Genealogy and Biography

JOHN H. EDWARDS. The name of Edwards is one of the oldest in the State history of Rhode Island, and one that has been identified for years with the growth and development of the town of West Greenwich.

John Edwards, father of

John H. Edwards, born in Coventry, R. I., Feb. 9, 1809, was a triplet, and was one of a family of twelve born to Richard Edwards. He married Lucinda King, of Scituate, born in 1811, who died in 1882 in Warwick, while visiting a daughter who was a resident of that place. Mr. Edwards removed to West Greenwich, and there spent the last forty years of his life, passing away in 1884, one of the most highly respected citizens of that place. He was active in politics as a member of the Republican party, and was town sergeant for a number of years. Mr. Edwards was the father of the following children: Rhodes K., Benjamin S., George W., Amy A., Mercy, Lucinda, John Henry, Abby F. and Sullivan M.

John Henry Edwards was born in West Greenwich, R. I., Jan. 6, 1846, and attended the public schools of the place of his nativity until the early part of the Civil war, when, in November, 1861, at the early age of fifteen years, he enlisted in Troop F, 1st Regiment Rhode Island Cavalry. He was discharged in May, 1862, after a long and painful illness with rheumatic fever. After the war he again turned to his studies, attending Greenwich Academy and the Connecticut Literary Institute, at Suffield, Conn. He taught school for a number of years, after which he engaged in business, conducting a general store at Moose Neck. He was ordained to the pastorate of the Frenchtown Baptist Church, in 1872, resigning, however, in 1879, to accept an appointment from the Rhode Island Baptist State Convention as missionary colporteur for the State. This last position he resigned after about two years' service, and accepted an invitation to become pastor of the Exeter Baptist Church, serving in that capacity until 1893, when he resigned on account of ill health after having been pastor of that church for eleven years. During his Exeter pastorate his church entertained the Narragansett Baptist Association. He was moderator of the association in 1885, and the appointed preacher before that body in 1889. Since the close of the Exeter pastorate Mr. Edwards has not been in the active ministry, but has sometimes temporarily served neighboring churches, as occasion required.

Mr. Edwards has given effective public service. He was chairman of the school committee and superintendent of schools from 1883 to 1892, and is now serving his eighteenth year as town clerk of his adopted town. He became senator in January, 1902, and is still serving in that capacity. He is a Republican, and takes an active interest in public affairs. He took a foremost part in the organization of the State Board of Public Roads, in 1902, became its first chairman, and has served as such continuously ever since. He drew up the original bill of the present good roads law in Rhode Island. He is a man of high and just ideas, and believes that the ballot box is the only medium through which the integrity of our political and civil institutions may be preserved.

Mr. Edwards was married Dec. 3, 1871, to Phoebe H. Brown, daughter of Seth A. and Lucinda (Corey) Brown, of Exeter, and has one son, William H., who was born in West Greenwich, Oct. 20, 1872.

SMITH. Since prior to the American Revolution the Smiths of the town of Barrington have been a continuous family there, and given to the service of the town, in both military and civil life, highminded, noble men and women, whose work in social, religious, educational and business lines gives abundant evidences of the best progressive citizenship. Among those of the name whose lives have been worthily lived and who have impressed their force upon society may be mentioned Hons. Nathaniel Smith, Sr., and Jr., father and son, the elder a patriot of the Revolution, and both prominent public characters, a number of times representatives in the State Assembly; Major Nathaniel Church Smith; Hon. Asa Smith, for years a representative in the Lower House of the State;

Hons. William Henry and Lewis Bosworth Smith, both honored with a seat in the State Assembly, the latter many times in both the House and the Senate and long one of the town's leading spirits, whose influence for good and Christian character was a force in the community; Mrs. Martha Smith, a woman of rare good qualities and force of character; the Misses Lydia, Elizabeth Joy and Eliza Chandler Smith, influential in educational lines, the force of whose characters and lives was felt in the community; Henry Smith, State Senator and Representative; Hon. George Lewis Smith, the citizen-soldier, an officer in the Civil war and many times since highly honored in both town and State, a Senator and a Representative; Nathaniel Wait and Irving Mauran and Harvey M. Smith, prominent business men of Providence; and Charles Joseph Mauran Smith; all representatives of the typical Rhode Island business men and citizens.

One Henry Smith, who came in the ship "Diligent," in 1638, from the County of Norfolk, England, was early at Hingham, and a representative or deputy to the General Court, and removed to Rehoboth in 1643, dying there in 1649. His son, Henry, was a resident of Rehoboth, and one of the proprietors of the Sowames lands (out of which came Barrington) not far from 1660. He was an ensign and a representative in 1662, and several times thereafter. He left a numerous posterity.

(I) James Smith, the first in direct line, of whom we have authentic record, married Sarah Kent.

(II) Nathaniel Smith, son of James and Sarah (Kent) Smith, was born about 1747. He married Lillis Humphrey, and they had the following children: Josiah, born May 21, 1772; Nathaniel, Jan. 23, 1774; Bicknell, July 15, 1776; Ebenezer, May 21, 1778; Simon, Sept. 26, 1782; James, Oct. 15, 1783; Sarah, Sept. 14, 1785; and Asa, Feb. 18, 1788.

Nathaniel Smith, the father, was a farmer owning a large farm near Rumstick. On the breaking out of the war he was first a minuteman, and afterward a recruiting officer. In the early days of the war he served as sergeant in Capt. Thomas Allin's company, in August, 1775; at the alarm at Bristol, R. I., April 1, 1776. On Jan. 20, 1777, Col. Nathaniel Martin ordered a guard to be kept night and day at his father's house in Rumstick, Mr. Smith performing service at the time. He was also a member of Capt. Bosworth's Artillery Company, and was later one of the guards appointed by Col. Nathan Miller, Jan. 5, 1777, to serve at Rumstick for fifteen days. He served in the militia of Barrington April 5-May 20, 1778. He was appointed sergeant in Col. Topham's regiment in 1778-79. Mr. Smith died in March, 1823, aged seventy-six years.

(III) Simon Smith, born Sept. 26, 1782, son of Nathaniel, and grandson of James and Sarah (Kent), married Jan. 2, 1807, Lydia Bosworth, and in their family were the following children:

William Henry, born March 25, 1816; Lewis Bosworth, Sept. 14, 1817; Lydia, Feb. 7, 1822; Elizabeth Joy, Jan. 25, 1825; and Harriet Bicknell, Aug. 1, 1827.

(IV) William Henry Smith, son of Simon, born March 25, 1816, married Martha Smith, daughter of Ebenezer. Mr. Smith was a resident of Barrington, where he was greatly esteemed and highly respected. He was honored by his fellow townsmen with a seat in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, representing Barrington in that body in 1856, and he also held several town offices. He died while yet in middle life, in Barrington, in 1864, aged forty-eight years. Both he and his wife were active for the best interests of their town. Dr. Bicknell, in his History of Barrington, pays the following tribute to Mrs. Smith: "She, a woman of unusual mental and moral power and with large opportunities, would have ranked with the best intellects of her sex. Her mind was clear, original, vigorous, always seeking for truth, and in her family, the church, and in society, was a leader in thought and action. Her life has inspired all to noble motives and conceptions of life." Mrs. Smith died in 1898.

(IV) LEWIS BOSWORTH SMITH, son of Simon, born Sept. 14, 1817, at Nayatt, in Barrington, R. I., married (first) Anna D. Martin, born April 1, 1815, and died in July, 1861, and (second) Nov. 2, 1862, Mrs. Judith R. Parker, daughter of Hon. James Bowen, of Barrington, R. I. Mr. Smith received such educational advantages as the neighboring schools of his boyhood afforded, such as were within the reach of the general farmer. To this was added one term of school in the village of Washington, R. I. Reared to agricultural pursuits, he continued a farmer and on the homestead throughout a long, busy and most useful life. He early showed a fitness for public life, and he had hardly reached his majority when he was called upon to discharge official duties pertaining to town affairs, and so well did he perform them, manifesting such interest and fidelity, and so capable was he, that he seemed marked for a public career. This was but the sowing of the seed—the harvest of a long public career followed. He was overseer of the poor, member and president of the town council, member of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, representative in both branches of the Rhode Island Assembly, deacon in the Congregational Church, treasurer of the United Congregational Society, trustee of the public library, on the school committee, chairman of the committee which built the town hall, on the committee which built the State almshouse, etc. When but twenty-four years of age, in 1841, he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, under the old charter, and was re-elected in 1842-43-44-45. In 1842 he was chosen, with Nathaniel Brown, as a delegate to frame the Constitution of the State. He was honored repeatedly by his fellow townsmen with a seat in the Senate, his services in that body beginning in 1865, and closing in 1873. He was returned to the House in 1884, 1885 and 1886. In the meantime he was made, by appointment of Gov. Van Zandt, a member of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, a position he held for two terms or twelve years. A staunch Republican, Mr. Smith was active and prominent in the councils of the party, giving to it freely his valuable services. He was frequently a delegate to the conventions of that party. While a farmer in main and in earlier life, he later was largely identified with the Nayatt Brick Company, and with a large amount of probate business which was committed to his care.

Mr. Smith's religious connections were with the Congregational Church at Barrington, with which he united in 1832; he was made deacon in 1857, and treasurer of the United Congregational Society in 1853, sustaining these relations with the church and society until the time of his death—sixty years a member, nearly thirty years a deacon, and more than thirty-nine years treasurer. In 1871 he was a delegate to the National Congregational Council, held at Oberlin, Ohio.

In the various services which Mr. Smith rendered the town, the State and the church, he acted with wisdom, prudence and a high regard for the welfare of individuals and the best interests of society. In public life he was an earnest advocate of honesty and economy in the State government, a warm friend of education, and a strong supporter of the temperance cause. He was known as a man true to his own convictions, and fearless in the advocacy of what he believed to be right. Mr. Smith died suddenly, in the lower vestibule of the Congregational Church in Barrington, R. I., Sunday morning, May 19, 1892.

The following beautiful tribute was paid to the life of Mr. Smith by one of his lifelong friends and townsmen—Hon. Thomas Williams Bicknell, LL. D.—in his history of Barrington, R. I.:

"Among the personal agencies which labored for town and society the most influential and thorough-going worker was Lewis B. Smith, who devoted the strength of a long life to the upbuilding of public interests in town, church and State. He was a thorough-going Barrington man, loyal to its history and, devoted to its welfare. He was a well-balanced man, strong in his physical, mental and moral nature. He was a man of broad views and sympathies, natural and acquired. The school of life was his educator, for he owed but little to the schools of his youth, which were of an inferior sort. A liberal education would have made of him one of the most commanding of men of his time. He united in his person the Smith-Bosworth characters. His moral nature ruled and subordinated, or rather co-ordinated, his mental and physical natures. He was born in 1817, and united with the Congregational Church in 1832, and was an interested witness of the trying events of that period. At the age of manhood he entered public life. He was a delegate to the Convention to form the State Constitution in 1842, and from that time to his death was occupied with public concerns. He was a peacemaker as well as an organizer. The parsonage difficulties were settled mainly by his active diplomacy. The meeting-house was remodelled in 1851, and Mr. Smith was the leading spirit in the improvement as treasurer of the Congregational Society and Church. He was the trusty and faithful agent of both, and when funds were wanting, and collections in arrears, he advanced ministers' salaries and paid bills out of his own moneys. One such man in Barrington was equal to a host of common men in leading and reconstructing society. Enemies he had, and opposition he encountered, but he won his triumphs with the weapons of goodwill and peace. When the Civil war came Mr. Smith accompanied his son, George, to the recruiting station, and during the four years of trial he was the helpful friend of every Barrington soldier in camp, in hospital, or in the field. He wrought always with and for men for the good will of all, and the town and State honored him as few men of our town have been recognized. The office of lieutenant-governor was offered him by the leaders of the Republican party, but he declined the honor, as it seemed to him to involve at the time the loss of independent manhood. His name appears on almost every page of our town's history since 1840, and to those records as well as to these pages the student of Mr. Smith's life must go for the details of his splendid services for Barrington."

To the first marriage of Mr. Smith were born three sons, namely: George Lewis, Sept. 23, 1840; Frederick P., Sept. 17, 1846; and Albert H., Dec. 11, 1853. Mrs. Anna D. (Martin) Smith was a native of Barrington, and a descendant of one of the ancient families of that region of country. She was in the seventh generation in direct line from Richard Martin, early at Rehoboth, and of record there as early as 1669, her lineage being through John and Joanna (Esten), of Swansea; Ebenezer and Abigail (Wheeler), of Barrington; Col. Nathaniel (a shipbuilder of Barrington, several times deputy to the General Court, soldier and officer of the Revolution) and Elizabeth (Humphreys); and Sullivan and Belinda (Peck) Martin.

(IV) The Misses Lydia, Elizabeth Joy and Harriet Bicknell Smith, daughters of Simon and Lydia, and sisters of Lewis B., born Feb. 7, 1822, Jan. 25, 1825, and Aug. 1, 1827, respectively, as teachers in the schools of Barrington made their influence felt in a remarkable degree in that line of the town's activity. They received good academic training in the seminary in the adjoining town of Warren, and carried to their schools the spirit and labors of true teachers, and to their homes the cheer of true friends and fellow helpers.

Miss Lydia Smith became the wife of George W. Wightman. Miss Elizabeth Joy Smith devoted the best years of her life to teaching.

(V) GEORGE LEWIS SMITH, son of Lewis Bosworth, born Sept. 23, 1840, at Nayatt, in the town of Barrington, R. I., married Dec. 27, 1865, Adelaide Eliza Peck, born March 22, 1840, daughter of Asa and Lucretia S. (Remington) Peck, he a descendant of Joseph Peck, who came from England in 1638, and was of Hingham and Seekonk, Mass., through Nathaniel, Nathaniel (2), Solomon, Solomon (2), and Ellis Peck, of Barrington, Rhode Island.

George Lewis Smith was reared on the home farm in Nayatt, in the town of Barrington, R. I., where his ancestors had lived for generations. He had hardly reached his majority when the echo from Fort Sumter reached the ears of the sons of New England, and, leaving the sowing and planting and the harvesting to other hands, he joined the ranks of the boys in blue June 5, 1861. Entering the army as a private soldier in 1861, he returned to his home at the close of the war a captain, with an honorable war record, which in brief is as follows: Enrolled June 5, 1861, in Company D, 2d Regiment, R. I. V. I.; discharged at Washington, by reason of promotion to second lieutenant, Company A, 3d Regiment, Rhode Island Heavy Artillery; originally served as second lieutenant of Company A, June 2, 1862, on detached service with Company E, at James Island, until July 6, 1862; Oct. 1, 1862, detached to service gunboat "George Washington;" wounded by explosion of cannon on gunboat "George Washington;" mustered in as a lieutenant to date June 1, 1863; assigned to Company G; Feb. 1, 1863, ordered on special duty commanding gunboat "George Washington;" and so borne until April 27, 1863, when ordered to report for duty with Company A, at Beaufort, S. C., this detail to date from April 9, 1863; relieved from duty with Company A. by S. O., dated May 10, 1863; Oct. 5, 1863, ordered to command Company G; Dec. 27, 1863, appointed post ordnance officer for Port Pulaski and Tybee Island; Jan. 15, 1864, commissioned captain and mustered in as captain of Company D, to date Jan. 29, 1864; Feb. 9, 1864, relieved by order of command of Company G, and of duty as post ordnance officer; Oct. 5, 1864, mustered out.

After the war, returning to the old farm in Barrington, Capt. Smith resumed civil life, and the career that has since followed has reflected credit on himself and on the name he bears, he having worthily followed in the footsteps of his distinguished father. He has been influential in the Republican party, and as well in citizenship. He has enjoyed a full share of the honors of his party and fellow townsmen. He has served as assessor of taxes, been a member of the school board for twenty-one years, served as school superintendent, served as a member of the board of Charities and Corrections, been president of the Barrington Rural Improvement Society, represented his town in the State House of Representatives in 1894, 1895 and 1896, and was State Senator in 1897 and 1898. He was the originator and warm advocate for the establishment of the high school in Barrington, and has sustained numerous other relations to the town of Barrington. Capt. Smith is a man of practical business ability, liberal in his views, generous, public-spirited, and conservative in action. He took his family abroad in 1891, and passed much of 1891-92 in travel around the world. His wife is a woman of culture, and in her maidenhood was a most successful teacher in her native town. She served as first superintendent for the Barrington public schools. Their children are: George Howard, born July 23, 1867, married Olive B. Holmes, and they have had four children: Mildred Remington (born July 15, 1893), Lewis B. (Nov. 6, 1895, is deceased), Harold Holmes (Nov. 6, 1896) and Edward Manton (Nov. 17, 1901); Anna D., born Dec. 30, 1873, married George R. Gray, of Worcester, Massachusetts.

(III) Nathaniel Smith, son of Nathaniel, born Jan. 23, 1774, married Sept. 21, 1794, Wait Mauran, born Aug. 27, 1776, daughter of Joseph Carlo and Olive Mauran, and there were born to them children as follows: Joseph Mauran, Jan. 6, 1796; Olive Bicknell, Sept. 11, 1800; and Nathaniel Church, Oct. 12, 1811. Nathaniel Smith was a representative from Barrington in the General Assembly of the State in 1826-27 and 1828, and either he or his father in 1809-10, 1811-12.

(IV) Joseph Mauran Smith, son of Nathaniel (2), born Jan. 6, 1796, married (first) Miss Kingsley, of Swansea, and for his second wife, Sally Bosworth. His children were: Rufus, Charles J. M., Benjamin, Sophia, Olive, Wale and Elizabeth.

(V) Charles Joseph Mauran Smith, son of Joseph Mauran, was for a long period of years one of the town's representative citizens, highly esteemed and greatly respected. By his cheerful nature and the kindness of his heart he won and held fast many warm friends. For some forty years he was a consistent member of the Warren Methodist Episcopal Church. He died May 8, 1892.

(IV) Nathaniel Church Smith, son of Nathaniel (2), born Oct. 12, 1811, married April 8, 1835, Sally Bowen, daughter of Judge James Bowen, of Barrington, R. I. The marriage was blessed with the following children: Antoinette Sharpe, James Antoine, Albert, Nathaniel H., Nathaniel Wait, Louise Bowen, Emily Eddy (who married George H. Babcock), Walter Parker, Irving Mauran, Ralph Antoine and Harry Martin.

Nathaniel Church Smith was a farmer at Rumstick, in Barrington, R. I. He was a member of the school committee and town council nearly every year from 1855 to 1869. He served as captain of the Barrington militia, and it was probably he who was made in 1836 major in the Bristol County Regiment. Of him says Dr. Bicknell: "He was devoted to the growth and interests of Barrington, was public-spirited, firm in his adherence to conscientious beliefs, possessed of genial and social nature, looked at men and events from the hopeful standpoint, spoke evil of no one, and was respected by all and beloved by those who knew him best. His family, parents and children have been ornaments of Barrington." Mr. Smith was a Democrat in his political belief before the war, but later became a Republican in tendency and during the latter years of his political career was always elected with the aid of his Republican friends in the town. He was a member of the State Assembly from Barrington in 1855-1869, and in 1870-71. He died in 1876. He was a member of the Congregational Church of Barrington, and a regular attendant on religious services.

(V) NATHANIEL WAIT SMITH, son of Nathaniel Church, born Dec. 18, 1842, was in early life employed in the well known wholesale drug establishment of Snow & Claflin, of Providence. He devoted himself most faithfully to their interests, and in 1873, on the formation of the firm of George L. Claflin & Company, became a partner in the concern. He was possessed of more than usual aptitude for commercial affairs, and won for himself an enviable reputation for sterling integrity, untiring industry and executive ability of no small degree. He was deservedly popular with all classes. He died, greatly lamented, Jan. 7, 1875, at the early age of thirty-three years.

In April, 1870, Mr. Smith married Emily F. Cole, daughter of Edmund Cole, and a descendant in the eighth generation from (I) James Cole. His son, (II) Hugh Cole, married Mary Foxwell. Their son, (III) Ebenezer Cole, born in 1871, married Mehetable Luther. Their son, (IV) Ebenezer Cole, born Oct. 27, 1875, married Patience Miller. He was a prominent man in his day, was deputy to the General Court from Warren in 1870, 1872 and 1877, and was active during the Revolution, being one of a committee to procure blankets for soldiers in July, 1780. He died July 9, 1798. His son, (V) Benjamin Cole, born in 1759, died in 1837. His son, (VI) Luther Cole, married Sallie Salisbury. Their son, (VII) Edmund Cole, married Olive Maria Wheeler, daughter of Darius Wheeler.

To Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel W. Smith came two children: (1) Walter C., born Jan. 9, 1871, is a manufacturer of dairy machinery in Bellows Falls, Vt., being a member of the Vermont Farm Machine Company, who turn out principally cream separators. He married Bertha D. Somers of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and has three children, Margaret Dunham, Walter Cole, Jr., and Esther. (2) Nathaniel W. was born Nov. 18, 1873.

(VI) NATHANIEL W. SMITH, born Nov. 18,

1873, son of Nathaniel Wait, received his academic education in Yale College, graduating in the class of 1896, with the degree of A. B. He subsequently attended the New York Law School, from which he was graduated in 1898. He was admitted to the New York Bar that same year, and to the Rhode Island Bar in 1899. Entering the office of Edwards & Angell, he was admitted to this firm in May, 1903, and was appointed assistant attorney for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad in January, 1904. On Jan. 1, 1907, he became attorney for this road. In the spring of 1906 he was chosen assistant Judge Advocate General with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel on the General Military Staff of the State of Rhode Island.

On Sept. 23, 1905, Mr. Smith was married at South Kingstown, to Ellen Howard Weeden, daughter of William B. Weeden, of Providence. They have one daughter, Mary Weeden, born Oct. 10, 1906. Mr. Smith is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, Orpheus Lodge, Providence Chapter, St. John's Commandery and Rhode Island Consistory.

(V) Irving Mauran Smith, son of Nathaniel Church, and brother of Nathaniel Wait, born July 15, 1852, at the old Homestead at Rumstick, in the town of Barrington, R. I., married April 12, 1887, Mrs. Caroline (Wakeman) Ketchum, and the marriage was blessed with two children, namely: Kenneth Valentine and Nathalie Church Smith. Mr. Smith was given quite a liberal education and began his practical business preparation in the wholesale drug house of George L. Claflin & Co., of Providence. Subsequently he left this employment to go into business on his own account, when was formed the partnership of Kenyon, Smith & Co., on Exchange Place, Providence. After several years' experience in the new enterprise, Mr. Smith returned to the Claflin & Co. house, and remained with it until the middle seventies, when he severed his connection therewith to become secretary and treasurer of the Inter-State Petroleum Company, relations he sustained through the remainder of his life.

Mr. Smith inherited a genial nature, an active disposition and a sanguine temperament. He needed no stimulus for work, for his busy mind was full of plans for himself and others, which no obstacle could hinder and no discouragements, nor counter influences, check. He was open-hearted and possessed no arts of concealment, or of private scheming, so that his life, character and purposes were an open book, known and read by all. He was constantly thoughtful for the good name of his native town, and was always on the alert to do something to add to its attractions. He was the efficient president of the Barrington Rural Improvement Association, and of the Rhode Island Society, the successful operations of both of which were largely due to his efforts. Mr. Smith died Dec. 1, 1895. The following tribute to the memory of Mr. Smith is paid by Dr. Bicknell in his History of Barrington:

"Mr. Smith was one of the most active, useful and unselfish men Barrington has produced, and his early death may be traced to excessive labor in local affairs, added to the cares of family and business. He was a natural leader and reformer and engaged in new projects with unbounded zeal and faith in their success. He counted difficulties and opposition as naught compared with the gains of successful plans. The town of Barrington was his idol, and he worshipped its history and traditions, and worked without stint for its advancement. He led in the organization of the Barrington Rural Improvement Association, and was the leading spirit until his death. Through this association he led the way in securing the recognition of Arbor Day as a State Holiday. The Rhode Island Business Men's Association owes its life to him, and he was chosen its first president in recognition of his labors. The same is true of the Rhode Island Improvement Association. His example was contagious and inspired all to larger efforts, and there is scarcely a feature of the physical features of the town that has not in these busy years of his life felt some benefit therefrom. The present History of Barrington was undertaken at his urgent suggestion, endorsed by the Town Improvement Association. His life work may be said to have been suggestive, administrative and inspirational. His ambitions lay along the lines of public service, and his name and reputation are secure."

(V) HARRY MARTIN SMITH, born Jan. 14, 1858, son of Nathaniel Church Smith, was reared on the home farm and received most of his education in the public schools of Barrington, the last four years of his school life being spent in the English and Classical High School of Mowry and Goff, in Providence, where he took the English course. He finished his schooling in 1876, and in that same year engaged with the firm of Barker, Whittaker & Co., hardware dealers, to learn the business. He remained with this firm for seven years. In 1883 he connected himself as salesman with the firm of Brown Bros. & Co., dealers in mill supplies, and remained with them for fifteen years. This firm was re-organized and incorporated in 1896, and Mr. Smith became a stockholder and director in same for the last two years of his connection with it. He severed his connection with this firm in 1898, when in company with Rufus B. Goff, Henry C. Clark, Harry C. Cheney and Fred E. Spaulding, all formerly connected with the Brown Brothers Company, he incorporated the Standard Mill Supply Company, Mr. Smith becoming vice-president, which position he has held ever since. Later C. H. Child and Wallace R. and William A. Chandler, all of the firm of Brown Brothers Company, came into the firm. Mr. Smith has spent considerable time traveling through New England in the interest of the concern, and has a large acquaintance with the textile men of that region. He has been successful in his field of work and his present position in the business world is the result of his own efforts and well-directed energies. He is a member of the New England Manufacturers' Association.

While in earlier years Mr. Smith was active in public matters, of later years, on account of the stress of business, his efforts have been confined to furthering the interests of the Republican party and work along party lines. He has always been a strong Republican. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., belonging to What Cheer Lodge, Providence Chapter and St. John's Commandery, and also to Palestine Temple. Mr. Smith is a regular attendant of the Central Congregational Church of Providence.

Mr. Smith married Mrs. Esther Maria Harris, daughter of William Whitcomb (deceased), of East Providence. They have no children.

(III) Asa Smith, son of Nathaniel and Lillis, born Feb. 18, 1788, married May 1, 1808, Phebe Arnold, of Woodstock, Conn., and to the marriage came the following children: James Arnold, born May 31, 1810; Henry, Nov. 1, 1812; Sarah Ann, Nov. 30, 1814; and Eliza Chandler, Nov. 11, 1817. Mr. Smith was one of the substantial men and useful citizens of Barrington, which he represented in the State Assembly in 1816-18-19-20-22. One of his daughters was active in the earlier educational work of the town. She and Miss Judith R. Bowen established an excellent private school in 1842 at Forest Chapel, Barrington Center. Of Miss Smith Dr. Bicknell writes: "Another influential teacher was Miss Eliza C. Smith, daughter of Asa. Miss Smith was one of the ablest and most valuable women Barrington ever produced. She was endowed with dignity of person and bearing, with fine intellectual qualities, well trained and disciplined for teaching, with a spiritual and moral nature actively ruling her life, and inspired by the highest ideals. She taught in all the schools of Barrington, and her influence over the boys and girls, who came under her instruction can never be measured. I regard it as the greatest privilege of my early life to have felt the awakening and guiding influence of this noble woman, and her pupils have always borne testimony to her power, not only as a teacher, but as a true earnest Christian woman. Miss Eliza C. Smith was a positive force in helping to create a new Barrington."

(IV) Henry Smith, son of Asa, born Nov. 1, 1812, married at Pleasant Ridge, Hamilton Co., Ohio, Martha Lester, and there were born to them children as follows: Mary E., born Oct. 20, 1838; Ellen H., Jan. 5, 1840; Sarah Ann L., Oct. 12, 1843; Hannah C., July 19, 1845; and Frank H., Sept. 13, 1847. Mr. Smith was a representative from the town of Barrington in the State "Senate in 1847, 1848 and 1849 (and he or another Henry in the House in 1873-75).

WHITCOMB (East Providence family). Since early in the nineteenth century the name of Whitcomb has been a continuous one at Providence and vicinity, and been representative of one of the substantial, highly esteemed and respected families of this city and suburbs. Reference is made to the family of the late Willard Whitcomb, who for many years was the genial host and landlord of the old "Franklin House," and of the "City Hotel," two of the olden time popular Providence hostelrys; and to his son, the late Hon. William Whitcomb, who for approximately a decade and a half was one of the leading men of his adopted town, East Providence, filling the most important offices of honor and trust of the town, and representing it in the General Assembly of the State.

The life and character of the late Hon. William Whitcomb is thus beautifully told in an article written at the time of his death (May 17, 1882) by an old friend, and which appeared in the Providence Journal, of May 19, 1882, over the signature of H.:

"I have rarely in all my life received a more painful message than that which announced the death of my friend. I have been expecting, as he had been, that his father might die any day for several weeks past, but that he should precede him, and that without a warning, was to me a shock indeed. On Monday evening he was unusually well and cheerful, conversing with his family until bedtime. On Tuesday morning at sunrise, his wife noticed something unusual in his manner and called a friend. On Wednesday morning at the same hour he had crossed that unknown river. But what is death, anyhow? I am more and more puzzled the more I reflect upon the dark mystery.

"I have known Mr. Whitcomb from his early boyhood intimately and thoroughly. He was the son of Willard and Esther (Davis) Whitcomb, and was born in Millbury, Mass., on the 17th of October, 1828, and came with his father to reside in Woonsocket in 1835 or 1836. From there his father came to Providence and took the 'Franklin House,' in 1838, when I went to live with them, and continued with them as long as his father kept the house, and when he took the 'City Hotel' I went to live with them there, and stayed as long as they kept it. I should think that I lived under the same roof with William Whitcomb nearly thirty years.

"When I look back to the 'Franklin House,' in 1838-39-40, and so on, and recall the men, my fellow boarders, and associates, hardly one of whom remains, it is a sad picture indeed. Charles Potter, who owned the house, was then unmarried and made his home there. John Bowers, the old supercargo for Brown & Ives, and who once seen could never be forgotten, lived and died there. The elegant gentleman and most agreeable companion, Hartford Tingley, lived with us; the late Tully D. Bowen was there; the late Samuel Currey was a boarder; Augustus Tower and William Burdick, so long connected with the Mechanics Bank, were both there. But why enumerate? Their names are legion and they are all gone. I occasionally receive the kindly greeting of my friend, George Butts, to remind me of the days and the scenes that were passed there. We lived as one family, and the boy, William, as he grew to manhood, was regarded as one of us.

"His father, in some respects was a remarkable man, remarkable for the knowledge of human nature, for his habits of industry, and for his perfect self-control. The sun never rose on him in bed. While in health during his long life of eighty years, no man, however shrewd, ever passed any false coin on him, and through all the trying scenes that I witnessed with him in a hotel life of thirty years, I never knew him to betray the slightest exhibition of temper.

"It was under these influences and with these surroundings that William Whitcomb spent his whole life from birth till death. He was the only child that survived. He had a sister who died very young, and his father ever treated him as an equal. There was the most perfect confidence between them. Few men have died in Rhode Island, who had a larger personal acquaintance than William Whitcomb, and I think that he enjoyed to the best the respect, confidence and esteem of them all. No greater tribute to his character and worth as a man could have been bestowed upon him than the manner in which he has been treated by the citizens of his adopted town. He went with his father and family to reside in East Providence thirteen years ago, and continued there until his death. During that period he had filled the most important offices of honor and trust in that town, a long time one of the leading men of the town council, and for many years, at different periods, representative of the town in the General Assembly. At the April election in 1882 he received the unanimous vote of a caucus of between two and three hundred members for the office of State Senator, and was re-elected to that place which he held the last year.

"In the spring of 1868 Mr. Whitcomb and his father concluded to give up the hotel business and retire to the country to spend the remainder of their lives with their families in peace and quiet. His father visited South Kingstown with a view of purchasing and locating upon the Foddering place, a celebrated ancestral estate, situated at the head of Point Judith, but did not make the investment, and in March, of that year, removed to their present home, which is located five miles from Providence, on the road to Warren, just where it deflects to the east, upon a rise of ground overlooking the whole of Narragansett Bay. There are few more delightful spots in Rhode Island. There with their fifty acres of highly cultivated grounds, their herd of thirteen blooded Alderney cows, their splendid pear and peach orchard, their magnificent grapery and abundance of flowers, have he, his father, mother and wife and daughter lived most happily together all these years. Few men's deaths of my acquaintance will be more sincerely regretted."

The wife and widow of Hon. William Whitcomb, Mrs. Helen S. Whitcomb, was formerly Miss Helen S. Watson, daughter of John H. and Sophia (Gaige) Watson, her marriage to Mr. Whitcomb occurring Oct. 6, 1854. Their only daughter is Esther M., the wife of Harry M. Smith, vice-president of the Standard Mill Supply Company, Providence.

The Massachusetts Whitcombs in general descend from John Whitcomb, who came from Dorchester, County Dorset, England, to New England, and as early as 1633 was a resident of Dorchester, Mass., but about 1640, removed to Scituate and thence, in 1652, to Lancaster, where he died Sept. 24, 1662. His widow died May 17, 1671. His sons, who probably came with him from England were: John, Robert, Jonathan, Job and James. There were daughters Catherine, Abigail and Mary.

DEXTER. The Dexters, the posterity of Rev. Gregory Dexter, conspicuous in the early Colonial history of Providence, have through successive generations been dwellers of Rhode Island for 260 and more years. A man of fine talents and intellect himself, not a few of the descendants of the fourth pastor of the old Roger Williams Church, Providence, have left their impress upon the communities in which they have lived. Some of them have been public benefactors. Dexter Asylum in Providence, with which is linked the name of its founder, the late Ebenezer Knight Dexter, will long perpetuate the family name. The achievements of the eminent sculptor and painter—the late Henry Dexter—whose statue of Warren at the Bunker Hill monument associates the name with an historic event, reflect credit not only upon the family name but upon the State and nation. Not a few of these Rhode Island Dexters have adorned the professions and elegant walks of life. Here in the State of Rhode Island the Dexters have been a respectable, industrious and thrifty people. To the lives and lineage of some of these it is the purpose of this article to refer. In the genealogy and family history that follows, the Roman characters indicate the generations removed from the emigrant settler.

(I) Gregory Dexter, born in 1610, at Olney, Northamptonshire, England, came to America with Roger Williams in 1644. He was a printer and stationer in London, and had been in correspondence with Williams. He printed for Mr. Williams there in London, in 1643, the latter's dictionary of the Indian language. On coming to New England he was received into the First Baptist Church at Providence, of which he subsequently became pastor. In a few years after his arrival in Providence, he was chosen town clerk. In 1648 he was chosen a "commissioner" to represent the town in the General Assembly, and again in 1650. He was president of the two towns of Providence and Warwick one year, 1653-54. In the subsequent history of the State the name of Mr. Dexter occasionally appears, as taking part in the civil affairs of the Colony. On the death of Rev. William Wickenden, Feb. 13, 1669, Mr. Dexter succeeded him to the pastorate of the Providence Church. While in this position amid his other duties he won the name of an effective, able and successful preacher. He was the first accomplished printer that came to the Colony, and although he did not pursue the occupation here, he occasionally went to Boston and rendered assistance in that line there. He printed with his own hands the first almanac for the meridian of Rhode Island. Mr. Dexter is referred to by Dr. Stiles as a man who had been well-educated, possessed handsome talents, and was a distinguished character in the Colony. And Morgan Edwards says of him: "Mr. Dexter by all accounts, was not only a well-bred man but remarkably pious. He was never observed to laugh, seldom to smile. So earnest was he in his ministry that he could hardly forbear preaching when he came into a house or met with a concourse of people out of doors." Among his later civil duties, he went to London and secured the charter of Rhode Island. Mr. Dexter married Abigail Fullerton and their children were: Stephen, born Nov. 1, 1647; James, May 6, 1650; John, Nov. 6, 1652; Abigail, Sept. 24, 1655; and Peleg, in 1658.

(II) John Dexter, born Nov. 6, 1652, married Feb. 16, 1688, Alice, born in 1665, daughter of John and Sarah (Whipple) Smith. Mr. Dexter settled on lands owned by his father, on what afterward was the Pawtucket turnpike, a little north of what was known as Harrington's lane, where he had a good farm. "He was most emphatically a religious, a military and a business man." He lived and died on his farm. He filled acceptably several public stations, and was a man of capability, energy and responsibility. He was deputy much of the time from 1680 to 1705; was a member of the town council in 1688, 1699, 1700 and 1701; assistant in 1690-91; and major in 1699, 1700 and 1702, 1703 and 1705. He was Speaker of the House of Deputies in 1704-05. He died April 23, 1706. His widow remarried, marrying in 1727, Hon. Joseph Jenckes, Governor of Rhode Island. She died Feb. 19, 1736. Major Dexter's children were: Stephen, born April 15, 1689; James, Feb. 22, 1691; John, Oct. 24, 1692; Mary, April 30, 1694; Abigail, April 26, 1696; Sarah, June 27, 1698; Phebe, Aug. 4, 1700; Anne, Nov. 6, 1702; and Alice, Oct. 14, 1705—all in Providence.

Mr. Dexter settled in Providence by his father, on what afterwards was called the Market turnpike, a little north of what is now Harrington's lane, where he had a shop. He was most emphatically a religious man, a pious and a business man. He lived in Providence, R. I. He filled acceptably several town offices, and was a man of capability, energy and industry. He died April 23, 1706. His wife died in 1727. Hon. Joseph Jencks, daughter of Rhode Island. She died Feb. 10, 1707. Mr. Dexter's children were: Stephen, born Nov. 1, 1651; James, Feb. 22, 1651; John, Oct. 14, 1655; Mary, April 30, 1654; Abigail, April 30, 1655; Sarah, June 27, 1658; Phebe, Aug. 4, 1661; Nov. 6, 1702; and Alice, Oct. 14, 1707.

(III) James Dexter, son of John, born 1707.

Simon W. Boyle

1691, married Mary Whipple, born in 1692, in Providence. Mr. Dexter was a respectable farmer, and resided on the east side of Scott's Pond, in what is now Smithfield. He was a man of good abilities and considerable influence. He was a member of the General Assembly in 1711, 1713 and 1717, the youngest member up to the time ever elected to that body under the Charter. His children were: John, born in 1718; James, in 1720; David, in 1722; Anna, in 1723; Mercy, in 1725; and Hopeskill, in 1727, all in Providence.

(IV) John Dexter, son of James, born in 1718, in Providence, owned and lived upon a farm in Cumberland. He was a respectable man of his time, valuable to the community. His children were: John S., born in 1753; Daniel S., in 1754; Jabez, in 1756; James, in 1757; Nathaniel Balch, in 1758, all in Cumberland, Rhode Island.

(V) Nathaniel Balch Dexter, son of John, born in 1758, in Cumberland, R. I., married Lucy, born in 1758, in Grafton, Mass., daughter of Joseph Willard. Mr. Dexter was a tailor by trade and settled in Grafton, Mass., where he resided until 1797, when he removed to Pawtucket, R. I. He continued to reside in Pawtucket until 1830, when he removed to Providence, where he died in 1832. He was social and agreeable; and was the great story teller of his day at convivial gatherings. His children, all excepting the youngest three born in Grafton, and they in Pawtucket, were: Sally W., born in 1781; John W., in 1783; Hannah M., in 1785; Nathaniel Gregory B., in 1788; Waterman T., in 1790; Lucy, in 1792; Mary C., in 1794; Martha, in 1797; Sebra E., in 1798; Joseph, in 1801; and Eliza, in 1804.

(VI) Nathaniel Gregory Balch Dexter, son of Nathaniel Balch, born June 25, 1788, in Grafton, Mass., married in November, 1808, Amey, born in 1788, in Pawtucket, R. I., daughter of Jerahmeel Jenckes. Mr. Dexter removed with his father's family in 1797, to Pawtucket. He was educated by his parents and never went to school a day in his life. He early entered the counting room as a clerk to Samuel Slater, the first manufacturer of cotton yarn by machinery in America. While in his employ he opened the first Sunday-school in the United States, and taught it himself. The scholars were children who worked in the cotton mill. Capt. Dexter (as he was familiarly called), with the exception of a short time, about 1810, when he resided at Slaterville, was a resident of Pawtucket, where he had a good estate. For many years he was a manufacturer of cotton knitting yarn on an extensive scale, and most of his sons and their sons and grandsons in turn succeeded to the business. He was one of the main pillars of the Universalist denomination in Pawtucket. He maintained through life the reputation of an upright, prompt and energetic man in his business; and in his civil and social relations, he was generous, benevolent, frank, affable and kind. He was ever active in the pursuit of something.

In 1858 Capt. Dexter celebrated with his wife the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding, and among the hundreds of his descendants and friends present were two other couples, giving additional interest to the occasion, viz.: Rev. David Benedict, D. D., who had married Capt. Dexter fifty years before, was present with his wife; and Josiah Jones, Esq., then an active printer of Providence, who with his own hands had set the type that announced the wedding in a paper he was then publishing, made his appearance in the company with his wife, and read the marriage from his own paper, as he set it in type fifty years before; and what is still more wonderful both the clergyman and the printer, with the wives of their youth, all married in 1808, had this year, with Capt. Dexter, celebrated their golden wedding. Capt. Dexter died April 8, 1866. The children of Capt. and Mrs. Dexter were: Jerahmeel J., born in 1809; Lucy W., born in 1811, married William Fletcher; Nathaniel, born in 1814; James Gregory, born in 1817; Simon Willard, born in 1820; Daniel S., born in 1822; Amey, born in 1825, married Ferdinand S. Eddy, of Providence; and Samuel Slater, born in 1827.

(VII) Simon Willard Dexter, son of Capt. Nathaniel G. B., born July 25, 1820, in Pawtucket, R. I., married (first) in 1842, Anna Eliza, daughter of Samuel B. and Hannah Bowen, of Attleboro, Mass. She died in 1883, and he married (second) Aug. 17, 1884, Rose Maria Conley, daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Rush) Conley, who came to this country from England in 1853. Mr. Dexter received his education in the public schools of Pawtucket, and at fifteen in 1835, he went to Providence and entered the employ of Joseph Martin, jeweler, with whom he learned the trade and remained until 1841. Following this he worked for different firms in Providence and Boston, closing his career in this line of business when in the employ of Jonathan Sweet. From Boston in 1842 he returned to his native place and engaged in the shoe business, locating on Main street. In 1843 he became associated with F. S. Eddy, under the firm style of Dexter & Eddy. In the year following he gave up the shoe business and entered the mill of his father, and there it was he began the career of his life, and one which has distinguished him as a manufacturer throughout the whole country. His father's business had by this time grown to considerable proportions. It was now extended under the Dexter Brothers to meet the exigencies of the trade, but in that expansion a great revulsion occurred, and in 1876, a great loss was sustained. A mammoth foundation for a great industry, however, was laid by Mr. Dexter and his brother, who had done a business of from six hundred thousand to a million dollars annually, and in 1880 the Dexter Yarn Company was incorporated, since which time the business has gradually expanded, having now an enviable reputation. Mr. Dexter some years ago retired from the more active pursuits of a business life, but retained stock in the corporation. Mr. Dexter was a quiet unassuming man. He used his means freely for the good of the poor, was known for the probity of his character, and for the uprightness of a long and successful business career. He was an enterprising and public-spirited citizen. His wife was a most estimable woman. The following children were born to the first marriage of Mr. Dexter: Amey Eliza, born July 2, 1844; Emma Louise, born in 1845; Samuel Francis, born Sept. 3, 1847; and Amelia J., born Oct. 29, 1849. Of these, two are deceased: Amey E. died in 1845; and Amelia J., died in 1849. Mr. Dexter died Oct. 29, 1893.

(VIII) EMMA LOUISE DEXTER, born Oct. 31, 1845, married in 1865, Edward Thayer, who died Feb. 13, 1899. Three sons and three daughters were born to them: Simon Willard, born Oct. 5, 1867, is general manager of the Dexter Yarn Company; Alanson, born April 12, 1869, married Sadie Graham; Amey Jenckes, born March 9, 1871, married William H. Barclay, of Pawtucket; Florence, born Dec. 31, 1872; Edward, born Jan. 2, 1875; Emma Dexter, born Jan. 2, 1875, married Paul Aldrich, of Providence.

(VIII) Samuel Francis Dexter, son of Simon W., born Sept. 3, 1847, in Pawtucket, married Fannie, daughter of Dr. James L. Wheaton, of Pawtucket, and their children are: Nathaniel Wheaton, Fannie W. and Anthony Hamilton. Mr. Dexter was identified with the business of his forefathers, and for the last decade and more was the secretary and general manager of the corporation. In about 1902 or '03 he went to California and died there in 1906.

(VI) Waterman T. Dexter, son of Nathaniel Balch, born June 28, 1790, in Grafton, Mass., married Fannie, born in 1793, in Attleboro, Mass., daughter of James Orne, a cousin to Paul Revere. Mr. Dexter resided in Pawtucket where he was occupied in the manufacture of cotton yarn. His reputation was that of an industrious and respectable citizen. He was captain in the militia for many years. His death occurred April 9, 1870. His children were: Horatio, born in 1813, in Hopkinton, Mass.; Ann Eliza B., born in 1815, in Attleboro, Mass., married Caleb Ingraham, of East Providence; George Thomas, born in 1819; Fannie Orne, born in 1822, married Abner D. Hoar, of Providence; Waterman W., born in 1824; Henry Bowers, born in 1827; Sarah L., born in 1830, married Ray W. Potter; Caroline Reed, born in 1832; the last six were all born in what is known as North Providence.

(VII) Waterman W. Dexter, son of Waterman T., born Aug. 8, 1824, in North Providence (now Pawtucket) married (first) Mary J., born in 1828, in Fall River, Mass., daughter of Capt. Halsey Baker, and (second) Caroline J. Baker. Mr. Dexter is a resident of Pawtucket. For many years he was engaged in the jewelry business and dealt in fancy goods in that city, gaining a high reputation as a capable, industrious business man. In more recent years he has been engaged in the insurance business. His children, all born in North Providence, were: Grace A., born in 1847, who died when young; Clara A., born in 1849, married George A. Luther, of Pawtucket; Herbert C., born Feb. 29, 1852, married Ida Bishop, and has one child Florence; Annie G., born in 1854, married C. M. Farnum, of Chicago; Frank Gregory, born Dec. 8, 1856, married Stella Manning, and has one child, Earl; Fred W., born March 8, 1859, married Agnes E. Muir, of Providence, and is engaged in the jewelry business in Pawtucket; and Edgar M., born May 14, 1861, married Annie Baker.

(VII) HENRY BOWERS DEXTER, son of Capt. Waterman T., born March 27, 1827, in Pawtucket, R. I., married May 20, 1857, Emily, daughter of John Campbell, of Pawtucket, and one child blessed the union, Katie Bowers Dexter, born in 1859.

In boyhood Mr. Dexter attended both the public school and a private school, both in Pawtucket, and the latter at the time conducted by Joseph Watts and John Willard. His parents were not possessed of much of this world's goods, and young Henry while yet in school began to look out for himself, and by doing errands and other work now and then that presented itself, he had accumulated some little money before his school days were over. Following the cessation of his studies he served an apprenticeship with Messrs. Brown & Clark, of Pawtucket, at the machinist's trade, then took charge of the shop of John H. Potter. His next business experience was for himself as a member of the firm of Pimbley, Dexter & Co. Still later he was a member of the firm of Dexter & Cole. During this period Mr. Dexter was engaged in the business of machinist, his employes at times numbering as high as twenty-five, which at that time in Pawtucket's history was considered large for such industry. From this line of work Mr. Dexter went into the manufacturing business, purchasing from his brother-in-law, Ray Potter, the latter's cardboard and glazed paper plant. Mr. Potter had not been successful in this enterprise, and at the time of the purchase of the business by Mr. Dexter the liabilities of the concern in round numbers were $22,000. These Mr. Dexter assumed although his only capital at the time was $1,000. At this point, perhaps, it is allowable, at least but fair to Mr. Dexter, to state that on the beginning of his business career, on going to the bank to negotiate a loan, he was informed by the president of the institution, that not one man in a thousand who engaged in business made a success. Suffice it to say that this volunteered remark made upon the mind of the young man receiving it an impression and inspired him to that effort and energy which not only as the race of life sped on made him the one of a thousand, but one in thousands when his great success in life is summed up. By the good management of his business and of his finances in general, by renewals and extensions of notes, he was enabled to pay that indebtedness of $22,000. This business thus named he carried on under the firm name of Thomas & Co., in a building which stood in the rear of the present post-office at Pawtucket for some fifteen years. Then, in connection with George H. Clark, he erected a large brick building on Exchange street, in which the same line of business was carried on under the name of the Rhode Island Card Board Company, Mr. Dexter remaining in the concern until April, 1889, when he disposed of his interest to the company. During the earlier experiences of Mr. Dexter in the card board industry originated the paper collar line of it, and Mr. Dexter himself devised the hair lined card board. The products of the company went to the markets of the world.

At the early age of nineteen years Mr. Dexter began dealing in real estate. He purchased a lot, borrowed the money for the purpose, and built a dwelling upon it, so managing his financial affairs connected with the operation that he finally became the owner of the property. This led him in the line of property creation and property holding. He is now the owner of a score or more of houses, all of the best character. In the true sense of the term Mr. Dexter is a self-made man, the architect of his own fortune. Early becoming self-reliant, temperate and moral as well as industrious and frugal, he has won in life's race, and his success he attributes to the three practices of religious instruction, temperance and self-reliance. He is one of the oldest members of the High Street Universalist Church, and was one of the building committee that erected the church edifice. All through his life Mr. Dexter has been a regular attendant upon religious services, and since coming of age has contributed on an average $190 per year for religious worship support. Mr. Dexter, too, has abstained from liquor all his life, notwithstanding the temptations his contact with people of the world, especially in the European travel his business occasionally brought about. He has traveled abroad twice, spending on one trip seven months. It may be said, too, that Mr. Dexter is a believer in phrenology. Once the phrenologist, Fowler, told him that in the midst of his greatest difficulties he himself would be his best counsellor. This made him the more self-reliant and no doubt greatly contributed to his success. He is also treasurer and the largest stockholder in the Coleman Nail Company.

Not a public man in the sense of desiring official position, Mr. Dexter has kept aloof from the perplexities the seeking and holding of such entail. He did, however, in 1885, represent his city in the General Assembly, and in 1900 he was nominated by the Prohibition party for Congress from the Second district. He is a charter member of the Business Men's Association of Pawtucket, and has been one of the directors for years. He is a member of Union Lodge, Royal Arch Chapter and Holy Sepulchre Commandery of Pawtucket, and of the Consistory of Providence. He was treasurer of the committee that erected the Masonic Temple, costing $110,000, and without detracting from the able services of others, the erection of that temple would not have been a success had Mr. Dexter not personally guaranteed notes to the sum of $50,000. At nineteen years of age he became a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, I. O. O. F., and he is a member also of Manchester Encampment. On June 14, 1901, he was presented with a fine testimonial by his I. O. O. F. Lodge, it being the semi-centennial of his initiation. Now at the age of nearly four score years he is in perfect health; he does not believe in the use of drugs or medicine of any kind, leaving nature to furnish her own remedies, but by the use of the lifting machine and Indian clubs he keeps himself in fine condition.

On Mr. Dexter's return from one of his European trips he presented his Sunday-school with some fine pictures of the Cathedrals and churches of Europe and England—Notre Dame at Paris; Cologne on the Rhine, and the Cathedral at Milan. On that occasion he made what is probably his only public address, speaking as follows:

"The Table Turned: A few evenings since we had a play in the vestry called 'The Table Turned.' I would like to turn it a little bit more by presenting to the Sunday-School some pictures of some of the old ruins of Rome, Italy. When I was there I thought if I ever did get home it would be a good thing for me to present to the Sunday-school some pictures to hang upon the walls of the vestry. The next to going to see the sights of the old countries is to see some pictures of them. I was a member of the Sabbath-school when we held our meetings in the Old Free Hall at the foot of Church Hill. Then I was one of the building committee of this Church, and was very proud to see it dedicated, and am very thankful to see the good condition we are in today. I did not make a vow that I would present these pictures, although I found it was quite a common thing in olden times for people to make vows. One instance of that kind is illustrated by the Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau. About 250 years ago there was a plague at that place. Many of the inhabitants had died, and fears were entertained that many more would die in this condition of things. The Bishop and Priest went out and offered up prayers in the streets, and the Bishop made a vow that if the plague would be stayed, the Passion Play would be repeated once every ten years, and the play has been kept up till now, 1800. I saw the play then. Another illustration of the vow I found in Naples, Italy. In going up Mt. Vesuvius, about half way up the mountain, I saw a small chapel built on the top of a hill. Quite a number of years ago a man was going up the mountain, and he saw that the lava was running down. It came so fast that he could not run away from it, and he climbed to the top of this hill. The stream split at the foot of the hill and there he was, as it were, on an island in the midst of a sea of fire. In this condition he came near being roasted alive. He made a vow if his life would be spared he would erect a chapel on the spot, and there it is to this day.

"Perhaps I can do no better than to dedicate these pictures to my good old uncle, N. G. B. Dexter, the father of Sunday-schools in America. I have selected the pictures of some of the ruins of the Roman Empire as they are to be seen in Rome at this time. One, the Roman Forum, built about 800 years before Christ; one the Coliseum, built the year 80; the Bridge of St. Angelo and the Tomb of Hadrian, built 136; and a view of St. Peter's and the Vatican. They are pictures of great historic interest and worthy the study of us all. I will ask the Sunday-school to accept them, and only add that I think I have the best of it, as the Bible teaches us that 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

(VIII) Katie Bowers Dexter, only child and daughter of Henry B., born in 1859, married Albert H. Stearns, of Boston, Mass., and their children are: Albert Maynard, born Aug. 20, 1886; Henry Dexter, March 7, 1888; Albert Thomas, April 22, 1890; and Catherine, July 16, 1892.

(IV) James Dexter (2), son of James, born in 1720, in Cumberland, R. I., married Alithea, born in 1725, in Seekonk, Mass., daughter of T. Walker. Mr. Dexter lived and died in Cumberland, R. I., where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. His children, all born in Cumberland, were: Hope, born in 1747; James, in 1749; Huldah, in 1750; Marcy, in 1754; Simeon, in 1756; Eseck, in 1758; Benjamin G., in 1760; Nancy, in 1761; Alithea, in 1764; Lucina, in 1766; and Timothy W., in 1768.

(V) Timothy W. Dexter, son of James (2), born in 1768, in Cumberland, R. I., married Sarah, born in 1770, in Wrentham, Mass., daughter of D. Messenger. Mr. Dexter was a farmer possessing a good estate near the coal mine in the town of Cumberland. His children, all born in Cumberland, were: James M., born in 1804; Benjamin G., in 1805; Eseck W., in 1807; and Sarah Ann, in 1814.

(VI) James M. Dexter, son of Timothy W., born in 1804, in Cumberland, married Phebe Sanborn, born in 1810, in New Hampshire. Mr. Dexter was a farmer. He settled near the coal mine in Cumberland, where he resided until 1837, when he purchased a farm in the State of Illinois, in Bureau county, and there he spent the remainder of his life. He was remarkably well-informed, and was largely self-educated. He was a member of the Convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln in 1860. He was highly respected wherever he was known. His children—the first four born in Cumberland and the others in Providence, Ill.—were: Timothy W., born in 1831; Anna S., born in 1833; Harriet W., born in 1835; James Cooke, born in 1837; Benjamin, born in 1839, residing in Illinois; Thomas, born in 1842, living in Oberlin, Ohio; Albert, born in 1844; Phebe Ann, born in 1846, who was Mrs. Brainard, of Minneapolis, Minn., and George E., born in 1850, postmaster at Tiskilwa, Ill. Of these, Benjamin, Thomas and George E. are living. James M. Dexter died in 1888, and his wife passed away in 1891.

(VII) JAMES COOKE DEXTER, son of James M., born April 11, 1837, in Cumberland, R. I., married Sarah Frances Barrows, daughter of Otis Barrows, and three daughters have blessed the marriage, namely: Fannie O. (deceased), Minerva W. (deceased), and Hattie B. (who married Charles A. England, cashier of the Lonsdale Company, and has two sons, Frederick D. and Myron E.)

The parents of Mr. Dexter having removed to Illinois in 1838, the son's boyhood was passed in that State. He attended the public school of the new town of Providence, in that Western State, a town founded by his father, and later was a student at Jubilee College in Peoria county. After his school days were over he returned, in 1862, to his native town and state, assuming charge of the farm of Eseck Dexter, of that town. On the death of Mr. Dexter in 1868, the nephew, James C. Dexter, inherited the property and has since been actively engaged in agricultural pursuits. This Dexter farm is located at Lonsdale, and is a fine property, and its occupant is one of the substantial men and useful citizens of the community and town, commanding the esteem and respect of his fellow townsmen. Like so many of his forefathers, Mr. Dexter has walked in religious paths, being a member of Christ's Church, at Lonsdale. In 1874, 1875 and 1876 he was honored by a seat in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, acceptably representing the town of Cumberland in that body. He was a member of the town council in 1893, 1894 and 1895. His political affiliations have been with the Republican party. He is identified with Unity Lodge, No. 34, A. F. & A. M., Lonsdale. During his many years residence in the town of Cumberland he has ever been found on the side of right and justice. In his various official capacities he has rendered efficient service to his community, but it is as a man and neighbor that he will be held in greatest esteem. His deeds of good are well known though he is entirely unostentatious in manner and his disposition a retiring one. He has been associated with every movement tending toward the advancement of the prosperity and material growth of his community, and is everywhere regarded as one of its most progressive, earnest and honorable citizens. The family name and reputation has been most worthily upheld by him.

WILLIAM JAMES UNDERWOOD. In the death of the late Hon. William J. Underwood, which occurred in Newport, Jan. 27, 1906, that city lost one of its honored and respected citizens, as well as one of its progressive and successful business men. Mr. Underwood was a worthy representative of one of New England's earliest settled families, the progenitor of which was of Newport, R. I., as early as 1655.

Am J Corderwood

The American Underwoods, who trace their ancestry to ante-Revolutionary times, descend from Joseph Underwood, who settled in Hingham, Mass., in 1637, and removed to Watertown, Mass., in 1645; William Underwood, of Concord and Chelmsford, Mass., in 1652; William Thomas Underwood, who settled in Virginia about the middle of the seventeenth century; Alexander Underwood, and Henry Underwood, who settled in or near Newport, R. I., in about 1655. This article is to treat of Henry Underwood, the progenitor of the Newport family bearing that name, and of his descendants.

(I) Henry Underwood was of Newport or vicinity in about 1655. His wife's name was Jane, and their children were: Henry, Jr., who died unmarried; Jane; William; and John. These children, all except the youngest, were born in Newport.

(II) William Underwood was born May 24, 1671, and died about 1744. The christian name of his wife was Sarah, and among their children was William.

(III) William Underwood (2), son of William, was born March 14, 1694. In 1717 he married Ann Turpin.

(IV) William Underwood (3), son of William (2), was born Feb. 23, 1718-19. On Nov. 19, 1743, he married Susannah Knowles, and they had the following children: Joseph, born Oct. 21, 1744; Anne, June 26, 1748; Henry, Jan. 25, 1752; Alice, Aug. 24, 1753; Samuel, Jan. 29, 1756.

(V) Samuel Underwood, son of William (3), was born Jan. 29, 1756, and was a patriot of the Revolutionary war, serving on the privateer "Lady Washington." He married Susannah Tripp, daughter of Peregrine Tripp, and they had eight children, among them being William and Perry Greene.

(VI) William Underwood, son of Samuel, was born May 3, 1779. He married (first) Nov. 12, 1801, Elizabeth Sherman, and (second) in 1818, Amey Wilcox.

(VI) Perry Greene Underwood, son of Samuel, was born in 1781 in Exeter, R. I., was of South Kingstown, where he lived, and died March 27, 1865, in North Kingstown, aged eighty-four years, at the time a widower. He was a farmer and in his younger days was extensively engaged in this occupation. In later life he lived at Tower Hill, where he had a well cultivated farm. For many years he was a member of the Baptist Church. He married Abby Sunderland, and had children: Daniel, who married Martha Cottrell, and died in New York State; Weeden T.; and Henry.

(VII) Weeden T. Underwood, son of Perry Greene, was born in South Kingstown, R. I. His life was devoted to the occupation of farming, and he was of a very industrious nature, acquiring a good competence. He later removed to Newport, where he died on July 5, 1886, aged seventy-nine years and seven months. In political faith he was a stalwart Democrat, and as such served as a member of the old Newport town government, and after the city government was formed he served as a member of the board of aldermen for several years. He married (first) Dec. 25, 1831, Susan Albro, and to this union were born children as follows: Henry and Thomas, twins, the latter dying in infancy, while the former was a carpenter by trade, and was also engaged in teaming in Newport, where he died; Harriet, who married Benjamin Morris Carr (deceased), of Newport, where she resides; Sarah, widow of William Northrup, of Newport, where she resides; William J.; Phebe, who married Henry Underwood (who died in 1906), and resides at Wakefield, R. I.; Theodore, a farmer, residing in South Kingstown, R. I. Weeden T. Underwood married (second) Ann Peckham, of Newport, and to this union were born two children: Mary, who died in Newport; and Martha, wife of Thomas P. Peckham, of Newport.

(VIII) WILLIAM J. UNDERWOOD, son of Weeden T., was born in Newport, R. I., Oct. 10, 1837. He received such education as was obtainable in the public schools of his native city sixty years ago, and was employed as a boy on his father's farm. At the age of sixteen he determined to learn a trade, and, choosing that of a mason, went to Providence, where he served a four-years' apprenticeship under Joseph Cranston, in whose employ he remained for a period of five years. The following three years he spent the greater part of the year in Boston, during which time while in Newport he worked at his trade for the late Stephen S. Albro and John Freeborn. In 1864 he became foreman on the construction of the Aquidneck cotton mill at Newport, after which he established himself in business as a mason contractor and builder, at which he continued until 1899, when he retired from active business. During his career as a contractor he erected many of the finest homes in and around Newport, among them the summer residences of E. D. Morgan, Dr. C. M. Bell and Harold Brown; he also erected the King Block, the Aquidneck Bank Building and the Cloyne School building.

As a business man Mr. Underwood was very successful, and while in his zenith as a contractor employed from ten to one hundred men. In the last few years he had devoted himself to gardening. He built a house on Touro Park West, the land affording him room for the cultivation of fruit and vegetables, and to their care he gave the larger part of his time. Having sold or built upon the land which he used as a garden the year before his death, he secured a larger tract of land a short distance beyond the One Mile Corner, and here he was developing a large market garden, having during the past year materially improved the property by the erection of a house and the planting of trees and shrubs and the growing of fruit and vegetables. This garden was his principal occupation, and took his time largely from his other interests.

Mr. Underwood had for many years been interested in politics, having been prominent in the councils of the Democratic party in the city and State as chairman of the city committee and a member of the executive committee of the State central committee. He had held a number of public offices in the city and State, having represented the Fifth ward in the city council from 1870 to 1874 and from 1879 to 1883, and was for four years a member of the board of health. He was State Senator in 1887-88 and 1890-91 and Representative in the General Assembly from January, 1902, until January, 1905. He also served as overseer of the Poor for several years, and was also a member of the board of Park Commissioners for a period of years.

Mr. Underwood was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, having been a past master of St. John's Lodge, No. 1; past commander of Washington Commandery, Knights Templar; a past commanding officer of Van Rensselaer Lodge of Perfection and of Rhode Island Sovereign Consistory, and one of the few Thirty-third Degree Masons in the State, having been raised to that degree on Sept. 18, 1888. He was also a member of Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Providence. He was formerly a member of the Providence Lodge of Elks, later becoming a charter member of the Newport Lodge. He was also a member of the old Newport Business Men's Association; of the County Club; of the Natural History Society; of the Redwood Library and Athenaeum; and a life member of the Newport Historical Society. He had but few official business connections at the time of his death, among them being that of trustee of the Savings Bank of Newport.

Mr. Underwood was an attendant of the United Congregational Church, to the support of which he was liberal in his donations.

On Dec. 25, 1864, Mr. Underwood was first united in marriage to Mary Elizabeth Underwood, daughter of William and Mary (Peckham) Underwood, of Newport. Mrs. Underwood passed away Dec. 18, 1899, in Newport, and Mr. Underwood married (second) Sept. 24, 1902, Miss Annie L. Moore, daughter of Albert M. and Carrie A. (Ingraham) Moore, of Chicopee, Mass., who survives to mourn his loss.

Mrs. Underwood is a member of the William Ellery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, being eligible through the Moore, Ingraham, Graves and Goodman families. Mrs. Underwood is a great-granddaughter of Luther Moore, of Sudbury, Mass., who served as a private in Capt. Andrew Haskell's company, Col. Thomas Marshall's regiment, in the Continental Army.

Mr. Underwood was a man of positive character, and his friendships were strong and lasting. He was charitable and generous in his nature, and ever ready to assist his less fortunate fellow-beings. He was much devoted to his native city, and ever alive to its best interests. In his will, among his public bequests, he left $4,000 to the Newport Hospital to endow a free bed; $5,000 to the Children's Home, and the residue of his estate, after his wife's death, to the city of Newport to be used in erecting a school or in purchasing a site or furniture and apparatus for a school, to be known as the Underwood School. Mr. Underwood was highly respected throughout the community, and universally regarded as one of the prominent and leading citizens of the city.

JOHN REYNOLDS WILCOX, sheriff of Washington county, R. I., and one of the best known and most popular officials in the State, is descended from one of the oldest families of this part of New England.

In 1638 the name of Edward Wilcox is found among the names of the inhabitants of the island of Aquidneck; he also had lands at Manhattan. The maiden name of his wife is not known. His sons were: John, Daniel and Stephen (who had grants of land at Portsmouth).

Stephen Wilcox was born in 1633, and his death occurred in 1690. In 1658 he married Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Martha Hazard. On Jan. 30, 1658, he had a deed of thirty-four acres of land from Thomas Hazard as dower with his wife. On May 18, 1669, his name was in the list of inhabitants of Westerly. In 1670 he was complained of, with his partakers, by John Richards, treasurer of Harvard College, for unjustly possessing five hundred acres in the Pequot country on the east side of the Pawcatuck river. To Stephen Wilcox were born seven children, as follows: (1) Edward, born in 1662, married (first) Mary, daughter of Robert Hazard, and by her had four children—Mary, who married Joseph Lewis; Hannah, who married Ezekiel Garrette; Stephen, who married Mary Randall; and Edward. He married (second) Thomasin Stevens, and the children of this marriage were: Sarah, Thomas, Hezekiah, Elisha, Amey and Susannah. (2) Thomas married Martha, daughter of Robert Hazard, and they had eight children, Robert, Stephen, Jeffrey, Thomas, Abraham, George, Edward and Hannah. (3) Daniel married Mary Wodell, and had a son, Stephen. (4) William married Jan. 25, 1698, Dorothy Palmer, and had eight children, Dorothy, Ann, William, Jemima, Mary, Amey, Sarah and Nathan. (5) Stephen married in 1704 Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Gorton) Crandall, and had children, Stephen, Robert and John. (6) Hannah married Samuel Clarke, son of Jeremiah and Ann (Audley) Clarke, and became the mother of four children, John, Audley, Samuel and Daniel. (7) Jeremiah married Mary

John R. Wilcox

Mallett, daughter of Thomas Mallett. From these descended the Wilcoxes of southern Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Joseph Wilcox, great-grandfather of Sheriff John R. Wilcox, was born Aug. 27, 1730, and married July 28, 1748, Mary Burdick. He died in 1804. He and his wife had children: Gov. Edward, Prudence, Desire, Mary, Amy, Hannah and Joseph.

Joseph Wilcox, grandfather of Sheriff John R., was born Sept. 2, 1772. He married Elizabeth Crumb, and they had children: (1) Charles W., the father of John R., is mentioned further on. (2) Joseph D. married Abbie E. Hoxsie, and had Jennie L., Jessie, Frank and Joseph D. (3) Eliza A. married Charles P. Chapman, and had Charles D. and Leander P. (4) Susan F. (5) John G., born May 25, 1832, married Jan. 28, 1859, Martha B. Hoxsie, and had Anna Elnora (born June 5, 1862), Edward (born Dec. 30, 1864), Herbert (born Sept. 24, 1866), John Augustus (born Aug. 30, 1875) and Howard Percy (born Oct. 25, 1878). John G. Wilcox was educated in Charlestown, R. I., and has followed farming and fishing as his life occupations. He was active in town affairs, serving as assessor six years, was representative in the Legislature, 1880-81, and was elected senator in 1905. (6) Nathan T. married and had Frank and Clarence. (7) Benjamin Franklin. (8) Sarah P. and (9) Edward are unmarried.

Charles William Wilcox, father of Sheriff John R., was born in Charlestown, R. I., Dec. 6, 1828, and in his native town passed his early days. When a young man he learned the trade of a carpenter with G. Maxson, in Westerly, and this occupation he followed until 1859, when he moved to South Kingstown and bought a large farm. From 1870 to 1878 he was deputy sheriff and jailer of Washington county, and upon the expiration of his term of office again engaged in farming, so continuing until 1900, when his wife died. Since that event he has resided with his son, John R. In politics Mr. Wilcox was and is a firm advocate of Republican principles. He is a charter member of Columbia Lodge, I. O. O. F. He married Catherine S. Sherman, daughter of George H. Sherman, of South Kingstown. They became the parents of three children: Martha B., who married William D. Taylor, and has four children, Mary, Frank B., Catharine and Samuel; Josephine, who married John H. Palmer, and has one daughter, Sarah P.; and John Reynolds.

John Reynolds Wilcox was born in Charlestown, R. I., Dec. 4, 1858, and the next year was taken by his parents to the farm near Moorsfield, in South Kingstown. As a boy he became familiar with the duties of the office he now holds, his father in 1870, assuming the duties of deputy sheriff and jailer of Washington county. Mr. Wilcox began his own official career in 1879, when he was appointed an officer at the Rhode Island State Prison, under Gen. Nelson Viall. The next year he resigned to accept a position as police constable at Narragansett Pier, holding this office eleven years. In 1890 he was appointed deputy sheriff and jailer of Washington county, and his services in this capacity were so acceptable that in January, 1903, he was chosen sheriff. He was re-elected for a term of three years, on Jan. 9, 1908. It is no over-statement to say that no other sheriff in the State of Rhode Island, past or present, has a finer record for the detection, pursuit and capture of criminals. From June, 1884, to June, 1905, Mr. Wilcox served as sergeant of the town of South Kingstown. His fraternal connection is with Columbia Lodge, I. O. O. F.

On Nov. 30, 1878, Mr. Wilcox was united in marriage with Ida May Adams, daughter of John F. Adams, of South Kingstown, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Evans. Two children have blessed this union, Jessie May and Charles W.

JEREMIAH RALPH, a resident of Hope, R. I., where he has passed the greater part of his life, is a member of the family which traces back to Thomas Ralph.

(I) Thomas Ralph, first of Guilford, Conn., and later of Warwick, R. I., married (first) Elizabeth Desbrough, and (second) in 1656 Mary Cook, widow of John. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ralph died in 1682. On Sept. 25, 1671, he and two others were appointed to make a rate and levy an assessment upon the inhabitants of Mashaulatauk, in Warwick. His will was proved June 15, 1682, at Warwick, and in it he bequeathed land in Warwick to his sons Samuel and Thomas. By his first marriage Thomas Ralph had a son Samuel, of Providence, who married Mary, and they both died in 1723. By his second marriage he was the father of children as follows: Alice, born Jan. 13, 1657, died in 1682; she married Thomas Fenner, born in September, 1652, son of Arthur and Mehetable (Waterman) Fenner, and he died Feb. 27, 1718. Thomas, born July 12, 1658, died in 1696; he married Eleanor, who also died in that year, and he was a resident of Providence. Sarah, born Dec. 4, 1661, married a Mr. Benjamin. Deliverance was born Aug. 20, 1666.

(II) Samuel Ralph, son of Thomas, was of Providence. He married Mary, and died Oct. 8, 1723, his wife dying the same year. Their children were: Mary; Deliverance, who died May 8, 1758 (she married Richard Knight, son of John and Anne Knight, and he died May 15, 1754; they had children—John, Richard, David, Thomas, Anne and Deliverance); Samuel; Thomas, who died May 8, 1780; and Hugh.

(III) Thomas Ralph (2) married Patience, and they lived in Providence and Scituate, R. I., he dying May 8, 1780. He was made a freeman in 1720. In 1731 he sold to Hugh Ralph 150 acres of land in the town of Providence, R. I. He was deputy from Scituate in 1737, 1742, 1749 and 1753. In 1753 he was styled captain. His will was proved Sept. 6, 1780. His children were: Thomas, Christopher, David, a daughter, Deliverance, Mary, Patience and Sarah. Of these, Thomas married Aug. 29, 1736, Ahia, daughter of Hugh Ralph; Christopher married Dec. 11, 1743, Mary, daughter of Joseph Knight; Patience married July 15, 1744, Elias Collins; and Sarah married Nov. 8, 1751, Robert Potter, Jr.

(IV) David Ralph married Oct. 24, 1735, Desire Bennett, and their children mentioned in the will of their grandfather Ralph were: Thomas, David, Lydia (Fenner) and Zilpha, all of whom received bequests from him.

(V) Thomas Ralph (3), born June 23, 1759, married Sarah Fenner, born Nov. 8, 1761. Mr. Ralph and his brother David received by the will of their grandfather Ralph the homestead equally, four small lots in Cranston, besides other property. Thomas and Sarah (Fenner) Ralph had children: Frelove, born Dec. 29, 1782; Daniel, Nov. 21, 1784; Ezekiel, Aug. 5, 1786; Anna, Feb. 21, 1793 (married John Wilbur); and Sarah, Aug. 1, 1800 (married John Kent, father of the late Fenner Kent).

(VI) Ezekiel Ralph, born Aug. 5, 1786, married Dilla Taylor, born April 24, 1797, daughter of Solomon Taylor, of Scituate, and their children were: (1) Solomon T., born Dec. 18, 1815, died unmarried Nov. 20, 1842; he was a farmer. (2) Arnold, born May 18, 1818, was married June 28, 1841, to Dianna Matteson, born March 21, 1820. They were the parents of Sarah Frances (who married Charles Cornell) and Charles, the latter born March 4, 1842. (3) Julia Ann, born May 2, 1821, married James K. Walton, and both are now deceased. They had one child, Mary E., who is also deceased. (4) Phebe Marinda, born May 15, 1823, married Edwin Griswold, and both are deceased. They left no descendants. (5) Jeremiah is mentioned further on. (6) Samuel, born Aug. 1, 1831, is at present residing in Hope, in the town of Scituate.

In his early manhood Ezekiel Ralph, father of this family, tried life on the sea for a short time, afterward returning to the homestead in Scituate, where he passed the remainder of his days as a farmer. He was popular in his day and influential in his home neighborhood, and like his father before him was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was a man of medium height and weight, of a rather stern and serious temperament, strict in all things, and mastering any situation which confronted him in the conduct of his own affairs. He died July 26, 1842. His wife survived him some years, dying in 1861.

(VII) Jeremiah Ralph was born Jan. 8, 1825, in Scituate, where he was reared and educated, attending the public schools. He continued to assist his father until he was about twenty years old, when he obtained employment as a carpenter in a cotton-mill, being thus engaged for fully twenty years. Subsequently he followed various pursuits, until advancing age and attendant infirmity necessitated his retirement. Nearly all of his life has been spent in Hope, where he still continues to reside.

On Oct. 4, 1846, Mr. Ralph was married to Sarah R. Matteson, born March 26, 1827, daughter of Thomas and Phebe (Ramsdell) Matteson. Like her husband, Mrs. Ralph has been a resident of Hope nearly all her life, and both enjoy the highest regard of all who know them. Their neighbors are for the most part lifelong friends. Many years ago they became members of the Six Principle Baptist Church at Kent, R. I. Mr. Ralph is a Republican in political sentiment, but he has never been active in party affairs in any way.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph have had two daughters: Phebe, born in 1847, who married William Free-stone, and died in 1894, leaving no descendants; and Julia M., born July 16, 1850, who also died in the year 1894.

FIFIELD. The name of Fifield in New England covers a period of approximately two hundred and seventy years, one William Fifield coming in the "Hercules" in 1634, and settling at Hampton. William and Mary Fifield were of Hampton, N. H., he then, in 1639, reported as coming from Newbury; he was made a freeman in 1641. Their children are given as Benjamin, William, Lydia, Elizabeth, Hannah and Deborah. Hampton was the home for generations of the descendants of William and Mary Fifield. The name in various towns of New Hampshire in later generations—though it is likely that not all those bearing it have descended from the Hampton settlers—has been common. Beginning with the middle of the eighteenth century the Fifield family of Concord, that State, dates its origin there, when the children of Benjamin and Hannah (Peters) Fifield appear of record as: Mary, born April 1, 1748; Obadiah P., Aug. 3, 1749; William, May 6, 1751; Hannah, Dec. 21, 1752; Benjamin, Oct. 4, 1754; Jonathan, Aug. 9, 1756; Sarah, July 13, 1758; Paul, Aug. 5, 1760; John, May 20, 1762; Moses, Aug. 11, 1764; David, Jan. 16, 1767; and Sarah, Jan. 27, 1769.

The Fifields of Providence sprang from the New Hampshire family, the forerunner here being Rev. Moses Fifield, of Unity, N. H., birth, and whose marriage occurred in the early years of the nineteenth century at Providence. As his title indicates, Moses Fifield was a member of one of the learned professions, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one of his sons, Dr. Moses Fifield, a man of liberal education, was of high standing in his profession, and as a banker in Centreville; the latter's sons, Moses and Henry A., have long been substantial citizens of Providence, the former retired and the latter now holding, as he has held for many years, a responsible position with the extensive manufacturing firm of B. B. & R. Knight.

Of Rev. Moses Fifield, son of Moses and Lucy (Livingston) Fifield, we herewith present an article written by J. Livsey, Jr., and published in "Zion's Herald" in April, 1859:

"REV. MOSES FIFIELD was born in Unity, New Hampshire, Dec. 7, 1790. His decease occurred in Centreville, Rhode Island, April 19, 1859. Of his conversion I am not able to give any account, save that it took place when he was about fifteen years of age, and that its soundness and thoroughness were satisfactorily evidenced by his subsequent life and experience.

"Impelled by the love of Christ and of the souls of his fellowmen, and by a deep conviction of duty, he soon learned to conquer his native diffidence, which inclined him to shrink from engaging actively in the exercises of the social gatherings of the people of God; the attention of the church was arrested by the fervor, simplicity and impressiveness of his prayers and exhortations, so that in due time he was licensed to preach, was 'thrust out' to labor in the Lord's vineyard.

"He was admitted to the itinerant ranks as a probationer, in connection with the New England Conference, in 1816, and stationed on the Sandwich Circuit. The following year he was stationed on the Harwich Circuit, and at the following conference was admitted into full connection, ordained deacon by Bishop George, and re-appointed to the Harwich Circuit. In 1819 he was stationed in Providence; at the Conference of 1820 was ordained Elder by Bishop George, and was stationed that year and the following in Springfield, Massachusetts; in 1822 and 1823, on the Ellington and Warehouse Point Circuit, and in 1824 on the Tolland Circuit. Here his health, which had always been infirm, and had often rendered his ministerial labors exceedingly painful, completely gave way, and obliged him at the following session of the Conference to ask for a superannuate relation. From this time his name was always found either on the superannuate or supernumerary list of his Conference, as he never sufficiently recovered his health to allow him to resume the labors and responsibilities of an effective relation.

"Trained from boyhood to habits of industry, self-reliance and economy, Father Fifield now directed his attention to secular pursuits, for the support of his young family. Divine Providence smiled upon his efforts, and kindly opened his way before him, so that he ultimately became located in Warwick, Rhode Island, where he continued to reside, respected and beloved by the entire community, until removed to his heavenly home. In November, 1828, he was elected cashier of the Centreville Bank, and entered upon the duties of his office the following month. In 1845, he was elected treasurer of the Warwick Institution for Savings. Both of these offices he continued to hold to the entire satisfaction of the respective corporations, until January, 1857, when his increasing infirmities compelled him to retire from them. But though thus engaged in secular business, his interest in the cause of Christ, and especially in the church of his early choice, waned not. Upon his removal to Centreville, he found a small class, which was regularly visited by the circuit preachers. With this little band he at once identified himself, and entered upon the series of labors and sacrifices which ended only with his life; to which under God, very much of the present position and prosperity of the Methodist Episcopal Church in that place is to be attributed. So long as he was able, he loved to preach the gospel. He took an active interest in the Sabbath-school, and in the social meetings of the church was ever ready to contribute his part to render them interesting and useful, and especially rejoiced when he could weep with the weeping penitent, or rejoice with the new-born convert.

"Prudent, yet liberal and cheerful in his pecuniary contributions, the amount of the church's indebtedness to him will not be known until the great day reveals all secret things. Father Fifield was a very great sufferer. He commenced in boyhood a life of pain, which increased in severity and constancy with his advance in years. He has often told me that for years he had scarcely known a moment in which he was free from suffering; while at times, and indeed a large proportion of the time, these sufferings were most excruciating. Rest and sleep could usually be secured only by means of opiates, through a wearisome succession of years. Yet, who ever heard him complain of the severity of the Divine administration towards him, or murmur on account of his pain? His constant prayer was for patience, for grace to endure all the will of God; and his prayer was answered.

"His Christian experience during the two years of my acquaintance with him was usually very clear and satisfactory. As his strength declined, and it became evident to himself and others that enfeebled nature was with increasing rapidity yielding to the power of disease, his experience became increasingly rich and glorious. At times, his joys seemed almost too ecstatic for his feeble frame to endure, and it would seem that his happy spirit would burst the frail tabernacle which imprisoned it, and fly away to its home and its God. Sometimes he was severely buffeted by the adversary and maintained faithful and protracted conflicts with the powers of darkness. Usually, however, his 'peace was as a river,' and he contemplated his approaching deliverance from human pains and infirmities with great joy. So long as strength continued, he discoursed sweetly upon the religion of Christ, recommending it to the impenitent, encouraging and exhorting the lovers of Christ to fidelity, and in songs and shouts giving utterance to praise and to grateful joy. Thus died a good man; one whose virtues very far outweighed his frailties, leaving behind him in the family circle, the church, and the business and neighborhood circles in which he moved, a holy savor, which will not soon be lost.

"O may I triumph so,
When all my warfare's past
And, dying, find my latest foe
Under my feet at last."

On March 5, 1820, Rev. Moses Fifield was united in marriage to Celia Knight, born May 27, 1786, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Hammond) Knight. [See Knight family elsewhere.] Mrs. Fifield survived her husband many years, dying July 31, 1874. They had four children: (1) Annah, born March 29, 1822, married July 1, 1841, Samuel Almorán Briggs, and died July 10, 1873. He was a hardware and tinware merchant, and resided in Providence, his store being located on south Main street. They had three children: Henry Simeon, born Aug. 1, 1844, died Nov. 16, 1845; Henrietta Annah, born April 3, 1847, married, Oct. 29, 1867, Henry V. A. Joslin, and they have had seven children, Effie Bordon (born Aug. 10, 1869), Annah Fifield (born July 3, 1871, died July 13, 1871), Julia Vaughn (born Dec. 7, 1872), Harry Almorán (born Sept. 24, 1875), Marion Cleveland (born Nov. 12, 1879), Ethel Adams (born Aug. 6, 1881, died March 23, 1883) and Royal Knight (born March 10, 1884); and Emily Medora, born Dec. 16, 1852, is a resident of Providence. (2) Moses was born Dec. 23, 1823. (3) Jane, born Jan. 5, 1826, was married Oct. 24, 1853, to Edward Burlingame, born April 13, 1825, died Aug. 15, 1893. He was engaged at various occupations, and was a resident of Providence at the time of his death. They had two children: Celia Fifield, born March 28, 1855, was married Sept. 3, 1885, to Moses T. Paull; and Herbert Fiske, born Aug. 14, 1860, was married Nov. 21, 1895, to Isabelle S. McAvoy, born Aug. 26, 1864, died July 21, 1901. (4) Mary, born March 13, 1828, never married, and died July 8, 1905.

DR. MOSES FIFIELD, son of Rev. Moses and Celia (Knight) Fifield, was born Dec. 23, 1823, at Warehouse Point, Conn., during the time of his father's pastorate there. He received his education in the school at Centreville, Wesleyan Academy at South Wilbraham, Mass., and the East Greenwich Seminary. He commenced the study of medicine with Drs. George and Charles W. Fabyan, at Providence, later entering the University of New York, from which he graduated in 1846. He practiced medicine in Fall River and Little Compton, R. I., until 1852, when, on the decease of Dr. J. M. Keith, he removed to Portsmouth, R. I., where he was located about four years. In consequence of the illness of his father requiring the constant attention of a physician, he left his practice in Portsmouth and moved to Centreville, in the town of Warwick, R. I., in August, 1856, attending his father, also taking his place as cashier of the Centreville Bank and treasurer of the Warwick Institution for Savings, which offices he held until his death, besides following an extensive and successful practice of medicine. An obituary published at the time of his death said of him: "In the death, Monday, April 9, 1900, of Dr. Moses Fifield, there passed away a man who had long been known as an active citizen, a capable physician and a successful business man. His graduation in medicine dates back to 1844, and these intervening years have been filled with varying activities, and all of them have been passed in this vicinity. Dr. Fifield was one of those people who found something to do in this world and did it. Now that he rests from his labors, the world in which he moved misses his energy and pays tribute to his worth. He was one of those few men who could adapt themselves to a large number of those interests which touch the world at large, ally himself to them, and assist in the responsibilities and duties connected with their management, in the family, in the church, in fraternal organizations, in his practice, in banking and in business he found his place and capably filled it."

Dr. Fifield was a thirty-second degree Mason. He was a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society, and a member of the American Medical Association. On May 24, 1846, he was united in marriage, by Rev. Moses Fifield, to Hannah Arnold Allen, born Feb. 9, 1824, daughter of Christopher and Sarah (Congdon) Allen. Mrs. Fifield died on Jan. 8, 1898. Their children were: (1) Moses, born July 17, 1847, was married Nov. 6, 1873, to Anna Leora Stone, born Oct. 10, 1850, daughter of Henry T. and Sarah (Hobart) Stone. They have one daughter, Mary Emeline, born March 25, 1875, who was for several years a successful school teacher in Providence, and who is now the wife of George H. Brownell, and the mother of one son, Allen Fifield. (2) Henry Allen was born Nov. 16, 1850. (3) Sarah Congdon, born March 14, 1856, was married June 27, 1877, to John Legg, born in Trowbridge, England, May 28, 1851. He is a successful woolen manufacturer in Worcester, Mass. They have had six children: John Francis, born May 23, 1878, married Emma Duke; Howard Fifield, born April 23, 1881, married Nellie B. Van Ostrand; Bessie Whatley, twin of Howard F., married Gray Harris; Emma Allen was born Dec. 11, 1885; Helen Bennett, born Dec. 10, 1887, died Aug. 1, 1888; and Joseph Willard was born Jan. 18, 1889.

Dr. Moses Fifield married (second), Feb. 19, 1899, Mrs. Abbie F. Tillinghast, widow of Samuel L. Tillinghast, and daughter of Marcus Lyon.

HENRY ALLEN FIFIELD, son of Dr. Moses and Hannah Arnold (Allen) Fifield, was born Nov. 16, 1850, in Little Compton, R. I., and was seven years of age when his father removed to Centreville. He attended the public schools of Centreville, the East Greenwich Seminary, and completed his training at the Mowry & Goff English and Classical School, Providence. Soon after leaving school he was employed as paymaster in the mills of the Crompton Company, at Crompton, R. I., where he remained until March 20, 1872, when he entered the office of B. B. & R. Knight, at Providence, as a clerk, and has since been connected with that firm, at present holding a very responsible position, having charge of the cotton, and the manufacture and sale of the production of the mills.

On Nov. 16, 1871, Mr. Fifield was married to Lizzie Preston Bennet, born Nov. 3, 1849, daughter of Preston and Elizabeth (Walcott) Bennet. They have two children: (1) Edith Walcott, born Feb. 6, 1874, was married Nov. 16, 1899, to Allan McNab, Jr., a native of Glasgow, Scotland, born Nov. 16, 1871. He is now superintendent of the Centreville mill, owned by B. B. & R. Knight. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McNab: Donald Fifield, born July 30, 1900, who died Sept. 18, 1900; Allan Douglas, born Feb. 6, 1902; Elizabeth Walcott, born July 5, 1903, who died the same day; and Helen Preston, born Aug. 26, 1905. (2) Henry Livingston, born Nov. 24, 1878, graduated from the Worcester Institute of Technology in June, 1903, as a civil engineer, and entered the office of the American Bridge Company, remaining there till Oct. 1, 1904, when he was engaged by the maintenance of way department of the Pennsylvania Lines, and is now located on the Chicago Terminal. On Dec. 21, 1905, he married Bessie May Pardo.

Mr. Henry A. Fifield is one of the leading and most active members of the Mathewson Street Methodist Episcopal Church, taking a deep interest in all branches of church work, and is now serving as a member of the board of stewards, also director of the Y. M. C. A. since 1891. He has so ordered his life as to merit the universal esteem of his fellowmen.

AMON PARMENTER, retired dry goods merchant of Newport, R. I., is one of that city's honorable and venerable citizens, having been connected with her business interests during the greater part of a long lifetime. Mr. Parmenter comes of a very old New England family, whose members in turn have been prominently identified with affairs for a period of nearly three centuries. The line of descent is traced with absolute clearness through eight generations in America.

(I) John Parmenter, the original emigrant, came from England in 1640, and settled in Sudbury, Mass. His first wife Bridget died in 1660, and he married, in 1661, Annis Dane.

(II) John Parmenter, Jr., married Amee, and had six children, John, Joseph, George, Mary, Benjamin and Lydia.

(III) Benjamin Parmenter married in 1680, Tamasin Rice, and their children were: Lydia, Benjamin, David, David (2), Mercy, Thankful and Jonathan.

(IV) David Parmenter married Abigail Brewer, and reared four children, Abigail, Edward, James and Samuel.

(V) James Parmenter married Mary Carter, and their two children were: James and Eleanor.

(VI) James Parmenter, Jr., was born in 1753, in Sudbury, Mass., and was there engaged in farming until his death, Feb. 22, 1828. His wife, Esther Marshall, born in 1754, died Sept. 22, 1825. She was the mother of Sally, Eleanor, Jonas, Betsey, James, Eleazer, Nancy, Esther and Mary.

(VII) Jonas Parmenter, father of our Amon, was born Sept. 26, 1776, in Sudbury, Mass. In early life he engaged in the general merchandise business, in which he continued for a number of years with success. The latter part of his life was passed on a farm. During much of his life he was an invalid, and he died in his native town, Dec. 25, 1827, from the effects of the kick of a horse. He married Susannah Brown, of Sudbury, daughter of William and Susannah Brown. Her death is in the records as occurring Sept. 9, 1843. Their children were: William Brown, born Feb. 4, 1808; Henry, Oct. 23, 1809; Susan, Nov. 4, 1811; Harriet, Nov. 1, 1813; James Marshall, Nov. 14, 1815; Herman, July 31, 1817; Esther, Nov. 1, 1819 (who is still living in Waltham, Mass.); Amon, Feb. 4, 1822; and Elvira, June 20, 1824 (died in infancy).

(VIII) Amon Parmenter was born Feb. 4, 1822, in Sudbury, Mass. The public schools of his native village furnished him a basis for the education which he afterward finished in the school of life. At the age of thirteen years he became an operative in one of the cotton mills of his section, an employment which he continued for some two years. He next went to Boston, where for the following six years he was engaged as a clerk in the dry goods establishment owned by his brother, William. By this time he had attained his majority, and was possessed of an excellent knowledge of the business which he then determined to make his life work. In company with his brother, Henry, he came in January, 1843, to Newport, where they established a dry goods and notion business on Thames street, the firm being styled H. & A. Parmenter. This arrangement continued until 1856, when our subject purchased the interest of his brother, and thenceforth conducted the business alone to the date of his retirement in 1878, at which time he sold out to the firm of Perry Brothers. This marked the limit of the active business career of Mr. Parmenter, though he continued his interest in affairs for many years afterward. He is now passing the evening of life in the quiet enjoyment of the fruits of his early industry, amid the kind attentions of his family and friends. It will not be amiss to state that Mr. Parmenter is a shining example of the self-made man, his success being due to his untiring industry, energy, determination and thrifty habits which he formed in youth.

Mr. Parmenter's tastes never ran to political affairs, though he has always taken a voting interest, supporting the doctrines of the Republican party. His one social organization, and in whose work he has always taken an active interest, is the Natural History Society of Newport, he having served the society a number of years as treasurer. Mr. Parmenter is a member of Channing Memorial (Unitarian) Church, of Newport.

The domestic life of Mr. Parmenter has been one of quiet happiness. On October 18, 1852, he married Sarah M. Stevens, daughter of the late Joseph G. and Sarah (Freebody) Stevens, of Newport. Two children have blessed this union: (1) Joseph G., born Dec. 17, 1858, in Newport, which still continues to be his home, is a decorative designer in Newport, having received his training in the art from private teachers and later at the Boston Art School, of which he is a graduate. He married Lila Riggs, of Newport, and has two daughters, Majel and Carol. (2) William Manton died at the age of eleven months.

Thus is given in brief the chief events of the life of one of Newport's honored citizens. Life is what we make it. Full of service to others, it becomes an increasing joy to look back upon as the evening shades draw on. In this light the quiet and peaceful days of Amon Parmenter have a full and complete explanation.

SHARPE (of Connecticut origin). This family had a Rhode Island representative, Lucian Sharpe, who during the whole of his active life, was connected with and gave his name to the business known as Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company.

Lucian Sharpe was of the seventh generation from Robert Sharp, of Brookline, Mass., who came from London, England, in 1635. The older generations settled at Pomfret, Conn., in 1721, which remained the home of the family for generations.

Wilkes Sharpe, of the sixth generation, father of Lucian Sharpe, for the greater part of his life was connected with the stable business, either as owner or foreman, and chiefly in Providence, R. I. He was noted for his promptness, industry and integrity, for his fondness for reading, his retentive memory, and unusual bodily vigor. He married Sally A., daughter of Samuel and Azubah Chaffee.

LUCIAN SHARPE was born in Providence, on March 20, 1830, and continued to live there until 1836, when for a few months, he lived in Boston, Mass. From the spring of 1837 until the spring of 1840 he lived with his uncle, Pitt Sharpe, in Pomfret, Conn., on the farm where his father, Wilkes Sharpe, was born, and which has been in the family since his father's great-grandfather came there from Brookline, Mass., in 1721. In the spring of 1840, his father purchased a farm in Hartwick, Otsego Co., N. Y., and on this the family remained for two years. The farm was then sold, and his father returned to Providence, the mother and boy remaining for two years longer in Hartwick, at the home of Mrs. Sharpe's brother, Ebenezer Chaffee. During this time the son attended Hartwick Seminary. In 1844 the mother and son returned to Providence, and the education of the boy was continued at the Elm Street Grammar School, and after that for two years at the Providence High School.

Provided with a good schooling, Mr. Sharpe connected himself with the shop of Mr. Thomas J. Hill, known as the Providence Machine Company, where he worked some months. Later, in September, 1848, he apprenticed himself to Joseph R. Brown, who, located on South Main Street, was a repairer of watches and clocks, and known as one of the best mechanics in the city. Here he applied himself with diligence to his trade, and in time became proficient in the management of the business affairs of the growing concern. Such was his success, and aptitude in his duties, that shortly before the expiration of the five years' period of apprenticeship, March 1, 1853, Mr. Brown took him as a partner, the firm name being J. R. Brown & Sharpe.

By this time, the business of repairing clocks and watches, and light machinery, had become somewhat enlarged, especially by the making of scales and measuring instruments, which lines, amplified and perfected, have ever since remained a prominent feature. In 1858, largely through Mr. Sharpe's energy, the concern began a connection with the Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Company, which soon gave them a prominence in mechanical work, and was really responsible for their entrance into the machine tool business. From first making machinery and devices for their own demands, they were led to making for others also, and gradually the machine tool business became the more important end, which feature has always continued. The concern was incorporated in 1868.

From his earliest business years, Mr. Sharpe exhibited certain talents which had marked his father, and to them added commercial talent and administrative ability of high order. While not a mechanic in the sense of Mr. Brown, he early developed a faculty of appreciating what was useful in a mechanical device, and it was soon noted that he had excellent taste for the best forms for machines or tools. His characteristics were rendered unusually efficient by concentration upon a definite purpose—the advancement and success of the business. All matters of personal ambition and comfort were subordinated to this, his desire for prominence being limited to advancement in and through the growth of the business. In the conduct of the business, he was plain-spoken and positive, and extremely orderly and methodical, and as far as possible, responsibility was placed upon those associated with him, his principle being to insist upon results rather than upon the exact methods used by subordinates, leaving to each in a large measure, the opportunity to exercise his judgment, with the understanding that, if successful, advancement was assured; and in this way, while exercising to the utmost a very great capacity for work, Mr. Sharpe was able, without detriment, to leave his business to his subordinates when occasion required a number of months of absence.

Mr. Sharpe took no active part in the management of other manufacturing or commercial enterprises, except as director, from 1874, of the Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Company. He did, however, fill a number of important positions. He was trustee of the Providence Institution of Savings from 1881, director in the National Bank of North America from 1879 to 1891, director in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company from 1897, director in the Providence Gas Company from 1883, and president of the Providence Journal Company from 1886 until his death. In politics he took practically no part.

Although he was not a man given to sentimentality, yet no case of suffering or misfortune among his employees was ever brought to his notice without receiving his assistance, and he always took a deep interest in the general welfare of those employed by the company, insisting that employees should have all the comforts consistent with their occupation, believing that those comforts were not only due them as men, but also incidentally enhanced their efficiency as workmen. Largely through his interest, there was established a shop library of two thousand volumes.

In his early years, Mr. Sharpe learned to read and speak French readily, and his general reading and attainments were of such a nature that the degree of A. M. was fittingly bestowed upon him by Brown University in 1892.

From the outset, Mr. Sharpe shared Mr. Brown's determination that only the best quality of work should be sold, and each had for the other a warm regard, and sincere respect. They were congenial in many ways, and each helped and influenced the other, and their partnership, with their mutual confidence, ensured satisfactory returns.

Mr. Brown's inventions indicated his talent, and were the basis of the business, but its growth was chiefly due to Mr. Sharpe's energy and ability. The development of the enterprise from year to year, is suggested by the figures of floor space, and number of men employed:

Floor space of buildings,
1853,	1,800 sq. ft.
1873,	6,600 sq. ft.
1883,	115,200 sq. ft.
1890,	167,000 sq. ft.
1899,	293,760 sq. ft.
Men employed,
1857,	20
1872,	300
1884,	450
1893,	1000
1899,	2000

In 1867, having determined that it was a poor business that could not for a time run itself, Mr. Brown and Mr. Sharpe together visited the first International Exposition in Paris, where the firm had an exhibit, and they were so impressed with the importance of such expositions that the company has exhibited in most of the large ones since that date, and in all of them they have obtained leading awards. The machines and tools exhibited have never been specially prepared for exhibition, and have always been the same in finish and design as those regularly manufactured; and their originality, their fitness for the purpose for which they were designed, the excellence of their workmanship, the convenience with which they could be handled, and the progress that they have shown in design over those in earlier expositions, have invariably been commended.

On June 25, 1857, Mr. Sharpe was married to Louisa Dexter, daughter of Lewis and Mary Angell Dexter, of Smithfield. Six children were born to them, four daughters and two sons. Mr. Sharpe continued in the active management of his business nearly until the date of his death Oct. 17, 1899, which occurred on the return voyage from Europe, where he had sought to regain his health.

BROWN (Attleboro-Providence family). Of the several families of Brown, prominent in Rhode Island, that of David Brown and his son Joseph R. possesses a mechanical prominence which is perpetuated in the name of the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company whose plant is located in Providence.

David Brown, a native of what is now Attleboro, where he was born in 1781, became established in the manufacture of jewelry and silverware in Warren, Rhode Island, in 1804. Business becoming slack and wants pressing, he traveled through the valley of the Connecticut grinding razors and fine cutlery on a machine which he wheeled before him, and carrying for sale silverware of his own manufacture. Following this pursuit for three years, he not only cleared himself of all debt, but was able to lay up money beside. After many years, in 1828, he removed from Warren to Pawtucket. Late in 1833 he formed a co-partnership with his son Joseph Rogers Brown, with a location in Providence, which enterprise was the beginning of what afterward became the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company.

David Brown was a man of independence of character, of strong will and purpose and of the highest integrity. He lived to the eighty-eighth year of his age, dying in 1868, at Pawtucket, R. I. He married Patience Rogers, daughter of Joseph Rogers, of Newport, R. I., and had several children, of whom the eldest, Joseph Rogers, was born at Warren, Jan. 26, 1810.

JOSEPH ROGERS BROWN seemed to inherit the mechanical proclivities of his father, and in boyhood, outside of school hours, was accustomed to assist him in his business, remaining in attendance at the neighborhood school until seventeen years of age. With his mind full of mechanical thoughts and ingenuity, he began early to use tools and to use them with practical result. In 1827 he entered the machine shop of Wolcott and Harris, Valley Falls, where he developed unusual ability and was soon promoted from the coarser work with which he began to that requiring more careful manipulation. After some months spent upon the manufacture of cotton machinery, in the spring following he returned to Pawtucket and assisted his father in the construction of various clocks for the towns of Pawtucket, Taunton and New Bedford.

Becoming of age in 1831 he soon opened a shop on his own account, and began the manufacture of small tools and lathes. Two years later, in 1833, the father and son again joined their efforts and started in business at No. 60 South Main street, Providence. In the Fall of 1837 the shop and contents were destroyed by fire, and the two thousand dollars insurance received was the capital with which to begin again. Rebuilding the shop they soon after removed their business to No. 69 South Main street, where it was continued until 1848. After 1841 it was under the sole care of the son, in which year the father retired and went to the West. After this date another removal was made to No. 115 South Main street. At this location in 1848, he received, as an apprentice, Mr. Lucian Sharpe, who remained with him in that capacity for five years. On March 1, 1853, Mr. Sharpe became his partner, under the firm name of J. R. Brown & Sharpe.

At this time the business, twenty years established, had earned the reputation for producing the best and most accurate of work; it consisted of clock and watch repairing, the making of a variety of measuring instruments in which Mr. Brown was an adept, and a variety of light mechanical work which would naturally come to a shop of its character. Their total floor space, amounting to only 1,800 square feet, gave occupation to but fourteen hands; but the new partnership was a happy one, and thereafter the increase of the business was continuous. This was especially true after 1858, when they made a contract with the Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Company to manufacture their entire product. This connection, in a large degree, stimulated the invention and development of the machines and tools later made by the company. From this time forward the old South Main street location became crowded, and was gradually extended to embrace a considerable portion of the block. In 1872 it was decided to move to the present location, there then being 300 men employed. Not long after the removal, Mr. Brown's failing health withdrew him from his activity, but the business has generally been carried out on the mechanical lines which he was so instrumental in establishing. The plant has continued to grow until the present buildings, which are said to be among the best in America for their line of business, have a floor space of ten acres, and employ more than 2,500 men.

