Clippings.

The fifth marriage in White House history was that of Miss Delia Lewis of Nashville, Tenn., whose father, William B. Lewis, was one of President Jackson's most intimate personal friends. He practically lived in the President's house and was a member of that famous Kitchen Cabinet cariatured so persistently in that day.

Miss Lewis was married to Mr. Alphonse Joseph Yver Pageot, a native of Martinique, who was secretary of the French Legation at the time of his marriage.

The wedding ceremony was performed in the Blue room and was witnessed by the personal friends of the two families, the members of the official family and their wives and the foreign diplomats in Washington. It was an evening affair, and the bride, who was a beautiful Southern girl, was given away by the President.

General John A. Lewis, who is returning to Zion with John Alexander Dowie, the deposed first apostle, is a leader of the Zion movement in Mexico and is general manager of the Zion Paradise plantation. He also is a deacon in the Dowie organization. General Lewis is a southerner and lived at Meridian, Miss., before becoming converted to the Zion cult. He is described as an able and forceful man. His business ability also is extolled. Should he decide to cast his lot with Dowie, after being placed in possession of all the facts leading up to the Voliva revolt, it is believed that his adhesion would prove a serious impediment to the complete success of the Zion "insurgents." (The Chicago Record Herald also printed with above account a large portrait of Gen Lewis. Ed.).

With her crew missing and with collision marks on her, the schooner Annie R. Lewis (built at Bucksport, Me., in 1873), lumber laden and bound for New Haven was picked up six miles off Sandy Hook, May 28, 1906, by the steam pilot boat New York and towed into N. Y. Harbor.

Henry J. Lewis

Henry James Lewis.

Henry James Lewis was born at Meriden, Connecticut, on October 21st, 1841. He was the son of Isaac C. and Harriet (Pomeroy) Lewis. His father was one of Meriden's most prominent citizens and one time mayor, a worthy descendant of William Lewis, who came to this country from England on the ship "Lion," landing in Boston, Mass., in 1632, and settling in Cambridge. Four years later, William Lewis became one of the Rev. Thomas Hooker Company that settled in Hartford, and still later he removed to Farmington, where was built the homestead that is yet standing as a part of the "Elm Tree Inn," known now and for many years as a famous hostelry. The land, a tract sixteen miles square, he, together with Samuel Steele, bought from the Indians on behalf of the Farmington Company.

Henry J. Lewis was also descended from Jared Lewis, a patriot of the Revolutionary War who served in the Continental Army in the regiment commanded by Col. Canfield; and on the maternal side from Sergeant Charles Pomeroy, also a soldier of the Revolution. By virtue of this ancestry, Mr. Lewis was a member of the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

He was educated in the common schools of Meriden later attending the Meriden Academy, and finishing his schooling at Eaton's Commercial College, Worcester, Mass. He began his business career by entering the office of the Meriden Britannia Company of which his father was one of the founders. Some years after this he went into the hardware business as a partner of N. F. Griswold, under the style of Griswold and Lewis. About 1880 he disposed of his interest in the store to John L. Richmond. Always a lover of outdoor life, he removed to Stony Creek, where he could engage in a business that should satisfy this desire. Here he had from boyhood owned one of the Thimble Islands, charted as "Lewis Island." The business of his choice was that of oyster cultivation, and he was one of the first men in the state to realize the importance this industry was to attain. It was not long before he made his headquarters, first, at Bridgeport, and later at Stratford. From now on he rapidly built up a business of huge proportions until his holdings extended from Norwalk eastward along the Sound as far as Guilford and Madison, with wharves, shops, and offices at various places, and additional oyster-beds off the south shore of Long Island and in the waters of Narragansett Bay, Rhode Island. In 1895 the Connecticut business was organized as the H. J. Lewis Oyster Company. Under the name of this corporation Mr. Lewis became possessed of a title to more than 10,000 acres of territory in Connecticut waters alone, thus being at the time of his death the largest holder of oyster grounds in the state. His Long Island branch was incorporated as the Lewis Blue Point Oyster Cultivation Company, with headquarters at Sayville, L. I.

