L. L. L. Notes.

Jamestown next. The Supreme Chancellor and Herald are receiving many Hotel and Transportation Circulars. Are you interested?

Shall L. L. L. Headquarters be in Tent City or Inside Inn? The Chancellor would be grateful for expression of opinion from members.

Frank P. Lewis (9. L. L. L.) Seattle, Wash., writes of severe winter weather and coal famine.

Harry W. Lewis (30. L. L. L.) Erie, Penn., is suffering from the grip.

Edward G. Lewis (69. L. L. L.) accompanied by Mrs. Lewis, was a guest of the Washington Gridiron Club in December. While in Washington he had an extended conference with President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Mabel G. Lewis (70. L. L. L.) 3d Vice-President of the Lewis Publishing Co. of St. Louis, Mo., is spending a three months' trip on the Mediterranean.

GENEALOGICAL RECORDS.

Explanations, Abbreviations, etc.

For convenience the records of the various Lewis families are divided into Books and each Book into chapters. At the head of each Book appears the name of the earliest known ancestor of that family. The List of Books is a complete index to the Books as published to this time. New Books will be added from time to time as new branches of the Lewis family are found. As soon as Books are proved parts of others they will be merged into the Books to which they belong. Each name is numbered when first printed and whenever the name is repeated this number follows in brackets. The abbreviations commonly used in genealogical work are used.

Manville E. Kenyon, on Congress st., Moravia, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1906, ae. 88 y 10 m 12 d. Mr. Lewis was b in Petersburg, N. Y., Sept. 25, 1817, son of Rev. Zebulon Lewis (1207) an old time Methodist minister of those early days when men of his class rode the circuits. His mother was Elizabeth Greenfield, sister of the late John Webb Greenfield of New Hope. In his early youth his father removed with his family to the eastern part of the present town of Niles, where the boy grew to manhood and engaged in farming, living about fifty years on the same farm near New Hope. He m (1) 1845 Eliza A. Baker who d 1892. They had a dau. who d ae. 16 years. He m (2) 1894 Mrs. Sarah A. Kilborne who d in Nov. 1905. For the last eleven years or more, his home had been in Kelloggsville until his removal to this village in June last. His nearest living relative is a half brother, Jacob B. Lewis (4094) of Troy, N. Y. Mr. Lewis was best known for his sturdy honesty, unswerving integrity, and conscientious Christian character. He was without enemies or enmities and had for many years been a devoted and consistent member of the M. E. Church at New Hope. It may well be said of him that the world is better for his having lived in it. Burial at New Hope, N. Y.

Correction:—Dorleska (4096 v p 84 Vol. XVII) m Peter Landers not Sanders.

Humphrey, wrote as follows from Peaine, Mich., which at that time was the name of "King" James Strang's Mormon town at the harbor of St. James on Big Beaver Island, so named in honor of the Indian Chief "Peaine" of Garden Island, whose daughter Straug had unsuccessfully sought in plural marriage. (This letter was evidently sent by a passing boat to Buffalo, N. Y., as it bears the post-mark of that post-office, with date of Apr. 17).

Seth Lewis, Marshall, Mich. Dear son:—Please write to your mother and tell me if Spalding has been with you the past winter. He left here in Dec. last, saying to me to go and spend the winter with you and return to me as soon as he could return this spring. I have not heard anything since he left here. Now Seth, you know my anxiety. I have mailed three letters to him but have not received one. I am on Big Beaver Island teaching school most of the time. My little George is with me. Etc. Your mother and friend."

Chapter CDXXVI.

Here and There in the Family.

The Lewis Publishing Co. of St. Louis has issued a souvenir edition (20 pages) of the Woman's National Daily.

The January issue of The World of Today has the portrait of Senator L. W. Lewis (2040 v p 103 Vol. XIV) "author of the resolution introduced into the Iowa legislature calling upon Congress to formulate and propose an amendment providing for the choice of senators by popular vote."

