OBJECT TO VROOMAN ACT

Some Residents of Pasadena Streets Prefer Former Method of Oiling Highways

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD. PASADENA, June 29.—Owners of over 2000 feet of the frontage of Galena street put on file at the office of the city clerk this afternoon their protest against having that street oiled as proposed by the city council.

As soon as the city set on foot proceedings to oil Euclid avenue as proposed under the Vrooman act, by which each property owner pays his pro rata share of the expense instead of having the job done by the city and from the general improvement fund, property owners there began to protest.

It looks as though the friends of the oiling proposition are in the majority there after all, but the majority of frontage will alone determine, and that will be the matter.

Other sections took up the refrain of opposition, and now the council has a distressing swarm about its ears.

On any one street at the general expense of the city was popular to the man who resided on that street, but oiling to be paid for by the individual property owners at an estimated cost of $10 for each sixty-foot frontage does not appear to be as desirable.

The time for the legal filing of protests began Tuesday, and they have been coming in fast. Even South Orange Grove avenue does not take kindly to the proposition to cover the thoroughfare with liquid asphalt, and is preparing a protest.

Lively times are promised for the city fathers this summer if they persist in making use of the Vrooman act in passing out street improvements, as appears to be their intention.

SAYS CLAUSE IS ILLEGAL Crown City Authorities Complain of Action of Edison Electric Company

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD. PASADENA, June 29.—A movement is on foot looking to the bringing up before the city council of another phase of the local Edison Electric company's operations, this time with the individual consumer.

Some weeks ago it was learned that the consumer who desired to use the Edison company's light was being called upon to sign a contract binding him for three years and requiring that should he sever his business connection with the Edison people he would not apply for electric light service from any other local company.

Representatives of the local company now having a monopoly of this field do not deny that such a phrase is in their contract, but deny that the company intends ever to enforce this part of the contract.

It is placed there, they say, merely as a safeguard should the occasion ever require its use.

City Attorney Wood says that such a clause in the agreement, presumably under duress is certainly null and void and cannot be enforced.

Citizens are complaining of this new phase to Mayor Waterhouse, and it is probable that the city council will be asked to take cognizance of the matter.

WILL FIGHT WAR OVER AGAIN

SPANISH WAR VETERANS ARE EN ROUTE HERE

Advance Guard Opens Headquarters and Hundreds Are Coming—Go Into Camp at Long Beach

The advance guard of the United Spanish War veterans which will meet in Long Beach on July 2, 3 and 4, the occasion of the third annual encampment of that body, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday.

Edward F. Schulz, department adjutant, is in charge of the advance guard and department headquarters will be maintained at the Hotel Parkersham during the visit of the veterans in Southern California.

Immediately after the arrival of Adjutant Schulz and the advance guard the former was met by representatives from Roosevelt camp No. 9, the local branch of the order, and went to Long Beach to complete arrangements for the encampment.

Twenty-three different camps will be represented in Southern California during the grand encampment, a total of 2000 members from all parts of the state will be present with its delegates.

On the morning of Sunday, July 1, a special train will leave San Francisco at 9:25 which is scheduled to arrive here at 11:54 the same night.

Hundreds Coming Hundreds of the visitors will come on that train and hotels in Los Angeles will be taxed to their utmost capacity.

Among those to arrive yesterday were T. L. Syvertson, senior vice commander of the order, and George S. Geis, aide de camp, who will be commander of the Long Beach camp. The encampment in Southern California will be named Camp McKinley.

The convention will open Monday morning, July 2, at 10:30 o'clock in the armory hall at the corner of West Eighth and South Spring streets. Gen. Robert Wankowicz will preside at the meeting. Mayor McLaughlin will deliver the address of welcome.

The afternoon of the same day will be taken up with a trolley trip to the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle and a visit to Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice.

Chutes Park Soiree Tuesday afternoon and evening, July 3, there will be a general reunion and "getting acquainted" soiree at Chutes park. On that occasion all the features of the park will be thrown open to the visitors—except the menagerie, say the local members of the order.

At 6 o'clock the same evening a banquet will be spread at the armory hall. At the banquet khaki uniforms, blue shirts, leggings and campaign hats will be worn and will form an interesting feature of the encampment.

During the encampment it is said the fight for the next department encampment will take root. The outlook at present indicates that the struggle will rest with Monterey and Sacramento.

Among the arrivals yesterday was William Needham, department quartermaster, who gave voice to the above opinion. He was supported by nearly all of the arrivals and the members of Roosevelt camp, No. 9.

TWO HEIRS SUE FOR HADDOCK'S ESTATE

RELATIVES OF FINANCIER ASK INJUNCTION

Would Prevent Widow From Selling Any Property Until Litigation is Settled—Spirit Suggestion Figures in Unique Case

The dispute of the relatives of the millionaire Charles S. Haddock over his million dollar estate was begun in earnest yesterday morning when attorneys for the relatives, Frank Haddock and Mrs. Sara Haddock Whitsett, filed petition in injunction before Judge Wilbur in department eight of the superior court in which they asked that the widow or her heirs be enjoined from selling any of the property until the suit is settled.

