Lewis Days at Jamestown.

As Viewed by Virginian Lewises.

By Lunsford L. Lewis, Chief Justice Supreme Court, Richmond, Va.

The proposed celebration does not at all commend itself to me, nor do I believe that it will be favorably regarded by Virginians generally. As far as the achievements of the Lewis family in the past are concerned, I am content to let history speak.

By Maude Eustace Pearson, a gt. gt. gr. dau. of Col. William Lewis, Norfolk, Va.

I have recently moved here from Detroit but I am mightily interested in the Lewis family and hope Lewis Days will meet with success. I have always understood that my gr. mother's gr. father, Col. William Lewis, was either a brother or a cousin of Meriwether Lewis. We have miniatures of the former which have a striking resemblance to the latter. Col. William's wife or mother was a Faulkner of The Valley.

By Mrs. Thomas J. Rowe, of Norfolk, Va., a descendant of Gen. Andrew Lewis, the Hero of Point Pleasant.

There are not many of the Lewis family left in our State (I am the only representative in this city) but I feel sure these few will make every effort to sustain the reputation of Virginian hospitality. My gr. mother was a dau. of Col. McClanahan of Roanoke whose wife was Agatha Lewis, dau. of Col. Andrew Lewis and gr. dau. of Gen. Andrew who played such an important part in the early history of the Colony. Why not an Andrew Lewis Day! In the possession of the Va. Hist. Society are some letters of Margaret Lynn Lewis whom the Indians styled "The White Dove of the Shenandoah." These letters relating her impressions and experiences when John Lewis's cabin was the only house in the Shenandoah Valley are an interesting and unique collection and ought to be printed for the Lewis family. Remains of the old Lewis fort are still to be seen near the town of Staunton, Va.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used.

Book II

BENJAMIN LEWIS, Stratford, Conn.

Chapter CCLXII.

From Ansonia, Ct., Sentinel.

The death of Mrs. Joanna C. Lewis (3165 v p 203 Vol. XVI) Dec. 1, 1906, removes from earth one whose whole life seemed to be devoted to the task of making all with whom she was brought into contact, better and happier for having known her. Although for a long time past she had suffered from neuralgia of the heart, still she was always bright and cheerful, and in spite of her advanced years, she was always the life of whatever circle she was a member. Her death was very sudden and in fact none knows the exact minute life became extinct. She was brought down to the Thanksgiving dinner, at the home of her son, C. E. Lewis, and was as usual full of life and energy. Friday she was up and dressed and did not seem any weaker than for some time past. Saturday she did not seem unusually weak and was supposed to be sleeping until it was discovered that life had slipped away and she was asleep, but in the long sleep that knows no awakening.

Most of her life was spent in Nichols, but for the past ten years she had lived with her son, C. E. Lewis, of this place. She was known as "Grandma" by old and young and her cheery smile and words of advice have smoothed difficulties from the path of many among the wide circle of her acquaintance. She was until the very last possessed of a most active mind, and was deeply interested in all that was going on in the world about her.

She leaves three children, Elihu N. Lewis, and Mrs. A. M. Nichols of Bridgeport, and C. E. Lewis of Shelton, with whom she lived.

She will be missed more than many younger person, and in the household of her family she leaves a vacancy that can never be filled.

JOHN LEWIS, Westerly, R. I.

Chapter DLXXVI.

LEWIS—Entered into life eternal, Friday, Mar. 22, 1907, Jane Abigail Hart, beloved wife of John G. Lewis.

From the New Haven Register.

The sad announcement is made of the death early this morning, after a short illness from pneumonia, of Mrs. Jane A. Hart Lewis, the wife of the widely respected principal of the Webster School District, John Gardner Lewis.

Mrs. Lewis was a native of New Britain, where she was born in 1837. Ever since her residence in this city she has been a member of Center Church and active in the charitable and philanthropic undertakings of that historic society. She was also active in the affairs of the New Haven Orphan Asylum and the Mount Carmel Home. Her nature was essentially one that responded earnestly and enthusiastically to calls upon her judgment and interest in her fellow creatures and it may be said of her that no appeal to her consideration failed to receive an audience from both her head and heart.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Lewis leaves five sons to mourn her death, Carl A., who is the principal of the Guilford High School, Robert H., of the Pease-Lewis Company in this city, Harry B., who is in the telephone business in Indianapolis, Dr. Dwight M., a practicing physician in this city, and Newton F., a business man of Nashville, Tenn. The only remaining member of her original family who survives her is her brother, Newton Francis Hart, whose home is in Chicago.

From the Evening Leader.

