Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. CHAPTER CLXXXVIII.

FROM THE NEW HAVEN COURIER.

Mrs. Martha Ewell-Lewis (1083 v p 68 Vol. X) wife of George C. Lewis (1085) died at her home in this city in the early morning of Nov. 3, 1902.

She was b at New Haven, Dec. 7, 1841, and m Oct. 12, 1865, John J. Ewell of Quincy, Mass., a maker of proprietary medicines. Two ch survive her: Dr. Glover C. B. Ewell of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Samuel C. Russell of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewell removed with their family to "Rocky Rest," Huntington, Conn., in 1881, and lived there until after Mr. Ewell's death in 1888. Mrs. Ewell moved to East Haven in 1891 and m Aug. 4, 1892, George C. Lewis of Huntington, Conn., who survives her.

Mrs. Lewis has practiced medicine since 1871. She was a magnetic healer of wonderful power and this gift has brought hope and health to many a despairing sufferer. The history of some cures wrought by her surpasses belief.

During the latter years of her life she was greatly interested in the order of the Patrons of Husbandry and at the time of her death was an officer of the State Grange.

She was a versatile writer, the author of several published books and numerous poems which have been in different newspapers and in the Beckwith Almanac, which she has edited since the death of her father in 1879. A noble and useful career has closed but the memory of her beautiful words and works will long remain.

CHAPTER CLXXXIX.

BY MARTHA EWELL-LEWIS, NEW HAVEN, CT.

BLUE EYES AND BROWN.

Blue eyes and brown—oh! where are ye fled?
 Our eyes are blinded with tears we have shed,
 Still are we looking for blue eyes and brown,
 Remembering always white eyelids pressed down,
 Blue eyes and brown, of the children so dear,
 Ye are gone to find glories, while we are left here,
 Ella, Mary and Ida, the brown eyes and blue,
 Allie and Freddie, and my brother's eye, too.
 Blue eyes and brown, what landscape to-day
 Fills your dear vision, where bright waters play?
 Are there high mountains and low valleys there?

Do breaths of sweet odors, far, aye,
 load the air?
 Do your hearts for each other beat
 kindly and true?
 Do you wander together, oh! brown
 eyes, and blue?
 And can you forget, amid eternity's
 flowers,
 The loved ones you left in grief's
 desolate bowers?
 Oh! blue eyes and brown, whatever may be
 The line of your vision in lands that are free
 Still shall you backward to waiting
 ones turn,
 Still shall you watch till our candles
 low burn,
 And when on the marge of the waters
 we stand,
 And our tired eyes are looking across
 to the land,
 To the dear "Land of Beulah" where
 the cross wins the crown,
 We shall answer the glances of blue eyes and brown.

CHAPTER CCCLXXXV.

FROM LESLIE'S WEEKLY.

One of the most interesting "group" pictures on record, taken recently in the village of Ashaway, R. I., affords evidence that "Little Rhody" is doing her utmost to raise the average of longevity in this country. At the celebration of the birthday of Deacon George T. Collins, the following seven men, each more than eighty years old, sat for a collective photograph: Deacon Matthew S. Kenyon, aged ninety-one years; Silas C. Wells, aged eighty-eight years nine months; George A. Babcock aged eighty-eight years eight months; Christopher C. Lewis, (1088 v p 119 Vol. XII). aged eighty-seven years seven months; Thomas R. Wells, aged eighty-six years; Deacon Gardiner S. Kenyon, aged eighty-five years nine months; Deacon George T. Collins, aged eighty-three years. The average age of the sitters was thus eighty-seven years three months, a record which it would be hard to beat anywhere. All these aged gentlemen were hale, active, and enjoying life at the time.

CHAPTER XLV.

FROM THE YPSILANTIAN.

There were many interesting incidents connected with the reunion of the Twenty-seventh Michigan Infantry in this city October 22.

B. M. Damon, agent of the Michigan Central and custodian of the flag, gave a most interesting review of the history of Cass Plot and the flag. He recalled the time in 1898, when Mrs. Florence S. Babbitt raised funds among the G. A. R. and W. R. C. for a flag to float throughout the Spanish war, the Michigan Central, through General Superintendent L'Hommedieu, donated this plot of ground and the flag pole. In conclusion, he presented the tattered remnant of the flag of 1898 to Mrs. Babbitt in recognition of her many kindnesses to soldiers. Secretary Buck spoke in praise of Ypsilanti hospitality and of Mrs. Babbitt's efforts to give them a happy day, and in recognition of the work of the only woman President of a regiment in the United States, he presented her with a handsome engraved gold badge. Mrs. Babbitt responded with much feeling.

CHAXTER CCCXI.

BY HARRY W. LEWIS, ERIE, PENN.

Chauncey Lewis (1609 v p 78 Vol. XII) b Sept. 20, 1807, Whitehall, N. Y., went to Canada in the spring of 1828, settling in Fingal, Black River county, where he kept a hotel for some time. Selling out, he built a wagon and carriage factory with a repair shop in which business he continued for many years. 1823.I. Walter C. b Oct. 20, 1843, (record later).

