It is stated that Major O'Brien, one of whose sisters recently married Marconi, of wireless telegraphy fame, is descended in a direct male line from the famous Brian Boru, the warlike king of Ireland, who disastrously defeated the Danes at the battle of Clontarf in 1014. It is also related that as descendants of this king and of the princes who ruled as sovereigns over the south of Ireland until the reign of King Henry VIII, the lords of Inchiquin have the privilege, granted by the burly and bluff King Hal, of using the royal liveries.

The Name Lewis.

By Edgar M. Lewis, Moundsville, W. Va.

In Camden's Britannia, edition of 1610, is

This whole region throughout, after the eivill manner of partition is divided into six parts, which by a peculiar name they call Rapes, to wit, of Chichester, Arundel, Brember, Lewis, Pevensey and Hastings, evry of which besides their hundreds, hath a castle, river, and forrest of their owne... Lewis, which peradventure hath his name of pastures called by the English Saxons Lewsa, this for frequence of people and greatness is reputed one of the chiefest towns of the County, seated as it is upon a rising almost on evry side.

From the above it would seem to be well settled in the mind of Camden who was a most painstaking authority on all questions pertaining to the antiquities of England that the name Lewis was derived from a Saxon word signifying pastures and as the town of Lewis was a place of much importance in the time of King Athelstan, who was crowned in 925, it would indicate that the name Lewis, at least as applied to a town or place, was of an origin prior to the 10th century.

In a later edition of the same work is the following reference to Sir John Lewis (v p 180 Vol. XIV)

Ledston Hall formerly the seat of the ancient family of the Withams but of late of Sir John Lewis Baronet who having got a vast estate during his nine years factorship for the East India Company (much augmented by the Jewels presented to him by the King of Persia who much delighted in his company) dy'd here without issue male in the year 1671. He erected a curious Hospital and endowed it for the maintenance of ten aged poor people who by his Will are required religiously to observe the Sabbath day and to be present at church in time of Divine Service and Sermon. At present (200 years ago) Ledston hall is the seat of the Lady Elizabeth Hastings daughter of Theophilus Earl of Huntington by the eldest daughter and co-heir of Sir John Lewis.

Lewisiana.

From the London, England, Chronicle.

Digging among the curious periodicals that fall in heaps upon the table we find "Lewisiana," which is published at Guilford, Conn., U. S. A. Its object, according to the editorial explanation, is "to bring all of the name of Lewis and their kin into mutual acquaintance and friendship." And inside we find the genealogy and exploits of all kinds of obscure Lewises from all parts of the world. If your name is Lewis—or you are connected with that illustrious name—you are invited to describe yourself, your descent, and your place of residence. This is probably the first family paper produced. Yet we doubt if every Lewis is anxious to be on terms of friendship with every other Lewis.

Lewises are today, as of old, "an ancient and honorable family." Ed.

Chapter DII.

From the Bellingham, Wash., Herald.

Clancey M. Lewis (1211 v p 34 Vol. XVII) B. S., promoter, incorporator, trustee and stockholder in the Chuckanut Portland Cement Company, first came to Bellingham in April this year.

Mr. Lewis is a practical and experienced engineer who has made a specialty of cement, its manufacture and use and whose experience and training entitle him to high rank among the authorities on this and kindred subjects.

Professor Lewis's boyhood was spent among the mines of Montana and Idaho. He graduated from the department of mines of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in 1899; he spent the winter of 1899-1900 studying mining school problems in America and Europe and visited many educational institutions in Europe and Asia.

In the spring of 1900 he was appointed professor of mining engineering and metallurgy of the Canton

Christian College, at Canton, China; also serving that institution as treasurer. Shortly after his engagement there he began a geological survey of the province of Canton and took up the study of concrete work in the construction of college buildings in connection with the Green Island Portland Cement Company of the Orient. During the summer of 1903, in addition to his other duties, he served the United States government as superintendent of famine relief work in South China.

