GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used. a. s. b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

CHAPTER CLXXXIII.

BY CARLL A. LEWIS, GUILFORD, CT.

Sir Walter of Kent, by Julius A. Lewis, 12 mo. cloth, 400 pages, $1.50. Bonnell, Silver & Co., publishers, New York City.

THE AUTHOR—Julius A. Lewis (3055) now in his 50th year, is a son of the late Rev. Edward Zechariah Lewis (555 v p 164 Vol. XI) an Episcopal clergyman of central New York, a gr. son of Zechariah Lewis (272 v p 19 Vol. VI) a tutor at Yale College and later editor of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, and a gt. gr. son of Rev. Dr. Isaac Lewis, (250) the Revolutionary chaplain of Greenwich, Conn. and the Lewis representative among the Fellows of Yale University. The greater portion of Mr. Lewis's life has been given to newspaper work and surveying. He wrote in 1897, A Prince of the Blood, published in paper edition in 1898, by Bedford Publishing Co., Mt. Kisco, N. Y., and in 1899 illustrated, cloth, 264 pages, $1.00 by Drexel Biddle, Philadelphia.

THE WORK—We can best give our readers an idea of the general style and scope of this extremely interesting (we found it so and think that all who read will agree with us) historical narrative by quoting the opening paragraph:

"I, Sir Walter Wynnington, Knight of the County of Kent, begin this narration of my life's history at Merton Hall, my ancestral seat, in the month of October, in the year of our Lord Sixteen hundred and thirty-three, and in the reign of his gracious Majesty Charles. In more than one of the scenes or events, which it shall be my constant strife to describe with clearness no more than with truth, shall there figure persons of exalted rank. For be it said that it has fallen to my lot to stand uncovered in the presence of both her Majesty Elizabeth and of Henry of Navarre. And likewise I have beheld, and moreover had intercourse of friendly kind with two men, who were far from exalted, yet whom I did deem as truly great, and to whom Fame shall one day give lofty place. Of these twain one was the sweet-tongued player poet, Master Will Shakespeare. The other was a Spanish soldier, though were his deeds of might wrought by pen rather than by sword. Came I by chance upon him while starved he proudly in a garret of Madrid. And there sat I in awe and listened to the lofty words that fell from the lips of Miguel de Cervantes."

Of course a love story has its part in the narrative, and as Sir Walter had an eye for the weaknesses as well as the good points of human nature, he was able to picture humorous scenes which came under his observation.

CHAPTER CLXXXIV.

FROM ORCUTT'S HIST. OF STRATFORD.

Samuel Sherman, Jr., was the first settler at Bridgeport, on Old Mill Green .... The highway, now called Pembroke street, began at Mr. Sherman's house, with a gate in the common fence on the south side of the Green. This road after having been used seventy years or more, was resurveyed .... and made "full three rods wide."

Stiles Lewis (208 v p 67 Vol. V) and his son after him, owned this place many years. The frame of the old house still stands, but the covering has been renewed, perhaps, more than once, and the exterior much changed. The father kept a tavern here, and the north front room is said to have been occupied by Washington while on one of his trips through the country. The son sold the place to Benjamin Stillman and removed to New York.

CHAPTER CCCLXVIII.

BY CARL A. LEWIS, GUILFORD, CT.

AMONG THE HAUNTS OF MY PATERNAL ANCESTORS.

As I happen to be the first of my line not born in "Little Rhody," and had never been in the South or Washington county where most of my paternal ancestors lived, it seemed especially appropriate that in connection with the L. L. L. gathering at Watch Hill (v p 18 Vol. XIII) I should visit such of the family haunts as I could in the brief time at my disposal. So 11:00 o'clock Wednesday morning found us walking along the streets of Westerly, the farm more than 200 years ago of my earliest known Lewis ancestor. We read on the signs the familiar names of many of the families with which the descendants of John Lewis (1) have intermarried and now and then a Lewis—as Judge Nathan B. (667) and Dr. Elwin R. (1104). We went to the Town Building to see for ourselves the record of “How personally appeared before me (Elder John Maxson) John Lewis (58) and Thankful Lewis (55),” the gt. gr. ch. of John (1) and my father’s, John Gardner (438), gt. gr. parents, “and were married on Nov. 23, 1738.” (Arnold in his R. I. Vital Statistics has the date of the entry of the record).

After dinner our trail led us along Elm street, with its fine residences (my guide pointing out the home of Dr. Azro N. Lewis (2388) and the house across the street which he built for his second wife before his removal to San Francisco), to the home of Capt. John Lewis (58). Outwardly the house has been changed some since the Pendletons have owned it but here within the framework of this house lived the cousins John and Thankful and here after his father’s death my gt. gr. father, Simeon (276), lived for a time. A little farther on we turn aside from the street and making our way across the lots up a slight ascent, we come upon the site of the home of Simeon’s brother, Jephtha (280), whose widow he married and thus brought us the Gardner name which gave the boys, Jephtha M. (385) and Enoch B. (386), homes in New York and Connecticut. But these brothers and their sister, Mary Ann were born in the Capt. John Lewis (58) home, for Simeon did not live here until after their births. Only the cellar hole and foundation stones of the house remain. Within a few years a fire has destroyed the house and its solitary inmate. The old door step stone still remains—a mute reminder of past days.