To Mr. Brown is due not only the foundations of the mechanical reputation of the business, but also many inventions of a far-reaching importance in the mechanical world. Perhaps encouraged by his familiarity with clock mechanism and its making, he early became interested in making scales of measurement, in 1852 producing a linear dividing engine—the first automatic machine of the kind put in use on this side of the Atlantic. In the following year he perfected the vernier caliper, which was the first practical tool for exact measurements which could be sold at a price within the reach of the ordinary machinist; its importance in the attainment of fine work can hardly be over-estimated.

Probably the most noted invention made by him was that of the universal milling machine, patented in 1865; a machine which is used over the world wherever a progressive machine shop exists. Others were cutters that can be sharpened without changing their form, patented in 1864, a revolving-head screw machine, patented in 1865, the universal grinding machine, devised by him shortly before his death and patented in 1877, screw-slotting machines, tapping machines, gear cutting attachment for the milling machine, friction clutch pulley, patented in 1864, and a large number of gauges and exact measuring instruments, which are in common use to-day.

The list of Mr. Brown's inventions suggests the character of his thoughts throughout his life, but perhaps does not include his reasons for his work. He worked chiefly because it was his greatest pleasure. He possessed a genuine love for all mechanical and mathematical problems, and he was as willing to take up some difficulty which was disturbing his associates as he was to work out some problem pertaining more entirely to himself. This earnestness in helping other people and this love of mechanics were, perhaps, his chief attributes, and these qualities, with his unusual skill and his determination to sell only the best work, were the very great influences which he contributed to the business. He had no ambition to make a large amount of money, or to establish a very large industry, but his inventions were of such a character that when made known they were at once appreciated, and were of inestimable value to the business. How important these inventions were and how permanent is their usefulness we often do not fully appreciate. They are so much a matter of every-day use we frequently take them as a matter of course, but the principles of many of them were entirely novel, and they will be as permanent as they are advantageous—for instance, the principle embodied in the cutters that can be sharpened without changing their form has wonderfully increased the efficiency of milling and gear-cutting machines, and probably will be used as long as these machines are used.

On Sept. 18, 1837, Mr. Brown was married to Caroline B. Niles, daughter of Jonathan and Susan Niles of Providence, who died in 1851. On May 3, 1852, he married Jane F. Mowry, of Pawtucket. Two children were born to the first marriage, of whom one, Lyra Frances, was married to Edward I. Nickerson of Providence. Mr. Brown died at the Isles of Shoals, N. H., July 3, 1876.

ANDREWS. (I) John McAndrews or Andrews, first of Kings Towne, came from Scotland, and lived in Boston, at Cape Cod, and is known to have lived in Kings Towne before May 20, 1671. He died there before Aug. 22, 1693, for at that time his eldest son, John, settled his father's estate. By his first marriage he had two children, John and William. He married for his second wife Mary Ridgeley, who died in 1716, the mother of five children: Charles, James, Thomas, Edward (called also Edmund) and Benoni. In the course of time his descendants called themselves Andrews.

(II) William Andrews, son of John, born in East Greenwich, Aug. 23, 1679, married Sept. 25, 1700, Annie Searle, and they had four children: John, Charles, Mary and William, Jr. William, Sr., died in 1762, and his administration was granted to his eldest son, John Andrews, in Coventry.

(III) John Andrews, son of William, born in East Greenwich, March 23, 1702, died in Coventry May 18, 1795. He married Hannah Greene, daughter of John and Abigail D. Greene, and granddaughter of John Greene, of London, the traditional regicide, Judge Clark, who like others fled when Charles II. came to the throne of England, lest they be executed for deciding against Charles I. John Andrews came from Frenchtown, East Greenwich, and settled on Maple Root Plains, in Coventry. He and his wife were members of the Maple Root Six Principle Baptist Church. They had four children: Annie, who married Jan. 4, 1781, Robert Weaver, of Coventry; Hannah, who died unmarried at an advanced age; Elnathan, born Feb. 22, 1732; and William, who married Rebecca Greene, of Coventry, daughter of Ebenezer.

(IV) Elnathan Andrews, son of John, born Feb. 22, 1732 (the same day that the birth of George Washington occurred), married (probably) June 21, 1757, Jane Greene, of Coventry, daughter of Ebenezer, son of John and Abigail, and grandson of John, of London. Mr. Andrews died June 21, 1824, aged ninety-two years. He had five children by his first wife, Waitey, Bethana, Timothy, John and Rebecca. He married (second) Elizabeth, widow of Ezekiel Johnson.

(V) Timothy Andrews, son of Elnathan, born in Coventry Nov. 22, 1762, died in West Greenwich Sept. 5, 1843. He married Russelle Mattison, of West Greenwich, daughter of William and Sarah (Lee) Mattison, the former a son of Joseph and Martha (Greene) Mattison, and the latter the daughter of Peter and Rachel (Russelle) Lee. Mrs. Andrews was born in 1757, and died Feb. 2, 1847. Their children were: (1) Bethana, born in Coventry Jan. 2, 1785, died in West Greenwich Jan. 29, 1865. She married July 28, 1807, Caleb Sweet, of West Greenwich. (2) Freelope, born in Coventry July 13, 1786, died in West Greenwich Dec. 29, 1871. In 1805 she married Benjamin Vickery, of Dighton, Mass., by whom she had seven children, and she married (second) Aug. 30, 1835, Amos Mattison, of West Greenwich. (3) Peleg, born in Coventry April 29, 1790, died March 6, 1855. He married Marcey, of West Greenwich, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Greene) James, she born April 23, 1790, and died April 11, 1855, the mother of four children. (4) Jane, born in Coventry April 10, 1792, died there Jan. 23, 1881. She married in 1809 Perry Greene James, of West Greenwich, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Greene) James, he born May 11, 1788, died in New Haven, Conn., April 27, 1881. (5) Charles, born in Coventry in 1793, died when about twelve years old. (6) Sally, born in Coventry in 1794, died Nov. 27, 1842, in West Greenwich. She was married in 1817, becoming the second wife of William Sweet, of West Greenwich, son of Barton and Rachel Sweet, he born Aug. 30, 1784, died in West Greenwich Oct. 23, 1843. He had a family of nine children. (7) George, born in Coventry Aug. 7, 1797, died in Noank, Conn., April 7, 1872. He married Dec. 11, 1829, Mary Esther Barnes, of Ledyard, Conn., daughter of Amos and Mary Barnes, she born April 11, 1805, died in Center Groton, Oct. 11, 1862, the mother of five children. (8) Mattison, born in Coventry in 1799, died in Natick, R. I., Jan. 27, 1852. He married, in the fall of 1819, Lucy Sweet, of South Kingstown, who died in Natick March 18, 1862. They had nine children. (9) Jonathan, born in Coventry Oct. 5, 1801, died in Minnesota Jan. 24, 1868. He married Aug. 30, 1825, Ruby Sweet, of West Greenwich, daughter of Burton and Rachel Sweet, she born Nov. 2, 1802, in Crossville, Tenn., died Aug. 10, 1869, the mother of seven children. (10) Joanna, born in Coventry in 1804, died there Aug. 14, 1879. In 1824-25 she married Seneca Williams, of North Stonington, Conn., son of Uriah and Johanna Williams, he born in December, 1797, died Aug. 24, 1881. They had four children. (11) John, born in Coventry July 4, 1806, is the next in the line we are tracing. (12) Nelson, born in Coventry Oct. 30, 1808, died there Aug. 28, 1882. He married Jan. 2, 1833, Merebah Whitman Harrington, of West Greenwich, daughter of Ebenezer and Huldah (Johnson) Harrington, she born Sept. 1, 1812, died in Coventry, Jan. 8, 1890. They had nine children.

(VI) John Andrews, born in Coventry July 4, 1806, died in Cranston, R. I., Oct. 3, 1896. He married (first) Aug. 25, 1827, Antha Sweet, of West Greenwich, daughter of William and Elsie Sweet, she born Sept. 7, 1809, died Oct. 10, 1859, in West Greenwich, leaving thirteen children. John Andrews was baptized and joined the Maple Root Church in May, 1819, and Antha, his wife, in July, 1831. He married (second) Mary (Battey) Mattison, of West Greenwich, daughter of James and Maplet Battey, and widow of Thomas Mattison. She was born Sept. 7, 1809, and died March 2, 1895. The children of John and Antha (Sweet) Andrews were: (1) Timothy, born Nov. 30, 1828, married Dec. 18, 1847, Eunice Mattison, of West Greenwich, born May 30, 1830, daughter of Asa and Merebah (Potter) Mattison. (2) William, born in West Greenwich Sept. 1, 1830, married May 18, 1849, Abbie Woodmansee, of West Greenwich, born June 20, 1832, daughter of Samuel and Mahala Woodmansee. She died Aug. 26, 1854, leaving three children, and he married (second) in 1862 Ann Mystilla Tarbox, of East Greenwich, born Sept. 3, 1843, daughter of Joseph and Phebe Bailey Tarbox. They had five children. (3) Elsie, born in West Greenwich April 15, 1832, married Dec. 12, 1847, John Mattison, of West Greenwich, born Dec. 5, 1825, son of Asa and Merebah (Potter) Mattison, and there were nine children born to them. (4) Mary Ann, born in West Greenwich May 7, 1834, died April 20, 1861. She was married Sept. 11, 1852, to Samuel Hoxie Barber, of Exeter, R. I., born Dec. 14, 1825, died Nov. 5, 1874. They had four children. (5) Jonah Titus, born in West Greenwich, July 31, 1836, is mentioned further on. He married Sept. 10, 1857, Mary Ann Sweet, of West Greenwich, born Aug. 2, 1839, daughter of Amos and Ruth C. (Brown) Sweet. (6) Phebe, born in West Greenwich May 13, 1839, died Sept. 8, 1843. (7) Abel, born in West Greenwich April 17, 1841, died Sept. 5, 1843. (8) Abbie Frances, born in West Greenwich March 31, 1843, died there in June, 1875. She was married July 7, 1860, to Job Whitman Harrington, born July 23, 1842, in West Greenwich. (9) John Francis, born in West Greenwich May 2, 1845, died Nov. 11, 1878. He married Dec. 25, 1866, Mary Elizabeth Howard, born Oct. 6, 1844, and she died April 10, 1900, leaving two children, Edward Blake and Minnie Gertrude. (10) Lois A., born in West Greenwich April 15, 1847, married June 30, 1864, Lucius E. Cahoon, born Oct. 12, 1840. (11) Nelson, born in West Greenwich April 5, 1849, married June 11, 1871, Phebe E. Spencer, of East Greenwich, born in 1851, died Nov. 6, 1894, the mother of one child. (12) Frederick Tillinghast, born in West Greenwich March 23, 1851, married Aug. 31, 1876, Clara J. Vaughn, daughter of George B. and Mary A. Vaughn, she born Sept. 29, 1855. (13) Jane, born in West Greenwich May 10, 1853, married Oct. 12, 1876, Halsey James Briggs, of West Greenwich, born May 9, 1842, and they have three children.

(VII) J. TITUS ANDREWS was educated in the common schools of West Greenwich and also spent a short time at a school near Spring Lake, in Coventry, under Israel Parker. He left school at the age of nineteen years and until twenty-two years old remained at home with his father. He then went to the southern part of Coventry, Conn., where he worked a farm which his father had purchased, remaining there ten years. In 1869 he purchased his present farm, known then as the Judge Burton farm, from Jeremiah Knight. At that time it consisted of 147 acres, and to this Mr. Andrews and his brother Fred have added forty-two acres on the east, also owning the Snell place, across the road, consisting of thirty-five acres. They also own the old farm at one time owned by Caleb Congdon, and engage in general farming.

Mr. Andrews, who is a self-made man, has been a very successful agriculturist, and has also taken an active part in politics. He was a member of the town council for two years, and was elected senator from Cranston for six years, serving as chairman on the committee to lay out Pawtuxet avenue, and also as a member of the committees on Agriculture (five years), Militia, Printing, Special Legislation and Fisheries. Although a staunch Republican, Mr. Andrews received a large Democratic vote. He is a member of the Six-Principle Baptist Church at Maple Root, and has served as a deacon.

Frederick T. Andrews is a member of the town council, in which he has served for thirteen years. He and his brother are among the foremost citizens of the community, and are highly esteemed and respected by all.

WEST (Tiverton family). For a hundred years and more Tiverton has been the home of the West family, a family of distinction in Massachusetts and Rhode Island since the early Colonial period. Reference is made to the family of the late Samuel West, A. M., M. D., and Rev. Samuel West, D. D., respectively.

(XVI) TIVERTON (Tiverton family). For a hundred years or more Tiverton has been the home of the West family, a family of distinction in Massachusetts and Rhode Island since the early Colonial period. Reference is made to the family of the Rev. Samuel West, A. M., M. D., and Rev. Samuel West, D. D., respectively.

Samuel West

In the early Colonial period there lived in the old Massachusetts town of Yarmouth in the southeasterly part, near Swan Pond, Sackfield West, a physician and farmer, a man of strong mind, who often exhorted the Indians in their meeting-house. Dr. West was twice married, the Christian names of his wives being Mary and Ruth, respectively. To the first marriage was born April 19, 1717, a son Peleg, and to the second, perhaps, among others, Samuel and Benjamin. Dr. West became one of the most zealous New Lights of his day. These two sons, Samuel and Benjamin, became men of celebrity, the latter being educated at Princeton and Harvard, a graduate of the latter institution in 1768. This Benjamin West studied theology, but soon abandoned this profession for that of the law. He was admitted to the Bar in 1773 in Charlestown. He was chosen a delegate from the State of New Hampshire to the Continental Congress and was elected a member of the Convention that framed the Federal Constitution and also a representative from New Hampshire to the first Congress, but declined each.

Samuel West, son of Sackfield and Ruth, born March 13, 1729-30, in the town of Yarmouth, Mass., married (first) March 7, 1768, Experience, daughter of Consider Howland. She became the mother of six children, and died March 6, 1789. Mr. West married (second) Jan. 20, 1790, Lovisa, widow of Benjamin Jenne, and daughter of Jacob Hathaway, of Dartmouth, Mass. Both wives were women of uncommon excellence, and it is said that if they knew little of the subjects that most engaged the husband's thoughts they knew better than he how to lengthen out the shortcomings of his income into the means of a comfortable support. The first Mrs. West was a tall woman and, in reference to that and in connection with her Christian name, he used to say that he "had learned from long Experience that it was a good thing to be married."

Young West's father having removed to Barnstable, Mass., soon after his birth, the son was here reared, working on the farm until he had reached his twentieth year; but during that time he exhibited such traits of mind, and especially such knowledge of the Scriptures, as to attract the attention of the few intelligent men who happened to know him. He was fitted for college in six months, under the care of the Rev. Mr. Green of Barnstable, and in 1750 entered Harvard College, from which he was graduated in 1754, and among the most distinguished of his class, in which was Governor Hancock. He entered the ministry, was settled over the congregation in New Bedford in 1761, and taught the doctrine that afterward became known as Unitarian. Immediately after the battle of Bunker Hill he joined the American army as a chaplain, remaining several months with it. He was a member of the convention that framed the constitution of the State of Massachusetts, and also of the convention for the adoption of the constitution of the United States.

As a preacher Dr. West was distinguished for great strength of mind and what seemed a complete mastery of the difficult subjects which he was in the habit of bringing into the pulpit. He had been honored in 1793 with the degree of D. D., from his alma mater. He withdrew from his ministerial labors in 1803, and died Sept. 24, 1807, at the house of his son in Tiverton, Rhode Island.

Among his publications are "A sermon that was delivered May 29, 1776, being the anniversary for the election of the honorable council for the Colony"; "A sermon on the Anniversary of the Landing of the Fathers at Plymouth"; and "Essays on 'Liberty and Necessity', in reply to Jonathan Edwards's 'On the Will.'"

Samuel West (2), son of Rev. Dr. Samuel, was born in Plymouth county, Mass., likely in New Bedford, and married June 3, 17—, Polly (Mary) Whitridge, daughter of Dr. William and Mary Whitridge, of Tiverton, R. I., Dr. Whitridge being a man of marked ability and a widely known physician, as were three of his sons. Samuel West was for many years, perhaps, the most widely known physician in the whole region round about him in Rhode Island and in the neighboring towns of Massachusetts. His son truly said of him: "Possessed by nature of a strong mind, rendered vigorous by cultivation, he entered upon the study of physic when it was in its comparative infancy. Yet by his own industry and observation, he was enabled to keep up with the times, and frequently to come to conclusions if not anterior to, at least in company with, those who enjoyed the advantages of the schools and the hospitals." Dr. West had a very large practice, and no physician was more frequently called into consultation by his brethren in the profession in all critical cases, and none was more honored or relied upon by the community at large.

DR. SAMUEL WEST (3), son of Dr. Samuel (2) and Mary (Whitridge) West, was born Aug. 9, 1806, in the town of Tiverton, R. I. After due preparation he entered Brown University and was graduated therefrom in the class of 1828, among his classmates being LaFayette Foster, afterward for years United States senator from Connecticut, and M. A. De Wolf Howe, afterward Bishop of the Central Diocese of Pennsylvania. Dr. West and Judge Foster were roommates at college, and at the commencement exercises Foster was the valedictorian, while West was assigned to the second part of the class exercises, they having first and second honors, respectively. On leaving college young West desiring to enter the profession of his father was prepared for it at the Harvard Medical School, from which he was graduated in 1831. Thus liberally educated he was well prepared for his calling, a profession he began and followed with energy at New Bedford, Mass., up to the time of his father's death, which occurred just as a successful career was opening before him there. This event—the circumstances and conditions attending it—made it necessary that he return to the home in Tiverton, R. I., his father having an extensive practice and as well a large farm. Here he assumed charge of the farm and entered actively in the practice of his profession amid the scenes and friends of his earlier years. From this time on through the long period of approximately forty years of his professional career he faithfully administered to the sick and afflicted in a large and successful practice, which extended not only through the town of Tiverton but into Little Compton, Portsmouth, Fall River and Westport. He had been faithful to his inheritance of a rich legacy of mental power and his own attainments commanded that confidence in him as a physician and respect for him as a man which had long been accorded to his father.

Of Dr. West the Rev. Dr. George W. Briggs wrote: "A laborious practice, extending over a wide range of country, left him little opportunity for large study of books. But, like his father, he was a careful, shrewd and conscientious observer, and in long rides by day and night he had constant opportunities for a true study of the cases under his care, for following out the trains of thought they might suggest, and finding out what might be quite as valuable in his profession as the love of books. Though living apart from the centers of medical instruction, his own thought kept him abreast of his time. His mind was very active in whatever direction he pursued his inquiries, and marked by a sturdy independence of thought. He had a deep interest in the public welfare. He was an ardent advocate of temperance, and though he had no children was a steadfast friend of the public schools. He was loyal in his friendships, and welcomed the companions of youth or manhood with hearty good will. He was a lover as well as an observer of nature, inheriting his father's interest in agriculture, and took great delight in the management of a large farm. Even the labor itself upon it seemed to be a joy. Never physically strong, for many years he did the twofold work of physician and farmer, eminently successful in both, as he would have been in any pursuit in life, until his health greatly failed."

The habits of life of Dr. West were plain and simple. He cared little what others said or thought unless what they might suggest threw light upon his pathway of duty. His life was singularly correct and his fidelity to the right was his strongest bond of allegiance. With a thoroughly trained mind, of strong powers of analysis, which enabled him to find the bottom of things, and a restless spirit of inquiry, which did not permit him to rest until he had compassed every subject he took in hand, he distrusted innovations until they were justified by application. He had convictions on almost every subject that attracted public attention, and with chivalrous courage he made his convictions known, without regard to result upon his own interests or the interests of his party or friends. He was free from all cant, pretense and unreality. His religious belief was that of the Unitarian denomination. His political affiliations were with the Republican party. He was in every sense a conscientious and an honest man.

"Late in life," wrote Rev. Dr. Briggs, "he [Dr. West] married a daughter of Hon. Judge Job Durfee, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, and sister of its present (1888) chief justice [Hon. Thomas Durfee] and built a home on rising ground that gave him a view of a portion of Narragansett Bay, and of the beautiful Rhode Island shore. There he lived in his latest years, looking out every day upon the fair prospect always before his eyes, enjoying the fruits of former labors, practicing occasionally among lifelong friends, or when called into consultations, until an accident, followed by brief days of keen suffering, brought his useful and honored life to a close. The name of Samuel West was made honorable by his grandfather's life and service. Though he followed a different calling, his father kept it equally bright. And the subject of this memoir (Dr. Samuel West (3), the last that bore it) left it without a stain."

Mrs. Mary (Durfee) West, the widow of Dr. West, whose life has just been portrayed, was born Oct. 23, 1827, in Tiverton, R. I., daughter of the late Judge Job and Judith (Borden) Durfee, of Tiverton, he a descendant of Thomas Durfee, a native of England, who came to New England previous to 1664, settling in the town of Portsmouth, R. I., from whom his lineage is through Job, John and Thomas Durfee. The marriage of Dr. and Mrs. West occurred Oct. 27, 1869. Dr. Samuel West died in Tiverton Jan. 7, 1879, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Mrs. Judith Borden Durfee, mother of Mrs. West, died Oct. 30, 1884, at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years, and was laid to rest in the family cemetery. Of the children of Judge Job and Judith Durfee Amy died on the homestead June 18, 1902; Lucy, who married Thomas Hicks Borden, died July 26, 1900; Thomas, late Chief Justice, is mentioned in full elsewhere in these volumes; Sarah Ann and Mrs. West reside together on the old Judge Job Durfee homestead. Mrs. West is a charming lady of the old school, and is noted for her charities and her kindness to all. She still retains the Dr. West home, but has it in the charge of a caretaker.

GEORGE HUNT, deceased, equally well known as a manufacturer of gold jewelry and a lover and master of botany—a happy combination of the prosperous man of affairs and the enthusiastic, lovable man who lives close to nature—was for sixty-five years a resident of Providence, and during that long period the process by which he became established in the confidence and affection of the people was continuous and unvarying. The son of Peter and Sarah (Wheeler) Hunt, he was born in Sudbury, near Concord, Mass., his descent being traced through English ancestry and a line of American forefathers, the latter of whom were natives of these places. The Massachusetts genealogy is as below.

(I) William Hunt, of Concord, born in England in 1605, came to New England in 1635. He married (first) Elizabeth Best, and (second) Mercy Rice.

(II) Isaac Hunt, of Concord, born in 1647, married Mary Stone.

(III) Isaac Hunt (2), of Sudbury, born in 1668, married Mary Willard.

(IV) Isaac Hunt (3), of Sudbury, married Martha Goodnow.

(V) William Hunt (2), of Sudbury, born April 3, 1726, married Mary Wheeler.

(VI) William Hunt (3), of Sudbury, born March 7, 1753, married Mary Plimpton.

(VII) Peter Hunt, of Sudbury, born March 3, 1781, married in 1805 Sarah A. Wheeler.

(VIII) George Hunt was born Jan. 3, 1811. His father died when he was but eight years of age, and the boy then went to live with his grandfather, William Hunt. His work upon the farm and his free outdoor life, joined to a naturally observant and susceptible nature, aroused in him a love for plants and flowers, which but strengthened with time and close contact with city life. Although his literary advantages were such only as were afforded by the country schools of the early portion of his century, he was so quick, active and bright that he was able to provide for himself when only thirteen years of age. His elder sister had already settled in Providence as the wife of Peter Church, member of the firm of Church & Metcalf, manufacturing jewelers, and when about nineteen years of age George, ambitious for a broader life, removed to the city and made his home with her. He was apprenticed to the firm of Church & Metcalf, then located on Steeple street, and thoroughly mastered the trade. In 1841 he formed a partnership with Ezekiel Owen, under the name of Hunt & Owen, for the manufacture of solid gold jewelry. Their establishment was located at No. 7 President street (now Waterman), the site at present occupied by the Rhode Island School of Design. At the outset both Mr. Hunt and Mr. Owen worked at the bench themselves, and relied entirely on hand power. In 1847 they removed to the north side of Steeple street, and in 1855 to the corner of Dorrance and Weybosset streets, where they remained for thirty-two years, or until the firm retired from business in 1887. At that time the business had developed into one of the most extensive in the city, the manufactory being provided with the most modern machinery and appliances.

Outside his important business interests Mr. Hunt was deeply concerned in civic affairs and was a prominent participant in the municipal government. He served as a member of the common council from 1851 to 1854, and from 1861 to 1863. In politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican.

Like most of those who retain a cheerful and elastic nature to a good old age, Mr. Hunt enjoyed a lifelong recreation which kept both his body and his mind in active exercise. In his case the seasoning of the serious concerns of life was the study of the natural sciences. To the last he found time to indulge his love of nature by long rambles in the woods, and by visits to the botanical haunts of the State, with which he was very familiar and which he explored year after year with as much pure enjoyment after his eightieth year as in his younger days. With the study of botany he joined later that of entomology, accumulating both an extensive herbarium and a large collection of insects, presented after his death to Brown University by his daughter.

At the time of his decease Mr. Hunt was a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He was also a charter member of the Horticultural Society of Providence, instituted in 1845, and for a period of fifty years was an active participant in its committee work and general proceedings, serving as its president from 1876 to 1879. He was also a member of the Franklin Society, being its vice-president from 1869 to 1878.

The following suggestive extract from the Providence Journal is an epitome of Mr. Hunt's character—a character sketch well worthy of preservation, which appeared in that publication at the time of his death, in Providence, on Feb. 21, 1895:

"Although engaged in the active duties of a manufacturer, he never gave up the pursuits of a floriculturist. One never went to him with a rare plant, especially if indigenous to Rhode Island, without learning correctly its name, its haunts, its habits and its peculiar characteristics. He showed in the Horticultural Society, as he did everywhere, the breadth of his knowledge, and there, as everywhere, he was the quiet, modest, unassuming gentleman, who could express in the clearest manner the thought which possessed him, and with a degree of persuasiveness which carried conviction. But let no one imagine, because he was persuasive, that he lacked firmness, or the courage of his convictions and the willingness to express them when they differed from those of others around him. Truthful and frank to a degree seldom equalled, he was so gentle in his manner, so considerate of others, so just in his judgment, so wise in his decisions and so courteous in stating them, that he won a host of friends; and 'once a friend, always a friend,' could be said of him as of few others. It would seem as if the very flowers of the field would miss him, and if the highways, and stone walls, and the hills and dales are not conscious of something gone, those whose privilege it was to tramp with him will not, while life lasts, forget the keen enjoyment which has been vouchsafed to them in being able to accompany him and share with him a close communion with nature. One could not know him without having a higher idea of the worth and dignity of human nature, and a consciousness that one may grow old in years and remain youthful and cheerful in spirit, and keep in touch with the young life of an ever renewing present. As was once said of Stephen Longfellow, of Portland, an uncle of the poet, so may it be said in closing of Mr. Hunt, 'Such men never die.'

George Hunt was married in June, 1841, to Evelina Metcalf, daughter of Jesse and Eunice Dench (Houghton) Metcalf, and her biography is given below. Her death occurred twelve years previous to that of her husband, and they were the parents of two daughters: Mary Eva, born Nov. 14, 1845, was married in March, 1869, to Andrew Ingraham, of New Bedford, Mass., now deceased, and they had four children, George Hunt, Margaret (deceased), Arthur and Edward; Miss Ellen G., born Oct. 7, 1849, is a resident of Providence, Rhode Island.

Evelina Metcalf (as the wife of George Hunt was known before marriage) was born in Providence, R. I., Jan. 30, 1820, and died in her native city Aug. 23, 1883. She came of a family which since the early portion of the eighteenth century had been identified with the history of Providence. About 1737 Eleazer Metcalf, of Dedham, Mass., located at Providence, and in 1780 Joel and Lucy (Gay) Metcalf, of Attleboro, Mass., became residents of the place. The two Joels, Jesse, Joseph G., Col. Edwin, Major George, Alfred, Franklin, Jesse H., Stephen O. and Edward P. Metcalf have all impressed themselves upon the history of Providence. It is the branch of the family represented by Joel Metcalf, of Attleboro, to which Mrs. Hunt belongs. He was her paternal grandfather, born in that place in 1755, and his wife, Lucy Gay, was also a native of Attleboro. Jesse, their son and the father of Mrs. Hunt, was born May 15, 1790, and died in the prime of life, June 20, 1838. His marriage to Eunice D. Houghton, daughter of John, occurred April 19, 1812, and she died May 5, 1858, the mother of nine children, of whom Evelina was the fourth. Her early education was obtained under Oliver Angell, who taught a flourishing school at the corner of Main and Mill streets. Later she attended a school at Charlestown, Mass., and the Greene street school, of Providence, of which Hiram Fuller was the head. While at the latter institution she came under the influence of that remarkable woman, Margaret Fuller, and from her imbibed a keen love of literature, especially of poetry, while her spiritual nature was stimulated at the same time and strengthened.

Mrs. Hunt's married life commenced when she was twenty-one years of age, and during the forty years of its duration she was especially identified with the philanthropies of Providence, ever contributing to the relief and enjoyment of others. At the outbreak of the Civil war she became an active figure in the work of the Sanitary Commission, and labored unceasingly to alleviate suffering, both at the front and among the families of the soldiers at home. In her religious belief she was a Unitarian ever upholding that faith by thought, word and deed. During the last twenty years of her life she was an invalid, but though physically unable to enter into much of the work and sociability about her she never lost an opportunity to do good, or allowed her interest to flag in the welfare of family and friends, especially of the young. Her death was a distinct loss to the culture and spirituality of the community.

GARRETTSON. The family bearing this name at Newport, where for a quarter of a century it has been represented, and latterly prominently in the social and business life of the city by the Hon. Frederick P. Garrettson, who has served the city as its chief executive officer, is one of many years' standing in the States of Maryland and New York. A family conspicuous in itself, its members have become allied by marriage and connected with some of the historic, most distinguished and wealthy families of the State of New York. For fifty and more years, beginning with the Revolution, the name of Rev. Freeborn Garrettson, the zealous, earnest and talented itinerant Methodist minister and missionary, was almost a household word from the Gulf of Mexico to Nova Scotia. By the Garrettson alliance with the Livingstons the family became interwoven with the Beekmans, the Jays, the Van Brughs and the Montgomeries, historic names in and about New York, and, as well, illustrious; Hon. John Jay, statesman and jurist, chief justice of the United States Supreme court, and governor; Hon. William Livingston (Yale, 1741), member of the First, Second and Third Continental Congresses, brigadier-general and commander-in-chief of the militia of New Jersey and that State's first governor; Hon. Philip Livingston, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; Hon. Robert R. Livingston, the eminent lawyer, and a justice of the New York Supreme court, member of Congress, etc., and many others of scarcely less note.

The Garrettsons were an early Maryland family; the immigrant ancestor, coming from Great Britain, was among the first settlers in the Province of Maryland, on the west side of the Chesapeake bay, near the mouth of the Susquehanna river. Here was born, Aug. 15, 1752, Rev. Freeborn Garrettson, a grandson of the settler and a son of worthy parents, both members of the Church of England—the father a man of good moral character, and the mother an earnest Christian, somewhat of the Whitefieldian school. Freeborn in time made a profession of religion and became deeply concerned for the spiritual interests of others, and especially of his own friends. He became convinced that it was his duty to become a minister, and at the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1776, held in Baltimore, he was admitted on trial, and appointed on the Frederick circuit. Previous to this time, he had, in obedience to a strong conviction of duty, manumitted his slaves. He next served on Fairfax circuit, and at the Conference held in 1777 he was appointed to Brunswick circuit, in Virginia. He next served on various circuits through the South and East, including the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, preaching from ten to twelve sermons per week and with great diligence and success. In 1780 he was appointed to Baltimore, and during this year, as in preceding ones, had large experience of the preserving goodness of God, and of the bitter hostility of men. In 1781 he was appointed to Sussex circuit in Virginia, where he was greatly obstructed in his labors by the all-engrossing scenes of the Revolution. During the year he traveled about five thousand miles and preached about five hundred sermons, then labored next on the Somerset and Talbot circuits. In 1784 Mr. Garrettson was present at the famous Christmas Conference in Baltimore, at which the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized—he had been active in bringing about that important measure—and was one of the eleven who were ordained elders during the session. At this Conference he volunteered his services as a missionary to Nova Scotia. He founded the Methodist Society in Halifax. He continued in Nova Scotia for two years. On his return from that territory in 1787 by way of Boston, he found at the latter point three Methodists—the remnant of a society founded there seventeen years before, by Mr. Boardman, one of Mr. Wesley's original missionaries in America. Not finding admission to the city pulpits he preached several sermons in private houses, and then passed on to Providence and Newport, R. I., where he was more cordially received and preached with good acceptance. He continued his route to the Baltimore Conference. In 1787 he was appointed presiding elder in the Baltimore Conference. In 1788 he set out, by the advice of Bishop Asbury, for New England, with a view to plant Methodism in the eastern States; but he was detained in the city of New York until the ensuing conference, in consequence of the illness of the preacher who was stationed there, and thus was prevented from carrying out his purpose. At the conference of 1789 he was appointed presiding elder of the New York district, having under his care twelve young preachers, whom he designated to circuits along the Hudson, as far northward as Lake Champlain. Several of these routes of ministerial travel bordered on New England; and thus Garrettson became a coadjutor with Jesse Lee in introducing Methodism into that part of the country.

In 1790 Rev. Mr. Garrettson made a tour through New England, and preached in most of the larger towns in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. At the New York Conference of 1791 his district was divided, and he was appointed to that section of it which lay along the New England border. In 1782 he traveled through the Albany district, which included portions of New England, and in 1793, the Philadelphia district. In 1794 and 1795 he traveled the district including Pittsfield; in 1796, the New London district; in 1797, the New York district; in 1798, the Albany district; in 1799, the New Jersey district; and from 1800 to 1803, the New York district. In 1804 he was stationed at Rhinebeck; and in 1805 and 1806, at New York City. In 1807 he was conference missionary. In 1808 he was stationed at Rhinebeck; and in 1809 and 1810 he was conference missionary again. From 1811 to 1814 he was on the New York district again. In 1815 he was without an appointment, by his own request; and in 1816 was again conference missionary. At the conference of 1817 he was returned on the supernumerary list; and from this time, during the remainder of his life, he continued to labor at large, extending his travels through the greater part of New England and the Middle States, and scarcely abating his wonted activity, notwithstanding the growing infirmities of age.

On June 20, 1793, Mr. Garrettson was married to Catherine, daughter of Hon. Robert R. Livingston, which connected him and his posterity with some of the historic and most distinguished families of New York State. His wife received from her mother a farm upon which Mr. and Mrs. Garrettson began their married life. Here in the locality they built a small Methodist church. In some four or five years they exchanged their farm for one which had a frontage on the Hudson river. Upon this land they built a new and handsome house into which they moved in October, 1799. This later was "Wildercliff" on the banks of the Hudson, long one of the celebrated country seats in the town of Rhinebeck. It is said that it was through the influence of Dr. Thomas Tillotson—a former friend of Mr. Garrettson in Maryland, a surgeon in the army in the Revolution and a prominent public man in Maryland just after the war, who later settled in Rhinebeck—that Mr. Garrettson came to the latter point to preach, and on that occasion met the woman he later married.

On her maternal side Mrs. Garrettson, her mother being Margaret Beekman, descended from (I) William Beekman, who was born in 1623 at Hasselt and came to New Amsterdam, N. Y., at the commencement of Governor Stuyvesant's administration, being then in the employ of the Dutch West India Company. He married in 1649 Catherine, daughter of Frederic Hendricks de Boogh, captain of a Hudson river trading vessel. William Beekman was appointed in 1658 vice-director of the Dutch Colony at the mouth of the Delaware river. He was chosen in 1653-64-65-66-67 one of the schapens of New Amsterdam. In 1670 he purchased a farm in the vicinity of the present Beekman street and fronting on the river road now Pearl street, New York City. Mr. Beekman was alderman at twelve different times under the English till 1696, when he retired from public life. He was a man of high repute among the citizens of his day. He died in 1707. From William Beekman Mrs. Garrettson's lineage was through Henry, Henry (2) and Margaret Beekman.

(II) Col. Henry Beekman married Joanna de Lopes, and settled in Kingston, N. Y., where he became county judge, served in the Legislature, and was colonel of militia, etc. He was a deacon and elder in the Protestant Reformed Church.

(III) Henry Beekman (2), born in 1688, married Janet, daughter of Robert Livingston.

(IV) Margaret Beekman, baptized in 1724, married Judge Robert R. Livingston.

On the paternal side Mrs. Garrettson's lineage is through (I) Robert Livingston, a native of Anerum, Scotland, son of John Livingston, a Scottish Presbyterian divine, the latter of whom was banished in 1663 for non-conformity, and went to Rotterdam, where he died in 1672. Robert came to America, to Charlestown, Mass., in 1673, and settled in Albany, and as early as 1675 became secretary of the commissioners, which he held until Albany became a city, in 1686. He held various offices, was town clerk, member of the Colonial Assembly from the city and county of Albany, and later from his manor, and was speaker in 1718. In 1686 he received from the governor a large tract of land which, in 1715, was confirmed by a royal charter from George I, erecting the manor and lordship of Livingston. This tract embraced large parts of what are now the counties of Dutchess and Columbia, N. Y., and is still known as the Livingston Manor. He married, in 1679, Alida, widow of Rev. Nicholas Van Rensselaer and daughter of Philip P. Schuyler. One of his grandsons, Philip Livingston, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

(II) Robert Livingston (2).

(III) Robert Livingston, born in 1718, in New York, married Margaret, daughter of Henry Beekman, and resided on Broadway, near Bowling Green, and at his country seat, "Clermont." He is said to have been the richest landholder, without exception, in New York. One of his daughters, Janet, married Gen. Richard Montgomery, of Revolutionary fame. Mr. Livingston became an eminent lawyer. In 1760 he was appointed judge of the Admiralty court in New York and three years later was made a justice of the New York Supreme court. He was for years a member from Dutchess county of the Provisional Congress. He was a member of the Congress of 1765, which opposed the measures compelling the adoption of stamps, otherwise the Stamp Act.

(IV) Catherine Livingston, born Oct. 14, 1752, married in 1793 Rev. Freeborn Garrettson.

Having thus shown in detail how, by marriage, the Garrettsons are related to the historic Livingstons and Beekmans of New York, the direct genealogy of the family is traced, as follows:

Thomas Garrettson, great-grandfather of Frederick P. Garrettson, ex-mayor of Newport, was born in Hartford county, Md., and died there. He married a Miss Maddux, of Eastern Maryland, where he was an extensive planter.

Freeborn Garrettson, the grandfather, was a worthy connection and namesake of one of the great pioneers of Methodism in Maryland, Virginia, the Middle States and New England. He was born on the eastern shore of Maryland, May 14, 1793, and died in Rhinebeck, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1866, at the age of seventy-three years. He studied law, but never practiced the profession. He resided on the large estate at Clifton Point, on the Hudson river, the greater portion of which was afterward purchased by the late William Astor. He was a man of standing and influence, as well as of comfortable fortune, and for several years was a member of the New York State Legislature. To him and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Waters, of Baltimore, Md., were born the following children: Francis T., is mentioned below; Freeborn, Jr., died in Rhinebeck, in 1904; Rutland is a real estate dealer in New York; Robert Livingston is a lawyer residing in New Paltz, N. Y.; Lyttelton, a lawyer, died in New York; Susan (deceased), was the wife of William S. Waters, a Baltimore lawyer, who is also deceased; and Mary C., unmarried, is living at Asheville, North Carolina.

Francis Thomas Garrettson, father of Frederick P., was born in Rhinebeck, N. Y., May 26, 1826. He received a thorough preliminary education, and was a graduate of Wesleyan College, at Middletown, Conn. In early life he was a commission merchant in New York City and later in Liverpool, England, but subsequently studied law in Rhinebeck and New York and was admitted to the bar in New York in 1851. He immediately took up the practice of his chosen profession in New York City, where he now resides, in retirement and in the quiet enjoyment of the home life to which he is so much attached. He still retains his office in New York, although not engaged in active practice. His church affiliations are with the Episcopal denomination. To him and his wife, who was formerly Miss Helen Jay Prime, daughter of Frederick Prime, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and great-granddaughter of John Jay, were born three children, namely: Frederick P., who is mentioned below; Elizabeth, widow of S. Howland Russell, of New York; and Helen Jay, living at home, unmarried.

Nathaniel Prime, great-grandfather of Frederick Prime Garrettson, on his mother's side, was the son of Joshua Prime, and a descendant of Mark, the settler. He was the founder of the old banking house of Prime, Ward & King, which, though under another name, is still doing business. He was of the Rowley (Mass.), family of Primes, a descendant of Mark Prime, one of three brothers of an excellent family who left Liverpool, England, and settled themselves in Massachusetts. One of them remained there, locating at Rowley, where he was a proprietor before 1650.

(I) Augustus Jay, son of Pierre and Judith (Francois) Jay, he a merchant of La Rochelle, was born in 1665 at La Rochelle, France. The family were Huguenots, and on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in 1685, fled from France to England, where the father died. Augustus came to America, landing at Charleston, S. C. He became a prosperous merchant of New York City. His death occurred in 1751. He had married, in 1697, Anna Maria (or Marie), daughter of Balthazar Bayard, granddaughter of Nicholas and Anna (Stuyvesant) Bayard, and great-granddaughter of Balthazar Bayard, and of Governor Stuyvesant.

(II) Peter Jay, son of Augustus, born in 1704, in New York City, married in 1728 Mary, daughter of Jacobus and Eva (Philips) Van Cortlandt, of Yonkers, N. Y. Mr. Jay was a merchant of New York City. He retired to Rye, N. Y., in 1744, and died at Fishkill, N. Y., in 1777.

(III) John Jay, seventh child and sixth son of Peter Jay, born Dec. 12, 1745, in New York City, married in April, 1774, Sarah Van Brugh, youngest daughter of Gov. William Livingston, of New Jersey, and two sons came to them, Peter Augustus and William, and daughters Susan, Maria, Ann and Sarah Louise. Mr. Jay was the celebrated Chief Justice Jay of the United States. He died in 1829, at Bedford, New York.

(IV) Peter Augustus Jay, son of Chief Justice John Jay, born Jan. 20, 1776, at Elizabethtown, N. J., married in 1807 Mary Rutherford, daughter of Gen. Matthew and Mary (Rutherford) Clarkson. Mr. Jay was a lawyer of New York City, where he died Feb. 20, 1843.

(V) Mary Rutherford Jay, daughter of Peter Augustus, born April 16, 1810, in New York City, married April 30, 1829, Frederick Prime, youngest son of Nathaniel and Cornelia (Sands) Prime.

(VI) Helen Jay Prime married Francis T. Garrettson.

FREDERICK PRIME GARRETTSON, eldest of the children of Francis T. and Helen Jay (Prime) Garrettson, was born in Rhinebeck, N. Y., July 30, 1857. His education was acquired in St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and at Dartmouth College, with the class of 1879. After leaving college he took up the study of law with his father for a time, but soon decided upon a business career, which he inaugurated with a two years' clerkship in the counting-house of Howland & Aspinwall, on South street, New York. Mr. Garrettson then established the firm of F. P. Garrettson & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in fine teas, coffees and fine olive oils at No. 150 Front street, New York, and under his energetic and shrewd guidance the business has steadily and rapidly increased, until to-day the firm of F. P. Garrettson & Co. is one of the largest importing houses in its line in New York. In the spring of 1884, at the solicitation of a number of friends, Mr. Garrettson opened a store in Newport, R. I., carrying a large and complete stock of fancy groceries and fine wines, etc. For about six months after coming to Newport his store was located on Bellevue avenue, but in the latter part of the year (1884) he removed his business to Washington Square, where he has since continued, having met with deserved success. In 1907 Mr. Garrettson was elected a member of the board of directors of the Newport Trust Company.

Socially Mr. Garrettson is a member of the Union Club of New York and the Newport Reading Room, and fraternally is a member of Newport Lodge, No. 104, B. P. O. Elks. During its existence he was also identified with the Business Men's Association of Newport, and for two years served as its president. Being a direct descendant of Gov. William Livingston, he secured membership in the Society of Sons of the Revolution, being first vice-president and secretary of the Newport Chapter; he is now president.

The business position which Mr. Garrettson soon acquired in Newport made him one of its most influential citizens. Capable, progressive and enterprising in any movement with which he became connected, his Republican friends decided to put him forward as their municipal leader. In October, 1900, he was made the party nominee for mayor, and in the following month defeated Patrick J. Boyle, the Democratic candidate. Mr. Garrettson's election was a signal triumph as a marked personal endorsement, as he was the first Republican mayor that Newport had returned for many a year. He gave the city such a good business-like administration that he was defeated the following year by only a small majority by his former opponent. In commenting at the time on the nomination of Mr. Garrettson one of the local papers said: "In Mr. Garrettson the Republicans have an energetic, progressive citizen—a man who has the best interests of the city at heart, and who has the wisdom and ability to make a mayor to be proud of. There ought to be no question about his election." In 1907 Mr. Garrettson was elected a member of the Representative Council from the Third ward for the three-year term.

Mr. Garrettson is a liberal supporter of Trinity Episcopal Church of Newport, while his wife is a member of the Catholic denomination. He was married Nov. 19, 1884, to Marie Angele Frith, daughter of Edward Frith, of New York City, and they have had one daughter, Emily Binsse Garrettson.

The father of Mrs. Frederick P. Garrettson was an Englishman by birth, a native of Sheffield. He was engaged in the steel business in England, and later came to New York, where he was agent for Sanderson Brothers, of England, being their American representative. Mrs. Garrettson's mother was Emily Victoria Binsse, daughter of Louis Binsse. Louis Binsse married Victoria Bance, who was "lady-in-waiting" to Queen Marie Antoinette. Her family was forced to leave France when Marie Antoinette was beheaded.

The pleasant home of the Garrettsons, which Mr. Garrettson purchased in 1900, is historic ground. It is on Mill street, facing Truro Park and the old stone mill, which was originally owned and occupied by the Carr family, members of which were among the early settlers of Newport. It later became the home of Gov. Benedict Arnold, and still later the residence of the Tillinghast family, a member of which rebuilt the house in 1720.

Mr. Garrettson is capable, energetic and progressive, possessing unusual business acumen. His manner is affable and courteous, his politeness, being inborn, is natural. As a citizen of Newport he has ever been active in public affairs and alive to the interests which have for their object the advancement of the city. He has refined tastes and is a lover and patron of the fine arts and of standard literature, his library being well-stocked with the works of the noted authors, in the reading of which most of his leisure moments are spent.

FREEMAN (Central Falls family). The Freemans of New England have been here since 1630, and of the Cape Cod Freemans, says Rich in his work on Truro, Cape Cod, "Probably no family has been more prominent on the Cape, nor has maintained through so many generations the race characteristics of fine physical proportions and average mental endowments of their old English ancestry." "Edmund Freeman," continues Rich, "is the ancestor of all on Cape Cod of the name."

Samuel Freeman, from Mawlyn, in the County of Kent, England, born, it is said by some, in Devonshire, settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1630, and was one of the principal proprietors, owning one-seventh of the town. He built a house there in 1631, but died in England, leaving sons Henry and Samuel, the former of whom owned the Watertown estate. Henry died in Boston without issue. Samuel Freeman (2), styled Deacon Samuel, son of Samuel, was born in Watertown in 1630, and was of Eastham in 1638. He married Mercy, daughter of Constant Southworth, of Plymouth, whose mother became the wife of Governor Bradford. Constant Freeman, son of Deacon Samuel, born in 1669, was a proprietor of Truro, Mass., and one of his sons, Jonathan, removed to Gorham, Maine, where he became the ancestor of a branch of the Maine Freemans. The male descendants of the Truro branch of Samuel Freeman did not increase and the name has long been extinct there.

Edmund Freeman, referred to in the foregoing, with his wife Elizabeth and their children, Alice, Edmund, John and Elizabeth, came over from England in 1635 in the "Abigail," settling first at Saugus, and then removed to Sandwich, being of the first settlers there. Mr. Freeman was a prominent man, of good business habits, liberal in politics, and tolerant in his religious opinions. He was a member of the Sandwich Church, which had the reputation of being one of the most bigoted and intolerant of the Colony, yet Mr. Freeman is said not to have imbibed the persecuting spirit. He lived to be ninety-two years of age, dying in 1682, in Sandwich, Mass. His wife, Elizabeth, died in 1676, aged seventy-six years. Two of their sons, Major John and Samuel Freeman, married daughters of Governor Prince. Major John Freeman, it is said, was a more distinguished man than his father. He removed to Eastham and in 1650 married Mercy, daughter of Governor Prince, and lived to a venerable old age. One branch of this Cape Cod family, descended from Edmund, removed from Sandwich, Mass., to Mansfield, Conn., early in the seventeenth century; another branch settled later at Dover, N. H., and so on.

There were other early Freemans in New England. Anthony Freeman came in the "Hopewell," in 1635, and of him, says Savage, nothing more is known. And John Freeman, husbandman, came in the "Abigail" and settled at Sudbury, where he was a proprietor in 1639. This article, however, is to deal especially with the Rhode Island branch of one of the Massachusetts families of the name—that at the head of which was the Hon. Edward Livingston Freeman, of Central Falls, R. I. Mr. Freeman was long one of the conspicuous public men of the State, serving in one branch or other of the General Assembly for approximately thirty-one years, and for a time as Speaker of the House, and was also State commissioner of railroads. As a business man he won the reputation of being one of the most capable in the State.

For years the family home of the Central Falls branch of the Freemans was at Mendon, Mass., where the grandparents of Hon. Edward Livingston Freeman, Edward and Sarah (Thayer) Freeman, were born, and from that town went out into the world their son, the late Rev. Edward Freeman, of long years of usefulness in the service of the Master, a minister of prominence and usefulness in the Baptist denomination.

The earlier home of this branch of the family was, perhaps, at Rehoboth, whence came to Attleboro, Mass., David and Jonathan Freeman, who, says Daggett, in his history of that town, were the probable ancestors of all the Attleboro Freemans. The lineage of the Central Falls family is traced to Ralph Freeman, of Attleboro, Mass., and later of Winchester, N. H. From this Ralph Freeman there follows in chronological order the genealogy and history of the Central Falls family.

Ralph Freeman, of Attleboro, Mass., and Winchester, N. H., married Sarah Capron, daughter of Banfield Capron, who was born March 11, 1708.

E. L. Freeman

Their children were: Ebenezer, Benjamin, Nathan, Ralph, Samuel, Dan, Jemima, Sarah, Esther and Sarah (2).

Ralph Freeman (2), son of Ralph and Sarah, married, Jan. 1, 1765, Phebe, daughter of Edward and Margaret Thompson, both of whom were descendants of Banfield Capron. Their children were: Willard, Ottis, Ralph, Ebenezer, Phebe, Edward and Alpheus.

Edward Freeman, son of Ralph and Phebe, born April 19, 1781, married Feb. 4, 1804, Sarah, born April 5, 1784, daughter of Benjamin Thayer. They died, she on Aug. 10, 1824, and he Jan. 30, 1827, and both are buried in Bellingham, Mass. Their children were: Phila T.; Edward, born April 2, 1806; Phila T. (2), born Feb. 12, 1809; and Sarah, born March 31, 1811.

Edward Freeman, son of Edward and Sarah (Thayer) Freeman, born April 2, 1806, in Mendon, Mass., passed his early life in agricultural labor, not entering college until in his twenty-fourth year, when he became a student in Brown University. He was graduated in the class of 1833, being a classmate of the late Gov. Henry B. Anthony and United States Senator Nathan F. Dixon. After this event for several years he was engaged in teaching, first at Bellingham, Mass., and afterward in Waterville, Maine. In 1836 he was ordained and settled as minister of the Baptist Church in Oldtown, Maine, where he remained three years. He was subsequently settled for the same period in Camden, Maine, and for two years at Bristol, R. I. In 1843 he returned to Camden, and there passed the remaining years of his life. Here he purchased a farm of fifty acres, and for many years kept a classical school, which was highly prosperous. He also preached in churches without a minister, and was for a time chaplain to the State Prison of Maine.

In November, 1834, Mr. Freeman married (first) Harriet E. Colburn, of Dedham, Mass., who died in June, 1852. He married (second) in March, 1853, Susan Glover, of Camden, Maine, who died in February, 1867. In 1868 he married (third) Mrs. Kate Blackinton, of Camden, who survived him. Mr. Freeman died Jan. 28, 1882, at Camden, Maine, aged seventy-five years, nine months and twenty-six days. Mrs. Harriet E. (Colburn) Freeman, who was born in 1815, was a liberally educated woman, having graduated with high honors at the Medfield (Mass.) School, and for several years taught both Latin and French. The children of Rev. Edward Freeman were: Edward Livingston, born Sept. 10, 1835; Sarah Capron, March 15, 1838; Ellis Colburn, Feb. 22, 1840; Maria Wood, Sept. 30, 1842; Perrin Polk, Nov. 16, 1845; Wayland Baker, March 22, 1847; Milton Heman, June 19, 1848; Harriet Dillingham, Feb. 11, 1850; Celia, May 4, 1851; Frank Draper, June 9, 1852 (all to the first marriage); Julia Crabtree, Jan. 10, 1854; John Clarendon, Feb. 24, 1856; Phila, June 8, 1857 (of the second marriage).

EDWARD LIVINGSTON FREEMAN, son of Rev. Edward and Harriet Ellis (Colburn) Freeman, born Sept. 10, 1835, in Waterville, Maine, married Nov. 10, 1858, Emma E. Brown, daughter of Samuel Brown, of Central Falls, R. I., and seven children blessed the union.

Mr. Freeman was partially prepared for college under the direction of his father, but he did not enter, preferring to learn the printer's trade, for which he exhibited great liking. In the spring of 1850, in his fifteenth year, he was apprenticed to Mr. A. W. Pearce, of Pawtucket, for the purpose just cited and under that gentleman acquired a thorough knowledge of the trade. Following his term of apprenticeship he entered the employ of Hammond, Angell & Co., Providence (the old Providence Journal job office) and remained with them several years, holding a partnership in the firm during the last two years of his connection; during the period he was an employee of this company he worked for a time in Washington, D. C., and was present at the inauguration of President Buchanan. Disposing of his interest in the Providence concern in 1863, he opened a printing office in a small room in the large three-story brick building at Central Falls, R. I., which subsequently became his property, his staff consisting of three men and one boy, and from this modest beginning Mr. Freeman developed one of the largest printing and publishing establishments in Rhode Island.

As his sons—William C. and Joseph W. Freeman—grew up they were trained in the business under the direction of Mr. Freeman, and in 1885 and 1896, respectively, were admitted to a partnership, the style of the firm becoming E. L. Freeman & Sons. These younger men gave to the business new vim and vigor and have been important factors in its growth. The printing and binding establishment of the firm has been maintained from the start at Central Falls, and in 1880 they purchased the book and stationery concern in Providence of Valpey, Angell & Co. In 1888 a large stationery store was opened at Pawtucket. Since 1878 this firm has had contracts for the State printing, and employment is given to about seventy-five hands in Central Falls, and fifteen in the stores.

In 1869 Mr. Freeman began the publication of the Weekly Visitor, a journal that contributed greatly to the growth and development of Central Falls and vicinity. This paper he conducted most successfully for twenty-one years, disposing of it in 1890. It should have been stated above that from 1873 to 1885 Mr. John E. Goldsworthy was a member of the firm, during which time the business was conducted under the firm name of E. L. Freeman & Co., and it was on the retirement of Mr. Goldsworthy that Mr. Freeman's oldest son came into the concern. For several years the younger son of the elder Freeman was the manager of the printing department, and now has full charge of the whole business, Mr. E. L. Freeman having practically retired from active participation in the business, though retaining his interest up to his death.

Mr. Freeman's early established reputation for activity, persistence, business ability and integrity resulted in his holding many positions of financial trust and responsibility, and his interest in public affairs led to his being called to an uninterrupted period of service in public office for many years. His political affiliations were with the Republican party, and he was chairman of the Rhode Island delegation to the Republican National Convention in June, 1896; he was also a delegate to the National Convention at which President Grant was nominated for his second term, and to the one which nominated Rutherford B. Hayes. His public record was a distinguished one. Early developing a remarkable capacity for the clear and comprehensive understanding of public business, and being a man of progressive and advanced thought, his strong personality and forcefulness left its impress upon the legislation of the State. For nearly twenty years he was one of the board of fire wards of Central Falls, and there he also served as school trustee. He was a representative of the old town of Smithfield in the General Assembly, 1868-70; Senator from that town, 1870-71; the first Senator from the new town of Lincoln, 1871-72; representative from Lincoln, 1874-77, 1879-89, and was Speaker of the House of Representatives from May, 1874, to 1876. Upon retiring from that office he was presented, by the members of the House, a magnificent gold watch, a testimonial which has been rare indeed in the legislative history of the State. He was again chosen senator from Lincoln in 1892, and was re-elected from that town and the city of Central Falls until 1902, and during all that time resided in the same house, the setting off of Central Falls as a city, in 1895, making him a resident of the latter. He was elected president of the Senate several times, which was the first time in the history of the State, and upon his retirement from that body, in 1902, the Senate presented him highly appreciative resolutions and a silver-mounted gavel. During his long service his keen insight and capabilities in the practical business of the legislation of the State gave him a place on important committees, among them that of chairman for ten years of the Judiciary committee of the Senate, a position rarely held except by a member of the legal profession, and for several years chairman of the Finance committee of the House. Mr. Freeman won the reputation of being among the best business men and most capable public men of Rhode Island—the peer, perhaps, of any one of his day. He was clear-headed, of quick perception and of positive character, and as well a versatile and fluent speaker. From May, 1889, to February, 1907, Mr. Freeman held the office of State Commissioner of Railroads, having been first appointed to that office by Gov. Royal C. Taft.

In his earlier life Mr. Freeman found time to give some attention to military affairs, and was for many years identified with the State militia as a member of the Union Guards of Central Falls, rising from the ranks to the colonelcy. In 1855 he united with the Central Falls Congregational Church, and for twenty years served as superintendent of the Sunday-school of that church. He was active and prominent in many social and fraternal organizations, being especially prominent as a Mason. In Masonry he held the office of grand master of Masons in Rhode Island; grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Rhode Island; and grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island; he had also taken the cryptic degrees and those of the A. and A. Scottish Rite. He was president of the Masonic Temple Company, of Pawtucket, from its organization. Among other fraternal organizations Mr. Freeman belonged to the I. O. O. F.; the I. O. R. M., in which he was past grand sachein; and to the K. of P., in which he was an honorary past chancellor commander.

Mr. Freeman was interested in a number of financial institutions and business corporations, being a director for a number of years of the First National Bank of Pawtucket, until that bank was merged with the Industrial Trust Company of Providence, after which time he was a member of the board of managers of the Pawtucket branch of the latter institution; he was a director of the Pawtucket Hair Cloth Company and the American Hair Cloth Company; and director and president of several other companies. He was one of the original members of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, and had been its president. He was one of the three trustees under the will of the late Stephen L. Adams, who bequeathed to the city of Central Falls the sum of $35,000 for the purpose of building and maintaining a public library.

Mr. Freeman died of pneumonia Feb. 24, 1907, after an illness of less than a week, in his seventy-second year. His wife, Emma E. Freeman, was attacked with the same disease the day after his death and she lingered until April 10th, when she too passed away, aged seventy years. She was a woman of quiet tastes and sterling virtues and her companionship and help for forty-eight years were undeniably great factors in the success of her husband in his business and political career.

Editorially the Providence Tribune of Feb. 25th said of Mr. Freeman: "The death of the Honorable Edward L. Freeman, after a worthy life marked by uncompromising personal integrity and filled with modest good works, is hardly less a loss to Rhode Island because with the accumulating years his activities have of late necessarily been somewhat decreased. In public life he filled many offices with assiduous fidelity; in business he exemplified the old-fashioned virtues of honesty, perseverance and thrift; in social life he was a genial companion and a loyal friend, and in the more intimate relations of the family he amply deserved the love that was his. Thus to have discharged all duties entitles a man to a 'well done' here that the believer confidently feels will be also bestowed elsewhere."

Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Freeman but three are now living: (1) William Capron (died July 26, 1904) is mentioned below. (2) Helen R. died in infancy. (3) Joseph W. is mentioned below. (4) Emma R. married John A. Moore, of Richmond, Va., and both are now deceased, he dying March 28, 1902, and she July 22, 1903. They left two children, Edward Freeman and Jeannette, who now make their home with their aunt, Miss Lucy J. Freeman. (5) Edward, born April 14, 1867, was formerly a minister of the M. E. Church, but is now a lawyer practicing at Marlboro, Mass., having been admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. He married Ida Louise Prince, and they have one daughter, Dorothy. (6) Mabel C., born Dec. 20, 1868, died March 11, 1876. (7) Lucy J., the youngest, is a graduate of Wellesley College and of the Woman's College of Brown University. She has spent several years in Europe studying, and takes a deep interest in art; she is the author of "Italian Sculpture of the Renaissance, and is editor of the "Key Books," a series which deals with painting, sculpture and kindred subjects.

WILLIAM CAPRON FREEMAN, son of Edward L. and Emma E. (Brown) Freeman, born Aug. 11, 1859, in Central Falls, R. I., married Aug. 27, 1888, Grace Maud Cleveland, of Indianapolis, Ind., daughter of Samuel T. and Malinda M. (Tolman) Cleveland.

Mr. Freeman received his education in the public schools of his native place, then further pursued his studies in the noted English and Classical School of Mowry & Goff at Providence. From this latter institution he entered the book and stationery business of his father in Providence, and in time became manager of the store, and in 1885 a member of the firm. In the year named he succeeded in the firm Mr. John E. Goldsworthy, who had been a partner in the business with his father from 1873. On his entrance into the firm it became E. L. Freeman & Son. Mr. Freeman continued in charge of the Providence store until 1888, in which year the concern founded at Central Falls the business of the Artogravure Company, which operated a plant for gelatine printing; and from that time on until 1893 Mr. Freeman gave his chief attention to the new business, still retaining, however, an oversight of the stationery stores at Providence and Pawtucket, a store having been subsequently opened in the latter city.

In 1893 the Artogravure Company was consolidated with the Art Publishing Company, of Gardiner, Mass., and Charles Taber & Sons, of New Bedford, Mass., under the name of the Taber Art Company, and all the plants were moved to New Bedford, and of the new company Mr. Freeman was chosen president, a relation which he sustained with that company until 1898, when the company was consolidated with the L. Prang Company, and the business then became known as the Taber-Prang Art Company, and was removed to Springfield, Mass., after which time Mr. Freeman remained with the company as one of the directors. He then, in 1898, became manager of the Providence stores of E. L. Freeman & Sons, remaining in that capacity until his death, in 1904.

The work of the Artogravure Company was the reproduction of masterpieces of painting and sculpture, photographs of buildings and scenes of interest, some being executed in black and others beautifully tinted, and all were finely finished, artistic in conception and treatment. The business of the original plant, as had been that of the Taber Art Company, was very successful. In the year following his election to the presidency of the company, Mr. Freeman removed his family to New Bedford, where he resided until 1898. Himself a good salesman, he knew the requirements of the trade and was a judge of salesmen, so that, practical, too, himself, in the mechanical work of the business, he was well fitted for the responsible position intrusted to him. He occasionally made trips in the trade to the larger cities and was kept fully occupied. The company executed work of all descriptions in the line of modern process pictures, including gelatines, photographs, etchings, artotypes, and manufactured picture frames of all styles and varieties, giving employment to from 200 to 400 persons. Besides this business connection Mr. Freeman continued to retain his interest as a partner in the business of E. L. Freeman & Sons until his death.

During the service of the Hon. William P. Sheffield in the United States Senate, filling the unexpired term in that body of the late Hon. Henry B. Anthony, Mr. Freeman held the position of private secretary to the new Senator, and continued the same relation for some two years to the newly elected senator, the Hon. Jonathan Chace.

Mr. Freeman was a member of the Rhode Island Master Printers Association and of all the Masonic bodies of Pawtucket and of the A. and A. Scottish Rite of Rhode Island. He was also a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, and of the To Kalon Club, while a resident of that city. He was a member of the Wamsutta Club, of New Bedford, during his residence in that city.

To Mr. and Mrs. Freeman were born children as follows: William B., born Dec. 8, 1889; May C., Feb. 19, 1891; Harold B., July 20, 1892; Lincoln W., Oct. 8, 1894 (died Aug. 2, 1897); Albert M., June 25, 1897; Maud E., Nov. 1, 1900. Mr. William C. Freeman passed away at his home in Providence July 26, 1904, at the age of forty-five years, survived by his widow and five children. Mrs. Freeman subsequently became the wife of Edwin P. Dawley, engineer of construction with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company.

JOSEPH WOOD FREEMAN, son of Edward L. and Emma E. (Brown) Freeman, born May 9, 1863, in Central Falls, R. I., married June 23, 1886, Elizabeth King Fales, daughter of the late George S. and Frances (Baker) Fales, of Pawtucket. Mr. Fales was an extensive leather manufacturer and leading citizen of Pawtucket, and brother of John R. Fales, of the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, they being sons of the late David G. Fales, of the family of that name, long prominent in the industrial life of that section of the State.

Joseph W. Freeman in early boyhood attended the public schools of Central Falls, and after fourteen years of age furthered his education and prepared for college in the Mowry & Goff English and Classical School at Providence. Entering Brown University, he was graduated therefrom in the class of 1885, with the degree of A. B., later, in 1889, receiving from that institution the degree of A. M. From the time of his graduation until its sale in 1890 Mr. Freeman was the editor of the Central Falls Weekly Visitor, a paper established by his father. Since 1890 he has given his time and energies to the business of the firm of E. L. Freeman & Sons, the history of which is outlined in the sketch of his father in this article, he having had charge of the Central Falls printing office since 1893. He is now president and treasurer of the E. L. Freeman Company, the business having been incorporated in 1906.

Mr. Freeman has been alive to the interests of Central Falls and active in various lines of effort in the city's behalf, both municipal and otherwise. He held several offices in the town of Lincoln before Central Falls was cut off, having been clerk and moderator of the voting district of Central Falls, a member of the Lincoln School committee, and secretary and chairman of the board of sewer commissioners. He was one of the special supervisors at the town election in 1890, at the time the notorious "tissue ballot" frauds were discovered, and it was largely owing to his determined opposition to the count made by the election officials on election day, and his record then made, supported by his testimony before the Supreme court later, that the fraud was detected, the usurpers ousted, and the election given to the successful persons. In 1900 Mr. Freeman was elected mayor of Central Falls, and served the city in that capacity for the year 1901, declining a renomination. He was again elected in 1906 and served during the following year. In 1900 he was also elected a member of the school committee, in which capacity he served until 1907, and from 1901 was chairman. He served the State as deputy railroad commissioner from May, 1899, to February, 1907. Mr. Freeman was librarian of the Free Public Library of Central Falls from its establishment in 1882 until 1899, since which time he has served as member of its board of trustees. To its development and management he has given special attention, the result of which is that the library has been advanced from a modest collection of 900 volumes to one of the largest and best in Rhode Island, the equipment of books frequently being favorably commented upon. Mr. Freeman is one of the three trustees under the will of the late Stephen L. Adams, who bequeathed $35,000 for the purpose of building and maintaining a public library in Central Falls.

Mr. Freeman, like his father before him, has been active and greatly interested in Masonry and is prominent in that fraternity. In 1893 he was made worshipful master of Union Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., of Pawtucket. He is also a member of Pawtucket Royal Arch Chapter, No. 4; Pawtucket Council, No. 2, Royal and Select Masters; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No 8, K. T.; Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine; and the Scottish Rite bodies. He served as master of the Rhode Island Chapter of Rose Croix for three years. In September, 1907, he was made a thirty-third degree Mason at the ninety-sixth annual meeting of the Supreme Council of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction held at Boston. In May, 1905, he was elected grand master of Masons of Rhode Island, having during most of the previous year acted in the same capacity, because of the death of the grand master. He belongs to various societies, among them the Central Falls Veteran Firemen's Association, the Lincoln Republican Association, the To Kalon Club of Pawtucket, the Rhode Island Historical Society, and the Rhode Island Master Printers Association, of which latter body he has served as president. Mr. Freeman is a director of the Industrial Trust Company, Pawtucket Branch, and is president of the Eastern Advertising Company of Pawtucket.

Mr. Freeman has devoted a portion of his time to research, has prepared a number of historical papers and is the compiler of many catalogues and reports.

Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Freeman: (1) David Lincoln, born June 8, 1887, died Jan. 30, 1905. (2) Edward Livingston, born July 10, 1891. (3) Elizabeth King Fales, born Oct. 28, 1893. (4) Frances Louise, born July 2, 1895. (5) Joseph Wood, born March 24, 1899, died in his second year. (6) Richard Fales, born June 14, 1901. (7) Joseph Wood, Jr., born Dec. 28, 1906.

Mr. Freeman is a regular attendant at St. George's Episcopal Church of Central Falls, of which his wife is a communicant, and to which they give liberal support.

BROWN (Bristol family). The Browns of that part of Rhode Island and Massachusetts on either side of the line now separating the two States have been a continuous family in this region since its first settlement. One John Brown became acquainted with the Pilgrims at Leyden, Holland, prior to 1620. He came to this country prior to 1634, and he was made a freeman that year. He was a man of large intelligence, great energy of character and deep and earnest piety. He was elected assistant each year for seventeen years beginning with 1636. He was a grand pioneer in the settlement of the towns on the west of old Plymouth. He lived in Plymouth, Duxbury and Swansea or Rehoboth, he being one of the purchasers of the latter town in 1643. He removed thither prior to June, 1645. In the latter year he became sole proprietor of lands which originally included a portion of the present towns of Rehoboth, Swansea, Barrington, Seekonk and East Providence. On the consolidation of the several Colonies for their welfare and defense in 1643 Mr. Brown represented Plymouth Colony for twelve years, as commissioner to the meetings of the confederacy. Mr. Brown probably brought with him from England his wife Dorothy, and their children James, Mary and John. Of these James removed to Rehoboth with his father and John followed in 1647.

Joseph W. Freeman

Mr. J. P. Brown

The Brown family record of Rehoboth, Mass., according to Arnold, begins with the family of John Brown, whose children were: John, born in September, 1650; Lydia, born Aug. 5 or 6, 1656; Amah, born Jan. 29, 1657; Joseph, April 9, 1658; and Nathaniel, born Jan. 9, 1661.

From this family has descended the present Brown family of Bristol, the head of which is Walter DeForest Brown, secretary and treasurer of the National India Rubber Company of that point, and one of the successful and representative men of his community.

From (I) John Brown, of Rehoboth record, Mr. Brown's lineage is through Joseph, Jabez, Nicholas, Nicholas (2), Eleazer, Eleazer A. and Arnold DeForest. These generations in detail, so far as found, follow.

(II) Joseph Brown, born April 9, 1658, married Nov. 10, 1680, Hannah Fitch.

(III) Jabez Brown was born Dec. 30, 1683.

(IV) Nicholas Brown married in Smithfield, R. I., April 22, 1744; Hope Whipple, born April 28, 1723, daughter of William and Elizabeth Whipple.

(V) Nicholas Brown (2) married, June 3, 1770, Susanna, daughter of Amos Arnold, of Cumberland, Rhode Island.

(VI) Eleazer Brown, son of Nicholas and Susanna (Arnold) Brown, born Oct. 13, 1773, married Betsey Cole, daughter of John Cole. Two of their children are of Cumberland (R. I.), town record: Susanna, born Dec. 12, 1793; and Abigail, born Aug. 1, 1796. A son, Eleazer A., was born Sept. 13, 1800.

(VII) Eleazer A. Brown, son of Eleazer and Betsey (Cole) Brown, born Sept. 13, 1800, married Oct. 7, 1827, Charlotte W., born March 15, 1808, daughter of Sylvanus and Charlotte (Wright) Peck, of Rehoboth, Mass., and they lived in that town. Their children in part are of town record there. Those of whom there is public record found were: Charlotte W., who died March 12, 1856, in her twenty-fourth year; Arnold DeForest, born in 1838; Edward Payson, born in 1840; James P., born Nov. 4, 1844, who died Aug. 23, 1865, at Donaldsonville, La., aged twenty years; John C., born Aug. 23, 1846, who died in his second year; George C., born Aug. 28, 1848; and Walter P., born Dec. 8, 1850. The father of these died May 30, 1889, aged eighty-eight years, eight months, seventeen days, and the mother passed away April 11, 1888, aged eighty years, in Rehoboth, Mass., where a record of their deaths appear.

(VIII) Arnold DeForest Brown, born in 1838 in Woodstock, Conn., married July 12, 1860, when "twenty-two years of age," Amanda M. Horton, daughter of Tamerline W. Horton, of Rehoboth, Mass. Mr. Brown died Dec. 26, 1874, in Providence, R. I., aged thirty-six years. He had two children: Walter DeForest and Cora, the latter of whom died in infancy. Mr. Brown served in the Civil war as second lieutenant in the 2d Rhode Island Cavalry. He was a machinist and followed that trade during his life.

(IX) WALTER DEFOREST BROWN was born Nov. 6, 1861, in the town of Rehoboth, Mass., and acquired his education in the district schools of Rehoboth, at the State street intermediate school at Providence, R. I., and the Benefit street grammar school, and for two years attended the Rogers high school of Newport. He then took a course in the commercial school of Bryant & Stratton, in Providence, and at the age of nineteen, having finished his schooling, he became entry clerk in the wholesale grocery house of Bugbee & Brownell, where he remained for about four and a half years. He then was employed in the wholesale grain house of Messrs. Day, Sons & Co., on Dyer street, where he remained about four and a half years. In 1889 he became bookkeeper with the National India Rubber Company upon its re-organization, and continued in such position until, in 1894, he was elected secretary, which latter position he has held to the present time. In June, 1905, he was elected treasurer of the company and now holds the double position of secretary and treasurer. The National India Rubber Company employs about nineteen hundred people and does a large and extensive business. Mr. Brown has been with the company since its re-organization with the exception of the first year.

Mr. Brown was married, in 1883, to Martha T., daughter of Edward D. Jones, Jr., of Newport. One daughter, Viola T., was born to them Aug. 27, 1888.

In fraternal circles Mr. Brown is a member of Capital Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Providence, and has passed through all the chairs. He is a member of the New England Order of Protection the A.

O. U. W.; the M. W. A.; and the Workmen's Benefit Association. He is also a member of the Washington Park M. E. Church of Providence.

Mr. Brown's success in life is largely due to his constant and careful attention to whatever is entrusted to him to do and the most indefatigable labor. He is a genial, approachable gentleman, and one greatly esteemed by all who know him.

KAULL. The Kaull family is of record in Rhode Island as early as the Revolutionary period, while for perhaps a century the name has been identified with Newport and that vicinity, where William Kaull settled. For several generations his descendants have been among the city's substantial men and women, and they are allied by marriage to some of the oldest and most honored families of Newport county, including the Barker, Anthony, Burdick and Gifford families.

At some time prior to the Revolution one John Kaull, born in Germany about 1750, found his way to the Colonies, and when the struggle for independence came espoused the Patriot cause. He fought under Rochambeau and later received a pension for his services. He died in the town of Bristol, R. I., March 31, 1839, aged eighty-nine years. One of his sons, Hiram, died in Newport Oct. 28, 1824, at the age of nineteen. Another of the name, a William Kaull, Jr., is recorded as serving as ensign and then lieutenant in a Newport company of the State militia from 1836 to 1839, inclusive.

William Kaull was born on Newport Island, and died in the city of Newport. A man of rugged constitution and great strength, he followed the calling of a blacksmith and continued to work at it till greatly advanced in years. Originally established in Middletown, he later moved his shop to Newport, where the rest of his life was spent. In character he was industrious and thrifty, with quiet and unassuming demeanor, and his life was one consistent with the professions of a member of the First Baptist Church. On May 26, 1815, he married Betsey (or Elizabeth) Cox, of Newport, and they had several children, among them George C., William, Jr., and Thomas F.

Thomas F. Kaull was born in November, 1825, and while still very young learned the blacksmith's trade with his father. He worked at this trade for a few years and then turned his attention instead toward floriculture. When he had made himself familiar with the latter business he opened a florist's establishment on Howard street, and was engaged there till his death, meeting with very flattering results from his labors. His demise occurred in June, 1875, at the comparatively early age of fifty years. While not a member of any denomination, he was a regular attendant upon the Thames Street Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics a Republican, he took no share in party work save casting his vote.

Mr. Kaull was married to Miss Susan C. Burdick, daughter of the late Clark Burdick, of Newport. Mrs. Kaull passed away at her home in November, 1887, the mother of eleven children. Only four of these survive, Thomas F., Harry C., Grace G. and Elizabeth, the last named residing in Newport, unmarried. Harry C. is a gardener by profession; he married Miss Nancy Littlefield, of New Shoreham, R. I., and they have one daughter, Marjorie Burdick Kaull. Grace G. is the wife of Samuel P. Gladding, a wood-turner of Newport, by whom she has had one daughter, Bessie Gladding.

THOMAS FREDERICK KAULL was the oldest child of his parents, the date of his birth being June 4, 1853. He was sent first to the grammar schools in Newport, then entered the King high school, and remained a student there till he was fifteen years old, at which age he began work. He then became employed as a clerk by his uncle, ex-Mayor J. Truman Burdick, who was then the proprietor of a meat and provision store, and continued in that capacity for sixteen years. In 1884 Mr. Burdick's interest was purchased by Mr. Kaull and his brother-in-law, Charles G. Anthony, and the resulting firm of Kaull & Anthony carried on the business most successfully till Oct. 1, 1905. Mr. Kaull then bought out Mr. Anthony and is now the sole owner. They had removed in 1902 to Nos. 391-393 Thames street, as the increasing business demanded larger quarters, and Mr. Kaull remains at that location. The building is one with many associations, as it was at one time the home of Captain Taylor, who was under the command of Commodore Perry at the Battle of Lake Erie. The house descended to a son, Rear-Admiral Taylor, and still later became the home of the late Hon. William Gilpin.

On Nov. 24, 1875, Mr. Kaull was joined in matrimony to Miss Eliza A. Anthony, daughter of the late Benjamin M. Anthony, of Newport. Mrs. Kaull is very active in benevolent and charitable organizations, and is also a leading worker in William Ellery Chapter, D. A. R., of Newport. Mr. Kaull is eligible, through the maternal line, to membership in the Society of Sons of the Revolution. Fraternally he belongs to St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., and to Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of Newport. He has always been specially active in Christian work and for several years he was a director of the Young Men's Christian Association of Newport. During the more than thirty years his name was enrolled in the membership of the Thames Street Methodist Episcopal Church of Newport, he was indefatigable in his work there. He served as recording steward for over thirteen years, was Sunday-school superintendent for fifteen years, and on four different occasions was a delegate to the Lay Electoral Conference, which convenes every four years. Upon two occasions, also, he was elected alternate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1905 Mr. Kaull became affiliated with the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Newport, in which he holds several prominent positions. He has never mingled in politics, as his business took his whole time, but he supports the Republican party, and in 1907, under the new charter of the city, he was elected a member of the representative council from the Second ward, for a term of three years. He holds a high place in both business and social circles, with the confidence of the whole community, for his reputation is that of a careful and thoroughly upright business man, at the same time conservative and progressive.

THOMAS CROSBY. In the death of the late Thomas Crosby, who passed away in Newport, Aug. 1, 1905, after a lingering illness of several months, that city lost one of its substantial and successful business men. He belonged to the well known Crosby family of Rhode Island, a history of which appears elsewhere in these volumes.

Mr. Crosby was born in Newport March 9, 1829, the eldest son of the late John Hookey and Virtue C. (Hubbard) Crosby, of that city. He attended the public schools of his birthplace until he was eighteen years of age, and then embarked for himself in a business venture that was destined to grow to large proportions and to engross his attention until his retirement from active life. This enterprise was the renting of bathing-houses on Easton's beach. At first they were portable ones, which he built himself, and so popular did they prove that in a year he needed a partner in order to manage the business. He and William Tew formed the firm of Crosby & Tew, which continued for several years, when Mr. Tew withdrew. From that time until he had a son old enough to assist him Mr. Crosby carried on the business alone. After a time he discarded the portable bathhouses and installed stationary ones instead. There were also in connection with these a pavilion and a restaurant conducted for some years by Mr. Crosby's brother, Albert G. After the son was taken into partnership the firm name was Thomas Crosby & Son, and they carried the business on very successfully until a few years prior to Thomas Crosby's death, when both father and son retired. From 1898 until his death Mr. Crosby served as a director of the Union National Bank of Newport. He also served as a commissioner of the Newport Asylum for several years.

On Jan. 21, 1861, Thomas Crosby was united in marriage to Martha E. Winslow, daughter of Eben and Jane Holt (Vickery) Winslow, of Newport, who throughout the more than forty years of their married life proved herself a true helpmate. She survives her husband and still makes her home in Newport. Three children were born to them, namely: William A., unmarried, who was his father's partner; Martha E., who lived only nine years; and Thomas, also unmarried, a graduate of Brown University, and now assistant professor of English in that university.

The late Thomas Crosby was a man of modest and retiring disposition, domestic in his habits and devoted to his family, but quiet though he was, among his intimate friends he displayed a geniality and a gift for social intercourse which greatly endeared him to all who really knew him. He naturally cared nothing for public life, although he was always a loyal supporter of the Democratic party. In religious matters he was connected with Zion's Episcopal Church. Fraternally he had been, since 1871, a member of Rhode Island Lodge, No. 12, I. O. O. F., and was at one time a member of the board of trustees of that organization. He also belonged to Aquidneck Encampment, No. 5, I. O. O. F., and to Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum.

Mr. Crosby represented the best type of American citizen, for while he was eminently successful in business, his was a success never gained by any unfairness or disregard of the rights of others. He left a name which stood for honor, ability of a high order and genuine manliness, and his death was widely lamented.

ALEXANDER JAMES ANDERSON, M. D., one of the leading physicians of Newport, comes of a sturdy and noted line of Scotch ancestry, several members of which have been eminent divines, physicians and surgeons. Alexander Anderson, grandfather of our subject, was staff surgeon in the Royal Navy, and received his degree of M. D. at the University of Edinburgh.

Dr. David Hawley Burn-Anderson, son of Alexander, was born Aug. 21, 1844, in Edinburgh, Scotland. He studied medicine at the University and Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, and at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. He later went to India, where he served as surgeon of the Twenty-first Regiment, Royal Scots Fusiliers, with the title of Regimental Surgeon. Dr. Anderson held the degree of M. D. and C. M., of the University of Edinburgh; M. R. C. S., of England; and L. S. A., of London. The Doctor died in 1887, at Porto Bello, near Edinburgh, Scotland. He married Clara Carpenter, of Hereford, Herefordshire, England, who is still residing at Porto Bello. To this union were born eight children, of whom Alexander James is the eldest.

Alexander James Anderson, M. D., was born Jan. 2, 1869, at St. Thomas' Mount, near Madras, India, where his father was serving as a member of the Medical Department of the British army. After attending the Royal High school of Edinburgh, where the present King Edward VII was a pupil in boyhood, Dr. Anderson, in 1886, entered the University of Edinburgh, from which noted institution of learning he was graduated in 1891, with the degrees of M. B. and C. M. He then attended the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, after which he took up the private practice of his profession at Pembroke, South Wales, where he continued for four years, during which time he was surgeon to the infirmary, and consulting physician to the Pembrokeshire and Haverfordwest Infirmary. Dr. Anderson was also surgeon-lieutenant in the Third Volunteer Battalion of the Welsh Regiment. During his stay in South Wales Dr. Anderson enjoyed a large practice in the army and navy, and among nobility and gentry around. He next established himself in the practice of his profession at Ashford, Middlesex, England, and there received the government appointments of medical officer to the Staines Union Infirmary, also parochial medical officer of Ashford District, and medical officer to St. Joseph's Inebriate Home. Dr. Anderson remained in practice at Ashford for about four years, following which he took up post-graduate work in London for some time.

In January, 1902, Dr. Anderson came to America, and took a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins Hospital and Medical School at Baltimore, Md. After spending several months in traveling in the United States, the Doctor in January, 1903, passed the Rhode Island State Board of Health examination, and opened an office for the practice of his profession in Newport, where he has since continued.

Dr. Anderson is a member of the Newport Medical Society, the Rhode Island State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. The Doctor is a member and has been vice-president of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis of Newport; is the president of St. Andrew's Society, and honorary physician of the same. He is a visiting physician and surgeon of the Newport Hospital. The Doctor is a member of the Natural History Society of Newport, and takes a great interest in all matters pertaining to natural history. He is also a member of the Newport Horticultural Society. As a Mason he is affiliated with St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; and Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M. He belongs to the Newport Reading Room. The Doctor and his wife are members of Trinity Episcopal Church, of Newport.

On June 9, 1896, Dr. Anderson was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Tiffany, in St. Mary Abbott's Church, Kensington, London, England. Mrs. Anderson is a daughter of Lyman Tiffany, of Washington, D. C., and a descendant of one of America's oldest and most prominent families, being of the tenth generation of the Tiffany family born on the Tiffany estate, "Fox Hurst," Westchester, N. Y., which has been in the possession of the family since 1636. To Dr. and Mrs. Anderson have been born two children, namely: Lillian Alexandra, born April 10, 1900, and David Alexander Burn-Anderson, born May 17, 1905.

DANIEL LUTHER WILLMARTH, who has been engaged as a contractor and builder in Pawtucket for over thirty years, is a native of Seekonk, Mass., born Oct. 5, 1849, and belongs to a family long settled in that locality.

(I) John Wilmot or Wilmarth appears in Rehoboth, Mass., where Feb. 6, 1671, he was married to Ruth Kendrick, and their children of Rehoboth town record (according to Arnold) were: Ruth, born Oct. 5, 1673; Mehetabel, June 19, 1675; Nathaniel, Dec. 29, 1677; Dorothy, Aug. 26, 1680; Sarah, Dec. 21, 1682; John, Dec. 11, 1685; Mercy, May 2, 1689; Noah, May 5, 1691; and Timothy, Nov. 4, 1692. The mother of these died Feb. 19, 1706, and the father probably in 1719.

(II) Nathaniel Willmarth, born Dec. 29, 1677, married (first) March 27, 1704, Joanna Luther, of Swansea, Mass. She died May 31, 1706, and he married (second) June 29th of that year Mary Perry, of Scituate, Mass. One child, Joanna, born May 24, 1705, came to the first marriage, and the following children to the second union: Ruth, born Oct. 12, 1707; Daniel, Nov. 5, 1709; Mehetabel, Sept. 16, 1711; Nathaniel, Feb. 23, 1713-14; Elizabeth, in January, 1715-16; Thomas, Nov. 13, 1717; Mary, Jan. 2, 1718-19; and Keziah, Jan. 5, 1721-22.

(III) Daniel Willmarth, born Nov. 5, 1709, married April 18, 1733, Bethiah Beverly, and their children of Rehoboth town record (according to Arnold) were: Nathaniel, born June 8, 1734; David, Nov. 15, 1735; Mary, July 15, 1738; and Daniel, Oct. 21, 1750.

(IV) Daniel Willmarth (2), born Oct. 21, 1750, married Susannah, and their children of Rehoboth town record (according to Arnold) were: Lucy, born Jan. 27, 1772; John, Nov. 22, 1773; Nancy, Jan. 25, 1776; Sally, April 15, 1778; Rebekah, July 17, 1780; Polly, May 20, 1783; Cyrus Wilson, April 12, 1785; Joseph, Oct. 31, 1786; Samuel Nelson, March 21, 1789; Olive, Aug. 20, 1791; Daniel Luther, Oct. 5, 1793; and George Wilson, June 5, 1799.

(V) John Willmarth, born Nov. 22, 1773, married Feb. 14, 1802, perhaps in Seekonk, Mass., where he likely lived, Rachel, born May 7, 1780, daughter of Ebenezer Fuller. Their children, same of record in both Rehoboth and Seekonk, were: Willson Willard, born Feb. 15, 1803; Pascal Ellery, Jan. 30, 1805; John, March 8, 1807; Abigail Fuller, Feb. 18, 1809; John Fristram (or Tristram), May 4, 1811; Rachel Emeline, Nov. 19, 1813; and Olive Fuller, June 13, 1817.

(VI) Pascal Ellery Willmarth, born in Seekonk, Mass., Jan. 30, 1805, married Abby Maria Day; and their children of Seekonk town record were: Pascal Ellery, born Aug. 11, 1839; and Augustus Day, born Aug. 30, 1841. Mr. Willmarth married Dec. 20, 1846, for his second wife, Mary E. Webster, who was born Dec. 5, 1827, in Freetown or

Daniel L. Willmarth

Taunton, Mass., and died in Seekonk Aug. 7, 1894. The children of this union were as follows: Daniel W., who died in early childhood; Daniel Luther, who is mentioned below; John W., born Dec. 8, 1850, who is a contractor and builder in Pawtucket; Nicholas, born Sept. 15, 1855, who is a carpenter in Providence; Mary A., born Nov. 1, 1857, who married Frank Luther, of Attleboro, Mass., where he is engaged in farming; and Abby M. D., born June 16, 1861, who married a Mr. Almy, of Seekonk, Mass. The father of this family died March 26, 1864, in Seekonk. He was engaged all his life at teaming and farming, and was a man of rugged health and constitution, and worked hard to gain a livelihood for himself and family.

(VII) Daniel Luther Willmarth was obliged to help in the hard work of the home farm from such an early age that his opportunities for obtaining even the rudiments of learning were limited. He received what education he acquired in the district schools of Seekonk, and remained in that vicinity until he reached young manhood, in 1868 coming to Pawtucket, where he has since resided. Entering upon a three years' apprenticeship with Slade & Perry, to learn the trade of carpenter, he served his time and then worked for Henry A. Smith two or three years, after which he was second hand for a year in the construction of the "Narragansett Hotel," at Providence. In 1873 he started in business on his own account as a contractor and builder, and by his perseverance, energy and honorable dealing he has built up a large and profitable patronage. Among the numerous structures which he has put up are the Union Wadding Company's office building; the branch of the Industrial Trust Company at Pawtucket; the Cole block; the residences of Samuel M. Conant, George W. Kent, H. O. Phillips, Mrs. Sarah Durfee, Mrs. Smith Grant, and many others. The character of the work upon which he has been engaged speaks well for Mr. Willmarth's standing in his calling, and his buildings are their own recommendation, for he is the kind of workman who does a thing with zest, taking pride in the products of his mind and hands and pleasure in a task well done. He is a well-known member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association.

Mr. Willmarth has been active in municipal affairs for a number of years, having served as a member of the common council and of the aldermanic board, and for one year as inspector of public buildings in his city. He was appointed to the last named position by Mayor James Brown, and proved eminently satisfactory, displaying proper interest in the public welfare and a thorough understanding of the requirements of the office. He was first chosen a member of the common council in 1895 and was re-elected to that body in 1896 and in 1897, the last time on the Independent ticket, though he is a staunch Republican in his views. Later he served one year on the board of aldermen. Mr. Willmarth attends the Park Place Congregational Church of Pawtucket.

On May 18, 1874, Mr. Willmarth was united in marriage with Miss Alice Hawes Smith, born July 19, 1853, daughter of Orin and Sally Hutchinson (Williams) Smith, of Lincoln, R. I. [See sketch elsewhere of Orin Smith.] They have had one son, Daniel Luther, born in Pawtucket, April 27, 1892, who is now a student at the Moses Brown school in Providence.

Mr. Willmarth is painstaking and precise in all his undertakings, and as a builder he has few equals and no superiors in that section.

COGGESHALL. The early Coggeshalls of Rhode Island were among the more wealthy and prominent families of the Providence Plantations. John Coggeshall, the progenitor of the family, was born in 1599 in the County of Essex, England. The family there was of Norman origin and possessed of large estates in Essex and Suffolk, including the Manor of Little Coggeshall and Codham Hall, Wethersfield, in the vicinity of Coggeshall-on-the-Blackwater. The oldest families followed the usages of the Normans, writing the name with the preposition, as Thomas de Coggeshall, who was the owner of these vast estates in the reign of King Stephen of Bloss, grandson of the Conqueror, 1135-1154. Five of the family, several of whom were Knights, were sheriffs of Essex, which until 1556 included Herefordshire. Coggeshall Abbey, the most famous of the Cistercian order, was built by King Stephen, 1142, and endowed by his Queen, Matilda of Boulogne, and his son Eustace, with their lands in France.

(I) John Coggeshall, who was a merchant, immigrated to New England in 1632, arriving in Boston on the ship "Lion" and bringing with him his wife Mary and their three children, John, Joshua and Ann. He and his wife soon joined the church at Roxbury, formed that year. He removed to Boston in 1634 and in April became a member of that church, with which his wife also became connected, and he was soon chosen a deacon. He was one of the first board of selectmen of Boston, 1634, was also a deputy that year, and served in the same capacity seven times. He was one of the seventy-five supporters of Anne Hutchinson who were disarmed. He was one of sixteen persons who in 1638 went to Providence and bought from the Narragansetts the Island of Aquidneck, subsequently called Rhode Island. They soon became incorporated in a body politic and began the settlement of Pocasset (Portsmouth). Mr. Coggeshall was one of the leading men of Portsmouth who settled in Newport in 1639. In 1640 Portsmouth and Newport were united and Mr. Coggeshall was chosen one of the assistants. He had been one of the elders in Portsmouth, chosen in 1639. In 1644 the several establishments were united, becoming Providence Plantations, but the organization was not effected till 1647. Mr. Coggeshall became president of Providence Plantations and died in office, Nov. 23, 1647. His widow died Dec. 17, 1684.

(II) Joshua Coggeshall, born in 1623, married (first) Dec. 22, 1652, Joan West, born in 1631. She died in 1676, and he married (second) June 21, 1677, Rebecca Russell. Mr. Coggeshall was of Newport and Portsmouth, R. I. He was a member of the Society of Friends, was deputy much of the time from 1664 to 1672, and was assistant much of the time from 1669 to 1676. He died May 1, 1688. His children, all born to the first marriage, were: Mary, born in 1655; Joshua, 1656; John, 1659; Josiah, 1662; Daniel, 1665; Humility, 1671; Caleb, 1672; and Isaac.

(III) Joshua Coggeshall (2), born in May, 1656, in Portsmouth, R. I., married (first) May 13, 1681, Sarah. She died March 20, 1697, and he married (second) Aug. 26, 1697, Sarah. Mr. Coggeshall was a resident of that part of Newport which became Middletown, and was near Portsmouth. His children were: Joshua; John, born Dec. 14, 1683; Thomas, March 29, 1685; Elizabeth, March 29, 1686; Thomas, June 24, 1688; Josiah, Dec. 12, 1690; Richard, Feb. 11, 1692; Mary, March 15, 1695; Caleb, July 25, 1698; Sarah, March 22, 1700; James, March 17, 1701; a daughter, Jan. 15, 1703; Benjamin, Jan. 31, 1705; Ann, Nov. 18, 1707; Waite, Jan. 11, 1709; Comfort, April 22, 1711; and Benjamin (2), Nov. 15, 1714.

(IV) Thomas Coggeshall, born June 24, 1688, in Newport, R. I., married March 11, 1708, Mercy, born in 1691, daughter of Gideon Freeborn, and they resided in Middletown, R. I., he being engaged in farming. He died Jan. 26, 1771, and she passed away May 26, 1776; both are buried in the Coggeshall burying-ground in Middletown. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Aug. 30, 1710; Comfort, Sept. 17, 1712; Mercy, June 30, 1714; Sarah, Aug. 20, 1715; Wait, Jan. 4, 1717; Mary, March 27, 1720; Joshua, March 11, 1722; Mercy, Feb. 23, 1724; Gideon, April 20, 1726; Thomas, Aug. 26, 1728; and Hannah, May 20, 1731.

(V) Thomas Coggeshall (2) was born Aug. 26, 1728, and died Jan. 17, 1803. He married July 4, 1750, Hannah, daughter of William and Hannah (Thurston) Cornell, of Portsmouth, R. I., who was born Nov. 22, 1730. Their children according to the Middletown records were: John, born May 7, 1751; Josiah, Aug. 13, 1752; and William, Jan. 7, 1757. Two other sons are named in family records.

(VI) Josiah Coggeshall married Oct. 10, 1776, Mary Horswell, and they had a son Freeborn.

(VII) Freeborn Coggeshall was born in Middletown in 1780, and died there Oct. 10, 1827, when only forty-seven years old. He established himself in Newport as a general merchant at No. 162

Thames street, and was very successful in his business, being at the height of prosperity when his untimely death occurred. He was married Oct. 12, 1811, to Elizabeth, daughter of William Dennis and granddaughter of the Capt. William Dennis who commanded twenty-six vessels during the Revolution. Six children were born to them: (1) Ann Dennis, May 21, 1813, married William Alger, of Newport. (2) Mary H., July 17, 1815, married Alexander B. Burdick, of Newport. (3) Freeborn, June 12, 1817, is mentioned further on. (4) Robert D., Nov. 15, 1818, followed the trade of a blacksmith all his life, but was also a great student of geology and attained some reputation in that line. He died in Newport, April 12, 1901, having been three times married, first to Sarah Ann Hunt, (second) to Margaret Peckham and (third) to Nancy Peckham. (5) Emmy Eliza, Nov. 12, 1820, died at the age of thirteen months. (6) Aaron Sheffield was the father of Frederick B. Coggeshall.

(VIII) FREEBORN COGGESHALL (deceased), who was engaged in business at No. 23 South Main street, Providence, for over fifty consecutive years, was born June 12, 1817, son of Freeborn and Elizabeth (Dennis) Coggeshall.

Mr. Coggeshall was educated in Newport, where he attended the private schools of Levi Tower and Mr. Joslin. Upon the establishment of the first public free schools in Newport he became one of the first pupils. He continued in school until about twenty-one years old, thus receiving rather better advantages than were offered to young men who did not take a college training. From the time he was twenty-one until he was twenty-seven, or from 1838 to 1845, he was serving an apprenticeship at his trade with William Brownell, of Newport. Having formed the acquaintance of the Hon. Amos C. Barstow, in 1848, to become a member of the firm of what was afterward known as Coggeshall & Barstow. Mr. Barstow's half-brother being the partner, a friendship sprang up between Mr. Coggeshall and Mr. Barstow which suffered no interruption for nearly a half a century. This partnership continued for four years, being dissolved in 1851. In 1852 Mr. Coggeshall removed across the river to No. 23 North Main street, where he remained ever after. He had probably the oldest business continuous in one place in the city of Providence. He was for the first thirty years engaged in selling stoves and ranges, and after that time sold steam, hot water and hot air furnaces. Throughout his long business career he enjoyed uninterrupted success.

Mr. Coggeshall was a member of the school board for twenty years and took an active part in that branch of the municipal government. Public positions always came to him unsought. He was always a staunch Republican. For twenty-five years he was a member of the vestry of St. Stephen's Church of Providence, and at a meeting of the vestry, held July 22, 1906, the following minute was adopted:

The vestry of St. Stephen's parish, Providence, called together by the death of their long-time colleague and friend, Freeborn Coggeshall, Esq., desire to record their veneration of his character and their appreciation of his services to the parish.

Mr. Coggeshall first entered the vestry in 1855, serving until 1857. In 1879 he again consented to accept an election and had held office continuously since. Devoted to the parish, and loyal to its history and traditions, he had ever been a staunch supporter of the clergy, a valuable adviser, and a distinct element of strength and sympathy in the corporation, vestry and congregation. A sound Catholic-minded churchman, a sterling Christian man of simple, devout and consistent life, he has furnished a wholesome and good example to all his fellow-men. A loving husband and father, a good neighbor, a useful citizen, interested in the highest public concerns, especially education, Mr. Coggeshall has been a light and a help to the community in which he has lived so long and so well.

He has served his generation by the will of God.

His name and memory will be historic in the annals of the parish, and will be always affectionately treasured.

"Grant him, O Lord, eternal rest and may light perpetual shine upon him."

(Signed)

W. H. PHILLIPS,
Parish Clerk.

Living to his eighty-ninth year, and still active in business, Mr. Coggeshall had seen the city of his adoption increase in population from a few thousands to nearly 200,000, and was the contemporary and co-worker with many, now gone, who were most active in the promotion of this growth.

Freeborn Coggeshall married (first) Eliza L. Sherman and (second) Abby Sabin, and his children were: Rev. Freeborn, deceased, and Annie N., born in 1848, who resides at home.

(IX) REV. FREEBORN COGGESHALL, son of Freeborn and Eliza L. (Sherman) Coggeshall, was born Dec. 31, 1845, in Newport, R. I. His parents removed to Providence when he was a child and there he obtained his early education in the public schools and the Providence high school. This he supplemented with a course at Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1867, with high class honors, delivering the valedictory, and being class poet. Following this he entered the General Theological Seminary in New York, and after a three years' course was graduated in 1870. During his course in that institution he spent some time in England and on the Continent. He was ordained a deacon in the Episcopal Church by Bishop Clarke, June 12, 1870, and was admitted to presbyter's orders by Bishop Odenheimer, of New Jersey, Dec. 22, 1871.

After having received deacon's orders, in 1870, Rev. Mr. Coggeshall took charge of a missionary station at Elmwood, Providence, R. I., and after receiving presbyter's orders, in 1871, he was settled as assistant rector in the "House of Prayer," in the city of Newark, N. J. From Newark he went to Boston, Mass., accepting an appointment as one of the assistant rectors of the Church of the Advent. He served this charge until the summer of 1874, when he severed his connection with it to further pursue his theological studies abroad. He became a novice in the order of St. John the Evangelist, and studied at the Mission-House of this order at Cowley, England. While engaged in study in that institution he was also occupied as a mission priest of the society of St. John the Evangelist. He, too, had charge of morning religious services in Oxford and the neighboring villages. He passed two years at Oxford, happily for himself, and with spiritual profit to those to whom he ministered. When nearing the time for his homeward trip he was taken with disease which terminated a young and promising life, his death occurring Oct. 6, 1876.

TILLEY (Line of John Tabour of Newport). The family bearing this name in Newport is one of the oldest of that town, the forerunner settling there one hundred and seventy-five years ago. The late Hon. Benjamin James Tilley, of Newport, a former representative from that town in the General Assembly of the State and a most useful and valuable citizen, was a descendant in the fourth generation from William Tilley, the first American ancestor of this branch of the Tilley family. From this emigrant settler the late Benjamin J. Tilley's descent is through Deacon William, and John Tabour Tilley. These generations in detail and in the order given follow. The widow and only child, a son, Risbrough Hammett Tilley, are residents of Newport, where the latter has for years been active in historical research.

