Notes for Nellie Van Horn:

From Nancy Todd Romo September 28, 2010 - Great Grandmother Nellie van Horn.... my Aunt Jenny was the historian and she spoke with dad about Great grandmother. According to what we had learned is that Nellie was born in Holland. The van Horns are not German but Dutch. When her parents arrived in the US they had to return for some type of business. They could not afford to take Nellie back with them so she was placed in a boarding home until their return. Unfortunately while her parents were back in Holland there was an epidemic and they were delayed in returning to the United States. The boarding money ran out at the home and Nellie was literally "sold" as a helper to the Walls. She may have later been adopted by them. There was a "history" of the van Horns trying to locate their daughter upon their return but never located her. How this was known we do not know. She was a wonderful woman and we loved her very much. And she was a tall lady too.... When her husband passed away the boys, including Margie's father and my grandfather and their other brother Clem, caught fish in the Sesquehanna River and smoked them. Great grandmother Todd tured her home into what would be known today as a bed and breakfast and fishermen from the north stayed there when they came to fish. The boys raised money by selling their fish. My grandfather headed north when he was around 14 years of age and lived with a family in the Philadelphia area and started working.
