introduced the bill which created it . . . To him also should be accorded another and yet loftier meed of praise, that of introducing, when a member of the Delaware Legislature, the first bill to abolish slavery that ennobles its annals. Judge Layton possessed to a large degree the rare and in a man, truly lovable, quality of amiability; was of pleasing manners and polished address; his conversation so intelligent and agreeable that his presence was everywhere socially welcomed, while at his own fireside his delightful ways and loving words made him with his won a very idol of affectionate esteem and reverence."

§•• 2 Oct 1926 Fannie S. Herrington  {1869~1931} Barratt's Chapel

- Daughter of Thomas Barker Sipple and Mary Wrench of Lewes and Georgetown. She was born in Georgetown, and died there.
- Fannie Herrington Layton served as chief clerk in the Secretary of State's office for 28 years. She was Secretary of State of Delaware from November 1925 until March 1926. The Journal Every Evening wrote at the time of her death: "She was considered by the lawyers of Delaware to be the best informed person on the corporation laws of Delaware, Her interpretation of the corporation law was generally accepted by the lawyers who conferred with her about legal questions. It is said that her keen knowledge of the law very frequently saved the state from being involved in suits and also prevented attempts being made by unscrupulous persons to take advantage of this law."

Caleb Rodney Layton was born on the old Long farm near Frankford and spent his boyhood with his grandfather, Judge Caleb Sipple Layton, in Georgetown. He was a 1873 graduate of Amherst and the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania (1876).

He was appointed Secretary of State of Delaware in 1900 and in 1906 was appointed auditor of the state. He attempted to get into the Medical Corps during World War I, but was barred because of age. However, he was stationed at Indian Head with engineers of the Du Pont Co., while a powder plant was built.

Caleb Rodney Layton was active politically his entire adult life. He became leader of the Union Republican Party for John Edward Addicks, and was active in the campaign of Addicks to capture a U.S. Senate seat. President Theodore Roosevelt appointed him auditor of the State Department and other departments, a position he held for five years. He returned to his medical practice in Georgetown, but then was elected a member of Congress in 1918, where he served two terms. He reportedly was defeated for a third term because of his opposition to the Dyer Anti-Lynching legislation.

He served on the Georgetown City Council and the Georgetown School Board. He also had a newspaper career. In 1891, he helped to start the Union Republican for Addicks. It was a weekly paper in Georgetown for which he was editor from 1891 to 1905. While serving as Secretary of State, he edited the State Sentinel of Dover.

   § 1906 Laura Huber Schimpf {13 Oct 1884~28 Feb 1960}455 of Philadelphia
   Laura was the daughter of Joseph Schimpf and Amanda Bookhammer

He attended Georgetown public schools, then the Wilmington Conference Academy. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania (Class of 1900) and law school (1902) and began law practice in Georgetown in 1905. He was deputy Attorney General 1919-22 and in 1932, he was elected Attorney General of Delaware. In July 1933, he was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Delaware, serving until 1945.

"In 12 years on the bench," notes the book The Delaware Bar in the Twentieth Century, "Layton wrote 221 of the 511 opinions handed down by the law courts, including 49 of the 106 opinions issued by the Supreme Court. One of Layton's landmark decisions was Guth v. Loft. In powerful and uplifting language, Chief Justice Layton defined for the court the duties imposed upon directors of Delaware corporations. The duty was that of a fiduciary, that is, the highest duty that the law creates. And in no uncertain terms he outlined the penalties for violation of that duty. While there are differing views as to whether Guth is or is not applicable to a specific fact setting, the law of the case is written in stone in Delaware corporation law. There is no dissent from its principles.

"As William Prickett Sr. stated at the proceedings in memory of Chief Justice Layton: 'The Chief Justice wrote English, not a jargon of legalese. No 'saids', 'to-wits', 'hereinaboves' or 'aforementioneds' appear in any of his opinions. His language was striking in its clarity and in its picturesqueness.'"

"Unquestionably," continued the book, "Chief Justice Layton was a brilliant judge with a genius for defining fundamental concepts in corporate law. But, unfortunately, his aggressive domination of a proceeding at oral argument frequently silenced even his strong-willed colleagues. Worse still, Layton's air of apparent hostility extended to the lawyers arguing before him, whom he would repeatedly challenge in a combative manner.

"Indeed, as an eminent lawyer remembers, Chief Justice Layton seemed to feel the 'need to destroy you if he didn't agree with you.' As a consequence, and despite his achievements, Layton failed to be reappointed in 1945 in one of the most painful episodes in Delaware judicial history. The story is recounted by Professor Carol Hoffecker in her recent book, Federal Justice in the First State."

Caleb graduated from Mercersburg Academy and the University of Pennsylvania. He was the original Layton in the Wilmington law firm Richards, Layton and Fingers. He first practiced in Dover, where Henry Ridgely gave him office space and the use of his law library. In exchange, Caleb assisted Ridgely, who had become blind. In 1913, Caleb was asked by Josiah and David Marvel of Georgetown and Josiah Wolcott of Dover to practice law with them in Wilmington. He replied that he would have to ask his fiancee is she would be willing to live in Wilmington, and he would not come move for less than $1,200 a year. He served several years as city solicitor.
C. Douglas Buck and Frank duPont asked Caleb to head the Trust Dept. of the Equitable Trust Co. Later, Robert Richards said to Frank duPont: "Women don't steal each other's cooks and lawyers don't steal from other law firms, but I won't mind robbing a bank. Caleb Layton is wasted in your bank." And so Richards, Layton and Fingers was formed.

THE HARLAN SCOTT FAMILY

Harlan Scott is the son of Harlan George Scott and Mrs. Deborah Brewster (Halsey) Turnbull, who was the daughter of Capt. William F. Halsey of the U.S. Navy and sister of Adm. William F. "Bull" Halsey.

Ancestors of the Scott family came to the U.S. from the North of Ireland. For easy reference, here are five generations of Scotts:

John and Lydia Scott
   Thomas Scott and Ann March Lattomus, a widow
   Bishop Levi Scott and Sarah Ann Smith
   Alfred T. Scott and Rebecca W. Pinkerton
   Harland G. Scott and Deborah Brewster Halsey

John and Lydia settled in Appoquinomink 100 in New Castle County. Their son Thomas was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Ch. and died while away from home preaching on the circuit. Thomas’ wife Ann, from an English family that settled near Chestertown MD, took over management of the family farm after his death, freed it from debt, bought more land, and was able to give them the education available at that time.

Son Levi was born 11 October 1802 on a farm near Odessa. When he was about 17, he began work as a cabinet maker with his cousin, John Janvier, in Odessa. But a religious conversion led him to a life of ministry and he was accepted at the age of 23 to become an itinerant minister. In 1840, Wesleyan University gave him a Master of Arts degree, and in 1846, Delaware College gave him a Doctor of Divinity degree. He was delegate to the Methodist General Conference from 1836 until his death. At the gathering of 1852, he was elected to the highest position in the church, the Methodist Episcopacy. Shortly afterward, he made his first official visitation to the church in Liberia, Africa. Bishop Scott died 13 Jul 1882 in the house where he was born and was buried nearby at Old Union Methodist Episcopal Church.

Alfred T. Scott, born 16 June 1832, was first interested in the study of art and became professor of art at the Wesleyan Female Academy in Wilmington. But he followed his father's steps into the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church about 1856. He held numerous posts as an itinerant minister until 1866, when he returned to Wilmington to continue preaching and work with publications. He married Rebecca W. Pinkerton in December 1856.

Harlan G. Scott was born 7 August 1866 in Wilmington, where he attended school. After graduating from Delaware College, he began work in banking and public service. He was a director of Union National Bank 1900 to 1908 and was an organizer of the Wilmington Trust Co in 1903. In 1907 he was appointed Jury Commissioner of New Castle Co and helped organize a new system for drawing juries. In 1913, he was appointed to a commission to plan and build a new municipal building in Wilmington. He married Mrs. Deborah Brewster Halsey Turnbull in April 1915.

§ Anna Hartung Patterson  {17 Jun 1862~1 Apr 1951}

Landreth Lee Layton was born in Georgetown and attended the public schools there and in Bridgeville. He was president of the Georgetown Trust Co., the Georgetown Gas Co., the Layton Cold Storage Co. and the firm of Layton and Layton, Inc., wholesale grocery distributors. He started his business career selling drugs in the Wagamon Block of Georgetown, then expanded the firm into the seed business at Market and North Race Streets in Georgetown.

He was extremely active in Delaware Democratic politics, but his only run for public office was as Democratic nominee for governor of Delaware in 1932, a race he lost to Gov. Clayton Douglas Buck. He was a member of the State Emergency Relief Commission.

Anna was the dau of Dr. James V. Patterson and Margaret W. Forbes of Germantown PA.

§ 9 June 1920 Marianne Everard Skelton Gibbs  {9 Aug 1891~1 Feb 1984} of Wayne PA

L. Lee Layton graduated with a BS in Civil Engineering from the Un of Penn in 1911. He worked as a draftsman for the Pennsylvania RR Maintenance of Way Dept. 1911-12, then joined his father’s wholesale seed distribution business, Layton & Layton, in Georgetown. He joined the National Guard and served in Delaware’s contingent that saw active duty on the Mexican border in 1916. In 1917 he joined the US Army and served as a 2nd Lt with the 314th Field Artillery from Ft. Lee Va. In 1926 he formed his own wholesale grocery company, Layton & Co, of Dover. He was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1932.

He was known throughout the Delmarva Peninsula as a prolific writer of letters to the editor of newspapers, first to local Sussex and Kent County papers, then the larger Wilmington and Philadelphia papers. He even contributed to Time Magazine. His topics usually were politics and economics with heavy emphasis on his conservative views. When the weekly papers of Sussex tried to limit the number of letters a single writer could contribute, the compiler of this family history - then an eighth grader - felt compelled to write a letter to the editor defending L. Lee Layton’s right to express his views, which happened to be diametrically opposed to the author’s. Some years later, the author was assigned as a newspaper reporter to cover organizations on the extreme right side of the political spectrum, which certainly included L. Lee Layton’s positions. He was a leader of the local John Birch Society chapter and the American Party. While some of his fellow members tended toward the disheveled, he always appeared in public dressed in a three-piece suit complete with watch chain. His family and business papers are housed in the Special Collections Room at the Un of DE library, Newark. These papers afford remarkable insight into the life and times of L L Layton. He was appointed to West Point June 1843 and resigned June 1845. In July 1845, he became a law student in the office of his father in Georgetown and was admitted to the bar in 1848. After practicing a number of years with his father, he was elected clerk of the House of Representatives for 1860-61.

In response to the first call for troops for the Civil War, on May 7, 1861 he recruited a company for three months service in the First Delaware Regiment, serving as captain. He later was made Major and served as such until August 5, when he was appointed Captain in the regular army and was assigned to the 11th U.S. Infantry. He then served in the 16th and 20th Infantry. He was promoted to Major while in the 16th and made Lt. Colonel in the 20th. He saw much active service and was engaged in some of the hardest fought battles of the war, including Fredericksburg and Gettysburg.

His health remained good until 1882, when he began suffering in the heat of the southwest. From the southwest, he was removed about the winter of 1883 to Fort Keogh, Montana, and this great change also was thought to have injured his health. From there, he was sent to Fort Dodge, Kansas, and then Fort Hays, Kansas, where he was seized with paralysis in April 1884. He remained in command of that fort until November 1884, when he began sick-leave that continued until he was retired from the army in October 1885. He returned to Georgetown in June 1886 and died there. St. Pauls' Cem, Georgetown. No spouse is buried near him.

position until his retirement in 1937. UP was very interested in apple breeding as a part of the Geneva Research Program. He was an extremely active pomologist and his influence on the field is still being felt through his dozens of books and papers. His last book dealt with the history of horticulture in America and it remains the standard reference on the subject.

Joshua Spry Layton was a merchant and a builder. Among the structures he erected are the Episcopal Church and the Courthouse on the circle in Georgetown. Also noteworthy is the Brick Hotel in Georgetown, which he built for the Prohibition Party to further his ideal to see if a hotel could operate successfully without a bar. He was strongly opposed to the sale of liquor and gave liberally of his time and means to the prohibition cause. He also was quite active in the Masonic Lodge, being a 32nd degree Mason. He made the long and slow journey to Cincinnati to participate in the opening of a new lodge in that city. In 1837, he was considered to be a prominent member of the Whig Party.

In 1845, Joshua was an incorporator of the Milton Manufacturing Co., which was formed by an act of the state legislature to process cotton, paper, wool, linen and iron.

Born in Milford; buried in the churchyard of the St. Paul's Episcopal Ch, Georgetown.

Henry wrote the following letter home to his sister Laura. It was tucked into the Matthews Family Bible and remains there today.

“Arlington Heights
Near Washington
May 14, 1865
My Darling Sis,

You will perceive by my endorsement that we are on our way home. We broke camp about a week ago, and have been marching continually since, both day and night, with but little rest, but a great deal of exposure, wading streams, plunging through mud, scratched almost to pieces by the briars through forests, until we have at last arrived safely here, where we are now encamped on field of grass with our shelter tents pitched apparently with a prospect of enjoying a day or two’s recreation, which I will pledge you my honour is most acceptable. As to the time we shall leave here, there are various conjectures, but the probability is that we shall march in a day or two more into the city of Washington which is only four miles, and there take transportation by cars homeward. I shall come down to see you immediately upon my arrival, but cannot stay but a day or so, as I shall wish to get into business as soon as possible. I want to see you so badly that as the time approaches nearer, it seems to me to be an age. I was not at all impatient, when there was no probability of my getting back before the expiration of my time, but as the fighting is all over, and a report here that Jeff davis and his staff captured, therefore no probability of hostilities being resumed, I feel quite uncomfortable in the army. I have no news to communicate. My health is extremely good and my spirits of course high and cheerful. The sight of civilization once more is sufficient to cheer a weary soldier beyond discription. You can scarcely discern the difference between me and one of the Southern Negros as fas as complexion is concerned, for the sun and heavy exposure to the wintry blasts has not only rendered my skin black, but rough. Sometimes I can scrape pieces of dead skin off with my knife. Give my love to Joseph and kiss the little ones for me, and ever believe me to be your most affectionate brother.

H.A. Layton”

After the death of Elishe, William married second Margaret Wallace {3 Nov 1806~25 Feb 1879}, dau of John Wallace and Cynthia Virden. William and Margaret had five children: Margaret, William, Thomas, Robert J., and Mary, wife of Dr. Nathan Pratt. 582 Dr. Pratt maintained a drugstore at the corner of North Front and North Sts. in Milford is a large house, which was the home of Cynthia Wallace in her widowhood.

Robert J., son of William and Margaret, was profiled in Biographical Encyclopedia, which said, "His father, William Hill, was born in Cedar Creek Hundred, Sussex County, near Milford. William Hill’s opportunities for obtaining an education were limited, but the active healthful life of the farmer’s assistant fostered in him sturdy characteristics of body and mind, which made him a good and useful citizen. He remained on the farm until 1849, and in that year removed to Milford and engaged in the general merchandise business in partnership with his son, Robert J. Their association continued until 1868, when they disposed of this store and Robert J. removed to his wife’s estate near Farmington." He married Martina, daughter of ex-governor William Tharp. Their fourth child was named Henry.

Edward K. Bramble

Edward Bramble was not a lucky man. Buried on one side of him in the East New Market Cem (MD) is his first wife, Sarah J, who died in 1856 at the age of 25. On the other side is Sarah Lizzie, his consort, who died in June 1859. Six months later, he married Maggie Layton, and then he was dead less than a year after that.

Two documents in Bramble’s estate provide an interesting look at 19th century life and the social status of the Layton and Davis families of Milford. They are petitions — one by Maggie, the other by her mother — seeking the return of items that belonged to Maggie before her marriage. These documents were necessary because, by law, everything belonged to the husband and did not automatically pass to the widow on his death. Both petitions were written 12 Jan 1861 in East New Market.

Maggie’s petition To the Honorable Orphans Court of Dorchester County, Maryland. The following is a list of articles owned by me before my marriage to Mr. Edward K. Bramble and used in my business — or vocation as milliner — which business I expect to resume. 1 carpet - 17 yards, 1 rocking chair, 1 glass lamp, 1 fluid can, 1 bleach box, 1 large trunk, 1 small work-box. The above items can all be strictly identified.

The following articles were bought after my marriage (whilst in the city) with fifty dollars of my own money, 1 sofa and sewing (or rocking) chair, $32; 1 chamber carpet - 27 yards at 31 cts p. yard, $8.37; 3 small gilt frames 60 cts a piece (drawings presented by my cousins) $1.80; 1 globe lamp, $2.50; 24 yards of curtain muslin at 25 cts p. yard, $6. There were some other trivial articles bought, amounting to between fifty and sixty dollars, which I think is unnecessary to mention, as I only claim $50 worth. This money I gave to my husband to pay in connexion with his own for all the articles bought. I have no way to identify the particular articles paid for with my money - with the exception of the sofa - which fact can be attested by Doct. Edmondson, who heard my husband say that fifty dollars of my money went to pay for the articles bought and particularly designated the sofa to him.

I also claim the watch he (my husband) wore as a bridal present to me (sic). I have no way to establish it, but by my husband's own declaration to Dr. Edmundson. I also owned a pr. of silver salt spoons with the initials of my former name (ML) marked on them presented as a bridal present a few days before my marriage - by my aunt Mrs. Judge Layton. I bought the sewing chair by my mother's special direction. The salt spoons can be positively identified.

The following are books all presented (or loaned) to me before my marriage: Mrs.
Heman’s Poems, Great Truths by Great Authors, Carvosso (sic), Book of Politeness, Pilgrims Progress, Power of Illustration, all presented by my deceased brother, Henry L. Layton. The Old Farm and the New Farm, borrowed bro. James Layton; Hodgson on Predestination, a book of my deceased brothers; The True Woman, presented by my husband, Mr. EKB, Etiquette for Ladies, presented by a friend; Pollock’s Course of Time, purchased myself before marriage, The Christian’s Gift, loaned my by bro. Frederic L.; Gift for Mourners, borrowed; my Bible and prayer book. Also 16 Amrotyps of myself and friends. All on this page can be designated or identified. (Signed) Maggie L. D. Bramble widow of the late E. K. Bramble.

I have been this explicit in having had named all the above articles, endeavoring to avoid all hard feelings with my husband's friends. I humbly submit it to the Honorable Court, willing to abide with pleasure their decision, hoping and believing that they will deal as favorably as possible. I will just say that my mother and I are both widows and, as it were, isolated from our friends, who reside in another state. Having no special or interested advisors. If witness is required, please state the day, if not, please return this list to me with the articles decided to be mine designated.

The petition of Maggie’s mother To the Honorable, to the Orphans Court of Dorchester County, Maryland. The following are a list of articles owned by me and loaned to my daughter Mrs. Maggie L.D. Bramble. 3 bed quilts, 2 white counterpanes, 1 dark double counterpane, 1 dozen dining plates, 1 large waiter, 1 large dish, 2 glass preserve plates, 2 glass salt sellers, 1 large damask table cloth, 3 glass lamps (making four in all), 5 large silver table spoons (marked in my parents name), 5 middle sized silver dessert spoons, 6 silver tea-spoons - marked R, (my mother’s maiden name), 1 silver cream cup, 1 p. silver sugar tongs. This silver was all received from my parents and grand-parents, and are old precious family relics. Can be strictly identified with all the other articles mentioned on this page. (Signed) Maria R. Layton, widow of Doctr. G. S. Layton.

I would just say to the honorable Court that I am a stranger in New Market, my native place being Milford, Delaware. I came down here about two weeks since to attend Mr. E K Bramble (my son-in-law) in his last sickness — feel friendless and alone. I shall, with my daughter, deeply deplore any hard feelings that may arise. We shall, on our part, endeavor to avoid by word or action, any and everything that may tend to excite it. In regard to the sewing (or rocking chair) just such a chair as I described to her the night before they went to the city — was bought — and I have every reason that it was bought with her money, as the sofa and chair was included in the same bill. She has this bill. MRL.

[Author’s note:. . . to be continued.]

George Smith Grier

He was born in North Shields, England, and came to the U.S. in 1845. In 1849, he establ ished a machine shop and foundry on Haven Lake, Milford, that produced machinery and other foundry products. This first shop burned and in 1851 he built a foundry and machine shops on the river about a half mile from town. He later “expanded this business to include the repair of steam engines and the manufacture of fruit evaporators and corn shellers.” He and George are buried in Odd Fellows Cem, Milford.

This also was a second marriage for George. Also buried in Odd Fellows Cemetery under a stone that reads "wife of George Smith Grier, born in North Shields, England" is Ann Younger her is buried her daughter, Lizzie Grier, age 12 hours, who died 23 May 1863.

George was the son of William Grier (1776~2 Mar 1849) and Isabella Smith, who married 17 Nov 1807 in All Saints Church, New Castle-upon-Tyne, England. William was born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and died in Frederica, DE. He is buried at Barrett’s Chapel. Before Isabella, he married first 27 May 1797 Jannet Bell of Gearth, Dumfriesshire. William’s father is believed to be John Grier of Scotland.

§ 30 Oct 1895 Ella Lightbourne Vaules {14 Mar 1871~3 Apr 1929}

Ella died at the Hotel Traymore in Atlantic City. She was the daughter of William Thornton Vaules and Sarah Minors Layton, daughter of George and Elizabeth Minors and widow of James Henry Layton [see index]. Sarah was William’s second wife, his first, Clementine H. Todd, having died in 1865. William was the son of John R. Vaules and Ann Thornton, grandson of William Vaules and a Miss Davis.

G. Layton Grier was born in Milford and received his education in the local schools. He received his Doctor of Dental Surgery degree from the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1891. He first opened his practice in Milford, but later moved to Dover, his brother Frank taking over the practice.

Layton Grier became friends with Dr. Levin D. Caulk, who began his dental practice in Wilmington in 1863. Dr. Caulk’s interests turned to the production side of dentistry and by 1877 he decided to give up his practice to devote all his time to the manufacture of dental products. These materials were produced in a small shed in back of his home in Camden, Delaware. As the friendship between Drs. Grier and Caulk grew, Dr. Caulk often rode on horseback from Camden to Dover to exchange ideas with Dr. Grier. On one of these rides, Dr. Caulk was injured in a fall from his horse and he died of pneumonia April 17, 1896.

Mrs. Caulk and her daughter, Florence, persuaded Layton Grier to give up his practice and manage the business. In March 1897, Florence married Layton’s brother Frank. Shortly afterward, the brothers bought the business from Mrs. Caulk and continued to manufacture dental materials in Camden. They soon opened a retail office in Philadelphia.

The business prospered, creating a need for new facilities. In 1900, the laboratories of the Caulk Co. were moved to a new building in Milford. Because of the continued growth, a sales organization was needed, so another Grier brother, Davis, was trained in the Caulk line and he began selling.

In 1910, while traveling on a trip to Europe, Layton visited the DeTrey brothers and learned about a new silicate cement called Syntrex and Synthetic Porcelain. The next year, Layton obtained the manufacturing and sales rights for these products for North and South America and Japan. Yet another Grier brother, Walter, who was practicing dentistry in Milford, was induced to give up his practice to take charge of the production of this new product line.

In 1912, the company was incorporated, with Layton as president and Frank as vice president. Two other brothers — Harry and George — also joined the company at this time. The company then started expanded its sales reach. Offices were opened in Toronto; Huntington, West Virginia; Harrisburg; Pittsburgh; Chicago and San Francisco.

While serving as president of Caulk, Layton traveled extensively in Europe, South America, China and Japan to keep in touch with advances in dentistry.

Layton was acquainted with Admiral Richard Byrd, so the personnel of the two Byrd Antarctic Expeditions had the condition of their mouths checked by the Caulk research staff. As a result, both expeditions were completely free of dental ills. The medical house established at the Antarctic base was named in honor of Garrett Layton Grier.

He was a director of the Wilmington Trust Co., the Milford Trust Co.— of which he was one of the organizers — and the Seaford Trust Co. He was active in his charitable work for the Milford Memorial Hospital. He was president of the hospital’s board for 15 years.