As founder and Mayor of University City, Mr. E. G. Lewis (2209) is doing a good public service which the authorities of St. Louis County failed to do—he is clearing out the law-breaking saloons and disreputable resorts in the district around Delmar Garden... Mr. Lewis has started his new town on a good foundation of law enforcement and moral cleanliness.

Chapter CDXXVII.

From St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When we hinted in a short paragraph that St. Louis might ultimately be annexed by University City we thought it a jest, little dreaming that it could ever be consummated. But recent events would appear to indicate that the protean mayor and proprietor of that young municipality has serious designs upon our "thriving little city". He has secured an option upon a vast tract of land comprising our western territory and is steadily marching eastward with his conquering check book. It is a peaceful but potent conquest.

If Mr. Lewis's purse is long enough he may buy his way to the river and then change the spelling of our town to "St. Lewis," which is the way most of us pronounce it now. It would be a sort of poetic justice upon us for forgetting our French origin.

From Moodus, Ct., Advertiser.

Gideon Brainerd Lewis (1637 v p 24 Vol. XII) who dropped dead of heart disease in Millington Monday, Dec. 31, 1906, was a native of Haddam, where he was born 72 years ago. His parents were Augustus (969 v p 121 Vol. VI) and Wealthy (Bates) Lewis. Mr. Lewis was educated for the ministry, but never followed that pursuit. For many years he was a well-known school teacher in Haddam. He had been a resident of this town for a long time and was at one time a member of the Board of Education. He was also a justice of the peace in East Haddam. He leaves two children, a daughter and a son, Roswell Lewis (1693) of Mount Parnassus, at whose home the funeral was held Thursday afternoon. He also leaves a brother and sister, Edward Lewis of Colchester and Mrs. Emory O. Dowd of East Hampton.

EDMUND LEWIS, Lynn, Mass.

Chapter CLXXXI

Read May 9, 1888 at the annual meeting of the Providence Marine Corp of Artillery by Adjutant Geo. B. Peck.

Dexter B. Lewis (83. LX v p 25 Vol. VII) second child of Benjamin and Mary Sprague Lewis, was born in this city Sept. 20, 1820. He received such education as the public schools of that day afforded, which was supplemented by a more or less protracted course in a private school kept by Oliver Angell (long a terror to the North End boys) in the Canal Market building, corner of North Main and Mill streets, after he had relinquished the charge of the public school near the corner of Benefit street. While here young Lewis had for playmates Colonels Edwin Metcalf and Willard Sayles, who have since won enviable reputations at the bar, and the late Rev. Joseph R. Manton, well known on both banks of the Mississippi from Minnehaha to Vicksburg as an active, devoted and popular preacher. Later and when yet a youth he was employed as a night clerk in the post-office, devoting such hours of the day as were not required for sleep to the care of Cleveland Brothers' books, as well as of another set whose owners are not remembered. Subsequently he was employed for similar duty by Abbott & Bliss, calico printers. While here he so improved his opportunities for picking up practical information that we next find him, with the late Benjamin Cozzens, running a cotton mill in East Greenwich. For some years he was associated with the late Robert S. Burrough, under the title of Burrough & Lewis, in the oil and cotton business, but for many years with Colonel J. Lippitt Snow, as Snow & Lewis, in the handling of dyestuffs and chemicals on Exchange place. He died suddenly of heart disease, July 17, 1887, ae. 66 y 9 m 27 d.

Mr. Lewis was eminently mercantile in his tastes and hence was not entirely at home save in his office and with gentlemen devoted to commercial pursuits. We naturally find him therefore not only a director in the old Liberty Bank and the Second National Bank, but also in the Board of Trade. Upon two occasions, however, he became sufficiently interested in municipal affairs to occupy a chair in the City Council for the First Ward from 1851 to 1853 and for the Second from 1875 to 1876. On the other hand, the charms of the Squantum Club were sufficient to attract him to its membership. Correspondingly his military record is brief. He was admitted to the Marine Artillery May 21, 1847, was chosen third gunner April 24, 1848, and was placed on the honorary roll April 30, 1873. He was elected Second Lieutenant of this association at its organization in 1874 and First Lieutenant in 1875.

