

Allanfon Winn, bart. Baron Headley in the Kingdom of Ireland, and M. P. for Ripon, co. York.

10. At his house in Kildare street, Dublin; Arthur first Lord Viscount Harberton. He was grandson of the Rev. Arthur Pomeroy, chaplain to Capel Earl of Essex, Lord lieutenant of Ireland 1672, and dean of Cork, and son of the Rev. John Pomeroy, by Elizabeth daughter of Edmund Donnellan, of Cloghan, co. Roscommon, esq. He was born 1723, and represented the County of Kildare 1761; and, after the dissolution of parliament, 1783, was created Baron Harberton, of Carbery, co. Kildare. He married, 1747, Mary, youngest daughter and coheir of Henry Colley, esq. of Castle Carbery, elder brother of Richard first Lord Mornington; and by her had 4 sons, Henry his successor, Arthur-James, John, in holy orders, and George; and 3 daughters, Elizabeth, died young, Henrietta-Judith, married to James Hewitt, eldest son of Lord Listford, died 1778, and Mary, married to Sir John Craven Garden, of Templemore, co. Tipperary, died 1778.

12. Mrs. E. Cory, wife of Mr. Cory, of Brompton, to whom she had been married only two years. Her husband got up and went out on the alarm of fire at Mr. Hill's in Piccadilly (see p. 348); and she, to amuse herself till his return, took a book. A spark is supposed to have fallen from a candle on the bed on which Mrs. C. sat, and in a few minutes consumed all the furniture in the apartment. The flames and her dreadful shrieks alarmed the neighbours, who, on forcing the outer door, found her in the hall, burnt in a manner scarcely to be described, and presenting a shocking spectacle to an affectionate husband on his return from a calamity which he was consoling himself had not befallen him or his. Every assistance was immediately but ineffectually obtained; for, after much suffering for a week, she expired. Her lamented fate, added to the many other accidents from fire, if they create future caution, in some measure compensate society for what it has lost.

At Harrow Weald common, Mr. Geo. Stanway, attorney.

At his house on Hanwell-heath, in his 82d year, Frederick Commerot, esq.

At Chatham, suddenly, James Hamilton, esq. many years clerk of the survey of the dock-yard there.

13. In Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, Matthew Johnson, esq. late lieutenant-colonel of the 69th regiment, and gentleman-usher of his Majesty's privy-chamber.

14. At Moresfield, Suffolk, Mrs. River, wife of the Rev. Thomas R. rector of the place, and youngest daughter of Culling Smith, esq. of Popes, Herts.

15. At his house on Tower-hill, aged 66, Mr. John March, printer; a man of the most amiable disposition; who by industry, frugality, and a train of fortunate events, has left an ample fortune to a widow and only son. He is the fifth member of the Court of Assistants of the Stationers Company has lost since Christmas last.

In Berners'-street, Mrs. Chesep. After a painful illness, Miss A. E. Coleman, youngest daughter of the late Henry C. esq. of Leicester.

At Wollaton, near Nottingham, in his 75th year, Rev. Isaac Pectinal, rector of that place, and of Trowell, in that county.

16. At Ripon, co. York, in his 70th year, John Perry, esq. alderman and member of that corporation.

At Harperley, George Pearson, esq. clerk of the peace for the county of Durham, receiver-general for the Bishop of Durham, and deputy-register of the Court of Chancery in that city.

Mrs. Anne Chester, of Leek, co. Stafford, wife of Mr. Tuf. C.

Mr. Lambert, formerly keeper of county bridewell of Leicester; emphatically and deservedly styled "The Humbugler."

At the house of Robert Carr Brambury, in Ranthby, co. Lincoln, Miss Anna Davys, eldest daughter of Mr. Davys, of Loughborough, co. Leicester.

17. In Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, Lady Robert Berris, relict of the late Robert B. uncle of the Duke of Ancaster.

At Rochester, Mr. Joseph Patten, many years one of the proprietors of the Colliery, Brompton, and Rochester colliery.

Near Chesham, W. Reynolds, many years one of the coroners, and sheriff of the county of Essex.

At Portsmouth, Major-general David Colwell, commandant of marines.

M. Hutchings, of Exeter, lieutenant.

18. At Great Bookham, Surrey, 80th year, Mr. Edward Bennett, farmer in Palace-row, Tottenham-court-road, Wightman, of the Surrey militia.

At Welworth, Surrey, Capt. Thomas Dyson, of the royal navy.

19. At Brompton, near Chatham, James Mairs, physician. In attending upper barracks there, he caught a fever, which ended his useful life.

20. At Knightsbridge, after a short illness, John Downes, esq. of Stratton, co. Northampton.

At the hotel in Exeter, on his return from Lisbon, whither he had been for the benefit of his health, Ralph Coxon, esq. of Howbault, co. Northumberland.

21. At Dawlish, Devon, in the prime of life, Mrs. Bealey, wife of Dr. B. who has lately resided there.

Of a fever, the eldest daughter of Capt. Walter, of the royal navy.

Capt. Alexander Hood, commander of the Mars man of war, nephew of Lords Hood and Kridport, and brother to Capt. Samuel Hood, of the Audacious. This gallant hero received his death-wound in a brilliant engagement with L'Hercule, a French man of war, off Brest, soon after the action commenced, but lived to receive the welcome news that the enemy had struck. He expired nobly exhorting his men to support the honour of the British navy, and to maintain the character of Britons. Capt. H. has left a widow and five children. (The particulars of the action in our next.)

22. At Kingston, Miss Haddock, late of Halifax, co. York.

23. At Hackney, James Chauvel, esq. lieutenant-colonel of the 1st regiment of the Tower-Hamlet militia.

Of a decline, aged 25, Mr. Jn. Beazley, of the Transport-office. If mild and amiable manners, innate kindness, and diffusive benevolence, possess any claim to the esteem of mankind, society has been deprived, by the death of this young man, of a valuable and promising member, and those who knew and respected his virtues of a sincere and affectionate friend.

24. At Camberwell, Surrey, Mr. Rich. Kemp, partner in the house of Messrs. Baxter, Kemp, and Noble, St. Mary-at-Hill, London.

25. Mr. Thomas Bird, farmer, of Stamford, co. Lincoln.
