DIPLOMA AWARDED

The Lewis Knitting Company, Janesville, Wisconsin.

[By the Courtesy of the W. W. Potter Co., Publishers of National Magazine, Boston, Mass.]

Perhaps Janesville has been better advertised to the world through the enterprise of the Parker Pen Company and the Lewis Knitting Works than all the other enterprises combined. In their respective lines both companies are leaders, having established world-wide reputations, and in so doing have carried the name Janesville into thousands of homes.—National Magazine.

[The President of this company is S. B. Lewis and its Secretary and Treasurer, F. F. Lewis. They trace their line back to David Lewis, perhaps of New London, Conn., who in 1785 Anna Burrows—Ed.]

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.*Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used. as b. for born: d. died: m. married: m. (1) first wife: dau. daughter: unm: not married: v. p. see page, etc.

Anson after the death of his parents in 1823 came to Ohio with $100 and arranged to buy a farm at Tallmadge. He returned to Conn. and worked for Seth Thomas to earn the money for its purchase. While in Ohio he had wooed one of the same name though not related. Letters were few, postage being 25 cents a letter, and mother was often chided for her devotion to a stranger who would never return. He did return in 1831, paid for his farm, then an unbroken forest, and erected a frame house instead of the more common log cabin. A man of sterling virtues his death was a loss to the church and community as well as to his children who were only beginning to learn what kind parents were theirs, and to appreciate the home of which all have only pleasant memories. 4 ch b Tallmadge, O.

CHAPTER CXCVIII.

A CONNECTICUT CLIPPING.

Last Friday's (Dec. 15, 1899) papers chronicle two princely gifts by Stony Creek summerpeople. Mrs. J.H. Chapin (v p 149 Vol. IV) of Meriden has endowed the chair of mineralogy and geology of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., for the sum of $30,000. The chair is to be called the Chapin lectureship in memory of the husband of Mrs. Chapin who taught geology so long there. The other gift was by the family of the late Mrs. Harriet Lewis, (v p 164 Vol. IX) widow of Hon. I. C. Lewis who contributed $10,000 to St. Lawrence University for the purpose of establishing a professorship for women. The University whose funds have been so beneficently replenished, is an institution under the direction of the Universalists of which church the Lewises are members.

Sarah (1332) m Aug. 2, 1807, Harvey b 1781, son of Roger (Oliver, Ephraim, William) and Prudence (Butler) Goodrich of Wethersfield, Stepney Parish, now Rocky Hill, Ct. He was one of a family of twelve children. His father being a poor man with so large a family, Harvey was compelled at a very early age to "paddle his own canoe" and being like many others of his name, of an adventurous turn, instead of taking to the sea which had engulfed three of his brothers, he sought his fortune in the Southern States of the American Union. After some years absence from home he returned to Rocky Hill and m Sarah dau. of Hart Lewis. She was born at Southington, Conn. about 1791, her father removing to Rocky Hill when she was only five or six years old. During the war of 1812-15 he, Harvey, was living at Fayetteville, N. C., where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits, his family remaining in R. H. until 1821, and where he continued to live until about the year 1823 or 24, when he removed to Rockingham, Richmond-co., N. C., where he remained until 1830 when he removed to Bolivar, Hardeman-co., West Tenn. Here his wife Sarah (Lewis) Goodrich d and was buried in 1837. In 1840, having taken up a section of government lands in Pontotoc-co., Miss., he removed thither and engaged in farming and real estate speculations, continuing there until 1855 when he went to the city of New Orleans to live with his two sons in business in that city. In 1859 being then over 78 years of age, but straight as an Indian and of remarkable activity and excellent health, walking rapidly along the street he stepped on an orange peeling and slipping, fell and struck his head against the curb stone, from which accident he died April 27, 1859. 6 ch all b Rocky Hill, Ct., except the last at Fayetteville, N. CHAPTER XLIX.

FROM TALES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLU-TION BY SARAH J. PRICHARD.

Monday morning, July 5th, 1779, was oppressively warm and sultry in the Naugatuck Valley. Great Hill, that rises so grandly to the northward of Union City, and at whose base the red house still nestles that was built either by Daniel Porter or his son Thomas before or as early as 1735, was bathed in the full sunlight, for it was past eight of the clock.

Within the next ten minutes six horses had set forth from the Porter house—each rider for a special destination.

"I'll give the alarm to the Hopkisses," cried back Polly from her pony, as she disappeared in the direction of Hopkins Hill.