He was president of the American Dental Trade Association during the years 1922-24. His memberships included Avenue Methodist Church in Milford, the Masonic Order, Lu Lu

Frank L. Grier was born in Milford, where he attended the local schools. He was a member of the class of 1890 at Delaware College. In 1894, he was graduated from the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery and practiced as a dentist until 1897, when he withdrew to enter into the manufacture of dental filling materials.

It was while practicing dentistry that Dr. Grier realized the need for better materials. He ceased practicing and began experimental work to improve on the materials developed by Dr. Levin D. Caulk. [See Garrett Layton Grier above] Being unable to make significant progress, Dr. Grier decided to take post-graduate work at Northwestern University, Chicago, under Dr. G.V. Black. Upon completing his studies, he resumed experimenting, often working around the clock.

Dr. Grier was vice-president, treasurer and general manager of the L.D. Caulk Co until he was succeeded by his son, Harold Caulk Grier. Dr. Grier was an organizer and vice-president of the Milford Trust Co; president of the Fruit Growers’ National Bank of Smyrna administration, he hosted Harding on a visit to Milford when he was made a member of Tall Cedars.

In 1924, he was nominated on the Republican ticket to run for Congress, but he decided. At the 1928 Republican state convention, he was named as one of the state’s three presidential electors.632

He played for the Eastern Shore League in Federalsburg MD in 1937 and Milford from 1938-1941.

Garrett owned and operated men's clothing stores in Milford and Rehoboth Beach from 1938-1941. He served as a Lt. Commander in aviation ordinance in the U.S. Navy 1942-1946. At the end of the war, he and his brother Logan established Grier Lumber Co. in Milford, which he owned and operated for 26 years. After retiring from the company, he served as a real estate broker. i. Charles Henry Richards {22 Nov 1827~10 Jan 1899}

§ 24 Jun 1875 Elizabeth Anderson {26 Nov 1830~21 Nov 1922}

Daughter of James Anderson, president of Farmers' Bank, and Elizabeth Frame.

Charles was born in Georgetown and received his early schooling at the Georgetown Academy. At 21, he entered the office of Dr. William M. L. Rickards of Lewes as a medical student. The following year, he entered the University of Pennsylvania. While there, he also was the private student of Drs. Neill and Reese, both prominent Philadelphia physicians. Graduating with the class of 1851, he returned to Georgetown to set up what became a large practice. He was physician at the county Alms House and Insane Asylum and represented the county in the State Medical Society, of which he was elected president in 1868. He also represented the state in the American Medical Association, in which he held a position on the Necrological committee. In 1861, Governor Burton appointed him prothonotary of Superior Court, but his private practice precluded other public appointments.

He served as chairman of the State Central Committee of the Democratic Party. He also was for many years a director of the Farmers Bank of Delaware and was for 15 years treasurer of the Sussex Bible Society. He was a life member of the American Bible Society. He also was an active member of the M.E. Church.

Dr. Richards succeeded his father in the leather manufacturing business and inherited the old homestead in 1878. He also owned about 1,200 acres of timber and farm land.

During the last quarter of the 18th century, the Delmarva Peninsula gave birth to a social movement that may be the region's most significant contribution to the culture of America . . . if one discounts chickens as a cultural contribution.

The American Methodist Church took root here because the region had an over abundance of xxx -- sin.

Robert Layton and his brother Thomas ...

[Intro on the birth of Methodism on Delmarva]

Layton references in Rise of Methodism in America:

"In North West Fork, Sussex County, Delaware, at the house of Robert Layton, a society was formed about 1777. The second time Mr. Asbury preached here, in 1778, he received twelve broken-hearted penitents into it. The Lord was working powerfully among the people. This society afterwards met at Mr. Thomas Layton's, near by where the preaching was for several years. In 1780, Mr. Asbury says, 'I preached to a faithful people at T. Layton's. The Methodists, blessed be God, do grow - their little stock increases. I am pleased with the temporal, and rejoice in their spiritual prosperity.

"In the beginning of the present century, Mr. Layton sold his land in Delaware, and emigrated to Kentucky, but scarcely reached the place of his destination, when he was removed to a 'Better country.' Mr. Minus Layton, who was received into the Western Conference in 1808, and died the same year, we are persuaded, was his son."

"...The following names were among the first Methodists of this region: David Nutter, Esq., father-in-law of Judge White, Tilghman and Lowder Layton ..."

"...After the quarterly meeting was over [February 13, 1778], he preached at James Layton's in Marshyhope, where a class was formed already..."

"...There was another appointment at Mr. James Layton's (who became a local preacher), in Marshyhope; there was preaching and a society was formed..."

"...Near the town of Bridgeville, at the house of Robert Layton (the maternal grandfather of the writer), another appointment was made this year [1777].

Excerpts from the Journal of Francis Asbury:

Saturday, August 1, 1778. I went into the Fork: and on the Lord's Day preached at Mr. W. Ross's, and at Mr. Robert Layton's. The congregations were attentive and affected; so that, although they are rude and unpolished, yet God is able, even of these unseemly stones, to raise up children unto Abraham.

Lord's Day, August 16 After preaching at Mr. Brown's in the Fork, I enforced Acts xiii, 40, 41, at Robert Layton's, where many people were affected, and about twelve were taken as probationers into the society. On Monday, at Mr. Flower's, I spoke with spiritual enlargement to a poor, ignorant congregation; and there were many persons much affected on Tuesday at Charles Twyford's. It seemed as if the Lord was working on their willing hearts, to prepare them for his Church militant below, and for his Church triumphant above.

[White Brown, a nephew of Thomas White of Delaware, where Asbury stayed during the Revolutionary War, lived "in the Forks" in Sussex County, the Forks being North West Fork 100. Asbury preached in his home a number of times. Early in the 19th century, Brown emigrated to Ohio, where Asbury again visited him. Journal entry for 23 Sept 1803 and note under 8 Sep 1805.

This emigration pattern was took many Sussex residents to Ohio around 1800.]

Saturday, September 26. On my way to the Fork, I was in spiritual travail for the souls of the people; and there was some melting at Mr. W. Ross's; but a much more powerful moving at Layton's, while I discoursed on 2 Cor. v, 11.

Thursday, October 8. I found some religious feelings in the congregation at J. Gray's; but dead, dead times at Robert Layton's. And I was so unwell, as to be under the necessity of sitting down to teach the people. I returned very ill, and was unable to preach on the Lord's Day.

Thursday, October 29. I spoke with some animation at J. Gray's, and most of the congregation felt the weight of Divine truths.

Friday, October 30. I put the society in some order at Layton's, turning out the disorderly members — which always are a weight and a curse to any religious community.

December 13, 1780 Preached at Isaac Layton's

December 20, 1780 Preached at Thomas Layton's
The children of William and Rachel Layton lived, for the most part, in what is now northwestern Sussex and southwestern Kent counties in Delaware, with some drifting west into Caroline. Son Robert gradually came to be associated with Bridgeville, the oldest town in western Sussex. Its original name was Bridge Branch, derived from a bridge that crossed a branch of the Nanticoke as early as 1730. The name was changed to Bridgeville in 1810.

The town remained a small farming community until the Delaware Railroad was constructed down the center of Delaware in 1858, connecting the fertile Sussex cropland to more distant markets. It was the impetus the town was looking for.

Bridgeville reached its zenith in the early 20th century with the production of fruit and truck crops, such as strawberries, cantaloupes and watermelons. In season, the streets near the railroad tracks were lined with farm vehicles bringing the produce for sale to a group of brokers who would purchase it for resale to metropolitan markets. Frequently, as many as 100 refrigerated railroad cars were loaded daily at the peak of the season. By 1914, Bridgeville had become known as the June strawberry capital of the nation. Numerous members of the by-now extended Layton family were active in this produce business. But it was another change in transportation trends that dimmed the lights on the bustling town. The popularity of trucks that could be loaded closer to the fields meant Bridgeville's railyard no longer had a purpose.

The People Who Built Bridgeville

The land on which Bridgeville was founded was part of the original grant given to Lord Baltimore when Indians still were the only inhabitants of the area.

Historian Henry Conrad asserted in his history that fully three-fourths of the land was settled by "old families from Virginia and Maryland." This meant that second-, third- and even fourth-generation families were settling this area, not immigrants just off the boat. These folks knew what it took to survive in land that was nothing but forest, creeks and a few scattered Indian trails. The attraction in the Bridgeville area was not just free land, but fertile free land, considered by many agriculturalist to be the best in the county.

Col. William Stephens, a grantee who never left England, was awarded title to what is now Bridgeville in 1658. On 23 June 1682, John Nutter took possession of the tract, "Tausey Wandoke," but it appears that he also failed to occupy the land. It was granted again in 1684 to John's son Christopher, who was the first Nutter to build on the land. The tract was an area between Clear Brook Branch and Bridge Branch, which divided the Nutter land from a tract known to the Indians as "Attawattacoquin." It was "Attawattacoquin" — running north and west from Bridge Branch — that the next generation of Layton's acquired.

Robert Layton has been designated a "Patriot" by the Maryland DAR, the official citation coming from Revolutionary records that read "... Paid in 1787 for service in Revolutionary period." Apparently, he is the only member of the entire Layton family to be so designated, although at least one other - a James in Dorchester County - is found in Revolutionary records.

Robert was born about 1739 in Delaware, married Rosannah Stafford about 1761 and died in Sussex in late October or early November of 1786. His will — in which he describes himself as "farmer" — was probated in Sussex County on 9 November 1786. He was on the assessment roll of 1785 in North West Fork Hundred.

Along with Joshua Polk and Elijah Hatfield, Robert witnessed the will of William Hitch of Dorchester County in Nov 1771.

Rosannah appears to have been the daughter of John Stafford Jr. and Elinor, granddaughter of John and Elizabeth Stafford.

Rosannah Stafford remarried to Thomas Ludenum. The 1803-04 tax assessment list for North West Fork 100 shows Ludenum with extensive land holdings in the area. The will of Thomas was written 29 March 1808 and witnessed by a Lutisha Layton. He names his wife, Rosannah, to whom he gave "the negro woman, Anes and her three children, Kitty, Matthew and Collings. . . .", his son Stafford, a granddaughter, Sally Hurt; a daughter, Polley Hickman; and his daughter-in-law, Peggy Ludenum, to who he gave "one negro woman, Mint." He also named his eight grandsons and eight granddaughters by sons Zadock and Eben.

Rosannah's will, filed in Georgetown, was written 19 April 1824 and probated 20 July 1824. The administrator was Wesley Victor.

Robert and Rosannah had four children: Margaret (Peggy), Burton, Purnal and Hester (Hessy).

1. Margaret Layton "Peggy" (c1763-1824)
   § Eben Ludenum (~Apr 1807)
   §§ 1 Jan 1814 William Allen (~1816)

Peggy’s birth year is inferred from the probable marriage date of her parents, which is believed to be about 1761.

Eben was the son of Thomas Ludenum, the second husband of Rosannah Stafford Layton, therefore, Eben was Margaret’s step-brother. Eben wrote his will 13 March 1807 and it was filed for probate 23 April 1807. In it, he said son John would have a horse when he reached lawful age. James Rawlins and Richard Leverton were witnesses to the will. Eben also was known as Aben and Ebbin.

A curious note: In recording the births of the children of Eben in the family Bible, the writer uses "Eben and Peggy" for the first child, William, but "Eben and Polly" for the next five. All other records point to Peggy being the mother of all the children.

The name Ludenum is used for this generation because Eben used it in his will. However, Lednum is used for suggestive generations.

Peggy’s remarriage to an Allen is implied in her mother’s will, and confirmed as William Allen in the estate of Aben Ludenum and DPA marriage records. In 1820, Peggy was the head-of-household, living in a cluster of houses with her mother and sister Hessey, along with others who likely were of some relation. This implies Rev. William Allen died before 1820, but his will wasn’t probated until 25 May 1822, with William Allen Jr. and wife Peggy as executors.

A. Anne Lednum {}
   § Roger Hickman
   Anne was not included in the family Bible’s listing of children. However, the will of Eben’s father, Thomas, is explicit in referring to Eben’s daughter Anne. She also is listed in Eben’s will as a Hickman. Comparing the ages of the children in the Bible with the order of the children in the will of Thomas indicates Anne was the first or second child, likely the first.

§ Anna Maria Eordan {}^{875} b>PA
John Lednum was born in Bridgeville, died in Philadelphia and was buried in Lancaster PA. He was a minister in the Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Church, beginning his ministry in the spring of 1823. Lednum served a church in Lewes in 1824, according to Scharf. The archives of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Lancaster record his ministry there from the spring of 1832 until 1834. He was living in Philadelphia in 1850, according to the census.

He was the author of A History of the Rise of Methodism in America 1766 to 1785, published in 1859. In it, he writes that Robert Layton was his maternal grandfather. The name Lednum and Leddenham and other variations of the name seem to have been used at will in the North West Fork 100 area of Sussex.

The Rev. Andrew Manship, an itinerant Methodist minister, wrote about Lednum in his memoir Thirteen Years' Experience in the Itinerancy, relating an episode when Rev. Manship was ill in 1854. "Rev. John Lednum, an elderly member of the Philadelphia Annual Conference, who sustains a superannuated relation, filled my appointments during the summer. He filled my place in every respect; and he could not have been more faithful had he been the regular pastor. He, like God's ancient prophet, resolved that he would receive nothing from the hands of the brethren. There is much originality and power in the preaching of 26 Apr 1947 Rev. John Lednum. His labours were owned in this charge, in the awakening and conversion of many souls. From this minister, all through my career at Hedding Church, I realized much assistance. He was one of my most efficient 'helpers in Christ Jesus.'"

In a tribute to Lednum in the 1864 minutes of the Philadelphia Conference, the writer said "though his manner in the pulpit was less attractive than that of some, he was, nevertheless, an interesting, instructive and profitable preacher.... Wherever he labored during his ministerial life, he was more or less successful.” Certainly warm words of remembrance.

Anna Maria Eordan was the daughter of Martin Eordan and Elizabeth Maria Huffnagle. Martin (1761~1821), at the age of 15, enlisted in the Flying Camp, was taken prisoner at Long Island and confined 10 months. He served as a guard over prisoners at the Lancaster barracks. He was a handscrew maker. Stella Buist Wood DAR ID# 24115

This was Anna Maria’s second marriage. She married first Thomas Wentz, a horse dealer, by whom she had at least four children: Charles E., Henry Casper, Adilhaide, and Thomas J.

On 9 May 1787, Rose Layton appeared before the Sussex County Orphan’s Court meeting in Lewes for the valuation of the land Burton inherited from his father. The record of that session refers to Burton as "a minor son of Robert Layton, deceased." Rose reported that Burton held land in NorthWest Fork and asked that the court appoint three people to value the land. Isaac Bradley, David Richard and Elijah Adams were appointed.

   The trio decided the land was worth 7 pund per year and reported that the fencing was in "middling repair." They also gave an inventory of the property:

   • 124 good apple trees and 8 small apple trees
   • 1 house 26’x16’ with 2 brick chimneys in good repair

The court also said "The guardian is not permitted to clear any ground more than will keep the said plantation in repair and said guardian is to return the said plantation in good tenantable repair at the expiration of the time of guardianship." 884

Burton's will was written 14 November 1791 and probated 8 February 1792. His heir was sister Esther, indicating he probably never married. His executor was "father-in-law Thomas Ludenum." More likely, this refers to his step-father. Test: Thomas Layton and Thomas Stafford. 885

3. Purnel Layton {1755-1760~Apr 1846} 886

§ Elinor Hickman "Nelly" {1760s~} 887

Purnel's birthyear has been estimated as 1755 by several family researchers, but this does not jibe with the DAR records for his parents. The DAR contends Robert was born about 1739, then married Rosannah about 1761. A birthyear in the 1760s would be feasible if son Mitchell were born about 1789. The 1830 census indicates a birthyear for Purnel and Nelly between 1760 and 1770. Son Mitchell lived next door to Purnel and Nelly in 1830.

Elinor was the daughter of Levin and Nancy Hickman. Elinor's siblings were Tilghman, William, Rebecca and Levina Hickman.

Note that Mitchell’s will, probated 28 Jul 1846, was administered by George P. White and William Cannon. White witnessed the will and Cannon was executor of Nancy Layton, widow of Jabez, son of Solomon. This may be a clue as to where Solomon connects to the Layton tree.

Harriett was the dau of Thomas Wilson and Sophia Rickards. On 30 Sep 1846 Harriett married Luther C. Wadman {c1800~} b>MD [Vol 45 p61]. Luther was living in Caroline Co in 1830. In 1840 he was in Mispillion 100. Luther married first Sarah Morgan on 29 Apr 1830 in Kent. Capanda Wadman {c1830~} a female, is shown in the household in the 1850 Sussex census. George P. White co-signed Luther’s bond when he married Harriett. Luther and Harriett were living in the NWFork 100 -- in Bridgeville -- in 1860. Luther was appointed postmaster of Marshy Hope Bridge PO in Kent “to 30 Sep 1841.” He became post master of Bridgeville PO 9 Dec 1845. The 1859-60 Bridgeville business directory listed Luther as an auctioneer. In 1862 he was assessed for “one carriage and harness for horse;” of Bridgeville. When Luther’s estate was probated in 1862, Harriett deferred the administration to her son Elbert W Layton.

i. Garrett Sipple Layton {7 Nov 1825~Mar 1901} Garrett was a clerk in Cannon’s general merchandise store in Bridgeville.

During the Civil War, Bridgeville contained strong supporters of the Lincoln administration, such as Gov. Cannon, but also others who were sympathetic with the South, such as some members of the Dilworth and Laws families. This friction prompted Gov. Cannon to request the presence of federal troops at polling places during the election of 1862. The actions of the troops led to an investigation by a committee of the General Assembly. The first witness was Garrett S. Layton, who was commissioned by the Secretary of War, E.M. Stanton, to be provost marshal during the election.

[Testimony from that hearing is reproduced in the book “Bridgeville: A Community History of the Nineteenth Century.”]

888 A biography of Mitchell’s son Elbert says Mitchell died in 1839 at the age of 50, which would mean he was born c1789. The will of Mitchell’s father states that Burton was the eldest, and Burton was born in 1793. However, if the date of death for Mitchell - 1 Apr 1839 - is correct, then he would have died by the time his father wrote his will and died in 1840, making Burton the eldest.

In November 1998, The News Journal of Wilmington printed a feature story on the H.C. Layton & Son Hardware Store in Bridgeville. It included an interview with H.C.’s grandson, Michael. Here is an excerpt:

“H.C. Layton ... graduated from Wilmington Commercial College and in 1897 went to work for a hardware store on the east end of Market Street of his home town. In 1898, he bought an old basket factory on the west end of town and set up his own business. Three years later, his was the only hardware store in town.

“H.C. also purchased a garage across the street and began selling Model T Fords. ‘He sold one car the first year,’ said (Michael) Layton. ‘Then he sold two the second year. The third year, the Ford company gave him a quota of four cars. He said he couldn’t do it, so he gave up the auto business.”

“Michael Layton’s father, Mike, was born in 1904 and graduated from Brown University in 1928 with a degree in philosophy. After living in Philadelphia for a few months, he returned to Bridgeville and on June 2, 1929, became an equal partner in his father’s store. In 1957, he bought the remaining half from his father.

“After a stint in the Air Force, Michael went to Colorado in 1962 to work on a dude ranch. But when his mother wrote to tell him that if he did not come home to help with the store his father was going to sell it, he returned to Bridgeville. He began work as a clerk that year, earning $35 a week, and 20 years later bought half of the store from his father. He inherited the other half when his father died in 1993.

“H.C. Layton worked in the store he founded until his death in 1965 at the age of 97. He took care of all the accounts until he was 93. Mike Layton worked until his death at age 89. But their grandson and son promises that he will retire at 65 and put the business up for sale.

“... ‘People look to old hardware stores for a lot of old things,’ said Layton as he rummaged through items in the storeroom that were bought before he was born. ‘You can’t buy this stuff in Wal-Mart. We have good service - if you don’t know how to change a faucet, we will tell you - and excellent product knowledge. A lot of big stores don’t have product knowledge.”

   Elbert Wilson Layton spent four years of his youth with his uncle, Burton Layton, who lived on the old homestead. There he worked on the farm and attended a subscription school in town. In 1856, he became a clerk in Bridgeville. For a number of years, he was chief clerk and bookkeeper for James Prettyman. In 1864, he became a clerk in the store of Gov. William Cannon, who died in March 1865. Two months later, Elbert entered a partnership with Richard W. Cannon in the general merchandising business, which flourished for five years.
   In 1870, Elbert bought out his partner and took in his brother, Mitchell, the firm assuming the name "Layton & Brother." The store was characterized as having ". . . probably the largest stock of dry goods in Bridgeville. They also also deal largely in ready made clothing, furniture, general merchandise, and in grain and crossties." The brothers also invested together in real estate, acquiring some 300 acres of land. Elbert also owned separately 36 acres ". . . at the railroad depot, covered with peach trees, blackberries and raspberries, which are very profitable. He also owns a good dwelling house on this property and five dwelling houses and lots in Bridgeville." He was a director of the First National Bank of Seaford and a member of the Bridgeville M.E. Church since February 1870.
   • Mary was the sister of Charles Fleming Richards [see index] and the daughter of John Richards and Ann Polk Carey of Bridgeville. Ann was living with Elbert and Mary in 1870 near Seaford. As explained in more detail in the Charles Fleming Richards section, Mary and Elbert most likely grew up together in the same area north of Bridgeville.

Mitchell was a prominent merchant of Bridgeville in the latter part of the 19th century. He served as a member of the Bridgeville Board of Education in 1883. In 1886, he was named to the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for which he served as treasurer for many years. He also was the first president of the Epworth League. In 1902, his children gave the new church a communion set in his memory. An August 1893 issue of The Every Evening reported that he won second prize at the World’s Fair for his display of Globe peaches.

Also in 1893, Mitchell was part of a group of men who believed the town of Bridgeville needed a hotel in which no alcoholic beverages would be permitted. The Columbia House finally was built in 1897 on the south side of Market Street, third lot west of William Street.

Buried beside Mitchell and Lida in the Bridgeville Cem are Lida’s parents, John R. (1819~1889) and Harriett L Laws (1821~1864). John was the son of Samuel Laws and Charlotte Rickards; grandson of Thomas Laws and Amelia Cropper.

4. Hestor Layton "Hessy" {c1770~}
§ Major Victor {~c1819(?)}
Hessy’s age is inferred from the likely marriage date of her parents and her position as the fourth child.
The 1820 census only confirms that she was older than 45.

The marriage of Hessy - or Hestor - to a Victor is found in the will of her mother, Rosannah, which was probated 20 July 1824. Also named is grandson Wesley Victor. Executors of the will were Rosannah's son Burton and grandson Wesley, but Burton refused to serve. This would indicate Wesley was in his late teens or, more likely, at least 21 years old, meaning he was born before 1803.

It appears that the Victor to whom Hestor was married was Major, and this likely was a second marriage for him. There simply were no other candidates to be her Victor spouse. The 1800 census for Caroline County shows Major with a house full of children and young adults. If they are all his children, there is no women in the house old enough to be the mother. The 1810 census for Northwest Fork 100 shows Major as older than 45 with a younger wife and three children. The 1816-18 Northwest Fork 100 tax assessment shows Major Victor living in a “small dwelling” owned by Dr. John Carey. Apparently Major died between this tax assessment and the 1820 census.

The 1820 census shows Hestor with several children in her household. Yet Rosannah specifically names only her grandson Wesley in her will. This suggests that the other children in the household were Major’s by a first wife and only Wesley was born to Hestor. However, if that is the case, why do Mary Victor and Cannon Wroughton have a son named Cyrus Layton Wroughton? One possible answer would be that while Hessy was not Mary’s mother, Hessy raised her. Or, Major's first wife also was a Layton. Or, there was a Layton in Cannon's line. Hessy was living next door to Job Wroten in 1820.

Hestor was living just two doors from her mother in 1820, and her sister Peggy also was nearby. The census reveals a cluster of interrelated families, including Andrew Stafford, who married Nelly Ludenum, daughter of Peggy Layton and Aben Ludenum, as well as a Samuel Ross and a Layton Smith all living within seven houses of each other. Apparently, Hestor was a widow. Most likely, it is Hestor who was living with Wesley in 1830.