(I) William Tilley, born about 1685 in Devon, England, came to America about 1710 and settled at Boston. He was a son of John Tilley, of Ideford, Devon, England, and with brothers, John and James, came to Boston to work for their uncle, William Tilley, a rope-maker, who had preceded them and resided in Boston, the uncle being a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and of Old South Church at his death in 1717. He removed to Newport, R. I., in 1732, and established himself in the rope-making business. He married Dorcas, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Slocum) Earle, of Portsmouth. He died in Newport about 1755.

(II) Deacon William Tilley, born Oct. 19, 1738, in Newport, R. I., married Oct. 28, 1759, Elizabeth Rogers, of Middletown, R. I., daughter of Jeremiah and Patience Rogers. He, too, was a rope-maker. He owned much land east of Mt. Vernon Street, and on Touro street to the burial ground on Kay street, on which his extensive walks were located. His residence was on Elizabeth street, near the Jewish cemetery. Mrs. Tilley died Aug. 28, 1800, aged fifty-nine years, and he married (second) in January, 1802, Catherine Sabine, of Rehoboth, who died Oct. 15, 1817. He married (third) Nov. 4, 1821, widow Elizabeth Boone, formerly Elizabeth Reed, who died Jan. 3, 1836, aged eighty-six years. Mr. Tilley was a prominent member of the Second Baptist Church in Newport, having held the office of deacon for forty years. Mr. Tilley died April 14, 1825. Of his seventeen children, all born to the first marriage, thirteen lived to mature years. His children were: Mary, William, William (2), Sarah, James, Thomas, Betsey, William (3), Elizabeth, Dorcas, George, Abraham, Patience, John, George (2), Benjamin and Nancy. On the death of the father of this family the Newport Mercury paid him the following tribute:

"If sixty years of a conscientious discharge of religious and moral duties joined to the endearing and affectionate domestic ties of husband, father, son, brother and friend shall claim from our all wise and beneficent Creator, reward and mercy, he now enjoys all the heavenly felicity promised by the Gospel of Christ. His life was a life of piety and usefulness and to the last moments of that life, his faith and confidence was unshaken in Christ, the son of God. He left a numerous progeny as well as numerous friends to mourn his departure, ten children, seventy-nine grandchildren and forty-four great-grandchildren."

(III) John Tabour Tilley, born April 5, 1778, in Newport, married April (or August) 20, 1800, Margaret, born March 23, 1780, daughter of John and Sarah (Boutin) Nicoll, great-granddaughter of Speaker William Nicoll, son of Mathias Nicoll, third mayor of New York. Mr. Tilley died Aug. 22 (or 23), 1828, and Mrs. Tilley passed away Oct. 1, 1864. Mr. Tilley followed the occupation of his forefathers, that of a rope-maker. Their children were: Sarah R., John T., Ann B., Mary S., Charles N., William J., Margaret H., Margaret T. and Benjamin James.

(IV) BENJAMIN JAMES TILLEY, born Nov. 20, 1821, in Newport, married Dec. 2, 1849, Mary Chapman, born June 24, 1825, daughter of Capt. Edward Easton and Rebecca (Chapman) Taylor, of Newport, and to the marriage came one child, Risbrough Hammett Tilley.

When seven years of age Benjamin James Tilley sustained an injury to one of his hips which made him a cripple for life. He received a good common school education and later attended the school of the distinguished teacher, Levi Tower. For some time he was a clerk in the commission house of William Vose. As a boy he sold newspapers, then beginning a business in which he prospered through life. Young Tilley in 1848 opened a store on Thames street, establishing the first successful news depot in Newport. Of him personally writes his biographer in the "Biographical Cyclopaedia of Rhode Island": "Mr. Tilley was one of the most useful citizens of Newport, and such was his personal popularity that he was twice elected to the Rhode Island General Assembly, in 1864 and 1865, though honestly differing politically with the majority of his constituents. During the Rebellion he exhibited much patriotism and kindness by his constant endeavors to supply the wants of disabled soldiers at the Portsmouth Grove Hospital, and by his kind and sympathetic attentions at the bedside of the sick and dying. His earnest and self-sacrificing labors in that direction called forth expressions of gratitude from hundreds of soldiers. Mr. Tilley was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, having been advanced to the highest degree in the order." Mr. Tilley died July 31, 1866, in Newport.

(V) RISBROUGH HAMMETT TILLEY, only child of Benjamin James, born Sept. 1, 1850, married Nov. 23, 1874, Susan Jouvett, daughter of Frederick A. and Susan (Nason) Barlow, of Newport, R. I. One child, Edith May, born Dec. 19, 1875, blessed this union, who is descended in the ninth and tenth generations respectively from John Alden and William Mullens of the "Mayflower," 1620. She is an expert genealogist and an assistant in the library of the Newport Historical Society. She is a member of William Ellery Chapter, D. A. R., of which she is Vice Regent, and of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Mayflower Societies, holding the office of Historian in the Rhode Island Society.

For many years Mr. Tilley has been identified with historical matters in his native town and State; has been for twenty and more years the librarian of the Newport Historical Society. He has prepared genealogies of a number of families, among them that of his own—the Tilley family, and the Taylor family. From 1884 to 1887 he was the editor of the "Rhode Island Magazine," of the "American Genealogical Queries," and later of the "Magazine of New England History." He has been engaged in other historical work, and for years has been a correspondent for the press. In 1896 he was appointed State Record Commissioner, a position he still holds (1907).

JOHN HENRY TILLEY. The name of Tilley has for nearly two and one-half centuries been a conspicuous one in the annals of Newport, in which city the various members of this time-honored family have been esteemed and respected citizens. This article is to particularly treat of the branch of the family which has been worthily represented by the late Charles N. Tilley and his son, the late John Henry Tilley. A record of this branch of the family follows, the generations being given in chronological order.

(I) William Tilley, born about 1685 in Devon, England, came to America about 1710 and settled at Boston. He was a son of John Tilley, of Ideford, Devon, England, and with his brothers, John and James, came to Boston to work for their uncle William Tilley, a rope-maker, who had preceded them and resided in Boston, the uncle being a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and of Old South Church at his death in 1717. William Tilley (I) removed to Newport, R. I., in 1732, and established himself in the rope-making business. He married Dorcas, daughter of Joseph

John Henry Getty

J. H. Beers & Co.

John Henry Petty

and Elizabeth (Slocum) Earle, of Portsmouth. He died in Newport about 1755.

(II) Deacon William Tilley, born Oct. 19, 1738, in Newport, R. I., married Oct. 28, 1759, Elizabeth Rogers, of Middletown, R. I., daughter of Jeremiah and Patience Rogers. He, too, was a rope-maker. He owned much land east of Mt. Vernon street, and on Touro street to the burial ground on Kay street, on which his extensive rope walks were located. His residence was on Elizabeth street, near the Jewish cemetery. Mrs. Tilley died Aug. 28, 1800, aged fifty-nine years, and he married (second) in January, 1802, Catherine Sabine, of Rehoboth, who died Oct. 15, 1817. He married (third) Nov. 4, 1821, Widow Elizabeth Boone, formerly Elizabeth Reed, who died Jan. 3, 1836, aged eighty-six years. Mr. Tilley was a prominent member of the Second Baptist Church in Newport, having held the office of Deacon for forty years. He died April 14, 1825. Of his seventeen children, all born to the first marriage, thirteen lived to mature years. His children were: Mary, William, William (2), Sarah, James, Thomas, Betsey, William (3), Elizabeth, Dorcas, George, Abraham, Patience, John, George (2), Benjamin and Nancy. On the death of the father of this family the Newport Mercury paid him the following tribute:

"If sixty years of a conscientious discharge of religious and moral duties joined to the endearing and affectionate domestic ties of husband, father, son, brother and friend shall claim from our all-wise and beneficent Creator reward and mercy, he now enjoys all the heavenly felicity promised by the Gospel of Christ. His life was a life of piety and usefulness and to the last moments of that life his faith and confidence were unshaken in Christ, the son of God. He left a numerous progeny as well as numerous friends to mourn his departure, ten children, seventy-nine grandchildren and forty-four great-grandchildren."

(III) John Tabour Tilley, born April 5, 1778, in Newport, followed the occupation of his forefathers, that of a rope-maker. He married April (or Aug.) 20, 1800, Margaret, born March 23, 1780, daughter of John and Sarah (Boutin) Nicoll, great-granddaughter of Speaker William Nicoll, son of Mathias Nicoll, third mayor of New York. Mr. Tilley died Aug. 22 or 23, 1828, and Mrs. Tilley passed away Oct. 1, 1864. Their children were: Sarah R., John T., Ann B., Mary S., Charles N., William J., Margaret H., Margaret T. and Benjamin James.

(IV) Charles Nicoll Tilley, born Sept. 16, 1808, passed away in Newport Sept. 9, 1894. In early life he kept a store at No. 142 Thames street, and was also agent for the New Jersey Steam Navigation Company, of New York, for a number of years. He was also an auctioneer. He eventually retired from the mercantile business, and in the early fifties became cashier and bookkeeper of the "Bellevue Hotel," on Catherine street, continuing in that capacity until 1854. In 1855 he became deputy collector of customs under Gilbert Chase, and continued in this responsible position until Nov. 15, 1880, when he resigned from active business life, spending the remainder of his days in well-earned ease. He was a notary public and until his death kept an office—more as a place in which he could spend a few hours each day and where his friends might congregate. In early life he was an old-line Democrat, but in 1854, on the organization of the Republican party, he joined forces with that organization. Mr. Tilley was a member of Zion Episcopal Church and served as warden and vestryman for many years.

On Nov. 3, 1830, he was united in marriage to Abby Chappell, daughter of Henry Chappell, of Newport, where she was born Dec. 22, 1808, and died May 31, 1886, the only child to this union being John Henry.

(V) John Henry Tilley, son of Charles N., and the subject proper of this review, was born Aug. 29, 1831, in Newport, and received his early educational training in the public schools of his native city. Upon leaving the same, at the age of ten years, he was employed by his father for several years in the freight business in connection with the New Jersey Steam Navigation Company. He then entered the dry-goods store of Carr & Brown, on Thames street, as a clerk, remaining in their employ until 1853, when he became clerk in the store of Francis Lawton & Bro., with whom he remained for five years. In 1858 he took up photography in its various branches, and this he followed in Newport and New York for about one year. On Dec. 30, 1859, Mr. Tilley entered the Newport custom house as an inspector, in which capacity he remained until November, 1880, a service of almost twenty-one years. The following spring he became cashier of the "Ocean House," at the corner of Bellevue avenue and Bowery street, a position he held for ten years, after which time, until within a short time of his death he was actively engaged in the insurance business, representing among other companies the Equitable Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Providence, R. I., of which he had been agent since June, 1884. Mr. Tilley was also a notary public for many years, receiving his first commission over forty years ago. Fraternally he was connected with Weenat Shassit Tribe, No. 6, Improved Order of Red Men, of which he was a past sachem. He was also a past great sachem and a member of the Grand Lodge. He joined the Knights of Pythias in 1871, holding membership in Redwood Lodge, No. 11, of Newport, of which he was a past chancellor commander, and he had also served as grand outer and inner guard and grand prelate of the Grand Lodge. Mr. Tilley was for a number of years a member of the volunteer fire department of Newport, serving as an active member thereof from 1850 to 1874, and for twelve years was clerk of the Old Hercules Company, No. 7. Mr. Tilley and his estimable wife were consistent members of the Channing Memorial Church of Newport, to which they gave their liberal support.

On March 23, 1856, Mr. Tilley was married to Louise Hammett Marsh, daughter of the late Joseph and Lydia Wood (Davenport) Marsh, of Newport, and a descendant of some of Newport's oldest settled families. Mr. and Mrs. Tilley led a happy wedded life of over fifty years, and were honored and respected citizens of the city in which they were both born and where their long and useful lives have been spent. Charitable and benevolent, they were always known as good and kindly neighbors. Mr. Tilley passed away at his home in Newport, on Sept. 21, 1907, after an illness lasting several weeks, and is survived by his widow.

THOMAS C. GLADDING, one of the energetic and prominent merchants of Providence, R. I., and now proprietor of an extensive industry devoted chiefly to the manufacture of sausages and the curing of meats, is a member of the old historic family which for nearly one hundred and fifty years has been so closely identified with the progress of Providence and Newport. John Gladding, the original American ancestor, first appears in the records of Newbury, Mass., in 1666. The descent is then traced through John (2), Jonathan, of Bristol, Nathaniel, Nathaniel (2), Abraham S. and Abraham S. (2), all of Providence, to Thomas C., of the eighth generation.

(I) John Gladding (Glading) is of record at Newbury, Mass., in 1666, as marrying on July 17th of that year Elizabeth Rogers, and their children of record in Newbury were: Susannah, born Oct. 6, 1668; John, Oct. 11, 1670; William, July 25, 1673; Elizabeth, Sept. 15, 1676; Mary, Jan. 14, 1679; and Hannah, Nov. 8, 1681. Additional children, of record in Bristol, of John Gladding and his wife Elizabeth were: Joshua, born May 6, 1685; Daniel, Nov. 8, 1687; and Sarah, Nov. 20, 1691. According to family manuscripts John Gladding died April 27, 1726, aged eighty-four years.

(II) John Gladding (2), born Oct. 11, 1670, married Oct. 31, 1692, Alice, born Dec. 27, 1670, daughter of Uzal Wardwell. Their children were: Mary, born Nov. 30, 1693; John, Sept. 8, 1694; William, Oct. 13, 1698; Jonathan, Jan. 5, 1700-01; Ebenezer, Dec. 8, 1702; Joseph, Oct. 2, 1704; Alice, March 24, 1705-06; Elizabeth, Sept. 13, 1706; Nathaniel, Dec. 16, 1709; Sarah (died May 27, 1712, aged eight days); and Sarah (2), May 2, 1715. The mother of these children died March 3, 1720.

(III) Jonathan Gladding, of Bristol, was born Jan. 5, 1701, and his marriage to Sarah Carey published July 2, 1726. Both were residents of that place. Mr. Gladding died Oct. 27, 1743, and his wife Dec. 26, 1786, when eighty-three years of age. The children born to their union were: Sarah, Sept. 1, 1727; Elizabeth, Sept. 22, 1729; Priscilla, April 9, 1733; Nathaniel, Oct. 6, 1735; Jonathan, Oct. 12, 1737; Timothy, Nov. 18, 1740; and Benjamin, June 22, 1743. According to tradition the four brothers, Timothy, Benjamin, Jonathan and Nathaniel, removed to Newport, and at the outbreak of the Revolutionary war the first two, Timothy and Benjamin, settled in Providence and became the progenitors of the Gladdings in that city. The other two were the progenitors of the Gladdings in Newport.

(IV) Nathaniel Gladding was born Oct. 6, 1735, and his children were: Sarah, Mary, Betsey, Hannah, Warren, Nathaniel, Jonathan and Hale.

(V) Nathaniel Gladding (2), of Providence, married Caroline I. Thomas, and their children were: Abraham S., Maria, Hannah (who married John Potter), Jarvis E., Lydia (married Daniel Perry) and Ann.

(VI) Abraham S. Gladding, of Providence, married in June, 1815, (first) Cynthia W. Carpenter, of Rehoboth, Mass. The children born to this union were: Thomas C., May 8, 1816; Abraham S. (2); Nov. 19, 1819; Nathaniel B., July 21, 1821 (died same day); and Mary Ann, Oct. 26, 1823. He was married (second) May 8, 1825, to Mary Day, by whom he had the following children: Cynthia M., born June 8, 1826; Maria, who married (first) Joseph Bliss and (second) T. V. Borden, and died Jan. 10, 1685; and Anna R., born Nov. 8, 1831, who died Nov. 23, 1833.

(VII) Abraham S. Gladding (2), of Providence, born Nov. 19, 1819, married Ann Elizabeth, born Sept. 27, 1822, daughter of Thomas and Ann Eliza Hathaway, of that city. The issue of their marriage was: William H., born Aug. 28, 1843; Cynthia, Oct. 18, 1845 (married Isaac Turner); Frank H., May 7, 1848; Walter E., Jan. 20, 1851; Thomas C., July 24, 1853; Nellie, August, 1859; and Louis A., July, 1861. Mr. Gladding died on the 16th of August, 1876. He spent his early married life in Rehoboth, Mass., engaged in farming, although by trade he was a harness-maker. He afterward removed to East Providence Center, R. I., where he was a butcher and did a large business in slaughtering cattle and hogs for others. For many years he was also employed in merchandising and for several terms was postmaster at East Providence Center. He was a Whig and a Republican in politics, a member of the Newman Congregational Church, of that place, and a citizen of high standing.

(VIII) Thomas C. Gladding, son of Abraham S. and Ann Elizabeth (Hathaway) Gladding, was born in East Providence Center, R. I., July 24, 1853. There he attended the public schools and when thirteen years of age entered the Rumford store, where he was employed for about a year. When he was fourteen he came to Providence, and secured a position in S. B. Champlain's market, located on the present site of the Mason building. He remained there a few months and then after working for a short time with George Marsh, of Elmwood, accepted a position as salesman with Comstock & Co., on Canal street. His services were so satisfactory that he continued in that capacity for twenty-five years, during that period, in connection with his brother, Walter, also operating the old Providence Hotel stables. In 1891, after resigning his position, he bought the Market business of Calef Brothers, corner of North Main and Thomas streets, and with his brother Louis also operated the Lonsdale Market, successfully conducting these joint enterprises for a period of ten years. He was the first man in Providence to paint a market white, his establishment being thereby distinguished for some years from all others in the city. In 1901 he disposed of both the market and boarding stables, and for about three years was engaged in no active business. In 1904 Mr. Gladding formed the German Sausage Company (now incorporated), and established its business at No. 17 Paige street. At first he had only two employees; he had twelve at the end of the first year and was doing an annual business of about $70,000. His sales are both wholesale and retail, and besides manufacturing about twenty different kinds of sausages the establishment turns out a number of varieties of cured meats.

Thomas C. Gladding was married Oct. 8, 1879, to Louisa Vigneron, daughter of Charles and Christena, and they have two sons: Herbert Carpenter, born Aug. 16, 1883; and Harold E., born June 14, 1885.

Mr. Gladding is a Mason of high rank, being a member of Nestell Lodge, the Royal Arch Mason Chapter and St. John's Commandery, Scottish Rite, and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine; he is also affiliated with Hope Lodge, I. O. O. F. In political sentiment he is a Republican, but nonpartisan in local matters, looking to the fitness of candidates rather than to their politics.

COWELL (Providence family). Among the early emigrants to New England were several bearing the name Cowell; but little, however, of any of them seems to have been written. Of the early Boston Cowells there have been traced several of the earlier generations, these the descendants of (I) Capt. Edward Cowell, of Great Island and Boston, 1645, a cordwainer. He was for a time a captain in King Philip's war. He was probably married twice, and by his wife Margaret he had three children, John, Joseph and Elizabeth. In June, 1668, at Hingham, he married, perhaps, Sarah Hobart.

(II) Joseph Cowell, son of Capt. Edward, was the representative in this line of the second generation.

(III) Joseph Cowell (2), son of Joseph, was born in 1673, and settled in Wrentham, where he died March 11, 1761. On May 7, 1701, he married in Wrentham Martha, daughter of James and Ann Fales.

(IV) Joseph Cowell (3), son of Joseph (2), was born in Wrentham March 27, 1713, and died there Oct. 3, 1740. On Jan. 21, 1735, he married in Wrentham Margaret Dearing, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Mann) Dearing.

(V) Samuel Cowell was born in Wrentham Jan. 16, 1737, son of Joseph (3), and he died there Feb. 23, 1824. He entered the war of the Revolution at the first "alarm" and continued throughout the war, retiring with the rank of major. In his son's diary it is stated that his "father served one campaign in the old French war in Canada, when he was not more than eighteen or nineteen years old." In 1760 Samuel Cowell married Jemima Metcalf, born in 1744, daughter of John and Tamar (Daniels) Metcalf, and she died Aug. 28, 1793. Their children were: Joseph, Benjamin, Olivia, Samuel, William, Jemima, Myrtilla, Martha, Mary and John.

(VI) Samuel Cowell, son of Samuel and Jemima, married Sarah George, and the children born to this union were: Hiram, who married Susan Fisher; Joseph, who married Emily; George; John, who married Laura Carpenter, of Foxboro, Mass.; and Henry, who went to California in 1848, and became wealthy. Samuel Cowell, the father, was a prominent Mason.

(VII) George Cowell, son of Samuel, was born in 1811. He attended Day's Academy, as did also his wife, and they both were teachers in their early days. He was an expert mathematician, and his wife was noted for her knowledge of English and the purity of her diction. He learned the trade of wheelwright, and followed it the greater part of his life. He married Elvira Ann Fisher, born in 1813, daughter of James and Rebecca (Hartshorn) Fisher, and they became the parents of seven children: Maria Fisher, born in August, 1843, was a prominent teacher in Wrentham for many years, and died in 1881; George Oscar, born in July, 1846, a well-known and successful jewelry manufacturer of Wrentham, died in December, 1894; William Gardner died in infancy; Henry Cushing, born in 1848, was a jeweler in Wrentham, and died in 1898; John Augustus, born April 1, 1850, is mentioned below; Jeremiah Hartshorn, born in 1852, makes his home in Wrentham, Mass.; and Hattie Pratt, born in 1857, married Charles Everett Holt (born in 1853, died in 1890), and has one daughter, Hattie Maria, born Oct. 14, 1886, now a student in Brown University.

(VIII) JOHN AUGUSTUS COWELL, son of George, born April 1, 1850, was given the benefits of a public school education, attending until just prior to his graduation from high school. At the age of sixteen years, in 1866, he came to Providence, and began a business career, entering as a clerk the same establishment where his co-worker, Secretary Noel L. Anthony, of the Cowell & Anthony Company, for the past thirty and more years, first began his labors in the same line. Here young Cowell remained until Sept. 1, 1872, when he resigned his position to become a partner in the furniture house of Lowe, Anthony & Cowell, which was at that time established on Broad street, now Weybosset street, the individual members of the co-partnership being Richard Lowe, Noel L. Anthony and Mr. Cowell. At this beginning the business of the concern was small, and was conducted in a wooden building adjoining what is now the Hall & Lyon drug store, on Weybosset street. Their salesroom was small, only 40 x 80 feet, and with storage room in the rear they occupied less than 5,000 square feet of floor space, and gave employment to not over a half dozen hands. The business was continued under the firm name as established until 1877, when Mr. Lowe, desiring to enter other fields of labor, withdrew, Messrs. Anthony and Cowell becoming sole owners. As the years passed the concern grew until in a few years it had outgrown its quarters, and in 1878 it was moved into a new building especially constructed and adjoining the former place. This gave a room 60 x 65 feet, and 19,000 square feet of floor space for the sales department alone. In the same year, 1878, Mr. Henry Fry was admitted as a partner and continued in the firm until 1886, when he withdrew, and Messrs. Anthony and Cowell again became sole proprietors. By this time these men, profiting by their experience, and with a foresight of the possibilities of the business wisely conducted and managed, began to plan to meet their ideas and what appeared the demand of the increasing population of the city. They then began a system of business that was to result in the building up of the largest furnishing establishment in the State of Rhode Island, and one of the largest in the United States. As the city grew in importance their business, through their enterprise and careful management, kept pace with this growth, and it was soon found necessary to look for more commodious quarters. The firm accordingly, in 1890, purchased what was known as the Tefft block, and the G. & S. Owen building, on the corner of Snow and Chapel streets, and to still further facilitate matters a corporation was formed in September, 1893, under the name of the Anthony & Cowell Company, with a capitalization of $300,000. Of this corporation Mr. Cowell was made president, and Noel L. Anthony treasurer. After the incorporation of the business extensive alterations were made in the buildings of the concern and another added, increasing the floor space of the establishment to about 175,000 square feet. On April 30, 1904, the building and contents were destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $300,000. Rebuilding was commenced at once, on a much more extensive scale, the business being now conducted in one of the large and imposing mercantile structures of the city, a building seven stories in height. Every department is well arranged for the display of goods and the convenience of customers. The entire establishment is of modern equipment, and the conduct of the extensive business in the various departments requires the services of a force of between one hundred and two hundred persons. The house makes a specialty of furniture for school-houses and State and government buildings, and handles all grades of house furnishings.

Of this corporation Mr. Cowell is now president and treasurer, and Mr. Anthony is secretary. Both are men of large business experience, and most capable men, who have established themselves in the third of a century of their business life in Providence, and with one institution, in high reputation in the business world. Both are men of the New England type, springing from early ancestry of this section. Mr. Anthony is referred to personally elsewhere.

Mr. Cowell, in March, 1903, was highly honored in being chosen a director of the Furniture Association of America, and one of four chosen from New England. The board of directors to which he was elected represents twenty-five of the largest furniture houses in the United States.

Mr. Cowell is a thirty-second-degree Mason, affiliated with What Cheer Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Providence Chapter, R. A. M.; Calvary Commandery, K. T.; and the Mystic Shrine. He is also member of the I. O. O. F. and the K. of P., while socially he belongs to the West Side and Central Clubs. He has been a contributing member of the Broadway M. E. Church since 1865. In politics he has been an independent Democrat.

Mr. Cowell married Addie L. Capron, daughter of Burrill Munroe and Mary Elizabeth (Brown) Capron. They have no children.

JOSEPH W. MILLER. The ancient town of Rehoboth, in the Colony of Massachusetts, included a territory which has since been divided in several towns, part in Massachusetts and North Providence, Cumberland and Pawtucket, Rhode Island. In those three towns have dwelt for several generations the ancestors of Joseph W. Miller, a resident and well-known business man of Pawtucket.

In the early records of Rehoboth the name of Miller appears almost at the beginning, first in 1643, when John Miller is mentioned. There is recorded April 18, 1680, the death or burial of his wife. According to Savage this John Miller was probably the father of John, Robert and Ichabod. There also appears a "John Miller, Sr.," who by the town records of Rehoboth according to Arnold, had children born as follows: Hannah, Dec. 23, 1653; Sarah, Oct. 15, 1655; Samuel, April 5, 1658; Joseph, in the middle of August, 1660; and Benjamin, Sept. 22, 1662. According to the same records, a "John Miller, Jr.," was the father of Elizabeth, born in the middle of July, 1659; Rebekah, middle of November, 1661; and Samuel, Sept. 1, 1664. John Miller, Jr., is recorded as having been slain March 26, 1676. A Robert Miller also of Rehoboth, was a soldier under Captain Turner in 1676 and was probably present at the Falls fight. He was married on the 24th of the 10th month, 1662, to Elizabeth Sabin, and their children of Rehoboth record, according to Arnold, were: Elizabeth, born the 6th of the 12th month, 1663; Robert, June 12, 1666; Nehemiah, June 8, 1668; Josiah, July 26, 1670; Nathaniel, March 31, 1672; Solomon, March 6, 1674; Mary, June 4, 1680; Sarah, Sept. 26, 1684; and Experience, May 20, 1687.

In the next century there is found in the records of Cumberland, R. I., under the date Nov. 13, 1766, the marriage of Peter and Ann (Aldrich) Miller, the great-grandparents of Joseph W. Miller. Their children were born as follows: Robe, Jan. 29, 1768; Asa, Feb. 13, 1769; Cynthia, March 21, 1771; Ephraim, Aug. 5, 1773; Squire, Sept. 12, 1775; Nancy, March 7, 1778; Nabby, June 7, 1781; and Welcome, Nov. 29, 1784.

Ephraim Miller, son of Peter, was born in Cumberland, Aug. 5, 1773. He became a large land owner and engaged in farming on an extensive scale. His death occurred in Pawtucket in 1851. He married Sally Williams, a direct descendant of Roger Williams, and in the town records of North Providence their children are given as follows: Pardon, born April 6, 1797; Joseph, April 30, 1799; Edward Franklin, Sept. 4, 1801; Sampson, Jan. 17, 1803; Ephraim, Jan. 7, 1815; Barton, April 9, 1816; and Cornelius, June 10, 1818.

Joseph Williams Miller, Sr., was born in Cumberland April 30, 1799, and died in Pawtucket June 26, 1871. He came to the latter city early in life and in due time established himself there in business. He opened a meat and grocery store and ran it most successfully for many years, retiring finally possessed of large property interests which required his whole attention. He was also concerned with various financial enterprises and was for a number of years a director of the North Providence Bank of Pawtucket. He acted, too, for a long time as overseer of the poor, being elected to that position as a representative of the Democratic party, of which he was always a loyal adherent. Fraternally he was a Mason, affiliated with Union Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., while he was also one of the charter members of Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M.

Mr. Miller was married April 30, 1820, to Miss Charlotte Bagley, born April 5, 1799, daughter of David Bagley, of Pawtucket. Mrs. Miller's death occurred June 18, 1859, in the city which had been so long her home. She was the mother of four children, viz: Sarah W., born June 13, 1821, who married the late Edward K. Fuller and resides in East Providence; Charlotte B., born Aug. 28, 1822, died Jan. 12, 1875, who married John M. Horton, and had one son, Frederick Augustus, a resident of Providence; Hannah T., born June 17, 1827, of Pawtucket, widow of Dr. George C. Cleveland; and Joseph W., Jr., born Oct. 12, 1829. Mr. and Mrs.

Miller were members of the Baptist Church, to which they gave liberally.

Joseph Williams Miller, Jr., was born in Pawtucket Oct. 12, 1829, and from the time he reached school age till he was seventeen he attended the public schools of that city. He then, before choosing a calling for himself, worked a couple of years as a clerk in his father's grocery store, in 1848 entering definitely upon an apprenticeship as a machinist. For nearly four years he worked in the machine shop of the late Thomas J. Hill, of Providence, after which he was employed two years as a journeyman for the Pawtucket Hair Cloth Company, for the late James S. Brown, of Pawtucket, for one year and for Northrup & Thurber, of Central Falls, for over two years. After the last firm failed Mr. Miller gave up that line of work and went into business for himself as proprietor of a retail fruit store, locating at the corner of Main and North Main streets. There he remained three or four years and did a very successful business, but after his father's death he found the management of the property would require most of his time, so in 1872 he sold out his fruit store and has since devoted himself to his real estate interests. In January, 1873, the old building in which his old fruit place had been located burned, and he at once erected the present Miller Brick, as the building is called, which was completed by Christmas Day of that same year.

Mr. Miller has, in addition to conducting his private affairs, served the city in an official capacity. Always a loyal Republican, he was elected on that ticket in 1892 an alderman from the Fourth ward, and held the position five years. He has also, in the days of the volunteer fire department, done the city good service as a member of the Rough and Ready Company, to which he belonged for a number of years.

On Oct. 22, 1852, Mr. Miller was married to Miss Hannah Elizabeth Hamlin, a native of Providence, and they enjoyed a wedded life of over twenty years. Mrs. Miller passed away in Pawtucket May 7, 1873, leaving two sons, Frank W. and Charles M. The family were all attendants and liberal supporters of the Congregational Church.

FRANK WEBSTER MILLER, oldest son of Joseph W., was born in Pawtucket Nov. 12, 1853. He was sent first to the city schools and then to the East Greenwich (R. I.) Academy. On leaving school he went into business and soon formed a partnership with Allen Anderson, conducting a fish store under the firm name of Anderson & Miller. When they finally dissolved partnership Mr. Miller established himself in South Attleboro, Mass., in the grocery line, also serving several years as postmaster of that town. He has been twice married, (first) to Miss Eva Baker and (second) to Miss Emma Dunham, both of Pawtucket. By the second union there have been two children, Jessie Dunham and Carleton Brooks.

CHARLES MORTIMER MILLER, the youngest son of Joseph W., was born July 25, 1868. He attended the public schools of his native city, Pawtucket, and then entered Mowry and Goff's English and Classical School, at Providence, from which he was graduated in 1887, and in the fall of that year he entered Brown University as a member of the class of 1891. He did not, however, complete the course there, but left to spend several months in travel through the Western States. On his return to Pawtucket he took a clerkship in the Slater National Bank and in various capacities remained with that institution seven years. The following three years he was assistant city clerk, and has since then been engaged in business as a stock and investment broker, with an office in the Miller block.

Mr. Miller is prominent in the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Union Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Pawtucket Royal Arch Chapter, No. 4; Pawtucket Council, No. 2, R. & S. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine; and the Rhode Island Consistory, thirty-second degree of Masonry. Mr. Miller is also a member of the To Kalon Club, of Pawtucket. He has always been fond of travel, and has visited not only a large part of his own country but many points of interest in foreign countries, including Egypt, where he spent some time. Mr. Miller is unmarried.

ANDREW KYRAN QUINN, treasurer of the Newport Gas Light Company, is one of the representative Irish-American citizens of Newport, R. I., where he is held in the highest esteem as a citizen of true worth and a man who has risen from the bottom of the ladder to a position of honor and trust, by close application to business and a determination to succeed.

John Quinn, his father, was a farmer in Ireland, where he died when his son Andrew was an infant. He married Mary Rogers, and to them were born five sons, as follows: William, who is a resident of Erie, Pa., where he is engaged in the undertaking business; Patrick, who died at Annapolis, Md.; Francis, who is connected with the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.; Andrew Kyran; and John, Jr., who died in infancy. After the death of her husband Mrs. Quinn emigrated with her boys to America and settled in Newport, where she passed away in 1900, having lived to see her sons grown up and holding positions of trust and honor in the business world.

Andrew Kyran Quinn was born in Ireland March 17, 1851, and was brought to America by his mother in the spring of 1852. After attending St. Mary's parochial school until about fourteen years old he was obliged to seek employment, to assist his widowed mother. For about three years, even while he was yet a schoolboy, he carried newspapers for the late Benjamin Tilley. In 1866 he became a clerk in the office of the Newport Gas Light Company. In this position he displayed marked ability, and by strict attention to business so won the approbation of his employers that he was advanced steadily, in 1886 being given the responsible position of treasurer, which he has since held with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the company. In 1890 Mr. Quinn was elected a member of the board of directors of this company.

Mr. Quinn was one of the original incorporators of the Aquidneck Mutual Insurance Company, of Newport, and he has served on its board of directors since its incorporation. In 1907 he was elected a director of the Newport Trust Company. In political faith Mr. Quinn is a Democrat, although in city affairs he takes a neutral stand. In 1901 his party honored him by electing him a member of the General Assembly of the State, from Newport, in which body he served on the committee on Education. Mr. Quinn has also served his adopted city as a member of the board of tax assessors, and was also one of the overseers of the poor for several years. In 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, Mr. Quinn was elected a member of the representative council from the Fourth ward, for the one-year term. Mr. Quinn and his family are consistent members of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, of Newport, of which they are liberal supporters.

On April 15, 1891, Mr. Quinn was married to Miss Teresa Martin, daughter of John Martin, of Newport, and to them have been born: John K., now (1907) aged sixteen years; Andrew P., aged fourteen; Mary, aged ten; Francis, aged seven; and Catherine, aged four. Mr. Quinn is a quiet, unostentatious man, very highly esteemed in the community in which he makes his home.

READ (Providence family). This Attleboro-Providence family, the head of which was the late Orin A. Read, long one of the most useful and highly respected citizens of his adopted city, is a branch of the ancient family bearing the name in the town of Rehoboth, Mass. The lineage and family history of Orin A. Read, including a brief sketch of himself, follow.

(I) John Read, born in 1598, supposed to be a son of William and Lucy (Henage) Read, came to this country in 1630, and in 1637 was at Weymouth. He was later at Dorchester and Braintree, and in 1643 went with the Rev. Mr. Newman and his church to Rehoboth. The Christian name of his wife was Sarah. He died in 1685. Their children were: Samuel, William, Abigail, John, Thomas, Ezekiel, Zachariah, Moses, Mary, Elizabeth, Daniel, Israel and Mehetabel.

(II) Daniel Read, born in March, 1655, married Aug. 20, 1677, Hannah Peck, and they lived in Rehoboth, Mass., where Mr. Read died in 1710. Their children were: Hannah, Daniel, John, Sarah, Noah and Abigail.

(III) Daniel Read (2), born Jan. 20, 1680, in Rehoboth, Mass., married Elizabeth Bozworth, and (second) Dec. 8, 1715, Elizabeth Ide. The children born to the first marriage were: Beriah, Ichabod, Hannah, Abigail, Esther and Daniel; those born to the second marriage were: Daniel (2) (at Attleboro), Norah, Elizabeth, Samuel, Abigail (2), Daniel (3), Rachel, Benjamin, Ebenezer and Thankful.

(IV) Ichabod Read, born Oct. 8, 1708, in Rehoboth, Mass., married Elizabeth Chaffee, and had: Ichabod (born in Attleboro), Patience, Amos, Daniel, Olive, Ichabod and Jonathan. Mr. Read married (second) Elizabeth Robinson, and had: Ebenezer, Dan, Sarah, Lemuel and Asareel (who lived and died at the homestead at Attleboro, Massachusetts).

(V) Ebenezer Read, born April 7, 1764, in Attleboro, Mass., married Betsey Stanley, and their children were: Rosey, born March 6, 1796, in Attleboro, married Gideon Young; Russell, born July 26, 1792, is mentioned further on; Martha, born Feb. 27, 1795, married Daniel Bradley; Dana was born July 16, 1803; Haworth was born Oct. 20, 1807.

(VI) Russell Read, born July 26, 1792, at Attleboro, Mass., married Susan Albee, and their children were: Orin A., born in 1814, in Attleboro; and Harriet R., born in 1816, who married Loren Coes, of Worcester. The father died in 1816.

(VII) ORIN A. READ, son of Russell and Susan (Albee) Read, was born July 9, 1814, in Attleboro. He began his business career in Pawtucket, and removed to Providence in 1840. Here he opened, on the corner of Steeple and Canal streets, and conducted until 1861, a hardware store. In the last named year he removed his business to the block opposite on Steeple street, where he remained until 1872. His health now becoming impaired, he felt obliged to give up business, and concluded to try country life. He purchased a farm in Attleboro, Mass., to which he moved and upon which he lived until 1884, when he again came to Providence, which was ever afterward his home.

Mr. Read was a most lovable character, and won the friendship of all with whom he came in contact. In his business relations he was honest and upright, and prospered, being successful in his undertakings. He was always of delicate health, yet such was his sweet disposition and uncomplaining nature that those nearest him hardly realized the constant pain he strove to forget in doing for others.

Mr. Read was a devout church member and was one of the original founders of the Central Congregational Church, at Providence, in 1852. In 1888 he was elected treasurer of the Church Society, which office he resigned only at the beginning of the year in which he died. He was actively interested in the welfare of all about him, and followed the changes which had taken place during his long and useful life with keen interest up to the time of his death.

In 1840 Mr. Read was married to Ellen Slater, a native of England, born Dec. 31, 1814, daughter of George Slater, and their children were: Ellen Slater, who died May 8, 1904, in her sixty-third year, unmarried; John Russell, a resident of Providence, R. I., who married Martha Alden; and Frances, now the widow of Nathan H. Baker, of Providence. The parents celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Aug. 12, 1890. Mr. Read died June 14, 1898, and Mrs. Read passed away June 23, 1904, in her ninetyeth year; she was buried beside her husband in the family yard in South Attleboro, Massachusetts.

NATHAN HALE BAKER, one of the best known and most prominent business men of Providence, was a descendant of one of the oldest families of Ipswich, Mass., which for many generations was the home of this branch of the family. Mr. Baker was born in Providence, June 11, 1844, son of George and Mary Ann (Towne) Baker, and died Aug. 5, 1906. For many years he was interested in the cotton manufacturing business of the State, being connected for a long time with the Bolton Bleacheries, and for twenty-four years holding a prominent position with the Richmond Print Works. During the last few years of his life he conducted a commission merchant's business, with an office at No. 37 Weybosset street. He always took an active part in the affairs of the city, and in 1882 he was sent to the city council as a representative of the First ward. He also held other positions in the city government, always discharging his duties with a sacred regard for the rights of his constituents. He had an honorable army record, having enlisted in the 10th Rhode Island Volunteers when only seventeen years of age.

On April 14, 1868, Mr. Baker was married to Frances Elizabeth Read, daughter of Orin A. and Ellen (Slater) Read, and six children blessed this union: (1) Elizabeth Choate. (2) Ellen Read is the wife of Herbert A. Richards and resides in Montclair, N. J.; they have two children, Orin R. and Francis B. (3) Marian Towne, who graduated from Smith College in 1898, married Walter Lloyd, and resides in Montclair, N. J.; they have two children, Marshall and Gault. (4) Dwight Wood, who graduated from Brown University in 1900, is now a resident of Pueblo, Colo. (5) Richard Slater died in infancy. (6) Samuel Newhall, who graduated from Brown in 1905, now resides in Providence.

Mr. Baker was an active member of the Board of Trade. He was a member of Prescott Post, G. A. R. During his entire life he was interested in local history, and firmly believed in keeping careful and accurate records of events that make history, and he was ever keenly interested in the work and researches of the Rhode Island Historical Society, of which he was a member.

HON. JOHN RUSSELL HICKS, ex-State Senator and a well known dairy farmer of North Tiverton, is a descendant in both paternal and maternal lines from some of the earliest settlers of New England. He was born on the Hicks' homestead in the town of Tiverton Feb. 26, 1846, and still resides in the same house where both he and his father were born.

The Tiverton branch of the Hicks family represents one of the very oldest of New England—one whose coming thither was but a year after the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. A son of the emigrant settler was one of the promoters of the Dartmouth settlement and removed thither, and one of his sons subsequently removed to Rhode Island. Here at Portsmouth and in Tiverton the earlier generations figured, and as well here and elsewhere have continued in respectable and honorable citizenship. Hon. Thomas Hicks, son of the Portsmouth settler, was active and prominent in public life, serving many times from Portsmouth in the Colonial Assembly from 1713 to 1733. Later generations have well maintained the standard of the earlier family in good and useful citizenship, and in the line following the family name in Tiverton has been most worthily sustained in the person of the present Hon. John Russell Hicks, long prominent in public life, former representative, senator, etc., of his native town, Tiverton.

(I) Robert Hicks, from Southwark, County Surrey, England, came to Plymouth Colony in the ship "Fortune" in 1621. His wife Margaret came in the ship "Ann" in 1623, bringing with her several children. The father drew lots for himself, his wife and two children in 1623. He was made a freeman in 1633. His children were: Samuel, Ephraim, Lydia and Phebe. He died March 24, 1647. Of his children Lydia married Edward Banks, and Phebe married George Watson.

(II) Samuel Hicks, son of Robert, married in 1645, Lydia Doane, daughter of Deacon John Doane. Mr. Hicks was in Plymouth as late as 1643, thence went to Nauset, which in 1651, became the town of Eastham. He next went to Barnstable and afterward to Dartmouth. He was admitted an inhabitant of the town of Barnstable Oct. 3, 1662, but had resided in the town several years. He was representative from Nauset (Eastham) in 1649. He was engaged in the promotion of Dartmouth. He had children: Dorcas, born Feb. 14, 1651-52; Margaret, born March 9, 1654; Thomas; and probably others.

(III) Thomas Hicks, son of Samuel, married Mary, daughter of John and Dorothy Albro. Mr. Hicks was a carpenter and a resident of Dartmouth, Massachusetts, and Portsmouth, Rhode Island, respectively; was made a freeman of Portsmouth in 1673. He held, it seems, an interest in Seaconnet, as he sold a quarter-share there in 1679. He died in 1698. His widow died after 1710. Their children were: Sarah, Thomas, Samuel, Ephraim, Susanna, Abigail and Elizabeth. In 1707, when the father's estate was administered, Thomas and Ephraim were of Rhode Island, and Samuel of Tiverton (then in Massachusetts).

(IV) Samuel Hicks (2), son of Thomas, married Jan. 1, 1701-02, Susanna, born Aug. 29, 1674, daughter of Abraham and Alice (Wodell) Anthony and lived in Tiverton. There he died in 1742, and his wife before 1736. Their children were: Samuel, Sarah, Alice, Leah, Susanna, Abigail and Mary.

(V) Samuel Hicks (3), son of Samuel (2), born Aug. 15, 1704 married (first) Mary Mumford. She died March 4, 1737, in her twenty-second year, and he married (second) Susanna Akin. Mr. Hicks died May 8, 1790, aged eighty-six years. His children were: Thomas, born June 2, 1735; Stephen, born April 21, 1741; Samuel, born Nov. 10, 1742; Mary, born May 28, 1744; Elizabeth, born Jan. 23, 1746; John, born Jan. 26, 1747; Ann, born Feb. 5, 1752; George, born May 7, 1755; Peace, born 1757; Elihu, born April 22, 1759; Susanna, born May 2, 1761; and Weston, born June 30, 1764. The family first settled in Tiverton on land west of the highway leading from the Stone Bridge to Fall River, nearly opposite the stone house formerly occupied by the late Charles R. Hicks. This land extended from the highway to the shores of Mt. Hope Bay.

(VI) John Hicks, son of Samuel (3), was born Jan. 26, 1747, and on reaching manhood engaged for a time in the mercantile business in Newport, but later settled down to farming in Tiverton, where he passed the remainder of his life, and where he died. On Dec. 7, 1803, he married Lydia Wing, of Sandwich, Mass., daughter of Edward and Edith Wing; she died Nov. 8, 1828. Their children were: Lydia Wing, born March 27, 1805, died Aug. 8, 1842; John Russell, born Dec. 16, 1807; Susanna, born Aug. 8, 1809; Elizabeth, born Jan. 2, 1812; and Mehitabel, born Dec. 26, 1813. Both John Hicks and his wife were members of the Society of Friends, Mr. Hicks being the last survivor of the Old Society. In his sketch of the town of Tiverton, Mr. H. W. Blake thus alludes to some of the Friends of the town: "Among the early supporters of the Tiverton Meeting were Edward Wing and Elizabeth, his wife, Nathan Chase, Abraham Barker, Borden Durfee, Abigail Durfee, John Hicks, Elisha Estes and Ann Hopkins, who was a maiden sister of Elizabeth Wing. Mrs. Wing was the minister for several years. Mr. Barker and Mr. Hicks were the last of the old society. These two, faithful to their earnest belief, sat alone in their house of worship many a First Day and silently worshipped God."

(VII) John Russell Hicks, son of John, was born Dec. 16, 1807, on the farm in Tiverton, where he spent his life. He owned and operated a farm of forty-eight acres near to the homestead, formerly known as the Cook farm, devoting much of his attention to dairying, and finding a market for his product in Fall River. He was successful in all his undertakings. In his political principle he was first a Whig and later a Republican. In his religious faith he was a Friend. He died on his farm Sept. 4, 1883. On May 6, 1832, he married Emma Gardner, who was born in Tiverton Jan. 25, 1809, a daughter of Capt. Samuel and Catherine (Borden) Gardner, the latter a daughter of Benjamin Borden, granddaughter of Samuel Borden, and great-granddaughter of Richard Borden. Capt. Samuel Gardner's family was one of prominence in Tiverton; he was from Swansea, Mass., settling in Tiverton about the time of his marriage, Jan. 1, 1795. Mrs. Emma (Gardner) Hicks died May 14, 1887. To John Russell and Emma Hicks were born children as follows: Charles Russell and an infant (twins) born Feb. 18, 1834, the latter dying the same day, while the former survived until Jan. 22, 1901; George H., born Dec. 12, 1836, married Alice A. Borden, and died Jan. 8, 1901; Edward Wing, born Oct. 20, 1838, resides in Tiverton; Albert G., born Oct. 7, 1844, died the same month; John Russell, born Feb. 26, 1846; Joseph L., born March 29, 1847, resides in Fall River; and Samuel Gardner, born July 3, 1849, resides at Westport, Massachusetts.

(VIII) John Russell Hicks, son of John Russell, Sr., was born in Tiverton, R. I., Feb. 26, 1846, and in the schools of his native town received his elementary education, later furthering his studies in the Friends' School in Providence. He resides on the old homestead, and is engaged extensively in farming and dairying, and disposes of his milk in Fall River. He keeps some forty milch cows, and for years has dealt in cattle and horses. He owns land in Tiverton, and is also interested in real estate in Fall River.

Ever since the completion of his school days, Mr. Hicks has taken an active and prominent part in the public affairs of the community, town and State, and has ever been interested in the welfare of the people and the development of his native town. His fellow citizens have repeatedly called him to positions of trust and honor, and in the performance of them all he has given a good account of himself. A staunch Republican, he has for years served as a member of that party's town committee; has served in the town council; was one of the board of assessors; a justice of the peace; a notary public; long moderator in voting district No. 2, etc. He was representative from Tiverton in the Rhode Island Assembly from 1885 to 1887, and from 1888 to 1889, and Senator from May, 1896, to January, 1900. While a member of the House he served on the committee on Accounts and Claims and on the committee on Special Legislation, and while in the senate as chairman of the committees on Education and Fisheries. He was alternate to the Republican National Convention held at Minneapolis, Minn., in June, 1892, voting in that body, Benjamin Harrison receiving the nomination. In his religious views Mr. Hicks is very liberal and in his habits is temperate. He is unmarried. Senator Hicks is one of the substantial and influential citizens of Newport county, enjoying the respect of the entire community.

CAPT. SAMUEL GARDNER, grandfather of Hon. John Russell Hicks, was born in Swansea, Mass., son of Samuel Gardner. In 1795 he came to Tiverton, locating in the north part of the town on a farm known as the Samuel Borden farm. Here he engaged in general farming, making many improvements on the farm, and here his death occurred July 18, 1830, when he was aged sixty-one years. He married Catherine Borden, daughter of Benjamin and Rachel (Cobb) Borden. She was born in 1773, and died in 1813. Their children were: Rachel, born April 14, 1796, married Abram Allen, and died in 1883; Samuel Borden, born in February, 1798, died Dec. 18, 1861; Joseph, born Aug. 12, 1800; Catherine, born Nov., 1802; Eliza, born October, 1804, married Judge Joseph Osborn, and died April 19, 1866; Julia Ann, born in 1807, married Obediah Chase, of Fall River, and died in 1880; Emma, born Jan. 25, 1809, married John Russell Hicks, Sr., and Benjamin, born in 1811, died at Tiverton April 7, 1875.

JOHN JAMES KENYON, a well-known manufacturer and prominent citizen of Pawtucket, R. I., died at his home on Clay street, that city, Feb. 9, 1906. He was known throughout the city, where he had lived the greater part of his life, and had served as a public official, his record being second to none. Mr. Kenyon was born in Lancashire, England, Nov. 25, 1836, son of Thomas and Sarah (Hill) Kenyon.

James Kenyon, grandfather of John James, was a hand-loom weaver by trade and followed that occupation in his native country, England, where he spent his entire life. He married and had a family of ten children, among whom was Thomas, born in Lancashire, England, whose death occurred in Pawtucket, R. I., April 17, 1872. In his native country Thomas Kenyon had followed the occupation of stationary engineer for thirty years, but on coming to this country, in 1864, he engaged with his son, John J., in the manufacture of tapes and braids on East avenue, under the firm name of Thomas Kenyon & Son. Thomas Kenyon married Sarah Hill, daughter of John Hill, of Lancashire, England, who died Feb. 13, 1899, in Pawtucket, aged eighty-six years. At the time of her death she had seventy-seven living descendants, twenty-five having died. Children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kenyon as follows: John James; Thomas, Jr., a dyer by trade, who passed away in Lawrence, Mass.; Edmund, a boss dyer, who died in Pawtucket; James R., a carpenter and builder of Australia: Alice E. J., who married Walter Bennett, and now resides in Pawtucket, a widow; William M., who resides in Fall River, Mass., a boss finisher in the employ of the Globe Yarn Company; Mary S. L., who married John Horrocks, and died in Pawtucket; George W., a stationary engineer, residing in Pawtucket; and Sarah Ellen, the wife of John Hyde, of Pawtucket.

At the age of eight years John James Kenyon went to work as a tier boy to block printers, but meanwhile attended school as a "half timer" until he was fourteen. He was then apprenticed to Walker & Son, of Manchester, with whom he learned the manufacture and finishing of cloth in all its branches, including spinning, weaving, bleaching, dyeing and printing. Thus equipped, he came in 1859 to the United States, and secured employment at the old Pemberton Mill, Lawrence, Mass., where he narrowly escaped death by the collapse of the building in 1860, a disaster which caused great loss and attracted widespread attention. He then went to Philadelphia and remained until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he returned to England and stayed there until 1863. Coming back to this country he located at Pawtucket, and with his father engaged in the manufacture of tapes and braids in the old Greene Mill, at No. 56 East avenue, the name of the firm being Thomas Kenyon & Son. Upon the death of his father he operated the industry under his own name. The business increased rapidly and extended to such proportions that the old mill could not accommodate it, and shops in four different buildings were operated eventually. Under these circumstances it became difficult for Mr. Kenyon to give the various departments the personal supervision necessary, and in 1895 he erected at Darlington a four-story factory, 300 feet long and 50 feet in width, completely equipped with machinery for the manufacture of tapes, braids, boot, shoe and corset laces, shoe webs, stay bindings, glazed yarns, tying-up twines, etc. The business is now conducted under the name of the John J. Kenyon Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Kenyon was a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, the Knights of Pythias, the Improved Order of Red Men and the Order of Alfredians. He was elected to the board of aldermen in 1898 and the following year was re-elected. His second term he was chosen presiding officer, and Mayor Cronin dying while in the office of chief executive Mr. Kenyon was acting mayor for several months. In political sentiment he was a staunch Republican.

Mr. Kenyon was married about 1855 to Sarah Olive, who died fifteen months later, leaving one son, James. On Sept. 27, 1864, he was married (second) to Mary Nickerson, of Philadelphia, Pa., who died in Pawtucket Nov. 3, 1904, and four children were born to this union: Robert A., John F., Mary and Elizabeth.

The following account of the funeral of Mr.

Kenyon is copied from one of the local papers of Feb. 12, 1906: "This afternoon the funeral of John J. Kenyon was held from his late residence, No. 58 Clay street. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, as well as the prominent men of the business houses of the city and the members of the city government, the deceased having been prominent a few years ago as president of the board of aldermen and as acting mayor. The latter office he held during the last illness of Mayor William J. Cronin. At the request of Mayor Higgins the offices of the city departments were closed during the hours of the funeral, and at 2 o'clock the mayor, members of the city council and heads of departments assembled at the city hall and marched to the residence of the deceased. There were also present representatives of the Republican city committee and the manufacturing concerns of the city, and it was a representative body assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to a good citizen.

"The services were conducted by Rev. Frank J. Goodwin, pastor of the Pawtucket Congregational Church, who spoke in praise of the deceased and his private and public life, his words being accepted as very befitting the man they had known so long and well. The place of interment was Oak Grove cemetery. The flags of the city were at half-mast, they having been so placed immediately after Mr. Kenyon's death.

"The floral offerings made up a large and pretty display. In addition to a large gates-ajar, with the word 'Father,' from the children, there was a mammoth pillow with the word 'Grandpa,' from the grandchildren; a wreath of galax leaves with flowers from the Republican city committee; pillow from the Order of Red Men, shield from the Knights of Pythias, anchor on standard, and a host of others from friends."

Speaking editorially, the Pawtucket Gazette and Chronicle had the following to say, at the time of Mr. Kenyon's death:

"The passing of John J. Kenyon means much to the city of Pawtucket, for to no man in much greater measure can there be attributed more that tended to the promotion of the city's business interests, and no man occupied a warmer spot in the hearts of his fellow-men. Coming from a foreign country, well equipped for the manufacture which he established here, he made a success of the small business that marked his advent here until the large and flourishing manufactory erected on the 'plains' in 1895 stands as a monument to his business ability, and as a source of revenue to those he has left behind. Plain, honest, good and humble citizen, he was beloved by all who had the good fortune to call him friend, and as a member of the city government he disposed of his duties in such a manner that there was no blemish on his fair name. Having been called to perform the duties of mayor at a time when the city's executive was stricken with what proved his fatal illness, he so conducted himself as to win the approbation of the late mayor, and he also merited the sanction of every person familiar with his duties at that time. When called on to do certain things within his scope as acting mayor, he invariably replied: 'I want to do everything as much as possible in accord with the mayor, or as he would do if he were here.' It was another way, if you please, of exemplifying the Golden Rule, and in the life of John J. Kenyon that rule seems to have been followed by him in every walk of life. His funeral was held on Monday, and the respect shown him by his fellows of all political beliefs spoke volumes for his worth as a man and a citizen. His home life needs no work of eulogy, for there the merit of the good man shone all the brighter, even than in his business and official life. There are many good men in Pawtucket, but the death of John J. Kenyon has reduced the number by taking one of the most conspicuous. The sympathy for the bereaved family has already found that expression which comes when the truly worthy are called to their long home."

Mr. Kenyon's sons, James, Robert A. and John F., are mentioned below; Elizabeth, who resides in Pawtucket, is unmarried; and Mary, who married George H. Davis, a mechanical draughtsman of Pawtucket, where they reside.

JAMES KENYON, only child of the late John James and Sarah (Olive) Kenyon, was born in Radcliffe, Lancashire, England. He acquired his educational training at St. Thomas' parish school in his native town, which he attended until his thirteenth year, making his home with his grandfather, James Olive. After leaving school he served a three years' apprenticeship at the weaver's trade in the Walker Allen mills, at Radcliffe, and then worked in different positions in a coal mine, his grandfather being a mining engineer. He continued at this vocation until twenty-two years of age, when he came to America, sailing from Liverpool on the ship "Samaria," and arriving in Pawtucket, R. I., in 1880. Upon arriving in Pawtucket young Kenyon went to work for his father for about a year and then for several months was engaged at the construction of water-wheels in the old Slater cotton-mill. He later returned to his father's employ as engineer and machinist, at which he continued until the following spring, when he returned to England to spend several months. Coming again to America Mr. Kenyon re-entered the employ of his father, continuing with him as an employe until the incorporation of the John J. Kenyon Manufacturing Company, in March, 1897, when he was made a member of the company and superintendent of the concern, a position which he capably filled until August, 1906. After the death of his father Mr. Kenyon served as vice-president of the company during his subsequent connection therewith.

Mr. Kenyon is a member of Eureka Lodge, No.

5, Knights of Pythias, and Union Lodge, No. 4, Uniform Rank, K. P., which he has served as prelate; he is connected with the New England Order of Protection; Barney Merry Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., of Pawtucket; the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, and the Darlington Social Club. In political faith he is a staunch Republican. Mr. Kenyon attends the Good Shepherd Episcopal Church, to which he gives his liberal support, and of which his wife is a member and active worker. She belongs to the Women's Guild, and has been an officer thereof for several years; and to the New England Order of Protection, in which she has filled all the chairs.

On April 24, 1882, Mr. James Kenyon was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Hargreaves, born in Oldham, Lancashire, England, daughter of David and Jane (Saunders) Hargreaves, and two children have come to this union: Edith Alvesta, born Sept. 30, 1883, who married Alvin Charles Seifert, of Pawtucket, and has two children: James Theodore and Charles Alvin; and James Arthur, born July 17, 1892.

ROBERT ALEXANDER KENYON, eldest son of the late John James and Mary (Nickerson) Kenyon, was born Feb. 13, 1867, in Pawtucket, and received his schooling in the public schools and the grammar school of his native city, graduating from the latter in 1883. He then became a clerk in the office of the old Slater cotton-mill, continuing in this capacity for about two years, when he entered the employ of his father, acquiring a thorough knowledge of the details of the business. Upon the incorporation of the business, in March, 1897, he became vice-president of the company, and in that capacity continued until the death of his father, in February, 1906, when he was made president, a position he now holds, in addition to that of general manager. Mr. Kenyon is a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association; of Jenks Lodge, No. 24, A. F. & A. M., and of Enterprise Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., of Pawtucket. He is a stalwart Republican and has served as a member of the common council for two years. He has also served as representative in the General Assembly of the State from Pawtucket, and has been a member of the committee on Charities and Corrections. Mr. Kenyon attends the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, of which his wife is a member.

Mr. Kenyon was married Jan. 10, 1894, to Mary Hodgert, daughter of Edward Hodgert, of Pawtucket, and to this union there have been born two children: Eva, who died at the age of four years; and John James.

JOHN FOSTER KENYON, second son of the late John James and Mary (Nickerson) Kenyon, was born Aug. 12, 1868, in Pawtucket, and his early education was acquired in the public schools, which he left at the age of fourteen years to enter the employ of his father. By close application he acquired a thorough knowledge of the business, but left after three years in the service to take a course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Providence, making a special study of bookkeeping. Returning to his father's employ he continued therein until March 18, 1897, when the John J. Kenyon Manufacturing Company was incorporated, and Mr. Kenyon was elected secretary of the company. Since the death of his father Mr. Kenyon has also been serving as treasurer.

John F. Kenyon is a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, and also holds membership in Enterprise Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., of Pawtucket. In political faith he is a Republican, and he served as the first clerk of what was originally the First ward in the First district, and as warden of the First ward he has served since the present enumeration of wards was adopted. He attends the First Congregational Church of Pawtucket and has served several years as treasurer of Darlington Chapel, which is a mission of the First Congregational.

On June 24, 1892, Mr. Kenyon was married to Miss Jennie Bray, daughter of Andrew and Isabelle (Sheridan) Bray, of Pawtucket, and two children have been born to this union: Elsie M., born June 9, 1893; and Dorothy I., born May 28, 1898.

INMAN (Burrillville and vicinity). Since the early settlement of the Providence Plantations the name of Inman has been a continuous one in Northern Rhode Island, the posterity of Edward Inman being largely in the town of ancient Providence and subdivisions later created out of it—Glocester and Burrillville. Here they have been among the progressive, enterprising and substantial citizens, prominently identified with the industrial and financial life of that section of the State. Especially has this been the occupation of the descendants of the late James Inman, of what is now the town of Burrillville.

(I) Edward Inman, the earliest known ancestor of this Providence county branch of the family, a glover by trade and occupation, appears recorded as an inhabitant of Warwick in 1648, in 1651 being granted land as a townsman of Providence. Mr. Inman became one of the prominent public men of the town and colony, being commissioner in 1658, and deputy many times beginning with 1666. His second wife was Barbara Phillips, probably widow of Michael, and they died, he in 1706, and she after that time. Mr. Inman's children were: Joanna, who married Nathaniel Mowry; John, who married Mary Whitman, and was of Providence; and Edward, Jr.

(II) Edward Inman, Jr., son of Edward, married Elizabeth Bennett. He was of Providence and Smithfield, residing in the east part of the latter town, and owning a farm and grist mill, the latter being located at what is now called Slaters Upper Dam. His death occurred June 14, 1755.

(III) Elisha Inman, son of Edward, Jr., was a resident of that part of Smithfield which, in 1730-31, became Glocester, now Burrillville. His marriage to Abigail Darling is of record as occurring in Glocester Jan. 16, 1745, and the following children are of record in that same town: Susanna, Abigail, Penelope, Anna, Samuel, Elisha, Martha, Priscella, Elizabeth and Mary. From this couple descended the Inmans of Burrillville, with whom this article particularly deals. Elisha Inman died June 23, 1809, aged eighty-nine years and nine months. Abigail, his wife, died Aug. 3, 1809, aged eighty-five years.

(IV) Samuel Inman, son of Elisha and Abigail, was born April 2, 1746, was a farmer and resided in the Mt. Pleasant section of what is now the town of Burrillville. There he died Aug. 9, 1822. He and his wife were members of the Society of Friends. He married March 19, 1772, Ann Buffum, of Smithfield, daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Osborne) Buffum, and to the union were born children as follows: Daniel, born Jan. 15, 1773; George, born Sept. 18, 1774, died Aug. 9, 1842; Samuel, born Dec. 23, 1776, died Nov. 3, 1778; Hannah, born Nov. 22, 1779, died unmarried Sept. 11, 1875; Buffum, born Feb. 17, 1783, died April 14, 1790; James, born Jan. 13, 1785; Edward, born Sept. 11, 1789, died Oct. 22, 1839; and Anna, born March 23, 1793, died Feb. 26, 1828. Ann Buffum, the mother of the above children, was born Nov. 27, 1751, and died Feb. 8, 1840.

(V) James Inman, son of Samuel and Ann, was born Jan. 13, 1785, and lived in the town of Burrillville where he died March 21, 1850. For twenty years and, perhaps, more he had been engaged in the manufacture of scythes at Inman Village, near Nasonville. Both he and his wife were members of the Society of Friends, and were particularly earnest in their religious devotion. Several of his sons became men of considerable prominence in their community. James Inman was married Sept. 1, 1808, to Nancy Thompson, of Smithfield, born April 9, 1792, daughter of Olney and Hyrena (Paine) Thompson. She survived her husband many years, and died Jan. 14, 1875, at Oakland, in the town of Burrillville, of which village she had been a resident for many years. The children born to James and Nancy Inman were: William Henry, born Aug. 27, 1810, died Sept. 29, 1811; William Albert, born July 21, 1812, died March 19, 1841; Dorcas, born April 27, 1815, was married Nov. 1, 1837, to Ezekiel Daniels, and died July 10, 1884; Francis Henry, born April 19, 1817, was married Oct. 10, 1840, to Hannah Marsh, and died in Worcester, Mass.; Hyrena Paine, born Sept. 24, 1819, died March 21, 1838; Mary, born March 7, 1822, died May 9, 1844; Betsey, born Sept. 19, 1824, died July 28, 1825; Oliver Arnold, born June 2, 1826; James Osborne, born July 4, 1829; Ann Buffum, born June 29, 1832, was married Nov. 1, 1848 to Horace Daniels, and resides at Worcester, Mass.; and Charles Barnes, born May 10, 1838, left after three years in the service of the at Bryant & Stratton's, and returned to dependence on his own resources, and thence to the city of New York, where he remained for some time.

O. Schmaier

At the age of twenty-one he married
Anna, daughter of Samuel and Mary.

From this couple were born children, particularly deals. Elisha Imman died Aug. 3, 1809, aged eighty-nine years and nine months. Abigail, his wife, died Aug. 3, 1809, aged fifty years.

Samuel Imman, son of Elisha and Abaigail, was born April 2, 1746, was a farmer and resided in the Mt. Pleasant section of what is now the town of Burrillville. He died Aug. 9, 1822. He and his wife were members of the Society of Friends.

From this couple were born children, and to the children were given the following names: Daniel, born
Aug. 15, 1774, died Sept. 18, 1774, died
Oct. 23, 1776, died Dec. 23, 1776, died
Jan. 23, 1779, died Feb. 17,
1781, died Jan. 13,
1783, died Oct. 22,
1793, died Feb.

From the above children were born children, and to the children were given the following names: Samuel and Ann, born in the town of Burillville, died Feb. 21, 1850. For several years he had been engaged in the lumber village, and his wife were members of the Society of Friends, and a particular devotion to the Society of Friends, and several children were born to them.

From the above children were born children, and to the children were given the following

Q. Schmau

married Avis Babcock, and resided in Providence, a member of the firm of Inman & Barse, and died Feb. 7, 1903.

(VI) Oliver Arnold Inman, son of James and Nancy (Thompson) Inman, and in his day one of the best known citizens of the town of Burrillville, was born in that town June 2, 1826, and received his education in the common schools, and was graduated at the Friends school in 1847. He then became a clerk in a hardware store in Worcester for one year, and from 1848 to 1854 engaged in farming, carrying on a lumber business in connection therewith. The next five years were spent by Mr. Inman in conducting a country store, also in being bookkeeper for James Callahan. In 1859 he became a bookkeeper for Charles H. Whipple, and this position he held until 1862. From then until 1873 he was assessor of internal revenue, and represented the town of Burrillville in the General Assembly for two years, being also president of the town council for four years. Mr. Inman for a long period in connection with his other duties, held many other offices. He was deputy sheriff for twenty-four years, auctioneer for twenty-eight years, moderator of the town meetings for thirty-three years, assessor of taxes for thirty-six years, and justice of the peace and notary public for forty years. Such was the confidence reposed in him because of his ability and integrity that besides electing him to these various positions his fellow-townsmen intrusted him with a great deal of their most important business. He was administrator of a large number of estates, was exceedingly well posted in the common branches of law, and his advice was much sought for in matters pertaining thereto. The townspeople universally called him "Squire" Inman. In his politics he was an active and uncompromising Republican. Oliver A. Inman was a man of strong force of character, somewhat brusque in manner and apparently possessed of a rough exterior, which concealed a kindly heart. He found great pleasure in the association of friends, and deeply enjoyed their society. He was, however, domestic in his tastes and inclinations, and his devotion to his family was only equaled by their devotion to him. Mr. Inman remained active in his many duties until the last, his final illness lasting a few days only, and he died March 2, 1904, and was buried in the cemetery at Pascoag. The funeral services were attended by one of the largest gatherings that has attended a service of the kind in the northern part of the State for some time and included prominent men from various sections of Rhode Island.

On Nov. 1, 1850, Mr. Inman was married to Matilda E., daughter of Bethel and Margaret (Davis) Beckwith, of Alstead, N. H., and she died Nov. 4, 1887, the mother of two children: William A., born Sept. 29, 1855; and Irene I., born Dec. 2, 1858, who married, March 24, 1881, Warren W. Logee, postmaster at Pascoag. Oliver A. Inman was married (second) November 13, 1888, to Angenette F., daughter of Amory and Susan (Taft) Thayer, of Douglas, Mass., and she died July 17, 1889.

(VII) WILLIAM ALBERT INMAN, son of Oliver A., was born Sept. 29, 1855, at Mohegan, and received his education in the schools of his native town and in the Friends School, Providence. At the age of seventeen years he began his experience in the woolen manufacturing business in the factory of his uncle, James O. Inman, beginning at the bottom and working through every department until he became a designer, as well as having a full knowledge of the business. He remained in the employ of his uncle until 1877, when he formed a partnership with Richard Driver and Luther Laraway, under the firm name of Driver, Laraway & Inman, and they operated the mill at Gazza, in the manufacture of worsteds, the firm meeting with success from the start. Wishing to engage in business alone, Mr. Inman withdrew from the firm, and in 1882 purchased the privilege and ruins at Graniteville, of the Graniteville Manufacturing Company, the old mill having burned down in 1879. Mr. Inman at once erected the present substantial plant there and continued his success in the manufacture of worsteds and woolens until 1899, when it was sold to the American Woolen Company. Mr. Inman became resident agent of this mill for the corporation, and two years later became agent of the Sheffield Mills in addition, these properties being now known as the Anchor Mills.

Mr. Inman has a large acquaintance in his line, and is known as a first-class business man who has met with success because of his individual worth and merit. In his political faith he is a stanch Republican, but has always declined public office. He is a 32d degree Mason, and is affiliated with Granite Lodge, No. 26, A. F. & A. M., at Harrisville, of which he is past master; of Union Chapter No. 5, R. A. M.; Woonsocket Council No. 4, R. & S. M., at Woonsocket; Calvary Commandery No. 13, Knights Templar, at Providence; the Rhode Island Consistory; and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine.

On Sept. 29, 1877, Mr. Inman was married in Pascoag to Edna F., daughter of Sylvester R. and Celia F. (Wood) Manchester, and to this union there have been born two sons: Fred Oliver, born May 4, 1880, who is treasurer of the Falcon Worsted Company, at Pascoag; and Edward Sylvester, April 5, 1882, who is president of that company. Messrs. Fred O. and Edward S. Inman are both 32d degree Masons, belonging to Granite Lodge, Union Chapter, Woonsocket Council, Woonsocket Commandery No. 24, Rhode Island Consistory and the Mystic Shrine.

(VI) James Osborne Inman, son of James and Nancy Thompson Inman, was born July 4, 1829, in Burrillville, R. I. On July 2, 1854, he married Ruhama P. Whaley, born Dec. 4, 1829, daughter of John and Lydia Whaley, of South Kingstown, R. I.; she died Nov. 4, 1893. This marriage was blessed with children as follows: Mary E., who married Albert E. Sweet, of Burrillville, and died March 7, 1884 in her twenty-eighth year; Olney T.; Orianna, who married Williston A. Cady, and died May 17, 1906, in Providence; Cora M., who married Roscoe S. Steere, of Providence; Isabel A., wife of Walter F. Slade of Hackensack, New Jersey; and Francis A., president of the Laurel Hill Yarn Company, who married Maud Shepard.

James O. Inman received his education in the district schools of Burrillville and the Friends School, Providence. While yet a young man he worked in a woolen mill at Mohegan, then conducted by a Mr. Callahan. Subsequently he leased the privilege at Bridgeton and manufactured satinets until about the time of the outbreak of the Civil war. In 1865 he purchased the Marsh estate, on which formerly stood the mill (burned in 1861) of George W. Marsh and son Edward, who were engaged from 1844 in manufacturing Kentucky yarns and fancy cassimeres, respectively. This was on Clear river, near Pascoag, the site formerly of an enterprise of the Sayleses, where had stood a forge from 1793, operated by Daniel Sayles. Mr. Inman, on purchasing the estate, erected thereon a substantial stone mill and outbuildings, and fitted the mill with four sets of woolen machinery, which were put in operation in the spring of 1866, for the manufacture of fine cassimeres, known in the market as "Clear River Woolens." In 1877 an addition was built to the mill, making it 52 x 150 feet, and two additional sets of machinery were put in, and still later another, making seven sets in all, giving it a capacity for consuming 400,000 pounds per annum, and employing approximately 150 hands. In 1893 the factory and property of the J. O. Inman Company was leased to the firm of W. F. Slade & Co., who operated it for several years under the name of the Clear River Woolen Mills. Later the mill was leased to the Saxondale Worsted Company, who were operating it when it burned. In 1904 the Clear River Mills Corporation was formed and erected a new mill.

James O. Inman made what was probably the most honest class of woolens that was made in New England in his day. A most conscientious, straightforward and upright man, he would use nothing but the best of material in his product. One prominent characteristic of this gentleman was his method of conducting his business, whereby he knew the inside workings thereof in every detail. He would not, however, discuss his business affairs, nor would he permit his employes to discuss on the outside what had occurred within the mill. From January, 1885, until his death, Mr. Inman was president of the Pascoag National Bank, was a director in the Industrial Trust Company at Providence, and of the old Providence & Springfield railroad. He was a member of the committee of the Friends school at Providence, and took a deep and active interest in the success of that institution.

He was a man of the highest integrity, and held the confidence, esteem and respect of those with whom he came in business contact and those who knew him socially. His death occurred at his home in Burrillville, July 5, 1890, and he was buried in the cemetery at Pascoag.

(VII) OLNEY T. INMAN, son of James O. and Ruhama P. (Whaley) Inman, was born Nov. 25, 1859, in Burrillville, and passed his boyhood in his native town. His education in main was received in the Friends School at Providence, from which he graduated in 1877. After his school days were over he entered the mills of his father, and there learned the business under his direction, passing through the different grades. He became superintendent of the mill in 1884, and two years later, Jan. 1, 1886, was made a partner in the business. From that time until the death of the father in July, 1890, the business was conducted under the firm name of J. O. Inman & Son, and in that year was incorporated as the J. O. Inman Manufacturing Company, O. T. Inman becoming treasurer. When the Clear River Mills Corporation was formed, for the manufacture of yarns, Mr. Inman became agent for the concern. He is also treasurer of the Laurel Hill Yarn Company, incorporated in 1902. Mr. Inman is a Republican in politics, and has been quite prominent in the affairs of the town. He has served as president of the town council, member of the school committee, and one year as a member of the General Assembly. Upon the death of his father he succeeded him as president of the Pascoag National Bank, serving in that capacity until the institution was absorbed by the Industrial Trust Company, and he also succeeded his father as a director of the latter. He had served for many years on the board of directors of the National Bank. Mr. Inman is connected fraternally with Granite Lodge No. 26, A. F. & A. M., at Harrisville, of which he is past master; Union Chapter and Woonsocket Council at Woonsocket, and Woonsocket Commandery No. 24, Knights Templar. He is one of the leading and most active members of the Laurel Hill Methodist Episcopal Church at Bridgeton, having served as chairman of the board of trustees, and he is now filling the office of steward in that church.

Mr. Olney T. Inman was married in 1886 to Leanora M. Salisbury, daughter of Edward M. and Mary A. P. (Hawkes) Salisbury of Pascoag, and to this union have been born three children: Elsie Salisbury, James Olney and Edward Salisbury.

ABNER ATWOOD. From John Atwood, of Plymouth, Mass., who is said to have been a man of prominence in the affairs of the town and to have accumulated considerable property, have descended many of the name who have been distinguished in the political, business and social walks of life, among these being the late venerable Deacon Abner Atwood, for years president and general manager of The Atwood, Crawford Company, a manufacturing concern of Pawtucket, R. I. Mr. Atwood descended from the Plympton-Carver branch of the old Plymouth (Mass.) family of Atwoods, his descent from John Atwood, as given in the recent history of Pawtucket, being through Nathaniel, Nathaniel (2), Nathaniel (3), Joshua and Joshua Atwood (2). These generations follow in regular order.

(I) W. T. Davis, in his "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," says: The various branches of the Atwood family of that town are descended from John Wood, of Plymouth, 1643; and there was a John Atwood in Plymouth in 1636 who died without children. Pope, another authority, has John Wood, or Atwood, Plymouth, proprietor, 1636; juryman, 1638; able to bear arms, 1643; married Sarah Masterson. John, of Plymouth, 1643, called Wood, alias Atwood, married Sarah, daughter of Richard Masterson, and their children were: John, born March 4, 1649; Nathaniel, born in February, 1651; Isaac, born Feb. 27, 1653; Mary, who married Rev. John Holmes, of Duxbury, and Maj. William Bradford; Sarah, who married John Fallowell; Abigail, who married Samuel Leonard; Elizabeth; and Hannah, who married Richard Cooper.

(II) Nathaniel Atwood, son of John, born in February, 1651, had by wife Mary children as follows: John, born in 1684; Elizabeth, 1687; Joanna, 1689; Mary, 1691; Nathaniel, 1693; and Isaac, 1695.

(III) Nathaniel Atwood (2), son of Nathaniel, born in 1693, married (first) Mary, daughter of Francis Adams, and (second) Abigail. Mr. Atwood lived in Plympton, Mass. His children were: Mary, born in 1723; Nathaniel, born in 1725; Francis, born in 1728 (all to the first marriage); Sarah; Mercy; Ebenezer, born in 1735; Keziah, born in 1737; William, born in 1740; Joseph, born in 1741; and Ichabod.

(IV) Nathaniel Atwood (3), son of Nathaniel (2), married Lydia Boulton. They lived in Plympton, Mass., and their children were: Abner, Levi, Nathaniel, Joshua, Mary (who married a Shurtleff), Joanna (who married Aaron Carey), Mercy (who married David Shurtleff) and Hulda (who married a Vaughn).

(V) Joshua Atwood, son of Nathaniel (3), born in 1769, in Carver, Mass., died there in 1848, in the house in which his birth occurred. He was a farmer all his life. Mr. Atwood married Polly Benson, born in 1773, who died in 1857, and their children were: Joshua; Warren, who went West; Zenas, a carpenter, who died in Providence; Seth, a farmer, who died in Wareham, Mass.; Polly, wife of Nelson Gammons; and Elias, a cooper, who died in Kansas.

(VI) Joshua Atwood (2), son of Joshua, born in 1794 in Carver, Mass., died Sept. 26, 1880, in Plymouth, Mass. He married Hannah Thomas, of Middleboro, Mass., daughter of Isaiah and Hannah (Shaw) Thomas, the latter the daughter of Moses Shaw, of Middleboro. Mr. Atwood was engaged in peddling, although he had been an agriculturist in Carver, Mass., but was incapacitated for farm work on account of a felon on his hand. Although a member of no church Mr. Atwood was a Christian, and was a hard-working, industrious man and a good citizen. His children were: Sarah, the widow of Alvarado Wrightington, of Taunton, Mass., resides in Brockton; Abner is mentioned below; Henry Lewis died at the age of eighteen years; Hannah T., who died in Plymouth, was the wife of Ephraim Churchill, of Plymouth; Joshua was killed in his first battle, the battle of the Wilderness, by a sharpshooter; Thomas, a bolter by trade, who served in the Union army during the Civil war, married May Etta Berry; Frederick M., who has been engineer for the Douglas Shoe Company ever since beginning to work, married Lucy Terry, sister-in-law of ex-Governor Douglas, of Massachusetts; and Isaiah Francis, a stove molder, who died in 1893 in Plymouth, married Thankful Holmes, of Plymouth.

(VII) Abner Atwood, son of Joshua (2), was born March 5, 1825, in Carver, Mass., in the house that had sheltered three successive generations of the family, and his youth was passed like that of most boys of his time in New England towns. He attended the district schools and assisted with the work on the home farm until he had attained his nineteenth year, being also engaged, during the summers, in shoemaking at East Middleboro, for Jacob Atwood. At the age of nineteen years he went to Taunton, Mass., and entered the employ of William Mason & Co., then one of the largest cotton machinery building concerns in the country, to learn the trade of machinist, serving for over five years, at the end of which time he took charge of the pumps and connections departments of the Taunton Locomotive Company. He served at this work until 1858, having several mechanics under him, and in the year last named formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, the late James O. Draper, in old Bedford, Mass., for the manufacture of soaps, the firm name being Draper & Atwood. In 1862 this firm removed to Pawtucket, and the business was carried on successfully at the latter place until 1866, in which year, on the death of the junior partner of the firm of R. & G. Cushman, Mr. Atwood was invited by the surviving partner, his brother-in-law, to take an interest in the business. Until 1875 the style of the firm was Cushman, Phillips & Co., but in that year Mr. Cushman withdrew and the firm became Atwood, Crawford & Company, Mr. Atwood taking into partnership John H. and Fred C. Crawford. In 1890 this company was incorporated as The Atwood, Crawford Company, Mr. Atwood being made president and manager of the company, positions which he retained for some years, relinquishing the active management of the company for a few years previous to his death. The firm employs over sixty hands, and does general wood-turning of every description, spools for silk and thread being their specialty.

In early life, while living in Taunton, Mass., Mr. Atwood was a member of the Good Templars and the Sons of Temperance, and he was always an active worker in the cause of temperance. He was a charter member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association. Mr. Atwood was first a Whig in politics, later became a Free-Soiler, then a Know-Nothing, and finally a Republican. He served as a member of the Pawtucket school committee for about six years. Mr. Atwood was very active and in full possession of all of his faculties, in fact he was remarkably vigorous for his years, having been over eighty at the time of his death, which occurred Nov. 23, 1906. In the years that he was in business in Pawtucket he became known as a substantial man, of unquestionable integrity, and he was respected and esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

Mr. Atwood was a member of the Central Falls Congregational Church, and served as deacon thereof, from 1884. He was superintendent of the Sunday-school at Adamsdale, Mass., for a period of twenty-one years, during which time he drove to service every Sunday, rain or shine. Mr. Atwood was very fond of travel, and every year he and his wife went to Florida, where Mr. Atwood had spent eighteen winters.

On May 21, 1851, Mr. Atwood was united in marriage with Lydia Ann Draper, the estimable daughter of Ebenezer Draper, of Attleboro, Massachusetts.

BROWNELL (Line of Stephen Fish Brownell, of Smithfield, R. I.). The Brownell family is one of long and honorable standing in New England, its coming to this section reaching back 250 and more years, to the infancy of the colonies. The Rhode Island-Massachusetts branch, more specific the Little Compton-Westport (Mass.) family, of which this article deals, has allied itself by marriage to the first families of New England, and in several lines its posterity trace their ancestry to the Pilgrims of the "Mayflower," and others who arrived soon after. Many of the name, too, have made for themselves enduring places in the history of their country. Of this branch of the family Major Sylvester Brownell of the Revolution, the Rt. Rev. Thomas Church Brownell, D. D., LL. D., the first president of Trinity College and third Protestant Episcopal bishop of Connecticut, and the latter's nephew, Henry Howard Brownell, author and poet, have brought honor to the name. Dr. Brownell, a brother of Dr. Thomas Church and of Major Sylvester, was long a prominent physician of Providence.

Here in Providence the name today stands, as it has long stood, at the head of leading business concerns of the city, and as well is represented creditably in the legal profession.

Stephen Brownell, of the representatives in Providence of this branch of the Brownell family, is a descendant in the seventh generation from Thomas Brownell, the first American ancestor of the Brownell family, from whom his lineage is through George, Joseph, Joseph (2), Stephen and Stephen Fish Brownell. These generations in detail and in the order given follow.

(I) Thomas Brownell came from Derbyshire, England. The Christian name of his wife was Ann. He was of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1647, on May 20th of which year he was appointed "Water Bailie" for the Colony. He was commissioner in 1655, 1661, 1662 and 1663, and Deputy in 1664. He died about 1665. His children were: Mary, Sarah, Martha, George, William, Thomas, Robert and Ann.

(II) George Brownell, born in May, 1646, married Dec. 4, 1673, Susanna Pearce, born Nov. 20, 1652, daughter of Richard and Susanna (Wright) Pearce, and was of Portsmouth. He was deputy in 1699, and 1702, and assistant from 1706 to 1711, inclusive. He died April 20, 1718, and his widow passed away Dec. 24, 1743. Their children were: Susanna, born Jan. 25, 1676; Sarah, June 14, 1681; Mary, Dec. 8, 1683; Martha, Feb. 18, 1686; Thomas, June 1, 1688; Joseph, Dec. 5, 1690; Waite, Oct. 3, 1693; and Stephen, Dec. 3, 1695.

(III) Joseph Brownell, born Dec. 5, 1690, in Portsmouth, R. I., married Jan. 5, 1717, Ruth, born Feb. 12, 1698, daughter of George and Philadelphia (Estes) Cornell, and was of Portsmouth, possessing the home estate. He was Deputy in 1720, 1722, 1724 and 1725. He died Oct. 5, 1757. His children were: George, born June 23, 1718; Joseph, April 26, 1720; Thomas, Oct. 23, 1722; Waite, Feb. 6, 1724-25; Philadelphia, Dec. 15, 1726; Martha, March 17, 1728-29; and George (2), Sept. 27, 1736.

(IV) Joseph Brownell (2), born April 26, 1720, in Portsmouth, married Dec. 22, 1742, Rebecca, daughter of Abiel and Eleanor (Waite) Tripp, and was of Portsmouth. He served as deputy in 1764-65, and as assistant in 1755, 1757 and 1758. He died March 10, 17— . His children were: Stephen, born Feb. 12, 1743-44; Jonathan, May 30, 1746; Nathan, Feb. 7, 1747-48; Oliver, Feb. 17, 1749; Philadelphia, May 17, 1752; Susanna, March 17, 1754; Mary, Dec. 6, 1757; Amey, Sept. 8, 1760; Thomas, Dec. 16, 1762; and Rebecca, born Feb. 19, 1765.

(V) Stephen Brownell, born Feb. 12, 1743-44, in Portsmouth, died Nov. 23, 1815. He married Dec. 7, 1768, Susanna, born Nov. 24, 1749, daughter of David and Jemima (Tallman) Fish (the latter the daughter of a well-known German physician).

Stephen Brownell

the first of the family to come to America, and he was the first to settle in Attleboro. He was born in England, and came to America in 1638, settling in Attleboro. He was a farmer and a merchant, and was one of the founders of the town. He was married to Mary, and they had several children. He died in 1688, and was buried in the old churchyard. His grave is still there, and is a fine example of the early colonial architecture. The church itself is a fine example of the same style, and is one of the best preserved of its kind in the state. He died in 1740, and was buried in the old churchyard. His grave is still there, and is a fine example of the early colonial architecture. The church and churchyard are a fine example of the early colonial architecture, and are a place where many of the best of the early colonial architecture can be seen. The church was built in 1638, and has since been the center of the community. The churchyard is a beautiful place, and is a fine example of the early colonial architecture. It is a place where many of the founders of the town are buried, and it is a place where many of the best of the early colonial architecture can be seen.

His son, George Brownell, born in May, 1660, died Oct. 4, 1673. Susanna Pearce, born in 1682, daughter of Richard and Susanna Pearce, and was of Portsmouth. He was married in 1660 and 1702, at least, from 1700 to 1708 inclusive. He died April 20, 1718, and was buried in the old churchyard. His children were: Susanna, born Jan. 25, 1670; Sarah, June 1, 1675; Mary, Dec. 8, 1683; Martha, Feb. 18, 1688; Thomas, June 1, 1688; Joseph, Dec. 5, 1690; George, Oct. 3, 1693; and Stephen, Dec. 3, 1695.

His son, Joseph Brownell, born Dec. 5, 1690, Portsmouth, R. I., married Jan. 5, 1717, Ruth, Feb. 12, 1698, daughter of George and Philalele (Eliot) Cornell, and was of Portsmouth, possessing the home estate. He was Deputy in 1720, 1724 and 1725. He died Oct. 5, 1757. His children were: George, born June 23, 1718; Joseph, April 20, 1720; Thomas, Oct. 23, 1722; Waite, Feb. 17, 1724-25; Philalele, Dec. 15, 1720; Martha, March 17, 1725-26; and George (2), Sept. 2, 1728.

His son, Joseph Brownell (2), born April 20, 1720, married Dec. 22, 1742, Rebecca, daughter of Abiel and Eleanor (Waite) Tripp, and was of Portsmouth. He served as deputy in 1744, 1745, 1755, 1757 and 1758. He died in 1758. His children were: Jonathan, born 1743-44; Jonathan, May 30, 1747-48; Oliver, Feb. 17, 1752; Susanna, March 17, 1752; Amey, Sept. 8, 1760; and Rebecca, born Feb. 19, 1762.

His son, Stephen Brownell, born Feb. 12, 1743-44, married Nov. 23, 1815. He married Susanna, born Nov. 24, 1749, daughter of John and Joanna (Tallman) Fish (the latter was daughter of a well-known German physician).

Stephen Brownell

Mrs. Brownell died Oct. 20, 1820. Their children were: Rebecca, born Feb. 26, 1770; David, Feb. 16, 1772; John, Sept. 12, 1775; Thomas, March 7, 1778; Stephen Fish, Dec. 1, 1785; and perhaps others. The father suffered through the Revolutionary war by the depredations of the British.

(VI) Stephen Fish Brownell, born Dec. 1, 1785, in Portsmouth, married May 14, 1809, Susanna White, by whom he had no issue. He married (second) Nov. 24, 1811, Mary White, a sister of Susanna, and both daughters of Samuel and Hannah (Aldrich) White, of Mendon, Mass. Mr. Brownell was a carpenter by trade, and while yet a boy of fourteen years he went to Smithfield, R. I., where he was both carpenter and husbandman. His death occurred April 28, 1865, in Smithfield. His children by his second marriage were: (1) Hannah Aldrich, born Feb. 12, 1813, married May 29, 1837, W. B. Mowry, and resided at Boston, Mass., where she died; she was buried in her family lot near Union Village, town of North Smithfield. Two children survive, Oscar B. Mowry, a prominent lawyer of Boston, and Elizabeth D. Mowry. (2) Susan Fish, born Feb. 7, 1815, married Aug. 17, 1840, George Darling and resided at Detroit, Mich., where she died April 25, 1906; she was buried in the Brownell lot near Union Village. She was a widow for many years and was survived by a daughter and a son. (3) Isaac Albert, born May 6, 1817, married Polly, daughter of Ami B. Young, a government architect. Isaac A. Brownell was a merchant in Boston but spent the latter years of his life at Washington, D. C. He died in June, 1864. (4) Lucy, born Jan. 10, 1820, died Sept. 13, 1821. (5) Stephen was born March 14, 1822. (6) Samuel, born April 2, 1825, died May 2, 1827. (7) Mary White, born Oct. 15, 1828, never married and resided at the homestead in Union Village. (8) Dexter Low, Oct. 26, 1831, is a retired woolen manufacturer and resides in Providence.

(VII) Stephen Brownell, born March 14, 1822, in Smithfield, R. I., received a good common school and academic education, attending the excellent academy at Union Village. In young manhood he located at Providence, engaging in the commission business. He was instrumental in forming in 1859 the firm of Goff, Cranston & Brownell, the business of which was soon extended all over the country, and as well into Europe. The Union Wadding Company, the outgrowth of the business of the firm of Goff, Cranston & Brownell, became the largest manufacturing concern of cotton wadding in the world. Through his active business years after 1879 Mr. Brownell devoted himself to the care of his accumulated real estate. He has been prominent in a number of financial, educational and philanthropic enterprises. Since 1873 he has been trustee of the Butler Hospital for the Insane, and but one other has served as long. He was a director of the Mechanics National Bank for many years.

Mr. Brownell was married Nov. 12, 1846, at Grace Church, Providence, by Rev. Bishop Henshaw, to Henrietta, daughter of Seth Hunt, Jr., a merchant of Providence. She died in March, 1899, and was buried in the family burial plot in the North Burial Ground, Providence, where also the children who have died are buried. To Stephen and Henrietta (Hunt) Brownell were born children as follows: (1) Isabella married George H. Ames, D. D. S., and has one child, Stephen Brownell. (2) Henrietta died aged ten months. (3) Henrietta (2) married Thomas A. Jenckes, and has two children, Thomas A. Jr., and Stephen Hunt. (4) Seth Hunt married Harriet, daughter of Alfred Smith, of Newport, R. I., and is deceased. (5) Stephen Fish is deceased. (6) Winthrop, who died March 11, 1905, married Amey Dorrance Mauran, (daughter of Gen. Edward C. and Mary D. W. Mauran), who died in April, 1905, the mother of two children, Mary Gertrude and Henrietta.

WHITE (Line of Mary of Mendon, Mass., and Smithfield, R. I.). The White family, like that of Brownell, with which it is allied by marriage, as appears in the foregoing, is one ancient and prominent in New England, and, like the Brownell, has formed alliances with some of the leading families of this section.

(1) Thomas White, the immigrant settler and progenitor of the family here considered, the Mendon-Smithfield branch of the ancient Weymouth-Mendon family, came over with the Pilgrims as early as 1636, in which year and 1637 he was of Weymouth. He was a freeman of 1636, a representative in that year, also in 1637, 1657 and again in 1670. His age as given in 1659 was sixty years. He died in the year 1679, leaving children: Joseph, of Mendon; Samuel; Thomas, of Braintree; Hannah and Ebenezer.

Perhaps the more notable men of the early generations of the posterity of Thomas White were Hon. Samuel and the two Rev. Ebenezer Whites; the elder Ebenezer, a graduate of Harvard, 1692, was minister at Bridgehampton, Long Island, from 1695 to 1748; and the younger Ebenezer, a graduate of Yale College, 1733, was for upward of twenty-five years, minister of the church at Danbury, Conn. Three of his sons were graduated from Yale. The two Ebenezers were uncle and nephew, the elder Ebenezer being a son of Ebenezer and grandson of Thomas White, the immigrant; while the younger Ebenezer was a son of Deacon Thomas White and grandson of Capt. Ebenezer White. And Hon. Samuel White, of Taunton, was speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives at the time of the Stamp Act, whose circular as speaker called together the first congress which assembled at New York in October, 1765, an act which was deemed by some to involve the crime of high treason—by others as the first official act of the American Revolution. Another of this race of Whites under consideration, one of a later generation and of close kin to Mrs. Mary (White) Brownell and one taking the name of both parents, was Adams White, Esq., cashier of the Windham County (Connecticut) Bank in the earlier part of the nineteenth century, a most worthy man and citizen, highly respected and esteemed.

(II) Capt. Joseph White, son of Thomas, married Sept. 19, 1660, Lydia Rogers. After the birth of one of their children at Weymouth, which occurred Dec. 17, 1662, they removed with the first settlers to Mendon, where he was a man of considerable prominence, serving in various public capacities, and where likewise for generations his posterity lived and prospered, some filling responsible positions of trust.

It is a matter of history that during King Philip's war, 1675-76, the town of Mendon was burned and abandoned. There is evidence that no municipal government was organized in Mendon until after the war, which was essentially terminated with the death of Philip, Aug. 12, 1676. At the first town meeting held after the abandonment of the town, Jan. 3, 1680, Sergeant Joseph White, as he was then styled, was one of the selectmen chosen. He was elected to that office in 1681, 1685, 1686, 1687, 1688 and 1689, being styled in the last named year "Captain." His name is connected with other public trusts, evidencing his standing in the community and his capability. In 1682 he was one of the committee appointed to secure a minister, and again in 1683 he was one of a committee on town business. He and one or more of his sons were for years on the list of contributors to the minister's salary. On June 24, 1686, he was nominated by his fellow-townsmen as captain of the householders and soldiers of Mendon above the age of twenty-one, and his name sent to the governor and council and by them the act was confirmed Jan. 29, 1689. In this military connection it is of interest to note that on June 24, 1675, just after the attack of the Indians on Swansea, and Plymouth Colony's appeal for aid, on the authority of the General Court, Capt. Daniel Henchman in command of a company of 100 men raised for the protection of the settlements entered upon a campaign through the country threatened by the Indians. From an official report of his maneuvers and letters is extracted the following from its bearing on the town of Mendon and the White family: "Capt. Henchman marches to Mendon, arrives on the 2d (September, 1775) at 4 p. m., and writes immediately that 'they arrived all safe and found the towne in like condition' and 'pressed four horses for scouts to send to Hassonemeset' [Grafton]. He found the inhabitants (Finds the Garrison in charge of Sergt. White, in whose charge he leaves it) 'drawn into two houses,' and 'in a pestered condition,' and holds frequent meetings with them in order to prevail upon them to remain at Mendon contented. * * *." [See New England

Historical and Genealogical Register, 37, page 71].

Captain White was one of the petitioners to the General Court in 1685 to prohibit the sale of intoxicant drinks to the Indians. He may have served later on as selectman and in other official relations, as Joseph White, Jr., was a number of times selectman, and it is not in all instances easy to distinguish between them. Captain White and Joseph White, Jr., sometimes styled Sergeant, and also Thomas White, another of his sons or kinsmen, all at various times shared in the divisions of the proprietors' lands, which extended through years. Joseph White, Jr., was constable of the town in 1690. He or another Joseph was one of a committee in 1715 to secure a minister, which resulted in the selection of Rev. Joseph Dorris, the fourth minister of the town, he a graduate of Harvard College. A Joseph White was surveyor of Mendon in 1719 and he or another Joseph had laid out in May, 1669, 200 acres of land, which included most if not all of the present town of Woonsocket, R. I. Thomas White was elected constable in 1701, and selectman in 1704. In 1708 he was one of those chosen to instruct the selectmen. He, or another Thomas styled Sergeant Thomas, was town clerk in 1719, 1720, 1725, 1726, 1727 and 1729. And during the several wars of the Colonial period the Mendon Whites were found in line of duty, participants in them.

After the removal of Joseph White to Mendon he had, according to Savage, these children: Samuel, (born Feb. 14, 1667), John, Ebenezer, Experience, Hannah, Thomas, Ann, Joseph (2), Lydia and Mary. There were eleven in all, ten of these being legatees, in the will (1698) of their Uncle Samuel, who left no issue.

(III or IV) Now as to the next ancestor of Mrs. Mary (White) Brownell, Joseph White, Jr., is set forth in the chart of the family as such, he marrying Lydia Adams, who died May 8, 1729, but according to Mr. Elisha Thayer, of Dedham, in his Family Memorial (1835), Thomas White is made this ancestor (the former version differing only in the excess of the latter of one generation, Joseph, Jr.), the latter of whom married Deborah. Their children were: Peregrine, born Jan. 11, 1711; Seth, Sept. 22, 1713; Lydia, Jan. 16, 1716; Hopestill, July 15, 1717; Samuel, May 7 (or 17), 1719; Deborah, Feb. 16, 1722; Nathan, Jan. 31, 1732; Joseph, April 29, 1733; Phebe, who died July 23, 1734; and Asa, born May 11, 1735.

(IV or V) Samuel White, son of Thomas, born May 17, 1719, married in 1744, Abigail Adams and their children were: Adams, born Feb. 17, 1745; Samuel, March 24, 1747; Nathan, June 27, 1750; Barach, May 3, 1752; Margery, Oct. 10, 1754; Artemus, March 3, 1757; and Antipas, March 12, 1760. The mother of these died Aug. 7, 1798.

(V or VI) Samuel White (2), son of Samuel (1), born March 24, 1747, married Hannah, born in February, 1754, daughter of Caleb and Mary (Arnold) Aldrich. They were residents of Smithfield, R. I., where they died, he May 12, 1819, and she, Oct. 4, 1809, and among their children were: Susanna and Mary, both of whom respectively married Stephen Fish Brownell.

(VI or VII) Mary White, daughter of Samuel (2), married Nov. 24, 1811, Stephen Fish Brownell, of Mendon, Mass., and Smithfield, Rhode Island.*

(VII) MARY WHITE BROWNELL (deceased), Union Village, Smithfield, R. I. Miss Brownell was next to the youngest of the six children (two of whom are living, Stephen and Dexter L., both of Providence) of Stephen Fish and Mary (White) Brownell, was born Oct. 15, 1828, and died Sept. 8, 1907, at her home on the Great Road at the Old Bank in the town of Smithfield, in the house in which she was born and which her father built.

The following tribute to her memory over the signature of S. M. S. appeared in the Woonsocket Evening Call of September, 1907:

"Miss Brownell had been an invalid for the last five years and has at times suffered extremely, but when partially relieved from pain, she ever welcomed most cordially her friends and acquaintances. Her home was very attractive as she had unusually good taste and during all these years of invalidism even a stranger brought by some friend would be welcomed graciously and would go away impressed by the queenly presence of this remarkable woman. She was very appreciative; there were always fresh flowers about her, the gift of friends, and she enjoyed the distinguishing characteristics of the different flowers.

"Her experience had been wide, her knowledge was varied and she was possessed of a large amount of useful information. Her counsel was sought and given sympathetically. She enjoyed books and her conversation showed that she was interested in all that pertains to life, philosophy, religion or practical living.

"She had an excellent memory and her knowledge of local history was great and much sought for. She remembered humorous as well as important incidents. She was ex-president of the Round Table Club and honorary member of the Woonsocket Fortnightly Club.

"We have spoken of her queenly presence; she was very tall and a remarkably well proportioned woman with noble features and all these later years her beautiful wavy hair was a crown of white. The late Judge George A. Wilbur once said that the finest looking couple he ever saw was in Louisville, Ky., when General Sherman walked across the hall with Miss Brownell on his arm. All her life she was a most hospitable hostess and it is not common for a woman in private life to entertain so many of her friends in her own home. She was fond of life, and young and old enjoyed her. On her last birthday she said to one of her many callers: 'How lovely it is to have lived so many years in this beautiful world.' This summer she followed, day by day, the itinerary of one of her young friends who was abroad, reading about the places on the particular day.

"She was a true neighbor, helping in the joys of life and comforting in sickness; she lent herself to the lives of those about her. On a late Christmas she sent out little gifts to seventy different homes. Only a day or two ago she received a call from a man eighty years of age, who attended the academy at the Old Bank when she was his scholar there. The academy building stood nearly opposite Miss Brownell's home. She attended Miss Southwick's school held there and later that of James Bushee. Miss Brownell is the last of that distinguished coterie of women who have lived at the Old Bank Village for seventy-five years in their ancestral home—women of rare intelligence and character. No one of them has entered more generally in the thoughts of her neighbors, none will be more greatly missed or sincerely mourned."

On Wednesday afternoon following her death the funeral of Miss Brownell was held at her late home and from the house her father had built—the house in which she was born and from whose portals have been borne to their last resting place the mortal remains of her brother Isaac A., of Washington, D. C., of her sister, Hannah A. (Mrs. Warren B. Mowry, of Boston), and only a few months ago of her sister Susan F. (Mrs. George Darling, of Detroit, Mich.)—were carried to the cemetery near Union Village and buried in the Brownell family lot thus all that was mortal of Mary White Brownell.