"And I'll stir up Deacon Gideon and all the Hotchkisses from the Captain over and down," said ten-year-old Stephen, as he mounted.

"You'd better make sure that Sergeant Calkins and Roswell hear the news. Tell Captain Terrell to get out his Ring-bone company, and don't forget Capt. John and Abraham Lewis, Lieutenant Beebe and all the rest," advised Mr. Porter, as the fourth messenger departed.

When the last courier had set forth leaving only Mr. and Mrs. Porter, Sybil and two servants in the house, Mr. Porter said to his wife: "I believe, mother, that I'll go up town and see what I can do for Colonel Baldwin and Phineas." Major Phineas Porter was his brother who six months earlier had married Melicent, daughter of Colonel Baldwin and widow of Isaac Booth Lewis (the lady whose name has been chosen for the Waterbury, Connecticut, Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution). [Isaac Booth Lewis (100) v p 189 Vol. VIII].

***

"Here comes Uncle Phineas in his regimentals, and Aunt Melicent and Polly (241 Lewis) and little Melicent (242 Lewis), and O! what a crowd! I can't see for the dust!" . . . It is a matter of public record that twelve militia companies, with their respective captains, went from Waterbury alone to assist New Haven in the day of its peril.

At the table Mr. Porter told, for the benefit of Mrs. Melicent Porter and Mrs. Punderson, some of the events, both pathetic and tragic, that had occurred in the old house during his boyhood and youth, and Mrs. Melicent Porter told again the events of the day in June—only a year before—wherein the battle of Monmouth had been fought near her New Jersey home and she had spent the day in doing what she could to relieve the sufferings of men so spent with battle and heat and wounds that they panted to her door with tongues hanging from their mouths; also of her perilous journey from New Jersey to Connecticut on horseback accompanied by Lieutenant-Colonel Baldwin, her father—during which journey it was, that she had thrown her daughter Melicent in safety from her horse to the bank of the river they were fording, while the animal, having lost its footing, was going down the current.

It is stated in the History of Woonsocket (a part of Smithfield) R. I. that Richard Lewis was a tax payer on June 16, 1713. A Richard Lewis also belonged to the Woonsocket Home Guards and lost his life in 1746 in the conflict at Cape Breton. Was this Richard (5)? Thomas Lewis also belonged to the Guards. It is family tradition that Daniel (10) enlisted as a drummer at the age of 18 and served in Revolution. Can any one furnish positive proof of his service?

CHAPTER CXI.

Ch of John (7) and Frances (Fielding) Lewis.

The Abingdon Parish record states that John Lewis Esq. departed this life Jany. 17, 1754. His wife, Frances Fielding, d Oct. 27, 1731. The record gives the birth or baptism of five sons, one name however is said to be worn away. (I have not been able to make a personal examination) and the death or burial of two daus. The record has but one doubtful item of this family viz. "1746 John son of John and Frances born." Now Frances was dead at this time and the son John was living for he stood as god-father at the baptism of a nephew, John (10) b June 22, 1747. However as John (126) is lost sight of after this event the record may perhaps be an imperfect one of his death or burial. [Some interested reader of LEWISIANA it is hoped will make further examination of this Register.—ED.] In the list of ch the place of the daus is doubtful but I am inclined to think that Mildred was either the first or second ch and Frances the last.

125.VI. Charles b Feb. 25, 1729.

560.VII. Frances d July 22, buried 23rd, 1733.

Warner (58) m Eleanor dau of James Bowles of Maryland, then widow of William, son of Gov. Gooch of Va. Of his ch the names of seven appear on Abingdon Parish Register.

My excuse for including this family in this record is the correction of that abominable record of the Lewis race on pp 92 and 109 Vol. IV., where often these generations are grouped together as one family. It was undoubtedly a laudable attempt to arrange the genealogical jumble which appeared in Vol. III but it ought to have been corrected long ago. It is a disgrace to all of this line that they have allowed it to remain so long. [v p 136, Vol. IV.—ED.]

The ch of Warner (58) and Eleanor (Bowles-Gooch) Lewis seem to have been as follows:

- 561.I. Eleanor d Oct. 11, 1750.
- 582.II. Warner b 1747 (?) v p 11, Vol. V.
- 562.III. Frances b June 14, 1749.

BY HENRY J. LEWIS, LOUISVILLE, KY.

THE WILL OF CHARLES LEWIS OF "THE BYRD."