It seems doubtful that Mary was Hessy's daughter; more likely, Mary was the dau of Major's first wife

THREE BRANCHES IN SEARCH OF A TREE

Three North West Fork 100 contemporaries – Clement, Solomon and Elijah Layton – clearly are cousins of the Layton branches chronicled above. The three may even be brothers. But their father or fathers remain unidentified. Their family branches are placed here because they are so closely aligned with the other Bridgeville-area Laytons. Intensive research goes on to attach them to the family tree.

Clement Layton

The children of Clement and Sarah are listed repeatedly in two records found at the DE Public Archives. [Ref: S Co Orphan's Court Plots F#L-5.] They provide extremely detailed descriptions of land owned by Clement, but because he died intestate, disposal of the land among his family members had to be handled by the Orphan's Court. The land lies to the northeast of Sussex Road 30 (known to Seaford locals as “Atlanta Road”) about midway between Wesley Church and Atlanta. The Masten house, which was just to the south of the Layton land, still stands. It is one of the oldest houses extent in Sussex.

The 1830 census of Northwest Fork 100 lists Clement as the owner of seven slaves, a boy under 10, a male between 10 and 24, 4 females less than 10 and a female among 10 and 24. He was one of the only slaveowners in his neighborhood. When the new Seaford 100 was created, it included Clement's land.

The Delaware Governor's Record contains this entry for 22 Apr 1841. “This day the governor signed a patent in favor of Clement Layton of Sussex County for 9 3/4 acres of land situate in Sussex County.”

The petition mentions numerous properties, including “Goshen,” “Hughetts Venture,” “Prevention of Neighbors,” “Hickory Hill,” “Cannon’s Agreement” and “Goshen Revised.” It also mentions Clear Brook Branch, Old Mill Pond, and a mill dam on the branch. Surrounding lands were owned by Warren Kinder, Robert Frame, Owen Kinder, Halsey Masten and William Neal.

It should be noted that there is some confusion in genealogical circles about Clement's date of death. It has been erroneously recorded in Delaware DAR Bible records as 1839, an error compounded by the Church of LDS and various Web sites. An African-American Clement Layton of Milford died in Delaware in 1839. An Orphan's Court petition by son Jesse W. specifically cites his father’s date of death as 6 March 1850.

Clement Layton Deeds:

Searching the Sussex Co deed book indexes from book AM35 (1821) forward, there are four deeds where Clement Layton is the grantee. All deeds involve Clement buying land originally of Wingate Cannon who died intestate leaving two daughters, Margaret Ann wife of John T. Cannon, and Mary wife of Jacob Kinder Jr. All grantees and grantors reside in NW Fork.

- AY47:1 (24 Mar 1836) from Jacob Kinder Jr and wife Mary, daughter of Wingate Cannon [witnesses: Henry Little, W. O. Redden]

- AY47:2 (11 May 1836) from John T. Cannon and wife Margaret Ann, daughter of Wingate Cannon [witnesses: Henry Little, George K. Hall]

- AX46:427 (29 Mar 1837) from John T. and Margaret Ann Cannon from Jacob and Mary Kinder Jr, for $600: tract adjoining land of Elijah Cannon, William Nutter Cannon, Joseph Neal and others [witnesses: W. O. Redden, M.Gibbons]

It is interesting to note that "Poplar Hill" was the name of the tract of the "Layton homestead" land sold by Thomas and Rebecca (Turpin) Layton to William Ross on 11 Apr 1795 [DeedsSX W21:32]

a. Luther C. Layton {c1856--}

In 1872, William Still published “The Underground Railroad,” a massive record of the escapes of slaves to freedom. 1031 One entry is the brief story of Jacob Blockson, who escaped in 1858. This is Still’s record of Jacob’s story:

“Jacob was a stout and healthy-looking man, about twenty-seven years of age, with a countenance indicative of having no sympathy with Slavery. Being invited to tell his own story, describe his master, etc., he hesitatingly relieved himself somewhat after this manner; ‘I escaped from a man by the name of Jesse W. [Layton]; he was a man of no business, except drinking whiskey, and farming. He was a light complected man, tall large, and full-faced, with a large nose. He was a widower. He belonged to no society of any kind. He lived near Seaford, in Sussex county, Delaware.

“I left because I didn’t want to stay with him any longer. My master was about to be sold out this Fall, and I made up my mind that I did not want to be sold like a horse, the way they generally sold darkies then; so when I started I resolved to die sooner than I would be taken back; this was my intention all the while.

“I left my wife, and one child; the wife’s name was Lear, and the child was called Alexander. I want to get them on soon too. I made some arrangements for their coming if I got off safe to Canada.”

The Slave Schedule compiled 18 June 1860 shows Jesse W. Layton owned a 30-year-old male and an eight-year-old male.

Jacob’s account would explain why there is no wife listed for Jesse in the 1860 census. Most likely, the wife died during or shortly after the birth of Luther. The wife’s name may have been Sarah E, based on the 1850 census of Sussex Co. Jesse was living in the household of his widowed mother, Sarah. Beneath Jesse’s name is “Sarah E. 23” without any identifying notation. There is no Delaware marriage record for Jesse.

In 1853 Pricilla Butler obtained a Delaware Bastardy Bond naming Jesse W Layton as the father of her illegitimate son, born 28 Apr 1853. The bond was the state’s method of insuring that the child did not become a burden to the government.

Jesse, son Luther and mother Sarah were living next door to sister Elizabeth in Broad Creek 100, Laurel, in 1860 and 1870. Jesse was living with his sister Elizabeth and her family in 1880 in St. Georges.

   Possibly, Amanda was the daughter of Elizapleths and Ruth Thomas. It's possible, but not proved, that Purnell died by 1895, for an Amanda Layton married Harrison M Randel on 25 Dec 1895 in Putnam Co.

   It would appear that Purnell was estranged from his Delaware family. A petition filed 19 Sep 1874 in Sussex Orphans Court concerning the division of land Clement left to his children said Purnal "...resides out of this county, to wit, some place unknown."

   On 16 July 1812 Jabez was mustered into the 5th Co., 7th Reg as an ensign.
   An 1837 Sussex estate administration for Jabez was probated 12 Oct 1837, listing a minor son, Cyrus M., but no Nancy. William Gray was the administrator.
   However, the age of Cyrus and the identity of his mother is thrown into question by an earlier Sussex Co Orphan’s Court petition of 18 Dec 1832, which says Cyrus is 17 years 7 months of age, meaning he was born about May 1815. If this is true, how could he still be a minor in 1837? And does this mean Jabez had a wife before Sally Adams? The petition, with Waitman Willey as surely, asks that Jabez be appointed guardian of Cyrus, although Jabez is identified as his father.
   The petition says Cyrus is entitled to a personal estate worth about $200.
   No Cyrus was included in Nancy’s will in 1845, only a Mary Elizabeth Huff, who received a house in Bridgeville, as well as everything else in Nancy’s estate. William Cannon was executor of Nancy’s estate.\textsuperscript{1131} The 1830 census seems to indicate that Cyrus was Sally’s son, while Mary Elizabeth would be Nancy’s daughter, born between 1825 and 1830. Nancy was the widow of xx Hollis.

3. Letitia Layton {c1789~1857}
   § John Richardson {c1792~1852}^{1147}
   In 1850 John and Letitia were living two doors from Waitman and Nancy Willey in one direction and two doors from Minos and Ann Willey in the other.
   Letitia's will was written 4 Apr 1854 and probated 10 Nov 1857. She gave $25 each to granddaughters Ann Matilda Nutter and Mary Ellen Nutter, to be paid when they reach 21. She gave granddaughter Liskey Ann Spanish her bed and furniture. Son William Henry Richardson and dau Sally Spanish were to divide equally her land in Nanticoke 100 adj Waitman and William Willey.
   John Richardson's Sussex estate was opened 1 Sep 1852 with William H Richardson and Charles Polk named administrators. The day before Letitia authorized her son William H to be the administrator for her. John Spanish bought many of the items at the estate sale. The estate was not settled until 1858.
   a. Eliza Ann Richardson {c1815~[by1854]}^{1148}
   § James Nutter {c1805~1852}^{1149}
   When Eliza Ann's mother Letitia wrote her will in 1854, no mention was made of Eliza Ann, only her two young daughters. Letitia's other two children were to divide the estate equally. This suggests Eliza Ann was dead by 1854.
   James' Sussex probate was opened Jan 1852. John R Sudler and William O Redden were administrators. It seems significant that the estate repaid small notes to James Layton and Jesse W Layton. James Nutter lived near St Johnstown, while Jesse Layton lived southwest of Bridgeville. George P White also was very involved in settling the estate. John Richardson bought most of the goods at the estate sale. John W Carlisle and John Spanish also made sale purchases.
   The 1860 census shows that the Nutter children scattered throughout Sussex County after the death of their parents. William and Clement were living in the home of William Dickerson, 57, in NWFork 100. Zebedee, Anne M and Mary Ellen were living with Zebedee and Hettie Nutter in Nan 100. Zebedee and Mary Ellen were in this same household in 1870.

It's likely that work demands kept Tilghman separated from his family around the time of WWI. Tilghman seems to appear twice in the 1910 census, once in Georgetown and again in Jackson, VA, where he was working in a sawmill. When son George registered for the draft, he listed his mother as his nearest relative and gave her address as Wilmington, not Georgetown. By 1920 Tilghman was a widower working on a Georgetown farm.

John apparently used the name of his step-father, John H Keeney, because he was listed as minor J S Keeney on his father's Civil War pension records. However, John S used "Willey" when he enlisted in the US Army 2 Oct 1884 in St. Louis. He was discharged 1 Oct 1889 in San Antonio and reenlisted two days later, receiving his discharge 2 Jan 1893. In 1900 John and his bride were living in Irwin Co GA.

THE RECORD

- The five Layton men listed below are brothers
- They lived in Duck Creek 100 in the general area of Kenton
- Only one Layton family is listed in that area in the 1800 census, that of Elijah
- Elijah’s family fits the necessary profile: older father and mother with a gang of sons.
- Elijah’s neighbors in Duck Creek 100 include Wilds, Carney, Denny and Severson -- all the characters in this emerging family drama.

What we know about Elijah:

- He was born before 1755 per 1800 DE census
- He was in the 1775 tax assessment for NW Fork 100
- He was in the 1782 tax assessment and census in North West Fork 100
- He was in the 1785 tax assessment for NW Fork 100
- He witnessed the will of William Laws in Sussex Co in Nov 1787
- He was in the 1790 census in NW Fork 100
- He was not in the assessment of 1797 in NW Fork 100
- He witnessed the will of Sarah Foreacres in Duck Creek 100 on 11 Dec 1798
- He was in the 1800 census of Duck Creek 100
- He was living on a farm near the village of Kenton owned by John Ringgold on 2 Jan 1811

Two documents provide the strongest clues regarding Elijah Layton’s link to other Laytons. On 24 Feb 1786 Elijah witnessed a Sussex Bond of Obligation by William Laws requiring him to provide a deed for one acre of land "... where the Methodist Preaching House now stands." Laws was bound to John Laws, John Fisher, Alexander Laws, David Owens, Jesse Fowler, Lijah Adams, Thomas Layton, William Carlisle Jr. and David Nutter. Second, Elijah witnessed the Sussex will of William Laws in 1787. His co-witnesses were David Owens, William Carlisle Jr and John Laws Jr. Owens, Carlisle, Fowler and Laws were the same family groups repeatedly associated with Solomon Layton over several decades.

Two Layton brothers -- Thomas and John -- married Deborah Layton. After Thomas died, Deborah married John Carney about 1813. Carney was a creditor of John Wilds, whose widow Sarah married John Layton. After the 39-year-old Sarah died 28 Oct 1825, John married Deborah 14 May 1830. What a tangled web!

Deborah’s side of the Layton family can be found in Section I under her parents, Tilghman Layton and Sarah Masten. Deborah’s family and most of these brothers seem to have stayed in the very northwestern corner of Sussex County and the southwestern corner of Kent County.

On 9 Aug 1813, Deborah’s second husband, John Carney, petitioned Orphan’s Court to be named guardian of Thomas’ two daughters, Phebe and Maria. Carney wrote that Thomas left an estate of about 600 dollars above debts, which was to be equally divided between Deborah and the two girls.

We learn much of the relationships of the brothers from a September 1847 petition filed in Kent County Orphan’s Court by Deborah, William Collins and William’s wife, Maria, daughter of Thomas and Deborah. In short, John W. Layton wrote a will, but after it was drafted he bought tracts of land in Duck Creek 100 near Smyrna that amounted to 451 acres. The three petitioners ask the court’s help in dividing the land. Valuators report that the land cannot be divided fairly, so it must be sold and the money split among the parties. In explaining the complexities of the situation, the petitioners shed much light on the family structure. They report that John’s brother James, as well as Clement’s sons, George and Elias, do not live in Delaware. James lives in Missouri; George and Elias in Kentucky.

John W. Layton married Sarah Wilds, widow of John Wilds of Kenton. John Wilds had married first Anna, who died 25 Oct 1802. "At Lewis’s Cross Roads on Monday the 25th of October last in the 22nd year of her life. Mrs. Anna Wilds, the amiable consort of John Wilds, of that place, on Tuesday will be buried at the Baptist burying ground at Brinsion Church Duck Creek Forest.” Mirror of the Times 20 Nov 1802.

On 27 Mar 1815, letters of administration for John Wilds, Esq., were granted to Thomas Wallace, who gave bond with Abel Jones Sr. and Mordecai Morris, his sureties. On 23 Mar 1815, Sarah Wilds had renounced her right of administration. The witness to this act was James Jones.

1332 Kent will of John Ringgold Lib O f244: “... the land I purchased of French McMullan in Duck Creek 100 being the farm whereon Elijah Layton lately lived.”
1333 Kent Probates Lib P f69.
From the will of James Jones,\textsuperscript{1334} we learn that Sarah Wilds was his daughter. John and Sarah Wilds had children Mary Creighton Wilds and Thomas Jefferson Wilds. The will also indicates that Sarah had been married to Mordecai Morris at some point. Because Mordecai was a surety for Wilds' administration in 1815 and the 1830 will of James Jones refers to the period while Sarah was the widow of Mordecai, it can be deduced that Sarah married Mordecai after Wilds and before John W. Layton. It is interesting to note from the will that James Jones was granted land by Benjamin Franklin in Beaver Co PA in consideration of services James rendered as a surgeon in the US army during the Revolutionary War.

From Kent Co Chancery case W#6, we learn more about John Layton. The five children of John and Sarah Wilds (one, James now deceased) petition the court for help in dealing with John W. Layton. Although John Wilds died owning a great deal of property, he also had significant debts. The administrator of Wilds' estate, Thomas Wallace, made an oral agreement with widow Sarah Wilds allowing her to continue living in the Wilds "mansion" and the debts would be paid off by selling the proceeds from the sale of corn and wheat grown on the Wilds land. This arrangement worked well each year until Sarah "intermarried" with John W. Layton. According to the petition, the harvests were bountiful, but John W. Layton "... took possession of the proceeds of the sale of said corn and wheat for his own purposes." The court grants the petitioners' request, ordering Layton to pay all the debts of the estate.

John W. appears in another Kent Co document, the 12 Jan 1825 administration of the estate of William Layton, to "John W. Layton, Hester Layton, the widow, renouncing." John also serves as administrator of that estate.\textsuperscript{1335}

On 21 Jan 1830, John petitioned Justice Jacob Stout of the Kent County Court of Common Pleas to reassign the indenture of 15-year-old "indentured negro servant George Russell" because "he has three times attempted to poison your petitioner's family, twice by putting _?_ into their victuals." And Russell had told a friend that he "only wanted to get money to purchase rats bane or arsenic in order to accomplish his murderous purpose." Further, Layton wrote "...that said negro is so unmanageable that your petitioner has no power over him and must keep him confined in the common jail where he is now at great expense. That he will reform is extremely improbable." Layton asked that his indenture be assigned to a farm in Maryland. The court granted the petition.

The will of John W. Layton\textsuperscript{1336} confirms that he has brothers James and Charles, both of whom he excludes. Charles apparently is dead, for John excludes children of Charles as well. A nephew, George Layton, also is excluded from any share. John includes a nephew, Elias Layton, in the will. Judging by the number of exclusions and the fact that it was written when John was only 50, there appears to have been some bad blood among the segments of this family.

James Layton died intestate and the estate was administered in Kent Co. Probate dragged on for at least three years. John W. Layton granted Deborah the use of some real estate during her lifetime. However, when she died, the benefits of the sale of that property became part of this estate settlement. The name "William" is a key. James names his one son William, and John W. settles the estate of a William. Most likely, the "W" stands for William.

Most likely, Elijah Layton married Sarah Collins, daughter of Thomas Collins and Sarah Cook. Thomas, the son of William Collins, was the 8th governor of Delaware. Sarah Collins Layton married second David Carty. Sarah's sister Elizabeth married William Denny.

No clues as to the proper order of the five brothers.

The 1850 and 1860 census reports of Murderkill 100 show Martha Barcus (c1818/20~) in the home of her parents Warner and Ann Barcus, along with James W Layton (c1848/9~).

      § 3 Oct 1831 Elijah Wimbrow (23 Nov 1802~by1870)
      Elijah, son of Thomas Powell Wimbrow (c1755~28 Mar 1831) and Leah Glass (~4 Jun 1838), was born in Wor Co MD and married Leah Layton there. Thomas Powell Wimbrow was the son of Thomas Wmbrow and Elizabeth Powell. He was a private in the 2nd MD Reg in the Revolutionary War and received a Bounty Land warrent for his services. The land was located in Ripley Co IN, where several of his children moved.
      In several census reports, the name is recorded as "Wimber" and some family twigs have adopted "Wimbro."
      Leah was a second marriage for Elijah, for the 1830 census of Wor Co shows him to have three young children and a wife. The children were James, Elisha P and William F. Elijah and Leah were living in western Wor Co MD in 1840; in Franklin IN in 1850; and in Gallatin Co IL in 1860. In 1870, the widowed Leah, as well as children John, Priscilla and Samuel were living in Gallatin Co IL. Birth locations of the children, as noted in the 1850 census, indicate the family left Maryland about 1843. This follows Orphans Court action in Princess Ann in Nov 1839 regarding the estate of Thomas Powell Wimbrow, which established his heirs, including Elijah.

Charles was living with sister Mollie Souders in 1910. In 1917 he was working in Easton LA. He listed his nearest relative as John Wimbro. He was counted twice in the 1930 census.

“CR” Wimbro was an oil field worker in Johnsons Bayou LA, where he was living in a boarding house. He also was counted in Orange TX with his young family. Died in Pine Prairie LA.

Taveis was the daughter of Alice. Actually, the first name of Charlie's wife could be almost anything. “Taveis” is from the 1930 census, and that may not be a correct reading of the script. The 1920 name also was difficult to read. One researcher has suggested the name was “Justin.”

Young James Layton₁ bought Turkey Point 15 June 1743₁³⁹⁶ from Peter Taylor. It was a 50-acre tract adjacent Vinsons Discovery on the west side of the North West Fork. He paid the alienation fine for this sale on 12 July 1743,₁³⁹⁷ “alienation fine” being the 18th century term for “transfer tax.”

James continued buying land on 3 August 1749 with the purchase from Thomas Orrell of part of a tract called Mills Purchase on Kirk’s Branch on the north side of the North West Fork.₁³⁹⁸ This 50-acre tract lies in the extreme southwest corner of present-day Kent County DE. This purchase has proved important in establishing the family connection between James₁ and James₂.

The sale of this property less than three years later gives us the name of James’ wife, Mary. On 17 January 1753 “… James Layton and Mary his wife…” sell to Robert Hopkins “… part of Mills Purchase on the border of Dorchester County on the south side of Kirk’s Branch, on the north side of North West Fork above Marshy Hope Bridge.”₁³⁹⁹ Keep in mind that Dorchester County at that time encompassed land as far north as western Kent County DE. Mary quite possibly was Mary Heather, daughter of Thomas Heather. In an inventory₁⁴⁰⁰ of Thomas’ estate, the next is kin is listed as “Mary Layton.” There seems to be no other Mary Layton at this time except James’ wife.

Although James had been called a planter in previous references, a Kent County property transfer - recorded in Dorchester County - of 13 February 1754 throws an interesting light on James, for it refers to him as “attorney for grantees before justices.”₁⁴⁰¹

The sale of Mills Purchase to Robert Hopkins is one of many examples of the network of families that shared this neighborhood, intermarried and swapped land. Robert’s son, Hooper, eventually would marry James and Mary’s granddaughter, Sarah. Another example of the way in which the neighborhood families interacted is the will of John Stafford Sr., written 27 January 1755 and probated 20 December 1755.₁⁴⁰² The will cited as heirs grandsons Elijah and Elisha Stafford, sons of his deceased son John, his wife Elizabeth, daughter Eleanor and sons Thomas, Levin, Adam, Solomon and William. The witnesses to the will were Joshua Wheeler, John Marrett and James Layton.

James and Mary continued to sell their land, this time parting on 1 September 1761 with 50 acres of Chance on a branch of the North West Fork.₁⁴⁰³ The buyer was Isaac Lowe. Chance was the property he purchased way back in 1732.

In leaving Chance, James took up new property. A surveyor wrote:

“I humbly certify that I have laid out for him the said James Layton tract or parcel of land called the Young Mans Venture beginning at a marked white oak standing close to the south side of the Green Branch and north 30 degress west and 15 perches from said Laytons dwelling house…”

He would not enjoy this property for long because James₁ died in 1766. His estate was settled over the course of the next two years, and the various inventories, estate administrations and accountings shed considerable light on the family group. James₂ Jr. settled the estate for his father, James₁. In addition to James₂, the children of James₁ and Mary were Rachel Smith, Diana Wheeler, Mary Elliott, Nancy Layton and Charles Layton. Rachel married Thomas Smith and Mary married John Elliott. In many of the estate

Nichols Layton

In constructing this family group, it seems appropriate to mention here one Nichols Layton. Who was he?

Just two pieces of information are available, but both point to the fact that he likely is aligned with this family branch. His estate¹⁴⁰⁶ is administered in Kent County in 1784 by Mary Layton, who later marries James Ross. The extensive connections between this branch of the Laytons and the Ross family are obvious below. Second, James₂ names a son Nichols. Is the Nichols who dies in 1784 the brother of James₁?

To establish the relationships between James₁, James₂ and later descendents, it is necessary to first recall that land in the northwestern corner of Sussex originally was claimed by both Delaware and Maryland. The drawing of the Mason-Dixon Line firmly established the border. However, it meant that considerable land that was originally granted to settlers as part of Dorchester county now fell within Sussex. So in 1776, the owners of this land had to re-register it with Sussex in order to retain title. It is with one of these re-registrations that we start constructing this family group.

Maryland records¹⁴⁰⁷ show that this land was patented 26 November 1761 by a James Layton. The first relationship is established: James₁ and James₂. Next, on 6 April 1793, James₂ and wife Margaret of Kent sold Layton’s Just Division to Thomas Watkins of Sussex. The land was in North West Fork 100 on the road from Marshy Hope Bridge to Hutchins Mill.¹⁴⁰⁸

Some 26 years later, Andrew and Daniel, sons of James₂, sold 68 acres of land in Sussex called Layton’s Just Addition. The paper trail for the creation of this addition to the original tract is found in the Sussex land records and citations will be added after the next property search.

The Sussex Land Record of 15 July 1776 includes the entry:

Young Man’s Venture plus 236 more acres becomes Layton’s Just Division, adjacent to Turkey Point, Merrits Discovery, Puzzell, Triangle and Saffords Venture.

Certificate and plot of James Layton’s tract Young Man’s Venture originally granted the father of the aforesaid 26 November 1761 by the proprietor of Maryland for 50 acres, resurveyed containing about 236 acres. Entire tract now called Layton’s Just Division lying in the North West Fork 100 on main branch of Marshyhope.¹⁴⁰⁹

A Sussex County property transfer of 4 Sep 1781 recorded in Deed Book Z #24 f36 refers to James₂ as “mason of Kent County.” For the sum of “50 pounds in silver dollars at 7 shillings 6 pence per dollar” Roger Adams conveyed to James the tract Vinson’s Discovery, which started at the first bounder of Turkey Point. It contained 11 1/2 acres of land.

James added to his holdings 5 August 1784 by buying Good Luck from his in-laws, Thomas Smith Sr., carpenter, and his wife, Mary Melville. The land was in Kent County.

