Who Was He?

By William E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Herald.

The people of Portland have always been famous for pulling together. The city shows the consequences and public spirited citizens in other towns would do well to study the methods and the means by which the individuals and commercial associations have secured for Portland the unique and commanding position it occupies. Four men, all of them whom have passed away, are credited with the commercial triumphs of Portland, and to them the financial stability of the city is chiefly due. They were Henry W. Corbett, Henry Failing, William S. Ladd and Cicero H. Lewis.

Cicero H. Lewis came to Portland on the same vessel with Henry Failing and went into the grocery business, in which he made a handsome fortune. He was a native of Cranbury, N. J., the son of a farmer, but when he was 20 years old he went over to New York city and obtained a position in a store. There he gained a thorough knowledge of the mercantile business. He was a broad-minded, far-sighted man, interested in many important enterprises and a leader in public improvements.

From Universities and Their Sons.

David Chambers Lewis (16) b Portland, Ore., Nov. 21, 1867, son of Cicero Hunt (1) and Clementine Freeman (Couch) Lewis. was prepared for college in schools of his native town and in Lawrenceville, N. J., and was graduated from Princetown in class of 1890. After leaving Princeton, he took up post graduate work in the School of Mines at Columbia, then went abroad and studied in Paris, France. He adopted architecture as his profession and is engaged in business in Portland, Oregon, at the present time. Mr. Lewis is a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity and of the University Club of San Francisco and of the Arlington Club of Portland.

A New Haven Reform.

From the Register of Dec. 9, 1904.

Being convinced that the plan under which the city has been operating financially for a long term of years, namely that of expending its money nearly a year before it gets it and paying interest on the fund, is a bad policy George W. Lewis, of the board of finance has presented a proposition to his colleagues which he hopes will remedy conditions. Mr. Lewis does not contend that his plan is absolutely the correction, but he states that it may result in an agitation which will bring forth a perfected piece of legislation.

George W. Lewis.

By Courtesy of the New Haven, Ct.
Register.

From the Register of March 3, 1905.

After months of argument and debate the board of finance has agreed on a plan for the collection of the city's taxes, the ultimate object of which being to do away with the custom of borrowing money in anticipation of taxes. By the final vote taken last night just one-third of the Lewis plan is adopted.

This is in substance, as well as in fact, an endorsement of the Lewis plan. As soon as the charter has been amended, New Haven will stand committed for two years to the principle of conducting the business of New Haven on a business basis.

We congratulate Mr. Lewis and the city upon the outcome of his attempt to improve our financial habits. It is no excuse for persisting in a bad policy that its correction will temporarily inconvenience some one, which is practically what the opposition has claimed.

Extra Issues.

Books VIII, XII, XXIV, XXXV, LIV.

In each of these Books are now on hand enough records to make a complete issue. There are in each of these lines those who are anxious to have these records printed in Lewisiana as soon as possible. Are there twenty in each Book who will contribute a dollar each for a special issue to be devoted to that one Book? Or ten who will contribute two dollars or four who will contribute five dollars for this desirable end?

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, Etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used as b. for born; d. died; m. married; m. (1) first wife; dau. daughter; unm. not married; v. p. see page; etc.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Farmington, Conn.
 Chapter CDII.

By Harry W. Lewis, Erie, Penn.

Horatio B. Lewis (1812 v for portrait 151 p Vol. XIII and record p 7 Vol. XIV) d at his home Ypsilanti, Mich., Saturday evening, Feb. 4, 1905, as the culmination of an attack of pneumonia.

Horatio B. Lewis was b in a hotel at Dexter, Mich., May 25, 1864, the son of an Episcopal rector. His antecedents were Welsh on both sides, his maternal gt. gr. father having been born in Wales.

He was a gr. son of Marcus, Sr., (1638) and gt. gr. son of Zuriel, Sr., (1236), a Revolutionary soldier of Connecticut.

Starting at the lowest rung in the ladder, in the office of the Elk Rapids Lumber and Flouring Mill Co., and Charcoal, Iron, Wood Alcohol and Acetate of Lime Producers Co., he in twenty-one years rose to be vice-president and general manager.

July 1st, 1903, he became vice president and general resident manager of the Cuba Produce Co., Santiago Province, Island of Cuba, controlling 80,000 acres timber and grazing lands, 80 miles inland from Santiago City.

His portrait appeared in The Michigan Tradesman, of Feb. 8th, 1905, and the following is a portion of the many good things said of him in that issue.

Finding that he could not endure the Cuban climate, Mr. Lewis resigned his position there about six months ago and returned to Michigan to take a position with the Wm. H. White timber interests at Boyne City. He was employed in this capacity when death overtook him.

Mr. Lewis m Aug. 19, 1889, Harriet Cloves of Elk Rapids and was the father of six children, two boys and four girls.

Personally Mr. Lewis was one of the most companionable of men.

He was of medium height and build, with a cheerful manner, and speaking always with a firm decisiveness. He was of the nervous temperament. He confessed to no fads. He believed in recreations. If he had any pretensions they were those of a man successful in business. He had no political ambition beyond doing his duty as a citizen. He held that willingness to be a duty. At 40 years of age he was still a young man in looks and actions, with every prospect of a long and prosperous career.

Mr. Lewis was an earnest Christian and his greatest enjoyment was in the work of the church, of which he was a lay reader. The Sabbath services, the activity at the parish house, the welfare of his rector, the enlargement of the sanctuary and the broader efforts of the theological schools and the domestic and foreign missions were to him matters of pleasurable and absorbing interest.

It would hardly be fitting at this time to give more than a passing glance at Mr. Lewis's beautiful devotion to wife and children, to brothers and sisters. He rose to the full height of all domestic duties; to him, indeed, they were not duties but joys, for he cherished tenderly every family tie, and he could not draw a cheerful breath until those dearest to him shared in the rich happiness of his young and radiant life.