According to the affidavits read in court yesterday Haddock took up the practice of spiritualism and married a spiritualist. Under the direction of a Prof. Donovan, it is alleged, Haddock bought mining property and became infatuated with two female spooks named "Fat Mary" and "Bright Mary."

Haddock married a second time before his death and the widow got all the estate. Now the grandchildren ask for a division.

SCOUT AWAITS CALL FROM CHIEF

CANANEA TROUBLES ARE FAR FROM ENDED

Government Official Expects to Have Interview With President Roosevelt on Subject of Existing Prejudices

The recent trouble in Cananea, in which several American miners and Mexicans were killed in bloody riots, may yet result in sensational news for the residents of the United States, according to inferences from remarks made by Charles A. Montgomery.

The latter has been connected with work for the United States government in Mexico for more than thirty-eight years. Mr. Montgomery, who is at present in Los Angeles and a guest at the Hollenbeck hotel, says that he is here awaiting a message from the secretary to President Roosevelt telling the famous scout to come at once to Washington.

At present Mr. Montgomery says that all he knows is that he must be there by July 15.

When seen last night, Mr. Montgomery said: "There is more than a labor union strike behind the trouble in Cananea."

"I am not at liberty to discuss my opinions on the subject, except to say that the racial prejudice existing between the Americans and the Mexicans in Cananea is a very delicate matter."

PAYS $2 FOR ONE BLOW

"You wouldn't talk that way to me if I were not in uniform. You are a coward," is the alleged statement of Street Car Conductor McAllister to J. W. Snowden a few days ago on a Santa Monica car. When Snowden took offense at the remark and struck the conductor McAllister swore out a warrant for the arrest of the man.

Before Judge Chambers yesterday morning the defendant was fined $2 for hitting the conductor. The fine was paid and Snowden went his way.

Coad then committed suicide. Williams will recover.

Coad, it is said, deserted his wife last January. In April she was granted a divorce and opened a boarding house.

SIXTH WARDERS IN LIVELY FIGHT

chairman. Houghton carried the day, for the votes of the anti on the outside could not be counted.

Adjourn to Larger Hall

It was uncomfortable standing in the crowded hall and an adjournment was taken to Adams hall, just above the league headquarters. Believing that he had the largest following, Houghton readily agreed to the larger quarters and a shouting, howling mob of nearly 300 men and boys, each with the expectant light of battle in his eyes, stamped up the stairs.

Five times Fennessy attempted to make himself heard, and each time Houghton yelled a little louder. With Fennessy and Houghton bellowing at each other their adherents thought it time to take a hand, and a wordy fight began at once that did not subside until Sergeant Lenhausen and his men brought the meeting to a swift close.

Mays is Unheard

Amid all the din Acting Chairman Mays was saying something. That what he said will be forever lost to posterity, for no one could hear a word he uttered, but in a temporary lull he said:

"I have been elected the regular chairman of this meeting, and I will use my privilege to turn the chair over to Dock Houghton."

With Houghton in the chair it seemed he had won the day, but Fennessy continued his frantic attempts to place Hay in control.

Disregarding his opponents with fine scorn, Houghton proceeded to put into execution some rules of order that would have turned Car Cannon green with envy.

He asked Secretary Grosser to read the minutes of the last meeting. This last meeting happened to have been held immediately after the banquet last Friday evening, when Houghton and his cohorts were in control, and they had then passed resolutions sustaining President John Welch for conductor unbecomingly a gentleman and an officer of the club and for insulting a guest of honor, which guest happened to be Houghton.

Makes Effort to Read

The secretary made a noble effort to read the minutes, but Welch, Hay and Fennessy all rose to points of order at once. Although they waved their hands and read the minutes himself he could not seem to see them somehow and refused to recognize any points of order from anyone. He wanted those minutes read and proposed to declare them carried if no one voted in their favor. By suspending Welch from the club he could rid himself of one of his bitterest enemies in the Sixth ward.

Hay, Fennessy and Welch yelling for the attention of the chair seemed to be a prearranged signal for a general "rough house" among the anti-Houghtonites. They stamped and bellowed, and made threats of personal violence, but nothing daunted, Houghton grabbed the secretary's book from his hands and read the minutes himself in thundering tones. Houghton's voice is the biggest thing about his person.

In the midst of a perfect bedlam, Dock put the question as to whether or not the minutes should be approved. This brought forth such a fierce clamor for a roll call that Houghton had to capitulate on this point, and seizing a list of names from the secretary and naming A. Niemyer and Gus Mays, two of his best friends, as tellers, he started to call the roll. He could not call for about two minutes it appeared