The following tribute was paid the memory of Miss Brownell by the Woonsocket Fortnightly Club, bearing date of Nov. 15, 1907, from Woonsocket, R. I., signed by the committee, Sarah Marble Shedd and Dency A. Wilbur:

"Mary White Brownell, an honored member of the Woonsocket Fortnightly Club, was born October 15, 1828.

"About a hundred years ago her father built the house in which he reared his family and which Miss Brownell kept as her home during her long life.

"Miss Brownell was a woman of queenly presence and great grace of manner, of marked intellectuality, deeply interested in local history and possessed of a large amount of useful information. She loved life. She extended a generous and charming hospitality. Having lived so many years and constantly made friends—for all who met her felt her kindly interest and wished to meet her again—she had during her later life, what falls to the lot of few, a very large circle of appreciative friends—young and old, rich and poor.

"Miss Brownell died September 8, 1907, at her home on the Great Road in Union Village, after a long and painful illness, borne with heroic Christian fortitude.

"During her active membership in the Woonsocket Fortnightly Club, her unflinching interest in whatever contributed to the benefit of its members or to the betterment of civil affairs was shown by her constant and efficient works for the club.

"Each of us will miss the large-hearted, whole-souled friend, who loved to dispense good things, who helped all with whom she came in contact by her catholicity of spirit, her wise counsel, her tender sympathy and her appreciation of the good and beautiful in life.

"We desire to place on record this simple testimonial in memory of our valued friend."

Another tribute expressive of the beautiful and useful life of Miss Brownell was paid by the Round Table Club, of which she had been president, and still another by "A Friend" of her girlhood appeared in the Woonsocket Evening Call of Sept. 17, 1907.

OBADIAH BROWN, one of the best known men in Rhode Island in his time, and a man who stood foremost among the advocates of practical up-to-date husbandry in all its branches, enjoyed a high reputation as an authority on agricultural subjects generally. He represented in the broadest and deepest sense throughout life, a gentleman of the soil. He was especially well-known everywhere in New England as a stock raiser—the greater part of his life being spent in raising high grade cattle, chiefly Ayrshires.

Mr. Brown belonged to one of the oldest and most prominent families in Rhode Island history. The Browns have been closely and conspicuously interwoven in the history of Providence since the coming of Chad Brown in 1638, a leader in the Colony, one of the committee to formulate the first written form of government for the town, and the first settled pastor of the Baptist Church. James and Obadiah Brown, of the fourth generation, were the founders of the extensive commercial house of the Browns, which in the succeeding generation was conducted by the four Brown Brothers—Nicholas, Moses, John and Joseph—of commercial note and wealth. In the succeeding generation came Nicholas Brown (2), an eminent merchant and philanthropist, whose munificent gifts made possible the great Brown University of today, as well as some of the great public institutions of Providence, and from whom the University derived its name. Obadiah Brown was a representative of the seventh generation, from Rev. Chad Brown, the line of descent being shown by the following in chronological order:

(I) Chad Brown, accompanied by his wife Elizabeth, son John, then eight years of age, and perhaps his younger sons, emigrated from England in the ship "Martin," which arrived in Boston, Mass., July, 1638. He soon removed to Providence, where he became at once a leader in the Colony and one of the most valued citizens. In 1640 he was one of a committee who reported to Providence Colony the first written form of government, which was adopted and continued in force until 1644, when Roger Williams returned from England with the first charter. In 1642 Chad Brown was ordained as the first settled pastor of the Baptist Church. His wife was Elizabeth, and their children were: John, James, Jeremiah, Judah and Daniel.

(II) John Brown, born in 1630, died about 1706. He married Mary, daughter of Rev. Obadiah and Catherine Holmes, of Newport, R. I., and resided in Providence at the North End, in the house near the one afterward occupied by his son, Elder James, near the junction of North Main and Randall streets. Like his father he was a surveyor as well as a Baptist Elder. He served in various important capacities, was moderator, member of the town council, deputy in the legislature, etc. His children were: Sarah, John, James, Obadiah, Martha, Mary and Deborah.

(III) James Brown, born in 1666, died Oct. 28, 1732. He married Dec. 17, 1691, Mary, born Dec. 17, 1671, daughter of Andrew and Mary (Tew) Harris. She died Aug. 18, 1736. Mr. Brown served almost continuously as a member of the town council from 1705 to 1725, and was town treasurer from 1714 to 1718. He was pastor or elder of the First Baptist Church, succeeding in 1726 Rev. Ebenezer Jenckes, and he remained pastor until his death in 1732. His children were: John, James, Joseph, Martha, Andrew (born Sept. 20, 1706), Mary, Anna, Obadiah, Jeremiah and Elisha.

(IV) Joseph Brown, son of James, born May 5, 1701, died May 8, 1778. He was a farmer by occupation, and resided in North Providence. He married (first) Martha Field, daughter of William, of Field's Point; she died April 19, 1736, aged twenty-six years, leaving one son, Gideon, born in 1726, who married Ruth Rutenberg, daughter of David and Hannah (Jenks) Rutenberg, and their children settled in Johnston (See sketch of Pardon Fenner Brown). Joseph Brown married (second) Abigail Brown, who died May 23, 1784, in seventy-third year. Their children were: Elisha, Andrew and Joseph.

(V) Andrew Brown, son of Joseph and Abigail, born July 30, 1750, died Jan. 8, 1832. He followed farming in North Providence. On Jan. 27, 1773, he married (first) Dorcas Knight, daughter of Richard Knight, of Cranston, R. I. He married (second) Widow Susie Westcott, and (third), April 14, 1805, Sarah (Humphrey) Shorey, widow of Miles Shorey. To Andrew and Dorcas (Knight) Brown were born the following children: Abigail Brown, born Sept. 30, 1773, married Emor Whipple, and settled in North Providence; Waite, born Sept. 10, 1775, married Asahel Waterman, and settled in Johnston; Mary, born May 10, 1778; Sarah Brown, born May 20, 1780; Jeremiah, born June 14, 1782, married Esther, daughter of Deacon John Whipple, and went to Vermont; Joseph, born May 10, 1784, died in 1803; Ethan, born Oct. 20, 1785, went to Vermont; and Richard, born June 17, 1789, was united in marriage with Penelope Farnum.

(VI) Richard Brown, son of Andrew and Dorcas (Knight) Brown, was born June 17, 1789. On Feb. 23, 1812, he married Penelope Farnum, born April 12, 1783, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Congdon) Farnum. Their children were: Sarah Ann, born Feb. 11, 1813; Martha Ann, born Feb. 16, 1815; Dorcas K., born March 29, 1818, married Benjamin Teel, and died Sept. 13, 1861, the mother of three daughters, Martha B., Dorcas B. and Mary A., the latter two living; Mary Jane, born April 6, 1821, married Andrew Winsor, and had three children, Richard Brown, Andrew and Mary Jane (all deceased); Obadiah, born Nov. 30, 1823; and Joseph Farnum, born May 16, 1835. Richard Brown was a well-to-do farmer and a man of force and character. He held various offices of honor and trust, among which was that of representative of his town to the General Assembly of Rhode Island. He died in 1840, at the age of fifty-one, leaving Obadiah, then a youth of seventeen years, in charge of the farm. Penelope, his wife, was born April 12, 1793, and died July 24, 1869. Her father was a Quaker, and she, too, followed in that faith.

(VII) Obadiah Brown, son of Richard and Penelope, born in North Providence, Nov. 30, 1823, married Sept. 18, 1849, Amey Randall Angell, born Aug. 8, 1827, daughter of Nathaniel and Asha. (Smith) Angell, and a descendant of Thomas Angell, the ancestor of one of the most influential families in the State. Of the six children of this marriage four lived to adult years: Anna Maria, born Jan. 7, 1851; Barrett, born Jan. 20, 1856, died Feb. 20, 1857; Mabel, born June 8, 1862; Mary Louise, born Oct. 20, 1858, died May 31, 1876; Adelaide Victoria, born Nov. 19, 1867; and Florence, born Aug. 2, 1871. Obadiah Brown was raised a farmer. His educational advantages were limited, but he made the most of them. He attended the common district school, and for a time the Friends' School in Providence, but his schooling was terminated in early life by the death of his father. From necessity the management of the interests of the homestead fell upon his shoulders from his youth, and unflinchingly he assumed the responsibility, and by dint of hard and earnest work, long hours of diligent toil and indomitable will he made the farm a success. To his share of this property he added other possessions, comprising the beautiful site on which his late residence, built in 1849, now stands. This house is on Chalkstone avenue, on a natural elevation, and it commands in extent one of the most delightful views in the vicinity of Providence. All his life Mr. Brown was distinctively a farmer in the broadest and best sense of the word, and a leader in agricultural pursuits. No man in Rhode Island took a greater interest in husbandry than he, nor had a firmer belief that farm work, faithfully followed, would bring good results. His career emphasizes the greater possibilities of the more intelligent husbandman, who supplies the world with the substantial products of life. Mr. Brown secured prominence throughout New England because of his eminent services rendered to stock raisers and to the producing class, and also because of the high position he held in State and County agricultural societies. Almost from his youth he was prominently identified with the Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry, as also was his brother Joseph F. Brown, who succeeded him in the vice-presidency and in the presidency of the society, both of which offices were held by each of the brothers for several years. In 1863 Joseph F. Brown entered into co-partnership with Mr. Andrew Winsor, his brother-in-law, under the style of Winsor & Brown, and they became well known and extensive lumber dealers of Providence. In 1884 Mr. Obadiah Brown became a member of the State Board of Agriculture, which position he held many years, his efficiency being recognized by every one. This board was originated by Mr. Brown when he was a member of the Legislature, and he continued a member to the time of his death. One of the greatest achievements of the board was to secure a thorough analysis of fertilizers. Mr. Brown devoted much time to raising and improving fine stock. His barn, built in 1851, is adapted for the housing of cattle, and for thirty-five years has been full of some of the finest Ayrshires, of his own breeding, found in New England. The many gold medals and first premiums received in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and other States, bear testimony to his good judgment in this matter. At the Dairy Show in Madison Square Garden, New York, in 1888, first prizes were awarded him—the three leading prizes—on bull, on cow and on herd. In politics

Mr. Brown was a Republican. He held numerous offices: In 1855, 1856 and again in 1857 he was representative of the town of North Providence in the General Assembly, under the gubernatorial administrations of W. W. Hoppin and Elisha Dyer. In 1873 before the town was divided he was elected State Senator from North Providence, and re-elected in 1874, being the last Senator of the old town, before his part of the town was annexed to the city. In 1884 the city elected him representative to the General Assembly again, and he served on some of the more important committees. During his entire career the public spirit of the man manifested itself. The city of Providence made him commissioner of public highways, and subsequently he was appointed a member of the public board, and in these capacities his broad views crystallized and became a part of the magnificent institutions of Rhode Island, and were, in themselves, monuments of his fitness for offices of trust and responsibility. Mr. Brown died Feb. 2, 1907, and was buried by the side of his father, in the North Burial Ground, Providence.

(VII) JOSEPH FARNUM BROWN, son of Richard and Penelope (Farnum) Brown, was born in Providence May 16, 1835. He was five years of age at the time of his father's death in 1840, and he was deprived by ill health of school advantages until he was fifteen years of age. Subsequently he attended the district school, and then spent three years in the Friends Boarding School in Providence. After leaving school he was for some time employed on the home farm. In 1854 with his brother-in-law, Andrew Winsor, he engaged in the lumber business, on Hill's Wharf, Providence, the firm being Winsor & Brown. In 1856 he sold his interest in this business to Mr. Winsor, and for about three years thereafter he was engaged in farming on the homestead. For about two years afterward he was employed by Mr. Winsor, and then removed to Kawkawlin, Michigan, where from 1863 to 1865 he was employed by an extensive lumber manufacturing company. In August, 1865, he again became a partner of Mr. Winsor, their business being carried on at the corner of Broad and Pearl streets, Providence, under the firm name of Winsor & Brown. He continued in the lumber business until the time of his death, but he was also engaged in farming, having one of the finest and best stocked farms in North Providence. For many years he devoted considerable attention to the raising of cattle, for which he secured high prices and many premiums at the fairs. He was a member of the Ayrshire Breeders Association, of which he had been treasurer from 1875. He had also imported some very valuable Guernseys, but on account of the climate was unable to make a success of them. Mr. Brown was frequently called upon to fill public positions of trust. For nearly fifteen years he was a member of the North Providence school committee, and for three years represented his town in the lower house of the General Assembly. He also served for six years as a member of the school committee after the annexation of North Providence in 1873, and for two years in the House of Representatives for the city of Providence. He was a member of the Providence Town council from the Tenth ward in 1877-78-79. For about twenty years he was a member of the Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry, and served for about four years as a member of the Standing committee. In 1880 he was elected Second Vice-President of that society, and was very active in promoting the success of the organization. He was also president of the society. Always interested in politics he was prominently identified with the Whig and Republican parties. He was a most genial man, and a man of strong influence for good over his fellow men. To his employes he was uniformly kind and just, and in turn was beloved by them. Young men were much attracted to him, and many a one could tell of substantial help given him by Mr. Brown. His social connection was with the Squantum Club. In early life he attended the Friends Church, but later in life became identified with the Union Congregational Church. His death occurred Jan. 31, 1886. Joseph Farnum Brown married Adelaide Victoria Ballou, eldest daughter of Orrin A. and Charlotte (Angell) Ballou, of Woonsocket. She died Feb. 10, 1880. Five children were born to them: Edith Josephine, who died unmarried; Elma Sophia, who married Edward S. Bowen, of Pawtucket; Richard, who died young; Ethel Farnum, a kindergarten teacher in Providence; and Edna Adelaide, in the Rosenberg Library at Galveston, Texas.

Elisha Brown, son of Andrew, married Waite Waterman, and resided in North Providence, where he was engaged in farming. He is buried in the North End Burying Ground. His children were: Welcome, Waterman, Elizabeth, Lydia (who married a Latham), Philena (who married an Angell), Catherine (who married a Fisher), Susan (who married Jason Young), and Waitstill (unmarried).

SANBORN (Newport family). While the Sanborn family is not an old Rhode Island one, it is one of the ancient families of New Hampshire, one of long and honorable standing there and here in Rhode Island. At Newport, there has lived, for nearly forty years and been closely and prominently identified with the best interests of that city and section, the Hon. John Page Sanborn, the present State Senator from Newport, where for thirty-five and more years he has conducted, as proprietor and editor, the Newport Mercury, one of the historic newspapers of this country.

Born Sept. 9, 1844, in Fremont, N. H., Senator Sanborn is a descendant in the eighth generation from Lieut. John Samborne, an officer in King William's war, from whom his lineage is through Joseph, Abraham, Daniel, Sherburne, Moses H. and Alvah Sanborn, the latter the father of Senator Sanborn. These generations in detail and in regular order follow.

(I) John, William and Stephen Samborne, sons of an English Samborne (probably William of Brimpton, Berks) and Anne, daughter of Rev. Stephen Bachiler, are said to have come to America with their grandfather Bachiler in 1632. Of these Lieut. John Samborne, born in 1620, appears in Hampton, probably in 1640, since he was then granted a house-lot and a tract of land there. He was often selectman, and sustained other important public relations to the settlement. He was twice married, first to Mary, daughter of Robert Tuck. She died Dec. 30, 1668, and he married (second) Margaret (Page) Moulton, daughter of Robert Page. Their children were: John, Mary, Abigail, Richard, Mary, Joseph, Stephen, Ann, Dinah, Nathaniel, Benjamin and Jonathan.

(II) Joseph Samborne, born March 13, 1659, in Hampton, married Dec. 28, 1682, Mary, daughter of Capt. Edward Gove, of Hampton. They lived in Hampton Falls, on a farm still in the hands of a descendant. Mr. Samborne died between 1722 and 1724. His widow remarried. The children born to Joseph and wife were: Abigail, Huldah, Reuben, Edward, Abraham, Mary, Joseph and David.

(III) Abraham Sanborn, born March 10, 1696, in Hampton Falls, married Jan. 22, 1718, Dorothy, daughter of John Smith, and they lived in Kensington. They died, he, Sept. 2, 1757, and she Jan. 11, 1788. Their children were: Theophilus, Joseph, Abraham, John, Daniel, Theophilus (2), Joseph (2), Abraham (2), John S. and Dorothy.

(IV) Daniel Sanborn, born May 28, 1728, in Kensington, married (first) Anna Tilton, daughter of Sherburne Tilton, of Kensington, and they lived in Kensington. She died June 8, 1759, and he married (second) Mary or Marcy Collins. They removed to Fremont, N. H., where Mr. Sanborn died May 25, 1812. His children were: Dorothy, Anna, Mary, Theophilus, Sherburne, Elijah, Elijah (2), Abraham and Daniel.

(V) Sherburne Sanborn, born June 10, 1756, in Kensington, married Molly, daughter of John Hoyt, of South Hampton and Chester, N. H., who was born Jan. 26, 1764. Mr. Sanborn was a cordwainer of Kensington. He was a soldier of the Revolution, serving at different times and in different organizations from 1775 to 1780, being in the latter year a sergeant in Capt. Gordon's company enlisted for the West Point campaign. He was a pensioner in 1833, living in Merrimack county, New Hampshire, his pension dating from 1818. He died in Chester, N. H., May 8, 1836. His children were: Moses Hoyt, born in 1783; John Hoyt, April 2, 1789; Dolly, Aug. 17, 1791;

Nancy, Oct. 17, 1793; and Simon Merrill, Dec. 15, 1796.

(VI) Moses Hoyt Sanborn, born Sept. 22, 1783, in Poplin (now Fremont), N. H., married, Sept. 20, 1800, Susanna, born in 1785, daughter of Jonathan Brown, of Fremont, N. H. Mr. Sanborn was a farmer living on the homestead in Poplin (now Fremont), on the place later owned by Alvah Sanborn, and died there. Mrs. Sanborn passed away May 15, 1850. Their children were: Sarah, born Oct. 14, 1801; Asa, Jan. 30, 1803; Farena, July 15, 1804; Moses N., Jan. 9, 1806; True G., Jan. 8, 1808; John L., March 8, 1810; Jonathan, Oct. 12, 1811; Nancy, May 2, 1813; Sherburne, Dec. 18, 1814; Nancy (2), May 2, 1818; Lewis, July 18, 1819; Alvah, March 6, 1822; Alvah (2), Dec. 31, 1823; and Nancy (3), Sept. 14, 1825.

(VII) Alvah Sanborn, born Dec. 31, 1823, in Fremont, N. H., married Sept. 26, 1843, Nancy, born May 20, 1823, daughter of John Page, of Sandown, N. H. Mr. Sanborn occupied the old Sanborn homestead, which he had greatly improved, substituting new and commodious buildings for the older ones, and altogether converting the property into a model and prosperous farm. During his younger and active life, he was a very energetic man and was successful in his undertakings. He died in 1904. His wife is still living. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn were: John Page, born Sept. 9, 1844; Susan Emily, Dec. 29, 1851; Alden F., Aug. 20, 1855; Eugene Dana, born Sept. 16, 1868.

JOHN PAGE SANBORN was fitted for college at Kingston Academy and at Hampton Institute in his native State. He then entered Dartmouth College, from which institution he was graduated in 1869. Immediately after this event he entered upon the profession of teaching, having been chosen principal of the Toledo (Ohio) high school. He afterward became the head of the Franklin Family School for Boys at Topsham, Maine. This last position he resigned to enter upon a journalistic career, which he was so well fitted for and which he has so admirably pursued all these years, becoming in 1871 assistant editor of the Newport (R. I.) Daily News. Having purchased in the fall of the following year the Newport Mercury, he has since been its editor and proprietor, and made it one of the first weekly publications in this section.

Mr. Sanborn's political career began in the late seventies. He was elected as a Republican to the Lower House of the State Assembly from Newport in 1879, and by successful re-elections was continued in that body in 1880, 1881 and 1882. In May, 1881, he was unanimously chosen Speaker of the House, and was similarly re-elected to that position in the following year. He proved himself a useful and influential member and served with conspicuous ability. In August, 1882, he was appointed by President Arthur one of a board of three commissioners to examine the Northern Pacific railroad. His general fitness for and his great interest in educational affairs influenced his election in 1883 to the Newport school board for a term of three years; his re-election followed for the succeeding term, his services in this capacity covering a period in all of seven years. He was elected a State Senator from Newport for the years 1885 and 1886, and had much to do with the shaping of legislation in those seasons. In 1898 he was again chosen to the Lower House, and was re-elected a member of that body for the year following. While a Senator in 1885 and 1886, he served as chairman of the committee on Finance, and was a member of the State Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners. He was a delegate to the National Republican conventions of 1880 and of 1896 when Presidents Garfield and McKinley, respectively, were nominated. He is now again State Senator from Newport, having filled this position since 1905.

It goes without saying that Mr. Sanborn is a cultured gentleman, and, as the head of a newspaper for so long a period, is one of Newport's most enlightened and influential residents. He is both an enterprising and public-spirited citizen, deeply interested in all that tends to the advancement of his adopted city and town, and the greatest good for his fellow citizens and townsmen. Senator Sanborn, too, has been long prominently identified with the Masonic order, having held many important positions in the Grand Lodge of Masons of Rhode Island. He was for two years Grand High Priest of the grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the State. He has served in every office in the Grand Commandery of Knights Templars of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, from Grand Warden to Grand Commander, which latter position he held in 1900-1901.

In 1871, Senator Sanborn was married to Isabella M. Higbee, of New Hampton, N. H., and three children have come to bless their home.

ANDREW KIRK McMAHON. Men of true worth are a credit to any community, and their ability is readily recognized. In a list of this class of citizens of Newport would appear the name of Andrew K. McMahon, who during his residence of nearly forty years in that city has been progressive, and ever ready to lend a helping hand in every movement which has for its object the advancement of that city's interests. Mr. McMahon is of Irish extraction, having been born in the northern part of the Emerald Isle on March 1, 1841, a son of John and Sarah (Kirk) McMahon.

Cornelius McMahon, grandfather of Andrew K., passed his life on his native heath, in the time-honored occupation of farming. He lived to the good old age of sixty-seven years, rearing a family of children as follows: James, Margaret, John, William (who died in Canada), Ann, Eliza, Charles (who was a soldier in the British service and was killed during the Crimean war, at Cape Hope), and Henry (who died in New Jersey).

John McMahon, the father of Andrew K., was born Feb. 22, 1812. He was a bleacher by trade, later adding that of shoemaker, and he was employed at both trades after coming to America. For several years he was engaged as watchman by the Hope Company, at Scituate, R. I., and later worked at shoemaking in Phenix, R. I., at which he continued until his death, which occurred June 14, 1895. He had resided in that village some thirty years. He was a man of strong religious convictions, served as steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Phenix, and was one of its best and most active workers. He was twice married, first to Sarah Kirk, daughter of Andrew Kirk, of Ireland. She died in Taunton, Mass., Nov. 14, 1847, aged twenty-nine years. His second wife was Margaret McDonald, of Scituate, R. I., who survives him, residing in Phenix. To the first union were born six children, as follows: Mary, now the widow of Thomas Caldwell, of Everett, Mass.; Margaret, who died at the age of twenty-five years, unmarried; Andrew K.; Anabelle, who died young; Eliza Jane, who died in Phenix, and Sarah Ellen, who died in infancy. To the second marriage were born: Sarah Ellen, who died at the age of six years, and John Henry, a brakeman in the employ of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway Company, who married Elizabeth Jordon, and resides at Phenix.

Andrew K. McMahon was born, as stated above, on March 1, 1841, and at the age of five years left his native Ireland, in company with his mother, for America, settling in Taunton, Mass., where they were joined by the husband and father, who had preceded them to this country. His early childhood was spent in attending school, although he left the schoolroom before he had reached his teens, going to work in the cotton mills of his section. His schooling was begun at Taunton and finished at Hope, R. I., to which village his father removed in 1848. He continued employed in various departments of the mills for some ten or more years, when he promptly responded to the call of his country, in 1861, enlisting in Company A, of the 2d R. I. V. I., for three years service. He served his time as a member of this organization with the Army of the Potomac, experiencing much hard fighting. The chief engagements in which he participated were: First and second Bull Run (promoted to sergeant after the first battle of Bull Run), Williamsburg, Yorktown, Seven Pines, the Seven Days' Fight, Harrison Landing, Antietam, Fredericksburg and the battle of Salem Heights, in which latter he was severely wounded in the head by a bursting shell. After an active service of over three years he was mustered out and honorably discharged on June 17, 1864, as sergeant. Upon returning to his home Mr. McMahon took up work on the farm of the Lonsdale Company, at

Andrew K. T. Tabor

Andrew Klu Treason

Lincoln, R. I., and for five years was a trusted employe of that company. He was then sent to Newport in the capacity of manager of the Robert H. Ives estate, which is one of the beautiful estates of that city, the grounds comprising some forty acres, and continued to serve in this position with efficiency for a period of about fourteen years. In 1884 Mr. McMahon was appointed to the superintendency of the Island cemetery of Newport, which position he has since filled to the satisfaction of all concerned. The more than twenty years he has been retained in this responsible capacity speak eloquently of faithful service and exemplary performance of duty. He has served for several years as a director of the Newport Co-operative Association for Saving and Building, being vice-president of the same.

Mr. McMahon is affiliated with a number of the best fraternal and social organizations of the city, in all of which he takes a deep interest. The principal ones are St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. & S. M.; Washington Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, of Newport, and Palestine Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Providence, of which latter organization he was a charter member upon its formation in Newport. He is also a member of St. John's Mutual Beneficial Association, of Newport, which he has served as vice-president for a number of years. He has served as treasurer of the chapter and council for several years. Mr. McMahon is also a member of Rhode Island Lodge, No. 12, I. O. O. F., of which he is past grand; a member of Aquidneck Encampment, No. 5, I. O. O. F., of which he is past chief patriarch, and also of Emma Lodge, No. 17, Daughters of Rebekah. He also holds membership in Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, is senior past grand regent of the State of Rhode Island in that organization, and is now serving as secretary of the same. He has been active and prominent in Grand Army circles, holding membership in Charles E. Lawton Post, No. 5, Grand Army of the Republic, of which he is senior past commander, and he is also past commander of the Department of Rhode Island; and is a member of the commission appointed to build the Soldiers' Home at Bristol, R. I., having been a member of the commission since its organization. He is also a member of the Newport Horticultural Society, of which he has served as treasurer for several years.

Mr. McMahon is, in political faith, a stalwart Republican, and as such has served the city of Newport as a member of the common council and as a member of the Board of Aldermen, and as a member of these bodies rendered his adopted city valuable services, always showing a keen interest in the welfare of the community. In 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city, he was elected a member of the representative council from the Second ward for the three-year term. He also served as a member of the building committee having charge of the construction of the Coggeshall school building of Newport.

Mr. McMahon has reared an interesting family, all of whom are occupying honorable positions in the social and business world. Mrs. McMahon, whom he married on Nov. 24, 1869, was formerly Miss Lydia Maria Titus, daughter of Hiram and Lucy (Crocker) Titus, of Smithfield, R. I. The children born to this happy union, in order, are as follows: Andrew Sherman, who is a gardener by occupation, resides at home, unmarried; Sarah Adelaide, married Frank P. King, of Newport, who is deputy sheriff of Newport county, and also holds the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Newport Artillery Company, the oldest active military organization in the United States, and to this union have been born three children, Anabelle Sarah, Margaret Frances and Lucy Adele King, the last named dying July 16, 1907, aged eleven years, six months, twenty-five days; John W., who is a letter-carrier of Newport, there married Alida Frances King; William Overton, who is also a gardener, is residing at home, unmarried.

Andrew K. McMahon is an active and consistent member of Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Newport, of which Mrs. McMahon is also an active member, and he has served for over thirty years as junior warden. Possessed of a genial and social disposition, Mr. McMahon has a companionable nature, and in his pleasant home the stranger is given as cordial a welcome as his best friend. He is an honored and respected citizen, and enjoys the esteem of a large host of friends as well as of the community at large.

ALLEN MASON THOMAS, who during his life was one of the well-known business men and leading citizens of Wickford, R. I., was born in the town of North Kingstown July 25, 1806. He was a descendant in the sixth generation from John Thomas, the first of the name in New England. Although the Thomas family has for several generations been identified with Rhode Island, the first records of the name are at Swansea, Mass. It was a brief sojourn, however, lasting but a few years, and the later history has been connected with the towns of Kingstown, Conanicut and Portsmouth. From the records of these places many facts in regard to the founder of the family have been gleaned by Judge Elisha C. Potter.

(I) John Thomas was born in Pembroke, Wales, about 1640. Leaving his home in 1662 he joined a colony of Baptists, driven out by the Act of Conformity passed on the accession of Charles II, and under the leadership of Rev. John Meyles sailed with them from Swansea early in 1663. They settled first where they landed, naming the little seaport colony Swansea, and there John Thomas probably remained until about 1668, although possibly it was not until after 1675 that he left, as the war with King Philip then compelled the original settlers to flee. Many went to the island of Rhode Island. John Thomas eventually settled in Portsmouth, as he is on record there as a grand jurymen in 1688, but his eldest son was born in North Kingstown Aug. 20, 1681, and there is reason to suppose that the father had come to that place from Conanicut Island. Later Mr. Thomas moved to a homestead south of Wickford, on land which, prior to 1692, belonged to Richard Smith, Jr. From 1700 to 1706 he is again found on Conanicut Island, in Jamestown, but in the latter year he became a permanent resident of Kingstown, having purchased a tract of land from Benedict Arnold, the first Colonial governor of Rhode Island. By his wife, Abigail, there were two sons, George and John. The former was deeded a tract of land in 1713 by his father, and John received a right, but the actual will made by John Thomas was dated as late as 1726, only two years before his death.

(II) Col. George Thomas, born Aug. 20, 1680 or 1681, married in 1704 Alice Gorton, of Warwick, a descendant through Benjamin Gorton of Samuel, the progenitor of the Gorton family. They had four children: George, born in 1708; John, in 1711; Benjamin, in 1715; and Samuel, in 1720. Col. George Thomas died in 1740.

(III) Samuel Thomas, born in 1720, died in 1780. By his first wife, Ruth Gould, to whom he was united in 1739, there were four children, namely: George, born in 1742; Gould, in 1744; Capt. Samuel, in 1748; and Elizabeth, in 1752. In 1756 he married (second) Sarah Marsh, and they had one son, Isaiah, born in 1757.

(IV) Capt. Samuel Thomas was born in 1748 and died in 1839. He married Hope King, and their children were as follows: Sarah, born in 1775; Richard, in 1777; Waity, in 1778; and Samuel, in 1785.

(V) Richard Thomas was born June 22, 1777, and died Aug. 12, 1859. His wife was Polly Nichols, who was born July 24, 1774, and died Feb. 29, 1868. They were married Feb. 17, 1799, and had three children: Elizabeth and Nichols A., who died in infancy; and Allen Mason, born July 25, 1806. Richard Thomas resided in Wickford and was justice of the peace from 1802 to 1846. He engaged in the mercantile business in the double house which was later occupied for the same purpose by his son and grandson, and this he carried on with much success for over thirty years. During the Dorr war he was a staunch supporter of law and order. He took a deep interest in public affairs, and was active in every movement that tended toward the well-being or progress of his town. He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

(VI) Allen Mason Thomas was born July 25, 1806, in the town of North Kingstown, and there grew to manhood and received his education. He worked in the store with his father, and later became associated with him in business, making merchandising his life work, in which he was assisted in his later years by his son, Philander Jenckes. Mr. Thomas was successful in all his undertakings, and was noted for his sterling honesty. In his earlier years he was a Whig, and during the Dorr war was, like his father, on the side of law and order. He was one of the first in his section to support the candidacy of Abraham Lincoln for President. He was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Wickford, and for fifty-two years he served as clerk of the parish, and for nearly half a century was warden. Mr. Thomas died at his home April 13, 1887, at the ripe old age of eighty-one years, and was buried in the Episcopal cemetery. On March 7, 1833, he married Charlotte Proctor Smith, of Pawtuxet, R. I., born Dec. 23, 1811, daughter of Elisha Peck and Hannah (Phillips) Smith. Mrs. Thomas was a true wife and mother and good Christian woman, rearing her children to reflect honor and credit on the name they bear as well as on the communities in which they dwell. She died April 6, 1872, and was buried in the Episcopal cemetery. Nine children were born to Allen Mason Thomas and his wife, namely: Elisha Smith, born March 2, 1834, was the Episcopal bishop of Kansas; Philander Jenckes, born Sept. 30, 1837, died July 5, 1897; Clarence Eugene, born Dec. 7, 1840, died April 1, 1882 (he married June 16, 1869, Harriet Perry, and had one child, Hattie Eugenie, born April 11, 1870, who married Horatio Nightingale); Nathaniel Phillips, born Nov. 9, 1842, died July 1, 1844; Nathaniel Phillips (2), born Nov. 17, 1844, died in Providence May 12, 1890; Aaron Smith was born March 26, 1847; Mary Charlotte, born Oct. 3, 1849, married Sept. 25, 1877, Dr. Robert B. Talbot, of No. 37 West Sixty-eighth street, New York City, and has one son, Harold Richmond, who married Nannie Wright Brown; Hannah Allen, born Nov. 13, 1852, married Jan. 30, 1877, Waldo Park Clement, and lives in New York City; Allen Mason, Jr., born Sept. 26, 1855, a well-known physician of New York City, where he is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, married Annie O'Neill Miner, of New York.

(VII) THE RIGHT REV. ELISHA SMITH THOMAS, S. T. D., Second Bishop of Kansas, was born in Wickford, R. I., March 2, 1834, and died at St. John's School, Salina, Kans., on Saturday, March 9, 1895. His early education was gained in Providence, whence later he went to Yale College, being graduated there in 1858, and at Berkeley Divinity School in 1861. In the meantime he obtained an excellent business education under the care of his father, and by teaching in the Louisiana School for the Deaf became familiar with the sign language. On Oct. 2, 1861, he married Miss Georgine Mary Brown, in St. Paul's Church, Wickford. They had four children, two daughters who died in infancy, and two sons, the elder of whom, the Rev. Nathaniel Seymour Thomas, is rector of the Church of the Holy Apostles, at Philadelphia; he married Edith Prince, daughter of Col. Edward and Virginia (Arthur) Prince; and the younger son, George O., is an attorney in Philadelphia.

Bishop Thomas was ordained deacon in 1861, and advanced to the priesthood soon afterward. His first charge was St. Paul's Church, New Haven, where he remained until 1864, when he was elected rector and Professor of Old and New Testament Exegesis in Seabury Hall, Faribault, Minn. He spent the year 1869 in Europe, studying the Semitic languages and attending lectures on New Testament Exegesis. In 1870 he was elected rector of St. Mark's Church, Minneapolis, and remained there five years, at the end of which, his health requiring a change, he became for a time a special agent for the Society for the Increase of the Ministry. In 1876 he was elected rector of St. Paul's Church, St. Paul, Minn., and during his rectorship there occurred his notable controversy with Archbishop Ireland. He also wrote many monographs and pamphlets which are distinguished for accuracy and learned research, and which have been of great use to the clergy. Yale College granted him his Doctorate in 1889.

Bishop Thomas was several years president of the Standing Committee, three times deputy to the General Convention, and working member of all the important committees of the Diocese of Minnesota. He helped to found the Shattuck School, and left his mark on all missionary enterprises, charities and institutions of learning wherever his footsteps chanced to halt. In 1887 he was elected Assistant Bishop of Kansas and was consecrated in his own church in St. Paul May 4, 1887.

The unusually dramatic life of Bishop Thomas has furnished the basis of the series of Narratives of Western Life which have appeared from time to time in the magazines and in several of the books of Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Bishop Vail died in October, 1889, and Bishop Thomas then assumed all the duties of diocesan, with financial responsibilities which were appalling. From that time until he fell at his post, worn and weary, he gave freely not only of his means but also of his strength for the church. It would be impossible here to outline his work and his benefactions. Every step of building upon the foundations laid by Bishop Vail, and all of his own planting and marvelous attention to wearisome detail, testify to the work. Every clergyman and many laymen knew his loving heart and have seen his open hand. His rare business capacity saved and built up the schools and carefully preserved the property of the church. He knew by instinct that he who would influence others must himself first do that which he would have them do; that he who would save others and lift them up to higher planes must himself pay the price in labor and service, and often in gross coin as well; must be one from whom virtue is always going out as from an inexhaustible fount.

Gentle and strong; yielding in minor matters and firmest of all in essentials; simple with those qualities of a child which a good man preserves; dignified, with the dignity which becomes one whose master is the Lord Christ; wise, learned, gentle, meek, strong in the power of the Lord, humble, but a mighty warrior for God and truth, his influence will never die, nor will it cease anywhere among the generations of men whose lives his influence has put in the paths of righteousness.

A special meeting of the clergy and laity of the Diocese of Kansas was called on Wednesday, March 13, 1895, by Dr. A. Beatty, president of the Standing Committee, to meet in the Chapel of Bethany College at 2:30 P. M. The meeting having been convened, Dr. Beatty was unanimously elected to act as chairman. It was moved and seconded that five members, three clerical and two laymen, act as a committee to draw up resolutions relating to the death of the Bishop of the Diocese. The committee elected was as follows: A. Beatty, D. D., Rev. Frank R. Millsbaugh, Archdeacon Brady, C. P. Skinner and H. W. Gleason, who adopted the following resolutions:

"The Right Reverend Elisha Smith Thomas, S. T. D., the Second Bishop of Kansas, has entered upon the rest prepared for him by the Great Bishop of Souls.

"The clergy and laity of Kansas bow in humble submission, because of the will of God and the happiness which is his. We sorrow because of the Diocese of Kansas. The diocese loved him. Every individual Priest, Deacon and Layman loved him as a shepherd, esteemed him as a scholar and theologian, respected him as a director in the temporal affairs of parishes and schools, valued him for a friendship offered without partiality, and admired him for his humility.

"Words are too poor to express our loss. We are in no mood for formal resolutions. We only cry, God pity us and raise up another whose qualifications for the great responsibilities of our Diocese may reach to some degree those of the late universally beloved Bishop of Kansas, now numbered with Thy Saints in Glory Everlasting."

(VII) AARON SMITH THOMAS, fifth surviving son of Allen Mason, was born at Wickford, Washington Co., R. I., March 26, 1847. He attended school at home and at a Warren, R. I., private school, and was graduated from Yale in the class of 1869 with the degree of A. B. He then became a clerk in a shoe store in Providence, learning all the details of the business. He continued there until 1877, when he went to New York and engaged in shoe manufacturing in Brooklyn, in the Williamsburg district, under the firm name of Thomas & Co., and for upwards of thirty years he conducted a successful business. In 1906 he withdrew from the industry, and has since lived retired at his home, at No. 133 West Seventy-third street, New York City. In his political principles Mr. Thomas is a Republican, and he is a member of the Union League Republican Club. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. He succeeded his father as warden of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Wickford, and since locating in New York has attended Christ Episcopal Church. He has taken a keen interest in the Thomas family history, and is well posted in family lore. On Jan. 24, 1883, Mr. Thomas married Miss Clara Louise Jones, born in Newark, N. J., daughter of Abner Jones, and to this union have come two sons: Clarence Proctor, born Jan. 19, 1889, and Winthrop Gordon, born Sept. 14, 1892, both now attending college.

(VII) PHILANDER JENCKES THOMAS was born Sept. 30, 1837. He was taken into business with his father in 1859, and they continued in partnership until the death of the father, in 1887. From that time the son carried the business on alone until his death, July 5, 1897. He was a public-spirited citizen, doing all he could to promote the growth of Wickford, and at one time served as town treasurer. He married June 14, 1864, Ann Eliza Porter, of Assonet, Mass., who was born Dec. 18, 1836, and who survives her husband. Their only child was a daughter, Helena Porter, who was born Sept. 25, 1871. She became Mrs. Edward Wanton Robinson on June 19, 1901, and is the mother of two children, Edward Wanton, born May 25, 1902, and Thomas Porter, born Feb. 10, 1905.

SMITH. (I) Christopher Smith was in Providence as early as 1650, in the fall of which year he was taxed. He became a freeman in 1655, and for years is of record in a number of land transactions. The Christian name of his wife was Alice. At the time of King Philip's war, when so many took refuge at Newport, he went to that point, and died there, as declared by the Friends' records, which call him an "ancient Friend of Providence." His death occurred in June, 1676. His children were: Susanna, Thomas, Benjamin and Edward.

(II) Benjamin Smith, assumed by Austin, the genealogist, to have been a son of Christopher, born about 1631, married Lydia, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Arnold) Carpenter, and they lived in Providence and Warwick, R. I. Mr. Smith was sergeant for a military company in 1654. He was assistant much of the time from 1666 to 1704, and deputy much of the time between 1670 and 1685. His death occurred Dec. 23, 1713. His wife died, Oct. 1, 1711. Their children were: Benjamin, born in 1661; Joseph; William, born Dec. 27, 1664; Simon; Lydia, born in 1668; and Elizabeth, born in 1672.

(III) Benjamin Smith (2), son of Benjamin, born in 1661, married Dec. 25, 1691, Phebe, born Nov. 9, 1670, daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Smith) Arnold, and they resided in Warwick, R. I. They died, Mr. Smith April 27, 1730, and Mrs. Smith after that year. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Jan. 11, 1693; Hannah, Oct. 7, 1694; Sarah, May 30, 1695; Benjamin, June 21, 1697; Phebe, Dec. 5, 1699; Philip, Nov. 30, 1700;

Almy, June 17, 1703; Lydia, June 11, 1705; Alice, Feb. 3, 1707; Katherine, Jan. 23, 1708; Giffe, April 20, 1710; and Stephen, Feb. 20, 1713.

(IV) Stephen Smith, son of Benjamin (2), born Feb. 20, 1713, married Mary Sabin, and they resided in the town of Warwick, R. I. Their children of Warwick town record, according to Arnold, were: Stephen, born July 15, 1743; Benjamin, Nov. 19, 1744; Simeon, March 6, 1745-46; Mary Abbott, Jan. 25, 1748; and Sarah, June 7, 1754.

(V) Simeon Smith, son of Stephen, born March 5 or 6, 1745-46, married Dec. 12, 1773, Martha, born Aug. 24, 1756, daughter of Elisha and Mary (Arnold) Peck, he a descendant of Joseph Peck (?) (who was baptized in 1587 in Beccles, County of Suffolk, England, being a descendant in the twenty-first generation from John Peck, of Belton, Yorkshire, England, and came to New England with other Puritans in 1638, in the ship "Diligent" of Ipswich), from whom his lineage is through Nicholas and Elisha Peck; and she a descendant of William Arnold (born in 1587, in Cheselbourne, Dorsetshire, England, being a descendant in the fourth generation from Richard Arnold of Cheselbourne, and came to New England, sailing with his family May 1, 1635, from Dartmouth, England), from whom Mrs. Smith's lineage is through Stephen, Israel, Israel (2), Israel (3) and Mary Arnold. Simeon Smith and his wife lived at Pawtuxet, in the town of Warwick, R. I. Mr. Smith died March 3, 1843, and Mrs. Smith passed away Jan. 6, 1833. Their children were: Elisha Peck, born in 1776; Simeon, in 1779; Remington, April 3, 1782; Nicholas, in 1787; Sarah, in 1791; Moses, in 1794; Aaron, in 1797; and Stephen.

(VI) Elisha Peck Smith, born in Pawtuxet, in 1776, died in 1832. He married Hannah Phillips, of Pawtuxet, and they had two children: Charlotte Proctor, born in 1811, married Allen Mason Thomas, and died in 1872; and Nathaniel Phillips died in Warren, Rhode Island.

CHARLES SISSON, treasurer and one of the founders of the Hope Webbing Company, a representative business man of Providence, and a citizen active in municipal and educational affairs, comes of a family for nearly 260 years resident in Rhode Island.

(I) Richard Sisson, born in 1608, was a resident of Portsmouth, R. I.; was there made a freeman in 1653; and of Dartmouth, Mass., in 1667. He held by purchase 2-300 part of Conanicut and Dutch islands; was surveyor of highways in 1671. The Christian name of his wife was Mary. He died in 1684, and his wife in 1692. Their children were: George, Elizabeth, James, John, Anne and Mary.

(II) James Sisson married Lydia Hathaway, born in 1662, daughter of John and Sarah (Cook) Hathaway, and they were residents of Dartmouth,

Charles Lison

Mass. Mr. Sisson was surveyor of highways in 1685, constable in 1686, and selectman in 1689. He died in 1734, and his wife died in 1714. Their children were: Richard, Mary, James, Jonathan, Philip, Thomas, Content, Sarah, Hannah and Rebecca.

(III) Richard Sisson (2) was born Feb. 19, 1682, and with his wife, Mehetabel, whom he married in 1704, lived at Dartmouth, Mass. Among their children was Richard (3).

(IV) Richard Sisson (3), born July 17, 1705, married and was a resident of Dartmouth, Mass., where he died in 1790. His wife's Christian name was Alice.

(V) Joseph Sisson, born Sept. 11, 1728, married, April 18, 1753, Ruth Sherman, born May 1, 1734, daughter of Benjamin and Ruth (Fish) Sherman, of Portsmouth, R. I., and they were of Newport, R. I., and Seekonk, Mass. Their children were: Susanna, born June 12, 1754; Avis, born Aug. 10, 1756; Ruth, born Sept. 30, 1758; Eunice, born Nov. 28, 1760; Hannah, born March 30, 1763; Joseph, born June 10, 1765; Lydia, born Oct. 20, 1767; Asa, born Jan. 7, 1770; Lois, born Oct. 17, 1772; and Isaac, born Dec. 20, 1775. The parents died, the father on Jan. 10, 1823, and the mother on Sept. 11, 1822.

(VI) Asa Sisson, born Jan. 7, 1770, likely in Newport or Portsmouth, R. I., married (first) May 1, 1794, Alice Anthony, of North Providence, R. I., and one child, Alice, was born to them Sept. 25, 1796. Mr. Sisson married (second) Aug. 15, 1798, Mercy Dennis, daughter of Robert and Hannah Dennis, of Portsmouth, and their children were Hannah, born at Newport, R. I., June 6, 1799; Mary, born at Newport, Dec. 20, 1800, died Jan. 16, 1821; Isaac, born at Newport, Nov. 14, 1802, died April 22, 1803; Joseph, born at Newport, Dec. 31, 1803; Robert, born at Newport, Dec. 16, 1805, died in Coventry, R. I., Aug. 14, 1822; Isaac (2), born at Newport, May 31, 1807, died Jan. 17, 1808; Ruth, born at Newport, Nov. 20, 1808; Lydia, born in Warwick June 4, 1813; and Asa, born at Warwick, Oct. 5, 1815. The mother of these died Dec. 27, 1816, and the father married (third) Dinah Collins, and one child, Sarah Lewis, was born to them, probably at Plainfield April 19, 1819. Asa Sisson, the father, was engaged as a butcher and farmer in Warwick, R. I., and also followed mechanical pursuits.

(VII) Asa Sisson (2), born Oct. 5, 1815, in Warwick, early began to learn the trade of machinist in Maine, although his apprenticeship was completed in Coventry, R. I. In 1839 he became a partner with Perez Peck in the business of manufacturing cotton machinery, the firm being known as Perez Peck & Co. This partnership was continued until the latter fifties. In 1865 Mr. Sisson located in Hamilton, in the town of North Kingstown, and for a few years was engaged in the manufacture of cotton yarn at the Annaquatucket Mill. In 1850, with Perez Peck, Isaac Peck and S. H. Vaughan, Mr. Sisson organized the Hamilton Company, and engaged in the manufacture of cotton yarn at Hamilton, R. I., which village was so named at the suggestion of Mr. Sisson. Subsequently for two years, in partnership with Ambrose E. Vaughan, he conducted the Bayside Iron Foundry at Wickford, and then for a time was connected with the Providence Water Works as an inspector at the foundries of the iron pipe then being cast for the use of the city of Providence. In 1873 he became identified with the Hamilton Web Company at Hamilton in an official capacity, remaining there until 1883, when he again entered the employ of the Providence Water Works, where he continued until his death, Jan. 19, 1893, at Anniston, Ala. His remains rest in the Friends cemetery at Coventry, Rhode Island.

Mr. Sisson was a Republican in politics, and while a resident of Coventry held a few minor offices. He was deeply interested in the temperance cause, and was an active worker in the Sons of Temperance. He also belonged to the Temple of Honor, and other temperance organizations. He was a member of the Society of Friends.

In Coventry, R. I., Asa Sisson was married to Mary Ann Peck, who was born in that town July 15, 1816, daughter of Perez and Joanna (Brown) Peck. Perez Peck was born in Rehoboth, Mass., Sept. 14, 1786, and settled at Coventry in 1805, becoming one of the first manufacturers of cotton machinery in New England. Mrs. Mary A. Sisson died in Coventry, in September, 1882, the mother of four children, of whom the first died in infancy unnamed; Harriet P., born May 25, 1845, died Aug. 10, 1846; Charles was born Sept. 7, 1847; and Emily, born Jan. 15, 1856, married Willis H. White, secretary and assistant treasurer of the Hope Webbing Company, and they reside in Providence.

(VIII) Charles Sisson was born in Coventry, R. I., and attended the public schools of his native town, completing his literary training in the Friends' School, Providence, from which he was graduated in 1866. His first venture in the industrial and commercial world was as bookkeeper for Vaughan & Greene, who were then beginning the manufacture of webbing at Hamilton, R. I. In a short time he had learned the business, and was made superintendent of the works, a position he held with that firm and with their successors, the Hamilton Web Company, until 1883. In that year he removed to Providence, and in company with Oscar A. Steere, he established the Hope Webbing Company, on Sprague street. In 1889 the business was incorporated, and the following year was removed to Main street, Pawtucket, occupying the large plant built especially for its accommodation. Mr. Sisson became president upon the incorporation, but later resigned the presidency, and became treasurer, a relation which he has since sustained. To him, more than to any one man, is due the success of this firm, and he is practically the father of that immense concern, which is the largest of its kind in the world. Over 20,000 different patterns of webbing are made by the company, and their product penetrates the markets of the world. Mr. Sisson has also connection in an official capacity with other business concerns, being president of the Frank Mossberg Company, of Attleboro, Mass.; president of the Narragansett Textile Company of Pawtucket; and president of the Eastern Machine and Stamping Company of Providence.

In his political faith he is a Republican on national issues, but in local affairs he votes for the man and issue regardless of party. He served in the town council of North Kingstown, and was president of that body in 1881, and chairman of the school committee from 1875 to 1883, the year he removed from that town. He became a member of the city council of Providence from the Second ward in 1896, and continued in that body until 1904, when he was elected alderman, and served one term. In 1906 he was the candidate of the Democrat and Lincoln party for lieutenant-governor of the State, and also received the endorsement of the Prohibition party for the same office. Like his father he is a strong advocate of temperance, and at one time was a member of the Temple of Honor and the Sons of Temperance. His religious affiliation is with the Society of Friends. Mr. Sisson has ever been active and prominent in educational matters, was for three years president of the Providence Education Association, and since 1892 has been a member of the Committee in charge of the Moses Brown (formerly Friends) school. He is a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society.

In financial circles Mr. Sisson has been equally prominent. He is a member of the Board of Managers of the Pawtucket branch of the Industrial Trust Company, previous to which he was a director of the Pacific National Bank of Pawtucket, which was absorbed by the Industrial Trust Company, and is a member of the board of directors of the United National Bank, of Providence, having originally been vice-president of the National Eagle Bank; prior to its consolidation with the United Bank.

On Oct. 4, 1888, in New York, Mr. Sisson was united in marriage with Elizabeth Davies Eyre, a native of Philadelphia, Pa., and their children were: Charles P., born Feb. 9, 1890; Russell E., born Aug. 4, 1891; Hope, born Jan. 21, 1893; Ruth, born Feb. 10, 1894; Alice, born Feb. 27, 1895, died Oct. 25, 1896; and William E., born Feb. 2, 1898. In 1896, Mr. Sisson completed his residence at the corner of Doyle and Hope streets, Providence, and there he has since made his home.

KNOWLES (Providence family). The Knowles family of Rhode Island is one ancient and honorable in the old Colony and later Commonwealth history. Henry Knowles, early of Portsmouth and Warwick, is of record in the former town as early as 1644 and was on the freeman's list of Warwick of 1655. He was born in 1609 and died in 1670, and in his will, approved in January of that year, he bequeaths to his wife, not giving her Christian name, and children. The latter were: John, William, Mary, Martha and Henry. Of the sons, the first and last named died unmarried, leaving the name to be perpetuated through William Knowles, of Warwick and South Kingstown, respectively.

This William Knowles, son of the settler, Henry Knowles, was born in 1645, and, with the consent of his father, was apprenticed in 1661 for five years to Thomas Smith of Pawtuxet. Ten years later he was of Kingstown, appointed on a committee to make a rate of tax for the town, and was more or less actively connected with public affairs of the town; he served as deputy in 1706 and 1707. His wife was formerly Alice, daughter of Thomas and Mary Fish. Mr. Knowles died in 1727, and his widow passed away in 1734. Their ten children were: Henry, William, Daniel, Robert, John, Alice, Rose, Martha, Mary and Margaret. These sons all married and lived in South Kingstown, R. I., excepting the youngest son, John, who lived in the town of Richmond. From this source came the Knowles of Rhode Island who belong to the early stock.

For a number of generations there have resided at Providence the posterity of Jonathan Knowles, who, June 3, 1736, was married to Ann Power. Through their son, Edward, and the latter's son Edward Knowles (2), has descended one of the State's distinguished families. It is with this branch of the family this article briefly deals. Reference is made especially to the late Rev. James D. Knowles, a distinguished divine in the Baptist denomination, Professor in the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton, Mass., etc.; Hon. Edward Peck Knowles, long prominent in business at Providence, at one time the city's chief executive officer, etc. Hon. John Power Knowles, a graduate of Brown University, lawyer and judge at Providence; and several of the sons of Edward Peck Knowles, notably the late Joseph B. and Stephen M. Knowles, long noted silversmiths at Providence.

Edward Knowles (2), son of Edward, born March 9, 1768, in Providence, R. I., married March 24, 1793, Amey, born Aug. 6, 1772, daughter of Aaron Peck, a merchant of Providence and a descendant of Nicholas Peck, who came from England to the country with his father, Joseph Peck, in 1638, finally settling in the southwestern part of Seekonk, Mass., his lineage being through Jonathan and Deacon Thomas Peck, of Swansea, Mass. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Knowles were: Two who died in infancy, and Joseph B., James D., Henry, Edward P., John P. and Amey Ann (who married William S. Humphrey). The parents died, Mr. Knowles June 8, 1811, and Mrs. Knowles, Oct. 24, 1838.

EDWARD PECK KNOWLES, son of Edward and Amey (Peck) Knowles, born April 13, 1805, in Providence, R. I., married (first) Feb. 15, 1827, Mary F., daughter of Capt. John W. Fry, of Providence. She died May 2, 1848, and he married (second) May 10, 1860, Alice S., daughter of Jonathan Randall, of North Providence. She died Jan. 17, 1871, and he married (third) in April, 1872, Elizabeth H., daughter of Benjamin Cowell, of Providence.

Mr. Knowles's father having died in 1811, leaving a widow and six children, the oldest but fifteen and Edward P. but six, the latter was early trained to habits of industry and self-dependence. At twelve he was taken from the First district school, of which Oliver Angell was preceptor, and placed as an operative in the woolen factory since known as the Allen Print Works. At an early age he was, by a wise mother, apprenticed first to the late Arnold Whipple, a manufacturer of jewelry, and subsequently, with the consent of Mr. Whipple, to the late Franklin Richmond, the leading watch-maker of that day. After some years' service with Mr. Richmond, and while yet a minor, with Mr. Richmond's consent he re-engaged in the business of manufacturing jewelry, first as a journeyman and afterward, still under age, as a manufacturer on his own account. This business he prosecuted for many years, and after withdrawing from it was, for some brief periods, interested as an active or silent co-partner in other mechanical pursuits.

It was as a partisan supporter of Governor Arnold, as against the Fenner dynasty, in the memorable contest of 1831 for the governorship, that Mr. Knowles first manifested an interest in public affairs, national, State and city politics, and in 1834 he first was honored by an election to office. That year he was chosen a member of the city council of Providence from the First ward, an office which he continued to hold without intermission till 1841, when he was elected alderman, of the Second ward, and continued to hold that office till 1854, when elected mayor. This elevated position he occupied only a single year, an indignant refusal on his part to affiliate with or do homage to the leaders of the Know-Nothing, alias American, party, that day proving an insuperable bar to his candidacy for re-election. His term of office ended in 1855, completing a full period of twenty years' continuous service as councilman, alderman and mayor. He thereafter held no office under the city government, but was chosen by the freeholders a commissioner of the Dexter donation.

It remains to be added that Mr. Knowles was for two terms (1846 and 1858) a representative in the General Assembly from the city of Providence; for one year (1859) a member of the town council of North Providence; for a year or two president of the Association of Mechanics and Manufacturers; and a member of the school committee; for a long period, and at his decease, a vice-president of the Mechanics Savings Bank and of the Fifth National Bank, formerly the Mechanics and Manufacturers; for a time president of the Butler Insurance Company, and from the birthday of the temperance movement to his latest breath an ardent, fearless and scrupulously consistent advocate and supporter of that reform, in caucus-room and at the polls, as everywhere else.

Such, in brief, were Mr. Knowles's opportunities of usefulness as a public servant—it may be left to surviving contemporaries and jurors to pass judgment upon his claims to remembrance and the worth of his example. Should that judgment be, in effect, as is confidently anticipated, that over his bier it may be truthfully said he was of that not too numerous class of public servants whom the old much regret to lose and the young should desire to imitate, not of him were it enough to record: He lived; he died.

Mr. Knowles died at his home in Providence, R. I., Oct. 16, 1881. His children alive at that time were: Abby F., Joseph B., Amey (who married Edwin S. Thurber), Mary Anna (wife of Andrew J. Smith), Stephen M. (who married Nov. 20, 1873, Ellen L. Lewis), and Edward R.—all excepting the last named being born to the first marriage, and he to the second.

JOSEPH B. KNOWLES, son of Edward Peck and Mary F. (Fry) Knowles, born Dec. 15, 1829, died Jan. 2, 1891. On Sept. 23, 1851, he married Mary Manton, who died Nov. 20, 1905. Among their children were: Edward M., born June 10, 1853, died in 1858; Mary, born March 17, 1855, died in 1858; Fannie Weeden, born Aug. 20, 1867, married William C. Burwell, a graduate of Brown University, born in Moriah, N. Y., and they had three children, Edith (born Sept. 27, 1888), Joseph Knowles (Feb. 2, 1892) and William Russell (March 24, 1894); and Mary Manton (deceased) married Walter Irving French, of Providence, and had one daughter, Helen, now deceased.

Joseph B. Knowles in early life became a practical jeweler, and in 1852, associated with Henry L. Webster, a practical silversmith, began business in their line in a building which stood on Meeting street, in the rear of what is known as the Lonsdale block, where were manufactured, by hand, spoons, forged from the stock, as the custom then was. The quality of their work was the prevailing one of coin, as the English standard of sterling was not introduced into this country until 1853, and did not come into universal use among manufacturers for several years. The firm, the style of which was Henry L. Webster & Co., adopted the new standard in common with other manufacturers and after that their trade-mark stood for sterling silver only. The practical ability of these two men asserted itself in two ways, first, in having first-class workmen, and second, in establishing an apprentice system.

The firm of Henry L. Webster & Co. was succeeded by that of Knowles & Ladd in 1858, in which year the business was moved from the Tingly building, on South Main street (it having been moved thither from the original site in 1854), to Eddy and Middle streets; and in 1868 it was again moved, this time to No. 95 Pine street, the firm then assuming the name of J. B. & S. M. Knowles. On the death of the senior member of the firm, in 1891, the business was incorporated as the J. B. & S. M. Knowles Company, and in 1894 it was removed to its present location in the Talcott building, No. 91 Sabin street.

The reputation of this house has always rested on the flatware production, and it is to-day second to none in the country.

Mary Anna Knowles, daughter of Edward Peck and Mary F. (Fry) Knowles, married, Jan. 28, 1864, Andrew J. Smith. To them were born four children: Alice Knowles, who married James T. Lockwood, town clerk of Warwick, R. I., and has two children, Ernest Lapham and Harold; Mabel Smith, who married Henry B. Scott, and has a son, Kenneth; Mary F., who married George J. Holden, and has two children, Henry Knowles and Chester; and Knowles A. Smith, who married Emily Randall, and has two daughters and one son, Mildred, Ruth and Andrew J.

ANDREW J. SMITH was born at Natick Aug. 9, 1832, son of Horace and Hannah Smith, and his death occurred at his home in Providence, No. 149 Benefit street, Nov. 11, 1906, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. For three decades he had been prominent in the drug business in Providence. He began his study of pharmacy when he was but seventeen. He then was under the tutelage of Mr. Burrington, a druggist on North Main street, this city, and at the age of twenty-one he opened a store of his own on South Main street, and at the same time started the first drug store in Olneyville. The latter was soon sold, and the South Main street store was given up for a more central location on Westminster street, where for thirty-two years the business was carried on with great success. Here Mr. Smith added photographic and dental supplies to his stock, and for many years it was the only place of the kind where these goods could be obtained. When the building in which he was located on Westminster street was to be torn down he moved to the Alice building, on the same street, there dropping his drug trade entirely, and giving his attention wholly to the newer lines of business. Thus he continued until 1896, when he removed to the Swarts building, at No. 87 Weybosset street, where his place became a complete dental supply depot. His son, Knowles A. Smith, and son-in-law, George J. Holden, were associated in business with him. He was a man of quiet disposition, reserved in manner and serene in bearing, and devoted to his home. He belonged to no secret societies, and his favorite pastimes were hunting and fishing. He was a member of the Rhode Island Yacht Club. Besides his home in Providence he maintained a summer home at Old Warwick, where he spent the greater portion of each year, and where he made his legal residence, always going there to vote.

OREN WESTCOTT, one of the oldest and best known bankers of Rhode Island, for the past thirty years cashier of the Blackstone Canal National Bank of Providence, and one of that city's highly esteemed and representative citizens, is a descendant of one of the original proprietors of Providence Plantations—Stukeley Westcott.

(I) Stukeley Westcott (originally Westcote, derived from locality), of Salem, Mass., Providence and Warwick, R. I., born in 1592, died in 1677. He was received an inhabitant of Salem in 1636. He was one of the twelve who had a deed from Roger Williams to land which he had bought from the Indians. He was of Providence that year. He was one of twelve original members of the First Baptist Church organized at Providence in 1639. He was recorded as an inhabitant of Warwick in 1648. For several years commencing with 1651 he was commissioner, and beginning with 1652 was for several years surveyor of highways. He was assistant in 1653; and deputy in 1671. His children were: Damaris, Robert, Amos, Mercy and Jeremiah.

(II) Jeremiah Westcott, son of Stukeley, married, July 27, 1665, Eleanor, daughter of William and Elizabeth England, and they lived in the town of Warwick, R. I. He became a freeman in 1672. Both he and his wife died in 1686. Their children were: Jeremiah, born Oct. 7, 1666; Eleanor, Oct. 20, 1669; Persis, in 1670; Stukeley, October, 1672; Josiah, in 1675; and Samuel, William and Benjamin.

(III) Josiah Westcott, son of Jeremiah, born in 1675, married Jan. 1, 1701, Hannah, daughter of George and Tabitha (Taft) Gardiner, and they lived in Providence, R. I. Mr. Westcott died Nov. 11, 1721, and his widow remarried. Their children were: Nicholas, born Aug. 27, 1702; Hannah, Aug. 11, 1704; Tabitha, Dec. 7, 1706; Josiah, March 6, 1709; Nathan, March 23, 1711; Damaris, June 12, 1713; Caleb, Dec. 6, 1716; and Oliver, Sept. 5, 1720.

(IV) Capt. Oliver Westcott, son of Josiah, born Sept. 5, 1720, married Dec. 30, 1744, Hannah, daughter of Joseph and Martha (Pray) Wilkinson. He lived in that part of Providence which became Cranston, and about 1745 removed from there to the town of Scituate, R. I., where he died Jan. 20, 1795. He was a weaver by trade and also followed farming. He was made a freeman in 1744. His children were: John, born March 26, 1746; Prudence, in 1747; Sybilla, Jan. 11, 1749; and Caleb, April 15, 1753.

(V) Caleb Westcott, son of Oliver, was born at Scituate April 15, 1753. He followed the occupation of farmer and also worked at coopering. His farm was located on Chopmist Hill, in the northwestern part of the town. He died in 1826. His wife was Lydia (Knowlton) Borden, widow of Gale Borden. She was born in 1757, and died in 1812. Their children were: Oliver, born in 1782, died unmarried in 1826; Thomas Knowlton, born Feb. 24, 1787, married in 1817, Lydia W. Steere, was a farmer in Scituate, and there died July 5, 1853; Susannah, born in 1789, married William Waterman, of Scituate, and removed to Newport, N. Y.; John, born Dec. 3, 1791, married Cecelia Owen, and died in Providence, May 12, 1848 (his son was the late Judge Amasa S. Westcott, of Providence; Lydia, born in 1793, married Clark Waterman, and removed to Newport, N. Y.; Mary, born in 1795, died unmarried in November, 1853; Nathan, born Nov. 3, 1797; and Caleb, born Aug. 6, 1800, married Hannah Phillips, and died Jan. 7, 1873 (record elsewhere).

Oliver Peck

(VI) Nathan Westcott, father of Oren, was born Nov. 3, 1797, in Scituate, and learned the trade of tanner, which he followed for only a few years. For a time after his marriage he conducted a tanning business at Little Compton. After a short residence at Killingly, Conn., he came to Providence in April, 1841, and followed mechanical pursuits the rest of his active life, and died July 14, 1876, and was buried in the North Burial Ground. Mr. Westcott was an industrious man of quiet manner and tastes, and was much esteemed and respected. In early life he united with the Free Will Baptist Church at Scituate. On Dec. 16, 1830, he married Adah Olney, born Oct. 28, 1806, daughter of Asa and Adah (Dexter) Olney, and a descendant in the seventh generation from Rev. Thomas Olney, who came to Rhode Island with Roger Williams, her lineage being traced back through Asa, Emor, James, Epenetus, Epenetus and Rev. Thomas. Mrs. Westcott survived her husband nearly twenty-two years, and passed away at the home of her son, May 24, 1898, in the ninety-second year of her age. Two children were born to Nathan Westcott and wife: (1) Adah Dexter, born in September, 1831, married James P., son of Josiah Westcott, of Scituate. She died in Providence, Aug. 25, 1857, leaving no children. (2) Oren was born Nov. 22, 1835.

(VII) Oren Westcott was born in Scituate, and was a small boy when his parents located at Providence. He received his education in the public schools, graduating from the high school. For a few months after leaving school he was employed as a clerk in retail stores, and then became a clerk in the establishment of J. H. Read & Co., dealers in woolen goods, and where he remained about a year and a half. In 1854 he became a clerk in the Mechanics and Manufacturers Bank, Mr. J. H. Read, his former employer, at this time being president of the bank, and he remained with this institution and its successor, the name of the bank being changed to the Fifth National Bank in 1865, until October, 1869, when he resigned to accept a position as bookkeeper in the Blackstone Canal National Bank. In 1871 he became teller, and in October, 1876, he was elected cashier, succeeding John Luther, who had died, and Mr. Westcott has been the fourth incumbent of that position since the bank was established in 1831. He has served as cashier continuously since 1876, and is not only the oldest cashier in point of active service, but one of the oldest active bankers in the State.

On Dec. 9, 1880, in Bellows Falls, Vt., Mr. Westcott was married to Caroline Porter Hapgood, a native of that place, and a daughter of Charles and Harriett (Silsby) Hapgood. To this union came children as follows: Adah Dexter, born Oct. 4, 1883; Charles Hapgood, born Aug. 4, 1885, graduated from the high school, and has since been a clerk in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company; Margaret, born Oct. 17, 1887; Nathan, born March 17, 1889; and Dexter Silsby, born May 31, 1892, died April 6, 1895. In his political tendencies Mr. Westcott is a Republican, and he has taken an active interest in public affairs, serving as a member of the common council from the First ward from 1875 to 1878; he was commissioner of the North Burial Ground from Feb. 11, 1878, to January, 1895; and has been a member of the school committee from the First ward. He is a member of the Providence Board of Trade, which he has served as treasurer since January, 1887. In 1857 Mr. Westcott became a communicant of St. John's Episcopal Church, and has ever been an active member of that parish, for many years being warden, and since 1902 senior warden. Mrs. Westcott and the three older children are also members of the same church.

CASS (Woonsocket family). For perhaps only a little less than two centuries the Cass family have been inhabitants of portions of the territory of the now counties of Worcester, Massachusetts, and Providence, Rhode Island. One John Cass, the progenitor of the family, appeared at Boston as early as 1648, but later settled in Hampton, New Hampshire. Since the earlier years of the eighteenth century through a grandson of the settler, and of the same name, John Cass, the family have been a continuous one in the old town of Mendon, Mass., and in towns formed from it, and for a century and more here in and about Woonsocket, this State.

It is with this early Cass family in Mendon, Bellingham and Woonsocket this article is to deal briefly. From the first John Cass through one of his sons who settled in the State of Connecticut, descended the Michigan statesman of the name, Hon. Lewis Cass; and from one of the Mendon settlers came the eminent physician and surgeon, Dr. Jonathan Cass, of New York. Here in Woonsocket have lived several generations of the family, forefathers of the present postmaster of that city, Hon. John W. Cass, long one of the prominent men of his community. The genealogy of this Cass family in part follows in chronological order from the earliest known American ancestor.

(I) John Cass was first of Boston, and went from there to Hampton, N. H., where he is of record selling land in the summer of 1648, and he may have been there earlier. Four years later he bought property there. In 1664 he bought a farm on the south side of Taylor's river and removed thither. In 1647 he returned to Boston, and in that year he married at Watertown, Mass., Martha, daughter of Thomas and Anne (Knapp) Philbrick. His death occurred April 7, 1675. His children were: John, born Aug. 21, 1650; Joseph, Oct. 5, 1656; Samuel, July 3 (or 13), 1659; Jonathan, Sept. 13, 1663; Elizabeth, June 4, 1666; Mercy, Aug. 1, 1668; Ebenezer, July 17, 1671; and Abigail, Jan. 11, 1674.

(II) Samuel Cass, son of John, born July 3 (or 13), 1659, married Dec. 7, 1681, Mercy, daughter of William Sanborn, and their children were: Martha, born Sept. 25, 1682; John, Oct. 24, 1687; Hannah, March 1, 1695; a son killed by the falling of a tree March 1, 1706, aged about six years; and Mary, born Jan. 10, 1702.

(III) John Cass (2), son of Samuel, born Oct. 24, 1687, married Hannah Grove. Mr. Cass purchased 300 acres of land in that part of Mendon which became Bellingham, Mass., and settled there in 1726. His children were: Mehetabel and Hannah (twins), born Oct. 2, 1713; Nathan, July 2, 1715; John, Feb. 15, 1717; Mary, Nov. 19, 1718; Hepzibah, Sept. 7, 1720; Jonathan Grove, Aug. 23, 1722; Daniel, Nov. 29, 1725 (all in Hampton); Ebenezer, Dec. 4, 1726; and Samuel, April 5, 1731, both in Mendon, Mass.

Of the fourth generation Nathan Cass, son of John (2), resided in Mendon for several years after his marriage. He had children: Oliver, born in 1739; Nathan, in 1740; Hannah, in 1741; Joanna, in 1743; and Sarah, in 1748. From this date we have no record of him.

John Cass (3) of the fourth generation, son of John (2), married in 1736, Alice Brown, of Bellingham, and two of their children were born in Mendon, namely: Susannah in 1736, and Joseph in 1739. The parents then removed to Cumberland, R. I., where they had children: Mary, born in 1742; Alice, in 1743; John, in 1745; and David, in 1757. Mr. Cass removed before 1765 to Richmond, N. H., becoming one of the first settlers there. He died in 1802, leaving numerous descendants.

Daniel Cass, also of the fourth generation, son of John (2), married in 1747 Mary Cook, and lived in Smithfield, R. I., where nine children were born to them. He then went with his brother John to Richmond, N. H., where two more children were born to them.

(IV) Jonathan G. Cass, son of John (2), born Aug. 23, 1722, in Hampton, married in 1747, Abigail Salisbury, of Cumberland. He inherited his father's homestead in that part of Mendon which became Bellingham. His children were: Sarah, born in 1752; Hannah, born in 1755; Phebe, born in 1757; George, born in 1759; John, born in 1761 (left a numerous posterity, among whom were the eminent physician and surgeon, Dr. Jonathan Cass, who died in New York in 1886; Dr. Francis L. Babcock, of Dedham, Mass., and others who have won distinction in the medical and legal professions); Nathan, born in 1767, who settled in the West where, it is said, his parents passed their last days with him.

From the foregoing source came the present John W. Cass, Esq.

John Cass was born in Mendon, Mass., near Blackstone, March 10, 1793. He grew up on a farm and received a district school education. In his young manhood he learned to make agricultural implements, and then came to Rhode Island, locating in the town of Cumberland, now a part of Woonsocket, and there erected a shop for the manufacturing of farm implements, principally hay rakes, grain cradles, etc. His shop stood on what was known as Iron Rock River, now Cass Pond, and there for many years he successfully engaged in business. He also owned a tract of seventy acres of land, and he built the fine dwelling house and barn now owned by his son, Jervis J. He was quite active up to within a few years of his death, when his eyesight failed him and he passed his remaining years on his farm. He attained the ripe age of eighty-two years, dying in 1875, and was buried in Wheaton Cemetery. He was a man well known and very highly respected, and he took a deep interest in the town and in his home. He was an old-line Democrat, but never sought office. In the war of 1812 he served as a soldier and was stationed near Boston. He always had a taste for military life, and helped to form the Cumberland Rifles, of which he was captain. He was patriotic and ready at all times to defend the flag. He married (first) Oct. 13, 1816, in Cumberland, Lucy Jillson, born Nov. 19, 1793, daughter of Nathaniel Jillson; she died at her home while still in the prime of life Feb. 26, 1835, and was buried in the Wheaton Cemetery, Cumberland. The children of this marriage were: Caroline Adelia, born June 16, 1821, married William Alkinson; William Jillson, born July 5, 1823, died Dec. 14, 1848; Jervis Jillson, born Aug. 22, 1826; and Marion Wallace, born May 30, 1832, married Arnold Wakefield, and died in February, 1903. Mr. Cass married for his second wife, Prusia Estess, who died on the farm, and is buried in Wheaton Cemetery. His third wife, Wealthy Whipple, also died on the farm and is buried in Wheaton Cemetery.

Jervis Jillson Cass was born Aug. 12 (or 22), 1826, on the homestead farm in Cumberland and there attended the district school. He worked from an early age in the shop with his father, and there learned all the details of the business, and when a young man his father took him in as partner, and the business thus continued with marked success during his father's active business life. When the father retired Mr. Cass took in his brother-in-law, Arnold Wakefield, as a partner, and the business was conducted under the firm name of Cass & Wakefield until 1890, when Mr. Cass retired. The product from the shop was shipped to New York and points west as well as to New England States. Besides manufacturing Mr. Cass also followed farming, operating the seventy acres of the homestead farm. He is now living retired and the weight of four-score years rests lightly upon him. He takes a deep interest in all questions of the day. His enterprises have been successful, and he has maintained a high standard of business integrity. Within the last few years a part of the farm was sold to the city of Woonsocket for a park, which is known as Cass Park, and which is now being laid out for that purpose. Besides the home place Mr. Cass has other real estate interests in Woonsocket.

Mr. Cass is broad-minded and liberal in his ideas, and is generous and kindly in his treatment of all men. He was in his early life a Democrat, but in recent years he has supported the principles of the Republican party and votes that ticket, but he has never sought office.

Mr. Cass married Fannie Whipple, who was born in the town of Cumberland, daughter of Wilder and Fannie (Everett) Whipple (the latter a relative of Edward Everett, of Massachusetts). Mrs. Cass died in May, 1901, and was buried in the Wheaton Cemetery. She was a member of the Universalist Church. They had three children: Norman, who married Emma Chase, and is deceased; John W.; Lucy, who died in childhood.

JOHN WILDER CASS, son of Jervis J. Cass, was born on the old homestead, Cass avenue, Woonsocket, Oct. 6, 1860. He was educated in the public schools of the city, also at the Bryant & Stratton Business College, where he received good commercial instruction. Starting out in life for himself his first employment was with the Silver Spring Bleaching & Dyeing Company, and there he spent four years, after which he became treasurer and manager of the Porter Manufacturing Company of Boston, with which firm he remained until 1889. During this time he traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the interest of his company, visiting all the business centers. During President Benjamin Harrison's administration, he was appointed examiner of Foreign Merchandise at the port of Providence, which responsible position he filled during that administration. After the change of Government in 1892 he resigned his position, and was engaged in the manufacturing business in his native city for four years. When the late William McKinley was elected President he appointed Mr. Cass postmaster of Woonsocket, Aug. 26, 1897, and he has faithfully performed the duties of that office, a position of trust and responsibility, to the general satisfaction of the public. During his administration of the office the business has increased over 100 per cent., and since his appointment as postmaster he has worked hard and zealously to give the public good service. Over thirty-nine mails are now received daily, and thirty-eight sent out, while the money order department has increased over 500 per cent. He takes a deep interest in his work. His life is a busy one, and he is found in the harness at his office before seven in the morning, showing a devotion to duty worthy of emulation. He was re-appointed by President Roosevelt, his term expiring in 1910. In recommending his re-appointment Representative Adin B. Capron said that he considered the "Woonsocket post-office one of the best conducted in the country." During his administration Mr. Cass was instrumental, with the assistance of representatives in Congress, in securing an appropriation of $111,000 for a new post-office here.

Mr. Cass is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party as laid down by Lincoln, Blaine, McKinley, Roosevelt, and other great leaders, and he has always voted that ticket. He represented the Fifth ward in the city council for seven years, five years as a member of the common council, and two as president of the board. He served two years as a member of the board of aldermen, and chairman of the committee on Finance, and other important committees, and was the first secretary of the committee appointed to adopt the system of sewerage for the city of Woonsocket, serving on the committee three years. He was a member of the committee on the part of the city council for the purchase of the court house site, and was the original mover to build the new Court street bridge. He was chairman of the Republican city committee, and a member of the Republican State Central Committee. In 1892 he was a delegate to the convention (for Rhode Island) which nominated Benjamin Harrison for his second term as president, and he was a member of the notification committee which notified the late William McKinley of his nomination in 1896, being a substitute for Col. S. P. Colt.

Mr. Cass is a member of the Postmasters' Association of New England, and is now serving as president, being elected to that office at the annual meeting Dec. 27, 1905. He is also a member and chairman of the executive committee of the National Association of Second and Third Class

Mr. Cass is a member of the Postmasters' Association of First Class Postmasters; president of the Woonsocket Agricultural Society; first vice-president of the Business Men's Association, and also chairman of its committee on New Industries and Grievances, and as such he has greatly increased the freight and passenger facilities for the people of Woonsocket; and member of the Rhode Island Golf Club Association. His religious faith is that of the Universalist Church, and he is president of the Universalist Men's Club.

Mr. Cass is a man popular with all classes, well liked and respected. He is domestic in his tastes, and is devoted to his home and family. He married (first) Grace Brown, daughter of Benjamin Brown. After her death he married (second) Elizabeth Vose, daughter of Adin and Zonie (Seaman) Vose. They have one child, Zona Frances, born in October, 1890.

LEWIS LAWTON SIMMONS (deceased) was universally recognized as one of the honored and respected citizens of Newport, in which city he was born, and where he filled with honor and fidelity many positions of trust to which he was chosen by his fellow-citizens. Mr. Simmons was the worthy representative of one of New England's earliest settled families, a record of which, together with a record of his life achievements, will be found below, the generations being given in chronological order.

(I) Moses Simonson or Symonson (name soon shortened to the first two syllables and later spelled Simmons), born in Leyden, Holland, came to Plymouth in the ship "Fortune" in 1621, and settled at Duxbury. He had sons, Moses and Thomas.

(II) Moses Simmons (2), son of Moses, and of Duxbury, had by his wife Sarah: John, Aaron, Mary, Elizabeth and Sarah, all of whom married. The father died in 1689.

(III) John Simmons, son of Moses (2), married about 1670 Mercy Pabodie, born Jan. 2, 1649, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Alden) Pabodie, the latter a daughter of John and Priscilla (Mullens) Alden, of the "Mayflower." Their children were: John, born Feb. 22, 1671; William, born Sept. 24, 1672; Isaac, born Jan. 28, 1674; and Martha, born in November, 1677.

(IV) William Simmons, son of John, was born Sept. 24, 1672, and married in 1696 Abigail, born in 1680, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Tucker) Church, and granddaughter of Richard Church, who came to New England in the fleet with Winthrop in 1630, settling first at Weymouth, but removed to Plymouth, where he was made a free-man in 1632; he married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Warren of the "Mayflower." William Simmons died in 1765, and his wife in 1720. Their children were: Mercy, born July 1, 1697; William, born Sept. 30, 1699; Lydia, born Dec. 15, 1700; Joseph, born March 4, 1702; John, born Aug. 14, 1704; Abigail, born July 14, 1706; Rebecca, born May 8, 1708; Mary, born Oct. 15, 1709; Benjamin, born Feb. 21, 1713; Ichabod, born Jan. 6, 1715; Peleg, born Dec. 21, 1716; and Sarah, born Aug. 26, 1718.

(V) Joseph Simmons, son of William, was born March 4, 1702, and married March 28, 1726, Rebecca Wood. Their children: John, born Jan. 29, 1727; Abigail, born Dec. 7, 1728; Edward, born March 16, 1730; Betsey, born March 8, 1733; Jonathan, born Aug. 20, 1736; Ephraim, born June 29, 1739; Susannah, born July 8, 1742; Rebecca, born Feb. 7, 1746; and Joseph, born in 1748.

(VI) Edward Simmons, son of Joseph, was born March 16, 1730, and married in 1753, in Newport, Mary Robinson. Their only children by Newport town record were: Martha, born April 1, 1754, and Jonathan, born in July, 1755.

(VII) Jonathan Simmons, son of Edward, was born in July, 1755, married, and had two children.

(VIII) Edward Simmons, the eldest son of Jonathan, lived in Newport all of his life, engaged in farming and blacksmithing. He was prominent in the affairs of the town, serving in the General Assembly of the State. He married Sally Freeborn, and they had twelve children: Susan, Eliza, James, Edward, Sarah, Rebecca, Mary, Ann, John, Charles, Joseph and Hannah.

(IX) Joseph Simmons, son of Edward, was born in Newport, and died Aug. 16, 1859. He followed blacksmithing all of his life. In politics he was a Republican. He married Abby Stacy Spooner, of Newport, daughter of Benjamin and Joanna (Brown) Spooner, and she died Sept. 29, 1862, in Newport. Their children were: Sallie, who married Lysander Stevens, of Newport; and Lewis Lawton.

(X) Lewis Lawton Simmons was born April 15, 1829, in Newport, and was educated in the public schools of his native city, leaving school at the age of fifteen years to become a clerk for Moses Hammond, in his grocery store. There he remained for about two years, at the end of which time he apprenticed himself to the painter's trade with Zenas L. Hammond, his uncle, continuing with him five years. After that Mr. Simmons did journeyman work for five or six years, and in 1855 engaged in painting, glazing, etc., with William J. Gladding, under the firm name of Gladding & Simmons. In 1856 they built the business building occupied by Mr. Simmons until his death, and the firm continued for fifteen or sixteen years, at the end of which time Mr. Simmons purchased his partner's interest, and continued the business alone for about one year. He then engaged in the grocery business, in which he and his partner had worked some little time before, and in which he was very successful, continuing it until 1894, when he closed out. He was located in Spring street.

When about twenty-one years of age Mr. Simmons began probating and the settling of estates, and he was prominent in that line the rest of his life, becoming practically a public administrator. He served as overseer of the poor from his election in 1893 until his death, most of that time acting as chairman of the board, and in connection therewith was also for some time one of the commissioners of the city asylum, and chairman of that board. At various times he served as a commissioner of the Newport Asylum, when it was located at Coasters' Harbor Island. His excellent judgment and discrimination, gained in long years of association with philanthropic enterprises and benevolent work, proved of great service to the city in its care of the poor and during his last years Mr. Simmons was probably best known in his official connection with this work. It brought him into close relations with the poor of the city, and though in the faithful discharge of his duties he always safeguarded the interests of the city he was ever the true friend of the worthy unfortunate, who looked upon him as a true benefactor.

Mr. Simmons was president of the Aquidneck National Bank of Newport at the time of his decease. He was one of the oldest depositors of that bank, of which he had been a director from July 9, 1877; was elected vice-president Jan. 8, 1895, and president Dec. 23, 1895, continuing in that office the rest of his life. For several years he was a director and president of the Coddington Savings Bank, a position which he resigned, however. He was also president and a director of the Arctic Company, of which he was one of the original incorporators. For many years he was a prominent member of the Newport Association of Mechanics and Manufacturers, and was treasurer of that organization in 1886 when the funds were turned over to the Newport Historical Society, after which he served as a member of the executive committee of the latter society; he was its treasurer for two years.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Simmons was chosen to a number of public offices, serving as a member of the common council of the First ward from 1863 to 1865, in 1868-69 and in 1877-78; as member of the school committee from 1867 to 1875; as assessor of taxes, 1873-75; was a member of the fire department in 1858, assistant engineer 1866-70, chief engineer 1870-71 and again from 1879 to 1883, resigning from that position. He was also for several years one of the trustees of Long wharf and public school.

Mr. Simmons was married Sept. 23, 1852, to Harriet Wells Burdick, daughter of Clark Burdick, of Newport, and she preceded him to the grave, dying in November, 1901. They had children as follows: Seth S., born in 1853, died aged four years; Zenas Hammond, died aged about two years; Martha Burdick and Abby Stacy were twins, the former living at home, while the latter died aged eight years; Mary Spooner married Frank Tracy, of Providence, and they have three children, Edith, Lewis and Helen; Lewis L., Jr., conducts a brass finishing and nickel-plating business on Spring street. The last named married Mary Popple, daughter of George H. Popple, of Newport, and they have had two sons, Lewis L., deceased; and Lewis L. (3), born Nov. 7, 1907.

Mr. Simmons was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. His long experience in financial matters made him an authority on such subjects, and his advice was much sought after and generously given, his counsel being deemed sound and prudent. In the many positions of honor and trust he was called upon to fill by his fellow-townsmen he proved himself a man of exceptional ability, and conscientious and faithful in the performance of every duty. "Among his business associates and in his public life he was regarded as a conservative adviser, never, however, being without a progressive spirit far beyond that of many of his younger associates. As an administrator of estates his clear conception of the right and his care for those with whose interests he was intrusted gave unqualifiedly the feeling that he would do what was fair and best for all. Personally Mr. Simmons was a genial companion, with a fund of recollections of the earlier days of his career, recounted with a humor which always made listening a pleasure. In his home and among his intimate friends he was seen at his best."

Mr. Simmons died July 12, 1907, at his residence on Farewell street.

POTTER (Providence family). Elsewhere in this work will be found various branches of the family here in Rhode Island bearing the name Potter, a family numerous and distinguished not only in Rhode Island but the country over. With truth it has been said that "since Robert Potter sailed from England, in 1634, and with his associates gave to the settlement of Warwick, in Rhode Island, the name which it still bears, there has never been a period in the history of the country at which the descendants have not been conspicuous in commerce and legislation, in literature, arts and learning, at the Bar and on the Bench, in the councils and ministrations of the Church, and, when their country needed them, upon the field of battle."

There were several of the Potter name who settled in Rhode Island previous to the year 1650, George, Nathaniel and Robert, at Portsmouth. There follows in chronological order something of the lives of the forefathers of the late James A. Potter, whose family have for the past sixty and more years been extensively and successfully identified with the lumber business at Providence. This branch of the Providence family descends from George Potter.

(I) George Potter, of Portsmouth, R. I., was admitted an inhabitant of the island of Aquidneck in 1638. His only child was Abel.

(II) Abel Potter, son of George, married Nov. 10, 1669, Rachel, daughter of John and Priscilla (Holliman) Warner, and they were residents of Portsmouth, Providence and Warwick R. I. He died in 1692. Their children were: George, John, Mary, Abel, Benjamin, Stephen, Ichabod and Job.

(III) John Potter, son of Abel, married (first) Feb. 19, 1702, Joan Dearborn, and (second) Dec. 17, 1717, Phebe Greene. He lived to be ninety years of age. His children were: Job, born July 8, 1703; Susanna, Jan. 11, 1705; Elizabeth, May 18, 4709; Mary, Dec. 29, 1711; William; Abel; Joseph (all born to the first marriage); John, born Dec. 8, 1718; Joseph (2), July 10, 1720; Mary, June 20, 1722; Robe, Feb. 15, 1723-24; Caleb, Oct. 30, 1725; Stephen, Aug. 14, 1727; Neomy, May 8, 1729; Ruth, May 18, 1731; William, June 18, 1733; Thomas, March 25, 1735; and Sarah, March 5, 1736-37.

(IV) Thomas Potter, son of John, born March 25, 1735, married Oct. 16, 1755, Esther.

(V) Earl H. Potter, son of Thomas, born in 1774, married June 3, 1798, Abigail, born Dec. 13, 1771, daughter of Zuriel and Abigail (King) Potter, of Cranston, R. I., he a descendant of George Potter through Abel and Rachel (Warner), Abel (2) and Rebecca (Paine) and Major Benjamin and Jemima (Williams) Potter. Colonel Earl Potter died at Providence, R. I., Feb. 5, 1854, aged eighty years. He married (second) April 13, 1806, Hannah Frothingham.

(VI) James A. Potter, son of Col. Earl H. Potter, was born March 26, 1815, in Providence, R. I., where in young manhood, in the forties, he became established in the lumber trade, founding the business of the present firm of James A. Potter & Co. He was long one of the prominent and leading business men of the city, highly esteemed and respected. He married Sarah Abbott, born June 10, 1815, and they had children as follows: Imogene, who is the widow of William Barton; Laura, deceased, who was the wife of Charles R. Sisson; Sarah, deceased, wife of Ernest Elliott; James A.; Earl H.; and Mary, who died in infancy. Mr. Potter died suddenly June 21, 1872, aged fifty-seven years, and his wife died Jan. 11, 1892.

(VII) JAMES A. POTTER, son of James A., born Oct. 10, 1849, in Providence, R. I., died Jan. 5, 1907. He was a most capable business man, one of great executive ability, whose high sense of honor and integrity gave him high standing in business circles and in social life. He was what is termed a home man, content with the society of his family, and never aspiring to public office.

Mr. Potter married May 17, 1870, Miss Almira B. Allen, of Newport, R. I., daughter of Nathaniel Benjamin and Almira (Weaver) Allen and granddaughter of Nathaniel Mumford Allen. Six children came to bless this union, James A., who married, in Boston, Mass., Stella Pratt, and has one child, Rosamond S.; Almira A., who died young; Archibald C.; Harriet A.; Ethel R., who died young; and Earl H. (2). James A. and Archibald C. Potter were associated with their father in the lumber business until they succeeded to same.

CHARLES WINSOR HARRIS, a well known citizen and successful business man of Providence, was born on the old Harris homestead in Scituate July 16, 1836, son of Aldis Harris, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of the Providence Plantations.

(I) Thomas Harris, the first of the name in New England, came over to the New World on the ship "Lyon," in company with his brother William, Roger Williams and others in 1630, sailing from Bristol, England, to Boston. Thomas Harris became one of the thirteen signers of the Providence Compact, and he died in 1686. His children were: Thomas, Mary and Martha.

(II) Thomas Harris, son of Thomas the emigrant, married, Nov. 3, 1664, Elnathan Tew, who was born Oct. 15, 1644, daughter of Richard and Mary (Clark) Tew, of Providence. He died Feb. 27, 1711, and she passed away the same year. They were the parents of ten children.

(III) Thomas Harris, son of Thomas and grandson of Thomas the emigrant, was born Oct. 19, 1665, and he died Nov. 1, 1741. He married Phebe Brown, who bore him eight children.

(IV) Charles Harris, second youngest son of Thomas and Phebe, was born in 1709. He married Mary Hopkins, and their children were: Henry, Amy, Gideon, Nancy, Stephen, Joseph, Oliver, Mercy and George.

(V) Stephen Harris, son of Charles and Mary, was born April 23, 1761. He married Lydia Beverly, of Providence, and died Sept. 4, 1843. She died May 11, 1837, at the age of seventy-five years. Their children were: Nancy, who married Stephen Corp; Mary, who married Charles Rounds; Amy, who married William Randall; Sally, who died young; Russell Slack, born July 27, 1800, who married Julia Potter; and Aldis, born June 27, 1803.

(VI) Aldis Harris, son of Stephen, born June 27, 1803, in Scituate, R. I., passed most of his active life in his native town engaged in farming. He owned a tract of land—a part of the old homestead—and this received his careful attention. He also worked to some extent at carpentering and as wheelwright. In 1865 he moved with his family to Providence, locating on Carpenter street, corner of Knight, and there his last days were spent. He died Dec. 2, 1872, and was laid to rest in Swan Point cemetery. On March 15, 1824, he married Mary Winsor, who was born April 14, 1804, daughter of Augustus Winsor, and she died March 2, 1886, and was buried at the side of her husband. They were the parents of nine children, namely: An infant, born July 30, 1827, died July 31, 1827; Augustus, born March 11, 1829, died July 19, 1830; Nancy, born Sept. 22, 1831; Mary E., Aug. 2, 1833 (died Sept. 19, 1836); Charles Winsor, July 16, 1836; Samuel A., Aug. 10, 1839; Lewis L., May 16, 1842; Esther M., March 7, 1845; Frank, May 15, 1848 (died July 8, 1866).

(VII) Charles Winsor Harris, born July 16, 1836, son of Aldis, was educated in the district school and in Smithville Seminary (now Lapham Institute), where he was a student for two years. He then became a clerk in the variety store of Warren S. Ballou, where he remained four years.

Charles W. Harris

In 1858 he came to Providence and entered the dry goods store of William H. Remington, in the Arcade, remaining with him for two and a half years. On account of illness Mr. Harris was obliged to give up that position, and when he recovered took up other work. On March 4, 1861, the day Lincoln was inaugurated, he started a small factory for the making of hoopskirts. He commenced on a small scale, borrowing a capital of $20, and his first order was for $500 worth from a wholesale firm in Providence. Soon afterward he started a store on Westminster street for the sale of this article exclusively, and this enterprise proved very successful. After a year there he took one-half the lower floor at the corner of Union and Westminster streets. He continued at this stand for about twelve years, having a retail business in the sale of hoopskirts amounting to more than $30,000 a year, and conducted also during this time shops for the manufacture of this article in Pawtucket, Woonsocket and Fall River. In about 1865 he bought out the office of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and took the agency for it for the State of Rhode Island, Windham County, Conn., and Bristol County, Mass. On the completion of the Barnaby building, Mr. Harris leased the whole of the first floor and combined the two businesses, the machine business having been previously located at No. 129 Westminster street. Having taken Jason P. Stone, a former employe, in as a partner, the firm became known as Jason P. Stone & Co., Mr. Harris being the company. Mr. Stone left the firm in 1872, and Mr. Harris, having sold out the hoopskirt business, took entire charge of the sewing machine business for about twelve years, during which time, through his numerous agencies, he used to sell an average of about 3,500 machines per year. In 1886 he sold his office back to the company.

Mr. Harris became interested in a horse shoeing establishment, in the early eighties, and continued same until 1898, when he sold out the business. In this he employed five men. In 1875 Mr. Harris bought the grocery which he now owns on Courtland street, from M. J. Flanders, later having John Flanders with him as a partner. In connection with his other enterprises Mr. Harris has owned and operated a large livery barn for a number of years. He is one of the successful, resourceful business men of Providence, his enterprises being notable for the originality and logic of their inception and for their successful operation. His success has been from his own efforts entirely.

Mr. Harris married Harriet F., daughter of James S. Arnold, of Providence, but formerly of Killingly. They had no children. Mr. Harris has always been a Republican in politics, but has never taken an active part in such affairs. He erected his present home at No. 46 Brighton street, about 1894, and has since resided there.

(VII) SAMUEL A. HARRIS, who during his life time was a well known manufacturer at Providence, was born on the old Harris homestead in North Scituate, Aug. 10, 1839, son of Aldis Harris. He attended school near his home, and then was a bookkeeper for George Carr for two years, later engaging in the cotton manufacturing business with William Butler. When the Civil war broke out this business was discontinued, and Mr. Harris began box manufacturing on Fountain street, and in this he continued as long as he lived. His death occurred July 16, 1871, and he was laid away in Swan Point cemetery. His wife, Adeline Blanding, daughter of Col. Christopher Blanding, died March 20, 1885, and was buried in the same cemetery. They were the parents of two children: Mary Blanding, born Oct. 5, 1867, now a popular teacher in the Federal street school, Providence; and Frank Aldis, born July 23, 1869, who graduated from Point Street Grammar School, and was a clerk in the National Bank of Providence when he died in 1887.

(VII) LEWIS L. HARRIS (deceased), who for many years was a well known manufacturer of machinery at Boston, but who passed the greater part of his life in Providence and vicinity, was born on the old Harris homestead in North Scituate, May 16, 1842, son of Aldis and Mary (Winsor) Harris. He passed his boyhood days on the farm, and attended the local schools. When his parents removed to Providence he joined them, and he made Providence his place of residence for the remainder of his life. As a young man he became interested in the manufacture of crinolines in company with his brother, Charles W., in Pawtucket, and later became interested in the sewing machine business. In the early eighties he began manufacturing machinery at Boston, and in this he continued until his death. He was a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, and was well-known and highly respected. At one time he was a member of the Masonic fraternity, but at the time of his death was not a member of any society or club. He died Feb. 28, 1905, and was buried in the family plot in Swan Point Cemetery.

Mr. Harris was twice married. His first wife was Maria A. Place, daughter of Raymond Place. She died March 28, 1869, and was buried in Swan Point cemetery. In June, 1875, he married (second) Esther S. Mercer, of Hartford. To Mr. and Mrs. Harris was born one child, a daughter, Maude Luriet, now the wife of Walter H. Hanley, son of the well known brewer of Providence, and they have a son James Harris Hanley, born June 9, 1907.

(VII) NANCY HARRIS, eldest daughter of the late Aldis Harris and Mary (Winsor), was born in Scituate, Sept. 22, 1831, and she received her education in the district schools of North Scituate and at Smithville Institute, now known as Lapham Institute. After her graduation she began school teaching, for four years having the school in North Scituate, and one year in the town of Foster. She then entered the employ of her brother, Charles W., as superintendent of the hoop skirt department, where she spent seven years. At the end of that time she moved to the town of Bristol, and for fifteen years conducted with success a dress and hoop skirt making establishment. She sold out this business to return home to care for her mother in her declining years. She is a member of the Pilgrim Congregational Church.

(VII) ESTHER M. HARRIS, youngest sister of Nancy Harris, was born in the town of Scituate March 7, 1845. She received a good education in the local school and was graduated from the Providence high school in 1869. For a short time she taught an evening school on Richmond street, Providence, and then entered her brother's store as clerk and bookkeeper, remaining three years. She next began dressmaking, and has since made that her business. She resides with her sister, Miss Nancy, on Carpenter street. Her religious connection is with St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

HARRIS. The Harrises of Rhode Island of the old stock are among the oldest families in New England, their progenitors, William and Thomas Harris, having accompanied Roger Williams to this country in 1630, but ten years later than the coming of the Pilgrim Fathers themselves. These men were among the founders of Rhode Island and both conspicuous figures in the Colonial history of the Commonwealth, occupying high places in public life. For a century, for a hundred years, beginning with 1648, there was hardly a session of the Colonial Assembly at which a Harris was not a member, among them during that period being Thomas, William, Toleration, Andrew, Thomas, Jr., Henry and Christopher Harris, some of whom represented their town repeatedly in that body. Beginning a century later and since among those of the Harris name in that body may be mentioned Hons. David S., Cyrus, William A. and Edward Harris. Through the past century, since the industrial life of Rhode Island has been so great a factor in its progress and wealth, the Harris name has been conspicuously identified with the State's manufacturing interests, and to one of this family—the late Hon. Edward Harris, the wealthy manufacturer of Woonsocket and its great benefactor—was at one time accorded the distinction of being the chief woolen manufacturer in the United States. Hardly less conspicuous, though smaller and earlier manufacturers of the same section, were the uncles of Edward, the late William and Samuel B. Harris. Then early in the State's industrial life at River Point figured conspicuously as a pioneer in manufacturing the late Dr. Stephen Harris, who was succeeded by his sons, Cyrus, Caleb and Stephen, and perhaps others. And still another manufacturer of that period was Hon. Elisha Harris, the founder of the village bearing his name, Harrisville; while among later and prominent manufacturers of the Harris name are numbered the late Hon. William A. Harris, of the William A. Harris Steam Engine Company, of Providence, and his sons, Frederick A. W. Harris and William A. Harris, Jr., successors to the business, and among the leading business men of the city. A glance, too, at the past hundred years of the banking interests of the city of Providence and State shows a Harris connection, the names of Cyrus, Caleb, Stephen, Elisha, Edward, Thomas, among others, being in the board of directors or presidency of such institutions. Some of the name have been prominently connected with the insurance companies of Providence, notably the Providence Mutual Fire, the Rhode Island Mutual Fire, the Firemen's Mutual, the State Mutual, the Narragansett Fire and Marine and the Union Mutual Fire Companies. Then there lived in Barrington the late Edwin H. Harris, a son of Stephen, of Providence, whose son, the late Otis G. Harris, was one of Barrington's highly respected citizens and some of whose children are still of that town. And many of the Harris name to-day, as did they two hundred and fifty and more years ago, represent the leading interests of the State. In the following family history and genealogy the order is chronological, the Roman characters indicating generations from the two immigrant settlers.

(I) Thomas and William Harris, brothers, came with Roger Williams, in 1630, in the ship "Lyon," from Bristol, England, to Boston. Thomas Harris was one of the thirteen signers of the Providence Compact, 1637, and was one of the thirty-nine signers of an agreement for a form of government, 1640. For a number of years, from 1652 to 1663, he was commissioner. He was lieutenant in 1654 and juryman in 1656. He was deputy, 1664-66-67-70-72-73, and in the town council in 1664-65-66-69; he was assistant, 1666-67-68-69-71-72-73-74-75. His wife, Elizabeth, died in 1687. He died in 1686. Their children were: Thomas, Mary and Martha.

