

Clippings.

The family of Dr. John B. Lewis mourn the loss of a pet to which they had become very much attached. It is a brilliant-plumaged grosbeak and is valued so highly that Dr Lewis would gladly pay a liberal reward for its return. The bird has been a member of the household since July 4, 1892, when it fell out of the nest and was taken care of by the ladies of Dr. Lewis's family. After the bird had learned to feed itself and had grown strong enough, it repaid its benefactors by learning various tricks and showing its affection in many ways.

AN APRIL NIGHT.

The air is trembling with a burdened sigh,
And scudding clouds shed dripping tears.
Shrill pipings from the swampy grounds
Pleasantly greet my listening ears.
I know the summer now is nigh.

* * * *

Then smile on me again, thou April night;
Lay off your sable garb, and throw aside
Your gloom, while through the fleecy clouds,
O moon in glorious beauty, calmly ride.
In hope and loving trust I will delight.

ALBERT LEWIS.

At a conference between U. S. Inspector Faison, Gov. Jones, Judge Polson and District Attorney Lewis of the Choctaw Nation it was decided that Sillan Lewis and Simeon Wade, the leaders of the Choctaws under sentence of death, should die Sept. 8.

The locomotive engineers of the Norwich & Worcester road presented Mr. Eugene Lewis, who after twenty-seven years of work in the shops recently left the road to place in use the patent packing invented by himself and Mr. F. T. Whaley, with a solid gold watch chain. Engineer A. A. Walker alighted from his cab and made a neat presentation speech in which he voiced the appreciation of the engineers of Mr. Lewis' invention and the regard in which they hold him from long association and fellowship. Mr. Lewis made an appropriate response.

The Holland Land Company.

Extracts from a valuable paper read by Simeon D. Lewis, of Warsaw, N. Y., at the twenty-first annual festival of the Wyoming (N. Y.) Pioneer Association held at Silver Lake, Aug. 3, 1893.

I have been requested to present in this paper, a few facts touching the early history of the Holland Purchase, and the methods adopted by the Holland Land Company, and their successors, to dispose of their lands, and to develop the country included in their purchase.

Charles I. had in 1663 granted to the Duke of York and Albany, the province of New York which included the present state of New Jersey, extending from a line twenty miles east of the Hudson river to some western point not definitely stated. This was land already granted to the Plymouth company, and this eventually caused a collision of interests between the state of New York and the state of Massachusetts. Afterwards both of these states ceded to the United States all their rights of proprietorship to lands west of a meridian line, running south from the "western bend" of lake Ontario. The conflicting claims of New York and Massachusetts to the lands now included within the boundary of this state were finally settled by a convention of commissioners, which met in Hartford, Conn., in December, 1786. As proposed by this convention, Massachusetts deeded to New York all lands west of a line twenty-one miles east of the Hudson river, and New York deeded to Massachusetts all lands in New York lying west of a meridian line, running from the Pennsylvania line north, through the center of Seneca lake to Lake Ontario, reserving, however, a strip one mile wide along the east bank of the Niagara river.

The state of Massachusetts sold these lands, which amounted to about 6,000,000 acres, which included the Holland purchase, to Nathaniel Gorman and Oliver Phelps for $1,000,000 to be paid in three equal annual installments. They had the privilege of paying this sum in certain scrip of the state of Massachusetts, which at that time could be purchased for about 25 per cent. of its par value. Before the second payment became due this scrip advanced to par, and Messrs. Phelps and Gorham were unable to meet their payments. Suit was brought and after some litigation a settlement was finally effected, by which Phelps and Gorham conveyed back to the state of Massachusetts the lands they had not already sold, in settlement of the claim of the state against them. The land they had sold was on the eastern part of the original purchase, and has since been known as the Phelps and Gorham purchase.