Mr. Lewis was so interested as a stockholder and director in a number of banks, trust companies and industrial enterprises. Some of the Meriden concerns were the International Silver Company—of which he was one of the large stockholders—the Meriden National Bank and the Meriden Trust and Safe Deposit Company; he was president of the Horton Printing Company, and a director of Edward Miller and Company and the Miller Brothers Cutlery Company. These varied interests kept him vigorously active up to the day of his death.

On August 7th, 1884, Mr. Lewis married Mary E. Stringer, daughter of William C. and Mary Stringer, of Cold Springs, Long Island, N. Y. They had four children—Henry Leroy, Helen Margery, Kate May and Isaac Chauncy.

Never a seeker after publicity or popularity Mr. Lewis devoted himself to his business and his home, and disliked nothing more than a parade of his virtues. Yet a biographical sketch omitting all mention of character and characteristics could hardly be regarded as satisfactory.

His ability to see, and quickness to grasp, opportunities, prove him to have been possessed of the two prime essentials of business success—good judgment combined with courage. Indeed, of business sagacity he had a generous endowment both by nature and by heritage. This, however, was but one phase of a singularly well-balanced temperament. Even more dominant traits were the equity which earned him the hearty good-will of his business associates, the sympathy and generosity that made of his force of employes a little army devoted to his interests, and the philanthropy whose manifestations were known only to those institutions and individuals that stood in the position of beneficiaries. The town of Stratford, which he made his place of residence for a score of years has known no man that ever did more for the town and its people than did he. To talk with him, no matter on what subject, was to be impressed with the sanity of his outlook; to appeal to him in behalf of a worthy cause was to be convinced of the genuine spirit of kindness and sympathy that ruled his life.

He died at his home in Stratford, on the 11th day of January, 1902.

Extra Issues.

Only one subscription has been added during the past month, Mrs. Henry J. Lewis of Stratford, Ct., for Book XII, making the total to date 9 for Book XII and 5 for Book XXIV. There seems very little probability of any success by this means of getting into print the gathered records of those Books some of which have never yet been printed anywhere. Is it true, as some affirm that genealogical zeal is waning?

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, Etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The list of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used.

Hints for Contributors.

In writing matter for the printer use only one side of the sheet, note paper preferred. In giving dates, give year, month and day whenever known. Write all middle names in full. Give names and addresses of such people as you think may be able to complete the record but get it yourself if possible and spare the editor. Old newspaper files, tomb stones, family Bibles and records, official records of the town, school and church, burial certificates county and probate records, old deeds and letters are some of the more important sources of information. Don't forget, however, the stores of information which the old people can give—Get them interested and then "pump them dry." Most important of all, don't get discouraged yourself. How can you interest others, if you yourself are not alive with enthusiasm?

Chapter CXXLIII.

From the Shore Line Times.

The funeral of Mrs. Alice Hurd, wife of George B. Hurd, the former principal of Winchester School in New Haven, took place in the Congregational Church in Clinton on Friday afternoon, Nov. 29th.

Her death occurred on Nov. 27th at East Hampton, Mass., where Mr. Hurd is now a teacher in Williston Seminary.

Mrs. Hurd was a person whose refinement, culture and lovely Christian character endeared her to a wide circle of friends and her desire for further usefulness and her fortitude during her last days of weakness and pain were touchingly portrayed by Rev. J. H. Sawyer of East Hampton in his remarks. The scripture selection by the pastor, Rev. C. F. Robinson, was especially appropriate and his prayer for the afflicted family and friends most sympathetic.

The burial service followed and she was laid away in the white casket crowned with flowers, with the softly falling snowflakes for a covering. But her happy spirit was keeping Thanksgiving in Heaven.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

JOHN LEWIS, Westerly, R. I.

Chapter DLI.

From the Westerly Daily Sun.

In the list made in 1727 of all the freemen of Westerly, from the first settlement thereof, the name of John Lewis stands as number seven. He was one of the first settlers, as his name is found annexed to some of the papers by which the track known as Misquamiout was ceded to the white people. This John Lewis built him a house in what is now the lower part of the village, where he died, and is buried with six generations of his descendants in the rocky pasture on the side of the hill just off Beach street, nearly opposite the end of Greenman avenue. His grave is unmarked save by a flat wall stone, bearing no inscription by which to identify it. There are in the little plot about sixty graves, only two of which are marked by lettered stones, while two other stones with inscriptions lie upon the ground. The plot itself is uninclosed and cattle wander over it at their own will. Yet here sleep some of Westerly's earliest founders and men of sterling worth.