(I) William Harris, brother of Thomas, born in 1609, came to Boston as stated, in the "Lyon" with his brother and Roger Williams. He was one of the six persons who arrived in 1636 at Providence as first settlers; was one of the twelve persons to whom Roger Williams deeded land in 1638; was one of the twelve original members of the First Baptist Church, 1639; and one of the thirty-nine signers of the compact for good government, 1640. Mr. Harris removed to the "Pawtuxet Purchase" in 1638. He was a man of marked, positive character, and was chosen by his friends to fill important posts of honor and trust. He and Roger Williams became antagonistic. He was commissioner, 1660-62-63; deputy, 1665-66-72-73; assistant, 1666-67-68-69-70-73-74-75-76; was a member of the town council, 1670-77, and general solicitor, 1671. Difficulties arose as to the proprietorship of certain lands in Pawtuxet, and in 1677 Harris made a voyage to England in the interests of his friends. He subsequently made two others, and on the fourth, in 1679, he was taken prisoner by a Barbary corsair and carried to Algiers, where on Feb. 24, 1680, he was sold as a slave in the market. He was ransomed a year later at a cost of $1,200. He traveled through France and Spain and reached London only three days before his death, in 1681, in the seventy-third year of his age. His wife Susannah died in 1682. Their children were: Andrew, born in 1635; Mary; Susannah; Howlong; and Toleration, who was killed by the Indians.

(II) Thomas Harris (2), son of Thomas, married Nov. 3, 1664, Elnathan Tew, born Oct. 15, 1644, daughter of Richard and Mary (Clark) Tew, and was of Providence. He was deputy much of the time from 1671 to 1710, and a member of the town council in 1684-85-86. He died Feb. 27, 1711. His widow, Elnathan, died in that same year. Their children were born as follows: Thomas, Oct. 19, 1665; Richard, Nov. 14, 1668; Nicholas, April 1, 1671; William, May 11, 1673; Henry, Nov. 10, 1675; Amity, Dec. 10, 1677; Joab, Jan. 11, 1681 (died in January, 1689); Elnathan; Mary; and Joab, 1690 (died in 1729).

(III) Thomas Harris (3), son of Thomas (2), born Oct. 19, 1665, died Nov. 1, 1741. He married Phebe Brown, and their children were: Wait, born April 21, 1694; Phebe, Dec. 16, 1698; John, Sept. 17, 1700; Henry, Oct. 5, 1702; Thomas, Oct. 21, 1704; Charles, 1709; Gideon, March 15, 1714; and Lydia, June 9, 1715.

(III) Richard Harris, son of Thomas (2), born Nov. 14, 1668, died Aug. 18, 1750. He married, and among his children were: Richard, Jonathan, Amity (born Oct. 10, 1697), Amaziah, David, Preserved and Elnathan.

(III) Nicholas Harris, son of Thomas (2), born April 1, 1671, married and among his children were: Thomas, who married (second) Sarah Collins; Nicholas; Jedediah; Christopher, who married Anna Harris; Zulviah; and Sarah.

(III) William Harris, son of Thomas (2), was born May 11, 1673.

(III) Henry Harris, son of Thomas (2), born Nov. 10, 1675, married, and among his children were: Henry, born Aug. 6, 1706; Thomas; and Lydia, married to William Tillinghast.

(III) Joab Harris, son of Thomas (2), was born in 1690.

(IV) John Harris, son of Thomas (3), was born Sept. 17, 1700.

(IV) Thomas Harris (4), son of Thomas (3), born Oct. 21, 1704, married Abigail Smith, and their children were: Lydia, who married William Albertson; Phebe, who married Edward Smith; Joseph; and Abigail, who married John Holden.

(IV) Charles Harris, son of Thomas (3), born in 1709, married Mary Hopkins, and their children were: Henry, who married Roby Smith; Amy, who married William Browning; Gideon; Nancy; Stephen, who married Lydia Beverly; Joseph; Oliver; Mercy, who married Caleb Fenner; and George (lived to be ninety-three), who married Nancy Bowen, and had two daughters, one of whom married a Mr. Mann, and the other a Mr. Andrews, the latter having two daughters, Phebe (who is principal of the Hammond Street School, Providence) and Emma (also a teacher).

(IV) Gideon Harris, son of Thomas (3), born March 15, 1714, married a Westcott, and their children were: Wait; Tabithy, who married Andrew Angell; Huldah, who married Richard Mowry; Thomas, who married Freeloove Arnold; Asahel, who married Naomi Winsor; John, who married Nancy Arnold, and Charles, who married Mary Fenner.

(IV) Richard Harris (2), son of Richard, married (first) Martha Foster, and (second) Mary Colwell, and their children were: Richard, married Mary Thomas; Jeremiah, married Abigail Smith; Anthony; David, married Abigail Farnum; Jabez, married Martha Arnold; and Abner, married Amy Colwell.

(IV) Jonathan Harris, son of Richard.

(IV) Amaziah Harris, son of Richard.

(IV) David Harris, son of Richard, born in 1714, married (first) Mary Jenckes, and (second) Martha Jenckes, born in December, 1724, a daughter of Nathaniel, who was a son of Joseph (3), a grandson of Joseph (2) and a great-grandson of Joseph Jenckes. She died in June, 1826. David Harris died in March, 1797. His children were: An infant and David, both of whom died when young; Sarah, born in 1750; Joseph, born in 1752; Stephen, born Dec. 28, 1753; Amey, born Jan. 9, 1756; Martha, born in 1758; and George, born in 1766.

(IV) Preserved Harris, son of Richard, married Martha Mowry.

(IV) Henry Harris, son of Thomas (3), born Oct. 5, 1702, died Feb. 16, 1789. He married about 1727, Tabitha Westcott, born Dec. 7, 1706, and they had children as follows: Phebe, born May 29, 1728, who married Arthur Fenner; John, born May 8, 1731; Josiah, born Sept. 3, 1737; Caleb, born Aug. 9, 1739, died Jan. 17, 1812, who married Oct. 11, 1760, Margaret Westcott, born in 1742, died April 1, 1825; ———, born Aug. 9, 1739, who married Benjamin Slack; and Hannah, born Nov. 25, 1744, who married John Colwell.

(V) Caleb Harris, son of Henry, born Aug. 9, 1739, married Oct. 11, 1760, Margaret Westcott, born in 1742, daughter of William (2), granddaughter of William, great-granddaughter of Jeremiah and great-great-granddaughter of Stukeley Westcott. They were of Johnston, R. I. Mr. Harris died Jan. 17, 1812, and Mrs. Harris passed away April 1, 1825. Their children were: Stephen, born April 23, 1761; John, born Nov. 24, 1762; Cyrus, born in Johnston, Sept. 3, 1764; Lydia, born Nov. 17, 1766 (died Sept. 5, 1767); Harding, born Sept. 12, 1768; Caleb, born Sept. 7, 1770 (died March 28, 1771); Hannah, born April 2, 1772 (died Sept. 12, 1772); Joseph, born Nov. 5, 1773; Caleb, born Nov. 20, 1775 (died in October, 1782); Phebe, born Dec. 4, 1777; Amey, born May 27, 1779 (died March 26, 1780); William, born Oct. 10, 1780; and Sarah, born June 1, 1782.

(V) Joseph Harris, son of David, born in 1752, married Oct. 28, 1779, Hepzibah Bunker, born in 1757, daughter of Paul and Hannah (Gardner), he a descendant of George Bunker through William and Jabez, and she a descendant of Thomas Gardner through Richard, James and Samuel. Mr. Harris died in Smithfield, R. I., Feb. 25, 1823. His widow died in 1846. They resided in Lime Rock, R. I. Their children were: David F., born in 1780; William, born in 1781, who died in 1783; Hannah, born in 1783, who died in that year; Sarah, born in 1784, who died in that year; William (2), born in 1785; Joseph, born in 1787, who died in 1788; Daniel, born in 1789, who died in 1790; Hannah, born in 1791, who died in that year; Samuel B., born in 1793; and Daniel G., born in 1795.

(V) Stephen Harris, son of David, born Dec. 28, 1753, married (first) Jan. 28, 1775, Hannah Mawney, and (second) Abigail Cushing. The children born to the first marriage were: John M., born July 15, 1775, died Nov. 2, 1776; Henry, born May 23, 1777, died Aug. 8, 1778; and Stephen M., born Aug. 25, 1786, died Feb. 21, 1823. Those born to the second marriage were: Abby died when young; Sarah O., born Jan. 30, 1795, married a Mr. Green; Benjamin C., born Jan. 21, 1797, married Eliza Greene (their son Thomas died May 14, 1898, aged seventy-two years); Edwin Henry was born Oct. 21, 1798; Abby (2), born Aug. 3, 1800, married a Mr. Mann; George J. was born July 10, 1805; and Charles F., born Dec. 13, 1809, died young.

(VI) Cyrus Harris, son of Caleb, born Sept. 3, 1764, married Lydia Latham, born in 1768, in Johnston, daughter of William and Elizabeth Latham, he born about 1736, a son of Robert, grandson of Joseph and great-grandson of Robert Latham. William Latham died May 20, 1796, in the sixty-first year of his age, and his wife, Elizabeth, died in 1818. Cyrus Harris died June 10, 1806, in Scituate. His wife died June 25, 1790.

(VII) DR. STEPHEN HARRIS, son of Cyrus, born Oct. 29, 1786, in Johnston, R. I., married (first) Dec. 3, 1809, Eliza Greene, born Aug. 1, 1791, daughter of James and Rebecca (Pitman) Greene, a descendant of Surgeon John Greene through John (2), Peter, William and James Greene. Mrs. Harris died March 23, 1820, and Dr. Harris married (second) Oct. 13, 1822, Maria Manton, born in Johnston July 29, 1792 (daughter of Edward Manton), who survived him, dying Jan. 28, 1869.

Dr. Harris was prepared for college in the Woodstock (Conn.) Academy and entered Brown University, but did not complete the college course. He studied medicine at Dartmouth College and with Dr. Fiske, of Scituate, R. I., and commenced the practice of medicine in Johnston, R. I., in the spring of 1808. A year later, in June, 1809, he removed to the town of Coventry, R. I., locating in the practice of medicine in the village of Quidnick. After his marriage he again made a change, this time locating at Centreville, in the town of Warwick. Here he became associated in practice with Dr. Sylvester Knight, and in connection with their practice they carried on a drug store and grocery. In 1812 Doctors Harris and Knight with others purchased land for manufacturing purposes, and in that or the following year erected a mill and engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods, under the title of the Greene Manufacturing Company. The concern ceased operations in 1816 and the year 1817 saw Dr. Harris alone in the enterprise. The business was resumed in 1818, and as time passed it increased and improved facilities were supplied. In 1836 a large stone mill was built and more modernly equipped. To this were subsequently made additions and in 1844 the second stone mill erected. This latter mill was greatly enlarged in 1855 and the business was carried on by the Doctor until the time of his death, when it became the property of his children, who operated it for years. After the death of Dr. Harris, the mills again were operated under the firm title of the Greene Manufacturing Company.

During the winters of 1816, 1817 and 1818, when the mill at River Point was idle, Dr. Harris, associated with Resolved Waterman, one of his business partners, carried on a commission business at Savannah, Ga. Dr. Harris died Oct. 10, 1858.

The life of Dr. Harris was thus referred to by one of the State papers: "He was a remarkable man in some respects. He was as bold in larger affairs as he was cautious in minutiae. His promise was slowly given, but the fulfillment of it, however difficult, was so faithful as to be proverbial. He was practical but progressive; conscious but self-confident; resolute but never infatuated. He was a lover of money but he loved truth and integrity as to character, as well as money. The excitement of business stimulated all the energies of his body and mind, withdrawing the latter from a profession in which he must have been distinguished, and taxing the former, which was naturally feeble, with incessant occupation. The objects of his ambition were commercial and he fully realized them. He was beloved in private and respected in public. He conformed to the ways of the world, and never attempted to set up as an intrusive reformer. He commenced in business at the same time with other young men. While he was slowly tunneling the high obstacles that seemed to block up the pathway of fortune, they ascended the eminence by successive leaps. While he was not heard of for a few years outside of a circle of cautious business men, they were spoken of as prodigies of mercantile talent and genius. While he planted the seeds of his skill in a tract of land, taxed in 1798 for $800 and for which he paid about $2,500, and which now, through his mental alchemy, is taxed for $190,000, they, in the meantime, outlived their enchanted prospects, saw the sun of their youth go down in clouds in their old age, their wealth scattered like an exploded meteor and their influence utterly blighted."

The children born to Dr. Harris and his wife Eliza (Greene) were: (1) Lydia, born Oct. 16, 1810, married July 18, 1836, Henry H. Pease, of Yazoo, Miss., and died Nov. 30, 1836. (2) Cyrus, born Oct. 16, 1812, died June 23, 1887. He married Aug. 26, 1836, Abby, daughter of Lovewell and Susannah (Greene) Spalding, and their children were: Henry Pease, born March 2, 1838, died June 23, 1839; Henry Pease (2), born March 1, 1840, died May 16, 1875, married May 12, 1870, Frances Lea Chambers, of Wilmington, Del., who died Dec. 8, 1872, the mother of two children—Thomas Greene Harris, born in Providence Feb. 7, 1871, who died March 8, 1878; and Francis Chambers Harris, born Nov. 22, 1872, died Nov. 23, 1904, who married June 2, 1896, Ethel Constance Watts, of Philadelphia, and had one daughter, Emily Pepper Harris, born April 27, 1897; Lydia, born Jan. 13, 1842, died Dec. 21, 1844; Stephen, born Sept. 19, 1844, died June 22, 1848; William, born Sept. 25, 1847, died July 5, 1848; Charles, born June 16, 1849, died Aug. 14, 1904; Abby Greene, born Dec. 31, 1851, married Feb. 28, 1876, Samuel Ames, born April 10, 1849, died Oct. 25, 1900, son of the late Hon. Samuel and Mary Throop (Door) Ames, of Providence. (3) Stephen, born Oct. 29, 1815, died at Shawomet Beach June 15, 1894. He married Oct. 29, 1840, Eliza, daughter of Benjamin Morse, and their children were: Maria Manton, born Dec. 7, 1841, died Nov. 14, 1843; James Greene, born Aug. 24, 1844, died Sept. 3, 1868; Maria Manton (2), born Jan. 30, 1847, married March 2, 1871, Frederic L. Foster, and had: James H., born Sept. 28, 1871, Frederic L., Jr., born Dec. 29, 1872, Manton H., born June 10, 1874 (died in infancy), Edith P., born May 18, 1876, Emma H., born Dec. 26, 1878, and Maria Manton, born Nov. 14, 1881; Emma, born April 22, 1850, married Nov. 6, 1869, Howard S. Jaffrey, of New York, and had: Maud S., born Jan. 2, 1871, Edward S., born March 8, 1872, Reginald H., born in July, 1873, Kenneth H., born in February, 1875 (deceased), Percy M., born in June, 1877 (deceased), Mabel E., born in October, 1880, and Howard. (4) James Greene, born March 9, 1818, died Sept. 3, 1819. (5) Caleb Fiske, twin to James Greene, born March 9, 1818, married Emily Stevenson Davis, of Philadelphia; both were drowned in Moosehead Lake, Maine, Oct. 2, 1881.

By his second marriage Dr. Stephen Harris had children as follows: Edward Manton, born Sept. 2, 1825, died Aug. 23, 1826; Edward Manton (2), born June 26, 1828, died in Providence June 22, 1855; Eliza Greene, born Jan. 21, 1832, married Henry J. Smith Nov. 30, 1857, and died May 18, 1883.

(VI) David F. Harris, son of Joseph, born Aug. 17, 1780, married Dec. 31, 1800, Lydia Streeter, born Jan. 27, 1783, daughter of Rufus and Nancy (Ballou) Streeter, he born Feb. 21, 1754, son of Isaiah, and grandson of John of Attleboro, Mass., and Cumberland, R. I., and she born in Smithfield, R. I., a daughter of John, granddaughter of John, great-granddaughter of John and great-great-granddaughter of Maturin Ballou, a co-proprietor of the Providence Plantations in the Colony of Rhode Island. Mr. and Mrs. Harris began their married life at Lime Rock, R. I., where two or three of their children were born. Then they removed to Dutchess county, N. Y., and later, in 1818, to Ashtabula county, Ohio. Mrs. Harris died Feb. 11, 1837, and Mr. Harris married (second) Hannah Warrington, a native of New Jersey. She died in Salem, Ohio. Mr. Harris died in 1848 in Smithfield, R. I. His children, all born to the first marriage, were: Edward, born Oct. 3, 1801; Sophia, born Oct. 10, 1803; Henry, born June 6, 1805, who married Dec. 2, 1851, Mary Whittier; Samuel, born Nov. 2, 1807, who married (first) Mary Smith, and (second) S. Farnum; Rufus, born Dec. 25, 1809, who married in 1842, Louisa B. Simonds; Paul B., born Aug. 9, 1812, who married in September, 1837, Elizabeth Gaylord; Beulah Ann, born Jan. 6, 1815, who married May 2, 1834, Elijah B. Case; Hepzibah, born Jan. 27, 1817; and Rhoda, born Dec. 13, 1819.

(VII) EDWARD HARRIS, son of David F., born Oct. 3, 1801, in Lime Rock, in what is now the town of Lincoln, R. I., married (first) in 1835 Rachel Farnum, daughter of Moses and Rachel (Daniels) Farnum, born March 11, 1811, in Uxbridge, Mass. She died Feb. 7, 1846, and he married (second) in 1848 Abby Peck Metcalf, daughter of Joseph and Eunice Peck Metcalf, born July 23, 1824, in Cumberland, Rhode Island.

The boyhood of Edward Harris was passed at home, his time being occupied in farming, studying and teaching school. In 1823 he returned from the West to his native town and became assistant in the counting-house of his uncle, William Harris, then an extensive manufacturer at Valley Falls, R. I. In 1824 he entered the Albion Mills, then owned by William and Samuel Harris and Isaac Wilkinson. He first worked for his uncle William, and then for his uncle Samuel, earning $1.33 per day, and at the end of eighteen months had saved $106, which was devoted to the payment of his debts. During the second year he received higher wages, and promotion to the superintendence of the factory, which he held until 1828. In November of that year he became the agent of the Harris Lime Rock Company, engaged in the manufacture of lime, and held that position until Nov. 1, 1830. In 1831, with a capital of $3,500, saved from his earnings with the exception of $1,000 which he borrowed from his father, he bought a small woolen-mill, known as "No. 1" of the Harris Woolen Company, with one set of machines, situated on the Blackstone river at Woonsocket, and in March, 1831, began the manufacture of satinets, with Edward Seagrave and Willard B. Jolinson as associates. A decline in woolen goods necessitated his relinquishing this enterprise, and Mr. Harris returned to the Albion Mill, still retaining an interest in his satinet mill. During the following year the advance in his fabrics netted him $5,000, and this may be taken as the starting point of his great business success. Dissolving the partnership in 1837 he ever afterward carried on business alone. In 1836 was built his stone mill in Woonsocket, designated as Mill "No. 2," in which he began the manufacture of his "merino cassimere," and in 1842 he produced all-wool fabrics, extensively known as "Harris Cassimeres." In 1844 was built factory "No. 3," a large brick and stone structure in the central part of Woonsocket. In 1845 factory "No. 4" was erected and work commenced in it. All these mills were run by water from the Woonsocket Falls, supplemented by steam-power, and are known as the "old mills." They contained twenty-five sets of wool cards, and produced twelve thousand yards of "Harris Cassimeres" per week. Cotton Mill "No. 5" has seven thousand spindles. In 1860 Mr. Harris commenced his mill "No. 6," called the "New Mill," just north of the town, on Mill river, and this was the last great work of his life.

Mr. Harris made over two hundred and fifty styles of cassimeres a year, having for his standard "make the best goods possible." He would not be restricted to the usual customs of trade, and stipulated an exclusive agency with a heavy dealer in New York on condition that all notes taken for Harris Cassimeres should be kept by themselves, and that no notes from those holding or dealing in slaves should be put in that package. In 1855 he opened a ware-house in New York City, and made his bills payable two months shorter than those of other houses, allowing from two and a half to five per cent to his patrons for early payments, thus being surer of his pay and suffering much less than others in the crisis of 1857. When others suspended, he bought supplies cheaply and drove his mills vigorously. When others declined all credits, in 1861, Mr. Harris allowed three months credit, and thus increased his business. His robust constitution, clear head and great energy carried him through responsibilities of great magnitude. Rising early, he attended to the details of his great business, and would not trust to others what he could do himself. His various milling interests he incorporated into the "Harris Woolen Company," to be continued as such after his death.

While Mr. Harris was amassing a great fortune he was mindful of the welfare of others. There is reason to believe that the sum of his donations was half a million. He spent about $100,000 constructing new streets in Woonsocket. He also donated the site for the Woonsocket high school, the site for a district school, and the land for the Oak Hill cemetery. In June, 1863, he donated to his townsmen the elegant block and grounds known as the "Harris Institute," for the purpose of promoting the moral, intellectual and social improvement of the inhabitants of the vicinity. It embraces a free library, a large hall for free lectures, and on the ground floor three stores and the post-office, from which there is an increasing revenue for the support of the lectures and increase of library. The whole building and site cost Mr. Harris $75,000. He gave $2,500 to form the nucleus of a library, which now has more than eight thousand volumes.

To the banking institutions of Woonsocket Mr. Harris contributed largely in patronage and influence. He was one of the originators and the first president of the Railroad Bank, organized in 1851, afterward known as the First National Bank, and held the office until his death. In 1862 he became president of the People's Savings Bank, which office he filled during the remainder of his life. In middle life he was a member of both branches of the Rhode Island Assembly. He was a strong opponent of intemperance and slavery, and intimate with the leading Abolitionists. While known as such it was desirous to omit his name from his fabrics to increase the Southern sales. Instead he ordered his name placed on both ends of each piece of cassimere. He contributed much to the anti-slavery cause, and rejoiced in the emancipation of the slave. While John Brown was a prisoner under the sentence of death, Mr. Harris wrote him a very Christian and consoling letter, inclosing a check for $100 for his bereaved family. This was received and acknowledged in a letter written by John Brown the day before his execution. Mr. Harris died at his home in Woonsocket Nov. 24, 1872.

The children born to the first marriage of Mr. Harris were David F. and Rachel F., the latter of whom married Mr. Oscar J. Rathbun, of Woonsocket, and is now deceased. The children born to the second marriage were: Joseph M., Emma G., Isabel and Helen. Joseph M. died Oct. 21, 1872, in Berlin, Prussia.

(II) Andrew Harris, son of William, born in 1635, married Dec. 8, 1670, Mary Tew, born Aug. 12, 1647, daughter of Richard and Mary (Clark) Tew, and granddaughter of Henry Tew, of Newport, Rhode Island.

Mr. Harris had land laid out to him in 1661. He was deputy in 1669, 1670 and 1676. He died May 1, 1686. His widow died in 1688. Their children were: Mary, born Dec. 17, 1671; Anne, Nov. 22, 1673; Andrew, Feb. 4, 1677 (died unmarried); Hope, Dec. 14, 1679; Patience, June 21, 1682; Toleration, Jan. 10, 1685.

(III) Toleration Harris, son of Andrew, born June 10, 1685, married Sarah Foster, and was of Providence and Warwick, R. I. He died in 1767. His wife died in 1766. Their children were born as follows: Anne, Dec. 31, 1709; William, July 23, 1711; Joseph, June 15, 1713; Andrew, Nov. 18, 1715; Mary, Dec. 18, 1718; Sarah, June 9, 1722; John, Aug. 19, 1724; John (2), Sept. 7, 1726; Phebe, Sept. 7, 1726 (married Lenight Dexter, Sr.); and Lydia.

(IV) Joseph Harris, son of Toleration, born June 15, 1713, married July 8, 1733, Susanna Bates, daughter of Ebenezer and Katherine (Arnold) Bates, the latter a daughter of Elisha and Sarah (Carpenter) Arnold, he a descendant of Roger Arnold through Thomas, Richard, Richard, Thomas, William and Stephen Arnold, and she a descendant of Richard Carpenter, through William and Ephraim Carpenter. Mr. Harris died in Cranston, R. I., Aug. 13, 1786. His widow passed away in 1788.

(V) Elisha Harris, son of Joseph, born June 29, 1744, married Jan. 14, 1768, Frelove Dyer, born July 5, 1748, daughter of John and Frelove (Williams) Dyer, he born in 1719, a son of Charles and Mary (Lapham) Dyer, of Newport, R. I., the latter a daughter of John Lapham, of Providence, Newport and Dartmouth, Mass.; and she a daughter of Job and Lydia (Hearnden) Williams, he born in 1673, son of Joseph and grandson of Roger Williams, of Providence, and she a daughter of Benjamin Hearnden (2), and granddaughter of Benjamin Hearnden, of Providence. Elisha Harris died in Cranston, R. I., March 16, 1825, and his widow passed away June 27, 1827. Their children were: Susannah, born June 15, 1769; Joseph, born June 15, 1770; Ebenezer Bates, born July 5, 1773; and Elisha, born Jan. 20, 1777 (died Aug. 17, 1790).

(VI) Joseph Harris, son of Elisha, born June 15, 1770, married Nov. 25, 1790, Catherine Greene, daughter of John Coddington and Sarah (Clarke) Greene, he a descendant of John Greene, of Newport and Middletown, R. I., through John, John or William and John Greene; of William Coddington, of Newport, R. I., through Nathaniel, Nathaniel (2) and Ann Coddington; and she a descendant of Jacob Clarke, of Providence, through John and Sarah Clarke. Joseph Harris died in Cranston, R. I., Dec. 17, 1853, and Catherine (Greene) Harris passed away Nov. 25, 1855. Their children were: Elisha, born Sept. 8, 1791; Sarah Ann, June 25, 1793; Hannah, Feb. 19, 1795; John Clark, Nov. 13, 1797; Joseph Greene, April 4, 1803; Frelove, March 6, 1805; David Sands, and William Sewell, Dec. 24, 1812.

(VII) ELISHA HARRIS, son of Joseph, born in 1791, in the town of Cranston, R. I., married Sarah, daughter of William Taylor, of Providence, and to them came one son, who died in infancy, and two daughters, Catharine G. and Eliza A. F., the former of whom married Hon. Henry Howard, and the latter died unmarried.

Elisha Harris in boyhood attended the public schools of his native town and for a time studied at the East Greenwich (R. I.) Seminary. After his school days were over he was employed as bookkeeper in the Roger Williams Mills, at Phenix, R. I. Later on, acquiring water privilege on the stream above, in 1822 he became engaged in manufacturing for himself, to which he devoted the larger portion of his life. Here sprang up a village of his own creation, Harrisville, which took his name. He was a good manager, industrious and economical, and succeeded in developing a business which is yet, we believe, under the control and management of his descendants. For many years he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to the support of which he gave liberally, and as well to the educational institutions of that denomination both in this State and elsewhere. Through his long business career the testimony with regard to him was that "he was universally respected for his unflinching integrity, his unaffected modesty, and his winning amiability of spirit."

Mr. Harris was first a Whig and later a Republican. Although too modest to seek public office he conscientiously accepted it, when assured that it was but duty to do so. For several sessions he represented his town in the State Assembly and was lieutenant-governor of Rhode Island in 1846-47. He was governor of the State in 1847-48. He was a Presidential elector when Abraham Lincoln was chosen President of the United States. From about 1846 to 1861 he was president of the Bank of North America at Providence. Governor Harris died Feb. 1, 1861, at Harrisville, Rhode Island.

(VI) Ebenezer Bates Harris, son of Elisha and Frelove (Dyer) Harris, born July 5, 1773, married Nov. 19, 1795, Sarah Lockwood, daughter of Benoni and Phebe Lockwood. Children: Edward Bates, born Aug. 13, 1797; Benoni, Sept. 12, 1800; Avis Lockwood, Oct. 14, 1802; Phebe, May 29, 1804; Moses, Jan. 26, 1806 (died Sept. 24, 1807); Elisha, June 19, 1807.

(VII) BENONI HARRIS, born Sept. 12, 1800, son of Ebenezer Bates Harris, married Adaline E. Harris, who was born in Cranston, R. I., in December, 1804, and died in March, 1837. She was a daughter of George and Eleanore Harris, the former a son of John Harris and Nancy Knight, the latter the eldest sister of ex-Governor Knight. They had three children: Adeline Theresa, born May 1, 1831, who died Feb. 11, 1906; George Arnold, born May 31, 1833; and Benoni, Jr., born Feb. 28, 1837 (he was killed Aug. 12, 1842).

Benoni Harris lived in Cranston during the greater part of his life. His home was on Park avenue. His father owned a large tract of land in that section, the Harris family at first, through William, owning a tract twelve miles square. Benoni Harris was educated in Cranston and also attended Plainfield Academy, kept by Rowland Greene, his uncle. Soon after leaving school he engaged in cotton manufacturing by himself and with others, having as partners James T. Harris and the elder Amasa Sprague. The firm name was the Arcadia Manufacturing Company. Most of his business life was spent with this one concern, and in the conduct of his own private affairs. He was also in the calendering business in early life. Mr. Harris was a most careful business man, and very prosperous at one time, but in later life he did not keep pace with the times. He was a most intelligent man, possessing more than ordinary intellect and mental powers, and was chosen to many positions of influence, being in the town council, a director of the Cranston Bank, and a member of the Assembly. He was an old-line Whig and then a Republican and quite an influential man in public affairs. He bore a reputation for unblemished character and his death, which occurred in 1880, was sincerely mourned.

(VII) Elisha Harris, born June 19, 1807, son of Ebenezer Bates Harris, married Oct. 2, 1831, Mary A. Winsor, daughter of Abraham and Amy Winsor, and they had children born as follows: Elisha Bates, April 8, 1833; William Andrew, March 2, 1835; Abram Winsor, June 7, 1836 (died Oct. 1, 1902). Elisha Harris, the father, died July 29, 1890, and we quote the following from an article which appeared in a Providence paper on the occasion:

"This venerable citizen, whose recent death has removed a landmark from the city, is deserving of passing notice. He was born in Cranston on June 19, 1807, in the seventh generation from William Harris. In his early manhood he removed to Slatersville, where he was in the employ of Almy, Brown & Slater, they having about the year 1806 purchased a property and erected a mill in that village. In 1833 the brothers Samuel and John Slater bought out the interest of Almy & Brown and became equal owners of the mill under the firm name of S. & J. Slater. Of these mills, or of one of them, Mr. Harris was for a time superintendent. From Slatersville Mr. Harris removed to South Woodstock, Conn., where he built a cotton-mill. From 1840 to 1846 he was in the calico printing business in North Adams, Mass., the firm being Brown, Harris & Co. In the year 1846 he removed with his family to Providence, where the remainder of his life was spent. He invented and patented some improvements in cotton machinery, but failed to realize from them any permanent advantage. He was superintendent of the Providence Forge and Nut Company until its consolidation with the Providence Tool Company. He was also for a time connected with the Corliss Steam Engine Company. Mr. Harris was a consistent member of the Beneficent Congregational Church and with his wife was such for forty years."

(VIII) WILLIAM ANDREW HARRIS, son of Elisha and Mary A. (Winsor) Harris, and a descendant in the eighth generation from William Harris, born March 2, 1835, in South Woodstock, Conn., married Sept. 8, 1859, Eleanor Frances Morrill, a native of Epping, N. H., daughter of David C. and Mary Mansfield (Wentworth) Morrill, and granddaughter of Thomas Wentworth, of New Hampshire. To this union came two children, namely: Frederick A. W., born Aug. 22, 1864, and William A., Jr., born June 22, 1872.

Mr. Harris, though born in Connecticut, was practically reared in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. He came to Providence in the spring of 1838, and remained until the fall of 1840, when he went to North Adams, Mass., remaining there until October, 1846. He returned to Providence in the year last named, and there attended school until 1849 at the Fountain Street grammar school, from which he went into the Providence high school. For a time in the spring and summer of 1851 he attended a boarding-school at Williamstown, Mass., at the time under charge of B. F. and J. A. Mills. During the winter of 1851-52 he practiced drawing at his home. In March, 1852, he entered the Union Bank as clerk and was there employed until 1855, in which year he became a draughtsman in the employ of the Providence Forge & Nut Company, since known as the Rhode Island Tool Company. Early in 1856 he became employed as draughtsman for the Corliss Steam Engine Co., and remained with that corporation until Aug. 1, 1864, when he commenced business on his own account, on Eddy street, in what was, in Dorr times, Governor Dorr's headquarters. Here Mr. Harris established the business of the present William A. Harris Steam Engine Company, manufacturers of the Harris-Corliss steam engine. In November, 1868, Mr. Harris moved his plant to the corner of Park and Promenade streets, in the city of Providence, where the business is located at the present time. Mr. Harris was a self-made man in the best sense of the word. For eight years he was the right-hand man of George H. Corliss, during that time making all the drawings for that inventor's numerous patent applications. He was the first builder to leave the Corliss Company, and for many years paid royalties to Mr. Corliss.

For a period of three months during the Civil war Mr. Harris was in his country's service. He was enrolled as a private soldier in Company D, 10th Regiment, R. I. V. I., May 26, 1862, and was discharged from the service Sept. 1, 1862. His political affiliations were with the Republican party. He represented his ward—the First in 1883 in the common council, and from 1883 to 1886, inclusive, he was a representative from Providence in the lower House of the General Assembly of Rhode Island, served on the Judiciary committee, and for quite a time was chairman of the committee on Rules and Order. While a member of the Assembly he introduced the bill which forced the Consolidated Railroad to substitute gas and steam heat for its kerosene lamps and wood stoves. In 1887 he was a strong candidate before the Republican State Convention for the nomination for governor, but without his consent and without his protest his name was withdrawn and Gov. George P. Wetmore was renominated. For some fifteen years Mr. Harris was a member of the Commercial Club, of which he was at one time president; he was also a member of the Pomham Club, of the Advance Club, of the Providence Business Men's Association, and of the Norfolk Club, of Boston, Mass. He was a regular attendant at the services of the First Congregational Church, though not a member. Mr. Harris died at Providence, R. I., Oct. 29, 1896, and his wife died there Oct. 28, 1895.

The William A. Harris Steam Engine Company has contributed largely to the city's progress. The business was incorporated in 1888, with a capitalization of $100,000. It was re-organized Jan. 1, 1901, and its officers were at that time: William A. Harris, president; E. Rands Harris, vice-president; E. Francis Crowell, secretary and treasurer; and Joseph W. Seymour, superintendent and mechanical engineer. Frederick A. W. Harris has withdrawn from active participation in the business.

(IX) FREDERICK A. W. HARRIS, son of William A., passed through all the schools of Providence in getting his education, graduating from the grammar school in 1880; from the high school in 1884, and taking the degree of A. B. from Brown University in 1888. After that he took one year in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and then went immediately into his father's foundry. Beginning in the lowest place, where he worked for many months at $5 per week, he advanced by regular steps through all the different departments until he became assistant superintendent and superintendent, which latter position he had held for some two years before his father's death. Upon the re-organization of the company, after his father's death, he was made its president, and held this position until failing health, brought on by overwork, made it necessary for him to retire, about 1902. During his presidency the business of the firm was put upon the firm basis which made its subsequent prosperity possible. Mr. Harris has a keen, incisive mental grasp, which enabled him easily to comprehend fully the numerous details of the task he had undertaken, and before his retirement he ably demonstrated his ability in business lines, proving himself a worthy member of the family whose name he bears. He was a member of the Greek Letter fraternity, Psi Upsilon, and a member of the University Club.

On Oct. 20, 1891, Mr. Harris married Stella Marion Burgess, daughter of Edwin A. and Marion (Walling) Burgess, and they have had two children: Wentworth Burgess, born Nov. 28, 1893, and Marion Burgess, born Oct. 8, 1898.

(IX) WILLIAM ANDREW HARRIS, JR., youngest son of William A. and Eleanor Frances (Morrill) Harris, was born in Providence, June 22, 1872, and received his early education in the Mowry & Goff private school and the Providence high school. In 1893 he entered Brown University and graduated from that institution, in 1897, receiving the degree of B. P. Soon after his graduation, and about one year after the death of his father, he became connected with the William A. Harris Steam Engine Company. He began work with the concern not as a favored employee, but as any new employee, and at the wages of five dollars per week. Desirous of gaining a full and complete practical knowledge of the business, he worked his way up, being engaged at various times in the shop, draughting-room and main office, then becoming assistant superintendent (later superintendent) and finally President of the corporation.

During the management of the production end of the business by Mr. Harris, he devised and put into use many original card systems for tracing the manufacture of the product through the factory by daily reports, and tabulating the extensive list of customers, and maintaining a complete record of all changes thereto of engines built during the forty-five years of the concern's business; also a system for determining the vast amount of finished stock carried on hand for all new and repair work. With the aid of machine tool builders, he designed and superintended the construction of many special tools applicable for the use of engine builders.

William A. Harris is a representative of the modern type of able, active, progressive and aggressive young business man. Courteous and agreeable, he inherits many of his father's characteristics and in every way is a worthy son of an honored father. He is a staunch Republican in political faith, but merely takes a voting interest in politics. He is domestic in his tastes, fond of his home and family. He and his wife are attendants of the First Congregational (Unitarian) Church.

On June 1, 1898, Mr. Harris was married in Providence to Elizabeth Rands, born Jan. 11, 1876, in London, England, daughter of William Benjamin and Elizabeth (Waller) Rands. William B. Rands was born in Ipswich, England, and died in Providence, in 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Harris have one son, William Wentworth, born Dec. 27, 1905, and who is in the tenth generation of descent from William Harris.

(VI) Edwin Henry Harris, born Oct. 21, 1798, son of (V) Stephen Harris, married Mary Coddington Dexter, of Pawtucket, who was born Aug. 17, 1794. She died March 5, 1891. They had a family of five children, namely: (1) Caroline was born Jan. 1, 1819. (2) Nathaniel, born Dec. 11, 1820, had three children by his first wife, Julia, all of whom died young. By his second wife, Eliza, he had four children, all of whom live in England. (3) Benjamin G. was born Oct. 15, 1822. (4) Henry Willard was born Sept. 16, 1824. (5) Otis Greene, who is mentioned below, was born Aug. 21, 1828.

(VII) OTIS G. HARRIS, son of Edwin H., born Aug. 21, 1828, in Providence, married Nov. 21, 1855, Louisa Allen Bicknell, born March 2, 1836, daughter of Joseph Pick Bicknell, a descendant of Zachary through John, Zachariah, Joshua (3), Joshua (2) and Joshua Bicknell, of Barrington, R. I. [See Bicknell.] Children as follows came to Mr. and Mrs. Harris: (1) Charles F. was born Sept. 21, 1856. (2) Annie Louise, born Oct. 16, 1858, married John Carver Greene, and has had three children—Louise Harris, born in Providence, April 18, 1895, who died Feb. 8, 1897; Russell Harris, born in Providence, Feb. 28, 1898; and Elizabeth Harris, born in Barrington, Aug. 24, 1900. (3) Mary Dexter, born Oct. 19, 1860, died May 7, 1884. (4) Caroline Allen, born July 19, 1863, died May 7, 1891. She married Charles Allen Hoar, of Warren, and they had two children, Marion Louise and Charles Allen, both deceased.

Otis G. Harris was reared in Providence, where he received his education in the public and high schools. Though a quiet, retiring man, he was much liked in the town, and became one of the useful and highly respected citizens of Barrington. He was one of the original vestrymen in St. John's Episcopal Church and served his town as a member of the school committee. His death occurred in Barrington, R. I., Jan. 6, 1895.

(VIII) CHARLES F. HARRIS, born Sept. 21, 1856, married (first) Esther Mariah Whitcomb, of Providence, and for his second wife married Josephine Maria Lorenz. She was born in Posen, Germany, and on her mother's side comes of a distinguished Polish family. They have no children.

Charles F. Harris was graduated from the high school at Barrington under Professor Cady, and took a course in the Commercial College of Bryant & Stratton, of Providence. After leaving school he entered the employ of the Union Eyelet Company and was with them for ten years as bookkeeper and manager of the office work. Then he went to East Providence, where he operated the Whitcomb estate for some years. While there he was a member of the town council in 1894, being elected as a Republican candidate. In 1896 he bought the Excelsior Nickel Plating Works of Providence, which he has conducted since that time, and he has been a successful man, now having employment in his plant for about fourteen men. He does all kinds of plating, and the plant is the largest shop of its kind in the State. While living in East Providence Mr. Harris was a member of the Pomham Club.

(V) Stephen Harris, son of Charles and Mary (Hopkins) Harris, born April 23, 1761, married Lydia Beverly, of Providence, R. I. He died Sept. 4, 1843, and his wife passed away May 11, 1837, in her seventy-fifth year. They had children as follows: Nancy married Stephen Corp; Mary married Charles Rounds; Amy married William Randall; Sally died young; Russell Slack, born July 27, 1800, married Julia Potter; Aldis, born June 27, 1803, married Mary Winsor.

(VI) RUSSELL SLACK HARRIS, son of Stephen and Lydia, born July 27, 1800, married Julia Potter, of Williamstown, Mass. She was a niece of Stephen Corp, who married Nancy Harris, a sister of Russell, and the children of his marriage were as follows: Joseph Warren, born in December, 1834; Stephen C., September, 1837; Lydia Corp, Dec. 6, 1840 (who married George F. Ingraham, of Providence, and had two daughters, Blanche Harris, who married Fred H. Barrows, of Providence, and Ethel L.); William Milton, June 14, 1842; Adoniram Judson, Dec. 8, 1846.

(VII) WILLIAM M. HARRIS, born June 14, 1842, son of Russell Slack and Julia (Potter) Harris, married July 23, 1868, Ellen M. Hunt, daughter of James L. Hunt, of North Providence. Two children came of this union: William M., Jr., born July 13, 1870, was married Sept. 15, 1891, to Emma M. Tinker, and has three children, Maud, Pauline and William M.; Frederick R., born Nov. 20, 1874, was married June 22, 1898, to Sarah D. Evans.

William M. Harris attended the district schools of Scituate, R. I., his native place, receiving such advantages as the schools of that period afforded, and also for a short time went to district school at Williamstown, Mass. In 1866 he came to Providence and in 1870 established himself in business, in which he has been eminently successful, ranking among the most substantial business men of that city. The high position he has attained is the result of his own efforts.

CARR. The Carr family of Jamestown, Newport Co., R. I., one of the oldest in that section of the Commonwealth, is represented in the descendants of the late Hon. Peleg Cross Carr, and the late Hon. George Cross Carr, brothers, sons of John Carr and his wife Mary Cross. They were men who took a prominent part in the public affairs of Jamestown, representing that city in both branches of the State Legislature, were active in the business life of the city, and did much toward building it up and making it known to the outside world. They were descendants of Caleb Carr, one of two brothers who settled in Newport, and who was governor of the Colony at the time of his death.

Percy B. Carr

The Carr family is a numerous one in both Great Britain and the United States, and the name has been spelled in several different ways. Caleb and Robert Carr, brothers, were born in London, England, the former Dec. 9, 1616, and the latter Oct. 4, 1614, sons of Benjamin and Martha (Hardington) Carr, who were married in London, Sept. 12, 1613, and had two other sons: Richard, born Jan. 5, 1621, and Andrew, born Dec. 5, 1622, who came also to New England and settled. Caleb and Robert Carr came to Newport about 1638, the former becoming a large land owner in Newport, Jamestown and other parts of the Narragansett country, some of this land being still held by his descendants. The ferry originally granted to him remained in the family until 1813. He was commissioner a number of times between 1654 and 1662, was made a freeman of the Colony in 1655, was general treasurer in 1661 and 1662, many times deputy between 1664 and 1690, many times assistant between 1679 and 1691, and was governor of the Colony in 1695, on Dec. 17th of which year he was drowned, while acting in that capacity. He was buried in the old Carr cemetery in Newport, where his tombstone stood until a few years ago, when it was removed to Jamestown. He married (first) Mercy Vaughn, who died Sept. 21, 1675, at the age of forty-five years, and he married (second) Sarah Pinner, a widow, born in 1651, who died in 1706, daughter of Jeremiah and Frances (Latham) Clarke, and sister of Gov. Walter Clarke. The children born to Governor Carr were: Nicholas, born Oct. 22, 1654; Mercy, born April 6, 1656 (died young); Caleb, born Aug. 23, 1657; Mary, born Jan. 1, 1661; John, born in 1664; and Edward, born in 1666, all of the first marriage; and to the second: Frances, born in 1678; James, born in 1680; Sarah, born in 1682; and Elizabeth, born in 1684.

Nicholas Carr, the oldest son of Caleb, born Oct. 22, 1654, in Newport, lived in Jamestown, where he was a large land owner and was quite prominent in public affairs, representing the town in the General Assembly. He died Feb. 17, 1709. Nicholas Carr married Rebecca Nicholson, born Feb. 1, 1656, who died May 13, 1703. She was a daughter of Joseph Nicholson. To this union there were born: Nicholas, Sept.

19, 1679; Joseph, March 9, 1681 (died Aug. 9, 1702); Benjamin, July 7, 1683 (died Dec. 27, 1684); Jane, Aug. 3, 1686; Caleb, March 27, 1688 (died in January, 1704); Mercy, April 20, 1690; Rebecca, May 12, 1692; Ann, Feb. 5, 1694; Thomas, Jan. 25, 1696; and Benjamin, Nov. 21, 1697.

Thomas Carr, the second youngest child of Nicholas Carr, was born Jan. 25, 1696, at Jamestown, and there grew to manhood. He made his life work farming, and accumulated considerable property in Jamestown, where he died Oct. 14, 1753. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was quite a man of affairs. Thomas Carr was married Feb. 23, 1720, to Hannah Weeden, born April 14, 1699, at Jamestown, daughter of John and Jane (Underwood) Weeden, and they had these children: Sarah, born Jan. 11, 1721; Jane, Jan. 14, 1723; Benjamin, Sept. 14, 1725; John, Sept. 20, 1728; Thomas, Oct. 6, 1730 (died Oct. 14, 1753); Nicholas, Dec. 25, 1732; Rebecca, June 23, 1735; and Joseph, July 15, 1739.

Nicholas Carr, son of Thomas, born Dec. 25, 1732, at Jamestown, like his father was a farmer and large land owner, owning the property now in the possession of the grandchildren of Hon. Peleg Cross Carr, his great-great-grandchildren. Here in 1876 he built a fine frame dwelling-house, which is still occupied by the family, and in a good state of preservation. It was on this land, during the trying days of the Revolution, that Mr. Carr proved himself a brave and patriotic citizen. While the British men-of-war had possession of Newport harbor, which they were occupying, a captain from one of the ships came to Jamestown in search of cattle. Finding Mr. Carr in the field plowing, the captain approached him and offered to buy some of his stock. This Mr. Carr refused, whereupon the captain struck him, this precipitating a fight to the finish between the two, the captain returning to his ship much worsted, with his uniform covered with mud and dirt. On regaining his boat he at once sent a body of men to arrest Mr. Carr, who was taken on board ship, and was there kept for three days. Each day he was swung from the yard-arm with a rope around his neck, with the promise that he would be let down and released if he would promise to kiss the British captain's hand. Mr. Carr refused to do this, but was finally let go through the pleading of some British sympathizers, residents of Jamestown. Mr. Carr continued to make his home on the farm, where he followed agricultural pursuits. He was judge of the courts of Newport county for many years, and was a man of patriotic spirit and good citizenship. He died March 3, 1813, and was buried in the Friends' cemetery.

On Nov. 10, 1768, Judge Carr was married to Mary Eldred, daughter of John Eldred, who died June 10, 1800, and they had these children: Mary, born Feb. 19, 1771; Thomas, Oct. 13, 1772; John, May 5, 1774; and Hannah, Feb. 27, 1782 (married William Carter).

John Carr, son of Judge Nicholas, was born on the old homestead, May 5, 1774, was educated in the local schools, and grew up on the farm, which he operated during his life. He died July 27, 1823, while still in the prime of life, and was buried in the cemetery of the Baptist Church, in which he was a local preacher. On Dec. 5, 1805, Mr. Carr was married to Mary Cross, born in Charlestown, R. I., who died Dec. 24, 1822, daughter of Peleg Cross, and to this union came children as follows: Peleg Cross, born April 17, 1807, is mentioned below; Mary Eldred, born April 18, 1808, died unmarried, Aug. 29, 1873; Catherine Congdon, born April 23, 1809, married Robert Hazard Watson; Thomas Jefferson, born Dec. 25, 1810, died May 2, 1858; Nicholas, born April 8, 1812, died in Providence; John Eldred, born Jan. 15, 1814, died Oct. 20, 1885; Celia Ann, born Jan. 24, 1816, married Smith Carpenter, of Rochester, N. Y.; William Carter, born June 24, 1817, died in Providence; George Cross was born Dec. 22, 1818; Hannah Carter, born Oct. 9, 1822, died in 1834.

HON. PELEG CROSS CARR, son of John, was born on the home farm, the eldest of a family of ten children. The parents died when most of the family were still young, and their care fell to the lot of Peleg C. and his sister Mary E. He continued on the homestead, where he owned and operated a tract of 120 acres, engaged in general farming and raised sheep, being at one time one of the leading sheep men in the county. He was well known and highly respected, and was noted for his industry and thrifty habits. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in politics, and during the Civil war represented the town in both branches of the State Legislature. He also served as a member of the town council, of the board of assessors and of the school board for many years. Mr. Carr was active in any enterprise which had for its object the betterment of the town or its people, and died as he had lived, a good citizen, father and husband, Sept. 16, 1884, at the age of seventy-seven years. He was buried in Cedar cemetery, Jamestown.

On Dec. 31, 1835, Mr. Carr was married to Catherine Watson Weeden, born at Laurens, N. Y., daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Weeden) Weeden, natives of Jamestown, and descendants of its oldest families. Mrs. Carr died at her home in August, 1871, and was buried in the Cedar cemetery. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Carr: Henry Clay; Mary Catherine, who married Allen Gardner, and died July 18, 1898, leaving four children, Catherine Weeden, John Howland, Lucy Allen and Giles Carr; Abby Frances and Thomas Giles, twins; Hannah Carter, who married Gustavus Adolphus Clarke, of Jamestown, and has two children, Clarence Field Clarke and Celia Elizabeth (Clarke) Goodman; Sarah Weeden; Clarence Edward; Celia Elizabeth, who married George H. Clarke, of Shannock, R. I., and had children: George Perry, Harriet Sumner, Henry Garfield and Florence; and Isabella Watson, widow of Walter D. Watson, who resides in Michigan (her children are Walter Leon, Richard Carr and John Mitchell).

Henry Clay Carr, son of Hon. Peleg C., was born on the homestead, and was there educated, later attending East Greenwich Academy and Brown University, from which he was graduated with the class of 1861. He then went to New York, and studied law in the office of Chauncey Schaffer, after which he practised for some time before the New York Bar, later removing to Iowa. After some time spent at his profession there Mr. Carr removed to California, and his death occurred in the city of Los Angeles, in 1892. Mr. Carr married Louise Low, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the children born to this union were: Catherine Carpenter; Elizabeth Reed, who married Edmund Locke, of Los Angeles; and Henry Clay, Jr., who married Alice Eaton.

Clarence Edward Brested Carr, son of Hon. Peleg C., was born on the old homestead, and was educated in the local schools and East Greenwich Academy. He has given his entire attention to farming and sheep raising, and since his father's death has operated the old homestead, where he resides with his sisters, Miss Abby Frances and Miss Sarah Weeden Carr, ladies of culture and refined tastes, who are much devoted to the old home and its traditions.

HON. THOMAS GILES CARR, son of the late Hon. Peleg C., was born on the home farm, Jan. 16, 1843, and was educated in the local schools and the East Greenwich Academy. He then returned to the homestead, continuing there with his father until the early seventies, when he went to South Carolina and located near Charlestown, where he became engaged in the growing of cotton, spending two years. Returning to Jamestown, Mr. Carr located on the Knowles property on Shore Rock, where he has been farming a tract of seventy acres ever since, being also interested in sheep raising with his brother, Clarence E. B. Carr, as well as in the breeding of fine poultry. He has always been quite active in public life, has been assessor of taxes of Jamestown for over twenty years, chairman of the board, a member of the council and for many years a member of the school board; he has always taken a deep interest in educational matters, and for the past ten years has been superintendent of the schools of Jamestown. He is an ardent Republican in politics, and was first elected a member of the State Legislature in 1869, serving two terms. In 1872 he was elected to the State Senate, and served two terms in that body also. Mr. Carr was re-elected to the lower house of the General Assembly in 1895, serving two years, and then until 1902 was in the Senate, during which time he served on the committees on Accounts and Claims and on Fisheries. Mr. Carr is a charter member of the local Grange, in which he is chaplain.

In 1883 Mr. Carr was married, in Jamestown, to Lucy J. Cory, daughter of the late Capt. Andrew Cory, a well-known whaling captain. Four children have been born to this union: Nicholas, a clerk in the Industrial Trust Company, Providence; Maria Almy, a typewriter and stenographer at Providence; and George Caleb and Louise Cory, both of whom make their home with their parents.

SAMUEL FOSTER, for seventy years one of the best known merchants and manufacturers of Rhode Island, was descended from old and honorable New England stock. His grandfather, Timothy Foster, of Dudley, Mass., had twelve sons and four daughters, and, with all of his sons, served in the Revolutionary war, the aggregate service of that family being sixty years, a circumstance probably unparalleled in that or any other conflict. Timothy served in the French war, enlisting as a private at the age of sixteen; later he served in the Revolutionary war, entering as a private and being promoted to lieutenant. He was wounded in the service.

Samuel Foster was born Oct. 13, 1803, in Dudley, Mass., and received his education in the common schools. In 1820, at the age of seventeen years, he came to Providence, where he became a clerk for Philip and Charles Potter, in the retail grocery business, opposite the old market building on Market Square. In 1825 he formed a co-partnership with his brother, William, under the firm name of S. & W. Foster, for the transaction of the wholesale grocery business, which continued until 1877. They were located on Canal street. In 1848, in connection with his brother William and John Atwood, he engaged in the manufacture of fine cotton goods, under the name of the Williamsville Manufacturing Company, of Killingly, Conn., and continued an owner in this corporation until 1890, when he sold his interest to the grandchildren of his first partner, John Atwood. From 1848 to 1877 he had been treasurer of the company.

Years ago S. & W. Foster were for some time associated with H. S. Hutchins and William Pierce, under the name of Hutchins, Pierce &

Co., doing a wholesale grocery business. In 1849 S. & W. Foster admitted Henry J. Burroughs as a partner, under the firm name of S. & W. Foster & Co., and in 1853 Addison Q. Fisher was admitted, the firm becoming Foster, Burroughs & Fisher. Upon the death of Mr. Burroughs the business was continued under the name of Foster & Fisher. In 1862 Thomas A. Randall became a member of the firm of S. & W. Foster & Co., for the transaction of a general cotton business, continuing in business for four years. At the end of this time Mr. Foster, with his sons and Addison Q. Fisher, under the firm name of Samuel Foster & Co., engaged in the transaction of a general cotton business, continuing until 1877, when the partnership was dissolved.

Mr. Foster was a director in the Third National Bank for many years, and was also president of the First National Bank of Providence for some time. He was a third owner in the Central Mills Company, of Southbridge, Mass., manufacturers of cotton cords. In 1890 Mr. Foster practically retired from active business. He was, at the time of his death, the senior member of the Providence Board of Trade; he was for many years a member of the Squantum Club, and a regular attendant at the bakes; a member of the Rhode Island Veteran Association; and the Rhode Island Historical Society. As owner and manager he had been connected with many industries of various kinds, which made his life one of great activity and usefulness.

On June 10, 1841, Mr. Foster married Priscilla Smith, daughter of Amos D. and sister of ex-Gov. James Y. Smith. She died March 24, 1867, the mother of six children: Ella Mitchell, who died April 24, 1878, the wife of Edward H. Clark; Walter Smith, unmarried; Louis Tucker, a graduate (1865) of Brown University, who married Nov. 20, 1872, Mary H., daughter of George C. Nightingale, and had three children, Mary Nightingale, Priscilla (who died in infancy) and Louise (who died Aug. 10, 1905, and who had married George H. Waterman, by whom she had two children, twins, Louise and Priscilla, born Aug. 9, 1905); Helen; James Herbert; and Clara Denison, who married Col. Crawford Allen, who died in 1894, leaving children—Crawford, Ella Clark (married Harris D. Eaton, of Calais, Maine), Sarah Senter (married Dr. Augustus W. Calder) and Churchill Senter.

Samuel Foster married (second) May 13, 1880, Aliph Elizabeth Brinley, who died Aug. 21, 1890.

Mr. Foster died at his home, No. 59 George street, Providence, Oct. 29, 1901, in his ninety-ninth year. The regularity of his attendance at the Squantum Club was remarkable. It is, in fact, a part of the club history. His last visit there was on Ladies' Day, in September, 1901, the day before he was taken ill, and about four weeks prior to his death. He cast his ballot for eighteen Presidents, John Quincy Adams being the first, and William McKinley the last, and he was the first to vote in his ward. His life from the time he came to Providence was connected with the growth and progress of the city, and even up to the time of his last illness he took the same degree of interest in current affairs that he had a half-century before. After retiring from active business Mr. Foster traveled extensively, and for forty consecutive years visited Saratoga, and only ceased going there because his contemporaries had passed to the Great Beyond. He was a consistent member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

JAMES HERBERT FOSTER, son of Samuel, was born at the old home, No. 59 George street, Providence, and studied under Reuben Guile, the Librarian of Brown University. In October, 1873, he entered the cotton business with George H. Hoppin and R. H. Deming, and two and one-half years later became a member of the firm of R. H. Deming & Co., of Providence, the members of the firm being George H. Hoppin, R. H. Deming, J. H. Foster and D. S. Bush. Mr. Deming died Dec. 14, 1902, leaving J. Herbert Foster the only surviving member of the firm.

Mr. Foster is very prominent in financial circles. He is a member of the New England Manufacturers Association, the Board of Trade, Squantum Club, Hope Club and West Side Club. He married Miss Emma R. Covington, of Lafayette, Indiana.

HORACE NICHOLS HASSARD, of Newport, business man, legislator and public-spirited citizen, is a creditable member of the well-known family of Hassard (or Hazard) in Rhode Island. He is the son of Joseph Stanton and Alice (Johnson) Hassard, and is in the eighth generation from Thomas Hazard, the progenitor of the family in America. The ancestry of the family, which follows, is given in chronological order.

(I) Thomas Hazard was born in 1610, and died 1680. He married (first) Martha ———, who died in 1669, and (second) Martha, widow of Thomas Sheriff: she died in 1691. His name is first found in Boston, Mass., in 1635. On March 25, 1638, he was admitted a freeman of Boston, and two years later he was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth, R. I. He was one of the founders and first town officers of the town of Newport, along with Coddington, Easton, Coggeshall, Brenton, Clarke, Bull and Dyre. On Sept. 2, 1639, he was admitted a freeman of Newport, and on March 12, 1640, he was appointed a member of the General Court of Elections. His children were: Robert; Elizabeth; Hannah and Martha.

(II) Robert Hazard, son of Thomas, was born in 1635, in England or Ireland, and died in 1710. In 1665 he was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth, R. I. From that time until 1698 his name often appears in the Colonial records as chosen to fill some important position. He married Mary Brownell, who was born in 1639, daughter of Thomas and Anne Brownell, and she died in 1739, being exactly one hundred years old. To this union were born children as follows: Thomas, George, Stephen, Martha, Mary, Robert, Jeremiah, and Hannah.

(III) Stephen Hazard, son of Robert (date of birth not known), died Sept. 29, 1727. He was an active and enterprising spirit in the affairs of the Colony. A large landholder, he early in the century saw the possibilities for water-power in North Kingstown, and bought large tracts of land so situated as to control the power. He was admitted a freeman of the Colony in 1696. In 1702-06-08-09-15 he was deputy, and in 1707-08-19-20-21-22 he was assistant. In 1707 he was appointed justice of the peace for Kingstown, which office gave him the title of Judge, by which he was known by his descendants. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Rouse and Mary Helme, and to this union were born children: Mary, Hannah, Susannah, Stephen, Jr., Robert, Samuel, Thomas, Elizabeth and Sarah.

(IV) Governor Robert Hazard, son of Stephen, was born Sept. 12, 1702, and died in 1751. In 1722 he was admitted a freeman of the Colony, and in 1734 he was deputy from South Kingstown; this position he held until 1749. The following year he was chosen Deputy Governor, and died while holding this office, his last term being May, 1751. That he was a prominent man in the affairs of the Colony, active and able, and faithful in the discharge of his duties, is shown by the fact that from his thirty-second year until his death he was always found performing the duties attendant upon his position, making and sustaining the laws of the Colony. He married Esther, daughter of Joseph and Esther (Gallup) Stanton, and to this union came children as follows: Joseph, Elizabeth, Esther, Stephen, Robert, Jr., Samuel, Hannah, Joshua, and Stanton.

(V) Samuel Hazard, son of Governor Robert, was born about 1739, and was admitted a freeman from South Kingston in 1760. He married May 3, 1763, Hannah, daughter of Benjamin Perry, and she died Dec. 12, 1772. He married (second) Susannah Perry, sister to his first wife. He married (third) Dec. 11, 1785, Elizabeth, daughter of Deputy Governor Jonathan Nichols. Samuel Hazard died in 1787. His children by his first marriage were: Benjamin, Gideon, Esther, Elizabeth and Joseph Stanton. To the second marriage were born: Samuel, James, Susannah, Patrick and Joshua; and to the third: Henry and Thomas, who were probably twins.

(VI) Gideon Hazard, son of Samuel, was born Nov. 25, 1765, and died April 18, 1806. He married Elizabeth, daughter of "Long

Horace M. Hassard

Stephen" Hazard, and his first cousin. She died Nov. 21, 1818. Their children were: John G.; Joseph Stanton; and Sarah, born March 4, 1811, died unmarried, Feb. 21, 1883.

(VII) Joseph Stanton Hassard (or Hazzard) was born Feb. 22, 1800, in Kingston, R. I., and died in Putnam, Conn., Feb. 22, 1876. In early life he entered a cotton mill, and by displaying energy, thrift and aptness at the business soon acquired a thorough knowledge of every detail of cotton goods manufacturing. His first work as an experienced man in this line was at White Rock, R. I., where he started the first satinet mill in the United States, of which mill he was agent and general manager for several years. Later he removed to Killingly, Conn., and for a time was agent of the mill conducted by Judge Young. He finally became agent of the Smith Wilkinson mills at Putnam, in which capacity he made a decided success, serving in this capacity with ability and efficiency for over thirty years. By close application and intelligent attention to every detail of the business he mastered it so thoroughly that he became recognized as a leader in his line. Moreover, he had a temperament and manners which won him many friends, and as a citizen he commanded the respect and esteem of all who knew him. In his death the city of Putnam lost a man who had assisted materially in its business growth. He was a member and regular attendant of the Baptist Church, to which he and his estimable wife gave their liberal support.

Joseph Stanton Hassard married Alice Johnson, daughter of Elisha B. and Abby (Hazard) Johnson, of River Point, R. I., who passed away in Putnam, Conn., at an advanced age, and this union was blessed with children as follows: Sarah E., who married Riley E. Smith, of Putnam, Conn., where she now resides, a widow; Mary Jane, who married W. Irving Bartholomew, of Pomfret, Conn., where she resides, a widow; Horace Nichols; Abby, who married Henry Covell, of Putnam, where they reside; and Ellen M., who resides in Putnam, unmarried.

(VIII) Horace Nichols Hassard was born April 2, 1839, in Killingly, Conn., and received his early educational training in the schools of Killingly and Putnam. Leaving school when thirteen years of age he went to Providence, R. I., in which city he became a clerk in the wholesale drug store of John G. Hassard. But the drug business did not agree with him, and after a time he returned to Putnam, where he became apprenticed to Almanson Herrenden, to learn the carpenter's trade. So readily and rapidly did he familiarize himself with the details of the business that at the end of two years he was placed in full charge of Mr. Herrenden's business, having under him from forty to fifty men. He remained in that capacity for about a year, and although his position was one of much responsibility he received but fifty cents a day for his services.

In about 1860, having acquired a thorough and practical knowledge of the various branches of the carpenter's trade, Mr. Hassard engaged in business on his own account as a contractor and builder. After continuing in business alone for several years he took into partnership with him Charles H. Kelley, the firm becoming Hassard & Kelley, and continuing as such until the year 1883, when Mr. Hassard sold his interests to his brother-in-law, Henry Covell. He had been actively engaged in business for a period of twenty-four years, during which period he constructed many of the handsome homes and large mills in and about Putnam, which still stand as monuments to his skill and executive ability.

Upon selling out his interests in Putnam Mr. Hassard removed to Newport, R. I., where for about three years he lived retired. Then, as head of the firm of H. N. Hassard & Co., he established the spring and mineral water business which he continued for about six years, when he sold it to the late Howard Smith. After spending another three years in retirement from active business Mr. Hassard made a venture in the grocery line, at the corner of Broadway and Farewell street, being in partnership with his son under the firm name of E. A. Hassard & Co., and his connection with that business has continued up to the present day.

Though he has been so active in commercial affairs Mr. Hassard has found time for effective public service, and as the nominee of the Republican party he has been four times honored with election to the State Assembly as representative from Newport in 1903, 1905, 1906 and 1907. The last three times he was elected as first representative. In 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, Mr. Hassard was elected a member of the Representative Council from the Second ward for the three year term. Upon each occasion he was given large majorities, a most convincing evidence of his popularity and the general estimate of his worth. During his first year in the House of Representatives he was a member of the committee on Education, and the second year was a member of the committees on Education and Public Institutions, and the last two years was a member of the committees on Public Institutions and Corporations. His services have been marked by the utmost fidelity to the trusts reposed in him, and by the business-like discharge of all his duties.

In 1864 Mr. Hassard was united in marriage with Sarah Elizabeth Tourtellout, daughter of William H. and Azama (Cudworth) Tourtellout, of Putnam, Conn. To Mr. and Mrs. Hassard have been born children as follows: Nellie is at home. Edward A., born Feb. 22, 1875, in Putnam, is associated with his father in the grocery business; he is unmarried. Ruth A. is at home. Annie died at the age of twenty-two years. The family unite with the First Baptist Church of Newport, which Mr. Hassard also attends and to the support of which he contributes liberally. He belongs to various Masonic bodies, having held membership in Quinebaug Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., of Putnam, and transferred to St. John's Lodge, No. 1, on his removal to Newport; he also belongs to Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.

Mr. Hassard is a truly self-made man, and his life has not only been a success from a material standpoint, but also in his relations to his fellowmen. He has taken an active part in the affairs of his adopted city, and indeed has been a useful man in every community in which he has resided. Possessed of clear judgment, manly courage and positive convictions, his opinions carry weight and his counsel is sought for and accorded respectful consideration. His sound business principles, marked executive ability and conservative methods in all his dealings have made him trusted beyond the ordinary, and he has proved true to every confidence. He is well versed in the principles of good government, a fact which has made itself apparent in the manner in which he has fulfilled his public positions, his services having been characterized by rare good judgment and the most honorable observance of the rights and needs of his constituents. He is courteous and affable in manner, winning the admiration of casual associates and the lasting esteem of those who know him best.

COLVIN (Providence family). Since the close of the seventeenth and early part of the eighteenth centuries the Colvins of Dartmouth, Mass., and of Providence, R. I., and vicinity have been identified with this region and here at Providence for a third of a century has resided one branch of the family, the head of which, in the person of Theodore H. Colvin, has been especially prominent in developing one of the large industries of the city; and who for years has been the chief executive officer of the corporation bearing his name—the Colvin Foundry Company. In another branch of the family there appears prominently identified with the progress and industry of his community Stephen Colvin, deceased, whose career has been a credit to his family. These branches of the Colvin family from the first American ancestor to the present are treated in brief in what follows, which is in regular order.

(I) John Colvin, of Dartmouth, Mass., and Providence, R. I., married (first) Dorothy Allan, daughter of Matthew Allan, of Dartmouth, and (second) May 30, 1726, Mary Keech. Mr. Colvin bought, in 1705, upwards of 4,000 acres of land in Providence, and was presumably a yeoman or farmer. He died Nov. 28, 1729. His children were: Anna, born March 26, 1679, died young; John, born April 19, 1681, died July 1, 1764; Stephen, born Sept. 24, 1683; Abigail, born July 28, 1686; Samuel, born Dec. 10, 1688, died October, 1759; Anne, born Oct. 31, 1690; Deborah, born May 28, 1693; Rev. James, born Nov. 24, 1695, died March 5, 1755; and Josiah, born June 6, 1700.

(II) Rev. James Colvin, son of John, born Nov. 24, 1695, was twice married, marrying (second) Anne, whose surname is unknown to us. He lived in Providence and Coventry, R. I., respectively. He died March 5, 1755. His children were: Benjamin, married Eleanor Burlingame; Caleb, married Anne Burlingame; Moses; Josiah, born in 1732, died May 14, 1791; Stephen; John; David; Henry; and Anne, born in 1742, died unmarried in 1806.

(III) Caleb Colvin, son of James, married Aug. 3, 1739, Anne, daughter of Rev. Thomas Burlingame, of Providence. Their children, all born in Coventry, R. I., were: Lydia, born Oct. 9, 1740; James, born July 9, 1741; Obadiah, born Aug. 21, 1743; and George, born Dec. 25, 1744; and perhaps others who died when young. The father of these was still living in 1773.

(IV) George Colvin, son of Caleb, born Dec. 25, 1744, in Coventry, R. I., married March 13, 1774, Mary, daughter of Nicholas and Abigail Sheldon, of Cranston, R. I. Mr. Colvin was a mariner and likely in the marine service in the war of the Revolution, as his widow Mary, of Cranston, was a United States pensioner. Mr. Colvin died Dec. 19, 1806, aged sixty-one years, seven months and six days. His widow passed away Dec. 30, 1841, aged ninety-one years, seven months and six days. Their children were: Rufus, born May 3, 1776; George, born May 23, 1779; Sheldon, born Feb. 21, 1781; Mary, born April 25, 1783; Betsey, born Sept. 1, 1785; Rachel, born Oct. 11, 1789; Caleb, born Feb. 16, 1793.

(V) George Colvin (2), son of George, born May 23, 1779, married Huldah Davis and to them were born children as follows: Henry, Rufus, Betsey, William, George and Abigail and Benjamin.

(V) Sheldon Colvin, son of George and Mary (Sheldon) Colvin, was born Feb. 21, 1781. He married Sarah Randall, and died in November, 1871; she survived until Aug. 7, 1878. Their children were: Caleb, who married Catharine Dawley, and died April 6, 1882, aged seventy-one years; Mary Ann: Nehemiah; Stephen, born Feb. 24, 1821; William Wallace, born Aug. 27, 1825, died Sept. 22, 1851; Daniel, born June 30, 1830, died March 17, 1832; and Daniel (2), born June 1, 1833.

(VI) STEPHEN COLVIN, son of Sheldon and Sarah (Randall) Colvin, was born Feb. 24, 1821,

Stephen Colvin

Theo. H. Colvin

at Pippin Orchard, in the town of Cranston. His early educational advantages were limited as were those of most boys at that time, when life presented to most of them the "rough and seamy side." He had a natural aptitude for books, and particularly for mathematics, and the trend of his thought and study was along mathematical lines and the mental depths of the discoverer and the inventor. When a young man he went to the Valley section of Warwick and learned his trade at Black Rock, later entering the machine shop of Perez Peck at Anthony. Still later he was employed with Asa Sisson, builder of the once well-known Sisson loom, in the old machine shop at Anthony. While in the shop of Perez Peck he made improvements in the loom, and it was manufactured in that shop. A partnership was formed later, among those entering the firm being Alden Williams and Charles Case. The firm was known as S. Colvin & Co., and was formed Dec. 6, 1862. Afterward Mr. Colvin bought out the interests of these men and operated the plant himself. He manufactured the celebrated Colvin Loom, one of the best known in New England and the South, where it came into very general use. In time he sold a one-half interest to Lodowick Brayton, and the plant was removed to River Point, where the business was carried on.

Mr. Colvin was in the strictest sense a self-made man. He was a Republican in his political views, but had no taste for politics or public affairs, although keenly alive to everything incident to the advancement and improvement of his community. Notwithstanding his disinclination to mingle in the social and political life of the Valley, he had many warm friends, and, it is believed, not an enemy. He attended the Methodist Episcopal Church of Phenix, R. I., of which his father was a deacon. He was a member of Warwick Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of the Eastern Star. He had been a director of the Phenix Trust Company at Phenix, Phenix National Bank, and was also a stockholder in one or two other local enterprises. His death, which occurred Feb. 18, 1904, was a keen loss to his community as well as to his many friends and his relations. He was a good and useful citizen, a loving husband and father, a kind neighbor and a loyal friend.

Mr. Colvin was married May 6, 1868, at Phenix, R. I., to Clara A., daughter of Charles P. and Caroline (Hale) Turner. Their children were: (1) Dr. Stephen Sheldon Colvin, born March 29, 1869, was graduated from Worcester Academy in 1887, and from Brown University in 1891. He was employed on the Providence Journal and the Telegram for about a year after his graduation. On Oct. 18, 1891, he married Miss Edna Boothman, who died Jan. 19, 1893. On July 23, 1895, he married (second) Eva Mable Collins, of Providence. Immediately after his marriage he went to Berlin, and pursued a course of study of several months; thence to Strasburg, Germany, where, after a period of thirteen months, devoted to study, he was given the degree of Ph. D., May, 1897. After his return Dr. Colvin taught at Worcester for four years, and in 1901, was called to the Chair of Philosophy and Natural Theology of the University of Illinois, at Champaign, Ill., where he is now engaged. To Dr. Colvin and his wife Eva Mable (Collins) Colvin has been born one son, Sheldon David, born Sept. 19, 1896, in Strasburg, Germany. (2) Sara Hale, born Aug. 29, 1878, was a graduate of Brown University of the class of 1897. She married in May, 1898, Lewis Anthony Colvin, son of James Colvin, of Worcester, Mass., and has one son, Kenneth Hale, born Jan. 5, 1901. (3) Vincent Livingstone, born Dec. 26, 1882, is at home. Mrs. Colvin is a most estimable lady and has a host of warm friends. The family are all strong in character, and are much respected by those who know them.

(VI) Henry Colvin, son of George (2), born Dec. 20, 1813, married Mary Ann Bennett, daughter of Joseph Bennett, born May 11, 1808, and they died, he Dec. 14, 1869, and she Aug. 26, 1892. Their children were: Henry G., born Dec. 28, 1835, deceased April 8, 1901; Huldah M., born July 21, 1837, died in 1895, in Warwick; Mary P., born July 28, 1839, unmarried; Frances S., born Oct. 13, 1841, married John Davis; Elizabeth, born Jan. 24, 1844, died in October, 1870; Theodore H., born April 26, 1846; Elisha H., born March 8, 1848; and Emily, born Nov. 14, 1850, married Byron Colvin, son of Rufus Colvin, of Morgans Mills.

(VII) THEODORE HAMMETT COLVIN, son of Henry and Mary Ann (Bennett) Colvin, born April 26, 1846, in the town of Plainfield, Conn., married (first) in April, 1868, Hannah Brown, and (second) in October, 1876, Augusta L. Hammett, daughter of Erastus Hammett. Mr. Colvin learned the trade of a molder in the village of Danielsonville, now Danielson, Conn., in the early sixties, entering the foundry of Caleb and James Colvin in 1864, when eighteen years of age, and after completing his apprenticeship, in 1865, went to Whitinsville, Mass., where he worked as a journeyman for six months. In December, 1865, he went to Worcester, Mass., where he entered the employ of his kinsman, Mr. Caleb Colvin, an iron founder of that city, who had in the meantime dissolved partnership with his brother and gone to Worcester. Here he continued work in his line until the year 1872, when he located at Providence, R. I., where, associated with his uncle, George Colvin, he formed the firm of G. & T. H. Colvin, establishing what has since been developed into the extensive business of the present Colvin Foundry Company.

The first location of the Colvin firm was on Dyer street, which was changed in 1873 to what was then Cove street, now West Exchange street, moving that year into their own quarters. The business was continued here under the old firm name until 1876, in which year the junior member of the firm purchased his partner's interest, and the business was continued under the name of Theodore H. Colvin until 1896, when it was incorporated under the name of The Colvin Foundry Company, the capital stock of which was $100,000. In 1897 the company erected a new plant on Globe street, which is one of the largest and most modernly equipped iron foundries in New England. The present officers of the corporation are Theodore H. Colvin, president; and Charles T. Colvin, treasurer and secretary. Also connected with the business of the corporation is another son of President Colvin, Clarence H. Colvin. The principal line of this company is engine castings and all kinds of machine castings. The firm employs an average of eighty men. Mr. Colvin's success is largely due to making "quality as well as quantity" his business motto.

Mr. Colvin needs no introduction to Providence or Rhode Island people, nor any eulogy. His residence and business career here among them for a third of a century speak for him, one having only to read between the lines of this brief sketch and to point to the extensive business his energy, pluck and ability have developed. The extensive plant of The Colvin Foundry Company stands as a monument to his enterprise.

Mr. Colvin is independent in politics. Fraternally he is a member of St. John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and St. John's Commandery, and also a member of the Central and Pomham Clubs. Mr. Colvin left home when sixteen years of age and has made his success by his own efforts and industry. He is one of the self-made men of Providence and a most useful citizen.

One child, Charles T., was born to the first marriage, his birth occurring July 3, 1869. By the second marriage Mr. Colvin became the father of Clarence H., born Dec. 20, 1877; and Earl, born May 23, 1887, who was drowned April 9, 1903, at Hunts Mills.

BENNETT. The Bennett family to which Mrs. Mary Ann (Bennett) Colvin, wife of Henry Colvin, belonged, is well known in Rhode Island. (I) Samuel Bennett, the ancestor of this line of Bennetts, was of Providence and East Greenwich. He was a cooper by trade. In 1652 he was General Sergeant, and he was made a freeman in 1655, and again in 1656. He was commissioner in 1657, member of the Grand Jury in 1661, and took the oath of allegiance May 31, 1666. He was deputy in 1668-74-78. His wife's name was Anna, and their children were: Edward; Elizabeth, who married Edward Inman, and died in 1721; Samuel; William, who married Rachael Weaver; Benjamin; Priscilla, who married Stukeley Westcott, and died in 1754. Samuel Bennett died Sept. 4, 1684, and his widow passed away in 1705.

(II) Samuel Bennett, son of Samuel and Anna, married (first) Jan. 2, 1689, Sarah Forman, and (second) April 25, 1699, Desire Berry and (third) in 1715, Rachael. The children born to the first marriage were Samuel, born Sept. 14, 1690; Sarah, Jan. 31, 1698; Hannah, April 27, 1697. By the second marriage: Elizabeth, born Nov. 19, 1699; Benjamin, born Nov. 7, 1701; John, Oct. 15, 1703; William, May 15, 1706; Priscilla, Oct. 7, 1708; Mary, April 2, 1711; and Desire, Feb. 12, 1713. Samuel Bennett was a carpenter by trade. He was made a freeman in 1685, member of the grand jury in 1688, and deputy and lieutenant in 1690. He was of East Greenwich and Coventry, Rhode Island.

(III) John Bennett, son of Samuel and Desire (Berry) Bennett was born Oct. 15, 1703. Two of his sons were: David, who married Mary Wight, July 26, 1772; and Joseph who married Dec. 9, 1773, Mary Remington, daughter of Thomas Remington.

(IV) Joseph Bennett, born in 1743-44, married Dec. 9, 1773, Mary Remington. Their children were: Thomas, born May 28, 1775; Joseph, March 8, 1777; John, Feb. 27, 1779; Asa, Feb. 2, 1781 (died May 23, 1864); Tabitha, Nov. 15, 1783; Mary, Aug. 19, 1786; Elizabeth, Feb. 4, 1789 (died May 23, 1882); Russell, Nov. 24, 1793 (died Sept. 2, 1897); Almy, July 3, 1798. Joseph Bennett, the father, died June 5, 1835, aged ninety-one years. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, as his widow Mary was a Revolutionary pensioner in 1840, at eighty-seven years. Mary Bennett passed away Jan. 14, 1847, aged ninety-three years, ten months and four days.

(V) Joseph Bennett, son of Joseph and Mary (Remington) Bennett, born March 8, 1777, married March 25, 1805, Penelope Andrews, daughter of James, of Scituate. Their children were: Penelope, born Feb. 17, 1806; Mary Ann, May 11, 1808; Thomas, Jan. 18, 1810 (died Jan. 13, 1883; he married (first) Betsey Colvin, who died Sept. 2, 1857, and (second) Phebe W. Burgess, who died Nov. 15, 1871); Amaty A., born Oct. 19, 1813 (died June 15, 1822); Joseph, born in 1815 (died Dec. 15, 1839); Russell; Asa; and Abby A. S. Joseph Bennett, the father, died Feb. 18, 1864, aged eighty-six years, and Penelope, his wife, died Jan. 10, 1839, in her fifty-second year.

HON. SAMUEL RODMAN AND DESCENDANTS. The early Rodmans in America were Quakers, peace-loving, "law-abiding people, consequently the name is rarely found in State or Colonial records; in connection with lawsuits or criminal cases never; rarely in the records of war. As the old ancestor gave up his native land for an adherence to his Quaker principles, so here his immediate descendants, though not Royalists and never treacherous to the interests of the Colony, were ready to leave the new home, and the fair estates they had builded up, rather than take part in shedding the blood of their fellow-men. For this reason the name is rarely found amongst the many who fought for and won our independence. Neither is the name found amongst those who brought in large bills for shoeing a horse or nursing a sick soldier. Such services if rendered were probably gratuitous."

This course would be in keeping with the large-hearted generosity that has always been a distinguishing characteristic of the family.

"The line of Samuel Rodman's paternal ancestors is traceable for more than two hundred years. The first progenitor of the family in America of whom we have record was John Rodman, of Christ Church parish, Barbadoes, a planter, who died in Barbadoes in 1686. His elder son, Thomas, a physician, removed to Newport, R. I., and settled there, and from him the direct line of descent was through Thomas, Samuel, Robert, Robert, to Samuel, the seventh in the line from John Rodman of Barbadoes."

"The Rodmans were originally of Redman in Cumberland, now called Redmaine, formerly a joint township with Isell. Radman, Redeman, Rodman, Redmand, Redmayn, Rodmund, Redemayn, Ridman are all variations of the same name. The Redmans or Rodmans obtained Levan in Westmoreland temp. Henry II and made it their principal residence. Arms: Gu a chev ar between four cushions ermine, tasselled or. Crest, Out of a mural coronet or a horse's head ar, maned gu. Motto, Garde de foy, granted in 1595." ["Historical & Genealogical Memoirs of the Family of Duket, from the Norman Conquest to the Present Time," by Sir G. F. Dukett, Bart. Burke gives the same.]

Hon. Samuel Rodman is descended from Richard Warren, twelfth signer of the compact, who came to Plymouth in 1620, in the "Mayflower." In the Warren Genealogy (by I. C. Warren, Boston, Mass.) we find "The name Warren of William Earl of Warren. He was a Norman baron of Danish extraction. He accompanied William the Conqueror on his expedition to England; fought at the battle of Hastings, 1066; won the confidence of the Court to such an extent that when the King left England on a visit to his native land Earl Warren was appointed one of the two guardians of the Kingdom. From this ancestry the Warrens are followed down through Earls, Knights and Commoners to the period of the Colonization of America."

On Page 336, of "Americans of Gentle Birth and their Ancestors," St. Louis, 1903, will be found the full lineage of William de Warren II, Earl of Surrey, who married Lady Gundreda of Normandy, daughter of William the Conqueror, King of England, married in 1053, Lady Matilda, daughter of Baldwin, Count of Flanders.

Hon. Samuel Rodman was in direct descent from the Colonial Governor John Coggeshall, 1647; Colonial Governor Nicholas Easton, May, 1650-1652; Benedict Arnold, President of the Colony over twenty years, May, 1657-1678 (died in office); Colonial Governor Caleb Carr, 1695 (died in office); John Easton, May, 1690-1695; John Coggeshall, Jr., deputy, 1686-1690; Robert Hazard. [Colonial Records, Historical Magazine of Rhode Island, Austin's Gen. Dic.]

Samuel Rodman, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Hazard) Rodman, the latter the daughter of Stephen Hazard, of South Kingstown, R. I., was born in South Kingstown May 3, 1800. Both in personal appearance and in character he was said to resemble his great-grandfather, Samuel, while he inherited from his mother a strain of the Hazard blood, and with it the will and energy that are necessary to success. He was born in the house that his great-uncle, William Rodman, had builded, and in the great west chamber that had been made historic as being also the birthplace of Oliver Hazard Perry, the hero of Lake Erie.

In 1821 he made his first purchase of real estate, "buying of Elisha Watson, for four hundred and ninety dollars, six acres of land with a house thereon." This land was once a part of the old Rodman estate, and in this house his eldest son, Isaac Peace Rodman, was born Aug. 18, 1822. Year by year Samuel Rodman added to his property, gathering up acre after acre of the old paternal lands. About 1830 he leased the Peace Dale Mills from Isaac Hazard, and began manufacturing; and in 1835, with Attmore Robinson, he bought the tract of land with the wharf at Narragansett Pier since called the "Old Pier," where a breakwater costing twenty-five thousand dollars was afterward built. "During the progress of the work on the breakwater an accomplished French engineer, on examining it, said that it was built on a wrong principle, and that the dock would fill with sand. Time has proved the truth of this prediction, for children now play on the sands where was once from fifteen to twenty feet of water."

In 1838 Samuel Rodman sold his rights in the "Pier" property and bought of Thomas R. Hazard 125 or 130 acres in the village of Rocky Brook; and in the same year he built the homestead, where seven of his children were born. There were on the property at the time four small houses, and a small mill containing one or two sets of machinery. In this mill he began the manufacture of woolen goods. During the following year (1839) he bought thirty acres, on a part of which stood the old Rodman mansion house and a woolen-mill. In 1853 he bought thirty acres more with several houses and a woolen-mill, and about the same time he added to his own farm the Freeman Watson farm adjoining it. This farm once belonged to his great-uncle, William Rodman, who in the last century had built the house already mentioned as the one in which Samuel Rodman was born. The small mills on the Rocky Brook estate Mr. Rodman soon replaced by substantial stone buildings, taking all the stone that he used from his own meadows, which were well named "Rocky." His success as a manufacturer was uninterrupted until the war of 1861, and he became one of the richest mill owners in the State, owning in addition to the "Rocky Brook" property mills in Wakefield and in Newport. He built pretty cottages for his operatives, made roads, set out trees and beautified the place until it became, both in appearance and in reality, one of the thriftiest as well as one of the most picturesque villages in New England.

In politics Samuel Rodman was an old-time Whig and subsequently an anti-slavery Whig. He represented his town several times in the General Assembly. In 1854, when a nomination was equivalent to an election, he was asked to take the nomination for lieutenant-governor, but he declined it. He was never defeated with the exception of once in any election in which he stood as a candidate. In 1873 he received the nomination for Congress, but declined to run. In 1841 he entered enthusiastically upon the total abstinence reform, and its measure of success in his own and the neighboring villages was largely attributable to his zeal.

For over forty years Samuel Rodman was a member of the Baptist Church and an honor to his communion. He contributed largely toward the building of the new Baptist house of worship in Wakefield in 1852, and was one of its chief benefactors. He was not in any sense a sectarian. He was liberal in his religious views and tolerant toward all Christian denominations, and aided, by liberal contributions, in the building of no less than twenty-six churches besides his own, not confining his benevolence to his own denomination.

Mr. Rodman's character was one of great natural energy, yet there were no hard lines in it. He had a certain gentleness of manner, combined with decision, which made him greatly beloved and trusted by all who came in contact with him, especially his employees, who during his last illness came to the house in numbers, begging to be allowed the privilege of watching through the nights with him. No "strike" was ever thought of in his mills. The relations between him and his employees were those of mutual confidence. He perceived that the truest method of elevating the laborer was to make him independent, and to this end, by the sale of lands to his employees at nominal prices, he encouraged his laborers to become land owners.

His hospitality was proverbial. Rarely were the guest chambers tenantless, or were there vacant seats at his hospitable board; while the distinguished guest received no more cordial welcome than the poor and needy friend or relation. A friend writing to his widow after his death said: "Mr. Rodman was the most generous man I ever knew, and I have reason to know how generous. He conferred a favor in such a way that the recipient might well question whether he had received or conferred the favor."

Samuel Rodman married (first) July 15, 1821, Mary Peckham, daughter of Benjamin and Abigail (Oatley) Peckham, and in direct descent from John Peckham, Archbishop of Canterbury; from Richard Warren, one of the twelve signers of the "Mayflower" Compact; from the Colonial Governors John Coggeshall (May, 1647, to May, 1648), John Easton (King's attorney-general for the Colony, 1656-1674, and governor, 1690-1695), Benedict Arnold (President of the Colony from May, 1657, until June 20, 1678, when he died in office), George Hazard (May, 1734, to June, 1738, died in office), John Greene (King's attorney-general, 1660-1690; member of Governor Andros' Council; Governor, 1690-May, 1700), and Caleb Carr (May, 1695, died in office); and from John Coggeshall, Jr., Deputy, 1686-1690.

Mary (Peckham) Rodman was the mother of all Samuel Rodman's children. The influence of her character and teaching was seen clearly in her eldest son, Gen. Isaac Peace Rodman. To her husband she was truly a helpmate, not only in forming the character of the older children, who came especially under her influence, but as a wise and faithful counselor in all his business relations. She took no important step without her advice. She was born Sept. 25, 1803, and died Feb. 16, 1853. Mr. Rodman married (second) Feb. 15, 1854, Mary Anstis, daughter of Wilkins Updike, Esq., of South Kingstown, and author of the "History of the Narragansett Church," "Memoirs of the Rhode Island Bar," and other works.

Mr. Rodman died May 9, 1882, in South Kingstown, on the Rodman land where he was born, and was buried in the family burying-ground. Eight of his grandsons, obeying his request, were his pall-bearers. They were: Isaac Peace Rodman, Thomas Rodman, Rowland Rodman, S. A. Rodman, B. F. Robinson, Jr., Samuel R. Robinson, Samuel Rodman Thompson and William H. Baldwin, Jr. We may conclude by saying, in the words of one who knew him well: "A larger-hearted, more whole-souled man than Samuel Rodman Rhode Island has never produced."

The children born to Samuel and Mary (Peckham) Rodman were: Isaac Peace, born Aug. 18, 1822 (died Sept. 30, 1862); Benjamin Peckham, Aug. 18, 1824 (died June 18, 1825); Louisa Hazard, March 26, 1826 (died May 2, 1854); Edward Francis, Dec. 18, 1826 (died Feb. 7, 1833); Rowland Gibson, Jan. 10, 1828; Julia Maria, Sept. 7, 1831 (died Sept. 27, 1891); Caroline Elizabeth, July 4, 1833 (died July 7, 1906); Edward Francis, May 7, 1835 (died in August, 1835); Mary Hazard, Sept. 20, 1836 (died Feb. 23, 1837); Mary Peckham, Nov. 12, 1838; Sarah Abigail, Sept. 15, 1840; Samuel, Nov. 4, 1842 (died January, 1890); Richard Sherman, Dec. 15, 1844 (died Oct. 31, 1892); Edward, Dec. 14, 1845; James Clarke, September, 1847 (died Sept. 15, 1848); James, Sept. 11, 1849 (unmarried).

PECKHAM. The ancient family so called (to which Mrs. Mary (Peckham) Rodman belonged) derived their name from the parish of Peckham, in the County of Kent, England. Thus John of Peckham in 1200—before surnames were used—became later John Peckham. John Peckham, of Newport, R. I., 1638, probably came from the Hutchinson party on the "Griffen." He was a zealous Baptist, but his name does not appear in the list of those disarmed in Boston, nor among the followers of Wheelwright, nor was he a signer of the Portsmouth Covenant. He was a brother-in-law of John Clarke, and his lands were allotted along with those of William Freeborn, John Coggeshall and others who were the first settlers of the Island of Aquidneck in 1638, where on May 20th his name is in a list of those who were admitted inhabitants of Newport. In 1640 the bounds of his lands were established, thirty-two acres. March 16, 1641, he was admitted a freeman. In 1648 he was one of the ten male members of the First Baptist Church of Newport in full communion. This same year Eleanor Peckham, his second wife, was baptized. His residence was in that part of Newport that afterward became Middletown, and a stone marked J. P. marks his grave. A reference of his will is found in a list of seventeen wills (between 1676 and 1695) that were presented in the Court in 1700 by parties interested, the law requiring three witnesses and these wills having but two.

John Peckham and his sons prior to 1700 were very extensive land holders. They were among the proprietors of the Pettaquamscott purchase in 1660. These tracts reached across southern Rhode Island from Westerly to Narragansett bay. Their purchases included Conanicut Island, Dutch Island, in the bay, besides large tracts on the island of Rhode Island, where the original settlement was made. Soon after the first settlement of Rhode Island the Peckhams bought a tract of land one mile square in Little Compton, on which they built a house, in 1640, which stood two hundred years and in which six generations of Peckhams were born. Their purchases also extended into Dartmouth, Mass., to the Acushnet river, where a part of the city of New Bedford now stands.

The great-grandchildren of John Peckham were among the settlers of North and South Kingstown and Jamestown, R. I. The succeeding generations went to Dutchess county, New York.

In a deed dated May 30, 1651, from Joshua Coggeshall and his mother, Mary Coggeshall, to Walter Connigrave, the land is described as bounded "on land granted to Mary Clarke now deceased, sometime the wife of John Peckham." The grant referred to was made previous to 1644. She was born in 1607. The children of John Peckham and Mary Clarke, his wife, were: John, born in 1645, married Sarah Newport; Thomas married (second) Widow Hannah (Weeden); William, born in 1647, married (first) a Clarke and (second) Phoebe Weeden, who died in 1734.

(II) John Peckham, born in 1645, lived on the Peckham estate in Little Compton, R. I., and was one of the original proprietors of East Greenwich, R. I., in 1677. He married in 1667 Sarah Newport. He died in 1712. Issue: Elizabeth, born Sept. 17, 1668; John, Sept. 17, 1673; Mary, Sept. 30, 1674; Reuben, Feb. 3, 1676; Peleg, Dec. 11, 1677; Joseph, Jan. 8, 1679; Sarah, Sept. 5, 1680; Timothy, Aug. 5, 1681; Benjamin, June 9, 1684; Isaac, Aug. 10, 1688; Sarah B., June 26, 1690.

(III) Benjamin Peckham, born June 9, 1684, lived in South Kingstown. He married Sept. 23, 1708, Mary, who died in 1761, daughter of Caleb and Philippa (Greene) Carr, of Jamestown, R. I., and granddaughter of Robert Carr. She was also a granddaughter of Gov. John Greene. Her sister was the wife of Thomas Paine. Benjamin Peckham died in 1769. They had six children: John; Mary, who married Hezekiah Babcock, of South Kingstown, Jan. 3, 1739-40; Benjamin, Jr., who married Mary Hazard in 1737; Timothy; Peleg, born June 28, 1723; and Isaac, born Dec. 23, 1728.

(IV) Benjamin Peckham, Jr., born March 22, 1715, settled in South Kingstown, R. I. He had extensive landed estates, which he farmed in a large way. He married June 2, 1737, Mary (born July 16, 1722, died April, 1805), daughter of Lieut.-Gov. George and Sarah (Carder) Hazard. Records of seven children remain. From these are descended most of the New York Peckhams, including Judge Rufus and Wheeler Hazard Peckham. Benjamin Peckham, Jr., was town clerk of South Kingstown, 1736-1743; moderator of the South Kingstown Convention, 1784; one of a committee appointed to settle an account against Thomas Ninegret, Sachem of the Narragansetts, in 1767; and a member of the Legislature, 1768. Benjamin Peckham, Carder Hazard and William Potter were a committee to address a letter to the Committee of Correspondence of Boston, Nov. 22, 1774, from South Kingstown, contributing sheep and urging steadfastness in the good cause. He was an energetic, public-spirited man. He died in 1792. His children were: George Hazard, born April 13, 1739, died Nov. 26, 1799, who married Sarah Taylor; Josephus, born Feb. 21, 1742, died March 27, 1814, who married Mary Babcock; Sarah, who married John Robinson; John Paine; William, born in 1752, died May 19, 1820, who married (first) Mercy Perry and (second) Dorcas Perry; Mary, who was born Jan. 7, 1827, died September, 1803, unmarried; and Peleg, born June 11, 1762, died in 1828, who married Desire Watson.

BRIG.-GEN. ISAAC PEACE RODMAN, eldest son of Samuel and Mary (Peckham) Rodman, was born in South Kingstown, R. I., Aug. 18, 1822. On June 17, 1847, he married Sally Arnold, daughter of Gov. Lemuel Hastings and Sally Arnold, and they became the parents of seven children, born as follows: Isaac Peace, April 25, 1848; Sally Lyman, Feb. 10, 1850; Mary Peckham, March 25, 1852; Samuel, February, 1854 (died February, 1856); Thomas, March 23, 1856; Samuel Arnold, April 23, 1858 (married Cynthia Sheldon); Elizabeth Arnold, July, 1860 (died in 1864). The eldest, Isaac Peace Rodman, member of the firm of Woodward-Baldwin Company, of New York City, was married April 28, 1880, to Harriet E. Robinson, daughter of Dr. Morton and Anna (Collins) Robinson, and they have had two children: Helen Smith, born Sept. 9, 1883, now the wife of William T. Westcote; and Isaac P., Jr., a student at Harvard, class of 1908. Sally Lyman Rodman, the eldest daughter, was married June 15, 1875, to Robert Thompson, and they have had four children: Louise Hazard, born July 25, 1876, who died Sept. 5, 1876; Sally Rodman, born Feb. 12, 1879, who is now the wife of Louis Balch; Nancy Gilman, born May 19, 1881, who died Oct. 15, 1881; and Edward Hazard, born Feb. 14, 1884.

General Rodman was educated in the public schools of his native town, but early in life entered the manufacturing business with his father. He had a passionate love for books and the knowledge that books gave, combined with a remarkable memory; his leisure hours were for many years nearly all devoted to study, and thus he was enabled to take his place amongst men of a more liberal education on an equal footing. He was a man of exceedingly acute and elevated intelligence, reasoned with great sequence and logical force from cause to effect, and was a believer in the "gospel of expedience" in all the ordinary affairs of life. His extensive reading and intimate acquaintance with the classics rendered him a literary critic of no mean order. E. H. Hazard, in a biographical sketch, written for Bartlett's "Rhode Island Officers," said of General Rodman: "He was extremely modest and retiring in his nature. There were no extravagances in his life or conduct; his character as a whole was uniform in all its elements." He was for many years an honored member of the Baptist Church; at one time teacher of a Bible-class composed of young men; at another, superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was liberal in his religious views toward all denominations.

After a few years of initiatory labor in his father's mills, more especially in office work, he with his brother, Rowland Gibson Rodman, entered into partnership with their father, under the firm name of S. Rodman & Sons. He was for several years president of the town council of South Kingstown, and was a representative for several terms in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and also in the Senate of the State. He was a director in the Wakefield Bank, also in the Institution for Savings.

When President Lincoln called for seventy-five thousand men, at the commencement of the Civil war, he was among the first to respond to the call. He raised a military company composed of his fellow-townsmen for the 2d Rhode Island Regiment of Volunteers, and was appointed by Governor Sprague its captain. For his gallant conduct at the battle of Bull Run Governor Sprague, when the 4th Rhode Island Regiment was mustered into service, appointed him lieutenant-colonel and soon afterward colonel. He distinguished himself by his gallant conduct at the battle of Roanoke, Feb. 8, 1862, and at Newbern, March 15, 1862. Abbott, in his "History of the Civil War," said, in speaking of this battle: "The charge by Colonel Rodman, leading the 4th Rhode Island Regiment, was one of the most heroic deeds of the day." This gallant charge won a brigadier-general's commission for Colonel Rodman. Yet he always insisted that his regiment deserved more credit for their conduct at the battle of Roanoke Island, in which they took a conspicuous part, than at the battle of Newbern. It was about this time that Mr. Robert Hale Ives, of Providence, asked Governor Sprague to give his son Robert a place on General Rodman's staff. "Do you know what you are asking for?" said the Governor; "he is your only son, and to give him this position means certain death, for General Rodman is the bravest man I ever knew, and will lead your son into the very midst of danger. Let me place him on General Burnside's staff, where he will be in comparative safety." Mr. Ives said that his son would take no other position than on General Rodman's staff, and so the brave young man met death, with his brave leader, on the field of Antietam. After the capture of Fort Mason, April 17, 1862, General Rodman contracted typhoid fever and was obliged to return home, "broken in health, but crowned with the honors he had won." On his arrival at Kingston Station he was met by a large delegation of his fellow-citizens, with the militia companies and the bands of music. Overcome by this proof of the estimation in which he was held by his townspeople, and enfeebled by severe illness, he could say but a few words to them. "A few weeks later, when the same company again conducted him to his home, instead of the triumphant strains of martial music the tap of the muffled drum and funeral march alone was heard; no kind words greeted the old friends, for the voice was still forever."

He had remained at home but a few weeks. Before the furlough was ended or his health re-established, General Burnside wrote to him that the army was on the eve of a great battle, urging him to return if possible, as there was urgent need for commanding officers, and against the remonstrance of his physician he hastened back to the field of duty. At the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862, he commanded the 3d Division of the 9th Army Corps, and fell mortally wounded, while leading his division to the charge. "Though feeble in health, and exhausted from five days and nights of arduous service, he kept in the saddle from early dawn till sunset, when he fell, pierced with a minie ball through his left breast. Surgical aid and efforts of friends were unavailing to save his life; his system was exhausted. His patience in suffering was equal to his courage on the battlefield. He died as he lived, a Christian soldier. His physician, who had witnessed many death-bed scenes, said that for calm, conscious, peaceful resignation he never witnessed its equal. From the time he left home in the spring of 1861, to the hour of his fall, his Bible was his daily companion and was daily read by him. It was found in his bosom, clotted with blood."

Abbott, in closing a notice of General Rodman, says: "At South Mountain he escaped uninjured. At Antietam, while at the head of his division, and performing the part of a major-general, a bullet pierced his breast, and he was carried to a house in the rear. There, after the lapse of thirteen days, he died. His remains were buried at his native place, South Kingstown, with the highest honors. He was mourned as a Christian warrior, and as one of the purest and best of men."