May 11, 1791, the state of Massachusetts sold to Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, (the financier of the Revolutionary war) all of their lands lying west of a meridian, beginning at a point in the north line of the state of Pennsylvania, twelve miles west of the southwest corner of the Phelps and Gorham purchase, and running to Lake Ontario. That part of these lands included in the Holland purchase was conveyed by Robert Morris and wife, in four separate deeds, to certain persons as trustees for a number of merchants living in the city of Amsterdam, Holland. This was done for the reason that these men, being aliens, could not hold title to real estate under the laws of New York. Subsequently numerous conveyances of these lands were made until finally by two special acts of the legislature, these alien owners of the land were enabled to take and hold legal title to it and convey the same by attorney. The New York State Gazetteer gives the following twelve names as the men who constituted the original company: Wilhem Willink, Jacob Willink, Nicholas Van Staphorst, Jacob Van Staphorst, Nicholas Hubbard, Pieter Van Eeg-hen, Christian Van Eeghen, Isaac Ten Cate, Hendrick Vollenhofer, Christina Coster, Jan Stadnitski, and Rutger J. Schimmelpennink. These gentlemen were known as the Holland Land Company.

It was, however, with Joseph Ellicott, the original surveyor of the purchase, and who was appointed the local agent of the company, that the settlers transacted their business. Mr. Ellicott seems to have been a man of great executive ability. For many years he had charge of this business of the company, and solved with great skill the many difficult and perplexing problems, necessarily incident to so great a trust.

The terms upon which the lands of the company were originally placed on sale, seems to have been on time, with a payment down of 10 per cent., but with a liberal reduction in price for all cash. Mr. Ellicott, however, soon learned that comparatively few of the pioneers were able to pay 10 per cent. of the purchase price down, and in obedience to his advice, this rule was so modified that men were able to obtain contracts for purchase of land upon the payment of a nominal sum. These contracts always commenced with the words "Articles of Agreement," etc., and hence they soon came to be denominated "Articles." I remember distinctly of hearing men speak of having an "Article" of their land. I also remember of hearing it stated that Mr. Ellicott sometimes gave men "Articles" of their land for the nominal sum of $1 and in some instances even for 50 cents. His theory evidently was to induce men to settle on the land, knowing that they would at least make a small clearing, and probably build a log house, dig a well and make other improvements, thus enhancing its value; and thus if the original purchaser was unable to finally make his payments, he would either abandon it with its improvements, or sell what he termed his "betterments" to some one else, who would pay for it. In this I think he reasoned wisely. That the general treatment of the early settlers by the company was helpful, as well as considerate and merciful, is I think indisputable. In numerous instances, men who failed to meet their payments were granted a renewal of their contracts; often at the original price, releasing any claim for unpaid interest. Not only this but the company also did a great deal for the settlers in opening up roads through the forest, in encouraging the building of mills, and establishing schools and churches.

June 25, 1835, the Holland Land company sold to Graham H. Chapin, 11,988½ acres in the town of Orangeville. Mr. Chapin sold some of these lands to settlers, and afterwards sold his entire interests, both in lands, contracts and mortgages, to Samuel Hubbard and others, trustees under the will of James Lloyd, deceased, of Boston, Mass.

In December, 1835, the company contracted to sell to Heman J. Redfield and Jacob LeRoy all their unsold lands, and January 9, 1836, this contract was assigned by Redfield and LeRoy to the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, of New York.

October 10, 1836, the Holland Land Co. executed a tripartite deed, to Redfield and LeRoy of the second part and the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, of the third part, conveying all their unsold lands in the 2,000,000 acre tract, situated in the counties of Genesee (which then included Wyoming) Orleans, Erie, and Niagara.

A more beautiful country than Western New York cannot be found, and we who are not acquainted with the enterprise, intelligence, and wealth of the people of the Holland Purchase in this good year 1893, and who have seen the thriving cities and villages, the railroads and factories, the schools and churches, which abound throughout this fair land, can hardly realize that 100 years ago it was an unbroken forest, occupied only by wild beasts and Indians; that where the great city of Buffalo now is at the beginning of this century was the little hamlet of New Amsterdam with only two or three log houses, and that in fact this whole territory was an unbroken wilderness.