As a tribute to a life in rich effective performance and in deference to the sentiments of a wide circle of surviving friends, we record this testimony to the noble character, the massive and solid integrity, the large, warm, generous heart, the brilliant and gifted mind, the abounding energy of our beloved friend. As long as life and memory may linger in our mortal frames we shall cherish the recollection of his lofty spirit and winning manners, simple, sweet and genial. The benevolence of his heart shone out in the engaging smile, in the keen and penetrating yet kindly eye, which gained for him a friend in every acquaintance. No man ever lived whose granite like probity inspired quicker or more lasting trust. To know Horatio Lewis was to like him; to know him well was to love him and trust him to the gates of death. And what living creature ever trusted him in vain? His simple word was a tower of strength. When did he ever fail in the whole span of his short but shining life to fulfill his plighted faith with a chastity of honor that knew no stain—nay, when did he fail to beggar his promise by the opulence of his performance? Gifted he was, but his strength lay as much in moral weight as in mental endowment, and his remarkable success was only the destiny of character.

From the Early Germans of N. J.

The old Alexandria church at Mt.

Pleasant in Hunterdon co. is supposed to date back to the year 1752. At any rate there was a Presbyterian congregation and a log church here at that date as they are referred to in the records of the New Brunswick Presbytery . . . It is probable that both a German Reformed and also an English Presbyterian congregation occupied the same building. The first pastor of the English part of the congregation was Rev. Thomas Lewis (13), 1752-3 and perhaps longer.

(Mr. Baldwin was leader of the polar expedition sent out in 1901 by William Zeigler "to plant the American flag at the north pole." In his report Mr. Baldwin says:—"For the first time in the history of north polar exploration a photographic record has been secured of the ice and snow conditions of the arctic and of the animal life of those regions so complete as to be practically exhaustive. In this respect the kinematograph has played a most important part—the first time it has ever been successfully employed in the far north—and we now have over 1,000 perfect photographic representations of our work" Ed.).

EDMUND LEWIS, Lynn, Mass.

Chapter CLXX.

From a Lynn, Mass., Daily Paper.

Jacob Meek Lewis (65 v p 76 Vol.

XIV) ex-mayor of the city and one of her oldest and most respected citizens, passed from this life. at his home, 8 Lafayette Park, a little before midnight on Wednesday, July 4, 1905, from an attack of the grippe.

Mr. Lewis spent his early youth in the common schools and afterwards for a short time in the Lynn Academy, the institution that was the Alma Mater of so many of our oldest residents. Mr Lewis's education in these institutions was occasionally interrupted by work at the shoe bench, which at the time of his youth was the almost invariable heritage of the boy of Lynn.

After his marriage (v p 110 Vol. VI) he was in business for two years as a grocer, with a store on Lewis st. He gave that up, and for 10 years was engaged in the calling of a fisherman, hailing from the neighboring village of Swampscott. In 1858 he laid aside all these less remunerative callings and entered into the shoe business on Union st., with Thomas Collyer. The partnership thus formed continued for over 25 years. Mr. Lewis was a man particularly well qualified for any duty found in a popular form of government. His first service was in the Common Council in 1852-3.

When the Public Water Board was established in 1871 he was made one of its members and in the trying periods of municipal history, when the water question was so generally discussed, conducted himself in such a manner as to command always for his opinions the highest respect. In 1860 he was of great influence in conducting negotiations in the settlement of the great strike of that year, and from 1862 to '65 he was a valuable member of the famous war Board of Aldermen, whose duties were probably more severe than those of any before or since. His service on the Water Board continued for eight years and he was an Alderman for nine successive terms.

JOHN LEWIS, Ireland to Virginia.
Chapter CXII.

From New Orleans Daily Picayune.

Sidney Francis Lewis (429 v last issue) has always taken an active part in the politics of his state. He was Vice-President of the Democratic Parish Committee in 1880. As Vice-President of the Young Men's Democratic Association in 1888 he wrote the resolutions indorsing Francis T. Nichols for Governor, and the Democratic Party.

In 1896 he voted and supported the regular ticket against the Citizens' League, because the Citizens' League would not indorse Governor Murphy J. Foster and the Democratic Party.

In 1901 and 1902 he served as President of the Choctaw Democratic Club, and refused a third election.

Mr. Lewis has also been associated with and is a member of several scientific and social organizations. He became a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers in 1881, the first President of the Louisiana Engineering Society in 1898, President of the Alumni Society of the Boys' High School for the year 1900-

1901, ex-member of the Pickwick Club, ex-member of the French Opera Club, ex-member of mystic organizations, member of Eureka Lodge, Knights of Honor, etc., member of Camp Beauregard, Sons of Confederate Veterans; member of the Loyal Lewis Legion, member of the Young Men's Gymnastic Club.

Chapter LII.

From Unity for Dec. 4, 1902.

Enoch Lewis (146 v p 135 Vol. XV) left school at fifteen. He began his life's career in the workshop. He mastered the mysteries of the machine shop so that in early life he was sent to St. Petersburg as an expert machinist to aid in the construction of locomotives. Returning home he became an employe in the Penn. R. R.

system, rising from step to step by virtue of his efficiency, until he occupied many positions of trust in that company. During the war for the freedom of the slave he occupied the responsible position of Division Supt of that road, and though his Quaker principles kept him out of the field, his proficiency lent to the state and the nation higher service in his position as a master of transportation. In the solemn hour of Lincoln's first inauguration Enoch Lewis was the trusted official who planned and helped execute the maneuver that quietly placed the President in Washington some hours before he was expected, avoiding thereby a possible clash of arms and perhaps saving the life of the President for its high destiny.