On Sept. 6th, 1842, Mr. Lewis married Mary Ann, dau. of John C. and Lucy W. (Dexter) Leveck, who survives him with two sons and one dau.

From Lewis and Kindred Families.

The best evidence locates John (25) oldest son of Robert Lewis (8) of Belvoir, on Dan River about five miles east of Danville, in Halifax co., Va. It has been only by the most persistent search and constant perseverance that any of his descendants has been located and identified. 4 ch. b.

Francis (1071) left sons and daus. indeed, a long line of descendants. He settled in Ga., and many of his descendants removed to Ala., one of whom, Dixon H. Lewis was in the U. S. Senate from that state, his history belongs to the country and would require more space than a work of this character would admit. He was a man of ability, rare personality and striking figure; he bordered very nearly upon the domain of giants; his weight approximate 500 pounds; and as the stage coach was, at that time, the only public means of travel, he always paid double fare.

Chapter CCCXXII.

From Appleton's American Biog.

Dixon Hall Lewis (1075) b Hancock co., Geor., Aug. 10, 1802, d N. Y. City, Oct. 25, 1848. He was educated at the Coll. of S. C.; studied law; and removed to Ala., where he practiced his profession. After serving two terms in the legislature he was elected in 1828 to Congress. In 1840 he became U. S. Senator and served until his death. Mr. Lewis was a forcible speaker and a sound lawyer. His politics were of the extreme State-rights school. His stature was enormous (v p 15 Vol. XIII) and his weight 430 pounds. Furniture was made for his special use and he was compelled to engage two seats in railway and other public conveyances. On one occasion a steamer on which he was a passenger was wrecked, but, fearing to imperil the others, he refused to enter the boat till all the passengers were saved and for a time was in imminent danger.

Chapter CCCXXIII.

From Cleveland, O., Leader.

Columbus, Jan'y 17, 1907.—John B. Lewis was today pardoned from the State Penitentiary, where he has been confined since 1892, on a life sentence for murder, committed in Hamilton county.

Lewis says:—"I am a descendant of an old family and none of my family besides myself has ever been in prison.

"My gr. gr. father's name was John D. Lewis. He had five sons, Fielding, William, David, Stephen and John D., Jr. All were born in Culpepper co., Va., and grew up with the Washingtons. Fielding, the eldest son, m Elizabeth (Betty) Washington, the sister of George Washington.

"In 1784 Washington, with Lawrence Lewis, his nephew, eldest son of Fielding Lewis, and three of the latter's brothers, David, William and Stephen, with several others started on an expedition to Ohio. They struck the Ohio River at Fort Duquesne and went down the Ohio to the Muskingum. Washington and his nephew, Lawrence Lewis, returned to Virginia, while several of the party continued to descend the river. Among these was my gr. father, Stephen Lewis, and two of his brothers, William and David. Coming to Kentucky, my gr. father, his brother David and other members of the party stopped in what is now called Lewis county, taking its name from my grandfather's. After remaining a few months in Kentucky David Lewis, with a force of men, went to Southeastern Ohio to help fight the Indians, who were committing depredations against the white settlers. Here David settled in what is now, I believe, Warren county.

"My gr. father, Stephen Lewis, m Julia Griffith, a Baltimore lady, and to them were born five sons, Fielding, David, William, Stephen and John. All were born in Lewis county and all are dead. My Uncle Fielding lived to be eighty-four years old. My father, Stephen, was killed by a locomotive explosion in 1873.