These changes have been brought about through great labor and privation by as brave and heroic a people as any mentioned in history. Further, I think I am justified in the assertion that many of these brave souls would have met failure in the wilderness had not the Holland Land Co. and their successors adopted toward them the liberal and generous policy which I have endeavored to describe. To these merchants of Holland, their successors and their agents therefore, I think we should credit a part of the honor which we most cheerfully give to the pioneers of the Holland Purchase, for the wealth, glory and beauty of heritage we have received from their hands.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used; as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter;

unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc Instead of repeating the name of a place in the same paragraph initials only are frequently given. Any person whose record shows their death before twenty years of age will be considered as dying unmarried and their names will not appear the second time unless for some special reason.

The following is as important now as when first written for an earlier volume of the LEWIS LETTER. "It is especially desirable to have one chapter in each Book in every issue of the paper, not only that the records of each branch of the race may be published contemporaneously but also that all subscribers may be equally interested in the work. All subscribers are solicited to send their records to this office for publication. All correspondence intended for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet in ink and the Book to which it belongs should be indicated when ever known. Write names and dates plainly.

'People who do not take pride in remote ancestry, will never achieve anything to be remembered by their remote descendants.'

MACAULAY."

Hints for Contributors

In writing matter for the printer use only one side of the sheet, note paper preferred. In giving dates, give year, month and day whenever known. Write all middle names in full. Answer the following questions as fully as possible and give names and addresses of such people as you think may be able to complete the record but get it yourself if possible and spare the editor. Old newspaper files, tomb stones, family Bibles and records, official records of the town, school and church, burial certificates, county and probate records, old deeds and letters are some of the more important sources of information. Don't forget however the stores of information which the old people can give—

Get them interested and then "pump them dry." It has been truthfully said that "it is not for them to judge of the value of their recollections, but rather for those who inherit them." Most important of all, don't get discouraged yourself. How can you interest others, if you yourself are not alive with enthusiasm?

Family Record Questions.

1. Name in full; initials are often a source of confusion.
2. When and where born?
3. When and where married and by whom?
4. To whom married? Always give name in full and in case of the wife give her maiden name.
5. Give date of birth of your "better half or halves."
6. Give cause, place and date of death.
7. Names of parents-in-law, being sure to give maiden name of your mother-in-law.
8. Place or places of residence.
9. What is your occupation?
10. When and where educated?
11. What public office have you held and when?
12. What service in army or navy?
13. What traditions in your family?
14. Give any interesting events in family history.
15. Name of your children with places and dates of birth.
16. If they are married answer questions 3 to 15 inclusive for them.
17. Dates of death for ch. dying unem.
18. Names of your brothers and sisters with dates of birth and as much more of their family history as you can give or obtain from them the complete record and send.
19. Names of your parents. Be sure to give your mother's maiden name with names of her parents.

20. Dates of their birth, marriage and death.
21. Names of your father's parents.
22. Dates of their birth, marriage and death.
23. Names of their children with dates of birth.
24. Any further history of these uncles and aunts that you can obtain.
25. Anything you can learn of your earlier ancestry. Much of this will probably be fragmentary. It is one object of the LEWISIANA to make this complete for you but you must do your part.

CHAPTER XCIII (JAMES).

REV. DAVID LEWIS v. chap. 86.

"He was licensed on Saturday and started to preach on the next Monday. Having traveled Durham and Fletcher circuits under the elder, he was admitted in 1811 to the N. Y. Conference, and filled the following appointments: Grand Isle, Brandon, Charlotte, Brandon, Pownal, Cambridge, Bearn, Kingston. In 1826 he moved to Ohio and filled Fairfield, Delaware, Pickaway, Deer Creek, Marietta, Adelpia, Granville, Littiopolis and Hebron; Hebron, Granville, Blendon, Johnston, Irville, Hebron, Thornville, Granville, Hebron, Baltimore, Pickerington, Groveport. He filled his appointments with great acceptability and usefulness, having preached the Gospel fifty-eight years. Mr. Lewis was a man of clear understanding, great courage and pure heart. He was emphatically the young man's friend. His person was manly and commanding, his voice strong, clear and musical, his gestures easy and graceful. To the day he died he kept up with the times. Great success attended his ministry. Thousands will rise up to call him blessed. His last were his best days. Grace divine had sweetened and sanctified his spirit for the better land. His last illness was protracted, and he suffered much but enjoyed for weeks the complete triumphs of grace. To most who read this, Mr. Lewis is only known as a feeble and worn man. They have seen his ripe piety, his cheerful and hopeful spirit. But the laborious and efficient Lewis of forty years since, they did not know. Then his zeal was a furnace, his eyes a flame, his voice a trumpet, while with his eloquent appeals he stirred the masses as the storm stirs the forests. After professing Christ for seventy years, as he approached life's close all was joy. On being asked by the writer how it looked beyond the flood, he exclaimed, 'Light, brother, light! Tell my brethren of the Ohio Conference that in death as in life, I am with them for the conversion of the world.' Thus surrounded by his aged wife and remaining children, he passed sweetly away on the 1st of August, 1867, aged eighty-four years and five months. Few men have lived to be more beloved, few have died more regretted."

