GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used. as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

BOOK VIII.

JOHN LEWIS, Westerly, R. I.

CHAPTER CCCLXXXI.

FROM NAT. CYCLO. OF AM. BIOG.

Dr. Daniel Lewis (1097 v p 21 Vol. XIII) a physician of N. Y. City, b Jany. 17, 1846, Alfred, N. Y.

Daniel Lewis received his early education at the Alfred Academy, and on the outbreak of the war of the rebellion entered the U. S. navy, remaining until the close of the war, when he resumed his studies in Alfred University, graduating in 1869. He entered the medical Dept. of Univ. of City of N. Y., and took his first course of lectures, afterwards entering the Coll. of Phys. and Surg. of N. Y., where he was graduated in 1871. He then devoted two years to practice at Andover, N. Y., after which he returned to New York City, where he has remained ever since, latterly making a specialty of surgery. On the opening of the N. Y. Skin and Cancer Hospital Dr. Lewis was made assistant surgeon and then visiting surgeon of that institution. In 1890 he was appointed to the chair of special surgery (cancerous diseases) in the N. Y. Post Grad. Med. School, and he also holds the position of surgeon to the Brooklyn Throat Hospital, Dept. of skin diseases and cancer. Dr. Lewis joined the Medical Society of the county of N Y. in 1873, and for three years was a delegate from it to the State Med. Soc., and for five years a member of its board of censors. In 1884 and 1885 he was president of the society, and is editor of the medical directory published by it.

CHAPTER CCCLXXXIV.

BY CARLL A. LEWIS, GUILFORD, CT.

AMONG THE HAUNTS OF MY PATER-NAL ANCESTORS.

Crossing the R. R. track at Niantic we soon enter Charlestown, and, to save driving over the road twice, take an old driftway—now the entrance to the Klondike quarry—across the country. When about half way across on the height above Watchang Pond we stopped at Sam. B. Hoxsie's, a "Stanton" cousin, and baited our horse while we exchanged with him the family gossip. Amid the constant pound of the ocean surge, now plainly heard, we continue across pastures, through woods, over rough paths, until we finally emerge on the King's Post Road and turning eastwards hurry away for the old Indian fort and the ancestral home and fields of King Tom—the Narragansett Indiansachem, Ninigret. We visit the old fort, we stand beside coronation rock on which he was crowned in 1746, we drive through his fields to the old house so well known to father. All is changed. The house has been remodeled, the grounds have become a gentleman's estate under the lavish expenditure of the present owner, James S. Kenyon, whose father was the second husband of Col. Joseph M. Knowles' dau. Celia Ann. Yet it is the same old house whose "plan was brought from England, whose wainscoting was wrought in Newport; and in whose parlor is a quaint and beautiful cupboard, the top of which is an elegantly wrought sunburst." Ah, Ninigret! methinks thou would be less at home here in thine own house than gazing at thyself on the memorial window (v p 38 Vol. XIII) in Westerly's Public Library.

Turning westward we take the straight road for Westerly abandoning our intended drive along the beach owing to the thick haze settling down over everything. We can just make out between us and the distant mist which should be the "old ocean" Pawawget Pond which will be succeeded by Quonochontang and that in turn by Babcock's named for him whose daus. three sons of John Lewis (1) chose for their wives. Several places are noticed connected with the family history and the almost forgotten romances of some of its fair ones. At an abandoned house—doors and windows all gone, we drive into the yard up past where once was the barn, and alight at another walled enclosure—the last resting place of the Stantons, where my gr. mother's sister, Celia Ann, rests beside her first husband. This enclosure is peculiar in that it has no entrance save by steps up over its wall. All is as quiet and almost as desolate as in the days when Thomas Stanton gave the sachem a half bushel of wampum for all of this land of which this portion has remained in the possession of the family ever since his son in 1685 wrote "half the farm or neck named Quannecontague, where I do now live."

An hour later we are in Westerly and by 6:30 eating dinner in the Dixon House.

Fourth of July morning, we take the boat for Watch Hill. At this famous shore resort we find Lewises—Rev. A. H. Lewis (136) and Dr. E. R. Lewis (1104)—have cottages. Of this day with its L. L. L. gathering (v p 18, Vol. XIII) and dinner, of our long strolls along the beach watching the waves roll in and listening to the roar of the surf our memories are far too precious to share with any one. Returning by trolley to Westerly we find ourselves once more at the Lewis burying ground where like a flash comes the thought, why cannot Lewises place here a massive granite boulder from Westerly's quarries which bearing the single word 'Lewis' would so appropriately commemorate for all the years to come the seven generations of our name who rest here?

