

Erie Railroad Employee Records, Kent Division, Marion and Kent, Ohio Introduction (Index Follows)

The records referenced in the following index are of 1,003 employee records scanned from a book acquired by the Erie Lackawanna Historical Society from a woman in the Ohio area who says she got it from an older gentleman who claims to have come upon it in one of the railroad buildings in the area. They contain information about the employees from the Marion and Kent, Ohio areas and yards. The earliest work start date is March 4, 1895 when Jay George Lee started as an operator. His employment record has only two entries after that, a merit for noticing something dragging from a train in 1915 and then a record of reexamination on the operating rules in 1941, 46 years after he started. The latest ending entry discovered is for George Robert Blake on November 26, 1948 when he was examined by the surgeon for a vision test. At that point he had worked 20 years for the railroad and he was 48 years old.

The records reflect the employee's time working with the railroad starting with the hire date and concluding with the last entry made for that individual. It is unlikely if this is a complete record of their employment as there are few notations of people leaving the company. The entries reflect promotions, medical exams, injuries, disciplinary events, leaves of absence, certifications and other job related events. Because of the time period covered there are some entries for workers returning from World War I and many entries for people going off to the Second World War. The records contain only 25 records for females (based on names) with 15 of those occurring during the period of WWII.

With few exceptions the files have an employee number which appears to have been constructed by using the first letter of the last name and then a sequential set of digits to represent the individual. The sequence of the records in the book appears to have no immediately evident order or sequence. There are several different numbers found on many of the pages, the details for these are explained in the directions for using the data.

The format of the records varies suggesting various locations created them or at least different people or company standards where applied. Some of the pages appear to have been large format blank ledger pages and the contents of this book are the left side of the page with some amount of the right side of the page cut off. It is unclear if any data is missing from that cut off but the employment records seem to be complete as they often fill the pages and then continue on the back. In fact this is why some individuals take as many as 7 images to view the entire record since the pages are longer than a legal size page and a few use multiple pages. The type of paper used varies within the book also indicating the long time period over which the records were created. There are several records which refer the reader to the employee file for more information. That makes these pages only part of the employee's total employment records. Some records also have start dates way in advance of the first dated entry on the record. On some of these pages there are initial entries that appear to be a form of summary for the first part the employment history with no specific dates.

Any discoveries or theories about the content, format, location, etc of these records should be sent to the ELHS so that the information can be studied and when appropriate added to the data we currently have.

Footnotes:

Source: A book of Erie Railroad employee records recovered from railroad offices, in custody of the Erie Lackawanna Historical Society. This Index was created by Curtis Springstead from a review of the records during scanning.

Spreadsheet columns and their descriptions:

Seq – This represents the sequence for the records in the book as it was found.

Employee Number - These are composed of the 1st letter of the last name and a sequential number for that letter.

Last and First names - The name as printed on the record. Some records are hard to read so it is possible that some may not match what you may see and despite our best editing efforts there are certainly still some misspellings in the list. Records generally had a middle name or the entry "None" for a middle name.

Date of Birth – All but 4 records contain a date of birth entry, many back into late 1800's. There is also at least one error in the data provided so all of these dates must be considered as the secondary source that they are. The known error has a date of birth in the same year as date of hire, unlikely a newborn was hired.

Start Date - Generally this entry was labeled as Hire Date, if this label is not present it represents the date of the first entry on the record. The hire date is often far in advance of the first dated entry indicating that they may have records in other divisions, representing other periods in time (there may have been a gap in employment). In some of these cases there are undated entries that seem to try and reflect what happened between hire date and the first entry. There were also dates for promotions in the headers but these were seldom used and therefore not recorded here.

End Date – This is the last dated entry or the last dated referred to in the last entry as some entries contain a note such as "suspended from April 20-April 25 for . . .". In these cases we captured the April 25 date. These clearly represent just the last entry made and not necessarily the end of the person's career with the railroad. Only a few entries are final, at least one person died and another did indicate quitting.

Comments – There were many things observed during the scanning that are important to the researcher. Mainly this contains the number of images required to capture the entire record if more than one scan was required. There are entries about the 4 people with two records that are duplicates or overlap. A series of records were made two to a page and the comments tell you which record they share a page with. The rest of the entries are hopefully self explanatory.

Typed Number - There is a number typed on some of the pages, most often it is a 5-6 digit number that seems to have been some form of employee number as well. On occasion this typed number seems to correspond to a series of stamped numbers and appear to be part of that sequence of numbers.

PR Number - There are a few records with another number labeled "PR" that can only be inferred to mean it is a payroll number. Only 42 records contain this number.

EB Number - Two records contain numbers labeled "EB" one is 5 digits the other 6. They are for men who joined in the mid 1920's and worked until the mid 1940's. The purpose is not clear at this point in time. A handful of records contain Social Security Numbers (Railroad Retirement) and these were not recorded to protect people who may still be alive since these numbers were not started until the early 1930's.

Age hired – This is a calculated value indicating the years between the birth date the hire date.

Years worked – This is also a calculated value between the Hire date and the last entry date. A reminder that we have no assurance that the last entry represented the last date of work as many people have annual physicals or rules certifications as their last entry and it is hard to imagine doing this on the day a person is fired, quits or otherwise leaves the company.

Age at end – We calculated how old the person was when the last entry was made.