[Charles (9) v p 105 Vol. X.]

In the name of God, Amen! I, Charles Lewis, of Goochland County, and Parish of St. James Northam, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do make, constitute and ordain and appoint this writing to be my last will and Testament, in manner and form following—that is to say:

I give and devise and bequeathe to my beloved wife, Mary Lewis, during the term of her natural life, the free use and profits and full enjoyment of my whole estate, both real and personal, without impeachment or waste, and after her decease, I give and dispose there-of as follows, to-wit:

I give and bequeathe to my son Charles Lewis and his heirs forever, all that tract of land on which I now live, called and known by the name of the Byrd tract, together with all the appurtenances: also five acres of land which I purchased of Edward Rice, also my still, clock, great glass, and twenty of his choice out of my stock of cattle meaning the horned or black cattle.

It is my desire and will that after my wife's decease, that my son Howell shall have his first choice of all my negroes, and that my son Robert shall have his second choice of all my negroes, and that after my son Howell and my son Robert have so made their choice of a negro each, that there shall be seven of my youngest negroes set apart from the other slaves.

I give and devise to my sons John, Charles, Howell and Robert, and their heirs forever, as follows, that is to say:

CHAPTER LXXII.

FROM HISTORY OF AUGUSTA CO., VA.

BATTLE OF POINT PLEASANT.

Gen. Lewis' last preparations completed, he left Staunton, arrived at Camp Union early in September, and assumed command. On the 11th of September, 1774, unsheathing the old sword he had carried twenty years before at the defeat of Braddock, and in the war of '63-'64, he pointed to the west and commenced his march into the friendless wilderness. Never had the Virginians taken the field with so numerous and formidable a force, but Lewis knew he was marching against a powerful Confederacy. He therefore sought to impress upon his men that they should not show themselves inferior in valor to the heroes of 1755, nor sink below public expectation. He maintained a rigid discipline, and as far as practicable, the regularity of his march, as if in constant expectation of an attack, and illustrated the necessity of this course by a reference to the defeat of Braddock, and the well known fact that an inferior number, well posted and handled with ability has often proved too much for a more numerous body.

whom contempt for their enemy exposes to attacks for which they are unprepared. They were on hostile ground from the day of their march, and the wisdom of his precaution cannot be doubted. There was no road, or even pathway, from Camp Union to the Ohio, a distance of one hundred and sixty miles. The whole country was an unbroken forest or trackless desert. Through this gloomy region the army was to be piloted by Capt. Arbuckle, a skillful backwoodsman. Their supplies of flour, salt and ammunition were to be transported on the backs of unshod horses, and their cattle driven in the rear of the army. After a painful march of nineteen days, the army arrived on the 1st of October, 1774, at the mouth of the Kanawha. The troops had thus marched on an average eight and a half miles a day—an astonishingly good progress under all circumstances. This result could not have been attained but for the good health and vigorous character of the men. They had neither spirits, wine or malt liquor, and drunkenness, disease, crime and insubordination were unknown. When the army reached Point Pleasant, the soldiers were almost naked. Their rations consisted of a small quantity of meal or flour, a little beef, and such game as they could kill—no tea or coffee. No men were ever called on to perform harder or more continuous labor and yet they were always cheery, and worked with a will that could not be surpassed.

The General, who was then nearly sixty years of age, and was always worse lodged, worse served and more plainly dressed than the youngest of his officers, was full of strength and vivacity, and elated at his success in crossing the wilderness. Owing to his failure to hear from Dunmore, and the fatigue of some of the less vigorous of his men, Gen. Lewis now, as he had previously resolved on doing, formed and fortified a camp at this point—selecting an elevated spot of land, where there was plenty of fresh air, good water and excellent drainage. Here the General remained nine days, until rest and a supply of wholesome food fully restored the bodies and spirits of his surviving soldiers, and made them if not more ready, better prepared for action.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

BY HENRY J. LEWIS, LOUISVILLE, KY.

“At the Court of Augusta, held in Staunton, August 16, 1763, Andrew Lewis, gentleman, took the usual oath to H. M. person and government and subscribed the abjuration oath and test, which is, on his motion, ordered to be certified on his commission of Lieutenant of the county.”

The Lieutenant of the county was the commander-in-chief of the military forces of the county, and Lewis, the leader of greatest experience and ability west of the mountains, was thus commissioned, in view of the threatening aspect of affairs.