"I have now living three brothers, Stephen S., C. P. and Robert Lewis, the latter my twin. All served with Kentucky regiments in the Civil War. I was born March 7, 1850, and was not old enough to enlist. After the death of my father I remained at the old homestead with my mother until she died in 1880. I was married at the age of thirty-nine years in Cincinnati. We moved to Oklahoma and after six years returned to Cincinnati. We had two ch.

"And here I am, just freed from a felon's cell, the sting of disgrace in the hearts of my loved ones. But, though I was a convict, I am not a criminal. The act for which I was sentenced was not of my own volition, not caused from malice, but from a drunk-crazed brain."

FRANCIS LEWIS, Wales to N. Y.

Chapter LXXXI.

From the American Historical Review.

Of the original Fifty-One thirty members (among them Francis Lewis) found places on the Committee of Sixty (elected Nov. 22, 1774). With one or two exceptions, these thirty were taken from the extreme radical wing of the Fifty-One and from those moderate conservatives who ultimately preferred to become revolutionists rather than loyalists. . . . The Sixty proceeded at once to nominate a ticket. Without any serious opposition apparently, the old delegates—Isaac Low, Philip Livingston, James Duane, John Alsop, and John Jay—were named, together with six others—Leonard Lispenard, Abram Walton, Francis Lewis, Isaac Roosevelt, Alexander MacDougall and Abram Brasher. Of the new men, none was conservative like Duane or Low, none, perhaps, moderately judicious like Jay, none timid like Alsop. Three of them at least—MacDougall, Lewis, Roosevelt—were men who would speak and act effectively and unhesitatingly for radical measures . . . The provincial convention assembled at New York on April 20, 1775. On the following day the old delegates, with the exception of Isaac Low and John Herring, together with five others—Peter Schuyler, George Clinton, Lewis Morris, R. R. Livingston, and Francis Lewis—were elected to represent New York province in the second Continental Congress. Of this delegation the city's members were no longer a majority. One of the most conservative of the old city delegates, Isaac Low, had been replaced by an avowed radical, Francis Lewis.

In 1892 James A. Lewis and Frank F. Lewis were living on a little farm in Indiana. There was a large family (9ch.) and the parents were poor. It was a constant struggle to provide food and clothing for all. There was no money for education. The two boys went in rags, wearing no shoes until the first snow fell, but they whistled as they worked and were happy.

To-day the Rev. James A. Lewis is well known on the lecture platform, and is at present making a tour of the Central States in the interests of the Mallalieu Seminary at Kinsey, Ala., the youngest field secretary engaged in such work in the United States. He is 33 years old.

The Rev. Frank F. Lewis is pastor of one of the large churches at Somerville, Mass. Both young men were graduated from De Pauw Univ. The Rev. Frank F. Lewis, the younger brother, now 29 years old, in addition to his work at De Pauw, has been granted a diploma from the Boston Theol. Seminary and has won scholarship to Harvard. During his pastorate of the coming year he will attend Harvard and will receive his degree next year. After a year at Boston as assistant pastor of the Old South Church he took a trip to Europe. He visited nine countries, including England Norway, Italy, Turkey, Greece and Asia Minor, and his expenses on the trip were just $150.

Receiving an invitation from John Lewis, my classmate in the University of the City of New York, and in Union Theological Seminary, to attend his ordination at Fairplay, Wisconsin Territory, I (Rev. William Salter) crossed the Mississippi at Bellevue the last day of April (1844) and was two hours in getting over, the river being higher, it was said than since 1828 and the islands and lowlands on the Illinois shore under water. In his examination by the Mineral Point Convention Mr. Lewis stated that when a clerk in a bookstore in Boston he attended Lyman Beecher's church and that on several successive mornings when sweeping out the store, Dr. Beecher came there and gave him wise and helpful counsel. Mr. Kent preached the sermon, and I gave the right hand of fellowship. In obtaining his education Mr. Lewis had been aided by Christopher R. Robert, the founder afterwards of Robert College, Constantinople.