Illustrating the insular nature of this rural society, on 2 December 1790 David Melville Smith married Susanne Oram, according to a 16-page, leather-bound book kept by the Smith family to record important family events much as many families use extra pages in Bibles. Susanne was the sister of Margaret Oram, who married James Layton after the death of his first wife, Ann Smith, who was David’s sister.

The will of Thomas Smith Sr., father of Ann Smith, James’ first wife, further illustrates this point. The Kent County will was written 5 April 1795, Thomas died 14 April, and the will was probated 17 June. The heirs were Mary, his wife, sons Thomas, William and David Melvil Smith - who received land adjacent to Good Luck and Horse Pond Ridge - daughter Frances, the wife of James Wroten, and the heirs of daughters Mary Ross, Ann Layton and Sarah Dawson, all three of whom were deceased. The witnesses were Olive Jump, Thomas Saulsbury, Nancy Brown. Then, on 18 Jul 1803 James V. Wroten and Lilly Layton obtained a Kent County marriage license. The surety was David M. Smith. This was the second marriage for James Wroten. He married first Frances Smith, youngest daughter of Thomas Smith and Mary Melville, sister of Lilly’s mother Ann, and brother of David Melville Smith.

More about these two generations of Laytons can be gleaned from property records and a will. When James wrote his will in 1804, he stated that Kirks Branch intersected the westernmost boundary of his dwelling plantation. This helps pinpoint the location of the property because the branch — known today as Saulsbury Creek — is only 3.6 miles long. It starts two miles north of Hickman in Kent County and flows southeast to Cattail Branch, 1.6 miles northeast of Hickman. Cattail Branch, in turn, flows south into Marshyhope Creek.

The birthyear of James is inferred from the ages of his children. James’ will gave his “eldest surviving son James, my dwelling plantation.” James also received six months schooling. An entry in the Smith Family Book - Thomas Layton died 6 May 1802 - likely explains the phrase “eldest surviving.” There is no other logical reason for the Smiths to enter a Layton death in the family book unless he was a grandson. Continuing the will, Nichols and Charles — besides nine months schooling — received the residue of lands adjoining. Andrew and Daniel were given land in Northwest Fork 100 in Sussex Co on the road from Marshyhope Bridge to the old bloomery. A bloomery was a furnace and forge that processed iron ore. Such a facility was located just inside Maryland on a road running along the northwest side of Marshyhope Creek directly to Marshy Hope Bridge.

Priscilla Hardesty was the daughter of an Elizabeth Hardesty, and sister of an Elizabeth and Thomas Hardesty. After mother Elizabeth’s husband died, she married Levin Smith. Mother died in 1811. Sister Elizabeth married a John Smith. Following the death of James Layton, Priscilla married James Wroten.

Priscilla was given “the young bay horse with new bridle and saddle lately bought by her, also the featherbed and furniture that she brought with her when she came here” As mentioned on the previous page, she received one cow and calf, plus two ewes and lambs and one sow. The will stipulated that she would not receive dower rights if she remarried.

A 14 August 1804 petition to the Kent County Orphan’s Court by Priscilla asking to be named guardian of son Charles is very helpful. James is deceased, “...leaving a widow and seven children, all by a former wife except one namely Charles Layton aged about one and half years...” This tells us that three of the older sisters have died, leaving the seven, including Charles, who was born in early 1803.

All the males were minors when James died, as indicated by a series of proceedings in the Kent County Orphans Court. On 4 August 1804, Thomas Webster was appointed guardian to James and the widow Priscilla to Charles. The following February, Hooper Hopkins was appointed guardian to Andrew Oram and Daniel, while Thomas Webster also took responsibility for Nichols. Finally, on 18 February 1808, James was appointed guardian for his brother, indicating James had reached adulthood. This would mean James was born about 1787, as indicated by the census of 1850. The children are listed here in the order in which they appear in James’ will.

Hooper and Jane were married at her father's house in Tuckahoe Neck by Rev. W. M. Warner

In his father's will, Hooper was given the farm adjoining the home farm, formerly the property of Henry Hopkins.

The census of 1850 raises the possibility that Hooper had another family. In addition to his mother Sarah and an Alexander Bramble, 6, Hooper's household included Mary Hopkins, 25, black, as well as Williard Hopkins, 7, Ellen Hopkins, 4, and Bennett Hopkins, 2, all listed as mulatto. No relationship to Hooper is confirmed.

The 1870 census shows Hooper, 56, Jane Hopkins, 28, and Vivanna R. Hopkins, 7. The administrator of Hooper's estate in 1897 was Jane R. Hopkins.

Varina seems to appear twice in the 1920 census. John and Varina are listed as living in Newton, Mass, where John was an insurance solicitor. The "Blue Book" of Newton for 1907 and 1913 also shows the couple living in Newton. In addition, the 1920 census of Dover lists Varina -- living by herself but noted as married. She was a music teacher. Varina's Kent County estate listed dozens of heirs -- mostly nieces and nephews -- but no mention was made of children of her own, or of John Roraback.

Charles was born in MD. This relationship between Zebulon and Charles Roland is established by Larry Lawson Layton, who reports it as family knowledge passed to him by his grandfather, Wilbur. The relationship has been confirmed in the estate papers of Zebulon and on the death certificate of Charles. Barratt's Chapel
The age of Charles varies considerably in the census reports, but 1841 seems to be the consensus year for his birth. Charles is buried at Barratt's Chapel with a birthyear of 1837 on his tombstone, but this seems doubtful. It appears that this is the Charles who was living with James and Jane in 1850 and 1860.

Margaret was the daughter of Uriah Sipple and Mariah Clark. By her first husband, William James Reed, she had a son, John B. Reed. Barratt's Chapel

A 21 Feb 1805 petition to Kent Orphan's Court "of Andrew Orem Layton, minor son of James Layton of Mispillion 100." James had a parcel in Northwest Fork 100 in Sussex of about 200 acres. Andrew is now 14 years, two months and 21 days old and wishes to chose a guardian; asks for Hooper Hopkins. "This is all the property to which Andrew is entitled."

The complicated estate of Andrew lists numerous wards, apparently the brothers and sisters of Mary, but no children are cited.

In the War of 1812, Andrew was a Fourth Sgt. in the Maryland Militia. He served 21 days in three stretches in the second half of 1813, and then about another week late in 1814. Brother Daniel served in the same unit for 16 days in 1813.\(^{1711}\)

Mary was the daughter of Thomas Orem and Julia Taylor, who married 26 May 1797 in Caroline Co. Julia died about 1805 and Thomas remarried Sarah Mills of Talbot Co 10 Aug 1808. Thomas was the son of Andrew Orem and Rachel Benson, the daughter of Nicolas Benson and Rachel Bruff. Mary Orem Layton died at Newlands, the residence of her brother, Nicholas Orem, and is believed to be buried there.\(^{1712}\)

§ Feb 1822 Mrs. Sophia Warner {}

A petition of 21 Feb 1805 to the Kent Co Orphan’s Court by Thomas Webster “brother-in-law of Nichols Layton”, guardian to Nicolls Layton, minor son of James, asks William Saulsbury, Solomon Cahall and Holliday Smith to value land that had been left Nicols by his father. There was no house and no orchard on the plantation of about 20 acres; it was in very bad repair.

Another petition to the court, this one by James Layton, “son of James,” was dated 18 Feb 1808. It said that Nichols had “Thomas Webster as guardian, but Thomas is since deceased...” so asks that he be appointed his brother’s guardian. Nichols is “still” under the age of 14. Interestingly, James signs his name to the petition, something few could do in that era; most just made an X.

The Easton Gazette and Republican Star carried a series of items involving Nicols:

• EG 26 Jan 1822 - Nicols Layton wishes to sell all goods and Chattels

• EG 9 Feb 1822 - Married on Friday morning last by Rev. Joseph Scull: Mr. Nicols Layton to Mrs. Sophia Warner, all of Easton.

• EG 22 Mar 1823 - Henry Newcomb, new grocery lately occupied by Nicols Layton.

• RS 2 Apr 1822 - John Stevens renting house occupied by Nicols Layton, Washington and Dover Streets

1752 Missouri Marr Records
• EG 18 Sep 1824 - Nicols Layton wishes to employee active young man in mercantile business.

10. Charles Layton  {1803~}

Note: The 1820 Car Co census carries an entry for a Daniel, most likely the above.

1 m -10, 1 m 10-16, 1 m 16-26, 1 m 26-45, 1 f -10, 1 f 16-26, 1 f 26-45. It seems logical to assume that Daniel and Nancy are slightly older than 26 and that most of the younger people living with them are not their children; most likely nieces and nephews of deceased sibling(s).

A Thomas also is listed in this same census. 1 m 26-45, 1 f 45+.

Note: Sussex Deeds [A-L-34-77] 8 Jan 1819 Andrew & Mary, Daniel & Nancy sell "Layton's Just Addition" 68 acres.

Note: The Easton Gazette of 4 Sep 1824 carried this item: "Married Thursday evening last by Rev. Joseph Scull, Stephen P. Layton and Miss Ann Frampton, all of this town."
SECTION VI

JOHN LAYTON OF SUSSEX COUNTY

a. John Layton {c1740s~by 5 Jan 1799}\(^{1753}\)

\[\text{$ Tabitha}\]

Based on his will, John had at least four children: Eli, John, Rebecca and Mary. His birth year is extrapolated from two known dates:

- the year 1780 when daughter Mary married Charles Rawlins 2nd
- the year 1791 when grandson Jonathan was born.

The will was written 4 Aug 1789 and probated 5 Jan 1799. Sons “Eloi” and John were executors and the witnesses were Levin Connaway and Jacob Short.

1. Eli Layton {c1760s~by 2 Sep 1845}\(^{1754}\)

\[\text{$}\]

Eli was living a few doors from son Jonathan in 1840 in Dagsboro 100. Eli’s will was written 26 July 1840 and probated 2 Sept 1845. The executor was Lot Rawlins and the witnesses were William Rawlins and John W. Rawlins. His land went to John Outwell, who lived within a few houses of Eli and Jonathan 1820-1840.

A. Jonathan Layton {c1791~c1843/4}

\[\text{$ 31 Dec 1827 Mary West \{c1809~\}}\]

Jonathan’s birth year is taken from a deposition he gave in a Chancery Court case\(^{1755}\) on 3 Mar 1834. He said he was about 42 years of age. Since there is an 80% chance that his birthday would fall after 3 Mar, the year 1791 is estimated. The 1830 census says he was born 1791-1800, while the 1840 census says he was born 1781-1790.

On 28 Apr 1838 Jonathan and Mary of Dagsboro 100, along with Samuel Warren and his wife Nancy, sold to Peter West land in Broad Creek 100. The tracts were "Wild Cat Den" and "Conclusion."

Mary was the dau of Jehue and Polly West. She married second Mitchell Scott 16 Nov 1847. The 1850 census shows Mary living with Mitchell in Dagsboro, along with her children: Hester, Warren S., Eli T., Maranda, and Sarah E., as well as George W. Scott, 1. The 1860 census shows Mitchell and Mary living only with Thomas Layton, 23. Warren and Eli are named in the will of their grandfather, Eli, as children of Jonathan, but not the girls.

Living next door to Mitchell and Mary in 1850 is Elizabeth Layton, 53, along with Burton Layton, 23, and James W., 24. And in the house next to Elizabeth was Rachel and James Downey. In 1860, William B was a few doors from Mitchell and Mary, along with Elizabeth, 62.

C. Rachel Layton {c1797~}
The will of Rachel's father Eli refers to "her son, James W. Layton." The will also calls her "Rachel Downey." In 1850, James and Rachel Downey are living in Dagsboro. In the home is a Mary J. Watson, 6. The 1860 census shows James and Rachel with Mary W. Downey, 14, and Ellen Downey, 10, in their home. Given the ages of Rachel and James, it seems reasonable to wonder if Mary and Ellen are their children. There is no mention of the Downey family in the 1870 Sussex census. No DE marr records for Mary or Ellen.

Her father's will includes a "Betsey Layton" and "her son William B. Layton." The will of Elizabeth Layton refers to her grandsons, James H. Layton and Alfred R. Layton. Her will also refers to "land conveyed by deed from Warner L. and Eli T Layton to myself and William B. Layton." This combination of documents clearly establishes the relationships within this family group and implies that Elizabeth never married.

§ 27 Nov 1851 Lovenia E. Mears {Mar 1836~19 Oct 1904}\(^3\)

The Sussex Journal of 8 Mar 1870 reported that Burton Layton "died after a long and painful illness" 27 Feb 1870 "in Millsborough." The death certificate of son Henry Layton confirms that William Burton Layton went by "Burton." \(^4\)

The 1850 census shows Elizabeth living with Burton, 23, and James W., 24. They are living next door to Mitchell and Mary Scott. The 1860 records show William B. and "Levina" with additional family members that don't appear to be their children: Margaret E, 9, Margaret R, 16, along with his mother, Elizabeth S?, 62. William is listed as a Millsboro merchant. The 1870 census shows Lovenia living in the Millsboro area with two children. Lovenia married second Elijah W. Carey, father of James B. Carey who married Hester Layton, William Burton Layton's cousin. The 1880 and 1990 census shows Lovenia and Samuel T living with Elijah in Frankford. Lovenia is buried with Elijah and his first wife near Carey's Camp.

Five children are listed here for William B. and Lovenia: James H, Alfred R, Lucinda, Samuel T and Gove S.

He was the son of Charles Rawlins and grandson of Walter Rawlins, who came from London in 1710 and settled on the Delmarva Peninsula. Charles Rawlins 2nd was a private in the Flying Camp of the Delaware Regiment, Captain Joseph Vaughn commanding, 22 November 1776. The Bible records say Charles and Mary had four sons and three daughters, but only one daughter lived to adulthood. Charles was a teacher for many years of navigation, surveying and vocal music.

Charles remarried after Mary’s death, but the name of his second wife is not known. They had a girl who drowned in childhood, and a son Philip who drowned when about 24.

  “Lott Rawlins began his merchant business with $50. He was successful in amassing quite a fortune, owning at the time of his death more than 2000 acres of land, nearly the whole of the town of Middleford, Delaware, and the Merchant Mills, situated at the head of tidewater on the Nanticoke River. He was eccentric, but a very kind man, and was noted for a singular impediment of speech. For this reason, and from his peculiar eccentricity, many amusing anecdotes are related of him. Lot served in the Delaware Militia in 1812 in defense of Lewes DE. He died in Middleford.

  “Mr. Rawlins was a strictly moral man, was never known to utter an oath, drank no spirituous liquors, and never used tobacco in any form. Though his father was a good musician, Lot could neither sing nor whistle, nor distinguish one tune from another. He never wore a pair of boots, and never visited as a visitor, but he always enjoyed company at his own house. He was a slaveholder, owning several slaves, but made them all free at his death.”1920

  Although the family history would like to contend that he freed all his slaves, he willed1921 to daughter Mary Ann Morgan “… Negro child Sarah B. until she arrives at the age of 21 and then to be free …” Son John was given “negro woman Margaret, Negro boy George to serve until he is 25, at which time George is to be free.” Son Thomas was given “Negro boy Arthur to serve until he is 25 and then to be free.”

  However, his will bequeathed to “…Margaret, Negro woman, 5 acres of ground on the northeast side of the Mill Property adjoining a lot of ground called the Hurley Lot and between the public Road and Rawlin’s Crossroads to Middleford … provided that but one family live on the said land at one time.”

  The will lists several thousand acres of farms, plus mills and graneries east of Seaford, mentioning the Middleford, Concord and Coverdale Crossroads areas.

Harry attended the Conference Academy in Dover and continued his musical studies in New York City and Vienna, Austria. For many years he had a studio in Carnegie Hall. He returned to Seaford in 1943 and resided there until his death.

The descendants of Harry and Emily are confusing. The 1920 census shows the family living in Manhattan with three children as shown below. The 1930 census, however, shows three different children. Further, two of the 1930 trio – Catherine born 1902 and John born 1905 – don’t fit logically with Harry and Emily. The third, Ellen, was born in 1911 and could be Jean. Finally, a 1910 ship’s manifest for an Atlantic crossing shows Harry, Emily and Leeds traveling as a family, suggesting the 1920 census is correct.

In 1869 he began a private school in Concord to help pay for his own schooling. He attended Normal Business College in Brooklyn NY, then taught mathematics there. He went to work for the B&O Railroad in Baltimore, hoping to rise through management ranks. However, financial circumstances forced him to return to Concord where he kept store with his father for about 10 years. He was postmaster of Concord, as well. Townsend Cem

Although it's difficult to affix a specific date to the event, it appears that about 1750, give or take a decade, a small branch — maybe even just one brother — split from what could be called the Delaware Laytons to found a new family group in Dorchester County, Maryland.

By 1800, there were two distinct family units in the county, the Walnut Landing Laytons and the Cokeland Laytons. The names refer to settlements a few miles to the north and south of Vienna where the family branches were centered in the early 19th century. No Laytons live in Walnut Landing today, but numerous Cokeland Laytons live in the greater Vienna area.

Continuing research increasingly points to the likelihood that these two branches originated from a common ancestor. Efforts to identify that ancestor are hampered by the lack of records for the period from roughly 1750 to 1850. We have an arsonist to thank for this. Left out of his father's will, the arsonist set fire to the Register of Wills office in the Dorchester County courthouse in Cambridge, and the blaze consumed not only the wills, but most of the county records, as well. Much of the current research is aimed at replacing question marks and assumptions with verifiable facts.

Dorchester County

European settlers from the Colony of Virginia were making forays into the area that became Dorchester County almost as soon as Jamestown was established. For the most part, the visitors were fur traders who made no permanent settlement for at least 50 years. It was 1659 before Lord Calvert made the first land grant in the county, and it was 1669 before Dorchester County was organized as a government unit.

It's important to keep in mind that the rivers and streams of the Delmarva Peninsula were its "highways" for several decades. Tom Flowers writes: "For thirty-four years of Dorchester's early history there were no towns or small communities. There were no inland roads or highways except the single-file trails of the Native Americans. The homes or small plantations of the early settlers were not connected by roads or trails. Early settlers used the streams, creeks, rivers and the Chesapeake Bay as their roads. Their homes were scattered along miles and miles of waterfront."

The Nanticoke River measures more than a mile across at its mouth. Along the lower reaches of the Nanticoke stretch the salt marshes of Dorchester to the west; on the other side is fast land settled by oystermen and fishermen. The river twists and turns northward from its mouth for 15 miles until it suddenly narrows by half at Long Point.

Four miles above Vienna, Maryland, the Nanticoke divides. The river's main fork continues its meandering way northeastward some 63 miles to Sharptown, Maryland, on through Seaford, Delaware, then north toward Greenwood. The northwestern fork — Marshyhope Creek — passes through Brookview and Federalsburg, Maryland, before crossing into Delaware. The forks — looking like a set of giant parentheses on a map — nearly meet again north of Greenwood.

According to the diary of Capt. John Smith, he and his band of sailors briefly explored the Nanticoke in late spring of 1608, but he gave the river the name Kuskarawaok, an Indian name meaning "place of making white beads." The name Nanticoke comes from the Nanticoke Indians who lived along its banks. There's been little change to much of the river since Smith made his call. In part, this is a result of the lack of fastland along most of the river. The banks are mosquito-infested marshes that didn't appeal to people looking for hospitable farmland. Numerous histories have been written about the river and its environs and all conclude that no significant event has transpired along its length. One noted the legend that Blackbeard the pirate supposedly frequented the area from time to time burying innumerable treasure chests, but not one has ever been found.

The first English settlers on the lower Nanticoke bought land from the Indians and called it Emperor's Landing, then Baltimore, and finally, Vienna. The historian Paul Wilstach, while lamenting the lack of historical material to record about the Nanticoke River, wrote about Vienna: "During the Revolutionary War, a British gunboat, in what would seem to have been a particularly idle moment, ascended the river and threw shots into the town. In the second war with England, other British gunboats came within sight of the town but, with a truer sense of economy, did not throw any shots."

Walnut Landing

Just a few hundred yards upstream from the mouth of Marshyhope Creek lies Walnut Landing on the southwestern bank. There are a few farm houses there today, nothing more. But back from the narrow road that connects Walnut Landing to Vienna and Brookview, hidden by nearly 150 years of undergrowth, are the graves and past of a now-small branch of the Delmarva Laytons.

The name "Marshyhope" is descriptive of the creek, for the "hope" part is derived from the Old English term meaning region, in this case a region of marshes. Like the Nanticoke, there were few suitable spots along the shores of the Marshyhope for landings because the banks were so marshy. This gives added importance to Walnut Landing as a point for loading goods for shipment to other parts of the region.

In 1698, the Maryland Assembly established a 10,000-acre reservation for the Nanticoke Indians. The legislation stipulated that the reservation would front on the Nanticoke River from Chicone Creek to Francis Anderton's Branch, which was the second one above Crotcher's Ferry. In brief, this tract could be called the knob of land on the south side of the mouth of Marshyhope.

In 1744, the Nanticoke Indians made application for permission to leave the Province. This is an excerpt from the records covering the request: "Simon Alsechqueck and three other Nanticoke Indians appeared at this board, and on behalf of themselves and the rest of the said Nanticoke Indians now residing in this Province, desire that they, the said Nanticoke Indians, may be permitted to leave Maryland, and to live amongst the Six Nations of Indians, and that this board would be pleased to direct a pass might be given them."

The following pass was issued: "Whereas, in the late treaty with the Six Nations of Indians, the Commissioners for the Province promised the chiefs of the Six Nations that the Nanticoke Indians should be permitted, if they should desire it, to leave Maryland, and live amongst the Six Nations, or where they (the Six Nations) should appoint, and whereas, the said Nanticoke Indians have applied to the Governor and Council for leave to depart this Province and to remove to the Six Nations, or to such place as they shall appoint them to live in out of this Province. In compliance, therefore, with the said promise made to the Six Nations, the said Nanticoke Indians are hereby permitted to depart this Province, and all his Majesty's subjects" inhabiting the same are strictly charged and required to suffer the said Indians to pass, without any molestation or disturbance, they behaving quietly and peaceably. Given under my hand and seal this 13th day of September, Anno Domini 1744."

At first they began to leave in small numbers, but in 1748 a great body of them departed the county; some went up the Susquehanna River, some to parts of New York State, and some went all the way to Canada. However, some still remained in Dorchester County and those remaining in 1757 petitioned Governor Sharpe to appoint Peter Monk as their Emperor. In July of that year the Nanticookes met at their town on Chicone Creek and selected as their Chief, George Pocatous, a descendant of Paquash, one of the Indians to whom the Assembly originally granted the reservation in 1698.

It was thought that the boundaries for the reservation spelled out in 1698 were specific and unambiguous, but on 16 April 1770 a commission heard testimony from 17 witnesses to establish the correct boundaries for a tract called Upper Walnut Landing, which bordered the north boundary of the reservation. Turns out, there was a general lack of unanimity among the witnesses as to the location of Francise Andertons Branch. The commission finally decided to accept the testimony of Solomon Wright, aged about 67, son of Edward Wright who was commissioned by the governor and Provincial Council to survey the Indian lands. Solomon’s testimony seemed to be the most creditable and is supported by later land records: Francis Anderton’s Branch would be designated as the second one above Crotcher's Ferry.

At the November 1782 session of the Assembly, an act was passed that marked the de facto end of the reservation by making the abandoned tract the property of the state. It called for the tract to be surveyed and laid out in lots in a manner that would make them most attractive for sale. The act also noted that non-Indians had occupied the Indian Lands in a haphazard manner over the previous decade without paying any rents or assessments. Commissioners were authorized “…to call on said persons for a moderate and reasonable rent for the use of said land, for such time as they have occupied and paid no rent thereafter.” The records are not clear as to when all of the lots were sold from the Nanticoke Indian Lands. However, the records show that some sales were made as early as the Spring of 1783 and that some were made as late as the Spring of 1785.

The first mention of Walnut Landing or the Nanticoke Indian Lands in conjunction with a Layton doesn't occur until 1774, but the family was moving nearer the area as early as 1743. On 15 June of that year, Peter Taylor sold James Layton, a planter, 50 acres called Turkey Point, which was adjacent to Vinson's Discovery on the west side of the Northwest Fork. Just as in Section I, when the location of Taylor’s Neglect was discussed, questions remain as to how far up the Marshyhope from it’s mouth lay Turkey Point. There’s a considerable paper trail for Vinson’s Discovery, however, and that may ultimately provide the answer.