This John was the progenitor of all the Lewis families in this section of the country. Some one should take thought and rescue their sleeping place from entire obliteration. The little mounds are fast sinking to or below the level of the surrounding earth, the headstones falling to or sinking into the ground and in a little while like other graveyards in this vicinity, it will be forgotten. There were once other lettered stones here which have been removed, as Denison in "Westerly and Its Witnesses" gives the following as names appearing therein in 1867. Arnold Kenyon and Sallie his wife and their son William C. These are gone. Those still remaining bear the following inscriptions:—"In memory of Elnathan C. Brown, who died Jan. 27. 1829, aged 32." (This is the marble slab in the foreground of the illustration. Ed.) The others are of Francis S. and Sarah West, and are marked, "Francis E, died Oct. 13, 1838, aged 3 months and 6 days."

"Charles, died Aug. 11, 1841, aged 4 months "

"Mary Amie, died Feb. 14, 1846, aged 3 years 8 months and 4 days."

In a recent issue of the New Haven Ct. Register appeared the report (1½ columns) made by Mrs. John G. Lewis (438 v p 66 Vol. IX) in behalf of the Board of Managers. "A simple story of a year's work in our New Haven Orphan Asylum. There has been the same daily round week after week month after month, varied only with different children and various kinds of helpers, until now the year is ended

...It is a work that pays well, but how well none can tell until that last great day when all that has gone to make us what we are shall stand revealed. Then shall be heard the words of the Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me."

Book XXXV.

ROBERT LEWIS, England to Virginia
 Chapter CCOXCIII.

From Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph.

Washington, April 9.—The President today sent to the Senate the following nomination:

United States District Judge, District of Colorado—Robert E. Lewis, Colorado Springs.

Judge Lewis was appointed by Governor Peabody to the district bench in April, 1903. His record as district judge has been satisfactory to his friends, and may be said to have met with the approval of the bar generally. The position to which the president has appointed him may be said to have been unsought on his part. For some months past his friends here among the lawyers and also the business men, as well as in Denver, have been quietly using their influence with the administration for his appointment to the position.

Chapter CCOXCIV.

From Denver, Col., Daily News.

Judge Robert E. Lewis, the new appointee to the federal bench, is a man of strong characteristics....How does it happen that Lewis was appointed? None of the big politicians of the state was for him. He is, comparatively speaking, a new man in Colorado. The influence that brought about his selection was two good Republicans of Colorado Springs who take no active part in politics and Senator Scott of West Virginia who called the President's attention to Lewis's merits.

It is known that the President inquired regarding Lewis of several Colorado persons, among them the two senators, all of whom spoke in high terms of Lewis's ability, integrity, fairness and independence. The president felt that he had found just the man he wanted.

Talking with Congressman Hogg this morning, the President told him that he wanted judges who were not disposed to be technical and who would not throw cases out of court for trivial reasons, and who would give every man who had cases in his court a fair show and a square deal, and he thought from all he could learn, that Judge Lewis filed that bill.

Judge Lewis's own home life is ideal. Reared in a Presbyterian college, he seems to have inculcated much religion in his own life. His wife is a member of one of the most prominent Baptist families of Missouri, and the family in Colorado Springs has held fast to that faith. Mrs. Lewis, is an active woman in church work and rather devotes herself to it, remaining in the background in a social sense and giving her time to the quieter ministrations of her church life.

Judge Lewis is prominent in the leading clubs of Colorado Springs, and may often be seen at the El Pasa Club. He is not a typical clubman, however, his habits and characteristics being those of the jurist and man of simple tastes.

Chapter CCOXOV.

From The Denver Republican.

