

DIED,

In Caracas, South America, on the 27th Decr. 1843, Dr. S. N. a few years past proprietor of Nashville Banner. He died in his 41st year. An American Minister, Allen A. Hall, Esq., late of N. ville.

In this city, on Thursday night, 14th inst., Mrs. 2 M. L. L., widow of Mr. Daniel McMillan, of this city.

The deceased was a pious and exemplary member of the 1st Presbyterian Church of this city, and was esteemed and respected by a large circle of acquaintances and friends. Those virtues which cluster around and lustre to the life and path of the devoted follower of Saviour, were exemplified in her life, and she gave assurance that the moment of her departure from world of care and sorrow, was to her but the beginning of a new, happy and blissful state of existence in company of angels and saints of the first and best and in the presence of God and the Lamb forever and forever more. There is a reward laid up in Heaven for those who serve God with love, diligence and purity on the earth—a sure inheritance—a never-fading crown! May those relatives and friends who have the benefit of this amiable lady's pious example, be enabled to obtain that reward and share with her that rich and glorious inheritance.

At the residence of Mr. James Cox, in this city, on the 20th of Decr. 1, 1843, Mr. Henry C. Cox, in the 57th year of his age.

Another pensioner is gone! Mr. Gannon was one of the noble band engaged in the Revolutionary struggle. When in youth, his active limbs delighted in the labors of the tented field; and he was ever found where enemy threatened or duty called. When old age came on, and he was so oppressed by its weight that he could no longer engage in the active scenes of life, he delighted himself with the thought that he had fought for a country whose freedom had been secured, and whose freedom would descend as a rich inheritance to posterity; a man in the decrepitude of old age, his eyes would glaze with all the ardor and enthusiasm of youth, while he related the interesting scenes of a bloody war, through which he had passed.

He had been a member of the Methodist Church years. In the heat of battle he found his God a support—in the perplexities of life a refuge—and in hours of a peaceful comforter. He ever showed to the world that he was not ashamed of the cause he had so early espoused. When he was conscious that his end was near, he testified to his children and grandchildren to weep not for him that he was going a better world, and rejoiced to the fact that he could recommend the religion he had so long professed, to his dying fellow-men. Thus after defending the liberties of his country, and earnestly contending for the kingdom of glory, having suffered a few days with acute pain, he sweetly fell asleep in the arms of his blessed Saviour, leaving an example worthy of imitation.