"He left his father's house at Vernon, N. Y., in the spring of 1807, and made his way on foot, much of the way through a wilderness to Orangeville, Wyoming Co., N. Y., where he bought some land in what was then an almost unbroken forest. This farm he owned when he died. Here he and his wife literally hewed out for themselves and their children a home. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. In the war of 1812 he was in active service holding a commission as ensign from Governor Daniel D. Tompkins. He was frequently elected to important town offices. He represented Genesee county in the Legislature, in the years 1834 and 1835, and was the first treasurer of Wyom. Co. For something like fifteen years he was the agent for Wyoming Co. of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of New York, and for the town of Orangeville, of the trustees under the will of James Lloyd, deceased, of Boston, Mass. These parties were the successors of the old Holland Land Company, and at the time they held a very large number of mortgages and owned a great number of farms in that part of Wyoming county included in the Holland Land Company's purchase [v. "The Holland Land Company" in another column of this number. Ed.] This business entrusted to him was therefore one of great magnitude. He so discharged his duties, however, as to both merit and receive the most gratifying commendation of the companies he represented, and the thanks and confidence of all persons occupying these lands, and liable to pay these mortgages; who everywhere expressed their gratitude for his kindness and forbearance, and their perfect faith in his integrity and justice. After closing up his business he came to Warsaw, N. Y., and spent the last seven years of his life with the writer, at whose home he died. He was a man of great executive ability, of eminent good judgment, and of the strictest integrity. He was also a genial, companionable man, possessing an inexhaustible fund of anecdotes, with which he often entertained his friends."

BOOK XXXV.

ROBERT LEWIS, 17th Century, Wales to Gloucester-co., Va.

CHAPTER V.

Colonel Bird Willis who m. Mary the third child of Col. Fielding and Bettie (Washington) Lewis v. Vol. III p. 91 lived at Willis Hall, near Fredericksburg, Va. About 1826 he with his family—wife, three sons and four daughters, one married daughter remained in Virginia—removed to Florida renting a house on Mourou st., southeast of the State House, in Tallahassee.

Of their children, Catherine D, b. 1803, Aug. 17 at Willis Hall near Fredericksburg, Va., is the subject of a very interesting memoir by Matilda L. McConnell in the Century for August 1893. We read that "Catherine was not only a child of engaging manners, but she possessed a beauty which increased as she advanced in age. At the age of fifteen she was married to Mr. Gray, a Scotch gentleman, and a neighbor of her father. In a little over a year Mr. Gray died, leaving his young wife a widow and a mother at the age of sixteen. The child survived its father but a short time."

She then made her father's house her home; "and here it was that the young and beautiful widow Catherine Gray first saw Prince Achille Murat (Napoleon Achille b. 1801, Jan'y 21 the eldest son of Joachim Murat the King of Naples and Caroline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon I. Ed.), who being exiled from France and Italy, had a short time previous, selected Florida as his home. *** She was not pleased with him at first; for though he was a man of education, and could entertain a company by the hour with his remarkable memory and genius, still he had allowed himself to fall into such careless habits that he did not at all approach the beau-ideal of the delicately nurtured and fastidious lady. It was only after listening to the persuasion of her parents, and seeing the constant devotion of Achille, that she could look with a favorable eye upon his suit. However, on the 30th of July, 1826 the two—the nephew of Napoleon Bonaparte and the grand niece of George Washington—were married. The couple soon moved to Lipona, Prince Murat's plantation in Jefferson county. *** A constant round of gaiety was kept up, all unnecessary etiquette being laid aside. Thus were passed many happy years, Mme. Murat still enlivening all with her attractive society, and the Prince passing his time in the acquisition of learning."