[Since the above was written the Editor has learned that a later visitor to the graves of her sires has suggested that Mrs. N. B. Lewis of West Kingston, R. I., be appointed treasurer of all funds contributed for this purpose. The Editor would heartily second the suggestion of Miss Nellie W. Lewis (v p 82 Vol. XI) of Brooklyn, N. Y., and urge all Lewises of Book VIII and kindred lines to promptly send in their contributions—be they small or large. Now Lewises let us show what we can do. Are you not interested?]

CHAPTER XXXII.

BY GEO. HARLAN LEWIS, N. Y. CITY.

The earliest record of Samuel Lewis (5) after his birth June 24, 1641, is in Boston Records Vol. III p 84. Samuel Lewis to cut wood on common for Edward Wyer, Charlestown, April 20, 1663. At one time he resided in Concord, Mass. In 1682 in Malden town voted "That Samuel Lewis is agreed withal to ring the bell, and to sweep the meeting house for which he is to have £1-13-0 in pay for the year." Samuel Lewis is called of Wolrun, (Woburn) 19-4, 1683, and cautioned by the Selectmen of Billerica "to depart our town" and the court was notified of his refusal. (Middlesex co. records Vol. IV p 75). [NOTE—Caution or warning out was a law to prevent persons becoming a public charge or support. It was a form that must be complied with. The worthy and wealthy were always warned when moving their residence from one town to another under this law. It does not imply that one was not respectable or a criminal.] A certificate of Selectmen in Middlesex Court files "that Samuel Lewis and Thomas May are men of good character, as living out." 1669. He was in Billerica in 1686 to be troubled about his tax. (Hist. Billerica.)

He was taxed 3s. 4d. Aug. 28, 1682, see Woburn town records Vol. I p 119. He was granted 6 acres of land in Malden "on ye lard at ye end of ye 300 acres" in 1695, with others who had acted as town sexton, but he was never a proprietor there.

CHAPTER XLV.

FROM JONES' HIST. OF N. Y.

An old, worn-out Judge of the Admiralty, who lived about ten miles from the City, when in town lodged at Lewis's. This old Judge had a young Dutch wife. In consequence of his lodging at Lewis's, an intimacy took place—an intimacy lucky for Lewis, and happy for the Judge. Lewis spent good part of his time at the Judge's seat, Great Britain and France being at war, a number of Privateers were fitted out from New York, and captures were almost daily sent in for condemnation. The Judge's office of course became very lucrative, his interest and influence great, as at least nine-tenths of the inhabitants were, in some shape or another, concerned in the privateering business, and depended upon him for speedy condemnations, and favourable decisions in disputable matters. Possessed of this influence, and having the whole city, in consequence thereof, at his devotion, he took a step which some people even then whispered, and after the war publicly reprobated, as arbitrary, illegal, and despotic. He appointed Lewis claimant to all the recaptured vessels sent into New York, to the exclusion of the original owners. This was a profitable piece of business, the emoluments of which were divided between the Judge and his friend.

He went to Harrisburg, was elected Captain of Company A, 141 Regt. and went from Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, to Baltimore. There was in Co. A. William Freeman Lewis, (31) who enlisted Aug. 2, 1862, Died first of May, 1863.

Wilbur Lewis, (28) was drafted, and sister's husband, Thomas Beaumont, was also drafted for nine months. They served over that time, it was ten months before they got home, Then it was only a short time before Wilbur (28) was drafted again; he hired a substitute. Justus (25) Lester (26) older Brothers were drafted under the conscription Act, but excused from duty because they had two brothers in Army at the time of draft. These were sad times for all soldiers, and their families, especially the poor class of people, and there were many of them. All who read the History of the Pa. volunteers, 141 Regt., will find that they were unfortunate. Many were sick, some died for want of care. Capt. Jackson was taken sick in Oct. and died soon afterwards.

Robert Douglass, the well-known mining expert and book publisher of Princeton, Ind., d Oct. 3, 1902. He was b in the valley of the Juanita in Penn., son of James and Elizabeth (Wallace) Douglass and resided with his parents on a farm in Ohio until he had reached his majority. He then struck out for himself, going to California. He was interested in mining in that state and was there during the picturesque period of the Golden state's history. In 1868 he returned from the west after many adventures and went to Indianapolis where he was engaged in the publishing business with Col. A. D. Streight. He was also associated with similar concerns in Cincinnati and New York. In 1871 he purchased the interest of Col. Straight, and then on for twenty years conducted a successful business, publishing many well known subscription books.

FROM THE CLARION-NEWS.

During his eight years experience with mining and minerals he developed an excellent ability as a mineralogist. His practical knowledge of the business made him a man widely sought by mining companies anxious to secure his services. After leaving California he made a number of visits to mining regions as a prospector and mining expert.