The death of Mrs. Mary Anna Sloan, wife of A. M. Sloan, occurred Nov. 7th, 1902, Erie, Pa., at the family residence, of double pneumonia. She had been ill only six days. The deceased who was 36 years of age leaves to mourn her loss her husband and two children, Harry A., 15 years of age, and Juanita, 10 years of age. She is survived also by her father, Harry W. Lewis. (1659 v p 166 Vol. XII) the veteran mail carrier; three sisters, Mrs. A. D. Iredel, Mrs. J. L. Sternberg, Jr., and Miss Emma, and one brother, Harry. She was a member of the First M. E. Church and was active in the work of the Epworth League and similar church organizations. Her loss will be felt nearly as keenly among the church workers as in her family circle, and her death has caused universal sorrow and regret. Small and slender and never well; she never thought of herself but was always doing something to contribute to other's comfort and happiness. Very few women have left such a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. The large number who attended her funeral, and the many pieces of flowers to her memory, which half filled the room, testify to her worth. She is buried in Erie cemetery by the side of her mother.

BOOK XXXV.

ROBERT LEWIS, Gloucester co., Va.

CHAPTER CLXXXIII

BY CARLL A. LEWIS, GUILFORD, CT.

For nearly a year we have been awaiting the publication of this romance by Mrs. Eva Emery Dye of Oregon city, Oregon, which under the title, "The Conquest" appeared from the press of A. C. McClurg & Co., of Chicago, on Nov. 12th. (12 mo. 443 p. $1.50)

Although the book is really the portrayal of the lives of George Rogers Clark and his brother William Clark, it is full of Lewises. On the title page we have "The Conquest: The True Story of Lewis (64 XXXV) and Clark;" on the first page appears Andrew Lewis (3 XLV), the old Indian fighter, blunt and irascible; and in the first chapter we hear of the fall of Charles Lewis (5 XLV) at the Battle of Point Pleasant, of Andrew Lewis's (3 XLV) retreat from victory when ordered by Dunmore, of William Lewis's (28) home at Ivy Creek, near Charlottesville, and the infant, Meriwether Lewis (64) in his cradle.

Book I, for the book is divided into three books, tells of Andrew Lewis's (3XLV) part in the exit of Dunmore; of Mrs. Lewis of Albemarle collecting $5000 in Continental currency; of Fielding Lewis (6) at Fredericksburg; of Tarleton's raid and the doings of two Lewis mothers, the wives of Col. Nicholas Lewis (27) and of Major Thomas Lewis (2XLV); of how William Lewis (28), the father of Meriwether (64), with his return from the last scene at Yorktown, laid down and died, a martyr of the Revolution; of Meriwether Lewis (64), the private secretary of President Jefferson, his visits to Locust Hill, (his mother's home), just out of Charlottesville and to "The Farm," (the home of his aunt Molly), adjoining Monticello, his plans and studies in connection with his great mission, and his portrait, (v. p. 86 Vol. XII), painted by St. Mermin, as that of a typical handsome American.

Book II, almost 200 pages, tells of the great expedition and nearly every page records the leader. Meriwether Lewis (64).

Book III tells of Meriwether Lewis's appointment as Governor: of his presence at Richmond at the trial of Aaron Burr; of William Wirt of Maryland presenting him the gold watch which after his death his sister and her husband took from his French servant Pernia, when they unexpectedly met him on the streets of Mobile; of his carrying his zoological and botanical collections to Philadelphia (Where are they now?); of his sitting to Charles Willson Peale for his portrait (v. p. 96 Vol. XII); of his work at St. Louis; of his brother Reuben (68) and the development of the fur trade; of the birth of his namesake, Meriwether Lewis Clark; of the cares and worries of his office; of his work on his journals; of that great mystery—the doings of that last night: of how "on his bearskins on the cabin floor, they found the shattered frame of Meriwether Lewis (64), a bullet in his side, a shot under his chin and a ghastly wound in his forehead. 'Take my rifle and kill me!' he begged. 'I will give you all the money in my trunk. I am no coward, but I am so strong.—so hard to die! Do not be afraid of me, Pernia, I will not hurt you.' And as the sun rose over the Tennessee trees, Meriwether Lewis (64) was dead, on the 11th of October, 1809."

From this point on Lewis is a living memory of the past. We quote here and there. "If we (Indians) could only find the trail of Lewis and Clark they would tell us the truth. Yes, Lewis and Clark always pointed upward. They must have been trying to tell us"----"When did you first have this carriage? Children, (the Clark gr. children) that carriage belonged to Meriwether Lewis (64). In the the settlement of his estate, I bought it. Many a time have we ridden in it together. It is old now, but it has a history."----"The next time they met, Meriwether Lewis Clark was marching through the streets of Washington City with other prisoners in Lee's surrendered army. The cousin of Meriwether Lewis Clark, Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, stood by Lincoln's side, with tears in his eyes."