Trying to Construct a Family

During the late 1750s, there are numerous references in Dorchester County property transactions to “James Layton, attorney.” By the process of elimination, it seems it must be this James Layton. This term would mean James could read and write, a rare achievement in this era.

James Layton Sr. died by 9 June 1767, the date on which James Jr. began settling his estate. A series of disbursements occurred in 1767 and 1768, all listing the deceased’s six children, but no widow. The 1776 census lists a Mary Layton with a family that could be that of James Sr.

James Layton and Sarah Thomas

This family group is still emerging. Circumstantial evidence strongly indicates James married Sarah Thomas, daughter of Henry Thomas. So far, only two documents have surfaced indicating a connection between a James Layton and a wife named Sarah. On 14 March 1828 and again on 9 June 1831, “James Layton and Sarah his wife” sell parcels of land at Walnut Landing.

There's a slight problem with this reconstruction of the family. If the James mentioned in the 1828 and 1831 land transactions is the same James born c1745, he doesn't appear in the 1830 census of Dorchester County. The only James mentioned was listed as being between 40 and 50, meaning born between 1780 and 1790. This is the James who married the Webster sisters. But suppose the older James is the oldest male listed with the one other Layton in the census, Daniel. This male was born between 1770 and 1780, meaning he's not old enough to be James. Since it's known that there was at least one other Layton household in the county in 1830 - the William of Section V - not included in the census, it seems safe to assume that other Laytons may have been omitted, as well. So let's proceed with the construction of the James Layton/Sarah Thomas family group.

The Maryland census of 1776 shows “James Layton” with six children in the household, so it’s likely that James and Sarah had at least two children of their own before they had James. It’s possible these two children were Dolly and Elizabeth. The other children in the 1776 household likely were the four children for whom James was guardian. The census also shows that they owned 11 slaves.

Walnut Landing

A property record of 26 May 1774 gives the first mention of the move to the immediate area now known as Walnut Landing. The abstract reads: “Valuation of land of Mary Nevett. Lands of minor Mary at Nanticoke Indian Town consisting of three plantations, one in tenure of Joseph Thompson, another in the possession of James Layton as tenant.”

James bought land at Walnut Landing in 1790, acquiring part of lot #3 from John Eccleston, who had bought the land from the State of Maryland. The abstract describes the land as “on the Nanticoke River.”

James apparently was prospering, because on 22 April 1793 he acquired “negro slaves and furniture” from William C. Angell. On 12 January 1799, he sold slave Philip to John Smith.

We then start seeing transactions for James Jr. On 21 Apr 1800, he sold “personal property” to Thomas Gray Jr.

James Layton, Levin Foxwell and Benjamin Reed sell 202 acres of several properties, including Upper Black Walnut Landing, to Richard C. Keene on 29 Nov 1817. It was the land of William Paddison. Then, on 18 July 1821, James Layton Jr and wife Margaret sell to George A Z Smith part of two tracts on the Nanticoke River, part of Lots #13 and #14 of the Nanticoke Indian Land, containing 662 acres. The same day, 529 acres of these same tracts were sold by the sheriff for the debt of James Layton, Levin Foxwell, Charles Windows and Benjamin Reed. The sell-off to cover James’ debts continued on 18 March 1822 when the sheriff sold 330 acres, part of Lot #3, to Jesse Bespitch. James Layton sold five slaves to William Owens of Blount County, Tennessee, on 5 April 1822, and three more slaves to Thomas Layton that same week. But which Thomas Layton?

Just as fast as the lands at Walnut landing seem to pass out of Layton hands, they start returning.

The “Cambridge Chronicle” of 18 October 1834 carried notice of a Chancery sale of a tract called Nanticoke Indian lands #4, 208.5 acres; Nanticoke Indian land of Upper Black Walnut and Lot #4 from James Layton, 100 acres; Morain’s Regulation from Sevren Bradley, sold by Samuel Cooper and wife, 257 acres; all of which Jeremiah Colston died, seized and possessed, for payment of Jeremiah Colsten’s debts.

Slavery

Slavery was made legal in Maryland in 1661. It was an integral part of the economic life of Dorchester County because the growing of tobacco required a generous supply of inexpensive labor. In the first decades of the colony’s existence, growers had depended on indentured servants to work the fields. But as the flow of indentured servants slowed, farmers needed a new supply of labor. They turned to slaves.

The Layton family owned slaves until 1 November 1864, the last day it was legal to do so in the United States. On that date, a new Maryland Constitution went into effect, freeing all slaves in the state. It’s immediate adoption created considerable hardships on some of the newly-freed slaves because many of them had no means of support, evening lacking food, clothing and shelter. Some were helped by their former owners, while many crowded into towns where they lived in squalor. A significant number enlisted in the Union Army to escape their conditions.

The blacks who had previously been manumitted were assimilated into the economy without too much difficulty, apparently because the manumissions had been made over an extended period of time.

A connection with Patty Cannon?

Historians agree that the notorious Patty Cannon used the Nanticoke River to dispatch captured runaway slaves and free Blacks back to the south. Of particular interest to the descendants of James Layton is the strong possibility that during the 1820s, Cannon used the wharf at Walnut Landing as one of her rendezvous points, according to several Dorchester historians. While no researcher specializing in Patty Cannon states unequivocally that Walnut Landing was a dispatch point, the assertion appears repeatedly in the writings of general researchers.

The Layton's owned the wharf and adjacent storehouse, which normally was used for the shipment of farm produce to England, primarily tobacco. The landing was — and is today — so remote from other settlements, it would have been easy to load a schooner with slaves without drawing much attention.

“Freedom at Risk - The Kidnapping of Free Blacks in America 1780-1865” by Carol Wilson, assistant professor of history at Washington College.

“Narrative and Confessions of Lucretia P. Cannon, published in New York City in 1841

So what is known for sure? In his book "Patty Cannon - Woman of Mystery," writer Ted Giles discusses a piece of land only four miles up the Nanticoke River from Walnut Landing. Writes Giles: “Across the Nanticoke from Galestown, close to the east bank, are two islands. One extends fifty or sixty acres; the other about two acres. The story has come down from family to family for more than a hundred years that on these islands, Patty Cannon and her gang chained their captives. Great trees, they assert, contained iron rings attached to staples driven into the trees, and held prisoners secure until time for shipment. The trees and rings were there 75 years ago; fathers and grandfathers saw them. But in the meantime the big timber has been taken out.”

Continues Giles: "Job Russell of Galestown says that the larger island was called 'Patty Cannon's Island.' Today it is known to the watermen as 'Tick Island,' perhaps to describe its major inhabitants. 'Tick' or 'Patty Cannon's' Island is in Maryland, and could have been a perfect hideout. The island is what is known as a 'cripple,' a high and wooded place surrounded by marsh. Remote, and not easily accessible, heavily overgrown, even today it is an eerie place."

Remote, yes, but extremely accessible to Walnut Landing by water. So while it would be a very long, circuitous ride to reach Walnut Landing from Cannon's home at Reliance by land, it would be an easy row down the Nanticoke. Most important, because there is almost no fast land along the Nanticoke, Walnut Landing was one of the only loading points on the river. Therefore, the historians' assertions connecting Patty Cannon and Walnut Landing seem not only plausible, but likely.

But what does that say about the Laytons? It would be naive to think that the wharf owners wouldn't know someone was using their property if it happened more than once. So they must have approved, or been paid a handsome sum to look the other way. Either way, it suggests there was a nefarious side to this James Layton.

A newspaper of 5 July 1823, carried notice of "runaway negro Saul and wife Luie, properties of Mrs. Elizabeth Simmons, near Vienna, and James Layton, Walnut Landing."

James Layton granted manumission to slave Israel on 23 Jul 1808, effective in 15 years. On 17 July 1822, he sold Sina to Edward Smith, granting manumission effective 17 July 1834.

According to the 1830 census of Dorchester County (District #3, Vienna), James Layton had 11 slaves. He was living three houses from his daughter, Mary Elizabeth Collison, who had four slaves and one free black living on her property.

The Websters of East New Market

While the Websters aren't descendants in the Layton line, their influence on this branch of the Laytons during the first two-thirds of the 19th century makes it appropriate to present an overview of the family at this point. This family group is of particular note to those Laytons who lived in the Hurlock area in the 20th century and referred to some members of the Thompson family as "cousin." They were, indeed, third and fourth cousins.

Thomas Webster was patriarch of this family. He married Elizabeth Cassidy 21 December 1785. Apparently, she was from outside Dorchester County, for no other mention of a Cassidy family has been found in any records of the area for several decades before and after this marriage. The Webster family is buried in a private plot of ground that was described several decades ago as the former homestead of the Webster family. It is located between Shiloh and East New Market, near the fire tower. According to his tombstone, Thomas was born in 1756 and died 9 February 1813.

Thomas and Elizabeth had daughters Nancy and Margaret, both of whom married James Layton. The descendants of these marriages are given in the next section. It is not known what became of Elizabeth Cassidy Webster, but Thomas married again 23 June 1795. His new bride was Rachel Beach, by whom he had numerous children. These included Clarissa, Thomas, John, Harriette, Celia and Robert. There may have been others.

This generation of Websters prospered. They owned large tracts of land throughout northern Dorchester County, operated canning facilities, and brother John was instrumental in the development of the railroad linking Cambridge to Seaford, Delaware. He served as a director of the new Dorchester & Delaware Railroad and was elected president of the line in May of 1880. It is likely that his involvement with the railroad influenced subsequent generations of his family - and the allied Layton family - to pursue railroading careers.

But it is Celia - the half-sister of Margaret Webster who married James Layton - who is the major focus of this report. She was born 2 March 1804 and died 11 November 1885. On 6 January 1823, she married Mitchell Thompson. They had four children, including George Albert Thompson. In 1860, when the orphaned grandchildren of Margaret Webster Layton were being passed about among various family members, it was Celia Webster Thompson who took them in. And later, her son George Albert Thompson housed John Thomas James Layton, as detailed in a subsequent section.

Delmarva Railroads
The Dorchester and Delaware Railroad

Because the Webster family was so closely linked with railroading and, in turn, the railroad with the emergence of this area of the peninsula, let's take a brief look here at the Dorchester and Delaware Railroad.

To link Cambridge, Maryland, with the Delaware Railroad in Seaford, Delaware, the Dorchester and Delaware (D&D) Railroad was charted in Maryland 6 February 1866 and in Delaware 30 January 1867. Cambridge, with a population of about 2,500, was then the largest city on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

In 1867, the Delaware road built a branch of six miles from Seaford to the state line, leased it to the D&D and loaned the company sufficient capital to complete its line the 27 miles from there to Cambridge. Construction of the D&D began in April of 1868 and service commenced over the entire line 6 November 1869. The price tag for construction was $300,000. The two bands of 50-pound rail stretching from the interior of the peninsula to the banks of the Choptank River were to have almost as great an impact on the city as all of its waterborne commerce. Conversely, by being more than seven miles from the railroad, the Nanticoke River port of Vienna would diminish in importance as a transportation center. It was some years before the line was extended to Vienna. There was early enthusiasm for pushing the eastern end of the line on to Georgetown, Delaware, but this never came to pass.

Traveling from Cambridge to Seaford, the stations passed were Thompson, Ayres (now Airey), Linkwood, East New Market, Hurlock, Williamsburg and Federalsburg., There was at one time a State Line station house — later known as Oak Grove — just inside Delaware. There was only one station between the state line and Seaford, which was at Flowertown. In 1884, the Cambridge-to-Seaford run could be made in two hours and twelve minutes.

As an example of the railroad's economic impact, land near the right-of-way that had been selling previously for $5 an acre was selling for $50 soon after service began. The ability to ship produce to distant markets added tremendous value to all property. This was a major reason why local landowners were very happy to deed rights-of-way to the railroad for free. However, with a ready means to ship local produce to new markets where prices were higher, items once in abundance on the Eastern Shore became difficult and expensive to obtain. The “Dorchester County News” lamented that, in the middle of a peach-growing area, peaches were as scarce as if they weren't grown for hundreds of miles.

Despite its excellent financial showing in the early 1870s, by the end of the decade, troubles plagued the railroad. The Cambridge “Democrat & News” of 13 March 1880 stated that the railroad's earnings were off drastically and that the hands had been asked to take a cut in pay. They had planned to strike, but a compromise was reached. On 17 April, the paper stated that President W. Wilson Byrn's annual salary had been reduced from $1200 to $600. In the next week's issue, it was announced that Byrn had resigned rather than accept the reduction. On 15 May, the “Democrat & News” reported that John Webster had been elected to succeed Byrn. By 1881, earnings were encouraging enough to prompt an investment in two new freight cars.

The heavy outbound traffic of agricultural products, timber and seafood made the D&D a paying proposition. The Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad acquired a controlling interest on 1 June 1883 and it was reorganized as the Cambridge and Seaford Railroad under PW & B auspices.

Puckum

Before moving on to more family history, let's take a moment to examine the origins of a local name of particular interest to Dorchester County Laytons. The name is Puckum, the subject of many jokes and much derision.

Detailed maps show a Puckum Branch that roughly parallels the road from Finchville to Harrison Ferry on the south side. It flows into the Marshyhope opposite Ennall's Wharf.
The archives of Maryland contain a reference to a neck of land called Puckamee in a discussion of a treaty with the Nanticoke Indians. Students of the Algonquin language believe Puckamee and the subsequent Puckum are corrupt local variants of the Indian word "poughcone," meaning "the red paint or dye." It is the Indian word found in poke, pokeberry and pokeweed.

Daniel Layton

The records of Dorchester County for the latter part of the 1700s and early 1800s contain numerous references to a Daniel Layton. Unfortunately, these records don’t answer the most important question: Where does he connect to the family tree? Because the trail ends on land in Dorchester, it is easy to assume he should be linked to the Laytons of that county. But Dorchester Laytons never used the name Daniel, while it is prevalent in the Delaware Laytons. So is he of the Delaware Laytons, having drifted westward across the state line?

Here’s what we do know. There were two Daniels, father and son. The 1830 census of the Fork District of Dorchester County lists this family for a Daniel Layton:

1m 5-10  1f -5
1m 15-20  2f 10-15
1m 20-30  2f 20-30
1m 50-60  1f 40-50

This would be the son, born between 1770 and 1780. It is significant that this is the only Daniel listed in the district that year. In 1838, Daniel Jr. sells land in the Fork District that he inherited from his father, according to the property record. Therefore, it is likely that Daniel Sr. died before 1830, since he is missing from that year’s census. The 1831 Tax List for Fork District also lists only one Daniel Layton. Next, Dorchester Co marriage records include these two listings:

- Daniel Layton and Mary Trice  29 Feb 1804
- Daniel Layton and Mary Marine 14 Apr 1840

Finally, the Cambridge Chronicle of 21 June 1845 ran this item: “Daniel Layton of Dorchester County died. James P. Russell adm.” Add all these facts together and it produces this family group:

1. Daniel Layton {~by 1830}

Pinpointing where the Daniels lived is possible using records of land transactions for the county, as abstracted by James McAllister. The numbers following each date indicate the book in which the transaction is listed.

This cluster of properties is on the east side of the Marshyhope, known as the Northwest Fork in those days. It’s possible, even likely, that this land was opposite Walnut Landing, or slightly to the north. A look at a property map of 1868 shows that the land along the east bank of the Marshyhope was inhabited for only a few miles to the north toward Crotchers Ferry (Brookview), and generally remains so to the present. Above Brookview, there were no inhabitants. There simply wasn’t, and isn’t, fast land suitable for farming, or even a decent landing. This is No Man’s Land ... this is Puckum.

Following the death of Margaret Layton Hayward, Francis remarried 7 March 1848 Priscilla Travers {2 Apr 1824–2 Jul 1898}.
After Francis died in early 1850, Priscilla remarried 9 December 1850 John Henry Shehee. Priscilla and John are buried in Cambridge Cem. Francis wrote his will early in 1849 and it was probated Mar 1850. The will was witnessed by James B. Layton. The will referred to a farm near Airey’s. The Cambridge Chronicle of 15 July 1857 carried notice of a sale "...of the dower rights of Priscilla S. Shehee of the farm of the late Francis Hayward, lived situated near Hicksburg." It was signed by Priscilla S. and John Shehee. Hicksburg is northwest of Linkwood and north of Airey’s.

The 1860 Dorchester census shows Joseph living with Priscilla and John Shehee. However, there is another Joseph Hayward living in the household of Thomas Willis and wife Theresa, who married in 1858. She was Theresa B. Woolford, whom married first John W. Hayward on 20 Jan 1842. This Joseph was born about 1844. The will of William Woolford (THH-1 f44) refers to "daughter Theresa Hayward." It appears that this is another Joseph, not a duplication of the same Joseph counted twice in the census.

The descendants of James Layton and Sarah spent considerable time in court. A legal ad from the Cambridge Chronicle of November 1836 reads: "In Chancery 24th Nov 1836
William Collison and Mary his wife vs
Thomas Layton and others
The object of the bill filed in this cause is to obtain a decree for the sale of the real estate whereof James Layton died seized, in Dorchester County.
The bill states that the said James Layton departed this life since the year 1820, seized of a small real estate in said county - that he died intestate as to said land, and left the following children, to wit: the complainant, Mary, and Margaret wife of Francis Hayward, Thomas Layton, and James Layton who is an infant - that said land is too small to divide with advantage to the parties interpreted, and prays that the same may be sold.
The bill also states that the defendant, Thomas Layton, resides out of the State of Maryland.
It is thereupon ordered that the complainant, by causing a copy of this order to be published in some newspaper once in each of three successive weeks, before the 14th day of December next, give notice to the said absent defendant of the substance and object of the bill, that he may be warned to appear in this court, in person or by a solicitor on or before the 10th day of April next, to show cause, if any he have, why a decree should be passed as prayed."

Next, William and Mary filed suit against James Layton in 1837. The court lists the 16-year-old James as an infant, the English Common Law term for anyone under 21. Since he was a minor, James Munroe Newton was named guardian for James 12 January 1837. Acting for James, Newton admits the truth of the complaint. Then William and Mary filed a similar suit against Francis Hayward 8 May 1837. In September, they admit the complaint.

An accounting filed with the Chancery Court 19 March 1838 indicates the land was sold at a trustee's sale for $115 on 22 December 1837. William Collison and Mary, Francis Hayward and Margaret, Thomas and James each received a quarter of the proceeds. In this filing, the property is listed as 100 acres within the Nanticoke Indian lands.

A second court proceeding involving this family was filed 12 February 1838 by Thomas Layton against William Collison. At issue was ownership of the slave Israel Coleman. The suit lists Thomas "of Dorchester County," indicating he moved back into the area since the proceedings of the previous year. Thomas contended that he bought Israel in 1830 from Elizabeth M. Ayres and submitted a bill of sale to that effect with his lawsuit (Exhibit A). The exhibit read: Thomas Layton of Baltimore City & State of Maryland for $28.47 paid Elizabeth Ayres of the city of Baltimore. William Collison settled the suit the next day.

But that isn't the end of the story of Israel Coleman. The Chattel Records of Dorchester show John Webster (uncle of Mary Collison) selling "one Negro man, Israel, aged 21 years, purchased of Thomas Layton and by him obtained as a heir of James Layton, dec." But this is confusing. The Bill of Sale in the court case said Thomas purchased Israel of Elizabeth Ayres. Yet this Chattel Record said Thomas inherited Israel from his father. Whatever, on 29 January 1849, Israel was freed by William Collison.

The name of Thomas Layton appears again in Dorchester County records in 1839. A Thomas J. Layton served as Post Master of Big Mill beginning 16 September 1839. Big Mill is located at the intersection of Route 50 and Big Mill Road between Salem and Vienna where Big Mill Pond empties into the Chicamacomico River. Since no other Thomas Layton is known to have existed at this time in Dorchester, it is assumed that this is the son of James and Nancy.

A final note on Thomas Layton, son of James Layton and Nancy Webster. The Cambridge newspaper of Saturday, 24 May 1845, carried an item regarding the announcement by William K. Ackworth, constable, of the forthcoming sale of the real estate of a Thomas Layton. Apparently, this concluded his involvement in the county.

The Taylors of Sharptown
Martha Ann Taylor was the daughter of William Taylor, of what is now Wicomico County. There were many Taylor families living in the Sharptown area, which lies across the Nanticoke River from Walnut Landing. Her line has not yet been established beyond her father William. She had brothers James T. and Robert W., who handled her estate following her death in 1854. She also had a brother Anthony M., and a sister, Leah Elizabeth, who married Thomas James Bradley. She also appears to have had another sister who married a Phillips.
Her death occurred between 15 September and 9 October 1854, the dates on which she wrote her will and it was filed for probate.2272

Her will reads, in part:

To my daughter Mary Allen Layton
- A bedstead bed and furniture upstairs
- Set of large silver spoons
- Blue chest
- Rocking chair
- Wash bowl and pitcher
- Work basket
- Family Bible

To my daughter Sarah Margaret Layton
- Small bedstead bed and furniture
- Set of stool chairs
- Cherry table and chairs
- Set of German silver spoons

To my son John Thomas James Layton
- High post bed and furniture in setting room

The remainder of her estate was to be divided equally among them "share and share alike." Her brother, Robert W. Taylor, was named executor and guardian of her children.

An accounting of her estate was made 12 February 1856 by the administrator, James T. Taylor, Martha's brother. It reads:

2272 Dor Co estate #0-237
The three children of James Bennett Layton and Martha Ann Taylor were orphaned when the oldest was five and John was six months old. The will of Martha Layton named her brother, Robert W. Taylor, as guardian of the three children, subject to the instructions of the Dorchester County Orphans' Court. The guardianship records for the three children are intact, giving us extraordinary, year-by-year insight into their lives.2273

On 9 November 1854, Robert paid his bond to Dorchester County and became guardian for the three children, who came to live with him. This means they simply crossed the Nanticoke River. Walnut Landing lies on the western bank of Marshyhope Creek where it flows into the Nanticoke. The settlement of Riverton sits on the eastern bank of the Nanticoke about a mile downriver from the mouth of the Marshyhope and Sharptown is about two miles upriver. Robert lived about one mile southeast of Riverton along what is now known as the Mardela-Sharptown Road.

Robert had to make annual accountings with the county Orphans' Court. Cash received by the estate — rent for the house and land at Walnut Landing and rent for the Hewett lot — was divided equally among the three children.

The estate was appraised in January 1855. The appraiser's report listed — in his terms — the following properties:

- One framed single story dwelling house 24 feet long and 16 feet wide, two rooms colonade 12 feet long 16 feet wide, kitchen 16 feet long and 16 feet wide in tolerably repair.
- One corn house 12 feet long and 10 feet wide in tolerably repair.
- One granary 15 feet long and 12 feet wide in different repair.
- Garden in tolerably repair.
- All on the farm of about three hundred acres more or less, about two hundred acres in timber mostly of a small growth.

Value $90

- One store house 20 feet long and 16 feet wide and wharf in different repair.

Value $10

"And we think that 40 or 50 cords of wood can be spared from the woodland and recommend that the same be cut and sold to do repairs on said property."

The accounting for 1855 shows that John lived with his Uncle Robert the entire year, for which the guardian was paid $6 per month. Robert also was reimbursed $1.42 for clothing he bought for John during the year and $1 for shoes. Sisters Mary and Sarah also spent 1855 with Robert. Mary got clothes worth $2.56 and shoes valued at $1.60. For his professional services to Mary, Dr. C E Rider was paid $1. Sarah's clothes cost Robert $4.18 and her shoes $1.54. Dr. Rider was paid $2 for his services for Sarah. Comparable amounts were spent for clothing and shoes in subsequent years.

In most cases, the goods came from the general merchandise store of Darby & Taylor, the Taylor being John B. He was mentioned in the administration of Martha's estate, lived a few houses from Robert W., and eventually owned much of the land that once belonged to the Layton family at Walnut Landing. However, since he was not mentioned in the will of William Taylor, it is assumed he was not Martha's brother. Most likely, he was a cousin.

