A Bald Head may not inaptly be compared to a house without a thatching. It is exposed to the cold, and is altogether unsightly in aspect. Resort may be made to a wig, a scalp, or an assemblage of foreign hairs intermingled with the scanty material of original growth still vouchsafed to the bare scalp; but the effect is poor, and the disguise too apparent. Let those whose mirror assures them of the approach of baldness or the stealthy march of grey hairs assail the enemy in time. Let them employ the infallible restorative known as Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER, and laugh to scorn the impotency of years and their attempt to rob and disfigure humanity. To be obtained of all chemists and perfumers. Price 6s. 6d. per bottle. 1, and 116, Southampton-street, London, W. awf