Both bore a striking resemblance to their illustrious uncles—he to the Emperor and she to the Father of his country.

This resemblance was the cause of their leaving Belgium where for two years he had the command of a regiment in the Belgian service. They drifted to London, at that time the Medina of the Bonapartes. "It was the pride of Prince Murat's heart to see his lovely Kate prove herself, by her beauty and graceful manners, in no way inferior to the courtly ladies with whom she was in daily intercourse. The Bonaparte family was at that time exiled by France and Italy, and when the Prince and Princess Murat made London their home, they enjoyed the society of the imperial family, as well as that of other distinguished Europeans and of many Americans of note, among whom were Washington Irving and John Randolph of Roanoke. Louis Napoleon was their constant guest; and at that time he predicted that, at a future day, he would be on the throne of France, often saying, 'When I am emperor, Cousin Kate, you shall have a chateau and everything you want, in return for your kindness to me now.'"

Several amusing but interesting incidents of domestic life, Prince Murat's exploits in dyeing and sugar making, his business failures, his service in the Florida Indian war, all must be omitted here.

"After a lingering illness, Prince Murat died April 15, 1847. His remains were deposited in the Episcopal cemetery at Tallahassee. His widow bought a house called Belle Vue, two miles from the city and there made her residence. She was, however, so much attached to Econhattie (her husband's last plantation in Jefferson-co.) that the premises were always kept in repair, and she spent a great deal of time there every year. Had Prince Murat lived a few years longer, he would have seen the restoration of the Bonapartes, which he had so long hoped for and expected. Louis Napoleon did not then forget his kind 'cousin Kate', and when the Bonaparte family assembled in Paris, she was there also, and was received by the emperor with appropriate honor as a princess of France. At the same time he bestowed upon her forty thousand dollars (made an annuity early in 1866), and the privilege of using the royal livery, which she did during the remainder of her life. She was invited to dine with the emperor, was conducted by the grand chamberlain to an elevated seat in the drawing room of the palace, where a large party of guests were assembled. She did not know that she occupied the seat of honor until her ears caught the words, 'La Princesse Achille—'La Princesse Achille Murat,' whispered around the room."

"The emperor tried hard to persuade the princess to make her home in France offering to fulfil his promise of giving her 'a chateau and everything she wanted.' But her love for her Florida home, added to the responsibility she felt as the mistress of two hundred slaves, bequeathed to her by her husband, caused her to decline his kind offer and to return to America. * * * Settled now at Belle Vue, the princess continued her wonted hospitality to the poor as well as to the rich. Her delightful entertainments and her many deeds of charity, unostentatiously bestowed will long be remembered. Those in trouble found her a sympathizing friend, and she always took the part of the oppressed. She was made Vice-Regent of the Mount Vernon Association of Florida, and by her great liberality and energy succeeded in raising in the State nearly three thousand dollars towards the preservation of the Washington home."

In 1866, by the advice of her physicians she again visited Europe and returned after a most pleasureable stay with her health apparently restored. But the slow typhoid fever still lurked in her system and after a lingering illness of five months she died 1867, Aug. 6, and was buried in Tallahassee by the side of her husband.

EXPLANATION:—The Roman numerals at the left denote the generations. Stars are placed after the names of the youngest member of each family. All on the same line are of the same generation, and hence are cousins with the exception of names between the stars which are brothers and sisters. If you preserve your copies, and of course you do, send for an extra copy, cut this page into strips on the division lines and paste the strips together. Then you will have a complete diagram of your family so far as it has been published. All additions and corrections you can furnish will be very thankfully received.
