

Club and several other organizations, and won the all-around championship in 1887, 1890, and 1891. The funeral will be held to-morrow at his late residence at 1:30 P. M.

Mrs. JAMES W. WALLICK, the wife of the playwright and actor, died yesterday at Middletown, N. Y., after an illness of several months. Mr. Wallick and his wife were known principally to the theatre-going public of the east side, where they were great favorites. They played at the old Third Avenue, the Windsor, Thalia, and People's Theatres, and produced among other melodramas "The Bandit King" and "The Cattle King," in which they introduced horses on the stage.

Funeral of William G. Wheeler.

The funeral of William Griswold Wheeler took place Saturday at his old home, Keene, N. H., where he died. A number of well-known New Yorkers attended the services. Mr. Wheeler was prominent in financial circles, having had active control of the Corbin Banking Company. He was also a Director and moving power in the Long Island Railroad Company, and was largely identified with all the improvements at Manhattan Beach. His long and arduous devotion to business ruined his health and forced his retirement.

His widow, formerly Miss Adèle Durant, and a son, William Griswold Wheeler, Jr., survive him and inherit a large fortune.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Mary Ella Pratt Houghton.

Mary Ella Pratt, the wife of Prof. Henry C. Houghton, and President of the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, died suddenly of cerebral apoplexy on Sunday night at her home, 7 West Thirty-ninth Street. Mrs. Houghton was born in Yarmouth, Me., fifty-three years ago, and was educated at Mount Holyoke College. She left college in 1868 and married Dr. Houghton Dec. 29 of that year. Immediately after their marriage, Dr. and Mrs. Houghton settled in this city, and both joined the New England Church, in which Mrs. Houghton was baptized by immersion by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

While in the New England Church, Mrs. Houghton formed a friendship that was lifelong with Helen E. Brown, the poetess, who interested her in the work of the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, of which organization Mrs. Houghton soon became one of the Board of Managers. She was in succession a member of the Executive Committee, Vice President, and President.

After the disbandment of the New England Church, Mrs. Houghton joined the Church of the Disciples, and on the disruption of that church she reverted with her husband to the Broadway Tabernacle, where she was an active member up to the time of her death, and for many years associated with the Society for Woman's Work. She was a member and one of the organizers of the New York and Brooklyn Alumnae of Mount Holyoke College, and was instrumental in securing some large gifts for the building of the new Mount Holyoke College.

Her husband and a brother and sister survive her. Mrs. Houghton had a severe attack of nervous prostration about eight weeks ago, and was confined to her bed up to Sunday night, when the final apoplectic stroke caused her death. The time of the funeral services, which will be held in the Broadway Tabernacle, has not been decided upon. The body will be shipped to Yarmouth, Me., for interment.

Thomas A. Ledwith.

Thomas A. Ledwith, who died on Friday last at his home, 28 West Seventy-second Street, was at one time prominent in this community, but for some years he had lived retired from public view. He was a native of New York City, having been born here in 1840. He studied law, and entered politics as a Democrat, but an active opponent of Tammany Hall. He obtained a considerable following and was elected to the Assembly in 1862, and then a Police Justice. To the latter office he was re-elected in 1869. In 1870 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Mayoralty. In 1871 he made his peace with and joined Tammany Hall, and was a candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, being defeated by George C. Barrett. He was elected to the State Senate in 1874 and then quitted public life.

Dr. William H. Johnston.

Dr. William H. Johnston, brother of Gov. Joseph F. Johnston, and one of the founders and the Dean of the Birmingham Medical College at Birmingham, Ala., died Sunday night from apoplexy, aged seventy-nine years. He was born in Lincoln County, N. C., educated in the State University, and served gallantly in the Twenty-third North Carolina Regiment, Confederate Army. After the war he was graduated in medicine at the University of the City of New York, was eighteen months at Bellevue Hospital, and practiced a while in New York City. In 1872 he moved to Selma, Ala., and in 1886 to Birmingham. He was in active and successful practice to the time of his death, and held important positions in medical associations. A widow and four children survive him.

Emil H. P. Mehl.

Emil H. P. Mehl died at his home, 912 Summit Avenue, Jersey City, on Sunday, from Bright's disease. Mr. Mehl was born in Germany in 1847. His parents came to this country in 1848. His father established a pocketbook manufactory on the Heights, and the deceased subsequently became head of the firm. Later it became an incorporated company, with Mr. Mehl as President. Mr. Mehl was at one time a member of the Board of Education under Mayor Wanser. He was also a Director of the Peoples Safe Deposit Company and several building and loan associations. He is survived by his widow, two sons, and two daughters.