In "The Brown University in Civil War, a Memorial," we find: "Robert Hall Ives offered himself as a volunteer aide on the staff of General Rodman, preferring to serve at his own charge, was accepted and commissioned as lieutenant by Governor Sprague of Rhode Island, ordered to report to General Rodman for service, etc. On Sept. 1st Lieutenant Ives reported to General Rodman, 9th Corps, under Major-General Burnside. The 9th Corps left its bivouac on 7th street, Washington, D. C., on Sept. 7, and crossed into Maryland. It encountered the enemy first at Frederick (the Army of the Potomac now restored to the command of General McClellan), and drove them from the city without a battle. The march from Frederick to South Mountain was a continued skirmish. At South Mountain the battle was fought; on the 16th Sharpsburg, where the several corps and divisions were ranged along the left bank of the little river Antietam, which runs into the Potomac. On the following day came the great battle of Antietam. It began at an early hour; by ten o'clock the corps of General Burnside were fully engaged, its right being near the stone bridge that spans the stream, its left, commanded by General Rodman, opposite a ford three fourths of a mile below. On the carrying and holding of this bridge the fortunes of the day were obviously to turn. The great and critical work was at length accomplished after several ineffectual attempts and through terrible fighting at about one o'clock, and a little later the division commanded by General Rodman crossed the ford and joined those who had passed over the bridge on the heights that rise from the right bank of the stream. The carnage had been frightful all along the line, but the day's work now seemed to be done and the corps was resting upon its arms. The enemy still occupied the vantage ground and at three o'clock the order reached General Burnside to renew the attack. The position of General Rodman's division exposed it to the raking fire of certain batteries of the enemy. A charge was ordered and the guns were carried, but both General Rodman and his aide, Lieutenant Ives, fell mortally wounded."

This beautiful little poem was written by I. M. Stewart:

BRIG.-GENERAL ISAAC P. RODMAN

(Requiem)

Bear the hero to the tomb!
Drape the flags with funeral gloom!
Let the solemn dirges rise,
Wailing to the bending skies.

While ye hear the muffled drum
Friends and kindred sadly come:
Bow in silence o'er his bier
Bless his memory with a tear!

Each to other softly tell
While resounds the passing bell.
Half in sorrow, half in pride,
How the faithful soldier died.

Let affection hither bring
Flowers around his bed to fling;
Comrades let your banners wave,
Drooping o'er the hero's grave.

Mother Earth! receive our trust,
Pillow soft the noble dust;
With thy mantle green and warm,
Shield him from the future storm.

Rest, Oh Chieftain! rest in peace
Where all wars and tumults cease;
Thou has placed another name
On the fadeless wreath of fame.

The State of Rhode Island brought back his remains amid universal demonstration of mourning, and laid them in state in the Hall of the House of Representatives. His obsequies, of a very imposing character, were conducted by the State, amid every demonstration of respect on the part of the citizens, and his portrait was placed in the Memorial Hall of Brown University, at Providence.

Senator Henry B. Anthony, in a funeral oration, said of him: "Here lies the true type of the patriot soldier. Born and educated to peaceful pursuits, with no thirst for military distinction, with little taste or predilection for military life, he answered the earliest call of his country, and drew his sword in her defense. Entering the service in a subordinate capacity, he rose by merit alone to the high rank in which he fell; and when the fatal shot struck him the captain of one year ago was in command of a division. His rapid promotion was influenced by no solicitations of his own. He never joined the crowd that thronged the avenues of preferment. Patient, laborious, courageous, wholly devoted to his duties, he filled each place so well that his advancement to the next was a matter of course, and the promotion which he did not seek sought him. He was of the best type of the American citizen; of thorough business training, of high integrity, with an abiding sense of the justice due to all and influenced by deep religious convictions. In his native village he was by common consent the arbitrator of differences, the counselor and friend of all." He was buried in the family burying-ground, at South Kingstown, on the 5th of October, 1862.

LOUISA HAZARD RODMAN was born March 26,

1826, and died May 2, 1854. Her opportunities for an education were limited, but so great was her love for study and books that she rose above her environment, and there were few books in the neighborhood that she had not read, the classics being especially familiar to her. She was a woman of fascinating personality, of pungent, sparkling wit and quickness of repartee. She was so bright and full of life, and seemed to love life so dearly, that one was surprised at her remark, often repeated, that she wished to die young. When asked what she called young the answer came, "Twenty-eight," and she added, "Then everyone will regret me." Her wish was granted, for she was twenty-eight in March, 1854, and died in May of that year. She married Oct. 4, 1849, Col. Daniel Chase Hiscox, and to them were born two children, Susan Wood, on Dec. 13, 1850, and Daniel Chase, on May 2, 1854, the latter dying Aug. 9, 1854. The daughter, Susan Wood Hiscox, was married Oct. 6, 1870, to Eugene F. Beecher, nephew of Henry Ward Beecher, and died May 10, 1907; they had two children: Louise Isabelle, born Sept. 27, 1871, married William Chancellor, superintendent of public schools at Washington, D. C., and author of the United States History of Three Centuries (Chancellor & Hewes). Claire Rodman, born Jan. 9, 1873, married Frederick Kummer; she is a talented composer of music.

ROWLAND GIBSON RODMAN, born Jan. 10, 1828, was as stated in the foregoing engaged in the manufacturing business with his father and brother, under the name of S. Rodman & Sons. When President Lincoln made his second call for volunteers Mr. Rodman, following the example of his elder brother, raised a company of men, mostly from his native town, and was appointed by the Governor captain of the company. His first battle was one of the most fearful of the war, and it was his last. Abbott, in writing of this battle of Fredericksburg, says: "Eleven hundred and twenty-eight brave men were dead; nine thousand and five writhing under the torture of wounds; and two thousand and seventy-eight were missing, of whom probably many should have been reported dead." Captain Rodman received a fearful wound in the breast. He was carried to Baltimore and taken to the house of his sister, Mrs. William H. Baldwin, where he was carefully nursed back to life; but he never entirely recovered from the effects of his wound.

Capt. Rowland Gibson Rodman married Sept. 24, 1856, Maria Macy Durfee, daughter of Hon. Nathaniel Briggs Durfee. Their children were born as follows: Harriet Greene, Feb. 19, 1859; Rowland G., Aug. 22, 1861; Macie Durfee, Oct. 7, 1866; Nathaniel Greene, July 27, 1869; Edgar Greene, April 4, 1872 (died March 17, 1877).

JULIA MARIA RODMAN, born Sept. 7, 1831, died Sept. 27, 1891. She married June 7, 1852, John Thompson, of North Carolina, who a short time before had bought of Attmore Robinson a farm at Narragansett Pier, then known as "Sea View," now called "Canonchet." Here they lived until 1864, when they removed to Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1883 they removed to Waco, Texas, where their two sons were established in business, and there Mr. Thompson died in 1889, and Mrs. Thompson, broken in health, but with a yearning desire to see once more her old home within sound of the sea, returned to South Kingstown in July, 1891. She died at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. F. Robinson, in Wakefield, Sept. 27, 1891. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were: (1) John, born April 28, 1853, died March 24, 1864. (2) Mary Louisa, born Oct. 5, 1854, died Sept. 21, 1870. (3) Edward W., born June 26, 1856, married Carrie Ida Thompson, Oct. 6, 1881, and they have had seven children, born as follows: Edith R., Aug. 25, 1882; Mary L., March 18, 1886; Ida B., April 24, 1888; Edward, Dec. 30, 1891; Sarah W., May 12, 1894; John, Feb. 28, 1896; Marguerite, 1900. (4) Samuel Rodman, born March 6, 1859, was married June 29, 1887, to Lillian Williams, and they have had two children: Samuel R., born June 13, 1888, and William B., born July 13, 1892. (5) Sarah Caroline, born Jan. 11, 1862, died in 1883. (6) Julia Rodman, born March 31, 1864, was married Oct. 26, 1892, to E. R. Bryan, and they have three children, Allen, Sadie and Mildred.

CAROLINE ELIZABETH RODMAN, born at Peace Dale, July 4, 1833, was married Nov. 20, 1854, to Benjamin Franklin Robinson, and they had a family of six children, viz.: Eliza Noyes, born Dec. 23, 1855, died June 21, 1863. Benjamin Franklin was born Feb. 22, 1858. Samuel Rodman, born April 17, 1859, was married Sept. 7, 1899, to Nellie Carnahan, and they have had two children—Agnes, born April 30, 1902, and Samuel R., Jr., born Aug. 10, 1903. Rowland Rodman, born Aug. 23, 1862, married Mary Peace Hazard, and has one son, John Newbold, born Nov. 9, 1903. Eliza Noyes, born Nov. 8, 1863, died Dec. 17, 1863. Caroline Eliza, born Feb. 18, 1871, died Aug. 15, 1871.

The following article appeared in a local paper at the time of Mrs. Robinson's decease:

"Mrs. Caroline Elizabeth (Rodman) Robinson, for many years well known to delvers in historical and genealogical lore, was born in Peace Dale, Rhode Island, July fourth, 1833, and died at her home in Wakefield, Rhode Island, July seventh, 1906.

"She came of a family illustrious in the annals of Rhode Island, and was a lineal descendant of other Rhode Island families of note in Colonial and State affairs.

"Her father, Honorable Samuel Rodman, was one of the most prominent men of his day, and her eldest brother, Brigadier-General Isaac Peace Rodman, was a gallant officer in the Federal army in the war for the preservation of the Union.

"It is not within the province of this article to attempt to trace the influence of heredity on the formation of Mrs. Robinson's character, though such influence is strongly apparent.

"Her girlhood was passed in the pleasant surroundings of the parental home at Rocky Brook, and early in life she showed her natural inclination toward literature by writing many stories and poems dealing with her home life and fireside scenes.

"With her sisters she attended the Warren Ladies' Seminary at Warren, Rhode Island, one of the finest schools in the State at that time, and there she was a leader in her classes. Graduation from the seminary did not bring to her an end to her study; she was a student all her life. Latin, Greek and German classics she read in their native tongue, and during the last ten years of her life pursued with undiminished zeal the study of Italian.

"Though she loved her books, she never became a 'book-worm' in the common acceptance of that term, for study and reading was so diversified that her mental vision was constantly broadening, and her fund of general information constantly increasing. Her well trained mind acted with marvelous rapidity, her great store of anecdotes making her a charming conversationalist.

"She was an authority in historical and genealogical data in South Kingstown, and at the time of the compilation of the history of Washington and Kent counties she wrote a large part of the Rodman and Robinson data to be found in the South Kingstown section. To her skill in arrangement and painstaking care the Hazard genealogy will ever stand as a lasting memorial. She had prepared with equal care the record of the Gardiner and allied families, which has not been published. None of this work, however, was ever allowed to detract from her duties as a wife and mother.

"Next to her family and her books, her flowers were her greatest friends, and from the way they bloomed for her it almost seemed as though they loved her as she loved them. She was of that happy disposition which broods not over the disappointments of by-gone days, lives in the beautiful present, and has no fear of the future.

"November twentieth, 1854, she married Benjamin Franklin Robinson, a well known merchant of Wakefield, who November tenth, 1904, preceded her to the shore of the tideless sea from which none of us shall return. To her were born six children, three of whom survive her, ex-Senator Benjamin F. Robinson and Dr. Rowland R. Robinson of Wakefield, Rhode Island, and Samuel Rodman Robinson, of Colorado," of whom mention is made in the Robinson records in this work.

MARY PECKHAM RODMAN was born in South Kingstown, R. I., Nov. 12, 1838, and married Nov. 10, 1859, William Henry Baldwin, of Baltimore, Md., of the firm of Woodward, Baldwin & Co., a commission merchant and a large manufacturer of textiles. To them came children as follows:

William Henry (3), born in August, 1860, who died in February, 1889; Samuel Rodman, who died in March, 1882; Mary Louise, who died in August, 1877; Charles Gambrill, who died young; Maria Woodward, who married Samuel. McClintock Hamill; Gordon, who died young; Frank Gambrill, born in 1869, who married in December, 1904, Catharine Harrison Thompson, and died in May, 1905 (he was one of the junior partners in the dry-goods house of Woodward, Baldwin & Co., of Baltimore, and later of New York City); Carroll, born in February, 1871, junior member of Woodward, Baldwin & Co., of New Ybrk City; and Sarah Rodman, born in February, 1872.

SARAH ABIGAIL RODMAN was born in South Kingstown, R. I., Sept. 15, 1840, and on Sept. 27, 1865, married William Woodward, of Baltimore, Md., son of Henry Williams and Mary Edge (Webb) Woodward. He was born in Anne Arundel county, Md., Dec. 31, 1836, and after his tenth year the family removed to Baltimore. At the age of twenty-one he became a partner in the firm of Cary, Bangs & Woodward. In 1864 he removed to New York and entered the cotton business. In 1869 he was offered a partnership in the firm of Smith & Dunning, cotton commission merchants, and the firm became Smith, Dunning & Woodward, later Smith, Woodward & Stillman, and finally Woodward & Stillman. Mr. Woodward died March 20, 1889, and by his death New York lost a strong, vital and commanding personality in its business circles, and withal a spirit genial, friendly, helpful and kind. During the last twenty years of his life his career as a merchant illustrated the value of concentrated energy, strict personal attention to affairs, and absolute integrity in the rise and growth of a business which at the time of his death was the largest of its kind in the country. Mr. Woodward was a man of sanguine spirit, tempered with a keen power of discrimination and an almost unerring judgment, and through the ups and downs of general business for twenty years the firm of Woodward & Stillman was synonymous with good management and success. He took an active part in the organization and advancement of the New York Cotton Exchange, and was a member of the original committee to draft its by-laws. Later he served efficiently as a member of its building committee, and upon the completion of the magnificent Cotton Exchange Building, as chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, he began the ceremonies of its formal dedication, according to the usage of a God-fearing people, by introducing the Right Rev. H. C. Potter, who offered a prayer of blessing. He was a valued member of the Union, Manhattan, Tuxedo, South Side, New York Yacht, American Jockey and New York Riding Clubs, and of Holland Lodge. He was a man of sturdy physique, the apparent embodiment of health, success and happiness, cheerful, hopeful and confident, and with a delightful dry humor of his own. He enjoyed the respect and confidence of all who knew him, and stood among those honored and distinguished merchants of New York who through their own efforts and natural force of character attained success. His charities were unostentatious, but many and great. He helped many business men in days of trouble, and gave many young men a start in life. His kindness extended to the humblest of his employees and his benevolence was not bounded by creeds, conditions or circumstances.

To William and Sarah Abigail (Rodman) Woodward were born four children: (1) Mary Edge, born in October, 1868, died the same month. (2) Julia Rodman, born Feb. 28, 1871, died March 2, 1871. (3) Edith, born Dec. 29, 1873, died Jan. 27, 1898. (4) William was born April 7, 1876. Mrs. Sarah Abigail Woodward belongs to the Society of Colonial Dames of Rhode Island; the National Society of Colonial Dames of America; the Society of Colonial Governors, and the Mayflower Society of Rhode Island.

William Woodward, born in New York City April 7, 1876, graduated from Harvard University, A. B., 1898; A. M., 1899; LL. B., Harvard Law School, 1901; member of the New York Bar, 1901. He served as private secretary to Ambassador Choate at the Court of St. James, 1901-1907. He was married Oct. 24, 1904, to Elizabeth Ogden, daughter of Duncan and Elizabeth (Ogden) Cryder, of New York City, and they reside at No. 11 West Fifty-first street, New York City. Their children are: Edith, born Oct. 8, 1905, and Elizabeth Ogden, born June 16, 1907. Their summer residence is at Mount Kisco, N. Y. Mr. Woodward belongs to the Union, Knickerbocker, Coaching and Racquet Clubs of New York City, the Maryland Society of New York City, the Bachelors and St. James Clubs of London, and the Porcelain Club of Cambridge, Mass. In 1902 he was elected vice-president of the Hanover National Bank of New York City.

Mr. Woodward is descended from William Woodward, of London, England, through Abraham, who married Priscilla Ruley; William, who married Jane Ridgeley; William (1742-1807), who married Alice Ridgeley; Capt. Henry (1770-1822), who married Eleanor (Williams) Turner, a widow; Henry Williams (1803-1841), who married Mary Edge Webb; and William, who married Sarah Abigail Rodman.

The Woodward arms are: Argent, two bars azure; over all three bucks' heads caboched or. Crest: On a ducal coronet a bear's head couped argent. Motto: Virtus semper virat.

SAMUEL RODMAN, born Nov. 4, 1842, died in January, 1890. On May 1, 1881, he married Mary McDaniel, daughter of John and Emma E. McDaniel, and they had three children: Mary Peckham, born Feb. 21, 1882; Sarah Woodward, born July 17, 1884; and Ethel.

EDWARD RODMAN, born Dec. 14, 1845, was married May 25, 1868, to Hannah C. Perry, and their son, William Woodward, born April 8, 1872, is married and has two children, Perry Woodward and Dorothy Hazard.

HAMMETT. For something like two hundred years the name of Hammett has been identified with the affairs of Newport, and for much of the time through the life of the financial institutions of that city it has been more or less prominently connected with the city's financial affairs. For forty years following the late twenties of the last century Nathan Hammett's name was in the directory of the National Exchange Bank of Newport, and for years that gentleman was the bank's executive officer. Succeeding his identity with that institution was that of his son, Joseph M. Hammett, and at the same time the name of Charles E. Hammett, Jr., appeared as president of the Savings Bank of Newport and the name of James H. Hammett was in the directory of the same bank; and the late Clarence A. Hammett was the secretary and treasurer of the Aquidneck Mutual Insurance Company of that city, and also secretary of the Newport Co-operative Association for Saving and Building.

The name does not appear to have been by any means a common one or the family numerous in early New England history. Savage gives some little information of one Thomas Hammett, Hamot or Hammett, of Scarborough, who owned allegiance to Massachusetts in 1658, and was made a freeman in that year, but renewed his subjection to the King in 1663. He married the widow of John Burrage. In the town records of Newport is recorded the marriage of John Hammett and Sarah Carr, daughter of Gov. Caleb Carr, as having taken place Jan. 10, 1705, the ceremony being performed by Gov. Samuel Cranston. The children of this couple, as of record in the town records of Newport, are: John, born Oct. 10, 1705; Mary; and Thomas, born April 11, 1712. There may have been other children, as the town records are often incomplete. John Hammett was admitted a freeman of the Colony of Rhode Island at the May session of the General Assembly, 1708. He was chosen clerk of the Assembly June 28, 1711 (likely of the House, as he is later referred to in that connection), to serve until the next election of general officers. He was succeeded in this position by Nicholas Carr, in May, 1714. On June 30, 1712, he was chosen attorney-general.

Family tradition has it that the ancestor of the Hammett family came from Liverpool, England, and settled at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., whence two brothers came to Newport, R. I., the younger returning to Martha's Vineyard and the older settling in Newport. From the latter have descended the Hammetts of Newport and vicinity.

Edward Hammett, great-great-grandfather of Clarence A. Hammett, late of Newport, was born April 15, 1704, in Newport, R. I., and died there

Charles A. Sumner

May 9, 1775. He married Sarah Walrond, and they had children as follows: Susannah, Rebecca, Edward, Lydia, Nathan and Benjamin.

Nathan Hammett, son of Edward, born Jan. 31, 1748, in Newport, R. I., died there July 18, 1816. He was a carpenter by trade. He married Aug. 26, 1777, Catherine Gates, and their children were: Edward, born June 14, 1778 (died Aug. 20, 1779); Edward (2), born March 11, 1780; Sarah W., born Sept. 7, 1781; Mary, born Aug. 2, 1784; Nathan, Jr., born May 7, 1786; and Catherine, born Feb. 28, 1789.

Edward Hammett, grandfather of Clarence A., born March 11, 1780, in Newport, R. I., died there Aug. 30, 1861. He was a carpenter by trade, and was employed at Fort Adams for over twenty-five years. He was highly honored and respected as a citizen. Mr. Hammett married Amy Lyon, daughter of Joseph Lyon, and this couple lived together in wedded life for fifty-three years and twenty-three days, attaining venerable old age. To them came children as follows: (1) William Lyon, born June 29, 1809, died July 27, 1847, in Newport. He was a seafaring man, engaged in the African trade. (2) Edward, Jr., born Feb. 12, 1810, died in Mobile, Ala., Sept. 18, 1839. (3) Catherine, born April 25, 1811, became the second wife of Oliver Read, and died in Newport. (4) James, born Oct. 12, 1815, was a tailor by trade. He died in Newport. (5) Harriet Eliza, born Aug. 17, 1817, died in Newport in infancy. (6) Nathan, born July 8, 1819, was a carpenter by trade. Later he engaged in the dry-goods business in Hartford, Conn., and still later in New Bedford, Mass., where he died April 5, 1865. (7) Harriet Eliza (2), born Jan. 2, 1821, died unmarried at the age of about fifty years. (8) Albert is mentioned below. (9) Ann Sarah died young.

Albert Hammett, father of Clarence A. Hammett, was born in Newport, Nov. 21, 1822. He received the average education given to boys of his day, leaving school at the age of fourteen years, when he became a clerk in a grocery store at a salary of $25 per year. However, he continued in that capacity for only about six months. At the age of sixteen he entered the office of the late Maj. Henry Bull, who conducted a lumber and hardware business, where young Hammett remained for about two years. He then went to work at carpentering with his father, at Fort Adams, where he continued until he was twenty-one years of age. After a few years, in the early fifties, he engaged in the dry-goods business in New Bedford, and returning to Newport in 1852 he established himself in the lumber and hardware business at the store on Thames street, purchasing the business of Nathan B. Hammett. To this enterprise he gave his undivided attention for more than half a century. It was established in 1850, and with one exception had the longest continuous existence of any business in Newport.

There were various changes in the conduct of the business during this half century, Mr. Hammett being first associated with John R. Hammett, succeeding his uncle, and later carrying on the business alone. He then took his eldest son, Edward, into partnership, but after a time the latter, desiring a western field of labor, withdrew from the business and located in Chicago, and some years later, in about 1900, Mr. Hammett took his second son, Harry G., into partnership, since which time the firm has been known as A. & H. G. Hammett. As he advanced in years and failed in health Mr. Albert Hammett gave but little time to the business, leaving matters in the hands of his son and the employees, but he always sustained his active interest in its prosperity, and he never allowed a day to pass without spending a portion of the time at his office. He was always the first to arrive there, often appearing long before sunrise. About two weeks before his death, which occurred April 24, 1906, he had a fall in which one of the bones of his leg was broken, and he failed perceptibly until the end came.

Though he never accepted office Mr. Hammett was always deeply interested in the affairs of his native city, and had his own ideas regarding municipal administration, strongly advocating what he believed to be right. He enjoyed discussing public questions. In political sentiment he first espoused the cause of the Whig party, and later, upon the organization of the Republican party, allied himself therewith. Outside of his business his principal interest centered in the church, for whose welfare he labored as zealously and effectively as he did for the advancement of his business affairs. While in New Bedford he joined a Congregational Church there, and on May 7, 1854, became a member of the United Congregational Church of Newport, in which he held membership for nearly fifty-two years. For five years he served as church clerk. He was always to be found in his place at the regular services, and took a deep interest in all the benevolent enterprises and general business of the church, faithfully performing every duty assigned to him and liberally supporting all the work. Mr. Hammett was long a familiar figure on the streets of Newport, for until his health began to fail he invariably walked to and from his place of business, and he had numerous friends among all classes. Mr. Hammett was one of the promoters of the Cliff Cottages at the time they were built by the Cliff Cottage Association, and remained a stockholder in the company until the property changed hands.

Mr. Hammett was twice married, his first union, which occurred Aug. 4, 1847, having been to Sarah Llewellyn Swasey, daughter of Capt. Alexander Swasey. She died Jan. 13, 1853, in New Bedford. To this union were born children as follows: (1) Edward, born June 26, 1848, was for several years associated with his father in business in Newport, after which he located in Chicago, where he has been prominent in financial circles, having been one of the original incorporators and cashier of the Lincoln National Bank, with which he was connected until that bank was merged with another financial institution. He is now a broker in stocks and bonds, and resides in Wheaton, Ill. On Oct. 24, 1870, he married Mary E. Culver, of Chicago, and has a family of nine children. (2) Alexander, born July 25, 1850, died Nov. 11, 1852. (3) Sarah Llewellyn, born Dec. 7, 1852, died May 17, 1853.

On Oct. 8, 1856, Mr. Hammett married Sarah Matilda Howland, daughter of George and Sarah M. (Almy) Howland, and this union was blessed with five children, viz.: (4) Henry Greenwood, born Dec. 19, 1857, is the junior member of the firm of A. & H. G. Hammett, of Newport, dealers in lumber, hardware and builders' supplies. He married Sarah Emma Wilbar, daughter of Francis K. and Sarah N. (Wilkey) Wilbar, of Newport. She died in Newport in August, 1890, leaving two sons, Louis Wilbar and George Howland Hammett. (5) Clarence A. is mentioned below. (6) Marian Louise is the wife of Dr. William S. Greene, a practicing dentist of Newport. (7) Nathan, born Oct. 2, 1862, died Aug. 21, 1863. (8) Florence M. is the wife of Harry Fletcher Brown, who is prominently connected with the Dupont Powder Company.

CLARENCE ALBERT HAMMETT, our subject, was born July 3, 1859, in Newport, R. I., where he attended the public schools, and later became a student at the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1877. Returning home he was engaged a year as bookkeeper for his father, after which he became manager of the "Cliff Hotel and Cottages" at Newport, under the proprietorship of William T. Hall, remaining in that capacity during the summer season. On Oct. 27, 1879, he went to Chicago, where he became a clerk in the hardware concern of William Blair & Co., later being promoted to the charge of the traveling men, and still later becoming city buyer for the concern, with which he continued about three years. From Chicago he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he became traveling salesman for the firm of Mayo & Clark, wholesale hardware dealers, his territory being in Minnesota and Dakota. He was soon promoted to the position of head salesman, having charge of the sales department and traveling salesmen, and remained in the employ of this firm for about three years, until it failed. Mr. Hammett then returned to Newport, where in 1885 he established himself in the real estate and insurance business, in which he continued until his death, and in which he met with marked and deserved success.

Though best known in the commercial world as an insurance man, Mr. Hammett did not devote all his time to that line, for he had many other important interests. His special aptitude for financial problems was given ample recognition in his selection to various positions requiring particular fitness and ability of that kind, as a mere record of the posts he filled will show. He was elected by the city council to fill the vacancy of city treasurer caused by the death of John S. Coggeshall, and the following year was re-elected to that office. During the latter year, in December, 1901, he received the appointment of collector of United States customs at Newport, from President Roosevelt. In 1905, on the expiration of his term of four years, he was re-appointed. Mr. Hammett was thoroughly prepared to discharge the duties of this office in the most efficient manner, having served several years as deputy collector under the late Hon. John H. Cozzens and acquired a comprehensive knowledge of the details of his work. In 1885 he was commissioned a notary public, and served as such ever after. He was a stanch Republican in political sentiment.

Mr. Hammett was a member of the board of directors of the Newport Co-operative Association for Saving and Building, of which he was one of the original incorporators, and was elected the first secretary of the company, having held that position from March, 1888. As secretary and general manager of this institution he was probably most widely known in Newport, his duties bringing him into personal relations with every member, and he not only looked after their interests in that company but acted as financial adviser to many of them, his judgment being universally regarded as valuable. He worked hard to get the institution in good working order, and he never allowed his interest in its success and the welfare of its members to lapse. Mr. Hammett was also a director of the Aquidneck Mutual Insurance Company of Newport, and at the time of its incorporation, in May, 1884, was elected the first secretary and treasurer of the company, and continued to serve as such until his death. In all his official positions Mr. Hammett showed an aptitude for detail and correctness which made him a model officer. His books and accounts were always models of exactness, and his services to the city and the government were of the most valuable nature.

In fraternal connection Mr. Hammett was an active and honored Freemason, holding membership in St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., of which he was a past master; in Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; in DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. & S. M.; Washington Commandery, No. 4, K. T., of Newport; and Palestine Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Providence. He was also a member of Rhode Island Lodge, No. 12, I. O. O. F.; Weenat Shassit Tribe, No. 6, Improved Order of Red Men; and Newport Lodge, No. 104, B. P. O. Elks. He was also a member of the Lawrence Club and of the Newport County Club. Mr. Hammett never married. He passed away after a brief illness in Newport, R. I., Nov. 20, 1907, in the forty-ninth year of his age.

"In private life Mr. Hammett was genial and warm-hearted, an agreeable companion at all times and an inspiration to activity on the part of others. In the various associations with which he was connected he was a leader in comradeship, and throughout the city he numbered personal friends by the hundreds."

(I) John Howland, of the "Mayflower," 1620, the thirteenth signer of the memorable compact in the cabin of that vessel in Cape Cod harbor, Nov. 21st of the year just mentioned, who at the time was twenty-eight years of age, and who it is claimed was the youngest male passenger on that vessel, married Elizabeth Tilley. Their children were: Desire, John, Jabez, Hope, Elizabeth, Lydia, Ruth, Hannah, Joseph and Isaac.

(II) Jabez Howland, born in Plymouth, Mass., married Bethiah Thatcher, daughter of Anthony Thatcher, and later settled in Bristol, R. I., where he did a large business as a blacksmith and cooper. He had served in various capacities in Plymouth, and was an officer in the military and active in King Philip's war. He was an officer in the militia at Bristol, the first town clerk (chosen in 1681), selectman, etc. The children of Jabez and wife Bethiah were: Jabez, John, Bethiah, Josiah, John, Judah, Seth, Samuel, Experience, Joseph and Elizabeth.

(III) Joseph Howland, born Oct. 14, 1692, in Bristol, married Bathsheba, daughter of David and Elizabeth Cary, and they were residents of Swansea, Mass., and perhaps Newport, R. I. Their children were: Lydia, Joseph and Elizabeth.

(IV) Joseph Howland (2), born Dec. 6, 1717, in Swansea, Mass., married in 1746, Sarah, daughter of Jeremiah Baker, of Middletown, R. I. Mr. Howland died in Newport, R. I., 3d month, 1775, and his widow Sarah when the British occupied Newport, in 1776, removed to Providence, where she died Feb. 12, 1779. Their children were: Henry, Penelope, Joseph, John, Benjamin, Samuel, Edward and Josiah.

(V) Major Benjamin Howland, born about 1768, in Newport, R. I., married Dec. 27, 1794, Susanna, daughter of Zephaniah and Elizabeth (Eddy) Andrews, of Providence, R. I. He learned the tailor's trade in Providence and established the first merchant tailor's shop there. Later he removed to New York City and still later to Baltimore, where he died. He held the rank of major in the Rhode Island State militia. His children were: Charles A., George, Susan A., Juliette, Edwin, John, John (2), Henry A., Cyrus, John A., Elizabeth E. and Thomas G.

(VI) George Howland, born Feb. 18, 1797, married Aug. 3, 1824, Sarah M. Almy, of Newport, R. I. Mr. Howland died in Newport, April 13, 1878. He served as a drummer boy in the war of 1812. The children of George and Sarah M. (Almy) Howland were: George W., born Feb. 22, 1825; Charles A., born May 20, 1831; Sarah M., born Aug. 3, 1832; Mary L., born July 4, 1836; and four others who died when young.

(VII) Sarah M. Howland, born Aug. 3, 1832, married Oct. 10, 1856, Albert Hammett, of Newport, R. I., and they became the parents of the following children: Henry G., Clarence A. (our subject), Marian Louise, Nathan (who died young), and Florence M.

DANIEL MEADER, in his lifetime one of the best known citizens of the town of Lincoln, where he resided for more than half a century engaged in agricultural pursuits, was a native of New Hampshire, born at Sandwich, March 2, 1826, son of Ephraim and Hannah (Cook) Meader, farming people and Quakers of New Hampshire, where both died well-advanced in years.

Daniel Meader attended the local schools of the place of his nativity, and from boyhood worked on his father's farm. When of age he left his home for Providence, and on St. Patrick's Day, 1847, arrived at the home of a relative, John Meader, in that city, who obtained for him a position with Capt. Daniel Jencks. This gentleman and his wife owned a farm in what is now the town of Lincoln, then a part of Smithfield, near Albion, where young Meader engaged in work for eight dollars per month. His salary was soon raised to twenty-five dollars per month, and he took care of the Captain until his death, and then cared for the widow as long as she lived, after which he came into possession of the farm. He made many improvements on the place, spending over forty years in work thereon, but in 1889 he turned the property over to his son, and retired from active life, removing to the stone house near the Butterfly factory. There his death occurred Oct. 6, 1894, and he was laid to rest in the Moshassuck cemetery.

Mr. Meader was noted for his honesty and honorable dealings, and he lived a true, Christian life. He was a member of the Society of Friends, being an elder of the meeting and a member of the Quarterly Meeting board. He was strictly temperate in all of his habits and a great supporter of the cause of temperance. He had the honor and esteem of all who knew him, and died as he had lived, an honorable, God-fearing man. In political matters he was a Republican, but never sought political honors.

On Oct. 20, 1857, Mr. Meader was married to Louisa Neal, born Jan. 10, 1826, in North Berwick, York Co., Maine, daughter of Elijah and Comfort (Morrel) Neal. In her younger days Mrs. Meader was a school teacher, having been educated in the schools near her home, and in the high school at Portland, Maine. She taught at the high school at Berwick and at Lynn, and also at other places in both Massachusetts and in Maine. She is president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Moshassuck, and has been delegate to several conventions, including those at Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver. In 1895 she made a trip to Europe, and in 1905 to the Holy Land, accompanied on the latter journey by her granddaughter, Louise A., and on her return Mrs. Meader delivered lectures on her travels. She is quite active in all temperance and church work, and for over twenty years has been an elderess in the Society of Friends, as well as superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Meader: (1) Walter D., born Dec. 27, 1858, a rural free delivery carrier in Lincoln, married, April 21, 1886, E. Sophia Parmenter, who was born in Pawtucket, daughter of John H. and Abby (Kerr) Parmenter. They have two children: Louise A., born April 4, 1887; and Daniel E., born Oct. 20, 1888. (2) Frank Herbert, born May 23, 1862, is engaged in farming on the old homestead, and also conducts an ice business. He married Dec. 25, 1886, Josephine R. Elliott, born in Dudley, Mass., daughter of Joseph and Emma (Robbins) Elliott, and they have three children: Herbert F., born Sept. 13, 1888; Bertha E., May 25, 1891; and Esther N., Jan. 20, 1894. (3) William Oliver, born May 4, 1865, died May 13, 1869.

BAKER. (Providence and East Providence families). The Baker families here considered—some of the descendants in the lines of Nathaniel and Samuel Baker, of Rehoboth, Mass., who were great-grandsons of John Baker, an early inhabitant of that ancient town—have been for generations among those representative of the best citizenship of their several communities, men and women of high resolve and noble purpose; some achieving large success in their different lines of effort.

It should be borne in mind that the ancient town of Rehoboth comprised much territory out of which subsequently came a number of towns, and it was a town of Plymouth Colony. In 1667 Swansea, which then included the town of Barrington, now Rhode Island, was set off from Rehoboth, and Barrington from Swansea in 1717; and in some of this territory lived John Baker, the ancestor of the Baker families reviewed in this article. Mr. Baker was married June 17, 1714, to Susanna Wood, and Arnold's Vital Records would indicate that they were of Barrington. Mr. Baker's death occurred in 1767. Their children, all of Rehoboth town record, but the first five likely born in Swansea and the others in Rehoboth, were: William, born Aug. 18, 1715; Susanna, born Feb. 3, 1717-18; John, born Aug. 26, 1720; Hannah, born Dec. 18, 1722; Nathaniel, born July 9, 1725; Bathsheba, born Feb. 16, 1728-29; Penelope, born Sept. 9, 1731; Joseph, born Oct. 14, 1734; Benjamin, born Feb. 1, 1736-37; and Rebecca, born March 12, 1740.

(II) Nathaniel Baker, son of John, born July 9, 1725, married Sept. 13, 1750, Experience Hix, both being of Rehoboth, and to them came children as follows: Sarah, born March 8, 1752; Joseph, Dec. 13, 1753; Samuel, Dec. 13, 1754; Nathaniel, Oct. 29, 1756; James, March 25, 1759; Experience, July 26, 1761; and Susanna, May 5, 1763. The father of these died Dec. 23, 1807, and the mother in 1823.

(III) Samuel Baker, of Rehoboth, son of Nathaniel, born Dec. 13, 1754, married Jan. 6, 1777, Bethany Mason, of Swansea, born Nov. 22, 1756, in Swansea, daughter of Sampson Mason. There came to them: Solomon, born March 2, 1779; Nathaniel, Aug. 16, 1781; Avis, April 4, 1783; Bethany, Dec. 19, 1784; and Samuel, April 12, 1787—all of Rehoboth town record. The father of these died Oct. 20, 1838, and the mother Oct. 14th of that same year.

(IV) Nathaniel Baker, son of Samuel, born Aug. 16, 1781, married about 1806 Nancy Crosswell, born in 1783, and their children were: Julia Ann, born April 18, 1807; Avis, June 10, 1810; John Fenwick, June 14, 1813; George Pease, Sept. 18, 1817 (died March 13, 1869, at Pau, France); Martha Clark, June 8, 1820; and Elizabeth Wheeler, June 8, 1820.

(V) JOHN FENWICK BAKER, son of Nathaniel, born June 14, 1813, in Rehoboth, married Sept. 15, 1849, Abby M. Allen, daughter of Sylvester and Hannah, all being of Rehoboth, Mass. Mrs. Baker was a descendant of (I) Jeremiah Allen and Rachel, of Rehoboth, through (II) John Allen and Mary, of Rehoboth, he born Nov. 20, 1721; (III) Samuel Allen and Huldah (Carpenter), he born May 12, 1753, married June 16, 1777; and (IV) Sylvester Allen and Hannah (Carpenter), he born Feb. 21, 1789, and married April 30, 1815. The children born to John Fenwick and Abby M. (Allen) Baker of Seekonk record were: Emma M., born Oct. 16, 1852; Seraphine A., born Aug. 8, 1855 (died Oct. 18, 1872); and George S., born Sept. 26, 1867.

John Fenwick Baker received his education in the schools of his native town, and it was rather limited, his father having died when he was young and his mother having little or no means with which to support herself and children. Thus it became necessary for John, who was the eldest son, to go to work. Nevertheless he acquired enough of a foundation during his school days to meet all the demands of a successful life, especially as he was a reader and had a retentive memory. When fourteen years of age he took the responsibility of looking after and doing the work on the home farm, to favor a none too robust constitution, and followed that work for about two years. But ambition possessed him, and when a young man he went to Canada and also to Maine, in both of which places he was engaged in the lumber business. Prior to embarking in the lumber business in Maine and Canada he had been engaged in the sale (both wholesale and retail) of the New Haven clocks, in which line he was successful. Later he was interested in the manufacture of bonnets in Rehoboth and built up a large business in that line. He was one of the first to cross the Continent by the Union Pacific railroad after its completion, going to California. He established a real estate and building business in Providence in about 1850, and continued in that line all the rest of his life, carrying on in conjunction with it a farm in Rehoboth until about 1883, when he established his home on South Broadway, in East Providence, in one of the finest residences in that place. Mr. Baker was a most careful and conservative man, and had most excellent judgment. Believing that the laws of waste and inattention to small savings and small repairs were many times the causes of failure in life, and that the converse largely contributed to success, he was most careful in his care of his large interests. He was essentially a business and home man, and though an ardent Republican in political faith took no active part in party affairs or public matters.

The Providence Journal, speaking of him in an obituary notice, said of him: "He was a very industrious youth; and by his habits of prudence and industry had accumulated a large fortune, and was the largest individual tax-payer in East Providence, of which town he had been a resident for ten years. Mr. Baker was a very genial man and made and retained many friends. He was one of the original members of the United Congregational Society and contributed largely to the erection of its church." He died Feb. 28, 1893, in his eightieth year.

(VI) GEORGE S. BAKER, only son of John F. Baker, was born in Rehoboth, Sept. 26, 1867, and received his primary education in the schools of his native town and East Providence, and his academic schooling in the well-known and most excellent English and Classical School of Mowry and Goff, in Providence, graduating therefrom in 1886. After leaving school he began work in his father's office and continued there until 1890, when he established himself in the real estate business independent of his father. This he has continued ever since. Soon after starting his own business he resumed charge of the business of his father, making it part of his own, and he is now engaged in all branches of the real estate and insurance business. Inheriting and applying the business methods of his father, he has been highly successful in his undertakings. Mr. Baker is a Republican in national politics, but independent in local matters. He is a member of the Congregational Club of Providence, and of the Central Congregational Church, and socially of the Anawan Hunt Club of Rehoboth, which has been organized about seven years, and owns the clubhouse and ponds; Mr. Baker was one of the founders of this club and its president in 1904. Both socially and in a business way he enjoys high standing, and has proved himself a worthy heir to the traditions and position of his family.

On June 12, 1893, Mr. Baker married Grace Gale Webster, daughter of George E. and Mary J. (Gale) Webster, of East Providence. They have had two children: Hope W., born Feb. 6, 1895, and Alice, born March 31, 1899.

(IV) Samuel Baker (2), son of Samuel, born April 12, 1787, died Aug. 16, 1872. He married (first) Feb. 11, 1808, Nancy Horton, who died Nov. 24, 1809, and he married (second) March 11, 1810, Patience Pearce (Pierce). The children of the second marriage were: Ira Stillman, born July 20, 1812; Nancy, March 15, 1814; Nelson O., June 19, 1816; Emeline, Feb. 15, 1819; Otis A., Nov. 5, 1821; Dr. George P., Jan. 27, 1826 (he practiced medicine in Providence, and died Aug. 2, 1890, aged sixty-four years; he had one son, George P. Baker, who lives in Cambridge, Mass., an instructor in Harvard); Electa Ann, 1833 (married Edwin Howland, an architect, and had no children).

(V) Nelson O. Baker, son of Samuel (2), and a most highly esteemed citizen of Providence, was born June 19, 1816. He is a mason by occupation but for a number of years has lived retired, he and his wife being residents of Providence. They are both very active for their years and well preserved, though one of the oldest married couples, if not the oldest, in the city, their married life having covered a period of over seventy-one years. On July 3, 1836, Mr. Baker married Lydia M. Pierce, who was born July 23, 1817, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Pearce) Pierce. They had children as follows, all born in Rehoboth: (1) Charles Nelson, born Dec. 6, 1837, is a mason and resides in Providence; he has been thrice married, and by his first wife, Philena Rathbun, had one daughter, Evelina, Mrs. Fred Eveleth; by his second union, to Hannah Terry, he had two daughters, Annie and Lillian N. (Mrs. Herman Merdrick); his third marriage was to Anna Pierce. (2) Edwin Granville, born June 8, 1839, is mentioned below. (3) Joseph Warren, born June 17, 1843, is mentioned below. (4) George Everett, born Oct. 17, 1847, is mentioned below. (5) Samuel Darling, born July 2, 1855, is a mason by trade and resides in Providence. He married Minnie Lee, and has two daughters, Lillian (Mrs. Samuel Wightman) and Florence.

(VI) Edwin G. Baker, son of Nelson O., born June 8, 1839, married July 25, 1861, Maggie C. Dean, daughter of Sagar Dean. They had children: George M., born April 25, 1862; Blanche M., Sept. 14, 1863 (deceased); Frank Nelson, Oct. 12, 1865; Mabel C., Aug. 6, 1867 (deceased); Edwin G., Jr., Feb. 17, 1870; Harold D., June 22, 1872; Walter S., July 10, 1874; Grace E., Feb. 2, 1877; Earnest Clinton, July 16, 1879; Bessie Frances, Sept. 25, 1885.

(VII) GEORGE M. BAKER, son of Edwin G., and one of the leading and most successful gold and silver refiners of New England, was born in Providence April 25, 1862. His education was received in the public schools of that city, and included one year's attendance at the high school. On leaving school he entered the employ of W. T. Smith, a gold and silver refiner on Blackstone street, the only employer he ever had. He began as an office boy and apprentice at $3 per week, in 1879, and remained there for seven years, during which period he laid the foundation of the business principles which in after years enabled him, in the conduct of his own affairs, to make a signal success. It was in this employ that he learned, besides the refining of gold and silver, the manner of conducting business. In time, along with his other work, the general oversight of the business and of the establishment was put upon his shoulders, and in fact he had become so valuable to Mr. Smith that he was later given a share of the profits; in one year he made $2,200, and in another something like $1,400. "The boy is father to the man." By careful management he had saved enough of his earnings so that by the time he was twenty-four years of age, in 1886, he had a completely equipped gold and silver refinery of his own, at No. 119 Mathewson street, corner of Sabin. He started with two men (one besides himself) in the shop and one on the road, and it was not long until he had a second man on the road. He continued at No. 119 Mathewson street for six years, or until 1892, when he bought 190 feet lying between Friendship street and Clifford, on Page street, and erected the building which he now occupies and where his business has been located for the last twelve years. He has also a plant in Attleboro, Mass., started in 1899, of the same capacity as his Providence plant, and under the supervision of his brother Harold. With his two plants Mr. Baker is entitled to be ranked among the largest refiners in New England. He has made a large success of his business and may truly be called self-made. There are few of the younger men of Providence who have reached such enviable position through their own efforts. Careful, prudent, and possessed to an unusual degree of New England business foresight, he is the typical up-to-date "Yankee" business man of today.

Mr. Baker is a Republican in national politics, but independent in local matters, preferring municipal integrity to partisanship in all questions affecting the welfare of his home city. Though not active in public affairs he takes a patriotic interest in good government and business-like management of civic affairs, and is influential when he chooses to exert himself in that direction. He is a member of Orpheus Lodge, No. 36, A. F. & A. M., Providence Chapter, Calvary Commandery, and the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Baker married, Dec. 14, 1886, Gertrude H. Hopkins, daughter of Harley P. Hopkins, of Providence, formerly of Scituate, and two children have come to them: Howard C., born Oct. 24, 1888, and Norman Dean, born June 3, 1893.

(VI) JOSEPH WARREN BAKER, son of Nelson O., was born June 17, 1843, in Rehoboth, Mass., received his early schooling in that town, and attended night school in Providence, whither he had come when between seventeen and eighteen years of age. He learned the trade of stone-cutting and marble working, boarding with the man who employed him. He was in Wickford in the same business for one year, and then went to work for Stephen Brooks, in Eddy street, continuing with him for two years. He was next engaged with the Tingley Marble Company, of South Main street, for five years, at the end of that period going into business for himself, when twenty-six years of age. Mr. Baker was so careful and economical in his preparatory work that at the end of four years he had saved $1,000. During this time he had also spent nine months at Buffalo. While with the Tingley firm he learned lettering from Edmund Tingley, one of the finest workmen in his line in the world. Mr. Baker carried on business for himself for two years, being one of the firm of Burns & Baker, on Smith street. He then changed his line, going into the grocery and meat business on North Main street, in partnership with his brother George E. This he carried on with his brother for six months, until he bought out his partner, and ran it alone for three and a half years, making a continual success of his undertaking. He was one of the first in the North End to start on the cash system.

Mr. Baker has had various other interests. Out of about seventy-five applicants for the superintendency of the North Burial Ground he was appointed, and held the position for sixteen years. In the meantime he had become interested in the Girard Mineral Spring, on Mineral Spring avenue, in North Providence, and in about 1893 he found the business had grown to such proportions that it needed his personal attention. He had bought and built in 1893 the property and building where he is now located. The water is excellent for all stomach and kidney troubles, the analysis of same by Prof. Edwin E. Calder showing the following result in grains per gallon of water: Total solid matters, 3,619; organic and volatile, .759; mineral matter, 2,860; lime sulphate, .934; lime carbonate, .292; magnesia carbonate, .525; common salt, .467. This mineral contains: Silica and insoluble, .525; iron and aluminum oxides, .117; free ammonia, none; and a very slight trace of albuminoid ammonia. The water finds ready sale in Providence and Pawtucket. It is used by consumers both for medicinal and general drinking purposes, and two teams are kept busy in Providence and one in Pawtucket. The company also makes a fine ginger ale, known as the "Girard XXX."

Mr. Baker started in life empty-handed, having no capital to begin with but what he earned, and having acquired all he has by his own exertions. He is a careful and circumspect man, and has always believed in the policy of letting well enough alone. He has accumulated a fine competence. Like most of his family he is independent in politics, and has taken no active part in public matters. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., Eagle Lodge, No. 2, but has not been affiliated for some years.

Mr. Baker first married Julia F. Weaver, of Providence, daughter of David L. Weaver, the family being of Middletown, Newport Co., R. I., and children as follows were born to this union: Warren, born March 11, 1869, is in the employ of the firm of Bliss & Co., Main street, Pawtucket; he married Jennie Schoot. Martha Estelle, born Aug. 3, 1875, is at home. Maria Louise, born July 30, 1878, died in infancy. The mother died Aug. 6, 1879, aged thirty-one years. Mr. Baker married (second) Henrietta Bowen, daughter of Col. Lyndall and Joanna (Nichols) Bowen, of Rehoboth, and they have had one child, Roger Williams, born July 23, 1883, who is associated with his father.

(VI) GEORGE EVERETT BAKER, son of Nelson O., was born in Rehoboth, Oct. 17, 1847. The district schools of his native town afforded him his educational advantages. The school year at that time consisted of two terms of three months each, and the lad attended the winter term at such times as his services could not be otherwise utilized. Thus he continued, working for his father in summer and attending school in winter, until he was eighteen years of age, when he began to learn the mason's trade with his father, who had two other sons who also learned the trade, the youngest, Samuel, serving his apprenticeship at a later period than George E., all of them becoming skilled workmen in their line. Nelson O. Baker and his three sons did the more skilled part of the pressed brick work on the fine residence of John Brayton, on Highland avenue, and that of Edmond Chace, on Rock street, at Fall River, Mass., and the aggregate of their wages per day was $20.50. They were considered among the very best masons in the county at that time. They also assisted in the construction of the William F. Sayles house in Pawtucket, and George E. and Charles N. assisted in the construction of the Dixon House, Elm street school house, and the town hall in Westerly, R. I., getting each $6 per day for their work on the last named building. In 1876 Charles N. and George E. helped to put up the mammoth Corliss engine at Philadelphia, which furnished the motor power for the Centennial Exposition, and was of 14,000 horse-power. It consisted of twenty boilers, arranged in the form of a horse-shoe.

When he came to Providence, as a boy, Mr. Baker worked for $5 per week, out of which he paid $4 for board and ten cents for laundry, leaving ninety cents for other expenses. He got a chance to put in an hour extra each morning and with the proceeds from this and his ninety cents he had at the end of eight months saved twenty-five dollars. So careful had he been with his earnings, a disposition induced no doubt by his first struggles, that when twenty-one years of age he had saved a sufficient sum, put in with an equal amount from his father, to purchase a house in Providence which he still owns. In addition he had saved enough money to enable him, on Dec. 19, 1876, to embark in the grocery business at what is now No. 68 Olney street, occupying a small building owned by Charles Jenks, where he continued for nine years. At the end of that time, in 1885, he built his present place of business, which consists of a substantial three-story building, store and dwelling, combined. Here Mr. Baker has built up a very fine trade, trebling the business done at the old stand. He is a successful business man, careful and conservative, yet progressive and up-to-date. He bears an enviable reputation for honorable dealings, and is thoroughly reliable in every respect. His large business has been built up from a modest beginning—the natural result of the qualifications and practices alluded to. As an advertiser Mr. Baker's methods are sometimes unique, and the results are most satisfying. For several years just previous to the Thanksgiving season he has been issuing announcements in rhyme, of his own composition, calling attention to the line in season, and it is doubtful if another establishment of similar size in the city commands more trade.

Personally Mr. Baker is a genial and whole-souled man, and his happy disposition has won him a large circle of friends. In politics he is a staunch Prohibitionist. On Dec. 3, 1865, Mr. Baker united with the Power Street M. E. Church and on Dec. 29, 1869, he transferred his membership to the Asbury Memorial M. E. Church. For nearly twenty-five years he was a member of its board of trustees, eleven years of which time he was treasurer of the board; during the building of the new church he served as a member of the building committee, and received and paid out over $40,000 in this capacity. He has been either superintendent or assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school for over twenty-five years. On Jan. 4, 1903, he retired as superintendent of the Sunday-school, at which time he was presented a Bible by the school as an evidence of esteem and appreciation of long and faithful service. Mrs. Baker became a member of the Asbury Memorial Church in the later sixties, and for twenty years was librarian of the Sunday-school. She is a most active member of the Ladies Aid Society.

On Feb. 19, 1868, Mr. Baker married Ruth A. Barney, daughter of Albert and Ann Eliza (Pearce) Barney, of Rehoboth, Mass., and grand-daughter of Willard and Polly (Luther) Barney. Two children have come to this union: (1) Jennie Belle, born April 28, 1870, married Walter A. Young, and had two children, Allen Everett (deceased) and Courtney P. (2) George Albert, born March 6, 1877, is gradually assuming active charge of his father's business, and has proved himself a young man of more than ordinary ability. Mr. Baker and family are well liked in their home community, as much for their sociability as for substantial worth, and they have a generous measure of both.

AMASA MANTON CHACE (deceased). Although the business life of the late Amasa Manton Chace was passed almost exclusively in New York City, he was allied to Newport by the ties of birth and ancestry, and on retiring from the financial field he returned to his birthplace to enjoy his remaining years. The Chace (or Chase) family dates back to the beginning of the Colonial period and was originally of Massachusetts.

(I) William Chase, born about 1595, in England, with wife Mary and son William came to America in the ship with Governor Winthrop and his colony in 1630, settling first in Roxbury. He soon became a member of the church of which the Rev. John Eliot, the Apostle to the Indians, was pastor. On Oct. 19, 1630, he applied for freemanship and was admitted a freeman May 14, 1634. In 1637, or thereabouts, he became one of the company who made a new settlement at Yarmouth, of which town he was made constable in 1639. He resided at Yarmouth the rest of his life, dying in May, 1659. His widow died the following October. Their children were: William, born about 1622, in England; Mary, born in May, 1637, in Roxbury; and Benjamin, born in 1639, in Yarmouth.

(II) William Chase (2), son of William and Mary, born about 1622, in England, came to America with his parents, married and was a resident of Yarmouth. He died Feb. 27, 1685. His children were: William, Jacob, John, Elizabeth, Abraham, Joseph, Benjamin and Samuel.

(III) William Chase (3), son of William (2), born about 1645, married (first) Hannah, daughter of Philip and Sarah (Odding) Sherman, and (second) Dec. 6, 1732, Priscilla Perry. His children were: William, Eber, Isaac, Nathaniel, Joseph and Hezekiah. The father's will was proved Aug. 16, 1737.

(IV) Isaac Chase married Feb. 10, 1704, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Jane (Marks) Blethen, of Salem, Mass. Their children were: James, born Feb. 12, 1706; Wait, April 24, 1708;

Isaac, May 19, 1710; William, Oct. 31, 1712; and Eliza, May 16, 1715. By his second wife, Mary, daughter of Samuel Fowler, there were seven children, Ezekiel, Mary, Robert, David, Lydia, Susanna and Benjamin.

(V) David Chase married (first) Oct. 11, 1753, Elizabeth Austin, and (second) Dec. 22, 1791, Mary Chace. The children, all by the first union, were born as follows: Alice, the 24th of the seventh month, 1754; David, the 8th of the third month, 1758; Elizabeth, the 4th of the ninth month, 1759; Jesse, the 11th of the ninth month, 1761; Isaac, the 9th of the tenth month, 1763; Collins, the 8th of the eighth month, 1766; Isaiah, the 24th of the ninth month, 1768; and Philip, the 30th of the first month, 1770.

(VI) Jesse Chase, the second son in the above family, and the grandfather of Amasa Manton Chace, was born 11th of 9 mo., 1761, and married Margaret Bowers, who died Nov. 14, 1822, aged 60 years. He died Feb. 25, 1847, aged 86 years.

(VII) Capt. Jesse Chase was born June 3, 1798, in Somerset, Mass. He came to Newport early in life and followed a sea-faring career, being a captain engaged in the merchant trade to China and England. His death occurred in Newport, March 17, 1876. Thrice married, his first wife was Almira Brayton, who was born in Swansea, Mass., and died Feb. 26, 1837, aged thirty-three. Her children were: John Brayton, born in 1833, died, Dec. 22, 1836; Elizabeth, C., married Anson B. Ives, of Savannah, Ga., and died there, Aug. 19, 1869; and Agnes, born Feb. 5, 1837, died in Newport, unmarried, Jan. 13, 1898. Capt. Chase married (second) Damaris C., daughter of Samuel and Damaris (Carr) Allen. She died in Newport, May 10, 1857, the mother of three children, viz.: Mary Catherine, who died in infancy; Damaris Carr, who died Sept. 17, 1845, aged one year; and Amasa Manton. The third wife, who long survived him, was Jane B. Thompson, born Aug. 14, 1814, daughter of Samuel Thompson, of Fall River; she died Sept. 25, 1894, in Newport.

(VIII) Amasa Manton Chace was born in Newport, March 22, 1847, and received his early schooling in his native city. Later he went to Riverside Military Academy, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On beginning business he was first engaged in wood turning and nickel plating work in Mystic, Conn., but later returning to Newport established himself as a dealer in imported art goods, furniture, etc., on Bellevue avenue. Eventually he gave this up and embarked in the advertising line in New York, in which he continued for about ten years, at the end of which time, in 1888, he retired from active business and came to Newport to make his home. He was a capable man of affairs and was well-to-do when he retired. A member of the Masonic

On Feb. 10, 1847, A. Barney Chase (Pearce), late grand-daughter of Barney Chase, died; age 10 years. Her father, Allen E. Chase, George A. Chase, assuming the name of Chase, and having more than one wife, are well known in the worth of the both.

AMASA CHASE

Amasa Chase was born May 10, 1715, in New Bedford, the first of his place to be of the name.

He was married to Mary Chase, daughter of Samuel and Damaris (Carr) Manton.

He died in Newport, Jan. 15, 1847, aged 80 years.

His wife, Mary Chase, died in Newport, May 10, 1857, the mother of three children, viz.: Mary Catherine, who died in infancy; Damaris Carr, who died Sept. 17, 1845, aged one year; and Amasa Manton.

Order, he belonged to St. Nicholas Lodge, of New York. In politics he was a Republican, and in religious belief a Unitarian, holding membership in Channing Memorial Chapel, in Newport. Mr. Chace's death occurred at his Newport home, Nov. 11, 1903, and he was interred in the Island Cemetery in that city.

On April 10, 1872, Mr. Chace married Miss Sarah Hull Townsend, who survives him. She was born Oct. 15, 1844, daughter of Edmund J. and Abby H. (Sherman) Townsend, of Newport. Mr. and Mrs. Chace had only two children, both sons. Allen Townsend was born in 1874, and died in 1881; Amasa Manton, Jr., born in 1886, is now being educated in civil engineering in Brown University.

The TOWNSEND family, of which Mrs. Chace is a member, appears in the vital records of Newport since the early part of the eighteenth century. The first mention is of Job and Rebecca, whose children were as follows: Hannah, born June 20, 1728, who married, Aug. 6, 1746, John Goddard; Sarah, born March 8, 1729; Susanna, born Nov. 29, 1731, who married Jan. 17, 1750, James Goddard; Job, who married May 31, 1753, Deborah, daughter of Peter and Thankful Taylor; Mary, born in 1733; Peter, born Jan. 22, 1734-35; and Thomas, born Jan. 30, 1742-43, who married Dec. 8, 1765, Mary Dyer.

From the Newport Townsend family descended the late Christopher Townsend, a merchant in New York City till about 1860, and a well known capitalist and philanthropist. He was a son of John F. and Ann (Easton) Townsend, and was born in Newport in February, 1807. He was most generous in his gifts to his native city, and among them, made either during his life or by the terms of his will, were $10,000 to the endowment fund of the Home for the Aged; $100,000 for the Home for Friendless Children; and $100,000 for the People's Library.

Another early Newport record shows Job Townsend, who married Deborah Taylor, and their son, Job Edmund Townsend, a cabinet maker by trade and later in the Newport Custom house, who married Mary Clarke Allen, was Mrs. Chace's paternal grandfather. Her father, Edmund J. Townsend, was a lifelong resident of Newport, where for over fifty years he engaged in sailmaking. He was married (first) April 12, 1830, to Miss Mary Louisa Ford, by whom he had an only son, William Ford. His second wife was Miss Abby H. Sherman, and they had issue as follows: Mary Louise, who died unmarried; Wealthy Moore, widow of John G. Weaver, Jr., of Newport; Sarah Hull, now Mrs. Chace; Abby Catherine, deceased wife of Samuel M. Blatchford, of New York; and Susan Elizabeth, who lived only four years.

METCALF. Since early in the eighteenth century the Metcalf name has been a continuous one in Providence. One Eleazer Metcalf, of the Dedham (Mass.) family, came hither not far from 1737-38; and later came others of that same stock. Say the vital records of Rhode Island: Joel and Lucy (Gay) Metcalf, of Attleboro birth, located in Providence in 1780. From this latter family have come some of the city's most capable, enterprising and successful business men, the earlier generations being tanners and leather merchants, and later generations extensive manufacturers. Such names as the two Joels, Jesse, Joseph G., Col. Edwin, Major George, Alfred, Franklin, Jesse H., Stephen O. and Edward P. Metcalf are prominently interwoven with the city's history. We have the following record of the early generations:

(I) Michael Metcalf, born in 1586, in Tatterford, County of Norfolk, England, was by occupation at Norwich a dornock weaver. He was made a freeman there in 1618. He married Oct. 13, 1616, in Waynham, Sarah, who was born June 17, 1593. Mr. Metcalf with his wife and their nine children and one servant came to New England in 1637. The father was admitted a freeman at Dedham, July 14, 1637, and joined the church in 1639. He was selectman in 1641. He states that he came to New England owing to religious persecution. His wife, Sarah, died Nov. 30, 1644, and he married (second) Aug. 13, 1645, Mrs. Mary Pidge, a widow, of Roxbury. Mr. Metcalf died Dec. 27, 1664. His children, all born in Norwich, England, were: Michael, born Nov. 13, 1617; Mary, Oct. 14, 1618 (or Feb. 14, 1619); Michael (2), Aug. 29, 1620; John, Sept. 5 (or 15), 1622; Sarah, Sept. 10, 1624; Elizabeth, Oct. 4, 1626; Martha, March 27 (or October), 1628; Thomas, Dec. 27, 1629 (or 1630); Ann, March 1, 1634; Jane, March 24, 16—; and Rebecca, April 5, 1635.

(II) Michael Metcalf (2), born Aug. 29, 1620, married April 21, 1644, Mary, daughter of John Fairbanks, Sr. Mr. Metcalf died in Dedham, Dec. 24, 1654. His children were: Michael, born in 1645; Mary, in 1646; Sarah, in 1648; Jonathan, in 1650; and Eleazer, in 1653.

(III) Jonathan Metcalf, born Sept. 21, 1650, married April 10, 1674, Hannah, daughter of John Kenric. They died, he on May 27, 1727, she on Dec. 23, 1731. Their children were: Jonathan, born in 1675; John, in 1678; Ebenezer, in 1680; Joseph, in 1682; Timothy, in 1684; Eleazer, in 1687; Hannah, in 1689; Nathaniel, in 1691; Mehetabel; and Mary.

(IV) John Metcalf, born March 20, 1678, married (first) April 29, 1701, Mehetabel Savels, of Braintree. She died March 30, 1712, aged twenty-nine years, and he married (second) Feb. 12, 1713, Bethiah Savels. She died May 22, 1717, aged thirty-five years, and he married (third) Oct. 25, 1718, Grace Williams, of Roxbury, who died Nov. 11, 1749, aged sixty-one years. His children were: John, born March 31, 1704; Eleazer, Aug. 21, 1706; Timothy, Dec. 11, 1707; Joseph, May 11, 1710; twins, in 1712 (who died that year, with the mother); Jonathan; born May 4, 1714; Bethiah, Dec. 31, 1715; a child, in 1717 (who died that year with the mother); Katherine, born in 1719; Katherine (2), in 1721; Mehetabel, in 1723; Sarah, in 1725; Timothy, in 1728; Timothy (2), in 1730; Grace, in 1732; Stephen, in 1732; and a son, in 1734.

(V) Eleazer Metcalf, son of John, born Aug. 21, 1706, married March 24, 1736-37, Martha Turkin, and their children were: William, John, Mehetabel, Martha and V. Katherine. (Arnold's Vital Statistics of Providence County show that William and John were born Feb. 3, 1737-38, and July 18, 1739, respectively.)

(VI) William Metcalf, born Feb. 3, 1737-38, married Dec. 13, 1761, Anna Hopkins, daughter of Capt. John and Catherine (Turpin) Hopkins, the former of whom was a brother of Gov. Stephen Hopkins and a descendant of Thomas Hopkins, who came from England and was many times a deputy from Providence, beginning with 1652, his lineage being through William and Major William Hopkins. A daughter of the above marriage married Alfred Mann, and had, among other children, William Metcalf Mann, who was one of the editors of the Providence American, and died March 2, 1817, in his twenty-third year.

(IV) Nathaniel Metcalf, son of Jonathan, of Dedham, Mass., born April 17 (or 22), 1691, married Feb. 13, (or 17), 1713, Mary Gay. He died March 15, 1752. His children were: Mary married Joseph Fisher; Nathaniel married Ruth Whiting; Hannah married Samuel Richards; Sarah married Israel Everett; Margaret married Stephen Fales; Mercy died unmarried, when seventy-seven years old; Ebenezer married Elizabeth Stanley; and Lydia married Timothy Fisher.

(V) Nathaniel Metcalf, son of Nathaniel, born Aug. 29, 1718, died May 3, 1789. He married Ruth Whiting, of Attleboro, Mass., and they had children: Nathaniel, of Providence, who died unmarried at the age of thirty; Ebenezer, of Cumberland, who married Abigail Dexter; Michael, of Providence, who married Molly Gay; Joel, of Attleboro and Providence; Jesse; Samuel; Lucy; Catharine, who married Philip Ellis; Ruth, who married Elisha May; Lucy, who married Benjamin Pidge, of Dighton; Sarah, who married Amos Ide, of Attleboro; and Molly.

(VI) Joel Metcalf, son of Nathaniel and Ruth, was born Nov. 4, 1755, in Attleboro, Mass. He married Lucy Gay, also born in Attleboro, Oct. 3, 1759, their marriage (of Providence, R. I., record) being solemnized Dec. 9, 1779. They removed from Attleboro to Providence (say the Providence records) on the 4th of February, 1780, and in 1798 resided with their family at what was, in 1858, Nos. 64 and 66 Benefit street. Mr. Metcalf was a leather dresser and currier, and carried on an extensive business, at first in company with his brother Michael, and afterward on his own account, on Mill street, in a wooden building. He was a hard-working, industrious, honest mechanic, and no better citizen walked the streets of Providence. He was a stern Democrat of the Jeffersonian school, and his name may be found among the fifty-six freemen who voted the Democratic ticket when Mr. Jefferson came into power. Though his education was limited, and his politics unpopular in Providence, such was the general confidence in the uprightness of his intentions and his strong common sense that his fellow citizens elected him for many years a member of their town council. They also elected him a member of the school committee for twenty-two years in succession, during which time he was present at every examination of the public schools. He was among the first and foremost in favor of public schools, and that his interest in them was real appears from the fact just noted that he gave his personal attendance at upward of eighty successive examinations. When his party came into power in the State he was elected a judge of the court of Common Pleas for the county of Providence.

Mr. Metcalf was the father of a large family, four sons and six daughters, and the sterling worth of the man is reflected in the fact that the children have been honored and respected for their own merits. Among the daughters Betsey, who married Mr. Obed Baker, of West Dedham, Mass., is conceded by all to have been the first braider of straw in the United States. Seeing an imported Dunstable straw bonnet in the window of the store of Col. John Whipple, she determined to have a Dunstable bonnet and commenced experimenting with some oat straw that her father had harvested that year. She commenced making her first experiment in June, 1798. She began braiding first with six straws and then with seven, and finally found, after much discouragement from friends and encouragement from an aunt in the family, that she was able to imitate perfectly the imported braid. She says, "The first bonnet I made was of seven braid, with bobbin put in like open work, and lined with pink satin. This was very much admired and hundreds, I should think, came to see it." She visited Dedham and taught them there, also in Wrentham and Providence, R. I., and had quite a factory, which was run for some time in Providence. After her marriage she lived in Dedham, and formed there a small society of ladies, who, from their braidings at regular monthly meetings, were enabled to contribute more than $1,000 to the cause of Missions among the Indians in this country. She was a most devout woman, and is said to have read her Bible through nearly a score of times, reading it aloud to her husband after he had retired. She was also most charitable. It is said of her that so careful was she of her time that she would keep up her knitting while going to visit a neighbor. She also says of herself that she nearly defrayed her own expenses by braiding in the stage, while traveling from Dedham to Providence. She reared a large family of excellent sons and daughters.

We have the following record of the children of Joel and Lucy (Gay) Metcalf: Katy, born Sept. 27, 1780; Lucy, March 31, 1782; Sophia, June 24, 1784; Betsey, March 29, 1786; Lucy (2), March 26, 1788; Jesse, May 15, 1790; Joel, Aug. 2, 1792; Ruth, July 31, 1794; Joseph Gay, Dec. 9, 1796; and Whiting, April 22, 1799.

(VII) Jesse Metcalf, born May 15, 1790, son of Joel, died June 20, 1838. He was married April 19, 1812, to Eunice Dench Houghton, daughter of John. She died May 5, 1858. Their children, only three of whom survive, were born as follows: Sophia, Aug. 17, 1813; Emily, June 29, 1815; Ellen, June 28, 1817 (married Edwin A. Bush, and had Jesse M. and Charles S.); Evelina, June 30, 1820 (married George Hunt and had Ellen G., who lives at No. 119 Prospect street, Providence, and Eva, wife of Andrew Ingraham); Matilda, April 7, 1822; Jesse, Dec. 14, 1824; Jesse (2), March 4, 1827 (mentioned below); Lucy Gay, Oct. 1, 1829 (living); Franklin, June 3, 1832 (now a resident of Carolina, R. I., and father of Edward P. Metcalf, mentioned below); Emily, May 19, 1837 (mentioned below, and one of the three survivors).

(VII) Joel Metcalf, son of Joel and Lucy, born Aug. 2, 1792, died Sept. 19, 1868. On May 7, 1814, he married Susanna Houghton, daughter of John, and their children were born as follows: John, April 28, 1815; Henry, May 2, 1817; Edwin, May 9, 1819; Maria, April 21, 1821 (married Charles Sabin); James P., March 7, 1822 (married Abby Mason); Albert, Nov. 7, 1823; Susanna, Dec. 31, 1825; Rev. Richard, Aug. 19, 1829 (a prominent Unitarian clergyman); Lewis, Nov. 25, 1831; Lewis Herbert, Dec. 28, 1835 (he had sons, Joel Hastings Metcalf and Benjamin Hicks Metcalf); Capt. Joel, June 2, 1838.

(VII) Joseph Gay Metcalf, born Dec. 9, 1796, died June 29, 1854. He married Aug. 23, 1820, Evelina Houghton, who was born Dec. 11, 1798, daughter of John, and died May 14, 1868. Their children were as follows: (1) Mary, born July 12, 1821, married Samuel S. Davis, and died March 6, 1877, in Fort Scott, Kans. (2) Col. Edwin, born Aug. 23, 1823, died Jan. 18, 1894. (3) Major George, born Jan. 7, 1826, died Jan. 14, 1895. (4) Alfred, born Dec. 1, 1828, died July 16, 1904. He is mentioned below. (5) Lawson, born Sept. 28, 1834, died young. (6) Capt. Joseph, born Dec. 8, 1837, died Aug. 28, 1888. He married Emma Leonard, and had one son and two daughters, Leonard, Alice and Mary Church, all of Concord, Massachusetts.

(VII) WHITING METCALF, son of Joel and Lucy (Gay) Metcalf, born April 22, 1799, in Providence, R. I., received his education in the public schools. His youth was occupied in industrial pursuits that prepared him for the subsequent business of life. He engaged in the manufacture of jewelry with the late Peter Church, with whom he continued in partnership until his decease. In the early part of the last century there stood on the corner of Charles and Mill streets an old two-story wooden building used as a tannery by Joel Metcalf and sons. Its site is now occupied by the handsome block of the Fletcher Manufacturing Company, for offices and storage. On an upper floor of this ancient building Whiting Metcalf, the youngest son of Joel, about the year 1820 opened a small shop for the manufacture of jewelry. After a short experience in business alone he was joined by Peter Church, and together they formed what in later years became the very successful and prominent firm of Church Metcalf. This was in about the year 1825. Mr. Metcalf was the traveling member of the firm, and his periodical visits to New York, Philadelphia and Boston were financially successful to the new and aspiring firm. The business grew under the able management of these two men, Mr. Metcalf and Mr. Church, until in 1848 it was located in the large brick factory building of Jabez Gorham & Son, on Canal street, south of the corner of Steeple street. On Jan. 1, 1856, another removal was made, to the building known as the Mathewson & Allen building, corner of Weybosset and Dorrance streets, opposite the "Narragansett Hotel." It was on May 4th of this year (1856) that Mr. Metcalf's connection with this firm was terminated by death. Popular to a degree with his patrons; scrupulously honest in his dealings with them, he was largely instrumental in laying the foundation of one of the most substantial jewelry firms in the city of Providence.

At the time of his death the Providence Journal spoke briefly of Mr. Metcalf as follows: "Mr. Metcalf was a man much respected by all who knew him. He was an ardent friend of the reforms of the day." This spirit was shown in his connection with the Mechanics Association, the Rhode Island Bible Society and the Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry. He sympathized warmly with all good works, and the ministry at large found in him a constant friend and supporter. He possessed a keen sense of personal responsibility, one of the most notable features of an unusually strong character, and throughout life showed in his unostentatious deeds of benevolence that he felt the obligations and privileges of stewardship. No one in need ever was turned away empty handed. In him faith and works were manifested as inseparable characteristics. His life was his epitaph, not graven upon stone, but on the loving, living hearts he won. It is said that he carried pasted to the inside of his wallet, so that he saw it always when he opened his purse, the quotation, "Turn not a deaf ear to the needy poor." In disposition he was genial and his kind-heartedness made him beloved by all with whom he came in contact. His religious home was in the First Congregational (Unitarian) Church on Benefit street. Though he never participated actively in politics he was a stanch Whig in principle.

Mr. Metcalf married Almira Taft, daughter of Sweeting and Chloe Taft, and they had one daughter, Almira F., who is now the wife of William G. Pierce, of Providence, and has one son, Arthur Whiting Pierce. It was Mr. Metcalf's special request that his daughter keep up the charities in which he was so vitally interested, and the many kindly deeds which mark her life show that she has inherited the disposition which needs no prompting to such acts.

(VIII) JESSE METCALF, son of Jesse and Eunice Dench (Houghton) Metcalf, who died at his home in Providence on Wednesday, Dec. 20, 1899, was for many years one of the best known manufacturers in the State of Rhode Island. Though president and treasurer of the Wanskuck Company at the time of his decease, and a director in many other of the most important business enterprises in this part of the country, he virtually lived retired for the last two or three years of his life. He was a native of Providence, and passed practically all his life in that city.

Mr. Metcalf was born March 4, 1827, in the old home of the Metcalfs on Mills street, Providence, and received all his literary training in the city of his birth, attending Mr. Baker's 2d District school on Meeting street, and later the private schools of Thomas C. Hartshorn and Joseph S. Pitman. Choosing to follow a mercantile career, he entered the employ of Truman Beckwith, a dealer in cotton, with whom he remained until 1851, in which year he went to Augusta, Ga., with Stephen T. Olney, as a cotton buyer. He followed that business with great success until the panic of 1857 began to make itself felt, and then returning to Providence he and Mr. Olney began also the purchase of wool. In 1858 they commenced stocking the Glendale Mill, then operated by Lyman Copeland, and in 1859 acted in a similar capacity for the Greenville Mill, run by Messrs. Pooke & Steere. Both these concerns made cassimeres. They subsequently stocked the Mohegan Mill, where satinets was manufactured.

The war of the Rebellion put an end to the cotton business, and in July, 1862, in company with Henry J. Steere, they commenced the erection of the Wanskuck Mill. The formation and incorporation of the Wanskuck Company followed, Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Olney and Mr. Steere taking up the stock of the concern, and in May, 1864, they shipped their first case of woolen goods to New York. On Jan. 12, 1870, the Wanskuck Company shipped the first case of worsted goods for men's wear made in this country. The business grew rapidly from the very start, and had so expanded by October, 1874, that work was commenced upon a worsted mill, the machinery of which was put into motion in April, 1875. Further development rewarded their enterprise, and on July 12, 1884, the first delivery of yarn was made from their new Steere worsted mill. Early in 1897 the company assumed the management of the Geneva Mills, and in 1898 of the Mohegan Mill, and Oakland Mill in Burrillville. All through the period of the greatest activity of the Wanskuck Company Mr. Metcalf was an energetic and enthusiastic factor in its growth, but he took a less active part in the management of the establishment for nearly ten years prior to his death, though he continued to act as president and treasurer of the company.

Naturally, through his association with a line of business which was dependent to a large extent on the successful operation of other industries, Mr. Metcalf became interested in financial concerns of magnitude and importance, and as became one of his ability and resource took an active part in their management and direction. He was associated with the Bank of North America for a considerable time, as a director and later as president, holding this office for several years; was a director of the New York & New England Railroad; a director of the Providence Gas Company; a director of the Union Railroad Company for several years and president of the same for some time; and a director of several manufacturers' mutual insurance companies. Though devoted to his extensive business interests, he was a man of social nature, and held membership in the Union League Club of New York, and the Hope Club of Providence. He was an honorary member of the Cobden Club of England, of which but few Americans are members; the late Rowland Hazard was also an associate member of this organization. His religious connections was with the First Congregational (Unitarian) Society.

Mr. Metcalf was first a Republican, and in later years became an independent in politics, but though influential he did not take a particularly active part in such matters. However, he was public-spirited and honest in his convictions, and did his duty ably for several years as a Republican member of the Legislature. He was the first to introduce into the Rhode Island Legislature a measure changing the legal rate of interest. It became a law, the first law of the kind in the United States, and many of the other States followed. Of this fact he spoke sometimes with pride. He also served as a member of the board of inspection of the State Prison, which body was the predecessor of the present Board of State Charities and Corrections, and had charge of the State's penal institutions. This board of inspection accomplished some remarkably good work while it was in power, and was given a vote of thanks by the Legislature. In 1888 Mr. Metcalf was a delegate to the National Convention held at St. Louis which nominated Grover Cleveland for the Presidency. A pronounced free trader, it was remarked of him by an intimate acquaintance that he was one of the few honest free trade manufacturers of the speaker's acquaintance; this gentleman was of the opinion that Mr. Metcalf would have put his ideas into practice if it had been possible for him to have his way.

Mr. Metcalf was at one time a member of the Commission on Sinking Fund of the city of Providence. He left a monument to his generosity in the well-appointed building on Waterman street, where the Rhode Island School of Design has its home. This school was erected as a tribute to the memory of his wife and her devoted labors, and in furtherance of its interests Mr. Metcalf donated the land upon which the building stands and contributed the money which assured its erection. He was a believer in practical philanthropy and took this means of accomplishing what he believed would benefit hundreds who would be permitted, because of his gift, to enjoy privileges which otherwise could hardly have come within their reach. The appreciation of the privileges and advantages of this school is best attested by the steady patronage it has had, the attendance now being over nine hundred.

As a business man of many interests, as a man who performed his public duties with unswerving integrity and unquestioning fidelity, as a citizen who never forgot local interests in the larger questions which demanded his attention, as a friend, and an intelligent Christian gentleman who recognized his duty to his fellow citizens in general, Providence had reason to be proud of Jesse Metcalf, and he was honored in his native city by all who knew him. His record is an ideal one. The demands upon his intellect and reason were many and great, but he showed a capacity commensurate with them, and never failed in the performance of duty or the carrying out of any enterprise which after due consideration he had decided to undertake.

On Nov. 22, 1852, Mr. Metcalf was united in marriage with Miss Helen Adelia Rowe, of Providence, who died March 1, 1895. Five children were born to this union: (1) Eliza G. was married May 27, 1880, to Dr. Gustav Radeke, of Providence, and is now a widow. (2) Stephen O. was married Dec. 2, 1886, to Esther Henrietta Pierce, who was born Nov. 26, 1862, daughter of George and Esther J. Pierce, and they have had three children: Helen Pierce, born Sept. 3, 1887; George Pierce, June 13, 1890; and Houghton Pierce, Aug. 12, 1891. (3) Sophia is the wife of the Hon. William C. Baker. (4) Jesse H., born Nov. 16, 1860, married Harriet D. Thurston, daughter of Benjamin and Cornelia D. Thurston, and they have one daughter Cornelia, born Sept. 28, 1892. (5) Manton Bradley, born June 26, 1864, was educated in a select school kept by Charles Wheeler, and he also attended Brown University for two years. In the fall of 1881 he went to New York, where for the past twenty-six years he has been the manager of the sales department of the Wanskuck Company. He makes his home in Orange, N. J. He married April 28, 1886, Susan Maud Browning, of New York, daughter of Theodore and Susan (Wilcox) Browning, and they have had three children, viz.: Jesse, born Sept. 10, 1887; Manton B., Jr., Dec. 7, 1892; and Rowe Browning, May 6, 1900. Mrs. Metcalf is a member of the Episcopal Church.

(VIII) DR. EMILY (METCALF) THURBER, born May 19, 1837, daughter of Jesse and Eunice D. (Houghton) Metcalf, attended the public and high schools, taking all the work that was given and graduating in 1853, when only sixteen years of age. She was married, in 1858, to Isaac Brown Thurber, son of Isaac and Lucy (Brown) Thurber, and grandson of Samuel Thurber. In about 1872, Mrs. Thurber began reading medicine with Dr. George D. Wilcox, of Providence, who let her have books to study and read, and who quizzed her upon her work. She had read about all the text-books on medicine before entering upon her medical college work in the Boston University School of Medicine, where she began the second year work, and did in two years what was required of three-years students. She was the first woman student of Dr. Wilcox. Beginning study when women were not generally engaged in that line, she was the second or third to graduate from the Boston University of Medicine, and stood fifth in her class of fifty, graduating in 1878. She was always a great student, and pursued her studies in German and Literature under Dr. Hedge. Within a short time Dr. Thurber began practice on Carpenter street, and the past sixteen years has had her office on Broad street. Soon after she entered upon practice Dr. C. L. Green came to Providence and engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, and for twenty-five years Dr. Thurber has been his assistant. Her relations with her fellow physicians have been most cordial and pleasant. She at one time paid special attention to pathology and urinalysis, and was at one time pathologist of the Homeopathic Hospital and attending physician of the Children's Home on Toby street for eight years. She also took a special course in the summer schools at Harvard in microscopy and pathology. She is a member of the Rhode Island Homeopathic Medical Society and of the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynecological Society, and at one time was a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy.

Children as follows have been born to Isaac B. and Emily (Metcalf) Thurber: (1) John Houghton, born Feb. 13, 1864, lives at home. He and his father are chemists at the Gorham Manufacturing Company, and are considered most capable men in their line of work. (2) Edward Metcalf, born Aug. 8, 1866, lives at Port Hope, Ontario, being general manager at that place for the Nicholson File Company, of Providence. He married Alice R. Bensley, of Pawtucket, who died June 28, 1906, and they had two children, Marjorie Bensley and Edward Metcalf. (3) Walter, born Dec. 27, 1868, married Almira Little, of Providence, and they have two children, Elsie Mason and Bessie Metcalf. He resides in Boston, Mass., and is in charge of electric construction work in that city. (4) Amey, born Feb. 11, 1871, was a teacher in the New York Institute for the Deaf and is now at home.

ISAAC BROWN THURBER, son of Isaac and Lucy (Brown) Thurber, was born in Providence

April 8, 1835, and was educated in his native city. He became a clerk with the Jabez Gorham Silver Manufacturing Company, and then took up the study of chemistry, spending two years at Brown University. After completing his course he returned to the Gorham Company, and since then has been connected with the Chemical Department, holding the position of head chemist. Mr. Thurber is a staunch Republican in politics, but is in no sense of the word a politician. He is a wide reader and deep student, and is devoted to his home. He married, as above stated, Emily, daughter of Jesse and Eunice D. (Houghton) Metcalf.

(VIII) ALFRED METCALF, son of Joseph Gay and Evelina (Houghton), born Dec. 1, 1828, in Providence, R. I., on Nov. 22, 1860, married Rosa Clinton Maloy, of Newport, Rhode Island.

Mr. Metcalf was educated in the public schools of Providence, the grammar school and the new Providence high school, and was a graduate of the last two, being a member of the first class that graduated in the last named institution. After completing his academic studies he took a course in civil engineering and later engaged in that profession. He was always a student, fond of books and became a man of wide information. In 1864 associated with his cousin, the late Jesse Metcalf, Messrs. Henry J. Steere and Stephen T. Olney, Mr. Metcalf engaged in the manufacturing business, these men founding the Wanskuck Company, and from that time until his death he was an officer in that corporation. Mr. Metcalf as a man and citizen was among the substantial and useful residents of his city. He was especially active and performed long service as a member of the school committee, serving from the First ward for some forty years. He took the keenest interest in the public schools of the city. As a committeeman he had witnessed the schools of Providence develop from the old district school system to the modern free institutions, and he himself bore a part in that development. His advice in matters pertaining to public affairs was freely sought and willingly given. He was elected a member of the common council of the city from the First ward in 1863, and served in that body until 1866, and again from 1867 to 1872 he occupied a seat there. He was elected a member of the board of aldermen of the city in 1875, serving until 1878, and again in 1880, serving until 1883.

Mr. Metcalf was a man who made and held many friends. He died at his home in Providence July 16, 1904, aged seventy-five years. He was a Unitarian and a most devout member of the First Congregational Church of Providence. In religious views he was broad and most liberal. The Christian Register spoke of him thus: "His sympathies were as broad as his means were ample, and he gave not only of his money but also of his time and thought and strength. And yet he kept himself so sedulously in the background and gave so quietly that few realized the depth of his interest and the extent of his gifts. A wise counselor, a staunch friend, a public-spirited citizen, his influence will be missed in many places and in many ways."

Mr. Metcalf was survived by his wife and three sons: (1) Ralph, born Nov. 4, 1861, graduated from the University of Michigan in the class of 1883, and is now treasurer and manager of the Metcalf Shingle Company, of Tacoma, Wash. He married Edith O. Simpson, of Winona, Minn., and they have one daughter, Elizabeth. (2) Frederick, born Jan. 31, 1866, is treasurer and manager of the Chase Machine Company, manufacturers of marine machinery, of Cleveland, Ohio. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Boston. He married Alice Duncan Butts of East Providence. (3) Guy, born Nov. 19, 1873, was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1894, and after a few years in business and travel abroad, he entered the Law Department of the University of Michigan, from which after a course of three years he was graduated in 1904. He is located in the practice of his profession in his native city. He married Clare Louise Burt, of Cleveland, Ohio, and they have one child, Clarissa Rosa.

(IX) EDWARD P. METCALF, president of the Atlantic National Bank of Providence, was born in that city in 1859, and is a son of Franklin Metcalf a prominent manufacturer, and grandson of (VII) Jesse and Eunice D. (Houghton) Metcalf. He received his early education in the public schools of his native city, and then attended Worcester Academy. His business career began when he was twenty years old, at which time he entered the employ of Brown Bros. & Co., of Providence, with whom he remained four years. At the end of that period he became assistant treasurer of the Carolina Mills Company, and had charge of the sale of the product of their mills in New York City. Subsequently he entered the employ of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company of Providence, where he acquired a thorough knowledge of banking. He resigned this position in 1893 to accept the appointment of superintendent of agents for Rhode Island for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, with headquarters in Providence. In 1898 he was appointed national bank examiner for Rhode Island and Connecticut, to fill the vacancy caused by the decease of Daniel E. Day, and served in that position with marked ability for four years. At the end of that time he was honored with election to the presidency of the Old National Bank, to the duties of which responsible position he gave his principal attention for four years. He at once tendered his resignation to the government office he was filling, and shouldered his new responsibilities without delay. In this incumbency he succeeded Mr. Julius Palmer, former cashier F. A. Cranston declining reelection at the same time. A Providence paper, announcing the election and the increase of the number of directors to ten, made the following comment on Mr. Metcalf's qualifications: "Mr.

Metcalf comes to his new position at the Old National well equipped for the duties of president. His experience as bank examiner has been especially advantageous for him in securing a thorough insight into banking methods. He has a wide acquaintance with the business men of the city and State, and assumes his new duties under favorable auspices."

The Old National Bank was for many years, one of the most reliable financial institutions in the city, and until Mr. Metcalf's advent into the presidency was a decidedly conservative concern. It was finally agreed, however, that a more active policy would be desirable, and it was decided to adopt the most modern methods of banking, with a man at the helm who understood to the full what methods were safest and most effective. Mr. Metcalf's previous experience qualified him amply for the undertaking, and he proved to be the right man in the right place, as during the four years of his regime, the deposits of the Old National Bank increased from $466,905 to $3,420,399. In May, 1906, Mr. Metcalf became president of the Atlantic National Bank, at which time its deposits were $258,818, and in the time that he has had charge of that institution some idea of the success with which he has managed its affairs can be gleaned from the amount of deposits in July, 1907, $2,258,943. Mr. Metcalf's sound judgment and enterprise have made him respected in Providence, where his position in business and financial circles is a foremost one. His high standing is the result of admirable personal characteristics as much as business integrity. He takes an active part in the promotion of various other interests of importance to the welfare of the community, being president of the Y. M. C. A. of Providence, and since his accession to that office the Association has wiped out a heavy financial burden and placed itself in a better position for active work. Mr. Metcalf holds several other positions of responsibility and trust in religious and social circles. He is prominent in the Free Baptist denomination, being a member of the First Free Baptist Church of Olneyville, and president of the United Society of Free Baptist Young People, a national organization. He is a member of Charity Lodge, No. 23, A. F. & A. M., of Hope Valley.

On June 18, 1885, Mr. Metcalf was married to Mary Elizabeth Gardiner, daughter of William V. Gardiner, of Providence, and four children have been born of this union: Franklin, who died when nine months old; Alice Belle; Margaret, and Mildred Gardiner.

DR. RAYMOND PERRY EDDY, for a quarter of a century one of the best known and most skillful medical practitioners of East Providence, R. I., was born in Warren, this State, April 6, 1852, son of Dr. Raymond P. and Eliza (Smith) Eddy.

Dr. Raymond P. Eddy, Sr., was born in Smithfield, R. I., Aug. 17, 1823, and died Nov. 11, 1903.

His early years were passed on the farm and in the mill, and for a time he was also engaged in the jewelry business in Warren, R. I. In 1860 he received the degree of M. D. from the Medical Institution of Cincinnati, and thereafter practiced for many years in his native place. About 1890 he went to Massachusetts for a year or so, and upon his return to Rhode Island located in Olneyville. He was a man of exemplary habits, using neither liquor nor tobacco. On Nov. 27, 1846, he married Eliza, daughter of Harry Smith, and she died April 6, 1872. Their children were as follows: Albert Fulton (deceased) who was a veterinary surgeon of Pawtucket, married Abby Sweet; Elmer Bertley, born Jan. 8, 1850, graduated from Lapham Institute in 1870, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in 1873; Raymond Perry was born April 6, 1852.

Raymond Perry Eddy spent his early school days at Greenville, R. I., and later attended Lapham Institute, at North Scituate. He began the study of medicine with his father and brother, was for six months in the Philadelphia General Hospital, and for a year attended the University of Buffalo. In 1882 he received the degree of M. D. from the University of Vermont, spent the next few months in practice with his father, and then located in East Providence, R. I., for independent practice. He continued there, engaged in professional work, until the time of his death, which occurred Nov. 16, 1907. He was a general practitioner and was successful in his treatment of many complicated cases. He was an earnest student, and associated himself with the various medical organizations of the city and State, taking advantage of every chance to learn new methods of conquering and controlling disease.

Dr. Eddy married Miss Jennie Tillinghast, daughter of Thomas Sweet Tillinghast and cousin of the late Judge Pardon Tillinghast, and one daughter blessed this union, Hope Tillinghast. Mrs. Eddy passed away Aug. 23, 1907.

WILLIAM K. ATWOOD, a well-known business man of Providence, who has been successful as a real estate broker, was born at North Scituate, June 25, 1831, son of William and Esther (Aldrich) Atwood, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of the town.

Mr. Atwood was reared to farm work. He received his education in the district school, and remained at home until 1851, in which year he went to California, via the Isthmus of Panama, spending one year in the mines along the Calaveras river. Returning to Rhode Island he became interested, in company with William R. Colwell, in a general store at North Scituate, the style of the firm being Colwell & Atwood. Two years later this business was disposed of, and Mr. Atwood engaged in the boot and shoe business in Providence, on Weybosset street, near the Arcade, continuing at that location for nine years. He then moved the business to Westminster street, near Mathewson, where he continued four years, and at the end of that time disposed of it to engage in the manufacture of jewelry in partnership with Uriah R. Colwell, a brother of William R., his former partner, the style of the new firm being Atwood & Colwell. This connection continued for ten years, when Mr. Atwood acquired his partner's interest, and soon afterward disposed of the business and engaged as a real estate broker, his present occupation. Mr. Atwood was for a number of years associated with Joseph Nichols in the business of loaning money, but since the latter's death has continued alone. Mr. Atwood ranks among the successful business men of Providence, and he is a representative, public-spirited citizen.

Mr. Atwood is a member of Swarts Lodge, No. 18, I. O. O. F., and has been through all of the chairs; and he is also a member of Moshassuck Encampment, No. 2.

On Oct. 26, 1854, Mr. Atwood was married to Mary E. Mowry, born Jan. 25, 1834, daughter of George W. and Hannah (Aldrich) Mowry, of Smithfield. Mr. and Mrs. Atwood have had two sons, viz.: (1) George M., born Dec. 13, 1855, married Blanche L. Sweet, born Jan. 10, 1864. Mr. Atwood died Oct. 31, 1898, survived by his wife and two children, Blanche M., born Oct. 3, 1887, and Beatrice M., born Jan. 31, 1891. (2) William A. born Feb. 4, 1861, married Edith M. Sweet, born June 10, 1866, and they have one daughter, Gertrude M., born May 24, 1889.

ANTHONY (Portsmouth family). The old Anthony family of Rhode Island, one among the first in position as well as settlement, is of approximately two hundred and seventy years standing in New England and nearly as long in Rhode Island, where some of the name have been among the commonwealth's most distinguished sons. Portsmouth was the early family home here, and among the early generations who figured in the public affairs of the settlement and Colony was John Anthony, the settler, who was not only commissioner but several times a representative in the Colonial Assembly, as were his sons, John and Abraham, the latter of whom repeatedly occupied a seat in that body and in 1709 and 1710 was speaker of the House of Deputies. Then in recent generations there sat for so many years in the United States Senate the distinguished member of that body and national figure, the late Hon. Henry B. Anthony, of Providence, the noted journalist as well as statesman; and still more recently as members of the General Assembly of the State from Portsmouth and nearby towns in Newport county have been Hon. George B. Anthony, a representative from his town in both branches of the State Assembly; and Hon. Henry Clay Anthony, who for years has been a member of the Lower House from the town of Portsmouth, one of the town's leading citizens, an extensive farmer and grower of seeds and garden truck.

The following genealogy is chronological, beginning with the emigrant settler:

(I) John Anthony, born in 1607, a resident of the village of Hampstead, near London, England, came to New England in the barque "Hercules," in 1634. He is of record in 1640 in Portsmouth, R. I., and was made a freeman in 1641. He became a corporal in a military company and had land assigned to him at the "Wading River" in 1644. He had authority granted him May 25, 1655, to keep a house of entertainment in Portsmouth. He was commissioner, 1661, and deputy, 1666-72. The Christian name of his wife was Susanna. Both he and his wife died in 1675. Their children were: John, born in 1642; Susanna; Elizabeth; Joseph; and Abraham.

(II) Abraham Anthony, son of John, married Dec. 26, 1671, Alice Wodell, born Feb. 10, 1650, daughter of William and Mary Wodell, and they were residents of Portsmouth, R. I., when he was made a freeman, in 1672. He was deputy in 1703, 1704, 1705, 1707, 1708, 1709, 1710 and 1711, and was Speaker of the House of Deputies in 1709-1710. He died Oct. 10, 1727, and his widow passed away in 1734. Their children were: John, born Nov. 7, 1672; Susanna, Aug. 29, 1674; Mary, Aug. 29, 1674; William, Oct. 31, 1675; Susanna, Oct. 14, 1677; Mary, Jan. 2, 1680; Abraham, April 21, 1682; Thomas, June 30, 1684; Alice, Jan. 22, 1686; James, Jan. 22, 1686; Almy, Jan. 30, 1688; Isaac, April 10, 1690; and Jacob, Nov. 15, 1693.

(III) William Anthony, son of Abraham, born Oct. 31, 1675, married March 14, 1694, Mary Coggeshall, daughter of John Coggeshall, and their children were: William, born May 14, 1695; Abraham, Sept. 26, 1696; Elizabeth, May 2, 1698; Mary, Dec. 8, 1699; John, Sept. 12, 1702; Alice, May 22, 1705; Anne, March 17, 1707; John, Nov. 16, 1708; Amey, Nov. 16, 1708; William (2), Oct. 26, 1709; James, Nov. 9, 1712; Job, April 10, 1714; Benjamin, June 10, 1716; and Daniel, May 19, 1720.

(IV) Abraham Anthony (2), son of William, born Sept. 26, 1696, married in Swansea, Mass., Feb. 7, 1716-17, Elizabeth Gray, and their children, the first nine born in Swansea and the others in Portsmouth, were: Abraham, born Dec. 9, 1717; Mary, Feb. 9, 1718-19; Edward, May 2, 1720 (died Feb. 6, 1821); Thomas, Oct. 19, 1721; Philip, April 11, 1723 (died Sept. 8, 1777); Elizabeth, April 24, 1725; Isaac, March 7, 1727; Sarah, April 7, 1730; Elisha, Dec. 15, 1732; Jonathan, Jan. 12, 1734; Peleg, Nov. 30, 1735; and Daniel, Sept. 1, 1738.

(V) Isaac Anthony, son of Abraham (2), born March 7, 1727, in Swansea, Mass., married, being then of Portsmouth, R. I., Feb. 15, 1753, Ruth Russell, daughter of Seth and Hannah Russell, of Dartmouth, Mass., and (second) Nov. 19, 1760, Hannah Slocum, daughter of Giles and Ann Slocum, of Portsmouth, R. I. The children born to the first marriage of Portsmouth town record were: Hannah, born Nov. 15, 1753; Isaac, Sept. 26, 1755; Seth, Feb. 15, 1759; and those born of the second marriage were: Giles, Oct. 20, 1761-62; Ruth, July 31, 1765; Seth (2), July 27, 1767; and Rebecca, March 30, 1771. Mr. Anthony probably had a third wife, Rebecca, and to that marriage were born: Alice, June 10, 1773; and Isaac (2), March 13, 1774.

(VI) Seth Anthony, born July 27, 1767, married Nov. 17, 1791, Abigail Clarke, born May 25, 1772, and their children of Portsmouth town record were: Hannah Slocum, born Aug. 30, 1792; Elizabeth, April 7, 1795; Samuel, March 25, 1797; Joseph, Sept. 2, 1799; and Seth Russell, Aug. 9, 1812.

(VII) Seth Russell Anthony, born Aug. 9, 1812, in Portsmouth, R. I., married March 21, 1835, Abby Freeborn, born Sept. 12, 1815, daughter of William Freeborn, a direct descendant of William Freeborn, who came from Ipswich, England, in 1634, in the ship "Francis," with his wife Mary, and their children, Mary and Sarah, and after stopping for a time at Boston became a settler of Portsmouth, R. I., where he was a signer of the compact of 1638. Seth R. Anthony was a farmer in Portsmouth all his life, and died on his farm there March 2, 1873, in his sixty-first year. He was a Republican, and served in the town council and as overseer of the poor. In religious faith he was a member of the Society of Friends. The children of Seth R. and Abby (Freeborn) Anthony were: Henry Clay, born June 10, 1852; and Sarah E., born May 1, 1854, now the wife of Charles H. Dyer of Portsmouth. For his second wife Seth R. Anthony married March 23, 1869, Harriet Slocum, of Smithfield, Providence county. There were no children by this marriage.

(VIII) HENRY CLAY ANTHONY, son of Seth R., was born June 10, 1852, in the town of Portsmouth, R. I., where had lived for so many generations his ancestors, the immediate farm upon which he was born having been the home of four generations of his forefathers. After having received a thorough English education he was prepared for business life theoretically at Scholfield's Commercial College, Providence. Mr. Anthony was reared amid agricultural pursuits, being bred to the vocation of a scientific and practical seed grower, an occupation he has since in the main followed, giving his most intelligent and best efforts to the accomplishment of the best results in this line of agriculture. He is now the largest seed grower in New England, and is also an extensive grower of vegetables, managing a number of large farms throughout his section. It goes without saying, to all who know him, that his efforts have not been in vain, but have been crowned with that success they deserve. He owns upward of eight hundred acres of land in Rhode Island, and rents as much more in different parts of Massachusetts. His reputation for the excellency of his products, both at home and in the markets of this country and Canada, has long been established, and his business has grown to large proportions. He makes his home on "Elm Farm," overlooking Narragansett bay, the Sakonnet river and the surrounding country.

In 1902 a company was formed and incorporated under the laws of Rhode Island, under the name of Henry C. Anthony & Sons, his wife also being one of the members of the firm, and his sons, William B., Ralph H. and Joseph G., being the other members of the corporation. Mr. Anthony is a very active man, giving his extensive business interests his personal attention, and works over sixteen hours a day. In his wife he has a willing help-mate, who takes a deep interest in his welfare and business.

Mr. Anthony is a man of ability, shrewd and capable both as a business man and in his public official relations. He has a high sense of honor, and his integrity and straightforwardness in business and public life have commended him to all who have had dealings with him. He is a good representative of the Anthony stock. He is an enterprising and progressive citizen, ever interested and alert in all good movements, for the advancement of his town and the welfare of its citizens. While, perhaps, not considered active in politics, except in recent years, he has nevertheless always exercised the full rights and duties in this direction of any good citizen, and has continually since 1899 represented his town efficiently and satisfactorily in the State Assembly, a member of the Lower House; he has served several years as chairman of the committee on Fisheries, and as a member of various other committees of importance. He was also for a number of years a member of the town council of Portsmouth. He is a stanch Republican.

Mr. Anthony, too, has been prominently identified with both Freemasonry and Odd Fellowship. He is a member of Eureka Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., of Portsmouth, of which he is a past master; Aquidneck Chapter, No. 9, Portsmouth; Washington Commandery, No. 4, K. T., Newport; and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine, Providence; and he is also past grand of Seaside Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., of Portsmouth. He and his family all belong to St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Portsmouth.

