North Carolina in 1822

Cover Image: North Carolina in 1822.

When the last North Carolina county was formed in 1911, this brought the total number of counties to 100. Obviously, in a state the size of North Carolina, many of these counties are quite small.

In 1822, only about half of these 100 counties existed. So, the implications of this are that you must make sure that the county existed for the timeframe in question, and if it didn’t or if it was newly-formed, you might want to look into the history of the county to determine what county or counties it may have been formed from. While you’re doing this, you might want to check how close your ancestors lived to the county lines. This should not be a new concept to researchers - it is just a normal part of research.

I live in North Carolina. Since moving here, I have been surprised to learn a number of interesting facts about this state. As everyone in the US learned in grade school history classes, North Carolina was a holdout in joining the Union and ratifying the Constitution. They would not sign the Constitution until the Bill of Rights was added to it. What I hadn’t learned was why. During the time of the Regulators and such, prior to and during the Revolutionary War, each and every right that is listed in the Bill of Rights was violated in what was then Orange County, North Carolina. I always thought it was bizarre and very specific to mention the housing of troops in the Bill of Rights, but the reason is that this exact thing happened right here under the oppression of the colonial governor. North Carolinians wanted to be sure that this didn’t happen in their newly-formed country. The United States and the world in general is a very different place than it might have otherwise been because of the Bill of Rights, and North Carolina is in large measure to thank for it.

A number of important Revolutionary War battles were fought here, including Cowpens and Guilford Courthouse. Franklins were involved in both of these battles.

The state capital is now in Raleigh, but it wasn’t always. In fact, Raleigh became the capital in 1792 which seems like it was early in the history of the state, but was 130 years after the first colonists settled there.¹ The capital had previously been in Edenton and Hillsborough.

The largest Confederate surrender was negotiated here, about 12 miles from my home. After Sherman’s sweep through the south, he headed north again. On 26 Apr 1865, Confederate General Joseph Johnston negotiated the surrender of the armies² of Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida, to Union General William T. Sherman. This took place at a little farmhouse called “Bennett Place” just outside of what is now Durham.

Letter from the Editor

Continuing the Census Series, this issue is devoted to North Carolina. As many of you know, I have called North Carolina my home for the past 26 years. They’ve been good years. All of my children were born here. Speaking of whom, we’ve added a new granddaughter to our family. However, because our family only has daughters, we won’t be adding any Franklins...

This volume has taken a long, long time to produce. This is not because I have special access to records here (which I do), but rather because a lot of records are now available on the internet, and as you can see, in addition to the basic transcription work, I’ve written well over 300 footnotes. These add a tremendous amount of information to the census. I have not developed all of the implications of these footnotes as fully as they can be. There are dozens of FFRU articles that already cover these lineages, and there are dozens more articles that can and should be written using this information. In fact, one of the articles in the next volume does indeed document a North Carolina Franklin family.

This is the official state toast:

Here’s to the land of the long leaf pine,
The summer land where the sun doth shine,
Where the weak grow strong and the strong grow great,
Here’s to “Down Home,” the Old North State!

312. Possibly the same Richard Gwyn mentioned in Charity C. Franklin’s Surry County will of 1881, although he seems to be too old to be mentioned in a will when he was age 86. See FFRU Volume 56. Richard Gwyn was also the executor of Median C. Franklin’s will in 1851 in Surry County, see FFRU Volume 56. There is more on the Franklins and Gwyns in FFRU Volume 56.

313. Do not confuse this Amelia Gwyn (born 1848) with the Ann Amelia Gwyn (born 1821) who married Columbus Bernard Franklin. Ann Amelia died 11 years before this census.