The announcement of Mrs. Lewis's death will be learned of with the sincerest regret and the sympathy of the entire community will go out to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Lewis was one of the best known church workers in the state. An earnest Christian herself and an old and faithful attendant at Center Church she has been known for years on account of her many charitable and kindly acts. She was a most lovable woman, quiet and unostentatious, but ever ready to comfort and help the needy.

Mrs. Lewis was in apparently good health until a few days ago, when she became ill with pneumonia. Her son, Dr. Lewis, called Dr. Gilbert in consultation on the case, and all that loving and tender care could accomplish was done to save the valued life; but it was all unavailing and Mrs. Lewis entered quietly into rest this morning. She was 69 years old.

Mrs. Lewis was Miss Jane A. Hart, of the well known Hart family of New Britain, prior to her marriage to Mr. Lewis in 1860. After her marriage she took up her home in this city and has lived here ever since.

From the Journal and Courier.

The many friends of the late Mrs. John G. Lewis filled Center Church Chapel on Monday afternoon to pay the last tribute to the dear one who had so suddenly entered into the life eternal. In his few but well-chosen words Dr. Newman Smyth touched here and there on the many fields which will miss her quiet but earnest work, and especially of the personal loss to those missionaries in the West and South who, having not seen her, yet had come to a very intimate knowledge of her through the personal note that was so marked in all the correspondence that went out for the local Home Missionary Society.

The interment was in the family lot in Evergreen Cemetery and followed the private service for the family which took place at her late home.

Among the many flowers were two special tributes, one from the teachers of her husband's school and another from the pupils of the higher grades.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Farmington, Conn.
Chapter DXII.

From the Autobiographical Memoir of Hon. Seth Lewis.

With this family my father arrived at New Orleans, having come by sea, in the beginning of 1775, ascended the Mississippi and went up the Big Black river, on the bank of which stream he began a settlement in the expectation of obtaining from the government a grant of the vacant tract of land which he selected. But here a scene of distress awaited the family. That part of the country was at that time a wilderness, with the exception of some four or five settlements which had been begun a year or two before, by emigrants who had preceded us. My father's funds were now completely exhausted and provisions were exceedingly scarce; indeed, there were none to be had, except a little corn. The privations to which the family were thus subjected—the hardships of beginning a new settlement in the wilderness, together with the change of climate, soon brought on the prevailing fever of the country. One after another the whole family were taken down, so that there was scarcely one left able to help another. Of this fever my father died, I think in the month of June of that year (1775). My mother survived him only two months. The family then was broken up and dispersed among the neighbors, who treated us with all the kindness in their power until the fall season of the year, when, having in a good degree recovered our health, my oldest brother collected us all together, took charge of the family and kept us there as long as he lived. The next winter he removed us all down to Natchez, where he remained during the year 1776. From thence in the spring of 1777 he removed us down to Maushac, which was then a flourishing village on the Mississippi at the point where the Bayou Iberville leaves that river—that bayou being the boundary between the Spanish and British possessions on the Mississippi river. Here we remained until the spring of the following year, 1778.

Chapter DXIV.

By Rev. C. J. Nugent, Lagrange, Ky.

My gr. father, Judge Seth Lewis

(1532 v p 165 Vol. XVII) wrote a book, "The Restoration of the Jews," of which I have a copy. He was b Oct. 14, 1764, in Mass. whither his parents had temporarily removed from Conn. and d Nov. 15, 1848, Opelousas, La., ae. 84 y 1 m 1 d. Mother told me that gr. father had all his natural teeth when he died and that there was not a decayed speck on one of them. He m 1793, Nashville, Tenn., Nancy Hardeman, who d July 20, 1833, dau. of Thomas Hardeman, son of John and Dorothy (Edwards) Hardeman, and his wife Mary Perkins.

The Lewis ancestors, according to my Aunt Amelia (v p 40 Vol. XIV) who d July 9, 1903, ae. 103 y 8 m 23 d, were wealthy merchants in London, who fled to Holland during the persecutions of the Protestants, leaving a large estate behind them. There were two Lewis brothers but our ancestor, while in Holland, m Miss DeWolf, dau. of Baron DeWolf. The spring following the sailing of the Mayflower, the two brothers, with their families, emigrated to America. Our branch remained in New England, the other settled in Va. The year after the Revolution two young men of the Lewis family were sent to England to try to recover the fortune left them. The vessel and all on board were lost, when our pious ancestors thought that it was not the will of Providence that they should recover their fortune and made no further effort in that direction.

I also have a copy of gr. father's Autobiographical Memoir which was printed by my cousin, Thomas H. Lewis (4067). The portrait of gr. father it contains is a much better likeness than a photograph of him which I have. From the original of this portrait, I think, was taken the painting of Judge Seth Lewis in the State Library at Jackson, Miss. (v p 119 Vol. XVII).

Chapter CDXLII.

