Blinded by a Ghost.

From The Hartford Herald (Hartford, KY)

December 27, 1899.

A case of total blindness was reported by the physicians of English, Indiana. The case is one very much similar to one reported several weeks ago in the East.

Ernest Andrews, a sober, young man, is the victim, and his story that he was blinded by a ghost which he met on three or four occasions near Doolittle Mills, influenced his neighbors to the belief that the young man is insane; to his misfortune Mr. Andrews reports that while passing in front of an old dwelling, he was ----- by a huge flame, from which issued a voice, telling him to pay a debt of more than $1,000 contracted by his uncle, now dead, or he would die by fire. The uncle died several years ago, and Ernest's mother is now the only immediate relative. The young man at first accepted the vision as a prank of some of the uncle's creditors, and he was told by his mother, now a widow, to pay no heed to the demands. Ernest is now blind and he is giving the matter serious thought.

Larry, Thank you for your Crawford Newsletter. Today I shoveled less than one inch of snow that fell last night. Warmer weather is predicted for Thursday which will melt most of our snow. I'm ready for the daffodils to bloom.

The William Kellems article has two errors on dates. 1742 should be 1842. (Actually 1-4-1843)

Jan 27, 1753 should be Jan 27, 1853.

Thanks, R Tucker

Re: My Crawford Co Newsletter for Jan 2010
 From: John Smeltzer <johnsmeltzer@comcast.net>
 To: Larry Burmeister <burmeisterlarry@yahoo.com>

Larry,

Thank you this is very well done and really interesting. One of the names that pops out at me (among several) is Bland Ballard. Our Smelser line, found in Crawford County during this 1820 - 1830 period, is also associated with the Ballard family (which includes several "Bland" Ballards) in Missouri, South Carolina and Louisiana (West Florida actually).

Other names associated with our Smelser line in this "part 2" include Goad, Peckinpough, Hall, Riddle, Tillman, Butt, Landis, Sturgeon, Jones, and Robertson.