Why should Lewises be interested in this romance? In the four years Mrs. Dye spent in gathering the material for this book she found that there were Lewises and Lewises before she located the right family on the old farm in Virginia where she found, in the words of the publishers, at Ivy depot, just out of Charlottesville, C. Harper Anderson, the nephew and heir of Meriwether Lewis in possession of the old place where his uncle was born, and had the Lewis letters, preserved for a hundred years and more, together with much other correlative matter relating to the Lewis family----The archives at Washington were thoroughly explored and the valuable correspondence between Jefferson and Meriwether Lewis was brought to light. While it is quite likely that other material may yet be discovered, the great merit of the work is that every character in it is real, and almost every spoken word is from an actual document.

For this reason LEWISIANA would ask Mrs. Dye what authority she has found for the statement that William Lewis (28), father of Meriwether (64), was a near kinsman of Gen. Andrew Lewis (3XLV). While these two families closely resembled each other in many ways, no connection in the earlier generations has as yet been proved. Again how could Meriwether Lewis (64) call Washington's sister "aunt Betty" or her husband "uncle Fielding?" Meriwether's father, Capt. William (28), was an own cousin of Col. Fielding (6).

Every Lewis, whether of kin or not, should rejoice that so many Lewises, (although by no means all that might have been are mentioned) played such important parts in the building of our country. For, as Mrs. Dye says in her "Foreword," the characters in this book belong to the history of our country; heroes of the darkest days of the Revolution; heralds of the brightest days of Independence. Out of scraps and fragments, diamond dust of the past, their deeds have been revealed, and lo! the old time century is here with border armies hurrying by ----Clearer and clearer as the years go by, under the dim forest shadows, we catch glimpses of a primitive people, mighty in stature, courage and resources, battling like gods and demons for the future United States. Other lands record the drama of kings; ours is the drama of a people. A Homeric song, the epic of a nation, clusters around the names of Lewis and Clark and the border heroes of their time; their story is the Iliad of the West." Who will write it?

CHAPTER CLXXXIV.

HERE AND THERE IN THE FAMILY.

Thus the Beaver News congratulates the Hon. A. B. Lewis (689 v. p. 10 Vol. XIII.)

Southern Utah salutes the Senator-elect from the Eleventh district. The man who can change a Democratic majority of nearly 700 into a Republican majority of 300 is entitled to most profound respect. The man who has the courage to storm the enemy in its strongest fortress and achieve so brilliant a victory deserves the plaudits of the public.

Mrs. Jno. B. Clotworthy of Aiken, S. C., one of LEWISIANA'S readers and contributors, has prepared for Mr. Frank W. Gaines of Selma, Ala., an elaborate chart covering 28 pages of foolscap, showing his descent from Charles Lewis (35) and Mary Randolph, his wife, and also the forty generations of the ancestry of Charles Lewis and Mary Randolph, each of whom was a descendant of Charlemagne and also of Alfred the Great. Mrs. Clotworthy, for the nominal sum of $10, will furnish copies of this record to all who can give their descent from Charles and Mary (Randolph) Lewis.

FROM JONES' HIST. OF N. Y.

Numbers of these recaptures were sent in, condemned, and after the salvage money, which never amounted to more than one-third of the value, frequently not more than one-eighth, was paid to the recaptors, the remainder was deposited in the hands of Lewis for the use of the original owners when discovered, and their legal demands could be proved. Large sums of this money lay in the hands of the Judge and the claimant for many years. Whenever a payment was made, a commission of ten per cent. was charged. It was part of the decree. If fame speaks truth, thousands were neither demanded nor accounted for. It was frequently impossible, upon filing a claim, to ascertain the original owners, John Doe and Richard Roe, John Denn and Richard

So much was gained. John Doe nor Richard Roe, John Denn nor Richard Fenn, ever appeared, agreeably to the Judge's decree, to claim their property. In consequence of this, when the war ended in 1783, Lewis was one of the most opulent men in New York, carried on an extensive trade, employed a number of workmen, was popular, and had influence in the city.

CHAPTER XV.

FROM ALLIBONE'S DICTIONARY OF AUTHORS.

After describing the volume of translations (v p 61 Vol. XIII) Mr. Graitch proceeds:

"It is a pleasant reflection that beyond the Atlantic Ocean, on the shores of Lake Erie or of the river Mississippi, the productions of Russian writers are read, understood, and appreciated according to their true value: it is still more agreeable to know that there beats a noble heart, loving our good Russia, and returning to her good for good."

Amen! say we: may such truly honourable and kindly feelings ever be cherished by all citizens of all nations: And what can tend more effectually to promote, expand, and strengthen them than the cosmopolitanism of letters and the fraternity of the press? He who brings mind into contact with mind, and shows its thousand heaven-born affinities, is your true philanthropist: the intelligent translator (Wm. David Lewis 13) is worth a hundred diplomatists, and the unprejudiced, candid, and generous conductor of the press will gain more conquests for his country by his pen than an "army with banners" can achieve by the sword.