At the expiration of his first term of service in October 1905, he was reappointed to the college faculty at Canton; and, in consideration of his five years of continuous service, was granted a three years' leave of absence. During the last year he has been engaged in investigating the deposits adapted to the manufacture of Portland cement along the Pacific coast from San Diego to Bellingham, with results of which he may well be proud. He is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, of the Central Mining institute of Germany and of the Educational Association of China.

The work he has already accomplished on this coast is sufficient to insure his name a place in history. In view of the growing and unlimited field for the use of Portland cement, and the vast amount of cement material available along the Pacific slope. Professor Lewis's thorough knowledge of mining and metallurgy bids fair to be of incalculable value to this portion of the country.

Harlow C. Lewis (1005 v p 135 Vol. XI) one of Chester's oldest and most respected citizens, died at his home Saturday evening, Dec. 29, 1906, after an illness of about two months, ae. 80. About two months ago when Mr. Lewis was returning from the Post Office, he fell into a ravine which leads to his home and injured his spine and was taken to his home by his friends. He was confined to his bed until his death.

Mr. Lewis spent most of his life in Chester working for many years in the old North foundry. Leaving there he went to Middlefield where he remained a few years. Chapter CLXXIX.

From the St. Louis Republic.

"Varied experience and a thorough knowledge of commercial affairs," said a manufacturer yesterday, "are invaluable appurtenances for any career. Even in a profession they are serviceable. The work of a traveling salesman, as affording him contact with persons and industries, illustrates the point that I make. The rise of Edward S. Lewis (496 v for portrait p 251 Vol. XVI) president of the new Central National Bank, which opens on December 1, attests to the effectiveness of commercial training.

"Mr. Lewis ought to make the new financial institution of great influence, for he knows mercantile conditions, and he has banking insight. He did not find difficulty in organizing a bank having a capital and surplus of $1,500,000.

"Mr. Lewis was born and educated in Missouri. He became connected with the wholesale firm of Wear & Hickman in 1867, and subsequently went to Chase & Cabot, acting consequently as buyer and department manager until 1881. Desiring wider experience he then accepted a position as traveling salesman for Crow, Hargadine & Co., now the Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Company.

"In 1884 he became a member of the company and soon thereafter became an officer. He is now vice-president of the concern. In 1901 he was elected vice-president of the Colonial Trust Company, and has served as an officer or director in several financial institutions. He has been honored with the highest offices in the Travelers' Protective Association of Missouri, the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association and other organizations."

Mr. Lewis was born in this city Sept. 8, 1851, and resided here all his life. He was educated in the public schools and began his business life in the shoe store of Thomas F. Pierce in the Arcade. Later he learned the jeweler's trade and afterward was a conductor for the Union Railroad Company for nine years. He was appointed Sanitary Inspector in 1894 and retained the office up to the time of his death. He was a member of Doric Lodge of Masons of Auburn, having been Marshal of the lodge several years ago.

Chapter CCCXVI.

From St. Louis Republic.

Suddenly on Tuesday, Oct. 23, 1906, Rufus A. Lewis (950 v p 108 Vol. XVI) at his residence at Crescent, St. Louis Co., Mo., aged 78 years and 11 months. Mr. Lewis a wealthy land owner had lived in the county since 1851. He appeared in good health Monday and walked with his wife to the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Frazer, at Glencoe, a distance of two miles. That evening his spirits were good and he read until 9 o'clock when he retired.

Three ch. survive him, Philander P. Lewis, who is cashier of a bank in Eureka; M. C. Lewis, Assistant Deputy Assessor of St. Louis, and Mrs. George Frazer of Glencoe.

One brother, M. D. Lewis (951) an attorney in St. Louis is the only remaining member of the generation. The funeral was from the Lewis Memorial Chapel at Crescent.