FROM GLENN'S SOME COLONIAL

MANSIONS.

On their arrival at the Severn the St. Mary's forces landed and prepared to attack the Puritan camp. With their color bearer in front, holding up as an emblem of authority the banner of the Commonwealth of England, the Puritans stood on the defensive. The first shot from the enemy killed the standard bearer: then in the spirit of religious courage as men fighting for the right, they shouted out their battle-cry. "In the name of God fall on: God is our strength," and with a fierce charge they attacked the papists as they termed them, killing and wounding about fifty, including Thomas Hatton, the former provincial secretary, and capturing Captain Stone and all of his officers. After such a signal victory, the Puritans held a thanksgiving service followed by a court-martial at which Captain Stone and others were tried for treason against the Commonwealth of England, convicted and sentenced to be shot, but only William Eltonhead, Lord Baltimore's Commissioner, Lieutenant William Lewis (v p 173 Vol. IV.—Ed.) the military commander, and two others were executed Governor Stone escaping with a temporary imprisonment and the Puritan party held control of the province nearly four years longer, during which time the seat of government, place of Assembly, and the provincial court was the old Preston mansion.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

FROM SYRACUSE, N. Y. EVENING
HERALD.

Last evening (Jany. 10, 1900) Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas E. Kernan of Utica, N. Y., gave a dinner to Cardinal Gibbons, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in America, who had come to Utica to officiate at the marriage of their daughter Isabel M. Kernan and Clifford Lewis Jr. (81 v p 56 Vol. VIII.) There were present of the groom's relatives Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lewis, Sr., Miss Eleanor Lewis, David Lewis and William B. N. Lewis.

At the conclusion of the dinner Cardinal Gibbons made a brief congratulatory address. He said Mr. Kernan had taken one of Baltimore's daughters for a bride, and he suggested that in time some young man from Baltimore might find a bride in Utica. The union between the houses of Kernan and Jenkins had proved a most happy one. Now it is proposed to make a triple alliance by a union with the Lewis family of Philadelphia. This would make the union stronger and even happier. He concluded by proposing the health of the bride and groom, which was responded to by the entire company rising.

N. E. Kernan responded fittingly. He spoke of the pleasure and honor of having the Cardinal present, making the occasion one of joy and gladness. He spoke with true paternal pride of his daughter who was about to be married, referring to the commandment which bears with it the promise of length of days to those who honor their parents. By this promise she should have a long life, as she had always been a most dutiful daughter. Mr. Lewis, during his residence in Utica, had not only won the heart of his daughter, but he had won the respect and esteem of all who had made his acquaintance. He closed by proposing the health of the Cardinal, and this was drank by the company.

JOKERS DISCOMFITED.

FROM THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

In the little community of Red Lick, in Bowie county, Texas, some changes had been going on in church work, and these involved the election of a new superintendent in the little Sunday-school established by the American Sunday-School Union. Several worthy names were suggested. In the community there was a careless element which set little value on religion and certain members of this faction decided to play a practical joke on "the religious crowd," as they named those who took an active spiritual interest in church and Sunday-school work.

Pete Lewis was a noted character in Red Lick—a hard drinker and swearer, big-muscled and strong, and a man of great determination. He was regarded as an "ugly customer," and was certainly the last man in the place to be suspected of religious principles. Among the element in question he was decidedly popular, and was known as a "good fellow fond of his glass" and a "man of his word." To put the church-going people to confusion and disturb things generally, the thoughtless crowd resolved to nominate Pete Lewis for the vacant post of Sunday-school superintendent. They had no expectation of electing him; but the thing was "too good a joke to miss," they declared, and so his name was put up in due form.

But they had reckoned without their host. To Pete it was very far from being a joke: he grasped at it as the golden opportunity of his life. Unknown to his fellows, the grace of God had been at work in Pete's rude breast, and he was sick, in heart and soul, of the useless, aimless existence he had been leading. He had received in his boyhood a good training from excellent parents, and to a fair education added a large fund of natural ability which now stood him in good stead. He did not repudiate the nomination, nor did he strive to get the place: he simply waited.

The "good joke" miscarried, and to the consternation of his former associates Pete was chosen as superintendent. On assuming office a complete transformation of the man seemed to take place. Modestly, yet without hesitancy, he set to work, and in a very little while had won the hearts not only of the entire Sunday-school, but of the congregation as well. He was, and is to-day, a model superintendent, firm, capable, courteous, with every bearing and mark of the Christian.