On Dec. 27, 1876, Mr. Anthony was married to Eldora Jane, daughter of Joseph and Jane Walker Barnett Wilcox, of Attleboro, Mass., and this union has been blessed with children as follows: (1) William Barnett, born Nov. 19, 1877, was educated at Portsmouth, and is now in business with his father. He is a stanch Republican. He married Eliza Coggeshall, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth Coggeshall, of Middletown, and has three children, Elizabeth Barnett, Seth Russell (2) and William Lloyd. (2) Ralph Henry, born Aug. 12, 1879, was educated in Portsmouth, and is now a member of the corporation. He married Angeline Congdon, of East Providence, in October, 1905, and lives in Portsmouth. They had one son, Irving Joseph, who died aged seven months. (3) Joseph Garfield, born May 13, 1881, married Emma Louise Sherman, daughter of Warren Sherman, of Portsmouth, and they had two children, Eveline Louise and Warren Wilcox. On July 22, 1906, Joseph G. Anthony with his wife and two children were crossing Narragansett bay from Portsmouth to Prudence Island in a small boat. From some cause the boat was overturned and all thrown into the water. Mr. Anthony succeeded in placing the oars under the baby's carriage so as to keep it afloat, and the baby carriage containing the baby was washed ashore, the baby being unharmed, while Mr. Anthony, his wife and little daughter were all drowned. (4) Jennie Louise, born Jan. 17, 1884, was educated in the public schools of Portsmouth, graduated from the Fall River high school, and in 1906 graduated from the State Normal School at Providence. She is now engaged in teaching. (5) Alice Wilcox, born March 24, 1886, graduated from the high school and the Shoemaker & Clark Business College, of Fall River, Mass. (6) Henry Clay, Jr., born Oct. 23, 1895, is a student at Mrs. Dennis' school in Portsmouth.

(VII) Samuel Anthony, son of Seth and Abigail (Clarke) Anthony, of Portsmouth, was born in that town March 25, 1797, and there grew to manhood and was engaged in farming all his life. His farm was situated where what is now known as the Coal Mines. He was tenderly cared for in his declining years by his son, George B., with whom he died Nov. 16, 1873, and was buried in St. Mary's Church cemetery, Portsmouth. He attended the Friends' Church, and was a good Christian man, quiet in manner and strong in principle. He married Mary Brownell, who died Aug. 18, 1885, and was buried beside her husband. Two children blessed this union: Eliza, who married Edward G. Gifford, and lived in Westport (both are now deceased); and George Brownell.

(VIII) George Brownell Anthony, son of Samuel, was born on the old homestead Nov. 16, 1822, and was educated in the district schools. Like all boys of his day he worked on the home farm from an early age, and being the only son he remained with his father until he had reached mature years. Determining to make farming his life occupation, he bought the Benjamin Hall farm, a tract of fifty acres on Freeborn street, where he became extensively engaged in general farming, stock raising and dairying. He was noted for his industry and progressive ideas, and was one of the good and useful citizens of his community, almost continually the holder of some office of trust and responsibility. Wherever found he performed his duties with a conscientious care and good executive ability that always redounded to his personal credit and the town's benefit. He was a stanch Republican in politics, and represented his town in both branches of the State Assembly, two years each. He died July 10, 1904, at the ripe age of eighty-two years, and was laid to rest in St. Mary's Episcopal cemetery. He was honored and respected by all, broad-minded and liberal in his ideas. He was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Portsmouth, which he served as vestryman and warden, and in all church matters took a keen and active interest. Fraternally he belonged to Eureka Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., of Portsmouth. He married, Oct. 11, 1847, in Portsmouth, Lucy A. Green, of Newport, daughter of Samuel and Harriet (Stanhope) Green, both of Newport, where they died. Their children were: Abby S., born Sept. 26, 1848, at home; Seth, born Jan. 26, 1858; and Harriet Green, born Feb. 23, 1863, at home. The mother died March 17, 1895, and was buried in St. Mary's Church cemetery.

(IX) SETH ANTHONY, only son of George B., was born on the homestead Jan. 26, 1858, and was educated in the district schools of Portsmouth and the Friends' school, Providence. He always remained at home with his parents, assisting his father in carrying on the farm. For several years after the latter's death he made farming and market gardening his chief work, and he has the full confidence and respect of all men. In 1904 he was appointed tax collector of the town of Portsmouth, and has given good satisfaction to the public as an official. In Eureka Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., he has been prominent, having filled the offices of marshal, senior steward, senior deacon, senior warden and master for two years. He is a member of Aquidneck Chapter, R. A. M., No. 9, Portsmouth; DeBlois Council, No. 5, and Washington Commandery, No. 4, K. T., of Newport. He and his sisters are communicants of St. Paul's Church. In politics Mr. Anthony is a Republican, and as such served as a member of the town council one term.

WILCOX. The Wilcox family, to which Mrs. Henry Clay Anthony belongs, is one of the oldest in this section of the State, and is descended from (I) Edward Wilcox, of Portsmouth and Kings-town, R. I., who was of the former town in 1638. He had children Stephen and Daniel.

(II) Daniel Wilcox was of Portsmouth, R. I., Dartmouth, Mass., and Tiverton. He married, Nov. 28, 1661, Elizabeth Cook. He had a grant of fifteen acres of land in Portsmouth in 1656; bought land in Dartmouth, Mass., in 1664; and was an inhabitant of Tiverton at the organization of the town, March 2, 1692. He died July 2, 1702. His widow died Dec. 6, 1715. Their children were: Daniel, Samuel, Mary, Sarah, Stephen, John, Edward, Thomas, Lydia and Susanna. Of these sons, Daniel settled in Portsmouth, R. I.; Samuel settled in Dartmouth, Mass.; Stephen lived in Little Compton and Dartmouth, Mass.; John lived in Little Compton; and Edward and Thomas in Tiverton.

(III) Daniel Wilcox (2), son of Daniel, married Hannah Cook, and lived in Portsmouth. His wife survived him and remarried. His children were: Daniel; Mary, born Feb. 25, 1682; Hannah, born April 11, 1684; Joseph, born Oct. 28, 1687; and Eliphal.

(IV) Joseph Wilcox, son of Daniel (2), born Oct. 28, 1687, married Sarah, and their children of Portsmouth town record were: Susanna, born Nov. 18, 1714; Joseph, Dec. 14, 1718; Hannah, April 3, 1721; Ruth, July 13, 1723; John, Sept. 7, 1725; Josias, Aug. 31, 1727; Mary, May 13, 1730; Daniel, April 11, 1732; and Job, April 7, 1734. (Joseph Wilcox may have married, second, April 19, 1747, Amie Coggeshall, of Middletown, R. I., and had Sarah, born March 3, 1747-48.)

(V) John Wilcox, son of Joseph and Sarah, born Sept. 7, 1725, married Nov. 30, 1746, Mary Cook, and their children of Portsmouth town record were: John, born March 7, 1748-49; Cook, born April 28, 1752; and Daniel, born July 21, 1759.

(VI) Daniel Wilcox (3), son of John and Mary, born July 21, 1759, married Jan. 6, 1785, Elizabeth, daughter of William Burington, and their children of Portsmouth town record were: Robert, born Dec. 15, 1789; George, May 11, 1792; Daniel, Oct. 11, 1794; and Elizabeth, April 16, 1797.

(VII) Robert Wilcox, son of Daniel and Elizabeth, born Dec. 15, 1789, married Maria Hedley, of Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

(VIII) Joseph Wilcox, son of Robert and Maria, born in Portsmouth, married Jane Walker Barnett, and their daughter (IX) Eldora Jane Wilcox married Henry Clay Anthony, of Portsmouth. Joseph Wilcox was a machinist by trade, and resided at Attleboro Falls, Mass., where he died. His widow now resides at Fall River.

BARROWS (Providence family). For generations the name Barrows has been a common one in a large region of country embracing those portions of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island adjacent to each other, and in Providence a few of the name, representatives of the original Salem-Plymouth stock, are still active in the city's social and business life. Among these is President Edwin Barrows, a veteran of the Civil war and for twenty-five and more years chief executive officer of the Fireman's Mutual Insurance Company and of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

One John Barrows in 1637, at the age of twenty-eight years, with wife Anne, came from Yarmouth, England, to Salem, Mass., and received two grants of land there in that year. In 1665 his name appears in the Plymouth records, in which town he resided from that time, and perhaps earlier, till the time of his death, in 1692. His will shows that he left a second wife, much younger than himself, and four sons, Robert, John, Ebenezer and Benajah. He had also daughters, Mary and Deborah. Here follows some general history and genealogy of the Barrows family.

Robert Barrows, son of John, the settler, remained in Plymouth. More of him presently. The other sons of the settler early removed from Plymouth, Joshua and John to Attleboro, Mass., and Ebenezer to Cumberland, R. I. Their descendants are numerous, like the posterity of the elder brother Robert, and are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific. John Barrows, the eldest son of Benajah, born in 1708, was the father of John, the graduate of Harvard College, in 1766, who for fifty years was a teacher in Dighton, Mass. He had a son Thomas, a physician, and another son John, a teacher. Prof. John Manning Barrows, of Olivet (Mich.) College (1881), was a son of the teacher and had two sons then in the ministry, Rev. John H. Barrows, pastor of the Maverick Church in Boston, and Rev. Walter M. Barrows, missionary in Salt Lake, Utah. There are many other ministers of the Gospel, teachers and physicians in the different branches of the family.

Robert Barrows, son of the settler, married (first) Nov. 28, 1666, Ruth, daughter of George Bonum. They remained in Plymouth, and to them were born: John, born in 1667, who died in Plympton in 1720; Samuel, born in 1672, who died in Middleboro in 1755; and Mehetable. He married (second) Lydia Denham and to them came: Robert, born in 1689, married Bethia Ford; Thankful, born in 1692, married Isaac King; Elisha, born in 1695, died in Rochester, Mass., in 1767; Thomas, born in 1697, died in Mansfield, Conn., in 1779; Lydia, born in 1699, married Thomas Branch; and Capt. George.

Robert Barrows (2), son of Robert, born Nov. 8, 1689, married in Plymouth, Mass., Bethia Ford, and they settled in Mansfield, Conn., where she died in 1773, aged eighty-two years, and he in 1779, aged eighty-nine. Through this couple descended Rev. E. P. Barrows, a professor in Oberlin Seminary (1881).

Capt. George Barrows, son of Robert of Plymouth.

Samuel Barrows, son of Capt. George, removed to Middleboro, Mass., where he was called Samuel, Jr., to distinguish him from his uncle, Deacon Samuel Barrows. He married Nov. 21, 1723, Susanna Tobey, of Sandwich. He later settled in Killingly, Connecticut.

Noah Barrows, son of Samuel, born Aug. 20, 1727, was the grandfather of Rev. William Barrows, D. D., who at one time was secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society.

Carlos Barrows, son of Rev. William, married (first) Mary Read and (second) Nancy Read.

Albert Read Barrows, son of Carlos and Mary, of Norton, but formerly of Attleboro, Mass., married Harriet Ide. Their children were: Henry M. (a resident of Boston), Edwin, Harriet Newell, Emma (widow of Joseph E. Wilbur, of Taunton, Mass.), and Julia R. (who married Alfred V. Regison, of Norton, Massachusetts).

EDWIN BARROWS, son of Albert R. and Harriet (Ide) Barrows, was born in Norton, Mass., Jan. 24, 1834. In his early boyhood he attended the common schools of his town, then prepared for college at Pierce Academy, in Middleboro, Mass. He entered Yale College and was graduated therefrom in the class of 1857, following which for several years he taught a private school in the town of Norton, Mass. Soon came the Civil war, and like thousands of the young men of that stirring period young Barrows was not content to remain at home. He espoused the cause of the Union and went to its defense, becoming a private soldier in the 4th Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, a nine months' organization which responded to President Lincoln's call. The 4th went into Camp Joe Hooker at Middleboro, Mass., and there Mr. Barrows was made quartermaster-sergeant of the regiment. This command in time became a part of the Army of the South, serving under General Banks in Louisiana. Mr. Barrows shared the fortunes of the regiment through its approximately one year's service and returned to his home with an honorable war record.

Having located permanently in Providence, R. I., after the war Mr. Barrows at once became actively identified with that community. Settling there in 1865, he was for a number of years employed as an accountant and bookkeeper in the wholesale dry-goods house of Taylor, Symonds & Co. In 1868 he was made secretary and treasurer of the Fireman's Mutual Insurance Company and also of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company. A man of liberal education and talent, and possessed of the requisite energy, his services, as the years passed and as he gained in experience and knowledge of the business, were rewarded by his advancement in 1880 to the position of president of both companies, still continuing as treasurer of each. These relations he has since sustained to the two companies, and through his wise direction of their affairs the business has steadily increased until now over $125,000,000 worth of property is protected by the policies of the two companies.

President Barrows, other than complying with the duties of citizenship in political matters, has not been active in party affairs. He is, however, a staunch Republican. He was a director of the First National Bank at Providence, and during his ten years' connection with that institution also served as vice-president and president. For some time he was president and director of the Household Sewing Machine Company, of Providence. He is treasurer of the Rhode Island Bible Society and a member of the Congregational Club and the Rhode Island Historical Society.

On Aug. 20, 1868, Mr. Barrows was married to Harriet E., daughter of Dr. George B. and Abigail (Tomlinson) Armington, of Pittsford, Vt., and the union was blessed with children as follows: Edwin Armington, who is treasurer of the Narragansett Lighting Company; Mary Tomlinson; Ann Ide, who married Dr. Walter Clarke Seeley, of Worcester, Mass., son of President Seeley, of Smith College; and Dr. Albert Armington, of Providence.

Mrs. Harriet E. (Armington) Barrows is a descendant in the fifth generation from Joseph Armington, who came to America in the early years of the eighteenth century, her lineage being through William, William (2) and Dr. George Brown Armington. These generations in detail follow.

(I) Joseph Armington, a native of the Island of Guernsey in the English channel, came to America about 1728. He was married May 27, 1729, to Hannah Chaffee, and they settled in Rhode Island.

(II) William Armington, son of Joseph and Hannah, born Nov. 19, 1746, married Lucy Brown, and to them came thirteen children. Mr. Armington died June 7, 1832.

(III) William Armington (2), son of William and Lucy, born Oct. 22, 1774, in Seekonk, Mass. (that part which became East Providence, R. I.), married Elizabeth Hoar. Until of age Mr. Armington lived at home with his parents, then for some years he led a seafaring life. He located in Vermont in 1801, settling in the town of Chester. These children blessed his first marriage: George Brown, S. L., B. F., and Betsey. The mother of these died Dec. 15, 1819, and in 1820 the father married (second) Betsey Muncy; a son, William P., was born to them. The father died Aug. 23, 1864.

(IV) George Brown Armington, M. D., son of William (2), born Oct. 14, 1801, in Chester, Vt., married Oct. 14, 1828, Abigail Tomlinson, born April 26, 1809, in Oxford, Conn. Their children were: Jane E., who married Charles D. Brown; Mary F., who married Hon. Royal C. Taft, of Providence, R. I.; Ellen G., who married Henry M. Messer; Emma C., who married Henry W. Rice; Harriet E., who married Edwin Barrows; and Abby L.

Dr. Armington studied medicine under the direction of Dr. Abraham Lovell, of Chester, Vt. After his marriage he located in the practice of his profession in the town of Wilmington, continuing his professional duties there until 1831, in which year he removed to Pittsford, Vt., locating near Furnace village; later he moved to Pittsford village, where his labors were continued until his death, which occurred May 4, 1863. Dr. Armington was a man of liberal education and had the reputation of being a skilful physician.

CHARLES COLBY DARLING is connected with the business life of Providence as proprietor of the jewelry manufacturing establishment of C. C. Darling & Co., of which he has been sole owner since 1891, and is also prominent in the city in other relations. He is a man of high business and personal standing, gained in a career of uniformly honorable record. Mr. Darling is a native of

Charles Colby Darling

Providence, born Dec. 25, 1853, and he is a descendant in the eighth generation from an old Colonial family whose emigrant, Dennis Darling, settled in Massachusetts.

(I) Dennis Darling and his brother John Darling located at Braintree, Mass., as early as 1660. John Darling married in 1664, Elizabeth Dowman, and Dennis Darling married, in 1662, Hannah Francis.

(II) Capt. John Darling, son of Dennis, was born at Braintree, Mass., Sept. 2, 1664, and was three times married, first to Elizabeth Thompson, who died in 1687. He married (second), in 1690, Anne ———, and his last wife was Elizabeth Morse. Captain Darling settled in Bellingham, Mass., and was quite prominent in the affairs of that town, where he died in 1753-54, at the age of eighty-nine years. He was the father of ten children, two of whom were sons.

(III) Capt. Samuel Darling, eldest son of Capt. John, was born March 19, 1693-94, and married Dec. 15, 1716, Mary Thompson, of Mendon, Mass. They became the parents of nine children: Samuel, Michael, Elizabeth, Ruth, Abigail, John, Rachel, Penelope and Joshua. Mr. Darling died Feb. 17, 1774.

(IV) John Darling, son of Capt. Samuel, was born in Bellingham, Massachusetts.

(V) John Darling, Jr., presumably son of John and grandson of Capt. Samuel, was also a native of Bellingham. His wife, whose Christian name was Martha, bore him eight children, five of whom were sons.

(VI) John Darling, son of John, was born Aug. 2, 1770, and married Mary Weeden, of East Greenwich, R. I. They had a family of eight children, namely: Lauretta, who married Lorenzo Miller; John Weeden; George Washington; Mary, who married a Mr. Harris, of Cumberland; William; Hannah, who married (first) a Mr. Davis, and (second) a Mr. Hunt; Levi B.; and Susan, who married John Austin.

(VII) Levi B. Darling, late a well-known resident of Providence, was born in the northern part of Cumberland, R. I., Jan. 8, 1827, and died Dec. 31, 1906; he was buried in Swan Point Cemetery. He was three times married, his second wife being Martha E. Colby, daughter of Dr. John Calvin Colby, who was a well known physician of Franconia, N. H. Their son, Charles Colby, was as stated, born in Providence, Dec. 25, 1853.

(VIII) Charles Colby Darling, son of Levi B. and Martha E. (Colby) Darling, was educated in his native city, principally in private schools, and for a period of five or six years attended Mowry & Goff's English and Classical School, taking substantially the whole course at that famous institution. His first work after leaving school was in the shoe store of Charles Snow, where he clerked for four years. From there he went to the wholesale dry goods house of Dudley, Parkhurst & Co., where he remained for two and a half years, until ill-health necessitated his giving up all work. Upon his recovery he became a bookkeeper for the firm of S. C. Fish & Co., jewelry manufacturers, and he has continued in this line ever since. He was with S. C. Fish & Co. for three years, when he received an offer from H. W. Potter to become traveling salesman. After five years on the road he accepted a similar position with the firm of L. W. Pierce & Co., and continued to travel until 1891. At this time Mr. Pierce's health failed, and Mr. Darling took the business, changing the firm name to C. C. Darling & Co., although he alone owns the business. He manufactures emblems of all kinds, and in this work he gives employment to fifty or sixty skilled workmen. Mr. Darling has been a pronounced success, as clerk, salesman and proprietor, and the volume of his present business has doubled since he became sole owner of the concern. He is a typical American business man, progressive and public spirited—one whose honesty, good judgment and well-directed energy have won him success.

In politics Mr. Darling has always been a Republican, but he has taken no part in public life. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of Mt. Vernon Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Providence Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M.; and Calvary Commandery, No. 13, of which he has been commander.

In June, 1890, Mr. Darling married Annie Maria Pierce, daughter of Lewis W. Pierce, and their only son, Charles Lewis, died in infancy. Their home, one of the finest in Providence, located at a commanding point on the East Side, is remarkable for its beauty and tasteful appointments.

JOHN GORTON, who since 1885 has been a trusted and valued employe of the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company, is directly descended from Gov. Samuel Gorton, who was of much fame in the settlement days of Rhode Island, and of whom extended mention will be found elsewhere.

John Gorton, grandfather of our subject, was born Sept. 18, 1772, and was a progressive farmer in Warwick, R. I. On July 11, 1796, he married Hannah Stone, and their children were: Lowry T., born Jan. 30, 1799, died Dec. 17, 1840; Julia Ann, born July 27, 1802, married Jeremiah Webb, and their son, Thomas, resides at Phillipsdale, R. I.; William, born May 18, 1804; Louisa, born Feb. 9, 1806, married William Gardner, and left two sons, Lowry (of North Providence) and William (of East Providence); Lucelia, born July 4, 1808, married Edwin Hart, and had sons, Manly, Rensselaer and William G.; John M., born Feb. 23, 1811; Adaline C., born May 25, 1813, married William Hathaway, and left a son, Rensselaer, of Anthony, R. I.; Edward, born Jan. 21, 1817.

John M. Gorton, son of John, was born Feb.

23, 1811, in the town of Warwick. His father died when the son was but a child, and the latter was reared by the daughters of "Master" John Gorton, Mary and Sarah. He became a successful farmer and passed his entire life in the town of his nativity. He was ever grateful to the good ladies who reared him, and their reputation for good deeds in the community was well founded, while posterity still is being told tales of their charity. On May 4, 1834, by the Elder J. L. Phillips, Mr. Gorton was married to Hannah C. Gardiner, born Nov. 2, 1813, daughter of Jeffrey and Eliza T. Gardiner, of Warwick and Crompton, R. I. Their children were: Phebe, born Sept. 21, 1835, married James N. Carder, and died Jan. 2, 1864, leaving the following children: Phebe Ellen (wife of Joseph Hoxie, of Phenix), Mary M. (wife of Alonzo Baker, of Natick) and John (who resides at Meredith, N. H.); Patience W., born Nov. 5, 1837, married William A. Bates, of Natick, R. I., and died Oct. 26, 1898; John, born June 11, 1840; Hannah E., born Aug. 8, 1844, is the widow of Havilla Taylor, and lives at North Adams, Mass., with her son, Havilla B. Taylor. John M. Gorton and his wife both lived lives of Christian usefulness, and both were long members of the Baptist Church, he joining June 3, 1832, and she March 9, 1834. Her death occurred Aug. 14, 1853, and he passed away Jan. 14, 1846, and both were buried in the Gorton burial ground on Buttonwoods Road. Mr. Gorton was a man of untiring energy, and it is said that overwork caused his death.

John Gorton, son of John, was born in Warwick June 11, 1840. He was but six years old when his father died, and even at that tender age he assumed his share of the responsibility in caring for the family. He eagerly accepted such educational advantages as were afforded him, but even his youthful years were crowded with hard labor. The age of fifteen found him in Providence, where in a term of four years he learned the blacksmith's trade. At the conclusion of his apprenticeship he opened an establishment of his own on Cranston street, at the corner of Gilmore, where he remained for many years. He next became connected with the machine shops of Volney W. Mason & Co., continuing until 1885, when he became connected with the Brown & Sharpe Co., and he has since been one of their faithful and most-to-be-relied upon employes. He is, and aspires to be, nothing more than the perfect type of American workingman, a private in the greatest of industrial armies. He is temperate in all things, frugal and saving, and he has lived a life of usefulness, and he belongs to that high class of citizens who neither ask for nor receive that to which they are not justly entitled and which they have not honestly earned.

On Jan. 14, 1862, Mr. Gorton married (first) Emily A. Colburn, who died April 5, 1879. This union was blessed with one son, John C., born June 12, 1865, who was given a liberal education in the schools of Providence, and who afterward became a mechanical engineer, now being at the head of the mechanical department of the American Locomotive Works at Schenectady, N. Y.; he married, Aug. 4, 1885, Abbie J. Makie, and they have one child, Edna W., born June 2, 1891. Mr. Gorton is a Republican.

Mr. Gorton married (second) Nov. 21, 1881, Sarah E. Colburn, sister to his first wife, and daughter of Henry and Rhoda (Porter) Colburn, of Nova Scotia. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gorton are members of the Union Congregational Church, and he belongs to What Cheer Lodge of the Masonic order.

COTTRELL. The name of Cottrell has been a very familiar one in the business and social circles of Newport for many years, where members of the family bearing the name have resided since the early part of the nineteenth century. This article is to treat of the late Michael Cottrell, who for many years was one of the successful and enterprising business men of that city, together with his sons, who are now conducting the business established by their father.

James Cottrell, the progenitor of the family in America of which this article treats, was born in Ireland in 1792, the son of well-to-do parents, and a descendant of one of England's substantial and influential families. He was given an excellent educational training, being a college graduate. He was a linguist, speaking several different languages, conversing fluently in English, Latin and Greek. As a young man he entered upon a mercantile career in his native country, which, however, was not to his liking, and in 1823 he came to America, landing at Boston, Mass., with his valet. Soon after coming to this country he settled in Newport, and there accepted a position at Fort Adams, working on the construction of the fortifications. A few months after settling in Newport he was joined by his wife and family. He was one of the prominent and active members of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, and for a number of years served as clerk of the church. He also taught the parishioners the use of the Gaelic language. He was fond of instructing those less fortunate than he, and he was the first in Newport to teach night school. Although somewhat arrogant in his make-up, he was courteous and kindly, and as a result had hosts of friends. Mr. Cottrell died in Newport, June 9, 1860, at the age of sixty-eight years, and his funeral was one of the largest of his day. James Cottrell married (first) Honora Mountain, of Kilmartin, Ireland, whose father and grandfather were large land owners of their native land. To this union were born children as follows: John, who was a mason contractor, and died in Newport; Catherine, who died unmarried; and Michael, who is mentioned below. After the death of his first wife James Cottrell married (second) Elizabeth Sullivan, a widow, by whom he had two children: James B., who is engaged in the monumental business in Newport, and Elizabeth M., who resides in Cambridge, Mass., unmarried.

MICHAEL COTTRELL, youngest son of the late James and Honora (Mountain) Cottrell, was born Aug. 15, 1822, in Middleton, County Cork, Ireland, and when but six months of age was brought to America by his mother, settling in Newport, R. I., where they joined the husband and father. Michael Cottrell acquired a common school education in the public schools of Newport, which he left when yet a small boy. Shortly after leaving school he became apprenticed to the cabinet-maker's trade, at which he remained for a number of years. In 1849 he got the gold fever, as did many others, during the excitement incidental to the discovery of gold in California, and he became interested in the purchase of the ship "Audley Clarke," which sailed from Newport for California around Cape Horn in the early part of 1849. Not satisfied with the conditions that surrounded him in that far Western region, he soon returned to Newport, and in 1850, in partnership with the late Stafford Bryer, under the firm name of Cottrell & Bryer, engaged in the furniture and undertaking business, locating at the corner of Church and Division streets. This partnership continued successfully until 1869, when it was dissolved, and in February, 1870, Mr. Cottrell embarked in the same business on his own account on Thames street, in the Free Library building. He remained in that location until 1872, when he purchased the large brick building at Nos. 320 to 330 Thames street, to which he at once removed his business, and which building has since been known as the Cottrell block. Here Mr. Cottrell continued in business until his death, which occurred in Newport, Aug. 20, 1893, at the age of seventy-one years, five days. During his business career Mr. Cottrell met with marked success, due to his energy and untiring industry, coupled with natural business ability and foresight. He was a genial, courteous gentleman, possessing an unassuming manner, all of which made him many stanch friends.

In his political views Mr. Cottrell was a stalwart adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and although he did not care for public preferment, he did, however, for several years, serve as a commissioner of the Newport City Asylum. He was an attendant of the United Congregational Church, to which he gave his liberal support, and held membership in the Congregational Society, his wife being an active member and worker of the same church. Fraternally Mr. Cottrell was a member of the Masonic organization, holding membership in St. John's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. and A.

M., and upon the organization of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, became a charter member of the latter body. He was also a member of Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. and S. M.; and of Washington Commandery, No. 4, K. T. He was also connected with Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum of Newport, of which he was one of the founders. Mr. Cottrell was for a number of years, and up to the time of his death, a member of the board of directors of the Union National Bank, and was a member of the Redwood Library Corporation of Newport.

Michael Cottrell married Catherine E. Wallace, born in Augusta, Maine, the daughter of Patrick Wallace and Margaret Cahill, granddaughter of Richard Wallace and Ellen Gorman, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Wallace and Lady Catherine Butler, the latter the sister of the Duke of Ormond. Mrs. Cottrell died in Newport, Feb. 8, 1894, aged sixty-eight years, ten months, thirteen days. To Mr. and Mrs. Cottrell were born children as follows: (1) James died in infancy. (2) Harriet married (first) George Simes, of Plymouth, Mass., and (second) Thomas Shepard Nowell, of Boston, Mass. To the first marriage was born one daughter, Ethel Katherine Simes-Nowell, she having been legally adopted by Mr. Nowell. (3) Charles Middleton is mentioned below. (4) Robert Clarke is mentioned below. (5) Samuel Parker is a graduate of Jefferson Medical College and now a practising physician of Newport; he formerly practised his chosen profession in St. Paul, Minn., and Boston, Mass. During the Spanish-American war he served as a volunteer surgeon in the United States army, and saw much active service in Cuba and the Philippine Islands, and was also executive surgeon at Simpson Hospital, Fortress Monroe. He is unmarried. (6) William Wallace died Feb. 18, 1889, in the twenty-seventh year of his age.

CHARLES MIDDLETON COTTRELL, the eldest living son of the late Michael and Catherine E. (Wallace) Cottrell, was born in Newport Sept. 15, 1851, and received his early education in the common schools of his native city, which was supplemented by a course in the private school of the late Henry H. Fay. Leaving the latter institution of learning when fifteen years of age, he went to Boston, Mass., where for four or five years he was in the employ of Jordan, Marsh & Co., dry-goods merchants, after which for a short period he was employed in the wholesale dry-goods house of Brett, Green & Co., of Boston, later again returning to the employ of Jordan, Marsh & Co., with whom he remained for several years. He was then for a time employed with the dry-goods house of Chandler & Co., resigning his position with this latter firm to engage in the tea, coffee and spice business, becoming a member of the firm of Jacob Fullarton & Co., of Boston. Mr. Cottrell remained a member of this latter firm until 1874, when he returned to Newport, and during the following year was employed by his father in the latter's furniture store. The next year he was employed in the wholesale department of A. T. Stewart & Co.'s store in New York City. Mr. Cottrell then returned to Newport and again entered his father's employ, remaining with him until the latter's death, in 1893. Upon the death of their father, Mr. Cottrell and his brother, Robert C., were appointed trustees of the estate, and they have since continued to conduct the business, Charles M. devoting his time to the furniture and wall-paper departments, while Robert C. gives his attention to the undertaking and embalming. Charles M. Cottrell is treasurer of the City Steam Laundry Company, of Newport, of which he was one of the founders and incorporators.

Mr. Cottrell is a member of Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, and was, during its existence, a member of the Business Men's Association of Newport. He is also connected with the Gen. G. K. Warren Post Associates, of Newport. In religious matters he is connected with the Trinity Episcopal Church. In political faith he adheres to the principles of the Republican party.

On May 2, 1894, Mr. Cottrell was united in marriage to Miss Marie Fladwad, daughter of Thron. Fladwad, of Christiania, Norway, and three children have been born to this union, namely: Margaret, Eleanor Olene and Marie Teresa Cottrell.

ROBERT CLARKE COTTRELL, son of the late Michael and Catherine E. (Wallace) Cottrell, was born Sept. 24, 1853, in Newport, R. I., and received his early educational training in the schools of his native city, which he attended until he was sixteen years of age. After leaving school he entered his father's store as a clerk, and remained in his father's employ until the latter's death, which occurred in 1893, since which time, with his brother, Charles M., under the firm style of C. M. & R. C. Cottrell, he has continued to conduct the business in which his father had been so successful. That he might successfully carry on the undertaking and embalming department of the business, Mr. Cottrell took a course in the Cincinnati (Ohio) School of Embalming, from which institution he was graduated in 1880. In political opinion Mr. Cottrell has always been a stalwart adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and has faithfully served his native city as a member of the school board for six years. He also served for a period of three years as a member of the board of aldermen. In 1905 he was the unanimous choice of his party as the candidate for the mayoralty of the city, and was elected chief executive over Patrick J. Boyle, the Democratic candidate, by a substantial majority. He served his city in that capacity in 1906 with efficiency and ability. As mayor of the city he was also trustee (ex-officio) of the Newport Hospital. Mr. Cottrell is a consistent member of Trinity Episcopal Church of Newport, and is senior vestryman of the church, having been a member of the board of vestrymen for a number of years.

On Feb. 14, 1881, Mr. Cottrell was united in marriage with Miss Annie Johnson Southwick, the adopted daughter of the late Samuel S. Southwick, of Newport. To Mr. and Mrs. Cottrell were born the following named children: Edwin Angell, born Dec. 14, 1881; Harriet Nowell, born March 24, 1884; Sarah Southwick, born Dec. 4, 1885; Catherine Wallace, born May 29, 1889; Samuel Middleton, born Aug. 2, 1893; and Annie Louise, born Dec. 20, 1895. The mother of these children passed away in Newport, Jan. 20, 1904.

GREENE (Warwick Branch). There were among the early settlers of Rhode Island three families who bore precisely the same name—John Greene—but were, so far as is known, unrelated by birth to each other. One of these had its origin in Newport, one at Warwick, and the other at Quiddnesset Neck in North Kingstown. It is the purpose here to treat briefly only the family of the late Hon. Simon Henry Greene, himself long a distinguished citizen and manufacturer of the town of Warwick, and of the family lineage. Several of the sons of Mr. Greene, too, along with their father and since have worthily sustained the honored inheritance of a distinguished lineage and earned a reputation worthy of their sires. Reference is made to Edward Aborn Greene, long an honored and distinguished citizen of Providence; to the late President Henry L. Greene, of the Clyde Bleachery & Print Works of that village, one of the foremost manufacturers and prominent business men of the State; and to Christopher R. and William R. Greene, who maintained a residence and active connection with the manufacturing plant of S. H. Greene & Sons at Clyde.

These sons of the late Simon Henry Greene are descendants in the eighth generation from Surgeon John Greene, of Salem, Mass., and Providence and Warwick, R. I., whose posterity have earned by their valuable services in peace and war an enviable pre-eminence in the State. Their lineage is through John (2), Job, Hon. Philip, Col. Christopher, Col. Job (2), and Hon. Simon Henry Greene. These generations in the order given follow in detail.

(1) John Greene, a surgeon of Salisbury, county of Wilts, England, born in 1597, a son of Richard and also a grandson of Richard Greene, both of whom were residents of Bowridge Hill, Gillingham.

Henry L. Greene

Dorsetshire, where it is probable John was born, was married (first) at Salisbury Nov. 4, 1619, to Joan Tattersall, who was the mother of his children. In 1635 he sailed from Southampton, England, in the ship "James," and in June of that year arrived in Boston. He was later at Salem, and at Providence in 1636. He was one of twelve to whom Roger Williams deeded land in 1638, and in the following year was one of the twelve original members of the First Baptist Church. He and ten others purchased in 1643 the tract of land called Shawomet (Warwick). His death occurred in 1658.

(II) John Greene (2), of Warwick, born in 1620, married Ann Almy, born in 1627, daughter of William and Audry Almy, and they died respectively Nov. 27, 1708, and May 17, 1709. Major Greene was one of the prominent public men of his day. He was commissioner, 1652-63; general recorder, 1652-54; general solicitor, 1655; attorney-general, 1657-60; assistant, almost without interruption from 1660 to 1690; deputy, 1664-75, 1677-80; and deputy-governor, 1690-1700.

(III) Job Greene, of Warwick, born Aug. 24, 1656, married Jan. 22, 1685, Phebe Sayles, a daughter of John and Mary (Williams) Sayles and granddaughter of Roger Williams. Mr. Greene died July 6, 1745, and his wife passed away in 1744.

(IV) Hon. Philip Greene, of Warwick, born March 15, 1705, married Aug. 12, 1731, Elizabeth Wicks, born Feb. 5, 1707, and they died, respectively, April 10, 1791, and Dec. 23, 17— . Judge Greene was one of the well known and highly honored citizens of Warwick. He was judge of the court of Common Pleas of Kent county from 1759 to 1784.

(V) Col. Christopher Greene, of Warwick, born May 12, 1737, in Warwick, R. I., married Jan. 6, 1757, Anne Lippitt, and to them came children as follows: Welthian, born Nov. 19, 1757; Job, Nov. 19, 1759; Phebe, Jan. 16, 1762 (died Sept. 22, 1786); Ann F., June 2, 1764; Elizabeth, Dec. 15, 1766; Jeremiah, Oct. 17, 1769; Daniel W., March 22, 1772 (died April 6, 1773); Christopher, Aug. 27, 1774; and Mary, Sept. 20, 1777.

Young Greene had good educational advantages, and early evinced a fondness for mathematics. He was a member of the Rhode Island Legislature, 1772-74. He was chosen in 1774 a lieutenant of the military company known as the "Kentish Guards," all of whose men who entered the army in the Revolution became officers. In May, 1775, he was appointed by the Legislature a major in the "army of observation," was given command of a company, marched to Cambridge, and was subsequently placed by Washington in command of the 1st Battalion under Benedict Arnold, whom he accompanied on his expedition to Quebec. In the battle at that city which followed he led a detachment of troops and was himself taken prisoner. His long captivity of eight months was so irksome to him that he is said to have formed the resolution that if he obtained his freedom he would never again be taken alive. He was made major in the regiment commanded by Gen. J. M. Varnum in 1776, and in October following was appointed to the command of the regiment. Colonel Greene was then placed in charge of Fort Mercer, on the Delaware. This fort was assaulted in October, 1777, by the Hessians, and for the great gallantry which he displayed in contending with the enemy under Count Donop, who was repulsed with heavy loss, he was complimented by the commander-in-chief. Colonel Greene was detached in 1778 for special service in Rhode Island and was under the command of Gen. John Sullivan in the battle of Rhode Island. For his gallant exploits at Fort Mercer Congress in 1777 passed a resolution "that an elegant sword be provided by the Board of War and presented to Colonel Greene." This sword was not presented until 1786, by the then secretary of war, General Knox, to the son of Colonel Greene. Early in 1781, while in command on the Croton river, Colonel Greene's headquarters were surrounded by a party of Loyalists, by whom the Colonel was killed. A monument was erected to his memory near Red Bank, N. J., in 1829, by Pennsylvania and New Jersey volunteers.

Colonel Greene is represented as a man "stout and strong in person, about five feet, ten inches high, with a broad, sound chest; his aspect manly and demeanor pleasing, enjoying always a high state of health, its bloom irradiating a countenance which significantly expressed the fortitude and mildness invariably displayed throughout his life."

(VI) Col. Job Greene, of Warwick, born Nov. 19, 1759, married Nov. 29, 1785, Abigail Rhodes, of Stonington, Conn., and to them came children as follows: Christopher R., born Sept. 19, 1786; Susanna, May 5, 1788; Mary A., May 25, 1794; and Simon Henry, March 31, 1799. With Col. Job Greene, who was one among the first engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods by water-power, began the industry with which the name has since continued to be identified so prominently. Col. Job Greene was connected with a company for manufacturing cotton in 1794 and transferred to the company land and water-power by a deed bearing date Oct. 3, 1794. This was at Centreville, R. I., on the southwest branch of the Pawtuxet. Colonel Greene died Aug. 23, 1808. His widow, Abigail Greene, died April 18, 1845. Colonel Greene, as the eldest son, was by descent in the right through his father, who was killed in the Revolution prior to the formation, entitled to membership in the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati. This right followed to the next generation, falling to Simon Henry Greene, who became a member of the society, was chosen its vice-president, and so continued until his death.

(VII) SIMON HENRY GREENE, born March 31, 1799, at Centreville, R. I., married March

3, 1822, Caroline Cornelia, eldest daughter of Edward Aborn, of Providence.

In the death of Mr. Greene, which occurred at his home at Clyde, in the town of Warwick, R. I., April 26, 1885, there passed away the last of the pioneers of the manufacturing industry of the North valley of the Pawtuxet river, among whom were such stalwarts as Col. Ephraim Talbot, ex-Govs. Charles Jackson and Elisha Harris, James De Wolf, Dr. Caleb Fiske, Benjamin C. Harris, Charles, Col. Christopher and William Lippitt, Benjamin Aborn, George Jackson, and Amasa and William H. Mason.

Mr. Greene was educated in the schools of Centerville, at an excellent private school in Stonington, and later was under the tuition of David Aldrich, at Woonsocket, R. I. In 1813-14 he was in the employ of his brother-in-law, Abner M. Warriner, then a manufacturer of cotton checks in Hartford, Conn., and on the death of his employer returned home. In 1815 he took up a permanent residence in Providence, remaining there until 1838, when he removed to Clyde, in Kent county. His first business training was gained in the house of Aborn & Jackson, who were merchants as well as manufacturers, and with whom he was eventually associated as agents of the Lippitt Manufacturing Company, under the firm name of Aborn, Jackson & Greene. In 1828 he formed a co-partnership with Edward Pike, under the style of Greene & Pike, for the purpose of bleaching and finishing cotton goods, afterward adding printing machinery, which business he enlarged after the death of Mr. Pike in 1842, having acquired by purchase from the latter's heirs the sole ownership of the property now known as the Clyde Works.

From 1835 to July, 1838, the time of his removal to Warwick, Mr. Greene was a member of the Providence city council. While a member of that body he was one of the city audit, and was prominent in remodeling the public school system and in creating the office of superintendent, a system and office which were afterward adopted, first by Boston and then throughout the country. He was elected, by the voters of his native town and final residence, a representative in the General Assembly in 1840 and 1842. On the death of his partner, Edward Pike, he declined a re-election, but subsequently represented the town four years in succession, from 1851 to 1854, when he again declined re-election. In 1857, however, his fellow-citizens chose him to represent them as a senator in the General Assembly and successively until 1859 he filled that honorable office. In 1860 he was elected a delegate to the Chicago Republican convention, and voted first for Salmon P. Chase, and then for Abraham Lincoln, as the nominee for President of the United States. He was also chosen for a Presidential elector in 1864, and with his colleagues voted for the re-election of Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Greene also served as a member, and as secretary for a part of the time, on the school committee of Warwick for fifteen years. He was deeply interested in the cause of popular education, as evinced by his long service in its behalf.

In addition to those already mentioned there were many other public offices bestowed upon Mr. Greene by his fellow-townsmen, such as director in financial institutions, member of the town's committee on finance, the latter especially during the trying times of the Civil war, moderator of town meetings, chairman of conventions acting in the transaction of public and political affairs; and in all these his name was ever known as the synonym of honor, uprightness and fidelity. It was through his sagacity, strict sense of justice and inflexible determination that an act was passed by the General Assembly, while he was a member of one of its committees on finance, levying a tax upon the deposits in savings institutions, which had been hitherto exempt, and a handsome addition was made to the revenue of the State without doing injustice to the depositors in those institutions. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that Mr. Greene never sought a public office and was never ambitious for political preferment, but, believing it was the duty of every good and loyal citizen to serve his fellow-men to the best of his ability whenever called by them to perform public duties, he cheerfully, though at times reluctantly, particularly when he thought his private interests might suffer in consequence, gave his time and talents for the public good.

Studious from early life, Mr. Greene's mind was well stored with useful learning, and his acquirements in general literature enabled him to write with both clearness and vigor of expression. In reading his preference was for religious philosophy, and while yet a young man he received the religious truths taught by the eminent and learned Emanuel Swedenborg and finally became a member of the Providence Society of the New Jerusalem Church, commonly called Swedenborgians. His religious belief, founded as it was on the plain teachings of the Holy Scriptures, was in him the controlling cause of all his acts. It had relation to his whole life, and its life in him resulted in beneficent acts, in whatever position he was placed, whether in his own home, where he presided with gentle firmness, dignity, urbanity and grace, mingled with the most affectionate care of his family and dependents, or in the refinement, geniality and pleasures of social life, or in public office, or in the affairs of his extensive business.

To the marriage of Simon Henry Greene and Caroline Cornelia Aborn were born children as follows: Edward Aborn, Jan. 24, 1823; Henry Lehre, March 31, 1825; Christopher Rhodes, Oct. 14, 1827; William Rogers, Dec. 3, 1829; John W. A., Feb. 19, 1832; Caroline C., Aug. 27, 1834 (died Sept. 26, 1838); George Frederick, March 9, 1837 (died Oct. 21, of that same year); George Frederick (2), Aug. 26, 1838; Charles, April 13, 1841 (died April 17th of that same year); Francis C., June 23, 1842; and Abbie S., Sept. 29, 1845 (died Oct. 27th of that same year).

(VIII) EDWARD ABORN GREENE, son of Simon Henry, born Jan. 24, 1823, in Providence, married Nov. 8, 1849, Hannah C. Smith, daughter of Amos D. and Sarah A. (Franklin) Smith, of Providence. Mr. Greene in boyhood pursued his studies in excellent private schools in his native city, supplementing his early learning by a year's attendance at Brown University. At the age of fifteen he entered the office of John L. Hughes, then one of the leading manufacturers of Providence. Here he passed four years, when he became a clerk in the establishment of Shubael Hutchins, a commission merchant in cotton and cotton goods. In 1847 young Greene was made a member of the firm as a partner of Mr. Hutchins, and sustained such relations until the death of Mr. Hutchins, in 1867.

In 1867 Mr. Greene became associated with his father and brothers in the business of bleaching and calico printing, as outlined in the foregoing, under the name of S. H. Greene & Sons, whose works were located near River Point, in Warwick, R. I., and known as the Clyde Bleachery & Print Works. On the death of his former partner, Mr. Hutchins, he was made one of the executors and also a trustee of the estate, relations he sustained thereafter. As the years passed he became trustee of other estates and also the president of two banks, the management of which required considerable of his time, and the greater part of his life was passed in Providence.

Mr. Greene in October, 1851, was a charter member of the People's Savings Bank, of which he was chosen a director at that time and served until October, 1874. He was then chosen vice-president and continued in that office until April, 1877, when he was elected president of the bank, continuing in office until 1884. He was an original director in the Bank of Commerce in June, 1851. This institution became a national bank in 1865, and on March 6th of that year Mr. Greene was elected its vice-president. On Jan. 29, 1877, he succeeded in the presidency of the bank Amos D. Smith, the position being then made vacant by the death of Mr. Smith. This relation he sustained to the bank until in 1884, when he was succeeded by Robert Knight. Thus it will be seen that up to 1884 Mr. Greene had experienced a bank service of in round numbers a third of a century, covering which in the discharge of his various official duties his record is one of rare good judgment and ability as a financier.

Mr. Greene was one of the founders of the Merchants Insurance Company and was a member of its first board of directors in 1851, and subsequently he was one of the directors in the Franklin Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He never took an active part in politics, yet in matters affecting the public welfare he was ever found to be a man of decided views. He was identified first with the Whig party and on the formation of the Republican party espoused its cause. In 1854, 1855 and 1856 he was aide-de-camp to Gov. William W. Hoppin, and he served as such to Gov. James Y. Smith during the first year of the latter's administration. This gave him the rank of colonel. From 1855 to 1857 Mr. Greene represented the Second ward in the common council of Providence, then declining a re-election. In this body he served as chairman of the committee on finance. From 1858 to 1874 he was a member of the Providence school committee and for many years was chairman of the committee on Accounts. He was elected a trustee of the Rhode Island Hospital in 1877 and was continued in that position for years.

Mr. Greene's religious connections were with Grace Episcopal Church at Providence. He united with that church in 1856, and in April, 1858, was made a member of the vestry, relations he ever afterward sustained to the church.

To the marriage of Edward Aborn Greene and Hannah C. Smith were born five sons and two daughters, namely: Henry F. (deceased), Sarah F., Edward A., Jr., Charles R. (deceased), Charles W., Anna M. (deceased), and Amos D. S. (deceased). These children on their mother's side are direct descendants of Priscilla, heroine of "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

(VIII) HON. HENRY LEHRE GREENE, son of Simon Henry, was born March 31, 1825, at the Aborn homestead in Providence, and at the early age of three years entered a private school in that city. His studies were continued there until the age of fourteen, when with his parents he removed to Clyde, in the town of Warwick, R. I. He at once entered the Greene & Pike Bleachery, located at this point, as a common hand at regular wages, and continued thus employed until 1842, meanwhile becoming thoroughly familiar with the business in all its details, and rendering himself competent to manage each individual department. On the death of the junior partner, in 1842, he entered the office with a view to acquiring a knowledge of the company's books, at the same time assisting in the general management of the business. Leaving the office in 1845, his attention was mainly given to the practical working of the establishment, later under his immediate supervision. Mr. Greene acted in this capacity until 1868, when much of the responsibility was relegated to the hands, and the mechanical department of the works received his more especial oversight. His connection with the business from early youth, his practical acquaintance with its details, acquired by a thorough apprenticeship, and his taste for mechanics, made his services invaluable and placed him without doubt at the head of this great industry. He drew the plans and specifications, located the machinery and made the estimates for the spacious buildings forming the greater part of the immense plant now occupied by the Clyde Bleachery & Print Works. Under his immediate supervision the works were almost entirely rebuilt and enlarged, and are now as thoroughly equipped as any establishment of the kind in the country.

The business, which in 1842 was conducted in the name of S. H. Greene, became on a reorganization, in 1865, S. H. Greene & Sons, Mr. Greene, however, previous to this date participating in the profits. When again it was reorganized and incorporated, a few years ago, he became its president, and continued as the active head of the establishment, although, of course, less active than before he was able to shift some of the responsibility of management to the younger shoulders of his son, Francis W. Greene, agent and treasurer, and the latter's associates in the corporation.

In the original establishment were employed thirty hands. The concern now gives employment to approximately seven hundred. In 1838 one printing machine was used, about 14,000 yards of cloth were bleached per day, and 2,000 or more yards of indigo blue material were printed and dyed. The capacity of the bleachery is now approximately 125 tons or 1,500,000 yards per week, and they have nine printing machines, whose aggregate production is 1,250,000 yards per week.

Up to the last week of his life, notwithstanding his age, Mr. Greene continued to take a keen interest, not only in the affairs of the corporation with which he had so long and so closely been identified, but also in all matters affecting the welfare and progress of the Pawtuxet Valley and the town, in which for nearly seventy years he was an honored resident and citizen. There was probably no man in the State at the time of his death who had been in business so long and so continuously.

Mr. Greene, aside from the personal attention he gave to the details of this extensive manufacturing interest, found leisure for other projects. He was president of the Phenix Savings Bank, and of the Pawtuxet Valley Water Company and the Pawtuxet Valley Business Association, which some fifteen years ago exerted so powerful an influence on the progress of the Pawtuxet Valley and the cementing of the warring, divided villages composing the valley into a united community. In his early life he was identified with the Whig party, to whose candidates and measures he gave his cordial and generous support. He became a Republican on the formation of that party, and in 1883 was chosen to the State Senate, and was again elected to that body in 1888 and assigned to the important committees on Finance and Judiciary. In 1884 he became a member of the Board of State Charities and Corrections, having been appointed first for an unexpired term, and afterwards for the full period of six years. In this connection he had much to do with the erection of the buildings at the State institutions at Howard. He was president of the State Board of Agriculture, and in all these offices of trust and responsibility acquitted himself in a way that redounded to the advantage of his town and State and to his own credit as a public-spirited and conscientious citizen and public officer. He was largely identified with local affairs, was early elected to serve in the town council and later made its president. He was an earnest sympathizer with every measure tending to elevate the standard of education in the town.

Mr. Greene was ever a judicious reader and became familiar with a wide field of miscellaneous literature. Although taken from school and placed in the workshop at an early age, he continued to discipline his mind and cultivate a refined taste under the direction of his father and other wise counselors, thus making amends for the lack of scholastic training in his youth and enlarging his range of thought. During his later years he traveled extensively in Europe, and possessing keen powers of observation and a most retentive memory he also acquired in that way a knowledge of the world of music and art which made him a most entertaining conversationalist, and up to within a few years ago in much demand on the lecture platform in the Pawtuxet Valley and other parts of the State.

As an authority on the early and recent history of the Pawtuxet Valley and its older families Mr. Greene had no peer. He had an inexhaustible fund of Valley lore, gleaned by himself during his long residence there, or from the leading men of the Valley, with whom in his earlier years he was thrown in contact. For some time he had been engaged in writing his memoirs, finding that a most pleasant occupation for his leisure time, and within a few months contributed to The Sunday Tribune an article on "Embargoes," which was probably his last published contribution to the public prints.

That his interest in matters of public concern had in nowise waned, despite his advanced age, was shown a few days before his death, when in response to an invitation from Lieut.-Gov. Watrous to attend a meeting in the interest of the soldiers' monument fund he sent the following letter, penned with the care and precision of copperplate script:

"Riverpoint, R. I., Feb. 8, 1908.

"Warwick Soldiers' Monument Committee:

"Gentlemen—Your invitation to attend a meeting of the citizens of Warwick, to be held at the office of Lieut.-Gov. Watrous next Monday afternoon is to hand. While I appreciate your courtesy, I am obliged to decline the invitation on account of ill health and by the advice of my physician am practically confined to my house. Early in September I had an attack of pneumonia from which I had barely recovered when laryngitis followed and I am now under treatment for that.

"Wishing you complete success in erecting a monument worthy of commemorating the patriotic and self-sacrificing courage of the soldiers of the Civil War, not a few of whom were our own kindred, even our own brothers, who upheld our Government in the time of its direful need, and assuring you of my desire to assist in the praiseworthy undertaking in whatever way I am able,

"I remain very truly yours,

"HENRY L. GREENE."

Mr. Greene was a member of the Swedenborgian Church and president of the society and leader of the services held in the little New Jerusalem Chapel, opposite the print works gate at Clyde.

On Aug. 13, 1849, Mr. Greene was married to Marcy Gooding, daughter of Oliver C. Wilbur, of Providence, and to them came children as follows: Susan Aborn (deceased), Lucy Anna, Caroline Cornelia and Francis Whittier. Of these, Lucy A. was married to Benjamin Aborn Jackson, banker, of Providence, and to them were born two sons, Henry Greene and Donald, and a daughter, Lucy Aborn. Francis W. Greene is agent and treasurer of the print works at Riverpoint. He has three children, Francis V., Ralph Drayton and Eleanor.

Mrs. Marcy Gooding Greene died June 22, 1879, and Mr. Greene made his home at Riverpoint with his daughter, Caroline Cornelia, until his death, which occurred Feb. 12, 1908. The following appeared in the Providence Tribune of Feb. 13, 1908;

"Sitting in his chair at his home at Riverpoint last evening, Hon. Henry L. Greene, president of the S. H. Greene & Sons Corporation, the Pawtuxet Valley's first citizen and grand old man, passed peacefully away, a fitting ending to a long, peaceful, honored, useful life. His death came suddenly but not unexpectedly. He had been confined to the house for a week or two, suffering from an attack of laryngitis, the unwelcome heritage left by an attack of pneumonia, from which he suffered last September. Monday the mild weather, following the period of extreme cold, tempted him from the house and he visited his office at the Clyde Print Works, where he spent a half-hour with Superintendent John R. Butterworth, apparently as well as usual and as cheerfully interested in everything connected with the concern and the business with which he had been identified for almost seventy years.

"He chatted with Mr. Butterworth about the latter's grandchild and its birthday, celebrated that day, and was in the best of spirits, showing nothing to indicate that two days later he would finish his long and honorable career.

"Last evening, sitting in his favorite chair, attended by his daughter, who has been his constant companion for a score of years, he succumbed suddenly to a combination of ailments incident to old age and died full of years and honors within a few weeks of completing his eighty-third year.

"The deceased, since the death of his father in 1885, was the most respected citizen in the valley, and admittedly its first citizen in every sense of the word. One of the few valley manufacturers who made his home in the valley and its interests his own he was on terms of affectionate intimacy with many of the humblest, as well as the highest and most influential among its citizens. He had worked in his father's printery as a boy with many of the men who were his contemporaries in old age as in youth and outlived all but a few of them and there will be universal regret at the death of one who was a friend to everybody and who, if he ever had an enemy, had lived to know for years that he had none.

"As the head of one of the valley's most important industries, he exerted an influence on the industrial life of the valley second to none, with the exception of Robert Knight, and during his long connection with the industry its product, the 'Washington prints,' came to be known as a standard among the products of American printeries."

SLOCUM. The Slocum family is one of New England's earliest settled families, the progenitor of the family of which this article treats having been one of the early settlers of Massachusetts, and his descendants later became early settlers of Rhode Island, where members of the family have since resided. The following genealogy of the family is given in chronological order, the Roman numerals indicating the different generations.

(I) Anthony Slocum (Slocombe) is recorded as one of the first purchasers of Cohannet, New Plymouth, now Taunton, and its vicinity in Massachusetts, in the year 1637; and it is also written that most of the "first and ancient purchasers" of that territory—several of whom were also from the vicinity of Taunton, England—came immediately from Dorchester, Mass., where landings were made in 1630. Anthony Slocum removed probably about 1662 to that part of New Plymouth which was incorporated in 1664 as Dartmouth, and of which he and one Ralph Russell were the first settlers. His wife was probably a sister of William Harvey, of Taunton, Mass. Their children were: Giles, Edward, a daughter and John.

(II) Giles Slocum, son of Anthony, was born in England, and coming to America settled in what is now the town of Portsmouth, R. I., probably in the year 1638. He was an energetic and prosperous man. He and his wife, whose Christian name was Joan, were early members of the Society of Friends. His death occurred in 1682. His children were: Joanna, John, Giles, Ebenezer, Nathaniel, Peleg, Samuel, Mary and Eleazer.

(III) Giles Slocum (2), son of Giles, was born March 25, 1647, in Portsmouth, R. I., and married March 26, 1669, Anne, daughter of Thomas Lawton, of Portsmouth. In about 1669 he removed to Dartmouth, Mass., but again became a resident of Portsmouth, R. I., previous to April 30, 1678, at which time he was admitted a freeman of that town. His name is connected with a number of land purchases and sales both in Portsmouth and Dartmouth. He was chosen deputy from Portsmouth to the Rhode Island General Assembly in 1685-1690; selectman for Portsmouth in 1687; town councilman in 1690, and was assistant (Colonial Senator) in 1696-98-00-03-05-08-12. His children were: Elizabeth, Johanna, Anne, Mary, Sarah, Giles and John.

(IV) Giles Slocum (3), son of Giles (2), was born 8th of 10th month, 1680, in Portsmouth, R. I., and there married Jan. 15, 1701, Anne Borden, daughter of Matthew and Sarah Borden, of Portsmouth, where he was admitted a freeman in 1703, and chosen deputy in 1704, which office he held for many years. He was chosen assistant in 1722 and 1723. He was a zealous worker in the Society of Friends, and his death, which occurred on 20th of 7th month, 1749, was greatly lamented. His children were: Giles, Matthew, Sarah, Anne, Mary, Elizabeth, Giles (2), Matthew (2), Ruth, Benjamin, Johanna, Abigail and Hannah.

(V) Giles Slocum (4), son of Giles (3), was born 14th of 5th month, 1713, in Portsmouth, R. I., and there married in the 5th month, 1747, Susannah, daughter of Stephen and Martha Brownell, of the same town. He was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth in 1734, and was elected deputy to the Rhode Island General Assembly in 1757. His household numbered nineteen heads in 1774. Mr. and Mrs. Slocum died on their farm in Portsmouth, and were buried in the Slocum cemetery, five miles northeast of Newport. Their children were: Ann, Giles, Matthew, Elizabeth, Susannah, Stephen and Phebe.

(VI) Giles Slocum (5), son of Giles (4), was born Dec. 20, 1750, in Portsmouth, R. I. On Dec. 31, 1772, he married Susannah Brownell, born March 17, 1754, and they settled in Portsmouth. Mr. Slocum was chosen deputy to the General Assembly, and was also a delegate to the convention from Rhode Island that adopted the new constitution of the United States in 1790, in which convention he served on the committee on Amendments. His children were: Benjamin, born Aug. 27, 1773; Elizabeth, Aug. 20, 1775; Mehetabel, July 15, 1777; Martha, Feb. 2, 1779; Stephen, Aug. 22, 1781; Abigail, Oct. 6, 1783; Susannah, Oct. 22, 1786; Giles, May 26, 1789; Brownell, Jan. 20, 1792; Rebecca, Jan. 16, 1793; and Philadelphia, July 1, 1796.

(VII) Stephen Slocum, son of Giles (5), was born Aug. 22, 1781, in Portsmouth, R. I. He married, Nov. 17, 1802, Mary, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Cook) Fish, of Portsmouth, where she was born March 8, 1783. They settled in Portsmouth and there died, she on the 28th of July, 1874, and he on the 30th of October, 1874, both being buried on their farm near the Glen. In his early life Mr. Slocum was engaged in the butchering business, and later was engaged in farming and market gardening. They were housekeepers for upwards of seventy years, and were members of the Baptist Church, and were highly respected throughout their long lives. Their children were as follows: George, born May 28, 1804; Elizabeth, April 7, 1806; Charlotte, Aug. 22, 1811; Stephen, June 19, 1814; Hannah Cook, April 17, 1816; Abigail, Nov. 25, 1819; Margaret Almy, Sept. 5, 1822; Peleg Hart, March 20, 1825; Susannah, Aug. 12, 1827; and William Perry, April 27, 1830.

(VIII) George Slocum, son of Stephen and Mary (Fish) Slocum, was born May 28, 1804, in Portsmouth, R. I. In early life he entered the merchant marine service, and later became master of vessels which plied the deep sea, during which service he visited many of the important ports of the world. He was a member of the Union Christian Church of Portsmouth. In political faith he was a Republican, but never sought public office. He possessed a genial good nature which won for him many staunch friends. On July 5, 1827, he married Susan Gould, daughter of Thomas and Anne (Slocum) Gould, of Middletown, R. I. Mr. Slocum passed away in Newport, Oct. 4, 1863, in the sixtieth year of his age. To Mr. and Mrs. Slocum were born children as follows: Mary Anne, born April 1, 1828, in Portsmouth, married Benjamin Wyatt, of Middletown, and they had children, Georgianna, Robert G., Edward N., William B. and George Slocum; Stephen Thomas, born Oct. 10, 1829, in Middletown, married Mary Jane LeMie, of Baltimore, Md., and they had two sons, John Thomas and Charles Albert; John Henry, born Nov. 5, 1832, in Middletown, was killed during the Civil war, dying at Bristow Station, Va., Aug. 27, 1862, unmarried; Edmund Deacon, born Aug. 11, 1835, in Portsmouth, married Mary Elizabeth Batolf, of Newport, and they had, Lena, Susan, Mary and Edmund; Frances Howe, born Sept. 13, 1837, in Portsmouth, married John Manley Drake, of Bellingham, Mass., and they had one daughter, Mary; William Shurtliff, born Nov. 25, 1839, in Portsmouth, married Sarah A. Bradley, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and they have two children, Mary Florence and William Gould; George Taber, born July 20, 1842, in Middletown, died in Andersonville Prison, Ga., during the Civil war, July 4, 1864, aged twenty-one years, unmarried; Susan Catherine, born April 28, 1845, in Portsmouth, married Benjamin Peckham, and died Oct. 4, 1863, without issue; Elizabeth Sprong, born Oct. 22, 1847, in Portsmouth, married Charles E. Spooner, of Middletown, and they had two children, Ida May and Harry; Sarah Jane, born April 27, 1850, in Portsmouth, married George Steere, of Providence, and they had two children, George and Ella Steere, and she married (second) Albert Platt, of Philadelphia (no issue); and Daniel Gould is mentioned below.

(IX) DANIEL GOULD SLOCUM, born March 24, 1854, in Middletown, son of George and Susan

(Gould) Slocum, was married to Margaret Mahoney, of Newport, daughter of Peter and Mary (Healey) Mahoney, and to this union were born: Mabel Gould; Grace Marrion, born Jan. 20, 1884, in Newport, who died Dec. 6, 1902, in Newport; and Alice Mahoney, born Dec. 15, 1886, in Newport, who married July 27, 1904, Florance J. Harvey, of Newport, and they have one son, Florance J. Harvey, Jr.

(X) Mabel Gould Slocum, eldest daughter of Daniel Gould and Margaret (Mahoney) Slocum, was born in Newport, April 21, 1882. On Oct. 18, 1903, she married Harold Dean Stickney, of Taunton, Mass, who is in the United States diplomatic service.

GOULD. The Gould family of Rhode Island, to which Mrs. Susan (Gould) Slocum, wife of (VIII) George Slocum, belonged, springs from one of its first families, the progenitor coming to the Island in 1637, and beyond the sea their lineage is traced back through five generations to Thomas Gould, of Bovington, in the parish of Hemel Hempstead, who was born about 1455, and died in 1520.

(I) Jeremiah Gould and family are the only Goulds on record who came from England to Rhode Island. He was admitted an inhabitant of Newport, March 20, 1638, and was made a freeman in 1641. He married Priscilla Grover, and their children were: Daniel, Thomas and John. Jeremiah Gould, the father, later returned to England, and died there. His wife was buried on the farm of her son, John, in what is now Middletown, Rhode Island.

(II) Daniel Gould, eldest son of Jeremiah and Priscilla (Grover) Gould, was sixteen years of age on coming to New England with his parents. He married June 18, 1651, Waite, daughter of John Coggeshall (the first president of the Colony). Daniel Gould joined the Society of Friends, and later in 1659, while visiting in Salem, Mass., was imprisoned by order of Richard Bellingham (Deputy Governor), and had to submit to thirty stripes on his naked back (being tied to the carriage of a gun) for no other cause than being a Quaker. He was deputy in 1672-73, and assistant in 1674-75. He died at his home in Newport, Jan. 26, 1716, and his widow, Waite, passed away May 8, 1718. Their children were: Mary, born March 2, 1653; Thomas, Feb. 22, 1654; Daniel, Aug. 24, 1656; John, March 4, 1659; Priscilla, April 30, 1661; Jeremiah, born March 5, 1664; James, May 13, 1666; Jeremiah (2), Dec. 2, 1668; Content, March 23, 1671; and Waite, March 8, 1676.

(III) Thomas Gould, eldest son of Daniel and Waite (Coggeshall) Gould, on the death of his father, inherited all the homestead estate, containing between two and three hundred acres of good land, and also a very valuable plantation in Barbadoes. On Jan. 13, 1690, he married Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob and Joanna Mott, of Portsmouth, R. I. He died March 11, 1734, his widow sur-living him many years, and dying Jan. 22, 1749. Their children were: Priscilla, born Dec. 3, 1692; Marcy, Oct. 13, 1694; Daniel, Dec. 18, 1696; Thomas, Oct. 1, 1698; Joanna, Aug. 24, 1700; Jacob, Sept. 21, 1704; Elizabeth, March 4, 1707; John, Dec. 15, 1708; and James, May 5, 1711.

(IV) Thomas Gould, Jr., son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Mott) Gould, was settled by his father on the northerly part of the paternal estate, which contained upwards of one hundred acres of very excellent land. He was for many years justice of the peace, and lastly one of the Justices of the Supreme Court in the county of Rhode Island. On Oct. 17, 1723, Thomas Gould married Sarah, daughter of John and Susannah Anthony, of Portsmouth, R. I. He died June 13, 1786, and his wife, who had been for many years a very useful and active member and Elder of the Rhode Island Monthly Meeting, died Feb. 20, 1789, in the 101st year of her age. The children of Thomas and Sarah Gould were: Elizabeth, born July 17, 1724; Thomas, May 11, 1728; and John, Aug. 29, 1736.

(V) John Gould, son of Thomas and Sarah (Anthony) Gould, inherited the paternal estate. On Oct. 15, 1761, he married Sarah, daughter of James and Hannah Coggeshall, of Newport. He made himself master of the French, Greek and Hebrew languages, besides acquiring a partial knowledge of several others. For many years he held the office of justice of the peace, but declined nomination as a candidate for judge. During the war of the Revolution, he, with many others, was subjected to serious losses in every way. This, together with the loss sustained by the depreciation of paper currency, of which, unfortunately he had a large amount, greatly reduced his valuable property. Mr. Gould died Sept. 2, 1811, and his wife passed away Dec. 3, 1816. Their children, all born in Middletown, R. I., were: Elizabeth, born Oct. 5, 1762; Susanna, July 23, 1764; Mary, Oct. 24, 1765; Thomas, March 20, 1767; Hannah, Oct. 29, 1768; John and Sarah, twins, Aug. 29, 1770; Walter, Aug. 20, 1771; James, July 6, 1774; Sarah, July 5, 1779; and Rebecca, Nov. 12, 1781.

(VI) Thomas Gould, son of John and Sarah (Coggeshall) Gould, married Anne Slocum. He inherited a large portion of his father's estate, and on the death of his father took possession of the homestead farm. His death occurred June 18, 1850, when he was over eighty years of age. His widow survived many years, living in the old home, where she died, and she was buried in the burying ground on the farm. The children of Thomas and Anne Gould were: Charles, Samuel, Sarah Anne, Susan, Henrietta, Catherine, John, James Coggeshall and Robert.

(VII) Susan Gould, daughter of Thomas and Anne (Slocum) Gould, born Oct. 25, 1807, died Nov. 28, 1896, in the ninetieth year of her age. On July 5, 1827, she married (VIII) George Slocum, of Portsmouth, R. I. She was a faithful wife and mother, a true and sympathetic friend, and was beloved and respected by all who knew her. Two of her five sons serving in the Civil War were killed. She lived for many years in the old homestead on Division street, Newport, which is still in the family. The children of George and Susan (Gould) Slocum were: Mary Anne; Stephen Thomas; John Henry; Edmund Deacon; Frances Howe; William Shurtliff; George Taber; Susan Catherine; Elizabeth Sprong; Sarah Jane; and Daniel Gould Slocum.

(VIII) Daniel Gould Slocum, son of George and Susan (Gould) Slocum, born March 24, 1854, of the ninth generation of the Slocum family, married Margaret Mahoney, of Newport, R. I., and their children were: Mabel Gould, Grace Marriion, and Alice Mahoney Slocum.

(IX) Mabel Gould Slocum, daughter of Daniel Gould and Margaret (Mahoney) Slocum, was born April 21, 1882, in Newport, in the tenth generation of the Slocums. She married Oct. 18, 1903, Harold Dean Stickney, of Taunton, Massachusetts.

VERNON. The name of Vernon has been a prominent and conspicuous one in the History of Rhode Island since the early settlement of that State, and particularly so in Newport and vicinity, in which city the emigrant ancestor of the family first settled upon his arrival in this country from England. Each generation of this honored family has produced men of distinction who have made their presence felt in the community, and among the representatives of this old family in Newport may be worthily mentioned the late George Edward Vernon, and his two sons, George Edward (who died June 23, 1907), and William B. Vernon, all of whom have been prominently identified with the business interests of that city for a number of years.

Daniel Vernon, the emigrant ancestor of the Vernon family, son of Samuel Vernon, was born in London, England, Sept. 1, 1643, and is said to have come to this country about the year 1666. His emigration is thought to have been in part determined from the losses his father sustained in the great fire of that year in London, a range of his warehouses along the Thames and the quay having been burned in that disastrous fire. Mr. Vernon had received a very superior education; spoke several languages, and was long a tutor in the family of Lodowick Updike, of North Kingstown, R. I. In 1683 he was clerk of Kingstown; also constable. In 1686 he was appointed marshal of Kings province and keeper of the prison; in 1687, with Henry Tibbets, he was appointed to lay out certain highways in Rochester. In 1687, he was also a selectman of Kingstown, which was then known as Rochester. On his arrival from England he appears to have first resided at Newport, but shortly after removed to Narragansett, where at Tower Hill, Sept. 22, 1679, he married Ann Dyre, a widow, daughter of Capt. Edward Hutchinson, Jr., and granddaughter of the celebrated Anne Hutchinson, and grandniece of John Dryden. She died Jan. 10, 1716; her gravestone is still standing in the family lot at Newport, beside that of her husband. He died Oct. 28, 1715. Their children were: Daniel, born April 6, 1682 (died young); Samuel, Dec. 6, 1683; and Catherine, Oct. 3, 1686 (died unmarried in March, 1769).

Samuel Vernon, son of Daniel, was born Dec. 6, 1683, and married April 10, 1707, Elizabeth Fleet, of Long Island. He became a distinguished citizen of Newport; was an assistant from 1729 till his death in 1737, and a judge of the Superior Court of Judicature. In 1737, he was one of the commissioners appointed to fix the disputed boundary between Massachusetts and New Hampshire. His constant election to office shows that he was highly esteemed in the community, and he doubtless would have attained still further distinction had not his useful career been arrested by his death, Dec. 5, 1737, while still in the prime of life. Mrs. Vernon died March 5, 1721, aged thirty-seven years. Their gravestones, bearing the family coat of arms, are still in the Newport cemetery. Their children were as follows: Ann, born Jan. 23, 1707, died Sept. 23, 1782; Elizabeth, born Aug. 4, 1709; Samuel, born Sept. 6, 1711; Esther, born Aug. 20, 1713, died unmarried; Daniel, born Aug. 20, 1716; Thomas, born May 31, 1718, married (first) Jane Brown, and (second) Mary Mears; William, born Jan. 17, 1719; and Mary, born Dec. 23, 1721, died May 17, 1770, unmarried. Of these children, Thomas, born in 1718, was a merchant of the firm of Grant & Vernon; was royal postmaster at Newport from 1745 to 1775; register of the court of vice-admiralty twenty years; secretary of the Redwood Library, and senior warden of Trinity Church. He was a Tory, the only one of the family, and suffered about four months imprisonment on account of his Tory principles. He wrote a journal of his captivity, now in the possession of the Newport Historical Society.

Samuel Vernon, son of Samuel, was born Sept. 6, 1711, and was a prominent Newport merchant, long a member of the house of S. & W. Vernon. He was one of the original applicants for the charter of the Redwood Library; and, in 1750, was one of the petitioners to the King to restrain the Legislature from issuing bills of credit. He died July 6, 1792. He married Amey, daughter of Governor Richard Ward, and his children were: Elizabeth, born April 24, 1738; William, born Aug. 3, 1739, died in infancy; Samuel, born July 12, 1740, died in infancy; Amey, born Sept. 12, 1741, died in infancy; Mary, born Feb. 17, 1742, married Christopher Ellery, an eminent merchant of Newport and a Revolutionary patriot, son of Deputy Gov. William Ellery, and brother of William Ellery, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; Samuel, born Feb. 17, 1744, died Dec. 1, 1809; Amey (2d), born July 19, 1746, died in infancy; Amey (3d), born Nov. 19, 1747, married Samuel King, the portrait painter; William, born July 21, 1749, died in infancy; William Ward, born March 7, 1752, died in Jamaica, W. I., April 10, 1774; Ann, born Sept. 29, 1754, married Dr. David Olyphant, medical director of the armies of the Carolinas, under Generals Gates and Greene during the Revolutionary War; and Thomas, born June 6, 1753, died April 6, 1755.

Geo E. Vernon

William Vernon, son of Samuel, was born Jan. 17, 1719, in Newport, and married Judith, daughter of Philip Harwood, and great-granddaughter of Gov. Walter Clarke and Gov. John Cranston, of Rhode Island. She died Aug. 29, 1762, aged thirty-eight years. He died Dec. 22, 1806. Mr. Vernon's home was at the corner of Clarke and Mary streets, and is still standing, a fine specimen of colonial architecture. It has an historical interest, Mr. Vernon having given the gratuitous use of it to the Count de Rochambeau during the Revolution, and hither Gen. Washington repaired on his first visit to Newport. Mr. Vernon was one of the most distinguished of the Newport merchants, and one of the most self-sacrificing patriots of the Revolution. His trade extended to all of the maritime nations of Europe, the West Indies and Africa. He lost eight vessels by capture in or about the year 1758. So conspicuous was he as a merchant, that in 1778, a French house in Bordeaux solicited his patronage, and spoke of him as "universally known all over the continent of America." He contributed a vessel to the expedition against Louisburg. In 1773 the Colonial Assembly of Rhode Island appointed him one of the committee of three to prepare a letter to "his Majesty's Secretary of State" upon "the endangerment by a bill then pending in the House of Commons, of the fisheries prosecuted by Rhode Island merchants in and near the Gulf of St. Lawrence." He early espoused the patriot cause, and became a most unflinching "Son of Liberty." His great abilities as a merchant, and extensive acquaintance with marine affairs, enabled him at a very early period to assist Congress by his counsel. In 1774 he was appointed one of the committee of Correspondence of the town of Newport with the town of Boston. In 1775 he was appointed by the General Assembly, with William Ellery and others, a committee to collect statistics in regard to losses inflicted upon Rhode Island by the ministerial forces. In this year one of his vessels, the brig "Royal Charlotte," was seized by Wallace in Newport harbor, and taken to Boston and confiscated with its cargo. In 1776, when the British occupied Newport, he was forced to leave the place. On May 6, 1777, he was elected by Congress one of the Continental Navy Board, established at Boston, and was the president of the board from its organization to its dissolution. He not only gave his services without charge to his country, but advanced large sums to the government, which were only in part paid. Of his losses he thus speaks under the date of Oct. 10, 1778, in a letter to Josiah Hewes: "Mammon is no idol of mine. If we establish our rights and liberties upon a firm and lasting basis on the winding up of this bloody contest, I am content; altho' I own, if I could come at the property our enemies are possessed of, belonging to me, it would increase the pleasure. I do assure you it is no less a sum than twelve thousand pounds sterling at least, besides my real estate at Newport; yet I can with truth say it never broke my rest a moment." At the close of the war he re-entered upon commercial pursuits. He was one of the founders of the Newport Artillery Company in 1741. He was a great friend of learning, and assisted Dr. Witherspoon in raising funds for Princeton College. On the death of Abraham Redwood, he was elected the second president of the Redwood Library. He was on terms of affectionate intimacy with LaFayette, Dr. Styles, Adams and Franklin; and was intimate with Jefferson, Viscount de Noailles, and other prominent men of his day. William Vernon was a man of very imposing presence and courtly manners. His children were as follows: Samuel, born May 29, 1757; William, born March 6, 1759, who was graduated from Princeton College, and for many years secretary of the Redwood Library, was a man of elegant and courtly manners, and was known as "Count Vernon"; and Philip Harwood, born April 3, 1761, died in infancy.

Samuel Vernon, son of William, was born May 29, 1757, and married Dec. 31, 1784, his cousin Elizabeth Almy Ellery, daughter of Christopher and Mary (Vernon) Ellery. Mr. Vernon was an eminent Newport merchant, and at one time its wealthiest citizen; was the first president of the Newport Bank, and president of the Rhode Island Insurance Company. During the Revolution he carried on business at Boston, where his father was discharging his official duties. He fought as a volunteer under Gen. Sullivan at the battle of Rhode Island, in August, 1778. He died Nov. 22, 1834. His children were as follows: Mary, born July 21, 1786, died in infancy; Catherine, born July 7, 1787; William, born Sept. 4, 1788, and died Dec. 18, 1867; a daughter, who died in infancy; Mary, born Jan. 3, 1792, and died July 16, 1811, unmarried; Edward, born Sept. 8, 1793, and died Feb. 12, 1861; Elizabeth Almy, born April 28, 1795, and died in February, 1816; Philip Harwood, born Dec. 4, 1796, and died Sept. 16, 1834, unmarried; Thomas, born Dec. 20, 1797, and died in May, 1876; a daughter, who died in infancy; and Samuel Brown, born April 27, 1802, and died May 29, 1858.

Daniel Vernon, son of Daniel Vernon and Lois Case, and the grandfather of the present generation of the Vernon family now residing in Newport, was born in Newport, in July, 1785, and died there Oct. 18, 1840. In early life he learned the trade of carpenter, which occupation he followed during his life, first as a journeyman and later as a contractor and builder, in which line he met with marked success. During his career as a builder he erected many buildings in and around Newport which are still standing, monuments to his ability and handicraft. In political faith Mr. Vernon was early allied with the old-line Whig party, but, although he took an active interest in all local matters, never sought public recognition for himself. He was married in July, 1809, to Eliza Luther, of Somerset, Mass., a descendant of one of New England's earliest settlers, and to this union were born children as follows: Henry Wheaton, born Oct. 12, 1810, was a cabinet-maker by trade, and died in Newport; Albert, born Aug. 21, 1812, died young; Edward, born Sept. 22, 1814, died Oct. 4, 1823; and George Edward, born May 15, 1822.

GEORGE EDWARD VERNON, youngest son of Daniel and Eliza (Luther) Vernon, was born May 15, 1822, in Newport, R. I., and his schooling was obtained in the manner customary to that time. When yet a mere lad he was apprenticed to the carpenter's trade under the skillful tutoring of his father, and after acquiring a thorough knowledge of that business he then, in company with his elder brother, Henry W., was for several years engaged in the cabinet-making business. After the dissolution of this partnership, Mr. Vernon then became foreman for the firm of J. L. & G. A. Hazard, in which capacity he remained several years. Leaving the employ of that firm he became foreman of the repair shops of the Old Colony Steamboat Company, at Newport, which company was then owned and operated by the late James Fisk, of New York. Mr. Vernon remained with this company for several years, and then again became foreman of the furniture establishment of J. L. & G. A. Hazard, serving in that capacity in all for twenty-one years. In 1877, in a very small way, Mr. Vernon engaged in the furniture manufacturing business, locating his factory on John street. From its modest beginning the business grew rapidly, until in 1889, at the time of his death, Mr. Vernon had lived to see as the fruits of his thrift, energy and perseverance, a thriving, well-established business, giving employment to a large number of skilled workmen, and the product thereof adorning the first homes of Newport as well as some of the palatial residences of the largest cities in the country.

In political views Mr. Vernon was a stalwart supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and although ever interested in every project which had for its purpose the advancement and betterment of his native city, he never sought office on his own account. He was a devout member and regular attendant of the Congregational Church, to which he gave his liberal support. Mr. Vernon was for a number of years a member of the Newport Artillery Company, and during the famous Dorr war in the State of Rhode Island gave his services to his State. During the war of the Rebellion he was also an active soldier, serving with the Home Guards.

On June 25, 1845, Mr. Vernon was united in marriage with Anne Amelia Bradford, daughter of Seth C. and Eliza (Havens) Bradford, and direct descendant of Governor William Bradford, of Plymouth Colony. Mrs. Vernon was born Dec. 15, 1824, in Attleboro, Mass., and she passed away in Newport, April 23, 1847, leaving one son, George Edward, Jr., born April 16, 1847. Mr. Vernon's second marriage occurred April 25, 1850, when he was united to Elizabeth Winslow Barber, daughter of John H. Barber, who was for many years the publisher of the Newport Mercury, and his wife Lydia (Lee) Barber. To this second union were born children as follows: John Henry, born June 26, 1851, who married Mary Collins, of Newport, and died March 20, 1892, in Newport, leaving one daughter, Pauline, now the wife of George Johnston, of Boston; Ann Bradford, Leonora Hamilton and Elizabeth Hammett, all three at home; William Barber, born May 4, 1865; and Henry Wheaton, who died at the age of six years. George E. Vernon died Nov. 19, 1889, aged sixty-eight years, and his wife Jan. 23, 1902. Mr. Vernon was a man of unimpeachable integrity, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. His death closed a blameless life and removed from the city of Newport one who had always been one of its best citizens. He was a man of energy and courage, accomplished a great deal, and was able to leave a comfortable estate to his family.

GEORGE EDWARD VERNON, only son of George E. and Anne Amelia (Bradford) Vernon, was born April 16, 1847, in Newport. His early educational training was acquired in the public schools of his native city, supplemented by a term at the Andover (Mass.) Academy. Returning home he was for two years employed as a clerk in the coal business with his uncle, the late Joseph Bradford, and he then took a business course at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College at Providence, graduating from the same when about twenty years of age. Again returning to Newport, he re-entered the employ of Joseph Bradford & Co., as a clerk, continuing in this capacity until 1866, and in this year went to Chicago, being for three years employed in a wholesale grocery in that city. In 1869 Mr. Vernon went to Yankton, S. Dak., where for three years he was employed in various clerkships, and in 1872 returned to Newport, the next two years being spent with his uncle, Mr. Bradford. Mr. Vernon then accepted the position of freight and express clerk for the Narragansett Steamboat Company, being employed by this company about three and one-half years. Mr. Vernon in 1875 became bookkeeper for the late William J. Swinburne, who was engaged in the coal and wood business, remaining with him until 1878, when he a second time went to Yankton, S. Dak., spending the summer of that year as a clerk in a grocery store. Returning to Newport in the fall of 1878 he again became bookkeeper for Mr. Swinburne, being thus employed until 1881, and in that year entered the employ of his father, whose furniture business was developing into a growing industry. Mr. Vernon continued in the employ of his father until the latter's death, in 1889, when in company with other members of the family, he organized the business under the style of George E. Vernon & Co., which has since continued to steadily grow, and now gives employment to from fifty to sixty hands. This thriving establishment manufactures and keeps in stock everything in the line of furniture and decorations, and makes a specialty of upholstering in all of its branches.

Mr. Vernon was an active member of the Masonic order, holding membership with St. Paul's Lodge No. 14, A. F. & A. M., of which he was past master; Newport Chapter No. 2, R. A. M.; DeBlois Council No. 5, R. & S. M.; Washington Commandery No. 4, K. T., of which he was past eminent commander; Palestine Temple of the Mystic Shrine of Providence, having been a charter member of the latter body when it was located in Newport; and a member of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Association of Knights Templar Commanders. Mr. Vernon was also connected fraternally with Coronet Council No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of which he was past regent. He was for a number of years a member of the Newport Artillery Company and was a "fine" member of that organization. He was also for several years, during the Civil war, a member of the Newport Light Infantry, and served as major of that body for several years.

In political faith Mr. Vernon was a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican Party, and as such served his native city as representative to the General Assembly of the State in the sessions of 1900-01 and 1904-05. During the first session he served as a member of the Committees on Shell Fisheries and Education, and during the second term as a member of the Committee on Charities and Corrections. During the administration of Governor Charles Dean Kimball of Rhode Island, Mr. Vernon served on that gentleman's personal staff as aide-de-camp, with the rank of Colonel. In 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, Col. Vernon was elected a member of the Representative council from the Third Ward for the three-year term. He took a prominent part in the organization of the council, serving as one of the members-elect to formulate rules and orders for the government of the body. He was a member of various clubs. During its existence he held membership with the Business Men's Association, and later became a charter member of the Miantonomi Club. For several years he was a member of the Newport County Club, serving as president thereof for several years. He was also president of the Newport Board of Trade, in which capacity he served for a number of years. For a period of twenty-one years he was an active member of the volunteer fire department, serving for several years as foreman thereof. Colonel Vernon was a member of the Newport Historical Society, and a member of the board of managers of the Newport Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution. For several years he served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Aquidneck National Bank, and as an officer of the Newport-Nevada Mining Company. With his family he attended the United Congregational Church, to which he gave his liberal support.

On Feb. 4, 1873, Colonel Vernon was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Peabody, daughter of the late Jeremiah and Clarissa (Hall) Peabody, of Newport, and to this union was born one daughter, Susan Barker Vernon, now the wife of George Ashley Hazard, of Newport.

Colonel Vernon was a genial, affable gentleman, his kindly, courteous manner winning him many staunch friends. He was a capable business man, and his executive ability materially assisted in the growth of the thriving business establishment with which he was for so long identified. He was a worthy descendant of distinguished ancestors both on his paternal and maternal sides, a direct descendant in the ninth generation in lineal descent of Governor William Bradford, of Plymouth Colony. He died June 23, 1907, after an illness covering several months. He was a man whose employes "looked to him rather as an older brother and friend than as an employer * * * a man who never knew an enemy and was held in high esteem wherever he was known."

WILLIAM BARBER VERNON, son of the late George E. and Elizabeth Winslow (Barber) Vernon, was born May 4, 1865, in Newport. His early educational training was received in the public schools of his native locality and later in the private school taught by Thomas Sears. At the age of eighteen years Mr. Vernon entered the employ of his father, who was at this time in the prime of his remarkable business career, and young Vernon began at once to familiarize himself thoroughly with all the details of the various branches of this business. He thus continued until his father's death, in 1889, and when the business was organized by his mother and brother, George E., into the firm of George E. Vernon & Co., he became a member thereof and has been connected therewith ever since. Having acquired a thorough knowledge of the mechanical department of the business, Mr. Vernon has, since the organization of the company, had the general management of the manufacturing branch of the company. He is also a recognized connoisseur of antiques, particularly in the furniture line, and to this branch he gives a great deal of attention.

Mr. Vernon in political faith is a Republican, but he has never sought office. He and his family attend the Congregational Church. On Nov. 22, 1892, Mr. Vernon was united in marriage with Miss Annie Cozzens Seabury, daughter of John E. and Elizabeth (Ailman) Seabury, of Newport, and there have been born to this union: Elizabeth; Virginia; and Annie Barber, born July 22, 1907. Mr. Vernon is socially connected with the Lawrence Club of Newport; personally he is popular with a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He is a patron of art and literature, his library being an extensive one. His refined tastes are evidenced by the pleasing appearance of his home, to which he is greatly devoted.

HORTON (Rehoboth-Attleboro branch). This branch of the Horton family has furnished to Attleboro, Mass., three generations of business men. Gideon Martin Horton, who was a well-known merchant there a half century ago, and his four sons, Everett Southworth, Edwin Jackson, Gideon Martin and James Jackson Horton, all became successful jewelry manufacturers and prominent citizens. Only one, the eldest of the brothers, Maj. Everett S. Horton, survives, and he and his nephew, Raymond Martin Horton, are the only male representatives of the name residing there.

The Horton family is a very old one in this section. Several authorities on the first settlers of New England refer to the emigrants of this name (which in the early records is spelled without the "H") as here as early as 1640, among them Barnabas of Hampton, 1640, thence to Southold, Long Island, 1662; Benjamin and Caleb, of the same place and time; and Joseph, of Southold, 1662. All of them, says Savage, perhaps, were brothers.

The published lineage of members of the Massachusetts Horton family sets forth that:

(I) John Horton, with two brothers, came from England to New England at an early date, John settling in Rehoboth, Mass., where he married Mehetable Gamzey, and their children were eight in number, the five sons being: John, Jotham, Nathaniel, Jonathan and David. No record of his death has been found. His home was in the south part of the town of Rehoboth, where his grandson, Lieut. James, lived during the early part of his life.

(II) Jotham Horton, of Rehoboth, married (first) May 29, 1729, Hannah Martin, and (second) Penelope Rounds. He died in 1797. His children by the first marriage were: Mercy, born May 5, 1730; Nathan, Oct. 1, 1733; Sarah, Nov. 11, 1735; Hannah, Dec. 19, 1738. The children of the second marriage were: James, born July 10, 1741; Barnet, May 6, 1744 (served in the war of the Revolution); Rhode, July 10, 1747; and Jotham, July 30, 1753.

(III) Lieut. James Horton, born July 10, 1741, son of Jotham, married Freelove Pierce, born Nov. 8, 1742, and she died Feb. 13, 1809. James Horton, a soldier of the Revolution, was commissioned first lieutenant in March, 1776, in Capt. Stephen Bullock's Sixth Company, Col. Thomas Carpenter's First Bristol County Regiment, of Massachusetts militia. He later was a lieutenant in Captain Carpenter's Company, Col. Simeon Cary's Regiment, Gen. John Fellow's Brigade, and was in the list of men stationed at New York for five months. He participated in the evacuation of New York and the battle of White Plains. He was later transferred to Capt. Israel Hix's Company, Col. John Daggett's Regiment. Lieutenant Horton was in command of a company in Col. Thomas Carpenter's Regiment for eight days, Aug. 1, 1780, to Aug. 8, 1780, when the company marched to Tiverton, R. I., on an alarm. Lieutenant Horton was a very vigorous and active man, and lived to the age of almost ninety-three, dying in Rehoboth, Aug. 10, 1833. He was first buried in what later became a neglected cemetery in Rehoboth, but through the efforts and at the expense of his great-grandsons, Maj. Everett S. Horton, of Attleboro, and Horace F. Horton, of Providence, the remains of Lieut. Horton and of his son Cromwell, and those of the latter's family buried there, were taken up and moved to the cemetery at Rehoboth village, where their lot receives good care. The children of Lieut. James Horton were: Nathan, born Aug. 30, 1764; Mercy, Nov. 20, 1766; Lydia, Nov. 24, 1768; Freelove, Feb. 26, 1773; Cromwell, Feb. 23, 1777; Rhode, July 27, 1779; Jarvis, Sept. 9, 1781 (grandfather of Halsey E. and Jarvis S. Horton, of Providence, and Benjamin T. Horton, of East Providence); and Phebe, June 11, 1785.

(IV) Cromwell Horton, born Feb. 23, 1777, followed the occupation of farmer in Rehoboth, and there died in February, 1861. He was twice married, first in September, 1801, to Percy Martin, who was born Oct. 28, 1780, daughter of Hezekiah and Mary (Pierce) Martin, granddaughter of Hezekiah and Hannah Martin, and great-granddaughter of John and Mercy (Bilington) Martin. Cromwell Horton married (second) Feb. 18, 1836, Lydia West. His children, all of whom were born to his first marriage, were: Ellis, born April 7, 1802, was the father of Horace F. Horton, of Providence, whose sketch will be found elsewhere; Gideon Martin, born May 4, 1804, is mentioned further on; Mary (or Polly), born April 15, 1808, died young; Freelove, born Feb. 5, 1810, married, Feb. 25, 1834, Hon. Lyman Pierce, of Providence, where she died, the mother of the following children, Adeline F. (who married James Tiffany, of Providence), Sarah J. (who married Nathaniel M. Burr, of East Providence), Free-love A. (who is Mrs. Charles H. Williams, of Providence) and Vienna B. (who married John M. Plummer, of Providence); Percy B., born April 28, 1812, died young; Belinda, born Jan. 6, 1814, died in Providence, March 18, 1872, unmarried; James A., born March 26, 1815, was a mason by trade and died in Rehoboth (he was married, but had no descendants); and Sylvanus, born April 28, 1818, died young.

(V) Gideon Martin Horton was born in Rehoboth May 4, 1804, and when a young man learned the trade of mason, at which he worked for a number of years in Providence and vicinity. About 1840 he engaged in the grocery business with his brother-in-law, Lyman Pierce, their place of business being located on Canal street, Providence. Later they disposed of the business, Mr. Pierce removing to Rehoboth, while Mr. Horton located at Attleboro, where he engaged at his trade and did contract work, erecting a number of houses, several of which are still standing there. A few years later he and Mr. Pierce again became associated in the grocery business, their establishment being on Canal street, near their former location. They did not remain together very long, as Mr. Horton disposed of his interest and removed to Attleboro, embarking in the grocery business, which he conducted for several years, until his health failed. He was succeeded by his son, Everett S. From this time until his death, which occurred on March 7, 1861, he lived retired. Mr. Horton was married (first) Nov. 4, 1832, to Mary Southworth Smith, born April 3, 1811, in Middleboro, Mass., daughter of Southworth and Hannah (Jackson) Smith, and a descendant of "Mayflower" stock. She died Sept. 2, 1844. For his second wife Gideon M. Horton married Mrs. Julia (Vaughn) Jackson, of Middleboro, Mass. His children, four sons, Everett Southworth, Edwin Jackson, Gideon Martin and James Jackson, were all born to the first marriage. In political sentiment Mr. Horton was an Andrew Jackson War Democrat, and his religious connection was with the Second Congregational Church at Attleboro. He was an honest, upright citizen, ever ready to forward any good enterprise, and was highly respected and esteemed for his industry, true charity and Christian devotion. He was never possessed of much of this world's goods, but he gave his children the wealth of good advice and the example of honest industry, coupled with the beneficent spirit of a true Christian life—a legacy more precious than gold.

(VI) MAJOR EVERETT SOUTHWORTH HORTON, eldest child of Gideon Martin Horton and Mary S. Smith, was born at Attleboro, Bristol Co., Mass., June 15, 1836. He attended the public schools of his native town until he attained the age of sixteen, when he entered his father's store as assistant. After his father's health failed he took charge of the business and successfully continued it until April, 1862, when he sold out. Then for a few months he was engaged in the grocery business with his cousin, Horace F. Horton, at Providence. In September, 1862, he enlisted in the service of his country. With others he recruited a company of nine months' men, who elected their officers Sept. 18, 1862, as follows: Lemuel T. Starkey, captain; Frank S. Draper, first lieutenant; Everett S. Horton, second lieutenant. They were soon commissioned by Governor Andrews. Lieutenant Horton took hold of military matters with the earnestness and enthusiasm so characteristic of him, and he rapidly became familiar with the drill and his official duties. He displayed true soldierly qualities. The company went into camp at Boxford, Mass., and was mustered into the United States service Sept. 23, 1862, and organized as Company C, 47th Mass. V. I. Shortly afterward they were ordered to New York and went into camp on Long Island. On Dec. 21, 1862, the regiment embarked on the steamer "Mississippi" for New Orleans, which it reached Jan. 1, 1863. About this time Captain Starkey resigned and Lieutenant Horton was chosen to succeed him by a large majority of the votes of the company. They were assigned to provost duty in and around New Orleans, and remained in service after their term of enlistment had expired, leaving for home via the Mississippi river Aug. 5, 1863. At Cairo they took cars for the East, and were enthusiastically met and feted at every stopping-place along the route. Arriving home, the whole town gave the soldiers a grand ovation. The following letters show the estimation in which the captain was held by his superior regimental officers:

Boston, Sept. 14th, 1863.

Capt. Everett S. Horton,
Co. C, 47th Mass Vol.

Dear Captain: It gives pleasure for me to certify to your good conduct and prompt obedience of orders, and I most cheerfully recommend you as one well qualified to command a company, being well posted in Casey's Tactics, with good natural as well as acquired abilities as a commander, and trust that the country may still have your services. I remain

Very truly yours,

LUCIUS B. MARSH, Colonel,
47th Mass. Vol.

Boston, Sept. 16th, 1863.

Captain: In parting from you permit me to express my appreciation of your services while under my command. Generals Banks and Emery have both authorized me to say the same for them in regard to the 47th regiment and its conduct while in the Department of the Gulf. May the choicest of Heaven's blessings ever rest upon you and those who have been under your command is the prayer of Your Ob't servant,

LUCIUS B. MARSH, Colonel,
47th Mass. Vol.

To E. S. Horton, Captain,
Company C, 47th Mass. Vol.

But the war was not ended. Governor Andrews called for more troops, and Captain Horton's patriotic spirit again responded. In October, 1863, he was commissioned second lieutenant and made recruiting officer for the 58th Massachusetts Volunteers. He opened an office in Attleboro, but was soon ordered into camp to take charge of recruits for the regiment, and was commissioned captain and mustered into service as commander of Company C, 58th Massachusetts 3d Veteran Volunteers, one of the four veteran regiments raised in the Commonwealth during the war. They remained in camp at Readville, Mass., until April 28, 1864, when they went to the front to participate in the battle of the Wilderness. Reaching the field May 6th, they were in the long and bloody march from the Wilderness to Petersburg, where almost every hour was marked with battle. After the battle of Cold Harbor, Lieut.-Col. J. C. Whitton, commanding the regiment, recommended Captain Horton for promotion, and he was commissioned and mustered in as major. The regimental commander was wounded in the charge June 3d, and the command devolved upon Major Horton from that time until Sept. 30, 1864, when he was taken prisoner while leading his regiment in action a few miles south of Petersburg. He reached Richmond and Libby Prison Oct. 3d, and was successively in Libby, Salisbury and Danville, where he was selected as "hostage" and sent back to Libby Jan. 8, 1865. He remained in that terrible confinement until Feb. 22d, when, with a number of others, he was paroled. Afterward, in describing his feelings, when once more under American colors, he said: "I can never forget that day—never, never, never! No one can who has not experienced the same sensations and thoughts that came in throngs in seeing and knowing that once more I was under the Star-Spangled Banner. Under their influence I wrote this letter to my family from the deck of the flag-of-truce boat where each of us was handed a sheet of paper and envelope—my family had not heard from me for five months, and the newspapers had reported me dead: 'On board God's flag-of-truce boat, James River, Feb. 22, 1865. Dear Wife,—Once more in the land of liberty. Once more in the land where the spirit of the Lord dwelleth. Out of the jaws of death, out of the gates of Hell. Well. Love to all. Everett.'"

Major Horton was granted a furlough of thirty days, and was soon exchanged; he left Attleboro to rejoin his regiment on the day that Petersburg was captured, was ordered to Washington, and there mustered out of service in July, 1865. On June 12, 1865, he was detailed as Division Inspector, 2d Division, 9th Army Corps, by command of Brevet-Maj. General Wilcox and John D. Bartollette, Assistant Adjutant-General. The following letter speaks for itself :

Headquarters 1st Brigade, 2d Division, 9th Army Corps, Near Alexandria, Va.

July 13, 1865.

This is to certify that Major E. S. Horton commanded his regiment (58th Mass. V. I.) in all the battles and on all occasions from June 3d to the engagement of Peeble's Farm, Sept. 30th, 1864, when he was captured by the enemy.

Dear Major: It is with pleasure I extend to you my high appreciation for the very efficient and successful manner (in) which you on all occasions commanded your regiment, and the promptness and cheerfulness with which you have performed your every duty whilst under my command. Wishing you success, I remain,

Very truly yours,
JNO. C. CURTIN, Br't. Brig. General.

During the war Major Horton had received seven commissions and was mustered into service on six of them. He was a soldier of unquestioned gallantry and bravery, doing all his duty with unflinching courage, and winning the esteem and confidence of his comrades. As an officer he was strict in discipline, universally popular, and careful of the comfort of his men. During the latter part of his service he was detailed as inspector of the 2d Division, 9th Army Corps, and served on the staff of Generals Potter and Griffin.

Returning from the war Major Horton was employed as manager for Daniels & Cornell, of Providence, R. I., proprietors of the largest wholesale grocery house in the State. He continued in that capacity until after the death of his brother, Edwin J., when he succeeded to the latter's interest in the manufacturing establishment of Horton, Angell & Co., at Attleboro. This concern was organized in 1870, by Edwin J. and Gideon M. Horton and Benjamin J. Angell, under its present firm name, and it is now one of the largest and most important in the country for the manufacture of gold-plated goods, consisting of men's jewelry, ladies' sets, etc. The product is all strictly first quality, of rolled gold plate, and finds a market in every part of this continent and in many European countries. Mr. Angell and Gideon M. Horton died in 1887, and since then Major Horton has been the senior partner; his associates are Thomas S. Carpenter, C. J. McCauley, and others.

Major Horton has long been one of Attleboro's most public spirited and enterprising citizens. In politics he is an earnest Republican. He served in the Massachusetts Legislature—House, 1891-92, and Senate, 1893. He has been Edwin J. Horton.

Edwin J. Herkin - chairman of the board of selectmen of Attleboro several times, commissioner of the Attleboro Sinking Fund for many years, and president of the board of trustees of the Attleboro Public Library since its organization, having been one of the principal founders. He was long a trustee and the secretary, and is now president, of the Richardson School Fund, and was one of the organizers in 1876 of the Attleboro Savings and Loan Association, which he has served continually as a director, and of which he is now president. He was also a vice-president of the Jewelers' Board of Trade, whose headquarters are in Providence, R. I., for several years, until his resignation in 1904 because of poor health. Since the war he has taken an active interest in G. A. R. matters, becoming a charter member of William A. Streeter Post, No. 145, of Attleboro, of which he has several times been commander, serving also as commander of the Bristol County Association of the G. A. R. for two years. He is a member of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He has been a member of the Congregational Church for many years. He is a leader in town affairs, a patriotic and progressive citizen, a strong friend, and universally respected and esteemed. He is a thirty-second degree Mason.