With the exception of the homestead which is left to his widow, the extensive property of Rufus A. Lewis of Crescent, is left in equal shares to his widow and two of his three children. His daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Frazer, is not included in the division, because she received during his lifetime property which she sold for more than the portions left to the other children.

To his granddaughter, Florence Alexander Lewis, only child of his dead son, John A. Lewis, he gave $5, because he had deeded to her father during his lifetime property which she will inherit. The same amount was given Mrs. Frazer.

The testator directed that the family pictures, especially those of his father and mother, and of his first wife, the mother of all his living children, and his dead son, John A. Lewis, should be kept in the family forever, though they may be divided among the children.

Chapter CCCXVIII.

From In the Shadow of the Lord.

A Romance of the Washingtons.

George was recalled to Pine Grove by an event of stirring import to his family—Betty's marriage to Col. Fielding Lewis (6) in March, 1750. The bridegroom was a recent widower, his first wife having been a close relation of Augustine Washington. But life was short in Va. then, and no one was shocked when the departed having been duly and lovingly mourned for a brief space, their places were filled by the living and their tasks taken up by other hands. To Mary, the woman of constant heart, these quick second marriages were incomprehensible; but she wisely realized that her own case was the exception, and the rule was a healthy and natural one. She gave her own dear dau. to Col. Lewis with no tremors for the cherished girl's future, and although the separation would deprive her of the companion whose presence had been a source of unspeakable comfort and brightness, she was thankful that Betty's choice had fallen on a man of high character, kindly disposition, and competent fortune. The fact that the young girl would have to be mother to his children at this, her own early start in life, presented no drawback to Mary's mind; the same thing had happened to herself. . . . Also she took great comfort from the fact that Kenmore, Col. Lewis's house, was in Fredericksburg, and that there would never be more than the width of the Rappahannock between Betty's new home and her old one.

Clippings.

Mrs. Rosa Lewis is said to be the most famous cook in England, whose delightful productions the King is always glad to sample.

As a curtain raiser we shall see the first performance on any stage of "The Goal," a one-act play by Henry Arthur Jones. Sheldon Lewis, an actor whose method contains considerable power of a somewhat unwieldy but decidedly sincere kind, will have the leading part in the little play—that of a dying civil engineer who laughs, grumbles, argues and drinks a toast to the women in his last hour.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 1.—Corporation Counsel J. Hamilton Lewis of Chicago, was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of local Scotsmen last night and in his speech declared for the election of the President's Cabinet by popular vote, and also said that a convention should be called at once to force the election of Senators by popular vote on the ground that the events of the last few years have cast a blot on the fair name of the higher house of Congress.

Witness that decision a year or so ago which should endear the gallant judges of the Bayou State to every feminine heart. Mrs. Anna Lewis, of Yoakman, Texas, had ordered her daughter's trousseau from a New Orleans dressmaker. Only the wedding-dress arrived in time, and this proved to be four inches too short in front. To use the words of the young lady, "It was just like wearing a short rainy-day skirt with an immense train behind." As the court feelingly put it, "At this discovery the expectant bride was overcome by disappointment and chagrin. She had to be held up while her mother and two friends undertook to rectify the garment and she took to her bed. What could be done was done, but the gown continued to be one inch too short in front and the bride was ashamed to wear it, though forced by necessity to do so."

Is it any wonder after this that a verdict of $575 was not considered to be more than fair compensation for the bride's mortification in going to her husband unprovided with a suitable trousseau, and for her disappointment in being obliged to forego several entertainments in her honor?

Washington, Dec. 18.—The Marquise de Fontenoy tells a rather interesting story about the recent marriage of an American heiress to a noted member of the Irish aristocracy. She says that although Major the Hon. Murrrough O'Brien, half-brother of Lord Inchiquin, is a Protestant and belongs to a Protestant family, his marriage to Miss Marguerite Lewis of New Orleans, was solemnized the other day in London according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, to which his lovely bride belongs. Major O'Brien served with distinction during the Boer War in South Africa and now commands a battalion of the famous