Returning to the accounting records in the guardianship files of the Layton orphans, on the income side for 1855, the house and lot at Walnut Landing — occupied by William Roe — rented for $90, the Hewett Lot brought $25 from William Dean, and the store house and lot at Walnut Landing were occupied by Alex. M. Robertson, who paid $16 for the year.

James T. Taylor, Martha's brother and John's uncle, rented the "Home farm and Hewett Lot" in 1856. Money was earned for wood from the property and it was spent for repairs ordered by the court, including 2,500 shingles, plus lumber and nails for the barn.

The Custodians

John lived with Robert through 1856. Sarah lived with Robert until June 1856, then went to live with Gideon W. Knowles. Mary stayed with Robert a month longer, then moved to the home of Thos. Moore. And so began a shuffling of the orphans among relatives of their mother, Martha Ann Taylor. In 1857, for instance, John lived with Thomas James Bradley, Sarah with Gideon Knowles and Mary with Thomas Moore until 10 October, when she died.

Just who were these relatives? Gideon Knowles married Sarah(Sally) Ann Taylor, daughter of a James Taylor. This almost certainly was James, brother of Martha. So Sarah was the first cousin of the orphans. As an aside, within the family of Sarah and Gideon is hidden what should prove to be a very helpful clue to the identity of Sarah's grandparents, as yet unknown. She named a son Allen and a daughter Alena. Martha named her daughter Mary Allen Layton. The name Allen is unknown in the Layton and Knowles lines, indicating it comes from Taylors still unknown.

But back to the identity of the relatives who minded the Layton orphans. Thomas James Bradley married Leah Elizabeth Taylor, Martha's sister, so they were uncle and aunt to the children. And then there is Thomas Moore. His relationship is still a matter of debate.

A Geography Lesson

As for where these custodians lived, property maps of the period show Gideon and Thomas living side by side just to the east of Sharptown.

A Geography Lesson

As for where these custodians lived, property maps of the period show Gideon and Thomas living side by side just to the east of Sharptown.

John stayed with Thomas James Bradley in 1858 and 1859 and Sarah remained with the Knowles household for this period. Throughout these two years, the children's estate received income from people who hired the slaves they inherited, John, Eliza, Cassey and Ann Maria.

In December 1859, Robert resigned his guardianship of John and Sarah, citing the distance he had to travel from Riverton to Cambridge to report to the Orphans' Court.

Because of this legal action, it was necessary to appraise the children's property at Walnut Landing. The main farm of 300 acres and the buildings have an "annual value of $85." The condition of the buildings generally remains the same as that cited in the 1855 appraisal. But the second Walnut Landing property is another story. The dwelling is "in very bad condition" and "the old smoke house is of no value." The carriage house is "in bad condition." The garden is in tolerable condition but only partially enclosed now. Finally, the old Store House and Wharf at Walnut Landing are "in very dilapidated condition, and no annual value."

The Slaves Go to War

The 1863 guardianship report noted that Charles ran off in September to join the U.S. Army. Further, in December 1863, John ran off for the same purpose. John Layton and his guardian Mitchell Thompson officially granted freedom to John, the and furniture that he inherited from his mother remained in the Walnut Landing dwelling and had no annual value. Ownership of two other two slaves, Ann Maria (who had a baby in 1859) and Cassy, was assigned to Sarah and their annual value was set at $30. Slaves Charles and Nellie remained undivided between the two.

Guardianship passed from Robert Taylor to Mitchell Thompson, and so the children came home to Dorchester County. Mitchell was married to Celia Webster, half-sister of Margaret Webster, John and Sarah's grandmother. Eighteen years after moving into the Thompson household, John would name his second daughter Celia Thompson Layton. For a better understanding of the Webster/Thompson relationship to the Laytons, refer back two generations to the section on James Layton and his two wives, Nancy and Margaret Webster.

The accounts for 1860 and 1861 indicate nothing out of the ordinary. Ann Maria had another baby.

In May of 1862, the Orphans' Court ordered the distribution of the two "undivided Negros," Charles and Nelly, who had been the property of now-deceased sister Mary. The appraisal said Charles believed his age to be between 30 and 35 and he was in generally good health. Nelly estimated her age at about 40 and "she seems rather feeble in constitution and health." The value of Charles was set at $600 and Nelly at $200. Charles was given to John with the condition that he pay Sarah $200 for the difference in value. Sarah was given Nelly.

The appraisors were ordered to reexamine the property in September 1862. The main farm remained in generally good order. For the first time, mention was made of an apple orchard on the property, which was much decayed and of little value. The other property remained in very dilapidated condition and of no value. In writing the report for Sarah, they noted that Cassy now had a child and Ann Maria had three.

No further mention of Cassy is made in the guardianship records. However, it's possible to do some surmising regarding her fate. The 1870 census shows a black woman Cassy Matthews, age 44, working in the household across the street from where John Layton was living at that time. As will be seen shortly, strong ties were developing between John and the family of neighbor Clement Bradley; in 1876, John would marry his granddaughter. Finally, John Layton's daughter Nelly would speak years later of the old black woman called Aunt Cassy who lived with the family.

The Slaves Go to War

The 1863 guardianship report noted that Charles ran off in September to join the U.S. Army. Further, in December 1863, John ran off for the same purpose. John Layton and his guardian Mitchell Thompson officially granted freedom to John, the document telling us for the first time that his last name was Ferraro.\textsuperscript{2274}

John joined the 19th Regiment Infantry, U.S. Colored Troops, Maryland Volunteers, which was organized at Benedict, Maryland, 15 December 1863. John enlisted 3 January 1864. According to the official records of the unit, "It was composed largely of colored men from Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore of Maryland. The engagements in which this regiment were engaged and authorized to inscribe on their colors were as follows: Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Tolotopomy, Cold Harbor, Old Church, Petersburg, Weldon Railroad, Cemetery Hill, Hatcher's Run, Bermuda Hundred and Richmond." John was wounded 30 July 1964, and was killed in action before Petersburg.

The Emancipation Proclamation, issued by President Lincoln 1 January 1863, did not free the slaves of Maryland, only the slaves of those states which were in rebellion against the United States. Therefore, the Layton wards continued to receive income from the rental of the slaves until 1 November 1864. The notation on the accounting reads "Ward's negros all set free November 1, 1864 under new constitution of Maryland."

This did not end the legal proceedings involving the slaves, however. On 21 August 1865, William Rea was appointed special guardian for John "to collect compensation due from the United States for enlisted slaves." The accounting for the year shows "cash received by Wallace & Milbourne Attorneys, for State bounty for negroman John, enlisted in U.S. Army, less expenses - $87.50."

The accounting for the wards continued through 1867, when Sarah's was marked "Ward of Age - Final."

Sarah Died at 21

Sarah was to live only four more years. She died in 1871 and was buried beside her parents at Walnut Landing. A clue to her life during her last four years comes from a letter James Lambert Layton wrote to his sister Nellie, apparently referring to Sarah Margaret Layton: "Now to answer your question our Aunt Sarah gentleman friend was Capt. Joseph Bell. I don't know if he was Captain at the time he was going with our Aunt Sarah or not. I do remember him well; he was Captain and owner of the schooner "Virgal" and run in the trade from Eastern Shore to Baltimore carrying wood to Balto mostly or wheat watermelons or anything he could. times were rather 'hard' during that time. I know him or knew of him. He Capt Joe as everybody called him was tall raw boned slow talking gentleman as everybody knew him. he had a brother that kept store at Brookview by the name of George Bell. They both were thrifty well mannered slow talking etc. I believe that will answer your question."

Census information from this period indicates the captain's name may have been Josiah, not Joseph. On property maps of the period, George Bell is shown as owning several properties -- including a store -- in Brookview, which was called Crocker's Ferry, at that time.

A New Guardian

With the death of Mitchell Thompson in July 1870, James M. Thompson, his brother, was named guardian of John. There obviously was little legal concern regarding this guardianship because the formal appointment of James didn't occur until June 1871, nearly a year after Mitchell's death. But the change of guardianship brought with it yet another property appraisal, which yields a few more clues about the property. "... said farm lying on the county road leading from the Indiantown Church to the Walnut Landing." While the main house was in "tolerable repair," the corn house had fallen down and the granery and stables were in very bad repair. The other property mentioned throughout the accounting was described here as "house and lot on the Nanticoke River at the Walnut Landing." The house was "in very bad repair, not in a condition to rent."

Finally, in May 1874, John came of legal age and the guardianship was marked "Final."

According to Eva Mae Layton Medford, John's youngest daughter, her father lived some of his childhood with George Albert Thompson, Celia and Mitchell's son. The census of 1870 confirms this, showing John — as well as Celia and Mitchell — in the household of George and his young family.

An 1874 map of Dorchester County property owners shows that George Albert Thompson lived immediately adjacent to the property of Lambert Warren Jackson. These properties were located directly across the road from McKendree Church, which stood next to McKendree Cemetery.

Lambert's wife was Margaret Bradley, daughter of the Clement Bradley mentioned earlier. Lambert and Margaret's daughter was Flora Ann Ellen Jackson, born 13 October 1857. John married the girl next door 18 May 1876 at the Shiloh Methodist Protestant Church, Rev. Lane officiating.

The young couple moved back to the property John inherited at Walnut Landing. They attended Manship Church at least as early as October 1879, when daughter Celia was baptized there. Flora was made a probationary member of Manship Church in October 1881 by T.O. Ayres, becoming a full member later.\textsuperscript{2275} The church was located on the northwest corner of the intersection of what are now called Indiantown Road and Chicone Bridge Road. It was about one mile west of the Layton property. (An essay on Manship Church follows this section.)

The family did its shopping in Vienna, about four miles south, according to a letter written by James Lambert "Buddy" Layton to his brother George in 1968. He wrote of the Webb brothers, John and Tom, who ran Webb's store in Vienna. "... we did lots of dealing with them, the two brothers John and Tom Webb... during the Civil War Tom went north John went south. When they came back they went on keeping store together. I remember both of them very well in fact we did most of our dealing with them they had a big store and sold everything and both everything our mother would get a half dozen chickens together and go to Vienna to buy grociers etc. Very little money in those days most everything in Dorchester Co. was trade etc...".

Regarding the family property, James wrote: "At that time that property took in near 1000 acres as it run down to Walnut Landing including wharf and the farm the Taylors lived on...". In another letter to his sister Nellie, James wrote: "The canal that you speak of you have to go down to the third house and then a road goes direct to the canal I expect it would be hard to locate now as no doubt it has a growth of bushes etc. now, our Father used to put some cattle on the marsh as we called it during the summer as plenty of grass and fresh water. he also put some hogs on there one time they went wild. It would be easier to locate from the river, I believe. I think the canal was dredge (?) time and to take care of shipment of produce such as wheat - watermelons etc. What I mean 3rd house would be the 1st one where Mr. Taylor lived and the last one I don't know who owned it. The 1st one where Mr. Taylor lived used to belong to the Layton property. It was sold by our grandfather Layton but as I get it and what I can find out was bought back again but I am not sure of this."

Sunday Worship

John and Flora Layton attended Manship Church, about one mile west of the Layton property at Walnut Landing.

The book The Garden of Methodism includes this listing: "Manship Methodist Episcopal Church is located between Brookview and Vienna. The church was improved in 1921 and burned in 1924."

The church was named for Rev. Andrew Manship, an itinerant Methodist minister who was a member of the Philadelphia Annual Conference. In his book Thirteen Years' Experience in the Itinerancy, Manship wrote about the origins and dedication of the Indiantown church. "... The camp meetings were specially successful on the Peninsula. Shall it be said that the days for camp meetings are passed? I attended one in Dorchester County, Maryland, which was held by Rev. Robert E. Kemp. A year previously, there was a similar meeting held in the same place by Rev. James Hargis, which was the means of building an excellent church not far from the encampment, in a neighbourhood which for many years had been much neglected. This church, on the last Sunday in the month of May, 1855, was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. In the providence of God, it was my privilege to officiate on that occasion. And after everything was done, the ministers, trustees, and building committee held a meeting together to fix upon a name by which this church should be called. And my readers will be as much surprised as myself, when I state that it was resolved to designate it "Manship Chapel." I had received no intimation from the brethren to this effect, and I urged them to recede; but they said, preachers and people, what is written is written. I arose, and said, 'Many among whom I have gone preaching have had the kindness to name their children after me, unworthy, unfaithful, and unprofitable as I am. I doubt the expediency of this course; this, however, is the church edifice that has had my poor name applied to it. I think, brethren, you may have erred; but, God being my helper, I pledge you my life, my fortune, and my sacred honour that I will never bring a reproach upon it. I ask an in interest in your prayers. Brethren, pray for us. Neither you nor I should ever lose sight of the possibility of falling. Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall. My heart's desire and prayer to God is, that this neat church in the wilderness, built through camp meeting influence, may be the spiritual birth-place of scores and hundreds."

Ma and Pa

John was a raconteur and could spin long, elaborate yarns, which often were fueled by copious quantities of cider.

Flora was named postmistress at Rhodesdale 1 October 1896. On 8 August 1898, John shot and killed John S. Collins in the Post Office. No charges were brought against him.

Flora died 10 February 1925 at 1:30pm.

Samuel Jackson is believed to have to America from Suffolk County, England. He is first mentioned as having landed in Northampton County, Virginia, in 1660. About 1665, Samuel headed north to buy land in what is today known as Wicomico County, Maryland. For the most part, subsequent generations stayed in the Salisbury area, with some branches living a bit west around Quantico.

This is the case with the line of Flora. Her grandfather, George, was a sailor and farmer. In 1836, he purchased 1700 acres of a tract called "Marsh Island Range" — also known as "Green's Ireland" — on the Nanticoke River in Dorchester County. He sold 1000 acres of this tract in 1852. George and wife Polly are buried near Athol, Maryland.

Flora's father was Captain Lambert Warren Jackson. He was a veteran steamboat master for a division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, most likely the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic (BC&A) Co. The railroad owned a large fleet of steamboats that plied the Chesapeake. Lambert's regular ports of call were Sharptown and Vienna on the Nanticoke River.2276

Like the Jackson line, the Bradley family has roots that reach almost to the earliest settlements by Europeans in America. Henry Bradley arrived in the Virginia colony 6 May 1636. His four sons spread the family throughout Virginia and the Delmarva Peninsula.

The branch that eventually would unite the Bradley and Layton families lived in the Mardela Springs/Sharptown region of Wicomico County. Charles Bradley owned large tracts of land and a mill, but by the time he died in 1816, he had erased most of the trail he left throughout his life, including the name of his wife. Both of his daughters, Priscilla and Polly, had children without bothering to marry first and the names of the fathers remain unknown.

Clement Bradley apparently was raised by William Bradley Jr., his first cousin-twice removed. Clement spent part of his youth in Ohio with William, but was back in Maryland with his mother by his teen years. He lived most of his adult life around Rhodesdale, Maryland.

George, Luther and Oram were big "kidders" when they got together, a practice that continued into adulthood. According to Clara Mace Brannock, on one occasion, George was dressed in new white buck shoes, white shirt and white pants. He was standing on the bow of a rowboat with a crabinet, while Luther pushed the boat along slowly in the stern. Luther slipped out of the boat and gave the boat a jerk as he left. There are several reports as to what George said as he hit the water.

The men of the family have been described as "good looking, straight standing, dark eyed with mostly dark hair, slim, and hard working." Luther raised Belgium horses. George has been called "sort of a carpenter and sort of a chicken farmer." Primarily, he liked to be waited on by "Baby", his wife Edna.

The daughters, as a group, were regarded as "smart and hard working." Several of the daughters became school teachers after the turn of the century. At that time, teachers were not allowed to be married and could not go out with a man unless escorted.

Most of the children loved to travel, although Luther didn't start traveling until he retired from farming at 75. When they were boys, Luther saved Oram's life by pulling him from the river.

§•• 1 May 1920 Antoinette Elizabeth Long “Nettie” (25 July 1896-21 June 1987)

Born in Baltimore, Nettie was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Long. She and Buddy are buried in McKendree Cem.

James Lambert Layton was born on the family farm at Walnut Landing. He was baptised near East New Market October 10, 1881 by Rev. T.O. Ayres.

Buddy was a wanderer. Some periods of his life are documented, some aren't. What's known is taken from notes provided by his daughter-in-law, Amy Stewart Layton. From 27 December 1906 to 27 March 1908, he was 1st assistant engineer on the U.S. Seagoing Dredge Key West based in Jacksonville, Florida. 1910 to 1914 were spent as an erecting and marine engineer at the Maryland Steel Co. at Sparrows Point, Maryland. It's believed he was in the Los Angeles area from 1914-17 where - the story goes - he refused to invest in land "on which nothing would grow." The land turned out to be Signal Hill, one of the most productive oil patches in California.

From there he went to the Todd Shipyards in Tacoma as superintendent of machinery. Jim and Nettie were married 1 May 1920 in Multnomah County, Oregon, by a circuit judge. Amy retains clippings about ships built at Todd, including the cruisers Omaha and Milwaukee. He attended receptions and ceremonies marking milestones in the building of these ships, including one attended by President and Mrs. Hardin. He left Todd in January 1924, moving on to Sun Shipbuilding in Chester, Pennsylvania. They lived in Ardmore and Upper Darby. It was here that son James Long Layton was born. Jim graduated from Upper Darby High School, but there were stops in New Jersey, New York, Newport News, Norfolk and Pensacola before coming back to Upper Darby. Sometime during this period, he worked for shipbuilding magnate Daniel Ludwig constructing huge oil tankers. Buddy also worked as assistant works manager-machinery for the J.A. Jones Wainwright Shipyards.

The narrative picks up again in the 1950s, chronicling Nettie and Jim's cross-country moves between Georgetown and Santa Ana.

Buddy was a Bible reader. His notes record that on 25 March 1951 at 4215 N42nd Street, Phoenix, he "completed reading this Bible. On numerous occasions I would read certain parts in order to get a better understanding." On March 20, 1958 he completed reading it again while living on a farm near Georgetown, Delaware, believed to have been the house of Edna Layton's mother, where Buddy and Nettie cared for her. The third time through - 1 February 1961 - they were in Santa Ana at 1606 N. Parton Street. The pages containing his favorite passages were in shreds, held together by tape.

Jim and Nettie finally retired in Phoenix. The last few years of their life, they lived at 214 E. Main St., Hurlock.

§ 3 Sept 1955 Amy Maude Stewart (26 Nov 1932~4 Mar 2002)

Amy was the daughter of Paul Stuard Stewart and Muriel Adams. She now is living in Scottsdale, Arizona.

James Long Layton was a railroad man. Jim was born in Delaware County, PA. After graduating from Upper Darby High School and the University of Oklahoma at Norman - Class of 1950, he went to work for the American Locomotive Co. in Schenectady. He went from there to Chicago as a service engineer where the U.S. government finally caught up with him. (Amy reports he was great for not reading his mail.) He was assigned to the Quartermaster Corps as a lieutenant posted at Fort Eustice, Virginia, where he spent his entire military career.

That's also where he met Amy on a blind date while she was on a vacation trip to Florida. They went out again two weeks later on her way back north and a week after that, Jim was in Narberth, Pennsylvania, for their third date. They dated long distance until their marriage on 6 September 1955 in Narberth Presbyterian Church. It was on their honeymoon through Phoenix that Amy finally met Jim's parents with whom she had been corresponding for a year.

After Jim's release from the Army, he went back to work for the American Locomotive Co. — later to become ALCO Products Inc. — as a salesman out of the New York office. They bought their first home in Wycoff, New Jersey. Within the year, Buddy and Nettie sold their home in Phoenix to move back east to be near the family, living in Georgetown.

In 1957, Jim and Amy moved to Anaheim, California, staying there until 1961. That year, Jim became Pacific Regional Manager and Salesman in the San Francisco office, so the family moved to Lafayette, California. Amy writes of that period: "Jim became quite well known on the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Railroads and managed to sell them locomotives they didn't even want." While in this assignment, Jim became a member of the American Shortline Railroad Association and met the new president of the group, Howard Croff and his wife Betty, who would become the family's closest friends. They traveled and visited together for more than two decades. Once, Jim and Amy kidnapped Howard and Betty for a trip up the Inside Passage to Alaska. It included a stay at Skagway where the president of the White Pass and Yukon Railroad put an old private car behind a train for them for a roundtrip to Carcross.

The family moved to Barrington, IL in 1967. When ALCO closed in 1970, Jim became U.S. liason for Montreal Locomotive. In 1972, he incorporated as JL Industries Inc. with offices first in Northbrook, then The Icehouse in Barrington. In December 1987 he learned he had stomach cancer. He battled through 1988 - still doing railroad business from his hospital bed. He died 13 January 1989, and was buried at St. Matthews Luthern Churchyard, Lake Zurich, IL ... beside the railroad tracks.

6. Anna Edith Layton {5 July 1886~27 May 1979} Barnwell County Memorial Cem
§ 23 Feb 1914 Terie Richardson {28 July 1887~12 July 1965}2290
Terie was a farmer, the son of Edward H. and Cappie Richardson.

While her sisters were taking jobs as school teachers in Dorchester County, Anna was making other plans. Her sister Eva Mae recalls: "Anna told us she was going south, marry a rich man, and never do any work." She accomplished all three goals. She first went to Baltimore to attend millinery school. When it came time to pick a shop in which to start working, Anna selected Barnwell, SC as her destination.

In 1975, Anna was interviewed by the Barnwell People Sentinel. The following is extracted from that article.

In the fall of 1912, she started working at Tobin's Millinery Emporium in Barnwell. She stayed in the Tobin house, which stood where the First Baptist Church is today.

Anna told of a black servant who would come by the Tobin's each day with a bucket of water from White Oak springs. "He told me that once I drank this water, I would always come back to Barnwell. I kept drinking from his bucket each day until one day I saw a lizard in the bottom and I wouldn't drink anymore. However, it must have worked because I never left." It was during this time that she met "a most handsome young gentleman, Terie Richardson" and a long courtship followed, during which, according to Anna, he came by daily to take her for a ride. "He had a fine horse and buggy and I told him once what a fine outfit he had." Laughing, she added: "He told me that I could have it too if I would take him along with it. That is about as close as I can remember him coming to proposing and I guess I must have said yes, because we were married in 1914."

Reminiscing with the newspaper reporter, Anna told of the big "Sale Day" held in Barnwell the first Monday of each month. "There would be a big parade and folks would come from miles around," she said. She also recalled the place where the mules were sold -- the spot where the Blatt law firm is located today. And she recalled Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays when she played bridge with Mrs. Edgar Brown, Mrs. Charlie Brown and Mrs. Ben Davis Sr. "I really miss that," she added sadly.

Dr. Kirkland delivered her first two children and all the family photos were taken at Kelly's in Blackville.

She said that she was pampered by her husband. "We had a good and happy life. If we had a million dollars, it couldn't have been any better. And I always told my sons that one thing they could never say to their wives was 'This isn't the way mother fixed it'" referring to the fact that a man named Cyrus cooked the family meals for 45 years.

When the announcement of the raid on Pearl Harbor was made, she was riding with her husband Terie around the farm searching for a tenant named King Solomon Hootingdove. All four of her sons served in the service at the same time.

Anna was an avid Clemson University fan. One family member told the paper: "You can go by her house anytime and she can tell you who won what game in baseball, football, basketball, or whatever."

She loved to travel, although she really didn't start moving about until she was 79 years old. She traveled to such places as Mexico, Rome, Paris, Spain, Portugal, South America and England. Once, she decided to go on a three-week trek through Europe. When she was preparing to leave, her son Bob presented her with a box he had fixed for her. It contained several kinds of pills for airsickness and such. On her return, he asked her if she had used them. "You know," she said, "when we started across the Alps, everyone started taking pills and I decided I would take something, too. So I took some lifesavers."

Anna was named Tri-County area Mother of the Year 1979 for "her lifetime of caring and sharing to the people of the Barnwell area through many church and civic activities."

