The principal seats near Shrewsbury are, Berwick, the seat of Thomas Powis, Esq. Sundon, of Mr. Corbet; Tern, of Noel Hill, Esq. Lerrignor, of Robert Burton, Esq. Cundover, of Lord Clive; and Underhill, of Hen. Powis, Esq. Here is a very visible and remarkable appearance of the great ancient road called Watling-street, which comes from London to this town, and goes on from hence to the utmost coast of Wales. Remains of a stone-bridge are to be seen in the bottom of the river, when the water is low. This road is raised a good height above the soil, and so straight, that upon an eminence you may see it to ten or fifteen miles before you, and as much behind, over many hill-tops answering one another as a vista of trees. In the month of May, 1773, a very remarkable accident happened at a place called the Birches, between the Colebrooke-dale and Builder's bridge, where a high