Judge Lewis was born in Cass county, Mo., April 3, 1857, being therefore, 49 years of age. The families of his father and mother, respectively, both emigrated from Virginia to Missouri, when the latter was a territory. Robert remained on a farm until his sixteenth year, when he went to Westminster College at Fulton, Mo., there receiving his education. This Presbyterian institution is one of the oldest in Missouri. Lewis taught school for four years after leaving college and was admitted to the Missouri bar on Aug. 24, 1880. He practiced law in Clinton, Mo., for the next 18 years, removing to Colorado Springs in 1898. His wife was a Miss Avery, daughter of a Clinton banker. Judge and Mrs. Lewis have three children, Mason A. Lewis, a sophomore at Dartmouth College, and two girls who are in school in Colorado Springs.

Judge Lewis, following the precedent set by all members of his family, was a Democrat until 1889, when, from pronounced convictions against free trade, he entered the ranks of the Republican party, and since that time has consistently advocated Republican principles.

Chapter CCOXOVI.

From Denver, Colo., Times.

Robert E. Lewis (987 v p 175 Vol. XVI) for four years was prosecuting attorney at Clinton, Mo., being first elected in 1882, soon after his admission to the bar. In 1892 Lewis was presidential elector on the Harrison ticket and stumped the state of Missouri. Two years later he was nominated for congress against David A. DeArmond and was beaten by only 91 votes, although his district two years before that gave DeArmond over 4,000 majority. Lewis was renominated for congress in 1896, but the same year was nominated for governor and withdrew from the congressional ticket. For eleven weeks Lewis was in the field during this campaign and it is claimed forced a fusion between the Democratic and Populist nominees for governor, the latter withdrawing at the last hour, when too late to fill his place and the Democrat was placed on the Populist ticket at midnight. It was the fear that the work of that campaign had impaired his health that caused Lewis to come to Colorado. He came to Colorado Springs and almost immediately became prominent at the bar and in politics. He formed a copartnership with the late Colonel J. W. Ady and was engaged in some of the most important mining litigations at that time. After Lewis and Ady dissolved partnership Lewis continued to represent the late W. S. Stratton in legal matters for several months, and cases that he handled for the mining millionaire served to bring his name to the front as a leading lawyer of this city. Lewis became a prominent figure in Republican primaries and conventions and when the third judgeship was created in this district he was appointed to serve by Governor Peabody and in the fall of 1903 was elected to a term of three years on the bench. His term would have expired this fall. Judge Lewis was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the supreme bench at the time the two judgeships were added to that tribunal in this state.

FRANCIS LEWIS, Wales to N. Y.

Chapter LXXVIII.

From N. Y. Evening Post.

Famous New York Families.

Both Francis (1) the signer and Morzan (3) were marked by an energy which was stupendous. They worked because they loved work and their enjoyment was always in proportion to its difficulty. The same quality has marked their descendants in this country and their kindred in Scotland and England. The family records abound with little incidents which throw delightful sidelights upon their character. What could be pleasanter than the story of Gen. Lewis and the dog? When he returned from the lines during the war of 1812, he brought with him, as an honored guest, the dog of Gen. Brook. The latter when dying, had requested that his faithful and aged servant and his dog should be sent home to his family in England. The servant had sailed, but the poor brute had been neglected. The General took charge of the dog, carried him to his house, and there kept him until he was in good condition and ready for the voyage to England. Then he made many inquiries in regard to the accommodations for canines on outgoing vessels, waiting until he could secure a ship on which his charge would be comfortable. This was at last secured; the dog had a pleasant trip to England, where it was received as if a member of the family by the relatives of the dead soldier. In the midst of war's alarms the General could find time to think of the lighter sides of daily life. Here is an illustrative letter to his wife;

Albany, 11th October, 1812.

My Dear Love:—I gave your invitation to the General and suite, which they accept, provided nothing unforeseen prevents, so that you can look out for us on Saturday, the 17th, the day of Burgoyne's surrender and the succeeding one to my birthday. Have a light on the wharf. I hope we shall be in time for a dance. Enclosed is a note of thanks from the General for his present. The cover I tore off to render it more susceptible of enclosure. I sent some sermons by Mr. Schell and the other articles by the Paragon.

God bless you all, prays your affectionate husband,
Morgan Lewis.