    § 18 Oct 1919 Katherine A. Baker {3 Sep 1899~13 May 1948} by Rev. Clinton T. Wyatt in Denton Oram was born on the Millpond Farm near Ennals Mill. The origin of his name bears mentioning. At a 1965 retirement testimonial in his honor, the speaker told this story. "Martha (his sister) wanted to name you for Teddy Roosevelt, but your father, a staunch Democrat, would have none of this. So your sister Celia came forward with the name Oram, for Oram Lyte, author of an English grammer text used by Celia in her school. Your Dad had the final say, so he gave you the middle name Wallace after a close friend.” But the story doesn’t end there. Correspondence in 1939 between Oram and the Maryland Department of Health indicates Oram wanted a copy of his birth certificate, but it didn’t have the right name on it. The Bureau of Vital Statistics told him that the certificate for the male born March 6, 1899 to John Thomas and Flora Ann had the name “Tomas” written in ink and signed by the midwife Eliza Ann Aldridge. If he wanted his name on the certificate, said the Bureau, he was going to have to prove he was the male child. The outcome of this bureaucratic squabble is unknown.

He fired a locomotive for the Pennsylvania Railroad from 1923 to 1927, then worked for the Worth Steel Co. in Claymont from March 10, 1927 to July 1, 1938. He entered the postal service as acting postmaster of Claymont September 15, 1938. He became the 14th postmaster of Claymont in 1940. Oram was president of the Delaware Chapter of the National Postmasters Association from 1958 to 1961. The News-Journal wrote at the time of his retirement that he was responsible for making sure no duplicate street names were created in Claymont as the area was developed. He personally numbered the homes in some 20 new developments during his 27 years of service.

He was a member of Atonement Methodist Church, the Masons, the Claymont Lion’s Club and the Claymont Fire Co.

Katherine was the daughter of Charles Baker and Ada F Hill of near Federalsburg. She was an active member of Atonement Methodist Church. Oram and Katherine are buried in Gracelawn Cem, Wilmington.

In 1993, 1994 and 1997, Nellie and Alphonso’s oldest daughter, Frances Marian, recorded memories of her parents and moments from her life.

Mama was born at Indiantown. The family later moved to a farm outside Hurlock at the intersection of Skeet Club Road and Harper Road. She graduated from Hurlock High School in 19xx. The family then moved to Town Point. It was at Town Point that Daddy came courting. Mama taught school in Town Point before she married. Once they were married, they went to live on The Richardson Farm between Hurlock and Williamsburg with Daddy’s parents.

Daddy's line of the Dean(e) family came from Caroline County. His mother, Sarah Ayars Dunham, was the daughter of Alphonso Lewis Dunham and Phoebe Mulford Bonham, who came from Salem County, New Jersey.

The Richardson Farm has many memories buried in the fields and torn down buildings. There was a wooden table built along the fence where Mama fed the people who helped in the wheat threshing. I climbed up there one day having made Audrey and Percy sit down on the ground in front of me and proceeded to preach to them of insects that ate old mowers and machinery and who knows what else I said. Mama and Daddy were upstairs at a window listening and laughing.

On the Richardson Farm, Percy had a black nurse named Esther. We would go up to her room and watch her fix her hair. She would grease it and take a hot curling iron and curl it. It would really snap and crack.

Rev. Cummings was the preacher at Williamsburg Church where we went as children. Years later he died and the funeral was on Tilghman's Island. Mama and Daddy went and they sat up front in the church. Mrs. Cummings got too emotional for Daddy, so he got up and started up the aisle to go out. The aisle rug was not nailed down and it started piling up under him as he walked but didn’t get anywhere. Caused quite a commotion.

My grandfather Layton was quite a fellow. Daddy called him Captain Johnny. One time Ma was away and Pa cooked breakfast for himself and a hired man. He was frying eggs. There was a can of grease on top of the stove so he poured some in the pan and what he thought was a piece of meat fell into the pan. Oil lamps don’t give a lot of light. As they ate, he would find little bones. Then the hired man found some fur. The piece of meat was a mouse that had fallen into the grease. Another time, Pa was sitting up with a corpse one night along with some others. The man had had to be tied down to a board because he was so crippled with rheumatism. In the night one of the ropes came loose and the corpse sat up. Pa jumped out the window and carried the window frame away across the fields — a scared man!

When I was about 10 years old — 1922 — Daddy decided he had had enough farming. He had lived on the Richardson Farm long before he was married with Grandfather and Grandma Dean. So he had a sale and we moved into half of Miss Mary Lord’s house in Stringtown, which is on the south side of Hurlock on the road to Shiloh. Mama went to work in the tin shop. She would make doughnuts and Audrey and I would haul them in a little wagon down the street to sell them. Mama had never tasted mayonnaise before and when she did, she ate the whole jar it was so good. Never again did she ever want any.

Daddy went to work for Ira Jones as a carpenter. One of their jobs was building a house for the Tobats at Secretary. We lived in a big tent on the beach during the summer for awhile and then in their corn house. But Daddy couldn’t stand it, so he borrowed the money and went back to farming on the Leland Bradley farm outside Hurlock toward Waddell’s Corner. He was successful there — was a good farmer, really — and was able after about 20 years to buy Piney Branch farm outside of Hurlock on the road to Williamsburg.

On the Bradley Farm, we did not have electricity, so we studied by coal oil lamps. I would come home from school and read one or two books before supper. Daddy had an asparagus patch and we would have to cut the asparagus. He would sack it and ship it off. We also had to make cantaloupe crates for him. He kept a dairy herd and had a milk route in Hurlock. The milk was not pasturized. I would take a glass to the barn and he would milk right into it. It was warm and foamy.

Daddy had a spirited black horse. I got on it one day. We walked away from the barn but when I turned to come back home, the horse broke into a run. I held on to the reins — no saddle — and slide under its neck and then the rein broke. I fell down on the ground and the horse’s hoof slid right by my face. Daddy wouldn’t let me ride him again. He had a time with me!

Airplanes used to land in one of our fields to give people rides for a price. One took Audrey, Percy and me up one day and Daddy realized all three were up in the air. That was the last time we did that!

When we lived on the Bradley farm, Percy was riding his bicycle and was knocked off by Mr. Floyd Harper. He took Percy to Dr. Myer’s office where Daddy was waiting to be treated. When he saw them bring Percy in, he said to go ahead and help that fellow — "He's worse than I am" — not knowing it was Percy.

Wheat threshing day was a big event when the town relatives came out to help fix food. Grandma Dean would peel a basket of apples and potatoes. Mama would boil chicken and a ham in a big iron wash boiler.

One day Daddy brought a turtle home for Mama to cook. She had no idea what to do, so threw the turtle — shell and all — into a big pot of water to cook. It smelled so bad, you couldn’t get near the house.

The Hurlock Baptist Church had two little pews at the front door. One time the preacher called on Mr. Bean to pray and Daddy thought he said Mr. Deane. He was sitting at the back of the church in one of those little pews and got up and crept out.

Mama raised turkeys to sell. She finally made enough money to buy herself an electric organ from Howard Tingle in Salisbury. Six free lessons came with the sale. She was so intent on giving her grandchildren every opportunity to learn new skills, she included them in her free lessons. So for six summer weeks, she piled in grandchildren into the car and drove them to Salisbury, where they took turns playing the organ under Howard’s tutelage.

Along with Grace McAllen and Mary Harvey, Mama and Daddy traveled all over the place. Once they took a boat to Cuba during hurricane season. They also drove to Mexico and Florida. In 1960, they sailed to England on the S.S. United States to visit Audrey and her family in England.

Mama and Daddy lived on the Piney Branch Farm until he retired from farming, then they moved into Hurlock. Daddy got into politics, becoming friends with Rogers Morton, congressman and, later, a member of the cabinet. Daddy, who only had a third-grade education, served on the Dorchester County School Board. He was a member of the Hurlock Lions Club.

Marian writes about her life

At 17, I was teaching the early teens in church. I would tell them to do as I say, not as I do. I loved to dance and would go down to Cedar Grove to their dances if I could. Later at Goldey, I really enjoyed it. It all stopped when I got married. Elmer didn’t dance and I guess I had had enough.

I graduated in 1930 from Hurlock High School during the depression. Ours was the first class that went the whole year and then graduated. I wanted to go to college to be a high school English teacher, but we had no money. Daddy contacted Uncle Raymond in Wilmington who knew a teacher at Goldey College — Mr. Kiddoo. That’s where I ended up: a secretary and bookkeeper. Lived with Aunt Lulu for a time, then Orem and Katherine. Lulu lived at 100 W. 23rd St in Wilmington. Orem lived two doors away.

I finished my secretarial course in record time (16 months) and came home to work in the Adkins & Douglas office, closed in with Phil Douglas who smoked cigars constantly. Ended up with a terrific sinus condition. People would tell Mama to get me away from there. Phil married his bookkeeper, Fanny Rhue. She was not easy to work for. So I soon got a job with Continental Can in their office. My bosses were Victor Neal, Roland Layton, Clarence Harvey and Martin Sellars. Stayed there until January 1938. Edward was born the next month.

In the meantime, Elmer and I were married at 9 a.m. Sunday morning, January 12, 1936, at the Hurlock Baptist Church. Elmer was working at the theater in Federalsburg. After the Saturday night show, he drove to Baltimore to get Audrey so she could stand up with us. After the wedding, we drove Audrey back to Baltimore, where we stayed in the Lord Baltimore Hotel. It was the first time I’d ever stayed in a hotel.

The next morning, Elmer bought me a pair of shoes, then we had to get back home so he could run the movies that night.

We lived in Federalsburg. Mr. Sewell Noble built us a house along side of his near the railroad station. A flood came in Federalsburg as they were building in 1935 and they had to redo the downstairs. We were to be married at Thanksgiving 1935, but I caught typhoid fever from food at the Baptist Church. Elmer went to Baltimore after he finished running the movies in Federalsburg and brought Audrey home to take care of me. Doctors said she saved my life. She was an excellent nurse. Elmer bought my wedding ring and put it under my pillow. This was at Piney Branch. Some years later, Mama got typhoid. Percy had it when we lived in Hurlock.

We were in Easton in 1938 with Elmer at the Avalon Theater. In 1939 we were storing our furniture and living with Mama and Daddy awhile and then moved to Cannons. Elmer went with DuPont in Seaford on construction. We bought a lot on Sussex Avenue in Westview and started building our house. Gus came to live with us and help Elmer build. Winnie Henning was the contractor. The aurora borealis was outstanding that year of 1940-41. Gus would drink and end up in jail in Seaford.

Elmer quit DuPont and went to New York with Sperry Gyroscope. Got homesick and came back with DuPont. In 1945 he put a ladder on the car and started his own electrical business. Bill Hill, and then Bill Hammond went to work for him. Elmer retired in 1977 leaving a good record in his industrial work.

In 1948, Mary and Albert Stevens, Methodists, and Robert and Eugenia Bruce, Presbyterians, came to see me. Would I be interested in starting a Baptist Church in Seaford? I surely would! So was born First Baptist Church of Seaford in our living room. We met first in the Seaford Acorn Club building, then the Odd Fellows Hall, before starting work on our own building on Bradford Street in Seaford. Elmer left the church in 1952 and went to the Church of God. A minister from there was on a job with him and talked him into it. I kept the boys with me.

The roots of the Moore family reach deep into the southern tip of Dorchester County. Although it isn't known when the first member of this Moore line immigrated to America, it is believed that at least two generations lived on this side of the Atlantic before the birth of Lemuel in 1801. The earliest generations of the line were waterman living in Bishops Head. By marrying into the Pritchett and McNamara lines, they brought together families who were the original settlers of Dorchester County.

Caroline Rose McGrath was the daughter of Josiah McGraw and Emily Jane Paul. Family lore attributes the change in last name to a school teacher's whim. Like the Moore line, it isn't yet known when the first member of the McGraw line came to America, but circumstantial evidence suggests that the line was here before 1800. Josiah grew up on a farm in the Bucktown district of Dorchester County along the western edge of Green Briar Swamp. It's noteworthy that this farm was adjacent to the farm on which the slave Harriet Tubman first worked. Josiah and Harriett were about the same age, so it's possible they would have encountered each other in the daily course of their lives.

Josiah served in the Union Army at the Battle of Gettysburg. His military pension file contains numerous affidavits indicating that his large family lived a barebones existence throughout the last half of the 19th century.

After Caroline married Moses Moore, the family lived in Cambridge, where Elmer was born on Academy Street. He graduated from Cambridge HS in 1929 and went to work aboard the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry. He also worked as a movie projectionist in Easton and Federalsburg. In 1938, while the family lived in Cannon, Delaware, he helped build the DuPont nylon plant in Seaford, then worked there through WWII.

After leaving DuPont in 1945, Elmer formed his own company to do industrial electrical construction. His firm wired many public buildings throughout lower Delaware and Maryland, including high schools in Seaford, Laurel and Cambridge, as well as Caesar Rodney HS and renovations to Dover's Legislative Hall.

He ran as a Republican for a seat in the Delaware House of Representatives in 1960. He also served on the Seaford City Council. He was president of the Seaford Kiwanis Club and served as Lt. Governor of the organization's Capitol District. He was president of the State Board of Electrical Examinors. He was extremely active in building the Seaford Church of God.

For many years, he built fine furniture, specializing in the Queen Anne style. His other "hobby" was giving away hundreds of winter coats, most of them light brown.
The Cokeland Laytons

Cokeland is a collection of houses below Henry’s Cross Roads in the Drawbridge District of Dorchester County. It lies below Vienna.

This group of Laytons lived within a few miles of Cokeland for much of the 19th century. The task of constructing this group is confounded by the same problem as that encountered with the Walnut Landing Laytons. That is, the lack of information because the Dorchester County courthouse burned in 1852. Therefore, some of the first two generations presented here is based on suppositions. Then we move to more solid ground with the section entitled William James Layton Sr., known here as William1.

William2 is established as the father of William3 in a rather interesting manner. It involves the story of a ship named the William J. Layton. The story is told by John Hughes, who witnessed the launching of the ship in 1874. In telling the story, Hughes said: “Mr. Layton’s son, William J. Layton Jr., acted as the schooner’s captain.” The full story immediately follows this introduction.

William3 was known as “Bill Jim,” meaning his middle name was James. And since he was known as “Junior,” it’s assumed his father’s name was William James, as well.

But who was the father of William2? Using census and land records, it’s possible to establish with some certainty who lived in Dorchester County between the Revolutionary War and 1852. A process of elimination leads to the William Layton who, according to Dorchester marriage records, married two women named Elliott. They are:

- Nancy Elliott m 17 Feb 1808
- Mahala Elliott m 25 Sep 1811

The 1810 census shows William — let’s call him William1 — with a household of young children — probably not all his — but no wife. With young children, he needed a wife and quickly found a new one in Mahala, quite possibly, Nancy’s sister. About 1814, William1 and Mahala had a son, William2.

Establishing a father for William1 is a bit tricky, but a few clues and the process of elimination of males who couldn’t be the father leads to Levin F. Layton. William2 named a son Levin F. And, in 1852/3, William — either William1 or William2 — settled an estate for a Levin F. Layton. Finally, the 1800 census shows Levin with a son in the age bracket to be William1.

Little is known about Levin. He does not appear in Dorchester County property records as having bought or sold any land. There are three transactions between 1788 and 1803 in which Levin bought the crops raised by the Gambrell family on land rented from Capt. Richard Waters. A fourth shows Abraham Gambrell selling personal property in 1794 to Levin and Richardson Gambrell. Although it seems unlikely that it’s the same Levin, the Dorchester County Minutes and Proceedings (Lib 8916) show a Levin Layton receiving the commission to run the Hunting Creek Ferry from the mouth of Hunting Creek to Talbot County in 1789.

Naturally, it would be nice if Levin’s parents could be identified. However, no will has been found that lists Levin as an heir, nor have any other records been found that would help in making an educated guess.

Filling out the family

It seems likely that William Layton and Mahala Elliott had at least four children, based on a property record that also brings in an Elizabeth Layton, who marries Mark Parks.

In 1839, Elizabeth Parks buys 20 acres of Hard Labor, adjacent land she already owned. In 1845, she drafted a will that made no mention of any children of her own. Rather, her plantation was given to Noble Morain, Leah Morain’s son. To Elizabeth Petty, she gave “a house and lot and property near the river near the Drawbridge.” She also wrote that “the rest of the estate be equally divided among William Layton’s children and Ann Johnson and Josiah Layton.

(Of historical interest, her will also spelled out the fates of her slaves. Servant Stephen Camper was to be “free from slavery after my death.” Servant Harriet was “to serve four years after my death” and proceeds of her work went to the estate. After the four years, she was free. “To Noble Morain, my small servant Jane.”)

Back to the property. In April 1848, Levin Petty and Elizabeth, Charles Johnson and Ann, William Layton and Josiah Layton sold to Richardson Gambrell part of Hard Labor. The marriage records tell us Elizabeth and Ann had been Laytons and their inclusion in the will strongly suggests they were sisters of William and Josiah.

As for the identity of Noble Morain (Moreign), an Orphans Court case of 1846 says he was the illegitimate son of Leah Moreign, deceased. William Layton was named guardian by the court. No marriage record exists for him, but the 1850 census shows Noble, 21, with Prissy, 30, and Nancy, 2. There is no mention of the family in the 1860 census under any spelling variation. An 1854 property transaction mentions Noble again. The abstract refers to land sold under a decree of the High Court of Chancery in the cause of William Layton and others against Josiah Layton and Noble Morain, part of Bartholomews Neck, 511 acres.

The Family Goes to Sea

Under the headline “Schooner Was Launched at Vienna Back in Late 1800s,” The Dorchester News of September 27, 1967 carried a story that gives us significant information about the 19th century Laytons of Cokeland. The story is printed here in its entirety.

A drifting fog covered the crowd of people at Cokeland. The cool moisture was welcome, since the hot sun of summer would break through by late morning. The crowd made Mr. "Johnny" Hughes feel a bit uncomfortable. It was the first time he had seen such a crowd, almost 400 people in all. Men leaned against the towering pine trees, smoking cigars, chewing tobacco and discussing crops. Women formed small groups exchanging ideas concerning housekeeping and cooking.

Only three years of age, Mr. Hughes recalls that the crowd did not gather to "just talk." Folks from miles around had arrived at the farm of William Layton to witness the historic event of launching his schooner in 1876.

Mr. Hughes vividly recalls why the launching was such an event. For three years, William Layton had employed numerous carpenters and boat builders to build a boat of the finest quality. Layton employed Joseph W. Brooks of Madison, Maryland, to build the vessel, since Brooks was regarded as the finest boat builder living at that time.

Layton provided Brooks with a staff, many of these people were local folks, but several were from Cambridge. Being a large land owner, Layton was able to use nothing but the finest oak in the construction of his craft. The body of the schooner was made of oak and the deck of pine. The vessel took three years to build and during this time workmen from Cambridge lived at Layton's house, especially during the winter.

Layton's house was several yards from the bank of Waperamander Creek, and his vessel was to be launched in the creek. Even today, the construction site can be seen due to the wood debris found. The vessel was built on blocks and wedges. Some were also placed alongside the craft, and when launched, the blocks and wedges were knocked out from under the vessel, and she slid without hesitation along the greased rails into the waters of Waperamander Creek.

Formerly this Creek was known as the Waperamander, but outsiders refer to it as Peach Orchard Creek. The vessel was named in honor of Layton's son, William J. Layton.

Layton built the schooner for the sole purpose of 'running cord wood' from the local area to Baltimore. Lewis' Wharf, north of Layton's home on the Nanticoke, was a major stopping place for the schooner. Mr. Hughes recalls that he has seen as much as 1000 cords of wood piled on the wharf awaiting shipment to Baltimore. The depth of the water at the wharf allowed the vessel to dock and the vessel did a great deal of business at Lewis' Wharf.

Mr. Layton's son acted as the schooner's captain. For several years the captain ran cord wood to Baltimore and Mr. Layton Sr. thought more and better business could be found in the fruit business. Vessels engaged in shipping fruit sailed the waters between Baltimore and the West Indies. Young Layton was informed by his father that he believed another captain would be employed because of the son's ignorance of the dangers of sailing in the ocean.

Young Layton agreed and a new captain took over the William J. Layton. Expecting to make a great deal of money, the Laytons had no way of knowing that a financial tragedy was in store for them.

Soon after being employed, the new captain went to the West Indies and picked up a load of pineapples. A company in New York or Baltimore had previously paid for the load of pineapples. On the return trip, the clever captain went to another port, sold the cargo of pineapples and left the schooner, vacant, on the water.

The company was to pay young Layton for the shipping cost and so he was awaiting the arrival of the schooner in New York or Baltimore. The company which paid for the fruit, which they never received, seized the William J. Layton, and informed the Laytons that they would get the schooner back when the reimbursement was made to them for the money they paid for the pineapples. If unable to come up with the money, the company would sell the vessel.

Mr. Layton Sr paid the debt. The situation was an ironic contrast from the day the vessel was launched. With high hopes and expectations the vessel was launched to make money. Paying the debt broke Layton financially. The vessel returned once again to shipping cord wood. Some say Layton died penniless. Of the 400 people who witnessed the launching the cool morning in 1876, Mr. Hughes is the only living member.

The vessel is believed to be the second oldest schooner in operation on Chesapeake Bay. In 1932, the vessel was sold and named Ida B. Conway. In 1948, the old schooner was again sold, and named John J. Crouch. Finally, the vessel was resold and named Carol Ann in 1957. Today the schooner has been converted into an oil screw and still plies the Nanticoke River, stopping often in Vienna. [Keep in mind that this was written in 1967.]

Waperamander Creek

An 1877 property atlas shows the residence and general store of a William Layton at Cokeland. The same map shows the residence of a William J.
Layton a mile or so to the east on the western side of Wapermander Creek, now referred to as Peach Orchard Creek. On one side of William J. is "L. Moore" and on the other is "Capt L. McNamara." It would appear that when William married Laura Jane McNamara in 1869, he was marrying the girl next door.

The 1877 Atlas carried a few ads on each page. For the Drawbridge District, there appeared this notice: William Layton, dealer in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Notions, and General Merchandise. Drawbridge P.O.

William James Layton was born in Cokeland, Maryland. Following his marriage, he and Laura Jane lived on a farm at Cokeland for the next 26 years, where all 10 of their children were born. In 1894, the Layton family moved to the Craft Farm on the outskirts of Vienna. In 1914, William retired from farming by buying the Wainwright property at the corner of Water and Church Streets in Vienna. Following his death during WWI, son Everitt returned home to care for his mother until her death.

This marriage to William Layton was Laura Jane’s second. She married first James W. McCreary on 24 July 1866 and he died 9 Nov 1866. A son, James W. Jr., was born in 1867. James W Jr. married first Nellie E. Meekins and second Annie B. James W Jr was living with Laura Jane’s parents in 1880.

Laura Jane was the daughter of Levin Ross McNamara and Sarah Maria Moore of Elliott’s Island. Levin and Sarah were first cousins, she being the daughter of Isaac Moore and Rebecca McNamara, he the son of Rebecca’s brother John, who married Elizabeth Tyler.

It is said he made frequent trips to the city, only half loading his boat so he could return to Cokeland for another load of grain. After the harvest was over, he rode horseback from his home in Vienna to Cokeland to court Sallie. The couple finally married in the Vienna Protestant Ch. [ABS]

§ 30 Dec 1902 William James Murphy {c1868~12 Sep 1939}

Adjoining the Layton farm in Cokeland was the Murphy farm. Mrs. Murphy one day sent son William James to gather blackberries. He liked the looks of the berries on the Layton land, so he crossed the dividing fence and started picking. Also picking the berries was Angenora Layton. This chance encounter led to friendship, but in 1894, Angenora had to move with her parents to the Craft Farm on the outskirts of Vienna. Although hotly pursued by others, William, the son of John M. and Mary A. Murphy, finally won her hand and they were married in the Methodist Protestant Ch of Vienna. Elsie didn't care for the country, so persuaded her parents to send her to college. She enrolled first at the State Normal School at Towson to become a teacher, but soon decided she wanted a business career instead, so transferred to Strayer's Business College. While there, she met Clarence, who asked her to wait for him while he went to Boston with $20 in his pocket to start work for the Boston American. Once established in Boston, he returned to Vienna for Elsie. They were married at her home on the farm. Clarence worked for the Hearst newspaper in Boston for 55 years. Dorchester MA [ABS]

Roland was born in Vienna. Having heard about the big city from his sister Elsie, he decided that he also wanted to go to Strayer's Business College. But his affections remained in Dorchester County with Nellie Maria Reid of Reid's Grove. The two had met in high school. Once she graduated, he returned to Vienna and began making nightly visits to Reid's Grove. He made the six mile trek either riding in a carriage pulled by the family horse, Stella, or riding... a bicycle, or on foot. Most mornings, there was a letter in the mailbag at the Vienna post office waiting for delivery by the BC&A train in Reid's Grove telling Nellie his plans for that night.