Going down the ascent, we came to Beach street at the head of Greenman avenue. Here we found the Lewis burying ground. With the exception of two or three graves bearing other surnames not a grave is marked saved by unlettered rude head and foot stones. Who can tell where rests Simeon (276) and his brothers, where their parents, Capt. John Lewis (58) and Thankful Lewis (55), or where their fathers, John (22) and Joseph (17), and grandsire, John (3), or where his sire, John (1)? For it is said that here rest seven generations of Lewises with the founder of the line. Surely it is not yet too late to find some one among the older inhabitants who knows! Years ago an aunt told how she had conversed with an old man who could tell where each had been placed and who had seen many of the later burials. This is a search worthy of us all but it must be made soon or it will be too late.

Leaving this hallowed spot, a few minutes ride on the trolley brought us to Westerly’s beautiful and well-kept cemetery—River Bend. As we strolled through the avenues of this city of the dead we noted the same familiar names and now and then a Lewis monument, as that of Joseph H. Lewis (21.LXV).

A call on some “Stanton” cousins and a visit to Westerly’s new Public Library with its handsome memorial window of the Indian sachem, Ninigret—whose ancestral homes and fields we shall visit to-morrow—completed the day.

CHAPTER CCXCIX.

FROM HARPER'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

The question of framing these many amateur pictures opened a new field for the exercise of artistic talent. A few of the pictures, like the "Washington's Tomb" of Amy Lewis (572 v p 8, Vol. XIII) were taken to the city and put into showy gilt frames, bearing the name of the artist. But all could not be so fortunate, and so the girls enclosed their pictures in frames that were only less wonderful than the pictures. Some of the more elaborate of these frames were made from pine cones, the cones being pulled to pieces, and the separate scales then sewed on in fantastic patterns. The greatest favorite seems to have been the rose pattern, which appears with variations in nearly all.

Such frames were made not only for the small water-color paintings, but for life-size oil paintings, and in a few old houses they still grace the walls in their tattered elegance.

In my attic researches one day I came upon a box of yellow paper leaf patterns, each carefully cut out, and labelled with the name of its tree—maple, laurel, or oak. I was at a loss to guess their use. But later on there was pulled out from under the eaves a huge frame, to whose sides a mass of leather leaves still adhered, brown, withered, and curled, a leaf from every tree in the forest. In its day it must have been a wonderful creation.

Mirrors furnished another opportunity for the same brilliant decoration that was applied to clock panels. Many of the stilted landscapes and bright-colored mansions closely resembled the mechanical country scenes already described. In the picture prefixed to this article, of Fortune filling the sails of a merchant navy with prosperous wind, there is much more of freedom and vitality, although the work was done on the back of the glass. This picture was apparently painted freehand, with considerable skill.

CHAPTER CCXXXI.

FROM ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT.

A photograph taken in front of soldiers actually engaged with an enemy is a sufficiently rare thing to be of exceptional interest, but such an one has recently been secured in the Philippines, and shows a former St. Louisan, Lieut. George C. Lewis (1822) of company L, 3d infantry, just emerging from the nipa with some of his men and in the act of wading through a swamp to drive a party of Filipinos from a position they are occupying on the opposite bank.

The circumstances under which this interesting picture was secured make a decidedly readable story. Lieut. Lewis, who is, by the way, a nephew of Mr. E. S. Lewis, of this city (1126 XXIV v p 55 Vol. XII) had been sent with a platoon of his company on a scouting expedition during the rainy season of last year in some swamps near the upper waters of the Pasig river. The party occupied several cascacs, or boats, and one morning the entire platoon halted for rest at a small island, with the exception of a single boat, which was sent ahead to reconnoiter, information having been received that a body of Filipinos were in that neighborhood. Not long after the boats had been drawn up to the bank the Filipinos, who were nearer than had been anticipated, opened fire from the opposite bank. The firing lasted quite a little while before Lieut. Lewis, observing that the Filipino line was not very long, determined to effect a flank movement. Leaving a party to engage the enemy at the boats, he gathered the rest of his men together and, entering the nipa, emerged at the bank some distance lower down and started to cross the arm of the swamp. The lieutenant was in advance of his men, and just as he entered the water he was seen by the Filipinos and fired upon. He was in the act of returning their fire, when the boat which had been sent out with a party of men to reconnoiter swept down the stream and entered the channel between the charging party and the natives. The men in the boat had heard the firing and had come down the river as rapidly as they could drive with their oars. Their advent sent the Filipinos, fearful that more reinforcements were at hand, scattering back into the jungle and the day was ours.