From Deep River Ct., New Era.

Harlow Chauncey Lewis (1005 v p 136 Vol. XVII) belonged to one of the old, established families of New England and his ancestors can be traced back to 1630 when they left East Greenwich, England, and came to Plymouth, Mass. He was of a family of six ch. and was born in Deep River in the house now owned and occupied by W. H. Wright, Nov. 20, 1826. When five years of age he moved to Newark, N. J., with his parents. The panic of 1837 caused the elder Mr. Lewis to retire from the stone business in which he was then engaged and he returned to Chester with his family.

At the age of 17 Mr. Lewis left school and went to Meriden where he learned the trade of a moulder. He remained in that city about four years, when the factory in which he was working was burned and he went to

New Haven, remaining there until Sept. 1, 1848, when he again returned to Chester. For the following 13 years he was employed in the foundry of Russell & Beach. Leaving there, he was employed as foreman in the foundry of James Lord, until the fall of 1869 when he accepted the position of foreman of the foundry of the Metropolitan Mfg. Co. at Middlefield, this state, remaining in their employ about 15 years. Ill health caused Mr. Lewis to resign and he retired to his comfortable home at Chester, where he had since resided.

Edw. Parke Custis Lewis (139 v p 137 Vol. IV full paged steel engraving accompanies the article. Ed.) received his early scholastic training at Staunton, Va., after which he entered the Univ. of Va. at Charlottesville. Deciding later upon the law as a profession, he entered the office of Hon. Reverdy Johnson and concluded his studies with S. Teackle Wallis of Baltimore. Not desiring to practice, Mr. Lewis then retired to his plantation in Va. and devoted his time to agricultural pursuits until the beginning of the late war. He had until this time been a firm adherent of the Union cause and opposed to the secession movement, but felt impelled to follow the fortunes of Va. on the withdrawal from the Union, and at once joined the ranks of the Confederacy. He served as aid-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Chambliss and brigade inspector under Gen. W. H. T. Lee. On being made prisoner he was confined four months in Fort Delaware and when a second time captured was for eleven months a prisoner in both Fort Delaware and Camp Chase. He received promotion to the rank of major and later to that of colonel in the 1st Regiment of the Inspector-General and during his period of service took part in the battles of Bull Run, Manassas, Antietam, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Chantilly and Winchester.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Newport, So. Wales.

Chapter IV.

From Successful American.

David Joseph Lewis, Jr., a native of Baltimore, Maryland, was a Christmas gift to his delighted parents, having been born on December 25, 1857, of Welsh parentage. Mr. Lewis comes from a family always prominent in the iron manufacturing business, his father, before he came to America fifty-three years ago, having been connected with the Mill Wall Iron Works in London, where the mammoth steamer Great Eastern was constructed.

Young Lewis was educated at the public schools of Chester, Pennsylvania. He then entered the Polytechnic College of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1877, as Bachelor of Mechanical Engineering and in 1880 took the Master Degree in the same institution.

Mr. Lewis found his first occupation in the Boiler Department of the John Roach & Sons Shipyard. In 1878 he was employed in the Morgan Iron Works of New York City. Then he tried mining engineering in charge of the Highland Mary Mining Company in San Juan, Colorado, and was making quite a success until the Ute war commenced and broke up the mining camp, when he returned to Chester, Pennsylvania, and took a position in the Draughting Department in John Roach & Sons' employ. When twenty years of age Mr. Lewis was outside Superintendent of the Boiler Department of John Roach's Shipyard, having charge of two hundred men.

In April, 1882, Mr. Lewis's services were secured by the Lowell Steam Boiler Works at Lowell, Massachusetts, as Superintendent. In 1885 he took charge of the Boiler Department of the Southwark Foundry Machine Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and while there constructed the first Jull centrifugal snowplough.

Clippings.

Maud Powell, the famous violinist, began taking violin lessons in this country when she was eight years old. Her first teacher was William Lewis of Chicago, who, doubtless because of her very evident earnestness, took great interest in her. She describes him as an "unfettered" player, without much refinement of technique, but extremely vigorous and "rugged." Within artistic limits Miss Powell puts splendid energy into her own playing and there seems little doubt but that some of this energy can be attributed to her early lessons with this "unfettered" player. Miss Powell studied with Lewis four years.

Chicago, March 21—Gen. John A. Lewis, deacon of the Christian Catholic Church, and for years the closest personal friend and advisor of John Alexander Dowie, has been named as the new leader of Zion in the will of the late "First Apostle."

Gen. Lewis is now in Mexico, and has been notified of his election to take command of the Dowie forces and seek the overthrow of Wilbur Glenn Voliva the present overseer, in the greatest religious struggle of the strenuous history of the Zion Church.