[ABS]

The couple finally married at her home in Reid's Grove, the wedding taking place at 6:30 a.m. with members of the immediate family present. After the wedding breakfast, they motored to Hurlock and Federalsburg, then took a train to Philadelphia where they boarded the steamer Persian for a honeymoon to Boston.

Nellie was the daughter of Columbus T. and Sarah Howeth Reid of Reids Grove. She attended Washington College in Chestertown and graduated in 1911 from what was then called Maryland State Normal School in Towson. Following graduation, she taught from the first to seventh grades in an elementary school near East New Market until she married in 1915. She was a member of Unity Washington Methodist Ch and was an active member of the Hurlock Woman's Club.

Note: Extensive biographical material about this branch of the family is included in the narrative text at the beginning of this section.

Memories

In 1951, Anna Bennett Spear wrote of life in the home of William James Layton and Laura Jane McNamara, her grandparents. Rather then interrupt the flow of the genealogical information in the preceding section, excerpts of her writing are included here for ease of reading.

"I can recall the happy days we spent playing on the spacious lawn that was bordered with the lovely sweet scented lilacs and lilies and we played hide-and-seek between the huge boxwood on each side of the gravel walk that led from the house to the river. The river at that time had a nice, sandy beach and we would trek down the beach to the steamboat wharf to wave a friendly greeting to the crew and passengers on board the steamboat.

"The house was big, with a wide hall that echoed to our laughter. The stairway was a winding one that extended up to the third floor where we loved to climb, just to slide down the bannister.

"This house had two front porches, one facing town, and the other one overlooking the lawn and river. The big trees that stood in front of the house and the old-fashioned well and wooden pump are full of memories. This house was burned to the ground January 22, 1922, while occupied by William James Murphy, Angenora and family.

"William J. or Bill Jim, as he was mostly called, was one of the prominent farmers of Dorchester County. He always took pride in driving a well-groomed pair of horses to Cambridge for business transactions. He would leave Vienna by four or five o'clock in the morning in order to return late at night. During the spring and fall, he would drive to Cambridge twice a week, put his horses up overnight at the livery stables, and attend court sessions. Grandma went along to visit her mother and the stores so she could keep up with the latest styles and house furnishings."

The memories of Bill Layton

William Reid Layton left his family a historical treasure trove by recording stories of his early years in northern Dorchester County. The richly textured tales not only recount events of the Layton family, but shed light on life in general in small town America in the first half of the 20th century. Bill talked on January 8 and February 8, 1991. In 1993, his brother Roland transcribed the tapes. Because the transcription runs 19 single-spaced pages, the stories have been edited for length.

"I was born in Cambridge Hospital on May 3, 1921. My family lived in Vienna, Maryland. After Dad [Roland Vanderbilt Layton] graduated from high school, he furthered his education at Strayer's Business College in Baltimore, then returned to Vienna, employed as a bookkeeper and clerk for the hardware store. In about 1925, Dad had an opportunity to become bookkeeper for what was then the Eastern Shore Can Co., owned by Victor and Lee Neal. The Neals eventually sold the Eastern Shore Can Co. to Continental Can Co. At this time, Dad was promoted to sales representative for most of the Delmarva Peninsula and continued with Continental until his retirement at age 65. For a while Dad drove back and forth from Vienna to Hurlock to work, but then he and Mother bought a home on Broad Street in Hurlock, so that at my age of five we moved to Hurlock.

"Anyhow, at age five Mother and Dad moved to Hurlock on the good old Eastern Shore of Maryland and what better place to grow up! I'm sure there are a lot of Hurlocks throughout the world for different people, but I never will forget my hometown. Dad was active in civil things and for several terms served as mayor of Hurlock, and in fact it was during one of his administrations that the first sanitary sewer of the town was put in and Mr. Harper, Buddy Harper, was made town engineer and supervised it.

"On the day we moved to Hurlock, the truck backed up to the house and a young fellow my age by the name of Bob Tufft, who lived across the street, rode on his tricycle and asked if I wanted to take a ride. So we took off, Bob leading the way, me following and we rode down to Bradley's Corner, then on to Main Street and up to Olly Thompson's store. Then we returned back home. And one of the things that impresses me so is that back in those days — we're talking about 1926 — two five-year-olds could get on their bicycles, ride down the street, disappear from their parents' home, come back and the parents were not upset. It seemed to be just a safe world, a free world.

"When we were youngsters, maybe I was eight and Jane was 12, Mother and Dad decided we should take piano lessons and arrangements were made with a lady named Mrs. Montell from Cambridge to come to Mrs. Clay's house in Vienna and give music lessons. So Jane and I would get on the train in Hurlock, ride to Vienna, walk to the Webb's home, take our music lesson, and then return to the railroad station, catch the train back to Hurlock and home again. Think about trying to do that today, putting a couple of youngsters on a train, even just to travel ten or twelve miles and worry about their safety. But back in those days that wasn't a problem.

"When I was young, they had what they called camp meetings at the little crossroads at Shiloh [a few miles south of Hurlock]. For a few years, Mother and Daddy, along with Aunt Lillian and Uncle Hampton, and Cousin Ada, would have what they called a tent, just a wooden structure. When you went to bed at night, you lowered the canvas that covered the front. Your kitchen and living room were downstairs and dormitory style sleeping upstairs. During the preaching service we weren't allowed to promenade, but after that we would walk around the big squares of tents, with the tabernacle in the middle, and I can remember Irene, along with another girl, walking by a couple of us fellows and saying 'Do you like chicken?' and we would answer 'Yes' and they would say 'Take a wing.' So you'd walk over, put your arm in their arm and make a few circles around the camp meeting ground.

The Depression in Hurlock

"Of course, Depression days came along while I was a youngster growing up, and quite interesting, there was a lot of train traffic in Hurlock serving the canning plants and the can manufacturing plant, and then the train going on to Cambridge. But in those days they had hobos who would ride the trains and they were really just men, down and out, out of work. They didn't mind working, but there was no work for them. So occasionally, one would come to the back of home and Mother, if she had any jobs to be done for a meal, Mother would put him to work, oh, cleaning the yard, or some chore that needed to be done, and in the meantime would fix him his lunch. He would do the work, eat his lunch, say thannks, and go on and get back on the train and ride to somebody else. But you didn't have to worry about people like this coming into your home and robbing or stealing. they were just good men who were down and out.

Those were tough times. I can remember some of dad's friends coming around to borrow a couple of dollars. Dad was very fortunate - he might have had cuts in salary, but he always had employment with Continental Can Co. And I can remember Mr. Elwood Andrews coming around and saying 'Roland, can you let me have a dollar or two for gasoline' and Dad would loan him a dollar or two. Mr. Andrews was selling insurance and when he would get a commission he would pay him back. But that would give him the money he needed to buy gasoline to ride around trying to sell insurance. he was a mighty brave man, because the Andrews family had owned what was later Acme Market Canning plant, but lost it all during the Depression."

Delivering milk in Hurlock

"As a youngster of about nine, I was able to do something that kids today don't have the opportunity to do. I would walk to the edge of town, towards Waddell's Corner, and meet Mr. Herman Rhue who had a milk route. He had a horse and wagon and I would deliver milk on one side of the street and he would deliver on other other. The horses would know just how far to walk before stopping and where to turn as we canvassed the town. People would put bottles out indicating how much milk they wanted or a note in the bottle. And if you saw a quart bottle you knew to take a quart and pick up an empty. There were some folks maybe who didn't think the bottles were properly sanitized and one I can think of in particular was Dr. Myers, but these folks would paint a band around their bottles to be used and Dr. Myers always had a blue band around the top of his bottles and had his own cabinet. And maybe he was right, because I laughed several times watching Mr. Rhue, when I would say somebody only wants a pint, he would pick up a quart of milk and an empty pint bottle, pull the cap off the quart and put it in his mouth and fill the pint and take the cap out of his mouth and put it back on the quart bottle and off we would go.

"I remember back when I was delivering milk I got 15 cents a morning. We would end up in downtown Hurlock in front of the American Stores Dairy Co. store, at which time Mr. Rhue would take over as he would take in basketfuls of milk. But he would give me 15 cents. And at one time I had some rabbits, so I would spend five cents on carrots for the rabbits, and that would leave me a dine left over if I would want a coke in the evening or ice cream of something of that nature."

Making cantaloupe crates

"The Rhue brothers also grew and shipped cantaloupes. That was a big crop in that section of Dorchester County. So when I was about ten I started making cantaloupe crates for the Rhues. And I did that for a couple of years and then made them for the Osborne brothers and then also for Mr. Jimmy Andrews. And I would expect there were days or weeks, especially as I got a little older, as we were paid by the piece and I was good with hammer and nails, that I was making as much money as my Dad.

"At the age of 16 I was able to go to work for Continental Can Co., which was one of the highest paying hourly jobs around Hurlock. And I continued this during the summers, even after I had graduated from high school.

"Back in the early days, there weren't too many cars. We used to roller skate and play roller hockey on the road in front of the house. An occasional car would come and we would just skate off the side. Winter time, we would have a snow and Dad and other aconutus would pul us on our sleds. There probably would be six or eight behind a car. The cars didn't have defrosters during those days and they would have a candle propped on the dashboard trying to keep the windows defrosted while they pulled us around town. That was big sport!

In Hurlock on a Saturday night, all of the rural folks came to town. H & S was a little confectionary store with a dance hall in the back and people would wander up and down the street comparing crops and talking to each other and the men would congregate in H & S to drink a coke and so forth. One evening, Roy Tuft walked into H & S and a gentleman named Alphonso Deane [Roy's cousin] was standing there and he said 'Roy, that's a good-looking suit you have on — do you want to sell it?' And Roy said
'Yeah, 20 dollars.' Alphonso Deane said 'OK, here you are.' Well, much to everyone's surprise, Roy emptied his pockets, took off his slacks, his coat, everything he had in his suit, then walked home down Main Street in his shirt, his boxer shorts and those socks that were held up by supporters that we wore back at that time." [Adds brother Roland: Bill
group of ladies in the street, he tipped his hat and said 'Nice night for basketball practice.]

Across the street from H & S, there was a small area where they had set up rows of benches. I don't know who put them there, but the old men used to sit there and talk every evening; they called it Buzzard's Bench. Dad never would got there and sit and listen to the gossip. Instead, he'd walk down to Bradley's Garage abd let Leland Bradley fill him in. During good weather Buzzard's Bench was a congregating place for the old men.

No secrets in Hurlock

"The year after Dad retired, we were having a canners' convention and I visited Continental Can's reception room and one of the elderly gentleman from New York talked about Dad and recalled how it used to be a standard joke in the New York office to go in early and call Dad for one reason or another.
At that time, the operators handled all the long distance calls and we had an operator in Hurlock by the name of Vergie, and the gentleman was telling me he would call and say 'I want Roland Layton of Continental Can Co.' and Vergie would reply something to the effect of 'Mr. Roland won't be in for awhile — he just went by. He's going to stop at Oodie Harper's for his paper and then go on to Bill Todd's for a shave; do you want me to let him know to call you back?' But typical of a small town — the operator sitting there facing the window knew what was going on. Whenever there was a fire, the operator turned in the alarm and you could call to see what the fire was and how serious it was.

"When Roland was little, he loved grapefruit. He always complained about it squirting in his eyes while he was eating. So they bought him a pair of goggles and that little fellow would sit at the breakfast table with these goggles on, looking like an aviator, to eat his breakfast.

"Each summer when I was a youngster, I would always look forward to going to my Uncle Harry Reid's at Reid's Grove on the farm, especially during wheat thrashing season. Uncle Harry has a thrashing machine and it was the custom of the time that he would go from farm to farm thrashing their wheat and rye and all the farmers would participate.
They would come in with their wagons and their help and load the wagons out in the field and bag the grain from the thrasher and then at the end of the day there would be a big wheat thrashing dinner, and the next day the wheat thrashing machine would move to another farm where everybody would help that farmer. But the fun I had — it was my job to keep water out to the people working on the farm, so that gave me an opportunity to ride the pony as a water boy.

"In Hurlock, next to the railroad station, were tanks where the trains used to fill up with water. Of course, they were steam locomotives back in that day. They had one railroad, the old B & E, that came from Preston coming to Hurlock and the other was the Pennsylvania that came from Seaford going toward Cambridge. These water tanks would leak — they were wooden tanks — and in the winter time, huge icicles would form from them and hang way down. If Mother wanted to make ice cream, I would take my wagon and go down to the tank and cut off icicles and big chunks of ice and load them in the wagon and then when we got home we would put it in a bag and crush the ice with an axe and by that time Mother would have the ice cream mix all ready and we would freeze a freezer of ice cream.

"Back during my school days is when Admiral Byrd had made one of his trips to the South Pole.
Phillips Packing Co. in Cambridge had furnished him a lot of his food supplies. So when the trip was over, he came back to Cambridge to express his appreciation to the company. The school children were bused to the theater in Cambridge and then Adm. Byrd told us children about the trip to the South Pole. It was indeed quite an experience and quite entertaining."

   In all likelihood, (a) William D. Layton and (b) John W. Layton were the sons of Lovey Layton. The 1880 census shows the household of William D. and Sarah with a Lovey Layton ("mother"). John's death certificate lists his mother as Lovey Layton and his father "unknown." In 1870, John and his young family were living a few doors from Lovey. And just two houses away was Lovey's sister-in-law, Huldy, living with her son William and his family. By process of elimination, #1 Lovey seems to be that Lovey. There also could be a deaf-and-dumb daughter, Mary A. {c1835~}, based on the 1860 census. Herbert J. and Nettie (below) are buried next to Lovey in St. George's Chapel Cem.

LEVIN LAYTON AND NANCY QUILLEN

1. Levin Layton  {c1800-1810~}  § 15 Jul 1830 Nancy Quillen  {}

Note: The Wor Co will of James Melvin (f270 -272, 6 Apr 1827/27 Apr 1827) was witnessed by a William Layton, whose name was recorded as "...of Levin." The 1800 census

The 1840 census of the Northern District of Worcester Co indicates Levin had a son born between 1831-1835. There were also three females in the household born 1820-1830, but no female of the right age to be Nancy. There were no other Layton families living in the immediate neighborhood.

A. David D. Layton  {c1843~cMay 1885}  § 28 Jan 1874 Narcissus Jones  {Apr 1847~3 Feb 1923}  b>MD

This couple presents numerous questions. First, the Worcester marriage record has been transcribed as "Franklin D Layton, 27, and Narcissa Jones, 25." However, the 1880 census uses the name "David D. Layton." The Civil War pension records and Survivor lists also use "David D" with Narcissus as his widow.

Next, there is the matter of Narcissus' last name. The 1880 census includes "Step-daughter Mary Ann Jones, 8" in the household of David and Narcissus. This suggests she was married previously, but there is no Worcester marriage record of anyone named Jones with anyone named Narcissus. Further, in the 1910 census, the widow Narcissus is living with another widow, Mary A Taylor, 95, who is listed as her mother. And to further complicate things, Whittington Truitt, 60, also is living with the two ladies. He is listed as "brother."

David, born in Maryland, served in Co. B 3rd Regiment Delaware Infantry in the Civil War. In 1870, David, single, was living in the household of Allard and Hester Lynch in the Roxana area. He was a "mariner." David probably died about May 1885 because Narcissus applied for her Civil War widow's pension on 1 Jun 1885. The 1890 census of Civil War Union soldiers and widows confirms that she was a widow. Narcissus never remarried and was living next to son Levin in the East Berlin district in 1920.

More about Mary Ann Jones, born c1872. At age 15, she married Charles Simpson, eight years her senior, on 26 Apr 1887. They raised a large family in the East Berlin district of Worcester.

i. Levin Timothy Layton  {23 Dec 1874~1952}  lv>East Berlin  § c1894 Mary Elizabeth Truitt "Lizzie"  {Jan 1877~3 Jul 1962}  Taylorville Cem

On his WWI draft registration form, his occupation was fishing. He said he was of medium height and stout build.

Mary was the daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth Truitt.

a. Ethel May Layton  {Dec 1895~by 1920}  ni  § by 1917 Joshua T. Short  {24 Aug 1889~}  Son of Joshua and Martha E. Short. Joshua married second Laura Hall.

signed with an X. "Mar 1882" is taken from the 1900 census because it seems to match other records for general time frame.

§• 20 Apr 1848 Mary E Scott {10 Mar 1822~5 July 1869} Lewis Cem
§•• 27 Oct 1869 Jane M Griffin {c1825~}
In the Wor Co will of Thomas Littleton, he leaves to daughter “Aurilia” the lands he purchased of Joseph Lewis Timmons. The fact that both sons named a daughter “Amelia” strongly suggests the name is Amelia, not Aurilla.

It’s possible that William Layton was the son of Milbourne Layton and Prisa Laws {c1780~}, daughter of William Laws {1753~1829} and Ann Fooks 1753~1831).

• There's a bit of supposition in the family construction with Mary Scott, but it seems to be supported by the census reports and marriage licenses of the county.

Mary was the widow of John F. Scott. The 1850 census shows three Scott children living in William and Mary's home: Mary E, 9, Ananias W, 5, and George E, 3.

•• William was Jane Griffin’s fourth husband. She had previously married Peter Burbage, Johnson H Davis and Handy Smack. The 1870 census shows William and Jane M. W. Layton {c1825~} living three houses from Milbourne, and then two houses further down the road Maria A. Layton {c1828~} and children Mary M {c1857~}, William H. {c1859~} and Milley M. {c1861~}.

Three children are listed here for William and Amelia: Thomas J, Milbourn A and Lody or Loda, of whom nothing is known.

James and Nancy Layton

The 1820 and 1830 census reports of Worcester County suggest that the following family groups descend from a James and Nancy Layton. The framework for these descendants come from the 1850, 1860 and 1870 census of Worcester Co and the 1880 census of Dagsboro [All children and Samuel A born in MD: 1880 census] The 1850 census seems to indicate “Elizabeth Layton (c1780~)” is Samuel's grandmother. Four sisters also might be indicated by the census. They follow Samuel’s group here.

Many in this group seem to have lived southwest of Millsboro in the Carey’s Camp/Mission area, with some moving farther west toward Laurel.

HENRY LAYTON
SOMERSET COUNTY

After years of research, no evidence has been found to connect Henry and Margaret Layton to William and Ursula Layton. However, that does not mean that Henry and William were not brothers. Further, it is quite possible that some of the Layton lines compiled in this volume are descendants of Henry and Margaret, not William and Ursula.

FIRST CHOICE was defined at MD Patents 19:515, laid out for 500 ac on 02 Jan 1676/7 for William Stevens, who assigned it to my very own uncle William Manlove, who obtained patent on 03 Nov 1677. Manlove moved to Delaware ca 1690. Then:

So Deeds L1:288. 05 Sep 1694. Sold by William Manlove (of the Territory of Pennsylvania) et ux. Alice Manlove to Henry Layton [Leyton] (planter).

MD Wills 7:299 19 Nov 1696, proved 16 Jun 1697 by LW&T of Henry Layton: lower moiety (adj. Thomas Acworth) to Thomas Johnson, son of Thomas Johnson, and upper moiety to Charles Williams of Dames Quarter.

Location: "near head of the main branch of Rewastico Creek". In real space, centered at about 38/25/00N, 75/43/00W, south of the creek.

All records for then-Somerset (including now-Wicomico) will be found in Somerset record series.

Henry Layton, though, actually lived in Dames Quarter. His will and land breakdown, with sons John and Henry (who evidently died without heirs before 1716):

LW& T of Henry Layton [Leaton]
MD Wills 7:299
made 19 Nov 1696, proved 16 Jun 1697 residence Monie (Dames Quarter); other land as indicated

To son John Layton: personalty and LUNNS IMPROVEMENT [sic: the conclusion from county land records is that the bequest actually entailed 200 ac from two adjoining patents in which Layton had rights], LUNNS IMPROVEMENT: So RR 09:018-6; 11:315c + 12:096p
LUNNS INCREASE: So RR 09:019-5; 11:474c + 12:131p

To son Henry Layton: personalty and

500 ac FIRST CHOICE: So RR 09:225-5; 19:515c + 19:516p
(in Nanticoke Hundred (now-Wicomico County)

To wife Margaret Layton and sons Henry Layton and John Layton: residue, real and personal. Children to be of age at 18.

Note: land not mentioned was the 1698 survey and patent (which by date must therefore been for his son Henry), 140 ac LAYTONS CONVENIENCY: So RR 09:195-2; CC #4:117c + CC #4:117p, which, by So Deeds AC:378 was sold with THE DOWNS on 06 Mar 1716 (NS) by son John and Henry’s widow Margaret (then remarried to George Hutchins) to Samuel Jones, for 8000 lbs of tobacco. This would hint strongly that son Henry, legatee of THE DOWNS, was deceased, and that THE DOWNS and LAYTONS CONVENIENCY had reverted to Henry’s otherlegatees. An anachronism is that the Rent Roll entry for LC annotates this as the father’s survey, an apparent clerical glitch.

Executors: Levin Denwood, Sr. and Levin Denwood, Jr.
Witnesses: Dominick Coppinger, John White, John Stevens, George Hutchins, Thomas Hillman.

NB: Looks to me like he sold out in Dames Quarter and moved away about 1716

By his LW&T at MD Wills 17:024, proved 13 Sep 1721, Samuel Handy bequeathed "the tract bought from John Layton" to his son Thomas Handy. I have no idea what tract he means, in that the other lands above (LUNNS IMPROVEMENT and LUNNS INCREASE were sold by Layton to Samuel Jones on 09 Mar 1716 (NS) [So Deeds A:376]. I find no other So lands credited to John Layton.
APPENDIX I

This section contains branches of Laytons that cannot yet be connected to the main Delmarva Layton tree. In most cases, the similarity of names or the closeness of their homes to known members of the main tree indicates that there is a connection somewhere back in time. Toward the back of the Appendix are much smaller family groups, many compiled from obituaries and census reports.

§• 27 Dec 1827 Elizabeth Helm "Betsy" {1800-10~1849}
§•• 21 Jul 1849 Nancy Taylor {c1817~} b>MD

On 29 Dec 1827 Mills bought from Arthur Williams 46 acres of portions of "Assawoman" and "Rickards Chance." Mills and Elizabeth sold these tracts on 28 Mar 1835 to Joshua Johnson. The witnesses were Zadock Adelotte and Peleg Helm. The middle name "Harney" comes from these Sussex land transactions.

In 1810, the only Layton living near the Jacob Helm family was William Layton, 26-44 years old. In 1830 the only Layton living near Jacob was Eli Layton, 50-60 years old.

- Betsy was the dau of Jacob Helm and Mary Polly Walter. Peleg Walter Helm, Betsy's brother, signed the 1827 marriage bond with Mills. Ephraim H Willgus signed the 1849 bond.

On 22 Sep 1852, Peleg petitioned the Sussex Co Orphan's Court to appoint him guardian of Mary Eleanor Layton and Ebe Layton, "minor children of Elizabeth Layton of Baltimore 100." The petition said the minors were "entitled to real estate worth about $30 per year and no personal property. There was no mention of Jacob T Layton in the petition.

On 20 Sep 1854, John Dukes, husband of Mary Eleanor Layton, petitioned Sussex Orphan's Court to divide the land of Mills and Betsy, a tract of 52 acres in Baltimore 100. He reported that son Joshua Layton had now died, so the land should be divided between the couple's surviving children, Mary Eleanor and Ebe W. The court granted his application.

Nancy and son Jacob were living in Baltimore 100 in 1860. Nancy was living in the Baltimore 100 home of Jeremiah and Hester J Hudson in 1870 and 1880. Hester was Nancy's sister.

A Mary Layton, 22, was living next door to Mills and Nancy in 1850. She was deaf and dumb. It was not their daughter with the wrong age. Mary E, 18, was counted correctly in the home of Mills.

To help place Mills on the Layton family tree, it should be noted that when Peleg's estate was probated in 1866, he was owed money by John Layton and William Layton. Could this be the John W and William x Layton, the sons of Lovey Layton? They lived in the immediate neighborhood with Peleg.