As a business man Mr. Douglass was conspicuous for the method, exactitude and promptness of his transactions. Men who knew him, and he had a wide circle of acquaintances, trusted him, for he allowed no suspicion to come near. His life was directed by the genius of industry and perseverance and his success was the result of these.

CHAPTER XIV.

FROM ALLIBONE'S DICT. OF AUTHORS.

It may well be supposed that the many attached friends in Russia, whose genial hospitality had softened to the young traveller the rigours of a Northern clime, hailed with no ordinary pleasure this evidence that the pilgrim from a far country had not forgotten, in his restoration to the pleasures of home, those who had cheered his exile in the land of strangers. Among those who referred to this pleasing souvenir with the most enthusiasm was Nicholas Graitch, who, in an article in the Northern Bee, of July 18, 1851, after bearing testimony to Mr. Lewis's (Wm. David) intimate acquaintance with the Russian tongue, remarks:

"When he left us for America, in taking leave of him, I said, among other things, that he would forget us in his native land. 'No!' he exclaimed, with warmth; 'I shall never forget my Russian friends; I shall always remember them with affection.' And he has kept his word."

Clippings.

The land now dotted by the dozens of log cabins, rough board cottages and tents which go to make up Seven Oaks, Calif., was taken up in the year 1870 by C. M. Lewis, an Englishman, who had just come over from London. In traveling through the unexplored west, Mr. Lewis came upon this beautiful wooded spot, and it reminded him so much of the well-known English resort, Seven Oaks, that he at once secured a title from the government and built a commodious log cabin. The double attraction of the name and the natural beauties which abounded on every hand, attracted quite a number of people to the place, principally English people. Mr. Lewis still occupies a cabin about a mile up the canon from the little settlement.

The Washington Post tells of a string of Red Tape caused by the Speaker of the House being informed by one Daniel Lewis of Fort Leavenworth, that he had accidentally broken the tongue of his wagon and that the government owed him three dollars—he got it.

The Viceroy of Hunan confirms the report that two English missionaries named Bruce and Lewis have been murdered at Chenchow. The English Government has taken up the matter and the murderers will be punished.

Successful gunnery practice depends on the proper blending of accuracy and rapidity of fire. The primary steps towards securing the first of these is to ascertain the enemy's distance and set the sight on the gun for the distance or range indicated. The various methods for measuring ranges are as follows: Second.—By the "vertical base system" (the Lewis type), in which the base of the triangle is the height at which the instrument is placed above the surface of the water. --- The Lewis depression position-finder has been adopted as the service position-finder for all of our sea-coast fortifications which permit of an altitude for the instrument of forty feet or greater.

Mr. Balfour, in his 'Life of Stevenson,' who was christened Robert Lewis Balfour Stevenson, says: The change of "Lewis" from the Scotch form to the French "Louis" was made when he was about eighteen, due to a strong distaste, shared by his father, for a fellow citizen who bore the name in the form in which Lewis had received it. But it was only the spelling that Stevenson changed and never the pronunciation.'

Fourth Annual Picnic of the Lewis Family Saturday, August thirtieth, nineteen hundred and two. H. M. Lewis' Grove, Berwick, Illinois.

SAN RAFAEL, July 28—The cool nerve of a plucky woman and the speed of a man riding for life on a bicycle was all that saved the express on the line of the California Northwestern Railway, from destruction late on Friday afternoon... Engineer Lewis his face white from the peril, jumped from the cab and hurried to the signal man. "It was a close shave," he gasped, and as the questioning passengers and Conductor Crane pressed around him he could only repeat, "It was a close shave, a close shave."

At this juncture H. Stanley Lewis, a theatrical advance agent, strolled forward from the parlor car, and being apprised of the cause of the delay, produced a card of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of which he has been a member for ten years. A decade ago Mr. Lewis pulled the throttle on the narrow gauge division of the Pittsburg, Shaument & Northern. Without even removing his coat he mounted the locker and engine 21 with her string of coaches, pulled out twenty minutes late. The train made up the twenty minutes under Lewis' direction, making all stops, and at times attained a speed of sixty-five miles an hour, proving that the theatrical engineer had not forgotten his former profession.

During the '50's a great business was transacted on the Missouri river there being no railroad competition. The steamboats were most elegantly equipped, ably manned, and were perfect floating palaces. Among them were the Ben N. Lewis, W. J. Lewis. These boats made twenty-two miles an hour up stream and thirty miles down stream. While many a passenger was carried across the Atlantic in a sailing vessel, the Missouri river was the home of floating palaces, equipped with a magnificence which the ocean liner did not acquire until years afterward.
