

imprisoned, he gave to applicant a written discharge - Applicant states that two or three years after the campaign above mentioned he was drafted for a term of three months, and ordered to rendezvous at Pittsylvania Courthouse - he recollects of the militia of said County meeting there and of his marching into Halifax County and passing through Halifax town Virginia, when the army was met by an express who informed them that the object of their campaign had been accomplished or superseded, and the whole army was then and there discharged - applicant cannot at this time recollect but very little of this campaign there being no important incidents to fix it upon his memory - he cannot recollect the name of a single officer in command - he thinks he was out about five or six weeks - and he knows it was after his marriage which took place two or three years after his first campaign - Applicant states that sometime in the last of July or first of August 1781 he was drafted for three months and ordered to rendezvous at Roanoke-hall in said Pittsylvania County, Virginia, where he met his company and was enrolled in a company commanded by Captain Charles Williams, which company was attached to a Regiment commanded by Col. William Cox - Applicant states that his said Regiment marched on to old Hamstead where they remained a day or two and then marched ^{through} to old Williamsburg, to some place between there and Little York, where we met with a considerable force under the command of General Stephens who there took the command in Chief - Applicant states that Major Mervinether was in command in this campaign - he states that at the time he entered the service Sylvester Adams being a man of much wealth, furnished to the American army, a waggon and horses, and applicant was ordered by his said Captain Williams to drive the said waggon, and he continued to drive the said waggon until his Regiment met with Genl. Stephens as before mentioned, and he continued in the same service till the army reached Little York, where it remained until the capture of Cornwallis - During the siege of Yorktown applicant was employed in driving the said waggon in