One of the men in the boat had brought his camera with him on the expedition, and, finding an interesting scene up the river while the party was scouting, had focused it and was just about to press the bulb when the firing down the stream brought everybody to the oars at the command of the sergeant in charge, and the camera was even left in position, with the cover of the plate-holder removed and the air bulb dangling at the end of the slender tube. In the excitement no one thought of the instrument in the stern of the boat until they swept into the fire zone, when one of the men called out that the camera had better be taken down, or it might be destroyed by a bullet. The owner of the camera turned, but stumbled, and his hand, grasping at the side of the boat, came in contact with the bulb and an accidental exposure was made just as they swept before Lieut. Lewis. The focus was just right at the moment of exposure, and the result was as good as if it had been made with the greatest deliberation.

FROM THE BOSTON PATRIOT.

Died at Groton, on the 12th instant (June, 1810), Capt. James Lewis (5 v. p 118 Vol. V), ae. 74, (formerly of Billerica). In every situation in which he was placed through a long and active life, he bore an upright and honorable character. He was an officer of the militia during the whole of the Revolutionary War; the companion of Buttrick, Davis, and others who composed the valiant little band that resisted a superior British force. at the bridge in Concord, on the memorable 19th of April, 1775. He continued a uniform and firm supporter of those republican principles, for which he so early stood forth, and ever supported the character of an exemplary citizen, tender husband, and kind parent—he lived respected and died lamented. THE BATTLE OF POINT PLEASANT.

The first attack fell on the division led by Colonel Charles Lewis (5), which was drawn up on the high ground skirting Crooked Run. Lewis received a mortal wound in the outset, which in a few hours caused his death.

He had not protected himself, as the men had, by sheltering behind trees, but was in an open piece of ground, cheering on his men, when he was shot. He stayed with them until the line was formed, then giving his gun to one of the men near he walked back unaided to camp.

Notes.

OUR PAPER:—William Eleroy Curtis, Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald had in the issue of July 20th a very interesting account of LEWISIANA and its work which has been widely copied by the southern and western press. We have heard of it with variations from Ala., Ky., Mo., Ind., Iowa, and No. Da., where the editor of the Fargo Forum concludes a lengthy article on "The Lewis Family" by giving an idea of what an interesting paper LEWISIANA must be by telling of the Lewises of Fargo and vicinity which we quote as a commencement for this month's budget. We must admit, however, that while cheering words are pleasing we do like to have Lewises show their approval by deeds as well as words. "There are quite a number of the Lewis family in Fargo and vicinity, who would undoubtedly get their names into the magazine pretty often if the editor had the opportunity of learning about them. For instance there is Hon. R. S. Lewis of Fargo, the worthy state senator from Cass County and one of the leading business men in the state. Mr. Lewis is also a prominent member of the board of education and for several years has served very ably in that capacity. He is also president of the Red River Valley National Bank, a financial institution of which Fargo and the state are very proud. Another of the famous Lewis family is president of Merchants State Bank of Fargo, also one of the foremost financial institutions of the state. His name is N. A. Lewis, residing at Detroit, Minn. For many years he has been a prominent business man in the Red River Valley. Hon. A. G. Lewis, deputy county auditor and the worthy alderman from the Third Ward, is also well known as an excellent business man. He is a member of a family of Lewises, blood relations, several of whom have distinguished themselves. T. I. Lewis, a brother of A. G., is the popular traveling agent of Griggs, Cooper & Co., of Minneapolis. He is a resident of Moorhead and very popular in both cities. Lieut. Dan S. Lewis of this city, engaged at present in the business of selling feed, flour, hay, grain and seeds, is another brother. He served with the North Dakota regiment in the Spanish-American war and also in the Filipino insurrection in the Philippines, being a sergeant of Co. B of Fargo. A couple of months ago he was promoted to second lieutenant of Co. B of the North Dakota National Guards. These are only a few of the Lewises of this vicinity. There are many others, here and over the state, whose names have been chronicled because of incidents in their history.'

The bicentennial of the South Berwick, Me., church was celebrated June 4. The historical address by Dr. George Lewis was a scholarly and brilliant review of the conditions in which the seventeen "foundation brethren" organized the church in 1702, and of the singularly peaceful and prosperous course of the twelve pastores preceding his own.

The Groene Publishing Co. of Cincinnati, O., have issued an exquisite little ballad, called Guess, with words and music by Mrs. Lina Row Lewis. Its title page is graced by a beautiful half tone of Gladys, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rivers, of Milwaukee, cousins of Mrs. Lewis.

James T. Cobb of Salt Lake City, received a letter underdate of April 23, 1879, from Hiel and Joseph Lewis, sons of the Rev. Nathaniel Lewis, of Harmony, Pa., and relatives of Joseph's (Joseph Smith, Jr., elder of the Mormon church) father-in-law (Isaac Hale, "a distinguished hunter a zealous member of the Methodist church."—ED.), in which they gave the story of the finding of the plates as told in their hearing by Joe to their father, when he was translating them. This statement, in effect, was that he dreamed of an iron box containing gold plates curiously engraved, which he must translate into a book. Linn's Story of the Mormons.