Major Horton owns one of the finest and largest collections of curios and antique relics in New England in the possession of an individual. He began accumulating objects of interest when only a boy of eight years, and has spent considerable time and money in this pursuit. He not only has many mementoes of his own interesting and eventful career, but numerous articles of value as representing the various periods of Colonial history, many of his specimens being extremely rare and valuable. His interest in such matters was fully demonstrated when the present edifice of the Second Congregational Church in Attleboro was constructed. The plan of bringing from Attleboro, England, a stone from the old church there, to be placed in the vestibule of the new house of worship was original with him and carried out at his private expense.

On June 12, 1861, Major Horton was married to Mary Ann, only daughter of Jesse R. and Mary Carpenter, of Attleboro. She died June 12, 1871, leaving one child, Mary Edith, born June 22, 1862, now the wife of Thomas D. Gardiner, of near Pasadena, Cal., and the mother of two children, Ethel Horton and Everett Southworth. Major Horton married (second) Sept. 24, 1873, Eliza Dutton Freemont, of Amesbury, Mass., and they have had two children: Gertrude E., born May 29, 1876; and Addie D., who died in infancy.

Major Horton has spent much time in travel, and with his experience in the Civil war he has gathered a vast fund of information and is an engaging conversationalist, with kindly wit. He has also devoted some attention to genealogical research, and is one of the best posted members of the Horton family along that line. He has a wide acquaintance, and no man is more deservedly popular.

(VI) EDWIN JACKSON HORTON, second son of Gideon Martin and Mary (Smith) Horton, was born Nov. 10, 1837, in Attleboro. Of his boyhood and youth there is little to be said. He attended the public schools of the town, receiving no further advantages in the way of instruction, but he possessed an active mind—one bent on inquiry—and realizing the benefits of a good education he determined to do the best he could in that direction for himself. With him a determination was also an accomplishment, and he improved every opportunity for reading, study and observation and "became in reality a thoroughly informed man." On Aug. 17, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, 40th Mass. V. I., and for three years was a good soldier. He served as corporal, then color-bearer, and also as sergeant, during the last year of the war serving as sergeant in the commissary department. His honorable discharge bears date of June 17, 1865. With the exception of this time he spent his entire life in his native village. A few years after the war the well-known firm of Horton, Angell & Co., was organized and started in manufacturing. Of this firm Mr. Horton was the senior member—may properly be called its originator—and to him, no doubt, its marked success and continued prosperity were in a large measure due. He was a member of many organizations and at various times held important offices in them. He was deeply interested in the Young Men's Christian Association, and was its president at the time of his death; he was especially attached to the G. A. R. and to his own Post, faithful in the discharge of its duties, earnest in labors for its well-being, and a loved member of Ezekiel Bates Lodge of the A. F. & A. M., and of the Royal Arcanum; at the time of his death he was noble grand of Orient Lodge, I. O. O. F. He was a member of the Second Congregational Church, thoroughly interested in its welfare and foremost in its benevolent enterprises.

Mr. Horton in 1879 represented the town in the Legislature, and served as a member of the committee on Health. In all municipal affairs he was an active participant, ever urging forward works of progress and reform. His principles were known of men, and he was firm in his adherence to them. Having made up his mind to the right of a position or course of action, he boldly advocated the one and unswervingly followed the other. Such a man must make his mark in his community, but he inevitably gains, at least, political enemies, as was the case with Mr. Horton, though the fact that he was elected to one of the highest offices in the power of his fellow-citizens to bestow—an election “won in one of the severest political contests ever recorded for this town”—is undeniable proof that he possessed the respect and confidence of a majority.

Mr. Horton was a passenger from New York, and was drowned in that awful disaster which followed the collision of the sound steamers “Narragansett” and “Stonington,” on June 11, 1880. His funeral occurred on June 15th. During the time of the service there was a general suspension of business, all shops and stores being closed; flags were displayed at half-mast, buildings were draped in black; and crowds far beyond the capacity of the home to accommodate were gathered together. Rarely, if ever, has there been seen a more saddened assemblage, or more sincere and widespread mourning. The then pastor of the church, Rev. W. A. Spaulding, and two former pastors, the Revs. F. N. Peloubet and Samuel Bell, were the officiating clergymen. All the orders of which Mr. Horton was a member were in attendance, and there were delegations from similar orders in other parts of the town and from other places, and the offerings of flowers were varied and most beautiful. The sympathy was heartfelt and the sorrow sincere for this untimely death. Many friends followed the funeral procession to Woodlawn cemetery, where kind hands had gone before and spread a fair covering of evergreens and roses over the unsightly surroundings of the open grave. On Memorial Day, just previous to his death, Mr. Horton had expressed a wish to be buried by the G. A. R. This wish was remembered, and he was lowered to his last resting-place by the hands of his former comrades-in-arms, and received the burial rites of their order. A fitting summary of his life and character may be found in the following extracts from the written words of various friends:

“That man is an exception who so lives that at his death all classes in the community where he was born and has spent all his days will sincerely mourn his departure and pay tribute to his memory in unfeigned sympathy. That life which can and does command universal respect must, indeed, have much of merit in it. That character which, while from positiveness makes enemies, can stand squarely before all their attacks, has more than ordinary strength. Such a man was Edwin J. Horton; such a life he lived, and such a character was his. He was an uncommon man in many ways, as a business man with wonderful fertility of resource and skill of execution, as a deeply conscientious and highly religious nature, and a man of unbounded charity. It seems almost unaccountable that just in the prime of life, when the activities of his being were accomplishing so much good, the chapter of his life should close so sadly and abruptly, leaving many to mourn his untimely death, but to the question “Why?” comes no answer. He grew from boyhood to manhood and entered business with a determination to succeed, and he did succeed. He was always foremost in matters of public enterprise, and ready to assist in private undertakings where help was needed. No one ever went to him for advice or assistance and was turned away without a hearing. If he could give the one, and furnish the other, both were cheerfully granted. It may safely be recorded that no business man of Attleboro bestowed more of his material substance for the support of public institutions, and for the friendly succor of individuals, than Mr. Horton. Perhaps the society that will most miss his aid and counsel is the Young Men’s Christian Association, of which he was president during the last year of his life, and which looked to him for the larger portion of the money needed for its support. The same liberality was manifested in his gifts to the church, the Grand Army of the Republic, and other organizations of which he was a member. He was emphatically a self-made man. He arrived at a position of wealth and influence by dint of indomitable energy and perseverance in the short space of ten years. Few men have prospered so rapidly, and few men have shared their prosperity so freely and unstintedly with the community in which they lived.”

This work of charity and liberality has by no means ceased, but is nobly and loyally carried on by his widow and son, though often so quietly as to be known only to those who were personally benefited.

“No member of the House of Representatives shared more largely in the esteem and confidence of the other members of that body than Mr. Horton; and no speaker was listened to with closer attention.”

“He had his failings, and none knew them better than his friends, but his virtues far outweighed them, and endeared him to the hearts of most with whom he came in contact.”

His death occurred in an awful tragedy, and it left a wide gap in the ranks of the active and worthy citizens of Attleboro, a vacant place “hard to fill.”

Mr. Horton was married, May 8, 1862, to Miss Rhoda Adelaide Lee, and two children were born to them: Edwin Jackson, Jr., born Jan. 23, 1869, who died Dec. 22, 1878; and Raymond Martin, born Aug. 28, 1875. Mr. Horton spared neither time nor money to make his home attractive and to the influences emanating from that home the position he attained in the community was in no small measure due.

James J. Hartman

(VI) GIDEON M. HORTON, the third son of Gideon M. and Mary (Smith) Horton, was born Sept. 26, 1839. Like his brothers he attended the town schools, which were his only means of instruction, and like the two older ones he entered the army, serving in the 10th Rhode Island Battery. He was one of the original members of the firm of Horton, Angell & Co., and became a prosperous business man. He manifested his public spirit by erecting, at the cost of $36,000, the business block bearing his name, which added greatly to the attractive appearance of Attleboro. A few years before his death his health began to fail, and he took extended journeys in all directions, seeking in the winter seasons the climate of such places as Mexico, California and the Sandwich Islands, in preference to the rigors of the climate of New England. His health continued to fail and he was ordered to leave New England, but delays from one cause or another occurred, and at last, when ready for the necessary journey, it was too late to expect any lengthy or decided improvement. Mr. Horton himself was aware of this, but, realizing it is every one's duty to live as long as he possibly can, he made all the necessary preparations, arranged his business affairs, and bravely started to meet the death he felt soon awaited him, but might be a little longer delayed in a milder climate. The man who cheerfully speaks parting words with his dearest friends, and, looking for the last time on familiar scenes and loved faces, turns from them hopeless, yet with a smile, to seek the almost impossible lengthening of his life, has in him something of the heroic, and this Mr. Horton did. He had attained success at middle life; he had made for himself a beautiful home, and he could rightly look forward to many years of enjoyment in it, and to years of usefulness in his community, in the sharing, as he did generously, of the results of his industry with those about him. To give up such hopes requires courage, and he possessed it, for he fought out the fight, and could say to his friends calmly, even cheerfully, in view of the end, that it was well. He went to San Antonio, Texas, and there his death occurred Dec. 16, 1886. His remains were brought to Attleboro, and were laid away 'mid grief and sincere mourning.

Mr. Horton was highly esteemed as a public-spirited and useful man, and he possessed many friends. His nature was retiring, and he was entirely without ambition for public preferment, but always contributed liberally in whatever way he could in the advancement of both his community and town. He was generous in the societies to which he belonged, and in supplying the wants of the needy around him. Probably no man in town did more quiet unseen deeds of real charity than he. One writes thus: "It is easy to say the familiar words, that it is hard to find a man that will be more missed when departed, but in the case of Gideon M. Horton the words will have a literal application. It is hard to speak too strongly of Mr. Horton's excellence, or of the estimation in which he was held by all who knew him. He made all feel as though he was interested in them, and he seemed to be eager for an opportunity to help. A good and useful man is gone. It will be a long time before the town will have a better man, or a better citizen."

On Nov. 29, 1865, Mr. Horton married Helen F. White, of Attleboro, who died in that town Aug. 28, 1885. Two children were born of this union: Mary Helen, born March 21, 1869, married Samuel H. Smith; Mabel Josephine, born Aug. 22, 1871, married Dr. Jose Ourdan, of Providence, and died Feb. 26, 1895.

Gideon M. Horton was a member of Bristol Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Attleboro Council, R. & S. M.; and Bristol Commandery, Knights Templar. He was also a member of Orient Lodge, I. O. O. F., its first noble grand, and a member of Naomi Encampment of Taunton; and he also belonged to William A. Streeter Post, G. A. R. He was a trustee of the Farmers and Mechanics Association, and an active and efficient member, a director of the First National Bank, and belonged to the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

(VI) JAMES JACKSON HORTON, youngest son of Gideon Martin and Mary (Smith) Horton, was born Oct. 19, 1841, in Providence, during a temporary residence of his father in that city. He was about one year old when his parents returned to Attleboro. Like his brothers he received his education in Attleboro, being a pupil of Messrs. Bailey and Allen, well known instructors of that time. After leaving school he was employed for a year in his father's store and working on the farm, but for some time subsequent he was unable to engage in work of any kind, owing to the failure of his health. However, his courage and determination to conquer his feebleness and the disease that attacked him were remarkable in the face of the universal prediction of failure. Upon recovery in a measure Mr. Horton went to Providence, and for a time was employed as a bookkeeper with a mercantile concern. He was too energetic and independent to work for others, and thought the insurance business would be a good line for him to enter, as it would afford him considerable outdoor work, which his health needed. He embarked in that line in the spring of 1873, in Attleboro, and continued in it for a few years, when he became a member of the firm of Short, Nerney & Co., the other members being Mace B. Short and Peter Nerney. He showed good qualities for a salesman, and was head salesman for the concern until 1890. The firm made chains and continued in that line until 1897, when they engaged in the manufacture of optical goods, and the name was changed to the Bay State Optical Company. Mr. Horton attended to the office work, and did the buying and selling, his partners giving their attention to the mechanical department. Mr. Horton was one of the first members of the Jewelers Board of Trade of Providence, and was for many years a member of the board of directors. He was also a director of the First National Bank of Attleboro. His secret society affiliations were few. He was a member of Orient Lodge of Odd Fellows, Attleboro, and Howard Encampment, at North Attleboro, and the local council of the Royal Arcanum.

As before stated, from his early boyhood Mr. Horton was handicapped by ill-health. His trouble was largely of a pulmonary nature. Where other men who were afflicted would have given up the struggle he persevered, and made for himself a name highly respected in the trade and in the social world. He was prominent in the affairs of the Murray Universalist Church, being one of the original members of the society and a generous contributor in a financial way. He was naturally of a retiring disposition, and did not desire prominence. Mr. Horton was a very affable and courteous man, and was a most agreeable social companion and friend. Among the trade he had an excellent reputation for integrity and reliability in business affairs. Mr. Horton died suddenly July 22, 1900, and was buried in Attleboro. His death was a distinct loss to the city.

On Jan. 12, 1869, Mr. Horton was united in marriage with Miss Emily Howland Clark, a native of Middleboro, Mass., daughter of Samuel W. Clark, and sister of the late Maj. Herbert A. Clark.

It was somewhat singular that these four brothers—the entire family—should all have settled for life in their native town, all finally engaged in the same business and all attained such success. It is also singular that all made homes for themselves on the old homestead tract, within a "stone's throw" of the old homestead and of each other. The site of this homestead was the home of James Horton, but now the residence of Raymond M. Horton, the old house having been moved away, but not destroyed. It is still kept and well cared for, valued as a relic of the past, and especially prized for its many personal associations.

(VII) RAYMOND MARTIN HORTON, son of Edwin J. and Rhoda Adelaide Horton, was born Aug. 28, 1875, in Attleboro, and attended the public schools of his native town and Mowry and Goff's English and Classical School at Providence. He entered Amherst College in 1894, but was compelled to give up his studies soon after entering, owing to illness. After a period spent in regaining his health he became treasurer and secretary of the Attleboro Steam and Electric Company, which position he has since held. In 1902 he purchased an interest in the firm of W. E. Richards & Co., manufacturers of gold brooches and scarf pins, and in January, 1905, he purchased the interest of his partner, being now sole owner of that thriving establishment. Mr. Horton is treasurer of the Sun Publishing Company; director of the First National Bank at Attleboro; and director of the Attleboro Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Fraternally he is a member of Ezekiel Bates Lodge, A. F. & A. M., King Hiram Chapter, R. A. M., Attleboro Council, R. & S. M., and Bristol Commandery, at North Attleboro. He is a member of the Second Congregational Church, where he is serving on the standing committee.

On March 27, 1901, Mr. Horton was united in marriage, in Pawtucket, to Miss Una Clarissa McGregor, a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, daughter of the late Rev. Alexander McGregor, who was pastor of the Pawtucket Congregational Church, at the time of his death.

Mr. Horton is one of the best known and a most successful representative of the younger class of business men of Attleboro. He early reached a position of influence, and he is an excellent representative of the honored name he bears, a worthy son of a distinguished father.

ANTHONY. The Anthony is one of the old and conspicuous families of Rhode Island, prominent in the Colonial and Commonwealth annals. Hon. John Anthony, the emigrant from England, served in various public capacities, representing Portsmouth, R. I., in the Colonial Assembly, and his son, Hon. Abraham Anthony, was many times honored with a seat in the General Court, and was at one time Speaker of the House of Deputies. Many of the name who later chose Providence as their field of action acquitted themselves in keeping with the records of their forefathers. The State is proud of her distinguished sons, the late Hon. Henry B. Anthony, journalist and statesman, and the late Hezekiah Anthony, of Providence, merchant and banker, who held a creditable place in that city's business life for over fifty years.

This article, however, is to treat of the Middletown branch of the old Portsmouth family, whose illustrious sons have held prominent positions in their various communities, other branches being referred to elsewhere in this work. To the Middletown branch belongs the Hon. James Anthony, who has most intelligently represented his town in the State Assembly and efficiently served his county as sheriff; and Hon. Elijah Anthony, one of the substantial citizens of Jamestown, R. I. The genealogy following is chronological, generations from the settler being designated by Roman numerals.

(I) John Anthony, born in 1607, a resident of the village of Hampstead, near London, England, came to New England in the bark "Hercules," in 1634. He is of record in 1640 in Portsmouth, R. I., and was made a freeman in 1640. He became a corporal in a military company and had land assigned to him at the "Wading River" in 1644. He had authority granted him May 25, 1655, to keep a house of entertainment in Portsmouth. He was commissioner in 1661, and deputy in 1666-72. Both he and his wife, whose maiden name was Susanna Potter, died in 1675. Their children were: John, born in 1642; Susanna; Elizabeth; Joseph; and Abraham.

(II) Abraham Anthony, son of John, married Dec. 26, 1671, Alice Wodell, born Feb. 10, 1650, daughter of William and Mary Wodell, and they were residents of Portsmouth, R. I., when he was made a freeman in 1672. He was deputy in 1703, 1704, 1705, 1707, 1708, 1709, 1710 and 1711, and was Speaker of the House of Deputies in 1709-10. He died Oct. 10, 1727, and his widow passed away in 1734. Their children were: John, born Nov. 7, 1672; Susanna, Aug. 29, 1674; Mary, Aug. 29, 1674; William, Oct. 31, 1675; Susanna, Oct. 14, 1677; Mary, Jan. 2, 1680; Abraham, April 21, 1682; Thomas, June 30, 1684; Alice, Jan. 22, 1686; James, Jan. 22, 1686; Almy, Jan. 30, 1688; Isaac, April 10, 1690; and Jacob, Nov. 15, 1693.

(III) William Anthony, son of Abraham, born Oct. 31, 1675, married March 14, 1694, Mary Coggeshall, daughter of John Coggeshall, and their children were: William, born May 14, 1695; Abraham, Sept. 26, 1696; Elizabeth, May 2, 1698; Mary, Dec. 8, 1699; John, Sept. 12, 1702; Alice, May 22, 1705; Anne, March 17, 1707; John (2), Nov. 16, 1708; Amey, Nov. 16, 1708; William (2), Oct. 26, 1709; James, Nov. 9, 1712; Job, April 10, 1714; Benjamin, June 10, 1716; and Daniel, May 19, 1720.

(IV) Abraham Anthony (2), son of William, born Sept. 26, 1696, married in Swansea, Mass., Feb. 7, 1716-17, Elizabeth Gray, and their children, the first nine born in Swansea and the others in Portsmouth, were: Abraham, born Dec. 9, 1717; Mary, Feb. 9, 1718-19; Edward, May 3, 1720 (died Feb. 6, 1821); Thomas, Oct. 19, 1721; Philip, April 11, 1723 (died Sept. 8, 1777); Elizabeth, April 24, 1725; Isaac, March 7, 1727; Sarah, April 7, 1730; Elisha, Dec. 15, 1732; Jonathan, Jan. 12, 1734; Peleg, Sept. 30, 1735; and Daniel, Sept. 1, 1738.

(V) Jonathan Anthony, son of Abraham (2), born Jan. 12, 1734, married, Nov. 10, 1757, Elizabeth Gould, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Gould, and they were residents of Middletown, R. I. He died at forty-one years of age, and his widow Elizabeth lived to be seventy-seven, dying in Middletown Dec. 13, 1812. Their children were: Mary, born Aug. 19, 1758; Gould, Sept. 30, 1759; Elizabeth, July 16, 1762; Elijah, Oct. 19, 1767; and Jonathan, March 29, 1769.

(VI) Elijah Anthony, son of Jonathan and Elizabeth, born Oct. 19, 1767, married, Sept. 4, 1793, Lois Sisson, of Middletown, who was born in 1772, daughter of Joseph and Ruth Sisson. He was engaged in farming in Middletown, where he died Dec. 3, 1842. Their children were: Joseph, born June 29, 1794, died from poisoning aged three years; George, born Oct. 31, 1796; Joseph (2), born Dec. 23, 1798, was killed by falling on a pitchfork when he was aged forty-two years; and Hannah, born Feb. 15, 1802, died unmarried, Nov. 9, 1878.

(VII) George Anthony, son of Elijah and Lois, born Oct. 31, 1796, married, May 13, 1829, Margaret Hathaway, daughter of George and Susanna Hathaway, and they were residents of Middletown. He died April 9, 1888, and she passed away Oct. 29, 1885, aged seventy-seven years. Their children of Middletown record were: George Hathaway, born May 1, 1830, died unmarried July 28, 1854; Joseph Sisson, born March 11, 1833, who now resides on the homestead engaged in farming, married (first) Josephine Gould, and (second) Sarah Shove, of Fall River; Elijah, born May 28, 1835, is mentioned below; Rachel, born Nov. 15, 1837, died unmarried Oct. 27, 1900; James, born Nov. 6, 1840, is mentioned below; William, born April 6, 1843, died in infancy; and Hannah Green, born Dec. 10, 1844, died aged thirteen years. George Anthony, the father, was a farmer of thrift and industry. In 1829 he moved to the farm where all the rest of his life was passed. He was a man of rugged health, and never but once in his long life of ninety-one years had he required the aid of a physician, and that was when at the age of seventy-eight he suffered an attack of fever. He was active in the town's affairs, and served as a member of the town council, of which he was president. In early life he was a Whig, and later became a Republican. For over fifteen years he was an elder in the Friends Church. In appearance he was fine looking, being five feet ten inches in height, and his genial disposition made him many friends.

(VIII) JAMES ANTHONY, son of George and Margaret, born Nov. 6, 1840, in Middletown, R. I., married Feb. 14, 1869, Charlotte S. Coggeshall, and two children blessed their union: Arthur R., who conducts a grist mill in Middletown, married Sue C. Oxx, of Newport, and has two daughters, Louise H. and Charlotte H.; and Alfred C., a clerk in the employ of the Newport Paper & Grocery Company, married Flora Sisson, of Portsmouth, and has two children: George S. and Mabel C.

James Anthony was reared on a farm, attending in boyhood the neighborhood schools and in season assisting his father with the farm work. His tastes and inclinations were in keeping with his early labors and as the years passed he continued farming as an occupation, and in that calling kept abreast of the times and succeeded in his undertakings, continuing in same until the death of his father.

Well fitted for public business and successful in his own affairs Mr. Anthony has in different ways been called upon by his fellow townsmen to look after, in a measure, the public affairs of his town. He has served on the school committee, and also in the town council. He has also represented his town in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and has served his county ably and efficiently as sheriff since 1890. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, to the principles of which he is a stanch adherent. Mr. Anthony attends Holy Cross Episcopal Church of Middletown, of which his wife is a member.

Mr. Anthony is one of the substantial and useful men of Newport county, bearing the esteem and respect and holding the confidence of a large acquaintance. He is a member of Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of Newport; of Aquidneck Grange, Patrons of Husbandry; of Weenat Shassit Tribe, No. 6, I. O. R. M.; and of the Red Men's Club of Newport.

(VIII) ELIJAH ANTHONY, son of George and Margaret, was born in Middletown, May 28, 1835, and received his educational training in the common schools of his native town, supplemented by a three terms' course at the Friends' School in Providence. Leaving school at the age of eighteen years, he then took up school teaching in Little Compton, Portsmouth and Jamestown, and was thus engaged for five winters. When married he set up farming in Portsmouth and Middletown, and stayed some three years, then removing to Jamestown in 1860, and there rented a farm. For several years he ran a farm of 160 acres. Since 1887 he has lived retired. Mr. Anthony has always been prominent in public affairs. He is an active worker in the Republican party, and has been a member of the town council for many years, in 1905 being its president. For about twenty years he was town treasurer, and he has served many years on the school committee, and as assessor of taxes, overseer of the poor and tax collector. In 1871-1872-1873 he represented his town in the State Assembly, and served on several very important committees.

On Dec. 20, 1855, Mr. Anthony was married to Harriet W. Almy, daughter of David Almy, of Portsmouth. She died in Jamestown April 25, 1894. On Dec. 6, 1899, he married (second) Mrs. Carrie R. (Gorton) Couch, of Ossining, N. Y., daughter of James I. and Jane M. (Sherman) Gorton, of Portsmouth, R. I. Mrs. Anthony is a member of the Baptist Church, which he also attends. Mr. Anthony's children, all born to his first marriage, were: (1) Louis W., born Dec. 9, 1856, in Portsmouth, is a carpenter, living in Jamestown. He married Maude Ledyard St. Clair, and has three children: Ledyard St. Clair, born May 19, 1894; Elijah, Feb. 25, 1897; and Marion, Jan. 13, 1903. (2) Hannah M., born Dec. 14, 1858, in Middletown, married Henry L. Smith, of Wickford, a marine engineer, and they now live in Providence. Their children are: Dalton and Wayland. (3) George D., born Oct. 23, 1860, is a carpenter by trade. On Jan. 4, 1888, he married Emma H. Cushman, of Dartmouth, Mass., and they have had children as follows: Alma, born May 19, 1890; Mildred, April 6, 1892; and Doris, Sept. 26, 1897. (4) Frederic, born Dec. 7, 1862, married Nov. 7, 1889, Sarah L. Anthony, daughter of Henry Anthony, and their children are: Kathryn, born Aug. 14, 1890; and Mariquita, May 14, 1892. (5) Abraham L., born April 3, 1865, died July 31, 1867. (6) Margaret, born June 28, 1867, in Jamestown, married May 2, 1887, Adolphus Clarke Knowles, of Jamestown, a carpenter in the marine service. Their children are: Ruth H., born Feb. 27, 1888; Foster S., Aug. 23, 1889; Kenneth H., March 29, 1891; Beulah A., July 20, 1892; and Harriet, April 17, 1897. (7) Elijah, Jr., born Jan. 30, 1873, died Feb. 18, 1873.

Mr. Anthony has found other interests than farming, and his good judgment has been of inestimable value in various corporations in which he has been interested. He has for several years been a member of the directorate of the New England Commercial Bank, and of the Arctic Ice Company at Newport. He is one of the substantial citizens of Jamestown, being held in the highest esteem by the entire community, and enjoys the respect of all who know him. Mrs. Anthony is a descendant of several of New England's earliest settled families, among them being the Sherman, Rogers and Gorton families.

ANTHONY. This name has been a conspicuous and prominent one in the New England States for the last two and one-half centuries. Many members of the family have held prominent positions in the business, social and political circles of their various communities. The first known of the family was one William Anthony, who was born in 1495, in Cologne, Germany. He had three sons, the youngest, Francis, being goldsmith and jeweler to Queen Elizabeth of England, and several of his descendants became noted physicians of Europe. The first of the name to come to America was:

(I) John Anthony (or Antonie, as he wrote it), who was born in 1607, became the founder of the name in New England, coming to America in the barque "Hercules," John Kiddey, master, April 16, 1634. He had, says Savage, previously resided in the beautiful village of Hampstead, near London. He married Susanna Potter. The first mention we find of John Anthony is in the Colonial records of Rhode Island, July 14, 1640, when he was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth, R. I., and soon after chosen corporal in a military company. On Sept. 14, 1644, his land was assigned to him at a place called "Wading River." On May 25, 1655, he was chosen by the General Court one of the two persons authorized by law to keep houses of entertainment in Portsmouth, and was also deputy and commissioner. He died July 28, 1675, aged sixty-eight years, and left five children: John, Joseph, Abraham, Susannah and Elizabeth.

(II) Abraham Anthony, son of John, married Dec. 26, 1671, Alice Wodell, born Feb. 10, 1650, daughter of William and Mary Wodell, and they were residents of Portsmouth, R. I., where he was made a freeman in 1672. He was deputy from 1703 to 1711, and was speaker of the House of Deputies in 1709 and 1710. He died Oct. 10, 1727, and his widow passed away in 1734. Their children were: John; Susanna; Mary; William; Susanna (2); Abraham; Thomas; Alice; James; Almy; Isaac, and Jacob.

(III) William Anthony, son of Abraham, was born Oct. 31, 1675, and married March 14, 1694, Mary Coggeshall, daughter of John Coggeshall. They were residents of Portsmouth, where their son, Abraham, was born.

(IV) Abraham Anthony, son of William, was born Sept. 26, 1696, and married in Swansea, Mass., Feb. 7, 1716-17, Elizabeth Gray. Their children, the first nine born in Swansea, and the others in Portsmouth, were: Abraham, born Dec. 9, 1717; Mary, Feb. 9, 1719; Edward, born May 3, 1720 (died Feb. 6, 1821); Thomas, Oct. 19, 1721; Philip, April 11, 1723 (died Sept. 8, 1777); Elizabeth, April 24, 1725; Isaac, March 7, 1727; Sarah, April 7, 1730; Elisha, Dec. 15, 1732; Jonathan, Jan. 12, 1734; Peleg, Sept. 30, 1735; and Daniel, Sept. 1, 1738.

(V) Peleg Anthony, son of Abraham, born Sept. 30, 1735, married Mercy Coggeshall, born Dec. 17, 1735, daughter of James Coggeshall. She died in December, 1803, long surviving her husband, who passed away Oct. 4, 1778. Their children were: Gideon, born July 28, 1758, who died Nov. 6, 1763; Edward, born Dec. 19, 1759; James, born Jan. 6, 1763; Giles, born Oct. 28, 1764, who died Jan. 14, 1785; Gideon (2), born Sept. 9, 1766, who died Aug. 5, 1789; Alice, born Jan. 22, 1770, who died Sept. 9, 1771; Coggeshall, born Oct. 23, 1774, who died Sept. 12, 1778; Alice (2), born May 9, 1776; and Phebe, born Feb. 28, 1778.

(VI) James Anthony, son of Peleg, was born Jan. 6, 1763, and married Dec. 23, 1790, Polly Mumford, born Sept. 13, 1767. He died Sept. 27, 1826, as a result of injuries received from falling from his horse, and his wife died April 18, 1844, aged seventy-six years. Their children were: Peleg Coggeshall, born Dec. 22, 1791; Sally Remington, Jan. 24, 1795 (died Dec. 11, 1875); James William, Sept. 23, 1798; Mary Mumford, Jan. 4, 1803 (died Nov. 10, 1869); Alice, Dec. 5, 1805.

(VII) Peleg Coggeshall Anthony, son of James, was born Dec. 22, 1791, in South Kingstown, R. I., and died Jan. 14, 1882, in his ninety-first year. He was married in Newport, March 26, 1815, to Abby Green Tillinghast, who was born Sept. 4, 1792, and who died in Newport, Sept. 1, 1863, in her seventy-first year. Peleg C. Anthony removed to Newport about 1824, and engaged in farming, in which occupation he continued the remainder of his life. His children, all born at South Kingstown, R. I., were: Alice Maria, born May 17, 1817; John Tillinghast, born May 3, 1819; and Benjamin Mumford, born Aug. 27, 1821.

(VIII) Benjamin Mumford Anthony, son of Peleg Coggeshall, was born in South Kingstown, R. I., Aug. 27, 1821, and died in Newport, Feb. 20, 1892. When ten years of age he came to Portsmouth with his father, then removed to Middletown, and thence to Newport, where he engaged in farming and teaming, becoming very successful. He was a genial, jovial man, and possessed many friends. He was a staunch Republican, but although receiving many offers of political preferment would never accept public office. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Newport.

Mr. Anthony was married Sept. 12, 1843, to Mary Elizabeth Peckham, who was born Sept. 24, 1823, and died Dec. 25, 1888. She was a daughter of Joshua and Eliza Peckham, of Middletown. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony were: Abraham Tilley, born Aug. 14, 1845; Joseph Smith, born April 1, 1847; Benjamin Mumford, born Nov. 4, 1848, who died Aug. 20, 1850; Benjamin Mumford (2), born Dec. 9, 1850, who died Sept. 5, 1871; William Clarke, born May 8, 1852, who died Dec. 16, 1899; Charles Greene, born Jan. 17, 1854; John Rogers, born Aug. 28, 1855, who died Aug. 28, 1871; Eliza Abby, born June 15, 1857, who married Nov. 24, 1875, T. Fred Kaull, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; James Edward, born March 17, 1859; Mary Alice, born Feb. 24, 1861, who married Jesse E. Peckham.

of Newport, R. I., a complete sketch of whom will be found in another part of this work; Henry Tillinghast, born June 8, 1863, who died when two months old, Aug. 18, 1863; and Annie Tillinghast, born Sept. 17, 1865, who died Aug. 21, 1867.

(IX) ABRAHAM TILLEY ANTHONY, the eldest son of the late Benjamin Mumford and Mary Elizabeth (Peckham) Anthony, was born in Newport, R. I., Aug. 14, 1845, and acquired his educational training in the common schools of his native city, which he attended until his seventeenth year. After leaving school he took up his share of work on the home farm with his father, continuing thus until the latter's death, which occurred in 1892, since which time he has successfully conducted the same business. He cultivates about seventy-five acres of land, and is also extensively engaged in the dairy business, keeping from fifteen to twenty cows, the product of which he supplies to Newport customers. In his business enterprises Mr. Anthony has met with well-deserved success, won through his good management and faithful attention to business.

Mr. Anthony, in his political views, is a stalwart adherent to the principles of the Republican party, but has never found time to hold public office. He and his family attend the Thames Street Methodist Episcopal Church, to which they give their liberal support. Mr. Anthony was married, Nov. 21, 1872, to Marion Rebecca Ball, of New Shoreham, R. I., daughter of William Pitt and Rebecca Ball. Mrs. Anthony died Jan. 10, 1908, aged sixty-one years. One son came to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony, Benjamin Mumford, who was born Sept. 13, 1873, and married Lillie Parmenter, daughter of Jeremiah Parmenter, of Newport. They have had two children, Marian, who died when eleven months old, and Harry Earle Anthony. Benjamin M. Anthony is associated with his father in business.

Mr. Anthony is a good citizen, a kindly neighbor, and enjoys the respect of the community in which he was born and in which his life has been spent.

(IX) JOSEPH SMITH ANTHONY, the second son of Benjamin Mumford and Mary Elizabeth (Peckham) Anthony, was born in Newport, April 1, 1847, and was educated in the schools of his locality, which he attended winters, working on the farm during the summers as was the custom of the farmers' sons at that time. Thus he continued until nineteen years of age, and after leaving school remained with his father until 1882, when he engaged in business for himself, taking up the business of teaming and general dealing in gravel, sand, stone, etc., as a general jobber in the same. In these business enterprises he has met with unqualified success.

He is half owner of the scow "Mascot," fifty-five tons burden, which plies the waters of Narragansett bay in connection with Mr. Anthony's business. As has been characteristic of the family, Mr. Anthony is a staunch Republican, but has never sought public office. He and his family attend the First Baptist Church of Newport.

Mr. Anthony is one of Newport's successful and enterprising business men, whose success has been due to his untiring energy and thrift.

Joseph Smith Anthony was married Jan. 15, 1871, to Abbie Cook Hudson, daughter of John and Clarissa (Greene) Hudson, of Newport, and they have become the parents of children as follows: Benjamin and Clara Elizabeth, who both died in infancy; Joseph S., Jr., who married Alice Hunnewell, and is a painter and sign writer by trade; and Louisa Gray, who married John McDougal, of Newport.

(IX) WILLIAM CLARKE ANTHONY, the fifth son of the late Benjamin Mumford and Mary Elizabeth (Peckham) Anthony, was born in Newport, R. I., May 8, 1852, and like the farmers' boys of his day received his educational training in the schools of his native city. After leaving school he continued at home and was employed in the work about the farm, thus continuing until his marriage, in 1876, when he engaged in business on his own account, embarking in general teaming and hacking, which he carried on until his death. He was an industrious man, and as a consequence accumulated a competence. Although not a member of any church Mr. Anthony affiliated with the First Baptist Church of Newport, and in political views he was a staunch Republican, though he never cared for nor sought public office.

On Aug. 25, 1876, Mr. Anthony was united in marriage to Mary Jane Sullivan, of Newport, who passed away Aug. 25, 1891. To this union were born seven children, as follows: Ella May, who is unmarried, resides at home; Mary Elizabeth married John B. Gibson, of Newport, and they have one son, Howard Anthony Gibson; William Clarke, Jr., who is conducting the teaming business established by his father, married Helen P. Palmer, of Newport; Annie Pauline, died at the age of twenty-two years; Grace Tillinghast and Howard Joseph are both at home; John Rogers, died when seventeen months old.

Mr. Anthony passed away in Newport Dec. 16, 1899, after an illness extending over a period of about a year, respected by all who knew him.

(IX) CHARLES GREENE ANTHONY, the sixth son of the late Benjamin Mumford and Mary Elizabeth (Peckham) Anthony, was born Jan. 17, 1854, in Newport. After attending the common schools of his native city he took a business course at Bryant & Stratton's Business

Joseph S. Anthony

Abraham L. Anthony

College, Providence, from which he was graduated in 1876. After completing his early educational training he took up the duties which devolved upon him on the home farm, and there remained until January, 1884, when he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, T. Fred Kaull, under the style of Kaull & Anthony, engaging in the grocery and market business. This firm continued successfully in business until Oct. 1, 1905, when, on account of ill health, Mr. Anthony sold his interests in the firm to Mr. Kaull, who has since conducted the business alone. After retiring from this business in Newport Mr. Anthony went to Berkeley, town of Cumberland, R. I., where he had erected a fine new residence, and here he has since been extensively engaged in the poultry business, making a specialty of raising the Rhode Island Red breed. Mr. Anthony is a staunch Republican, but has taken little or no interest in public life, preferring to give his time and attention to his business and his home. He attended the Thames Street Episcopal Church of Newport, his wife being a member of Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Newport.

On Oct. 15, 1884, Mr. Anthony married Frances Mary Hardwick, daughter of the late George Hardwick and his wife Martha (Stoakes) Hardwick. To Mr. and Mrs. Anthony one daughter has been born, Miss Ethel M., who resides at home with her parents. Mr. Anthony is one of Rhode Island's representative citizens. He is very well known throughout the community in which he resides, and is esteemed and respected by all.

(IX) JAMES EDWARD ANTHONY, the ninth child of the late Benjamin Mumford and Mary Elizabeth (Peckham) Anthony, was born in Newport, March 17, 1859, and received his education in the public schools of that place, attending the same until his seventeenth year. After leaving school he remained at home and did his share of the work on the home place, continuing there until the death of his father, in 1892, at which time he entered into business on his own account. He is now successfully engaged in farming and dairying, and also carries on a general teaming business. In political faith Mr. Anthony takes a neutral stand, voting for the man whom he deems best fitted for the office. He is fraternally connected with the Weenat Shassit Tribe, No. 6, Improved Order of Red Men, and with Malbone Lodge, No. 93, New England Order of Protection. Mr. Anthony attends Emmanuel Episcopal Church, of which his wife is an active member.

On Jan. 28, 1885, Mr. James Edward Anthony was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth P. Congdon, the estimable daughter of the late Christopher T. and Sarah E. (Smith) Congdon, of Newport, and a direct descendant of one of New England's earliest settled families. Mrs. Anthony is a member of William Ellery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Mr. and Mrs. James E. Anthony have had two children, namely: Sarah Talbot, born Aug. 16, 1886; and Harold Congdon, whose birth occurred Oct. 1, 1892.

WILLIAM A. BROWNING, of East Greenwich, R. I., is the eldest son of William G. Browning, and belongs to a family of prominence.

William G. Browning was born in South Kingstown, R. I., May 13, 1840, son of Samuel K. and Mary (Greene) Browning. His father was proprietor of a country store at Hope Valley, but while the boy William was at a tender age Mr. and Mrs. Browning moved to a farm, and it was the out-of-door life of a farmer lad that he experienced until he was twenty-one years old. Like most farmer boys he knew what it was to endure hardship and toil, and on reaching maturity he went to work for a farmer at Point Judith, but after two or three years on this farm, he went to Wakefield and clerked in Charles Hazard's store. He was ambitious and used his savings toward gaining a thorough business education, attending Eastman's Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

After leaving school Mr. Browning went to East Greenwich and clerked in John P. Roberts' store at the corner of Main and Queen streets, for several years, and then, at the age of thirty-two years, he formed a partnership with Levi N. Fitts and bought the store of Mr. Roberts. They remained there for two years, and then moved into the handsome brick block, which Mr. Browning had built at the corner of Main and Kings streets. A thriving trade was carried on in general house-furnishings, hardware and dry goods until the new store would not accommodate the business, so they dissolved the firm and Mr. Fitts removed the dry goods department, Mr. Browning continuing the rest of the business until 1891, when failing health induced him to divide the responsibility with his eldest son, William A., changing the name to William G. Browning & Son.

Always active in public affairs, in 1881 Mr. Browning was elected a member of the famous temperance town council. Later he was chairman of the building committee that erected the town hall in 1886, and was among the foremost in organizing the first fire department and building Engine Hall on Montrose street. He served as a trustee of School District No. 1, which includes the village, and did much for the cause of local education. In April, 1893, he was elected Senator to the General Assembly by a handsome majority, and served his term most satisfactorily, but declined a renomination owing to failing health. He was a Republican in politics, always a public-spirited citizen, and as such he had high ideals and lived up to them. His daily life was the exemplification of a high type of citizenship. Progressive in the full sense, he was an earnest advocate and strong supporter of all movements whose object was the advancement of the general welfare, particularly in the matters of education and temperance, which he estimated highly.

Mr. Browning married Mrs. Phebe Fitts Annabil, of Sharon, Mich., Aug. 8, 1871, and they had children as follows: William A.; Walter G., born Sept. 11, 1874, married Sept. 14, 1899, Abbie P. Taber, of Centerville and is now residing in Denver, Colo; Howard F., born Feb. 1, 1878, married Rose Maude Cook, and also lives in Colorado; George M., born Dec. 5, 1886, died July 15, 1900; and Frederick M., born Sept. 24, 1888. To all his children Mr. Browning offered abundant opportunities for education and advancement, and they have evinced a full appreciation of this, making exemplary progress. It is a family of whom any father might be proud, and one in which the principles of industry have been effectually instilled.

In 1892 Mr. Browning built a beautiful summer home across the line in Warwick, and it was there that his busy life, so potent for good, was ended, July 16, 1894. He was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

William A. Browning was born July 4, 1872. He received his education in the town schools and the East Greenwich Academy, and at the early age of twenty-one, became an active partner in his father's business, later assuming control, and he has conducted it thrivingly until the present day. He is noted for his business-like and progressive methods. Like his father he takes an active part in all matters which concern the welfare of the community. He is a Republican, and was for a time trustee of school district No. 9 in Warwick. He has also served in East Greenwich on the Republican committee, and was for two years a member of the town council. He has been a member of the Kentish Guards for fifteen years, and for three years the commanding officer.

William A. Browning was married June 18, 1901, to Miss Isabel Redfern Sprague, of East Greenwich, and they are popular and prominent people in the social circles of the town. Mr. Browning is identified with various energetic, philanthropic movements, and is connected with St. Luke's Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Rhode Island Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

JOHN THOMAS HAIRE, one of the leading and successful business men of Newport, as well as one of that city's representative and highly respected citizens, is the son of the late William and Elizabeth (Hoey) Haire. Although not a native of Newport, Mr. Haire has been a resident of that city since childhood.

William Haire, father of John Thomas, was born April 12, 1816, in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and in his native land was engaged in agricultural pursuits, and also in a mercantile business, and he continued in these vocations until coming to America in 1866, finally settling at Newport, R. I., where he passed away April 28, 1868. He married in May, 1848, Elizabeth Hoey, daughter of John Hoey, and Mrs. Haire survived her husband until Sept. 27, 1905, when she passed away in Middletown, R. I. To Mr. and Mrs. Haire were born the following children: James, a detective in the White Chapel District, London, England; William, who was drowned at Vineyard Haven, Mass.; Joseph, mentioned elsewhere in these volumes; Margaret Anna, wife of Rev. John Reynolds Mackay, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Glens Falls, N. Y.; Samuel, who is engaged in farming in Middletown, R. I.; John Thomas; and Robert, who is engaged in the plumbing business in Newport.

John Thomas Haire was born Dec. 23, 1862, in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and when between three and four years of age was brought to America by his parents. He obtained his early educational training in the common schools of Newport. The death of his father forced him to earn his own livelihood early in life, and at the age of fourteen years he left school, and after working at various occupations for about three years, he became, when seventeen years of age, apprenticed to the trade of cabinet-maker with J. L. & G. A. Hazard, in whose employ he remained for about four and one-half years. Mr. Haire then accepted a position with George E. Vernon & Co., furniture manufacturers of Newport, shortly after which he was made foreman of this establishment, serving in that capacity with efficiency until 1900, when he resigned his position to engage in business on his own account. In September of that year he established himself in the furniture and upholstering business on Bellevue Avenue, near Bowery street, where he remained but six months, and then removed to his present large and commodious store room at No. 134 Bellevue Avenue, where he gives employment to a number of men. Besides manufacturing furniture of every description in all its branches, Mr. Haire also carries a complete line of modern as well as antique designs, and makes a specialty of interior decorations of every description. He has been exceptionally successful, this success being due to his energy and enterprise, his upright and honorable dealings, and to his marked ability as an original designer. He is devoted to his business, giving it his untiring and undivided attention.

Mr. Haire is a consistent member of the First Presbyterian Church, of Newport, as is also his wife, and he has served as deacon for several years, as well as being a member of the board of trustees. Although he does not take an active interest in political affairs, he is a believer in the principles of the Republican party, but in city affairs takes a neutral stand.

On Jan. 18, 1893, Mr. Haire was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Anderson Lee, daughter, of Robert Henry Lee, of Newport, and to this union have been born children as follows: John Russell, Robert Hoey and Joseph Mackay. Mr. Haire is a genial, courteous gentleman, and a man who bears the respect and esteem of all who know him. He is very domestic in his habits, and his home life is an ideal one.

PIERCE. (I) Michael Pierce. (II) Ephraim Pierce. (III) Ephraim Pierce (2). (IV) Deacon Mial Pierce. (V) Rev. Nathan Pierce.

(V) Joshua Pierce, son of Deacon Mial, was married, March 24, 1748, to Mary Horton, and they were residents of Rehoboth and Swansea, Mass. Their children were: Shubael; Israel; Henry, born in 1750; Barnard, born Feb. 4, 1764; William, who died at the age of twenty-one years; Joshua; Sarah; Silence; Hannah; and Mary.

(VI) Isaac Pierce, son of Rev. Nathan, born Sept. 22, 1763, married, Oct. 7, 1782, Anna Fitch, born March 1, 1763, daughter of Capt. Amos Fitch, of Swansea, Mass. She died Nov. 15, 1809, and is buried in the Pierce burying-ground in Rehoboth, Mass., and he married (second) Nov. 1, 1810, Polly Bowen, born Aug. 21, 1789. She died March 10, 1838, and he married (third) Elizabeth Carpenter. Mr. Pierce was a resident of Rehoboth, Mass., where he died Nov. 26, 1849. He had resided through life within four miles of his birth-place. For a short time he was a soldier in the Revolutionary army, at the time being a lad of only sixteen years. After his marriage he resided for a period with his grandfather, Mial Pierce, returning after two years to his father's farm, where he passed the remainder of his days. He was industrious and economical, reared a large family, and always paid one hundred cents on the dollar. When he was a boy there was not a vehicle in Rehoboth, everybody riding horseback; there were a few ox-carts, heavy, clumsy affairs, built after the pattern of the English. He often went to church in an ox-wagon with a seat placed on it. When eighteen years of age he joined his father's church, but at the age of twenty-five he was ex-communicated because he went to hear a Universalist preacher. His children were: Hannah, born Sept. 18, 1783; Nancy, born April 15, 1786, who married a Chaffee, of Seekonk; Cyrus, born June 9, 1788; Isaac, born Dec. 21, 1789; Mahala, born April 29, 1792; Angia, born June 1, 1794; Levi, born June 8, 1797, who married Betsey Wheeler; Mary A., born May 29, 1799; Waterman, born Dec. 24, 1801; Hiram W., born Feb. 19, 1804; Betsey, born Feb. 3, 1807; Lymon, born Jan. 1, 1813; Holofanes, born Feb. 26, 1815; Polly, born March 21, 1816; Jeremiah B., born Aug. 20, 1820;

Delana, born July 13, 1823; Laura A., born May 18, 1825; and Sophronia, born Aug. 12, 1827.

(VII) Jeremiah B. Pierce, son of Isaac Pierce and his wife Anna Fitch, born Aug. 20, 1820, married Aug. 29, 1841, Sarah P. Horton, born Aug. 30, 1823, daughter of Otis Horton. Their children were: Warren R., born June 13, 1843; Ida F., born Dec. 5, 1847, who married Dec. 2, 1873, Carroll M. Foster, and died Feb. 25, 1891, leaving one daughter, Mabel (born May 18, 1875, married June 9, 1904, Clarence E. Wright).

(VIII) WARREN R. PERCE, son of Jeremiah B., born June 13, 1843, married Oct. 28, 1884, Annie E. Kenyon, a descendant in the ninth generation from Roger Williams. Warren R. Perce was born in Rehoboth in the house of his grandfather, Isaac, and was brought to Providence when he was six months old. His father was established in business there with his brother, Lymon Peirce. He passed through the common schools and the high school in Providence, graduating from the latter in 1861, in the fall of which year he entered Brown University, where he was graduated as valedictorian of the class of 1865. Upon his graduation he received the degree of A. B., and in 1868 the degree of A. M., and in 1898 the honorary degree of Doctor of Science, in recognition of his book "Genesis and Modern Science," published in 1898. This work related mainly to astronomy and geology. During his college days he was somewhat of an athlete, and twice walked 650 miles to and through the White Mountains. He began the study of law in 1865 with Hon. Charles S. Bradley, one of the most famous lawyers of Rhode Island, who was afterward chief justice. After two years of study, he was, Oct. 10, 1867, admitted to the Rhode Island Bar, where he has ever since been engaged in practice. Soon after he began general practice he was in partnership with I. Erastus Lester, with whom he continued about one year, the partnership being then dissolved on account of the ill health of Mr. Perce. In 1871 he formed a co-partnership with William B. W. Hallett, under the firm name of Perce & Hallett, and this partnership was a most successful and prosperous one, continuing until 1883. In its time the firm took part in some of the most famous criminal cases, the most celebrated being that of the State vs. Patrick F. Denehey, in 1872, in which the defendant was charged with the murder of George H. Favor. The case lasted nine days and was noted all over the country. Mr. Perce has, however, given special attention to patent law, for which he had a special fitness on account of his mechanical turn of mind. He was also engaged in the practice of real estate law, and the investigation of land titles, and has had several well-known will cases. He adopted the general policy of settling cases of litigation between parties, thus avoiding vexatious and expensive lawsuits, and in this way he has secured a large clientage.

Until 1880 Mr. Perce was a Democrat in political faith, but that year, firmly believing in a moderate protective tariff, he cast his ballot in support of the Republican party, and has since been active in its support. While a Democrat, he was the candidate of his party for the city council, for city solicitor, representative and State senator, and attorney general. He was elected by the Republicans a representative from the city of Providence to the Legislature, for the session of 1891-92.

From his early life Mr. Perce has been strongly interested in temperance, and by force of circumstances was brought into prominence during campaigns for constitutional prohibition. After the constitution was amended it was found that the statutes to enforce it were defective and inadequate. Mr. Perce became a member of a committee to draft a law which would be practical. As such member he drafted a prohibitory law largely compiled from the statutes and court decisions of the several States of the Union. It then became necessary to pass the law, and Mr. Perce was called upon to conduct many public hearings in the General Assembly. After a long fight the law he proposed was passed, though amended and thereby somewhat weakened in its efficiency. Again by force of circumstances Mr. Perce personally prosecuted a considerable proportion of the cases for violations of this law, and in the discharge of this duty he tried over 400 cases and lost only four, during a period of three years, 1888 to 1891.

Mr. Perce has been a member of the Beneficent Congregational Church in Providence since 1872, and is one of its board of deacons. He has been a teacher in the Sunday-school since he was sixteen years of age, and has conducted large Bible-classes, made up largely of college students, teachers and prominent business men, two of the governors of the State having been among his pupils. He has also given special courses of lectures in Evidences of Christianity and Church History.

(VI) Barnard Pierce, son of Joshua, born Feb. 4, 1764, married Jan. 14, 1786, Mary Rounds, born Nov. 12, 1767, daughter of Chace Rounds, and they were residents of Rehoboth, Mass. He died May 5, 1842, and she passed away Nov. 16, 1849. Their children were: Jeremiah, born Aug. 29, 1786; Mary, Dec. 15, 1788; Nathaniel R., Jan. 1, 1792; Hannah M., Nov. 19, 1794; Barnard, March 15, 1797; Charles M., Aug. 9, 1799; Otis N., Feb. 3, 1803; Chase R., May 12, 1805; Bradford S., Jan. 14, 1808; and Mary A., May 7, 1811.

(VII) Jeremiah Pierce, son of Barnard, born Aug. 29, 1786, married Nov. 9, 1806, Candace Wheeler, born Sept. 30, 1789, and they resided in Rehoboth, Mass. He died March 23, 1837, and she passed away Oct. 18, 1882. Their children were: Abraham, born Feb. 1, 1828; Mary W., Jan. 13, 1809; Chloe M., Nov. 27, 1810; Jeremiah, June 23, 1812; Candace, July 9, 1813; Charlotte, Nov. 5, 1818; Albert, Dec. 30, 1821; Alfred, Dec. 30, 1821

(now living in Attleboro, Mass.); Galen, July 18, 1824; Sarah J., April 29, 1830; and Martha, Sept. 15, 1832.

(VII) Rev. Waterman Pierce, son of Isaac, born Dec. 24, 1801, in Rehoboth, Mass., married June 15, 1820, Betsey Baker, born March 8, 1801, and they resided in East Providence, R. I. Mr. Pierce was reared on a farm, and his early education was necessarily curtailed. He was married when only nineteen years of age, and was blessed with eleven children. Each of his sons served in the city council of Providence, and one of them represented the city in the General Assembly of the State. For over forty years Mr. Pierce was pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church at Barneyville, North Swansea, Mass. He baptized hundreds of persons, and united in marriage nearly as many. He officiated at funerals in fourteen counties and towns. He carried on his farm in connection with his ministry, and built the church at Barneyville, carting the stone and wood for the building from his farm. His services were given his church free, and he received only a small annual donation; he was very eloquent, and claimed that he spoke through the spirit, and was called to speak at many revivals. His grandfather was a clergyman, and one of his grandsons (George Horton) latterly occupied the pulpit with him. His children were: Bradford B., born Nov. 7, 1821, married Martha K. Brown; Sarah F., born July 25, 1826, married Gilbert M. Horton; Elisha W., born Jan. 22, 1829, married Elizabeth W. Barney; Maria B., born Feb. 1, 1835, married Oct. 2, 1859, Samuel S. Barney; George L., born Sept. 9, 1837, married Sarah E. Cory; Julia E., born Nov. 16, 1839, married Aug. 6, 1863, Dexter West; Mercy A., born July 14, 1842, married June 17, 1864, Burden Monroe; Richmond, born July 2, 1847, died in infancy; and two others.

(VIII) Galen Pierce, son of Jeremiah, born July 18, 1824, married April 13, 1847, Phebe A. G. Barney, and resided in East Providence, R. I. Mrs. Pierce died May 29, 1880. Their children were: Eugenia E., born Feb. 27, 1848 (married S. S. Rich); Alfred G., April 25, 1853; Walter B., Nov. 5, 1855; and Galen F., March 30, 1865. The second wife of Galen Pierce was Emily Wilmarth, of East Providence. He died Aug. 27, 1899.

(IX) WALTER B. PIERCE, son of Galen, born Nov. 5, 1855, resides in East Providence, R. I. He married Oct. 10, 1882, Emma Andrews, born July 22, 1858, who died Sept. 16, 1896. On Oct. 5, 1897, he married (second) Louise H. Sheldon, daughter of Stephen Sheldon. To the first marriage came two children: David, born Oct. 29, 1887; and Gertrude, born Dec. 13, 1884. The father of Mr. Pierce was at one time an extensive merchant in India street, Providence, but when the son was a youth removed to East Providence, where he became engaged in business, and in about 1880 erected in that town what is there known as the Pierce block. The son attended the schools of East Providence, and later took a course of study at Bryant & Stratton's Business College in Providence. He received his practical business training under the direction of his father in the latter's business house, and on the father's retirement became his successor (1892). He dealt in hardware, paints, oils, etc., and in this business proved worthy of his father's training.

Mr. Pierce was a man of strong convictions and had the courage of them. He was independent in his political views. His principles he fearlessly advocated, regardless as to whether they were popular or otherwise. For a number of years he was a member of the school committee of East Providence. He was a member of the Radical Club of Providence, the Annawan Club, the East Providence Business Men's Association, and of other organizations. He was always much interested in local matters and took an interest in the town and all that pertained to its advancement. In 1904 he ran as an independent for senator, and in his own precinct was several hundred ahead of his ticket. Mr. Pierce died at his home in East Providence April 8, 1904.

CHARLES S. BUSH, founder of the Charles S. Bush Company, Providence, dealers in drugs, paints, oils, etc., comes from a family that for several generations has been prominent in the business life of Rhode Island.

(I) Richard Bush, the first of whom there is authentic record, was born in 1713. On Oct. 4, 1738, he married Elizabeth Hammett, of Newport, and they had four children, namely: John, born in 1740; Jonathan, in 1742; Thomas, in 1752; and Richard, Nov. 23, 1754.

(II) Richard Bush, Jr., son of Richard, was born in Jamestown, R. I., Nov. 23, 1754. In his early years he was a butcher, but when the Revolution broke out, he entered the army and never again resumed his former occupation. He served under Lieut. Archibald Carry. When the British invaded Rhode Island, the Bush home was ransacked and burned, and Mr. Bush and family fled to Newport, where he was afterward engaged in carrying the mail and driving stage. He married Hannah Hazard, daughter of Oliver Hazard. They had children: John, born March 26, 1776, who married Penelope Gibbs; Thomas, born Sept. 27, 1778; Hannah, born Dec. 7, 1780, who died unmarried; Hazard, born Jan. 8, 1783, who married Polly Ingraham; George, born Oct. 10, 1784, who never married; Elizabeth, born May 24, 1787, who married Capt. Wade; Nancy, born March 7, 1789, who became the wife of Mr. Champanoise; Richard, born in June, 1791, who died in infancy; Sarah, born July 15, 1792, who married Nicholas Jeffrey; Catherine, born July 25, 1794, who married a Mr. Marble; Arnold, born Nov. 30, 1795, who married a Miss Waldron; and Ann, born Nov. 18, 1797, who wedded Peter Chase. After the death of the mother of these children, Richard Bush married (second) Eunice Champlin, of Newport, by whom he had a son Richard, who married Caroline Almy. Mr. Bush married (third) Mrs. Sarah (Gibbs) Crandall.

(III) Thomas Bush was born Sept. 27, 1778, in Jamestown, but was taken at the time of the British invasion to Newport, where he grew to manhood. He became a tanner and wool dresser, and, regardless of limited water facilities, he being obliged to carry his hides on horseback to a distant brook, he carried on an extensive business. In 1801 he engaged in the manufacture of chamois skin gloves, all the sewing being done by hand by the women in the vicinity. His establishment was located on what was then Tanner street, now West Broadway. Mr. Bush was active in public affairs as an old-line Whig, and for several years was tax collector. Although not a communicant, he was a regular attendant at Trinity Episcopal Church. On Nov. 19, 1799, Mr. Bush married Mary Wanton Borden, who was born Sept. 25, 1780, daughter of Thomas Borden; she died May 6, 1857. Their children were: Thomas, Jr., born Jan. 26, 1801, a tanner in Newport, married Sarah Ward; Richard, born July 16, 1802, a tanner in Providence, where he died, married Elizabeth Sherman Holloway; Mary Ann, died in infancy; Elizabeth, born Dec. 20, 1806, married George W. Taylor, probate clerk for many years in Newport, where he died; George Hazard, born July 24, 1808, a tanner by trade, married Abby May Brown; Mary (2), born Sept. 21, 1810, became the wife of William Tew Tilley, a ropemaker of Newport, where both died; Augustus, born March 15, 1813, an Episcopal clergyman, died unmarried in Detroit, Mich.; Edwin Arnold, born June 4, 1815, died in 1906; John Topham, born Feb. 25, 1817, was a tanner of Newport, where both he and his wife, Emily Lyon, died; Solon Wanton, born Feb. 11, 1819, a Unitarian minister, married Theoda Foster, and died in Boston; Adeline Jeffrey died in infancy; and Marcus, born in 1823, a jeweler, married Abby Houghton, and died in Melrose.

(IV) Edwin Arnold Bush, born June 4, 1815, in Newport, died in East Providence, July 30, 1906. He married Ellen Metcalf, born June 28, 1817, daughter of Jesse and Eunice Dench (Houghton) Metcalf, who numbered among her ancestors Governor William Bradford, John Alden, and Priscilla Mullins, all of the "Mayflower." Mrs. Ellen Bush died July 14, 1902, at Adirondack, N. Y. She was a member of the First Unitarian Church, Providence. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bush were: Jesse M., born May 30, 1847, died June 16, 1905; Charles S.; and Edwin A., Jr., born June 14, 1853, died at the age of ten years. Edwin A. Bush left Newport when a young man and came to Providence where he entered the employ of a tanner. After remaining in business here for a few years he went to Schroon Lake in the Adirondacks, and was in business there for over forty years, or until his retirement in 1886. While in Providence he conducted his own business and was also in partnership for some time. Mr. Bush was a successful business man, an exemplary citizen and held the respect of all men.

(V) Charles S. Bush, son of Edwin A. and Ellen, was born June 22, 1849, in Newport, R. I. He received his early education in the early schools of Providence, and in Allen's English and Classical School, West Newton, Mass. After finishing his course at the latter institution, he spent about two years in the mill of his uncle, the late Jesse Metcalf, gaining some knowledge of the woolen cloth industry. In 1867, finding his inclinations more favorable to a mercantile life, he entered the Earl P. Mason drug and chemical establishment, with the intention of thoroughly learning the business. He started in the lowest position, but through strict attention to business, his advancement was rapid, and at the end of seven years he was admitted as a partner, the firm name then becoming Mason, Chapin & Co. The partnership thus formed existed until 1883 (nine years), when Mr. Bush withdrew to establish the house of Charles S. Bush Company. This was incorporated under the laws of the State of Rhode Island, in 1889, and it has since assumed large proportions under the careful supervision of its founder. Originally the business of the house was confined almost exclusively to that of importers, manufacturers and dealers in drugs, dye-stuffs, chemicals, paints, oils, etc., but several kindred lines have been added and the company now occupies the entire building at the corner of Weybosset and Page streets, and the Bush Electric Building on Richmond street.

In 1874, Mr. Bush, then only twenty-five years of age, was elected a director in the Globe National Bank of Providence; he served the institution faithfully for nearly a quarter of a century and was made its vice-president a short time before it was consolidated with the Union Trust Company. After the consolidation he was made a director of the last named institution, and his judgment is highly esteemed in all matters pertaining to loans and credits. He has been an active member of the American Chemical Society for many years. In the year 1904 he was elected President of the Rhode Island Business Men's Association. He has been a member of the Providence Board of Trade for a third of a century, and has served at two different periods as a member of the Executive committee. For more than twenty years he has been a member of the Paint and Oil Club of New England, and for one term was its vice-president; and for the same length of time he has belonged to the Drysalers Club of New England. He is also a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Mr. Bush is a member of the following Masonic bodies: St. John's Lodge, Providence; Royal Arch

Chapter, Providence; Council of Royal & Select Masters; St. John's Commandery; Providence Lodge of Perfection; Providence Council, Princes of Jerusalem; Providence Chapter of Rose Croix; Providence Council of Kadosh. In 1897 he was made a 33d degree Mason, and for several years has been Deputy Grand Commander, for the State of Rhode Island, of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General of The Thirty-Third and Last Degree, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, for the United States of America, their Territories and Dependencies.

At Providence, Sept. 26, 1872, Mr. Bush was married to Kate Davison, daughter of John and Rebecca (Brown) Davison, all of Providence. Two daughters were born to them: Ellen Metcalf, born March 19, 1874, married Oct. 16, 1901, Earl S. Colman, of Providence; and Florence, born July 7, 1877, died in infancy. Mr. Bush has never accepted any political office, and his tastes are more in the line of mercantile and scientific affairs. Though successful in business he has never accumulated great wealth, but is preeminently a man who believes that a reputation for strict integrity in dealing with his fellow men is more to be desired than riches.

MUNRO or MUNROE. Hudson in his History of Lexington, Mass., gives quite an interesting account of the Munroes of Scotland, in connection with the genealogy of the Lexington family, from whom the latter were descended, and in this account we find the following: The Munroes who acted a conspicuous part April 19, 1775, and were among the first settlers of Lexington, were of Scotch descent, though it has been said that they came from Ireland to Scotland at a remote period. The family of Munroes of Fowlis, from which the Lexington Munroes were descended, is among the most ancient and honorable families in the north part of Scotland, and has generally been remarkable for a brave, martial and patriotic spirit. They have intermarried with many of the best families and nobility in the north of Scotland, and, what is more to their honor, they were among the very first in those parts who embraced the Reformation, which they zealously supported. According to Buchanan, it was in the beginning of the eleventh century, and about the time of the Conquest of England, when Malcolm, the second of that name, King of Scots, first distributed the lands in Scotland to the principal families, on account of their eminent success in his battles with the Danes. According to tradition it was on that occasion that the country between the Borough of Dingwall and the waters of Alness, in the shire of Ross, was given to Donald Munroe. A part of these lands was afterward erected by the King into a barony, called the Barony of Fowlis, and some of the Munroes were Lords of the barony from its first erection. George Munroe,

Edward A. Greene

5, 1666-67; Welthyan, Jan. 23, 1669-70; Rufus, Jan. 6, 1672-73; and Nathaniel, April 10, 1679.

(III) Richard Greene, born March 5, 1666-67, married in 1700 Mary, born Sept. 11, 1677, daughter of John and Mary (Holden) Carder, of Old Warwick. Mr. Greene inherited the "Stone Castle" homestead. He was deputy from Warwick, 1699-1700; from Portsmouth, 1702; and was one of the committee to send an agent to London in 1700. He died Sept. 25, 1724, and his widow remarried and died April 12, 1761. His children of Warwick record were: Mary, born Sept. 23, 1700; Richard, April 17, 1702; Elizabeth, Aug. 20, 1710; Thomas, April 14, 1713; and Welthyan.

(IV) Richard Greene (2), born April 17, 1702, married June 7, 1727, Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. John and Elizabeth (Carr) Godfrey, and granddaughter of Gov. Caleb Carr. She was born May 21, 1709, and died Nov. 30, 1789. Mr. Greene was made a freeman in 1724. He inherited the homestead and other land. He died Dec. 28, 1778, and was buried at the "Stone Castle." Their children were: Elizabeth, born June 17, 1728; Thomas, Oct. 11, 1729; Godfrey, May 31, 1732; William, Jan. 3, 1734; William (2), June 9, 1737; Welthyan, Jan. 1, 1739; Benjamin, Jan. 5, 1741; John, Nov. 10, 1743; and Caleb, Jan. 3, 1746.

(V) Godfrey Greene, born May 31, 1732, in the "Stone Castle," married July 4, 1755, Freelope, born Feb. 18, 1734, daughter of William and Sarah (Medbury) Greene. Mr. Greene lived on the road leading to the old tide-mill in Warwick, R. I. He was a mariner and shipmaster. He was taken prisoner by the French in the old French war and by the English in the war of the Revolution. He was one of the number confined at New York in the prison ship "Jersey," from which he made his escape. He died Oct. 21, 1801, and she passed away Nov. 3, 1804. Their children were: Almy, born July 11, 1756; Elizabeth, Jan. 23, 1759; Elizabeth (2), Aug. 20, 1761; William, Sept. 2, 1763; Sarah, Jan. 8, 1766; Godfrey, May 14, 1768; Caleb Carr, July 15, 1769; and Benjamin, June 25, 1771.

(VI) Capt. Benjamin Greene, born June 25, 1771, in the town of Old Warwick, R. I., married May 19, 1795, Harriet, born April 5, 1778, daughter of William and Welthian (Lippitt) Greene. The family homestead was south of Pawtuxet and included the famous "Mark Rock," with its notable impressions and inscriptions, and was within the limits of Warwick, a region memorable in Rhode Island history. Captain Greene was a well-known sea captain, making voyages to the Indies and remote countries, and from disasters at sea and other causes lost his property. He died Sept. 21, 1847, aged seventy-six years. His wife, Harriet, preceded him to the great beyond, dying March 21, 1837, in the fifty-ninth year of her age. Mrs. Greene was a woman of great energy and strength of character. Her father was Chief Justice of Rhode Island in the period of the Revolution, and he was a brother of the renowned Gen. Nathanael Greene, of the Revolution.

The children born to Capt. Benjamin and Harriet (Greene) Greene were: William Montgomery, born March 26, 1799; Welthian, Feb. 20, 1801; Godfrey, May 18, 1804; Benjamin Franklin, Jan. 1, 1807; Harriet Godfrey, June 22, 1809; Henry Payson, July 30, 1812; Richard; and Philip.

(VII) BENJAMIN FRANKLIN GREENE, son of Capt. Benjamin and Harriet (Greene) Greene, was born Jan. 1, 1807, in the town of Old Warwick, R. I. Owing to circumstances and conditions attending his boyhood he had only limited educational advantages, but those within his reach he took advantage of, and by reading in after years he acquired a good fund of information. When but a lad of ten years he found employment in the Crompton Mills in his native town, receiving for his services one dollar per week. A little later, in 1816, he was employed in the Natick Mills, then under the direction of Gen. Christopher Rhodes. He was still later an employee under the late William Sprague, the first to establish calico printing in Rhode Island. At the age of seventeen, in 1824, he began work as second hand in making thread in the manufacturing concern of Walker & Allen, in Central Falls. He became overseer of this mill in 1825, and so continued until 1840. Through his energy, good deportment and skill, as the years passed young Greene gained knowledge and experience, and by 1840, having acquired something of a reputation, in association with Stephen Benedict, Joseph Wood, Thomas Benedict and Samuel Wood, he began business on his own account at Central Falls, as a manufacturer of thread. It may be remarked, however, that while at the coming of Mr. Greene to Central Falls, in 1840, he was well equipped in knowledge and experience in manufacturing lines, he was poor in purse. But resolute and willing, he applied himself, and as the years came and went he grew with them and gained for himself a creditable place among the manufacturers of his day in Rhode Island, and earned more than a competence. In the concern just alluded to Mr. Greene's capital was his experience and knowledge in the line of business the partnership was to follow, while his associates represented the money. Some five years later, in 1845, Mr. Greene withdrew from the partnership, and became identified with the concern of Hill & Carpenter, in the town of Burrillville, R. I., manufacturing for them thread and warps. In 1850 he engaged in thread manufacture at Clark's Mills, in the town of Richmond, this State, and it was here that he came in business touch with the late Gen. Horace Daniels, who was then bookkeeper in the mill, and who later became his business associate. Mr. Greene, in 1855, leased a mill in Central Falls for a period of ten years, from Moies and Jenks, General Daniels finally entering into partnership with him. It was Mr. Daniels who suggested putting up the thread on spools, and he, too, invented a machine for polishing the thread.

In 1860 the firm of Greene & Daniels built a new mill in Pawtucket, just across the river from Central Falls, which they enlarged in 1865, making a solid and beautiful brick structure 420 feet long, four stories high, with a French roof, giving another story, and three large towers. The mill cost when completed about $100,000, and in it ran some twenty-five thousand spindles. General Daniels died in 1876, and Mr. Greene purchased from his heirs the Daniels' interest in the mill and business, becoming at the time sole owner of both. In the year following, however, Mr. Greene made of the business a joint corporation, though he held the major part of the stock himself. The concern was capitalized at $300,000, all of which was paid up. Of this corporation Mr. Greene was president; his son, Edward A. Greene, treasurer, and George P. Grant, agent. Mr. Greene was a director for a number of years in the Slater National Bank, of Pawtucket.

Mr. Greene, during the Civil war, though himself exempt from military service on account of his advanced age, was an active member of the Home Guard. His political affiliations were first with the old Whig party, then with the Republican party. He represented the town of Smithfield in the General Assembly of the State in 1866. In 1835 Mr. Greene, with his wife, united with the First Baptist Church of Pawtucket, and in 1844 they became members of the Central Falls Baptist Church, continuing as such until they died. Mr. Greene contributed some $25,000 or more to the building of the new church edifice on Broad street in Central Falls. He was a member of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of his denomination. He was one of the managers of the Rhode Island Baptist State Convention, and a director in the Baptist Vineyard Association, of Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard. He traveled quite extensively in this country and Canada, and it was while en route to the Pacific coast that he was called to his reward.

On June 17, 1833, Mr. Greene was married to Rebecca Borden Linnell, daughter of Josiah and Rebecca Linnell, of Hyannis Port, Barnstable County, Mass. Mrs. Greene, a woman of rare prudence and piety and one of great industry, was born June 28, 1808, and died June 3, 1878, when in the seventieth year of her age, in the Greene mansion at Central Falls, R. I. Mr. Greene died Jan. 29, 1886, at the "Hot Spring Hotel," in Las Vegas, N. Mex., while en route with members of his family to Los Angeles, Cal. Thus passed away one of the oldest of American manufacturers of cotton thread.

Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Greene: (1) Eleanor Frances, born Dec. 16, 1834, died March 31, 1849. (2) Sarah Jane, who married (first) Levis Davis and (second) Wanton Durfee, died Feb. 7, 1903, in Central Falls. (3) Herbert Franklin, born July 21, 1838, died July 31, 1839. (4) Mary Albina, born April 29, 1840, married Ellery Wood Greene. (5) Richard Franklin, born July 5, 1842, who is mentioned below, married Elizabeth Augusta Brown. (6) Edward Alonzo, born Feb. 9, 1845, is mentioned below.

(VIII) EDWARD ALONZO GREENE, son of the late Benjamin Franklin and Rebecca Borden (Linnell) Greene, was born Feb. 9, 1845, in Central Falls, R. I., and acquired his book training in the public schools there and at Bryant & Stratton business college, Providence, R. I., graduating from the latter in 1861. His business training and career began immediately on the close of his school life, as a clerk in the office of the firm of Greene & Daniels, of which firm his father was the senior partner. After an experience of four years in the position named young Greene went abroad, and while in Europe devoted considerable time to the methods and practices of many of the large cotton-mills there. Returning to this country and to the mill at Pawtucket, and desiring to familiarize himself thoroughly with the details of the business of the concern, he passed four years in the various departments of the factory, acquiring a thorough knowledge of the details of the business. Thus fully equipped, on the death of Mr. Daniels, in 1876, and on the incorporation of the concern in 1877, as the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company, Mr. Greene was elected treasurer of the corporation; and on the death of his father, the president of the company, in 1886, he was elected president, and later, in 1895, on the resignation of Mr. George P. Grant, who in the meantime had assumed the office of treasurer, he was elected his successor, becoming both president and treasurer of the company. He continued in these capacities until his death, which occurred July 8, 1900, in Philadelphia, from the result of nervous troubles.

It goes without saying that Mr. Greene coming to the office of chief executive of such an extensive corporation so thoroughly experienced and prepared with the energy and push he brought with him was a potent influence in the strides the corporation has since made. Major Greene was a director of the Slater National Bank of Pawtucket, and later the Slater Trust Company, at Pawtucket; of the Kent-Stanley Company, at Providence; of the Atlantic Mutual Fire Insurance Company, at Providence; of the Pawtucket Mutual Fire Insurance Company, at Pawtucket; of the River Spinning Company, at Woonsocket; and an early trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank, at Pawtucket.

Major Greene had taken considerable interest in military affairs. After his graduation from the business college, in 1861, he became a private in the Union Guard, in which he continued for five years, through the Civil war. He was quartermaster of the Union Guard of Central Falls for a period of five years, and served as commissary on the staff of Gen. Horace Daniels, with the rank of major. He took an active part in the advocacy of all public improvements and in measures calculated to advance the affairs of Central Falls and vicinity, and contributed to the welfare of his fellow-citizens.

When a boy Major Greene joined the Broad Street Baptist Church of Central Falls, and continued in active membership until his death, giving most liberally to the support of that congregation. For many years he served as a member of the standing committee of that church; he was also very active in the Sunday-school work, and was much interested in the Y. M. C. A., to the support of which he contributed generously. In political views, he was a staunch Republican, but never cared for nor sought office. He was a member of the New England Manufacturers' Association, the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, and the To Kalon Club, of Pawtucket. Mr. Greene was a man of very domestic habits, fond of his family, to whom he was much devoted. His sterling traits of character won for him many staunch and loyal friendships, among those who knew him best.

On Feb. 11, 1874, Major Greene was united in marriage to Miss Annie B. Houghton, daughter of John R. and Anne (Badger) Houghton, of Brunswick, Maine. Mrs. Greene's father was for twenty years prior to his death connected with the Corliss Engine Company. To Major and Mrs. Greene were born children as follows: (1) Muriel H., born April 19, 1875, married Edgar A. Gove, who is engaged in the advertising business in New York City. They have one daughter, Dorothea Gove. (2) William H., born June 28, 1878, died unmarried on his twenty-fourth birthday, June 28, 1902, at which time he was treasurer of the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company. (3) Edith H., born July 31, 1886, died in infancy. (4) Madeline H., born May 27, 1889, is attending a private school in Providence.

(VIII) RICHARD FRANKLIN GREENE, son of the late Benjamin and Rebecca Borden (Linnell) Greene, was born July 5, 1842, in Central Falls, R. I., and received his education in the public schools of his native city. Leaving school at the age of eighteen years he became apprenticed to the trade of pattern-maker with Jesse Burdett, in Providence, with whom he remained thus for two years. At the end of that time he formed a partnership with Mr. Burdett, under the firm name of Burdett & Greene, which partnership continued for about two and a half years, during which time the firm was engaged in carpentering and pattern-making. Mr. Greene then engaged in the lumber business, operating a steam-mill, for sawing and dressing lumber, located at the foot of Manchester street. As his business outgrew his quarters he removed his plant to the wharf at the foot of South street, where he continued for eleven years. He then closed out this business, and shortly thereafter opened up a business for the dressing of large beams in a mill which he built at the foot of Manchester street, where he remained until 1886, when he closed out the same. Since that time he has been retired from active business interests. However, he is still serving as a director of the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company, of Pawtucket. In political faith he is a Republican, but he has never cared for public office.

Mr. Greene was united in marriage to E. Augusta Brown, daughter of Parley Brown, Jr., of Fall River, Mass., and to this union were born three children, all of whom died in infancy.

(IX) HERBERT FRANKLIN GREENE, grandson of the late Benjamin and Rebecca Borden (Linnell) Greene, was born Sept. 6, 1856, in Central Falls, and attended the public schools of his native city, supplementing the knowledge acquired therein by a course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Providence. After leaving school he spent four years as a resident of Bristol, R. I., since which time he has been a respected resident of Central Falls. Mr. Greene is a director of the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company, of Pawtucket. He is an honored member of the Masonic organization, holding membership in Union Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M.; Pawtucket Council, No. 2, R. & S. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, Knights Templar; Palestine Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Providence; and the Providence Valley Consistory, Scottish Rite, thirty-second degree of Masonry. Mr. Greene is a stalwart Republican, but has never sought office, having refused the nomination of mayor of his native town by his party. He is an affable and courteous gentleman and has the good-will and respect of those he meets in any of the relations of life.

On Aug. 13, 1879, Mr. Greene was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Lillian Spencer, daughter of the late Charles L. and Guilea Almy (Williams) Spencer, of Central Falls, R. I., and to this happy union have been born children as follows: (1) Spencer Benjamin, born April 9, 1881, in Central Falls, had the advantages of the public schools of his native city, supplemented by two years at Brown University and a course at the Philadelphia Textile School. He is now employed at the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company. He is a member of the Masonic bodies, being a Knight Templar Mason and a Shriner. He is a member of the Providence Chapter of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, having joined same through being a direct descendant of Samuel Spencer, of Windham, Conn., who was an artisan of the Revolution. He is unmarried. (2) Harvey Linnell, born April 26, 1883, died June 17, 1900. (3) Charles Franklin, born Feb. 27, 1889, is attending the high school at Central Falls. He is a member of the Commodore Abraham Whipple Society of the Sons of the Revolution (the children's branch), joining same through the same descent as his brother.

(VII) Henry Payson Greene, son of Capt. Benjamin, was born July 30, 1812, in Old Warwick, R. I., and died in Pawtucket, Dec. 24, 1891. He was a millwright by occupation, and for several years was in partnership with his brother Benjamin, who was the founder of the Greene & Daniels Manufacturing Company, of Pawtucket. Henry Payson Greene married Almira Carpenter, of Lanesville, Mass., and to this union were born the following children: George H.; Harriet, who died in infancy; Sanford W., who died in Pawtucket, Feb. 14, 1899, aged fifty-four years, and who was for thirty-five years connected with the ticket department of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, at Providence (he married first Annie Potter, of Central Falls, and second Olive Goff (Bowen) Weeden, of Providence); and Benjamin W., who was a millwright by trade.

(VIII) George Henry Greene, son of Henry Payson, was born Dec. 28, 1839, in Pawtucket, R. I., and died Dec. 25, 1867, in Pawtucket, aged twenty-eight years. He was buried in the Moshassuck cemetery. As a boy he entered the North Providence Bank, where he remained thirteen years, and was then elected cashier of the Globe Bank of Providence. Ill health, however, compelled him to refuse this position, and his death occurred soon thereafter. He was a Republican in politics. Mr. Greene was a member of the First Baptist Church, and took a very active part in church work, being also active in establishing the Y. M. C. A. at Pawtucket, in which he took a great interest.

On March 7, 1861, Mr. Greene married Miss Nancy Elizabeth Davis, of Dartmouth, Mass., who was born in New Bedford, daughter of Shadrach and Nancy (Simmons) Davis, and by this union there were two sons, George Alvin and Charles W. Of these, George Alvin Greene, born Dec. 21, 1861, who is engaged in farming in Attleboro, Mass., married Eula Greenwood, of Pawtucket, and they had three children, Eula Maude (who died in infancy), Ora Almira and Florence C.

Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth (Davis) Greene married for her second husband Benjamin W. Greene, a brother of her former husband, and two children were born to them: Maude Elizabeth, who died April 17, 1904; and Almira B., who is at home. Mrs. Greene is still living and making her home with her son and daughter on Smithfield avenue. Benjamin W. Greene died March 31, 1893.

(IX) CHARLES WHITCOMB GREENE, son of George Henry, was born Dec. 7, 1863, in Pawtucket, R. I., and received his early education in the common and grammar schools of his native city, attending until fourteen years of age. After working for Samuel Whiting for one and one-half years, young Greene entered the foundry department of Brown & Sharpe, Providence, where he served an apprenticeship of three years at the molder's trade. For the next one and one-half years he drove a meat cart, but at the end of this time entered the moulding department of the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, where he continued for nine years, during which period at various intervals he served as clerk for a short time in different meat markets of the city.

In the spring of 1896 Mr. Greene opened a meat market and grocery at the corner of Weeden street and Smithfield avenue, and there he continued for about fifteen months, when he erected the building he occupies at present at No. 550 Smithfield avenue. Mr. Greene has since been actively engaged in business at this location. For several years his brother was engaged in business with him, the firm name at that time being Greene Brothers, but in 1904 Charles W. purchased his brother's interest, and since that time has been alone.

In political matters Mr. Greene is a staunch Republican, and as such has served the Sixth ward as a member of the council for three years. He attends the First Baptist Church, to which he gives liberally of his means. Mr. Greene is very popular in the community in which he resides, and is considered an upright, honest and substantial business man and representative citizen. He is a member of Eureka Lodge, No. 5, K. of P., Pawtucket.

CLARKE. One of the oldest families of Rhode Island is that of Clarke, the name having, from the earliest settlements, been one of the most honored in the country, where those bearing it have been found in positions of responsibility in every generation. This family has a worthy representative in Newport, R. I., in the person of Henry W. Clarke, who is in the eleventh generation from John Clarke, the earliest known ancestor of whom there is definite record.

(I) John Clarke, the first of the family in direct line, of whom there is authentic record, was of County Suffolk, England, who was there buried March 3, 1559. His children were: John, Jr., and Thomas.

(II) John Clarke, Jr., was born in February, 1541, as was also his wife, Catherine Cook, daughter of John Cook, and they both died in 1598. Their children were: John, born 1570; Thomas, August, 1572; Pasor, 1574; John (2), 1577; Margaret, 1579; and Mary, 1581.

(III) Thomas Clarke, born in August, 1572, married Rose Kerige, and their children were: Margaret, born 1600; Carew, born 1602; William, 1611; and Joseph, 1618. Both Thomas Clarke and his wife, Rose, died in 1627. Of the children, Thomas, John and Joseph came from England to Boston in 1637, and the next year located in Rhode Island, making their homes thereafter in Newport. There Thomas died Oct. 2, 1674, and John, Feb. 20, 1676, neither leaving male descendants.

(IV) Joseph Clarke, born Dec. 9, 1618, and baptized at Westhorpe on Dec. 16th, came, as above stated, to the New World in 1637, and he was admitted an inhabitant of the Island of Aquidneck, at Newport, in 1638. He became a freeman in 1641, and in 1644 was made one of the original members of the First Baptist Church of Newport, and in 1648 became a member of the General Court of Trials. He was made a freeman of the Colony in 1655. He acted as commissioner in 1655-57-58 and 1659; was assistant in 1658-63-64-65-78-80 and 1690. He was made a freeman at Westerly in 1668, and was deputy to the General Assembly in 1668-69-70-71-72 and 1690. His name appears in May, 1669, in the list of Westerly inhabitants, and in 1677 he was a member of the Court of Justices of the Peace to attend to matters of the injurious and illegal acts of the Connecticut Colony. He and his wife, Margaret, appear of Newport in 1680. Mr. Clarke was twice married, his first wife dying at Newport in 1694. The name of his second wife is not known. He died on June 1st of that year. His children were: Joseph, William, Mary, Sarah, John, Susanna, Joshua, Thomas, Carew and Elizabeth.

(V) Joseph Clarke (2), of Newport and Westerly, son of Joseph, born Feb. 11, 1642, married (first) Nov. 16, 1664, Bethiah Hubbard, born Dec. 19, 1646, daughter of Samuel and Tacy (Cooper) Hubbard; she died April 17, 1707, and he married (second) Hannah Peckham, widow of Thomas and daughter of William Weeden. Mr. Clarke must have removed from Newport to Westerly in early life, for in 1669 he became town clerk of Westerly, and was such until 1700. In July, 1675, he and his family went to Newport for safety during the Indian war, returning to Westerly after the close of the war. Mr. Clarke died Jan. 11, 1726-27, in Westerly, and his second wife passed away March 3, 1723. His children were: Judith, born Oct. 12, 1667, at Newport; Joseph, born April 14, 1670, at Westerly; Samuel, born Sept. 29, 1672, at Westerly; John, Aug. 25, 1675, at Newport; Bethiah, April 11, 1678, at Westerly; Mary, Dec. 27, 1680, at Westerly; Susanna, Aug. 31, 1683, at Westerly; Thomas, March (or Nov.) 17, 1686, at Westerly; and William, April 21, 1688, at Westerly.

(VI) Thomas Clarke, of Westerly and Hopkinton, son of Joseph (2), born Nov. (or March) 17, 1686, married in 1710, Elizabeth Babcock, born Feb. 18, 1691, in Westerly, daughter of Capt. James and Elizabeth (Saunders) Babcock. Mr. Clarke was baptized in 1707, and his name was in the list of the members of the Baptist Church in Westerly in 1718 and 1740. He was ordained deacon of the church, Aug. 26, 1735, and was chosen assistant elder Oct. 20, 1750. His death occurred in Hopkinton, Nov. 26, 1767. His children were: Sarah, born May 11, 1712; Thomas, March 4, 1715, at Westerly; Joshua, April 26, 1717, at Westerly; James, March 3, 1720, at Westerly; Joseph, Sept. 14, 1728.

(VII) Rev. Joshua Clarke, of Westerly, son of Thomas, born April 26, 1717, married in April, 1738, Hannah Cottrell, born in 1719. Mr. Clarke was chosen deacon in the Sabbatarian Church in 1756, but declined the office. He appears in the census of 1774 as of Hopkinton. He was a member of the State Legislature, and was a trustee of Brown University. Rev. Clarke also took part in the early Colonial wars, and was in the Revolution. His death occurred at Westerly March 8, 1793. His widow Hannah passed away Nov. 4, 1803. Their children were: Phineas, born Feb. 23, 1740; Joshua, Aug. 17, 1741; Ethan, March 7, 1745; Hannah, May 4, 1747; Thomas, June 10, 1749; Elizabeth, Nov. 14, 1751; Arnold, March 17, 1754; Henry, Dec. 2, 1756; Willet, Oct. 20, 1759; Nathan, Feb. 7, 1762; and Job Bennett, May 13, 1765.

(VIII) Thomas Clarke, of Westerly, son of Rev. Joshua, born June 10, 1749, married June 11, 1770, Olive Marsh, of Hartford, Conn., born June 12, 1756. Mr. Clarke lived in Westerly and later in North Stonington, Conn. His death occurred May 28, 1832. His wife passed away May 4, 1828. Their children were: Charlotte, born April 23, 1771; Hannah, June 23, 1773; Abigail, June 26, 1775; Thomas, May 10, 1778; Abel Marsh, April 22, 1780; Olive Marsh, April 30, 1783; Russell, April 13, 1787; Samuel, June 23, 1790; Clarissa, Jan. 1, 1793; Peleg Congdon, July 31, 1796; and George W., Nov. 9, 1799.

(IX) Thomas Clarke (4), son of Thomas (3), was born May 10, 1778, and married Nov. 26, 1797, Wealthy Wright, born May 14, 1780, in Vermont. Mr. Clarke was a farmer and a resident of Hopkinton, R. I., and both he and his wife are buried in Oak Grove cemetery, Hopkinton, R. I. Their children were: An infant, born Feb. 9, 1799, died same day; David Wright, born June 4, 1800, in Newport; Elizabeth Babcock, born Nov. 5, 1801, in Hopkinton; Clarissa Augusta, born May 18, 1807, in Hopkinton; Tryphena Ann, born June 12, 1804, in Hopkinton; Abel Marsh, born Sept. 20, 1809, in Newport; Thomas Marsh, born Dec. 23, 1810, in Newport; Daniel Levitt, born April 21, 1813; Jerusha Marsh, born June 5, 1816; Wealthy Jane, born Dec. 7, 1818, in Newport; Peleg, born in 1819; Sarah Wright, born Jan. 3, 1820, in Newport; Benjamin Foster, born April 25, 1822; and Susan Jane, born July 15, 1827.

(X) David Wright Clarke, son of Thomas (4), was born June 4, 1800, at Newport, R. I. After his marriage he removed to Jamestown, R. I., where he was afterward engaged in agricultural pursuits, there operating several hundred acres of land. He was also largely and actively interested in dairying and sheep-raising. Industrious and thrifty, he was recognized as one of the prosperous and progressive farmers of Newport county. His death, which occurred June 22, 1854, was caused by injuries received in his back while rescuing his sheep from a snow drift during the previous winter. Although a stalwart Whig in politics and ever active in movements for the public good, Mr. Clarke invariably refused to accept office. He was religiously affiliated with St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, of Jamestown, of which his wife was a member. In disposition he was genial and pleasant, and he was known far and wide as a good neighbor and a true friend.

Mr. Clarke was married to Sarah Munroe Chaffee, daughter of Otis Chaffee. She was born in Newport in 1802, and, although an invalid for many years prior to her death, she lived to the remarkable age of ninety-four years, passing away in 1895. To Mr. and Mrs. David Wright Clarke were born these children: Mary Jane, born in 1823, married John E. Watson, town clerk of Jamestown for many years, and died in 1888; Ann Elizabeth, born in 1825, married Captain William Knowles, of Jamestown, and died in 1881; David Otis, born in 1826, is living in Florida, where he is engaged in farming; Henry W.; Daniel Webb, born in 1832, died in Charleston, S. C., of yellow fever; Thomas Hartwell, born in 1834, now living in Jamestown, is mentioned elsewhere in this work; Sarah, born in 1836, married George E. Allen, deceased, of Providence, where she now resides; Gustavus Adolphus, born in 1839, is living in Jamestown; and Conrad Schultz, born in 1842, is living in Providence, where he is engaged in the clothing business.

(XI) HENRY WRIGHT CLARKE was born Dec. 10, 1829, in Jamestown, R. I., and his early educational training was received in his home, where the children of the neighborhood would gather, receiving their instruction under Rev. Hiscox and his wife and others. Young Clarke then went to Providence, where he attended the University Grammar school for some time, and later went to Adelphian Academy at Brockton, Mass., where his tutors were Silas and Charles Loomis and later Prof. George S. Newcomb of Bowdoin College. At the end of his course there he took the examinations at Brown University, which he passed satisfactorily, expecting to enter that institution as a student, but on account of the sudden death of his father, he returned home. Mr. Clarke took up teaching as a profession, and after serving in various places he went to North Stoughton, Mass., where he was principal of the schools for about one year. Returning to Newport in 1855, Mr. Clarke became a teacher in the grammar school, and for two and one half years was a teacher in the Farewell school, and still later spent two and one-half years in the Clarke school. After about thirty years of faithful service in the Coddingtown school, part of which time he was principal, Professor Clarke was made principal of the Lenthal school, in which capacity he has served efficiently and faithfully to the present time. For about nine years he conducted a private school, and during this time was private tutor in the homes of several of Newport's most prominent families.

Professor Clarke is a devoted member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and has served as lay reader of the church for about fourteen years, filling the pulpits of the Episcopal Churches of the surrounding towns. He also served as superintendent of the Sunday school of the Zion's Episcopal Church for many years. In political views he is a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but has never sought nor cared for public recognition. He served as president of the Gen. G. K. Warren Post Associates for a period of two years.

Professor Clarke was married June 2, 1858, to Miss Ann Catherine Howland, daughter of John Howland, of Jamestown, R. I., and this union was blessed by children as follows: Arthur Henry, a graduate of Annapolis Military Academy and later lieutenant of Marines in the United States Navy, passed away May 7, 1887, in Panama, while on board a vessel stationed in those waters; and Mary Howland, who died at the age of nine years. Professor Clarke's entire life has been devoted to teaching, his service in that capacity to the city of Newport alone covering a period of over fifty years. He is recognized as a learned and proficient tutor, and many of his pupils in his younger days are now filling positions of trust and responsibility in the business world. He possesses not a little literary ability, and, in addition to contributing articles to newspapers and magazines, has written much poetry. He and his estimable wife are benevolent and charitable—ever ready to assist those less fortunate than themselves. They command the respect and esteem of the community in which they have lived so many years.

COLLINS. This well known family of Pawtucket is of English extraction, and for nearly a half century has been prominently identified with the industrial life of that city. Prominent among the machinery manufacturing firms of Pawtucket is that of Collins Brothers Machine Company, manufacturers of patent trap twisters, spinning frames, patent filling winders, patent stop motion drum doubling machines, and drum skein winders. The business, which is considered one of the most active of its line in the country, is conducted by the Collins Brothers, Henry and Joseph W., leading citizens of Pawtucket, and sons of the late William Wright Collins.

WILLIAM WRIGHT COLLINS, who was born Oct. 19, 1824, in Ashton-under-Lyne, England, died Feb. 14, 1895, in Pawtucket, R. I. In his native

Wright Brothers

Wm Wright Collins

country he was engaged as a machinist, learning that trade with the firm of Cryer & Lees, Lancashire, with whom he continued until coming to America in 1859. In company with his brother, Joseph Wright Collins, he started an unpretentious machine shop in 1864, and from this small beginning the great industry of Collins Brothers has since developed. The first shop was located in the Benedict Mill, Central Falls, but six months later it was removed to the old Chip Stone building, where it was continued with much success for two years. At the end of this time the brothers decided to build, and this they did, on the northern end of the Mill-street bridge, on the west side of the roadway, this building being occupied by the firm until its destruction in the great gale of September, 1869. Collins Brothers immediately rebuilt the shop, which they sold to Bacon Brothers, who utilized it as a tannery, and the same premises are now occupied by the Eagle Dye Works. At that time the brothers dissolved partnership, William W. Collins continuing the business alone, and he erected, in 1869, on the east side of the road, a building 75x38 feet, at the bridge, opposite the former shop.

In 1882 Henry Collins was admitted as a partner, and the firm became Collins & Son, and two years later William W. Collins sold his interest to his sons, Henry and Joseph Wright, who have since conducted the business under the name of Collins Brothers. The building which is now occupied by them is located at Nos. 645-647 North Main street, and bordering the Blackstone river, is four stories in height and 62x200 feet in dimensions. The firm carries on a general machinist business, and manufactures woolen and worsted machinery, including a number of specialties, viz.: a trap twister, used almost universally in worsted mills; a new invention for twisting yarns, to take the place of the old method of dyeing them. These specialties are manufactured under patents recently granted, which are the exclusive property of the firm. The partners are men of pronounced business ability and understand thoroughly every detail of the manufacture of this kind of machinery. The business was incorporated in 1907 as the Collins Brothers Machine Company.

William Wright Collins attended the Congregational Church. In politics he was a staunch Republican, and for two years served the city of Pawtucket as a member of the council. In 1844 Mr. Collins was united in marriage to Selina Hibbert, born Nov. 24, 1824, daughter of Charles Hibbert, and she died Aug. 4, 1878, in Pawtucket. The children of this union were: Sarah Ann, who married Charles H. Ford, a retired machinist of Pawtucket; Henry; Louisa, who married Thomas Briden, a retired engineer of Pawtucket, who is serving as a license commissioner; Esther, who married James Hollingworth, a machinist of Pawtucket; and Joseph W.

HENRY COLLINS, son of William Wright Collins, was born March 9, 1847, in Ashton-under-Lyne, England. His meagre education, secured mostly at night schools, was obtained in Pawtucket, and when a mere lad he served a three years' apprenticeship at the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, of Pawtucket. Mr. Collins then entered the employ of his father, who admitted him as a partner in the business in 1882. Mr. Collins has marked ability in the mechanical line, and is the inventor of a number of ingenious and useful appliances. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never been an office seeker, preferring to give his time and attention to his business interests. He attends the Congregational Church. Mr. Collins is a prominent Mason, holding membership in Jenks Lodge, No. 24, A. F. & A. M., of Central Falls; Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T. He also holds membership with Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F.

On Nov. 25, 1868, Henry Collins was married at Lonsdale, R. I., to Miss Elizabeth Hollingworth, of Ashton-under-Lyne, daughter of Elijah Hollingworth, and to this union there have been born the following children, all in Pawtucket: (1) Charles Everett, born Sept. 22, 1869, who is associated with his father in business, and is also extensively engaged in the dairy business in South Attleboro, Mass., married Frances Pollitt, of Lonsdale, R. I., and has five children, Marguerite, Helen, Henry, Frances and Esther. (2) Elijah William Bagster-Collins, born April 16, 1873, received his early education in America, went to Europe at eighteen years of age, studied at the Royal High School at Berlin, Germany, and returned to America, where he graduated from Brown University. Mr. Collins has become an author of note, one of his well known works being a treatise on the teaching of German, which is now being used in the high schools, and he is also serving in the capacity of Professor in German at Columbia College. Prof. Collins married Lillian Bagster, daughter of Robert Bagster of London, the noted publisher of the Bagster Bibles, and three children have been born to this union, Ashlyn Hilary, Denzil and Jeremy. (3) Alice Selina, born June 24, 1877, married the Hon. Philip Whitwell Wilson, of London, Parliament correspondent of the London Daily News, member of Parliament from South Pancras, London, a graduate of Cambridge College and ex-president of the Cambridge Union. Mr. Wilson is also an author of reputation. He and his wife have three children, Oliver Whitwell, Theodore Whitwell and Philip Whitwell. (4) William Wright, born May 26, 1880, in Pawtucket, was educated in the public schools, and took a course in the Rhode Island School of Design at Providence. He then entered the employ of the Collins Brothers Machine Company, and by close application has worked himself up to the position of foreman of the fitting department. He is a young man of ability and is noted for his industry and strict attention to business. He is a member of Jenks Lodge of Masons, Central Falls, and also of Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M. In politics he is a Republican. He attends the Congregational Church. He married Autheriena Bishop, daughter of Henry L. Bishop, and they have one child, Winthrop.

JOSEPH WRIGHT COLLINS, treasurer and half owner of the Collins Brothers Machine Company, of Pawtucket, was born March 24, 1856, at Ashton-under-Lyne, England, son of William Wright and Selina (Hibbert) Collins. He was but a child when his parents came to America and located at Pawtucket, R. I., where his educational training was received. Inheriting the mechanical skill which had been characteristic of his forefathers for generations, it was quite natural for him to take up that line of work in preference to a professional career. After leaving school he entered his father's employ in order to perfect himself in the trade of a machinist. This marked the beginning of a successful business career, in which Mr. Collins' activity is unabated. After some years in the employ of his father, he became a member of the firm of Collins Brothers, which came into existence in 1884, and comprised Henry and Joseph W. Collins. The firm name remained unchanged until 1907, when the business was incorporated as the Collins Brothers Machine Company.

For nearly a quarter of a century Joseph W. Collins has had a most prominent identification with the management, and likewise the success and progress of the concern, contributing not only his energies and industry, but his inventive genius and closest application. A thoroughly practical man in his line, a fine judge of workmen and their skill, Mr. Collins justly shares the credit for the high standing of the Collins Brothers Machine Company and the excellency of their product.

As a citizen Mr. Collins has always taken a deep interest in the advancement of his city, and while not a man seeking political honors his interest in public affairs is keen and continuous. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and fraternally both a Mason and an Odd Fellow, being a member of Jenks Lodge, No. 24, A. F. & A. M., of Central Falls; Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; and Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., of Pawtucket. He is a member of Pleasant View Baptist Church, and has held official positions therein.

On Oct. 17, 1883, Mr. Collins was married to Miss Eva E. Buffum, of Millbury, Mass., daughter of Benjamin W. Buffum, and to this union three children have been born: Harry Wright, born July 13, 1884, graduated from Brown University, class of 1907, having given special attention to the languages, fitting himself as a tutor of German. Benjamin Fletcher, born Feb. 24, 1886, graduated from the School of Design, Providence, in May, 1906, and is now associated with the Collins Brothers Machine Company. Elizabeth Selina, born Sept. 19, 1888, is at home.

BARTLETT (Providence-Lonsdale family). The Bartletts here treated are a branch of the old Massachusetts family of the name, which for generations has lived in that part of the Bay State adjacent to Rhode Island and out of which portions of Rhode Island came. The old town of Providence and subsequent towns coming out of it—Smithfield and Glocester—and as well the town of Cumberland, formerly a part of Massachusetts, were the early home of the family. Austin, the genealogist of early Rhode Island families, has Abner Bartlett a resident of Bellingham, Mass., and Glocester, R. I., and makes him a son of Jacob and grandson of John Bartlett, as marrying April 30, 1734, Abigail Arnold, and dying Dec. 13, 1784. While the late Hon. John Russell Bartlett begins his family record with Abner and Abigail (Arnold) Bartlett, he has Abner, the son of Abner, dying Oct. 27, 1756.

From this source, as just stated, descended the branch of Bartletts under consideration—the Providence-Lonsdale family—which has played so conspicuous a part in the affairs of Rhode Island and the nation through much of the nineteenth century. Reference is especially made to the two John Russell Bartletts, father and son: The late Hon. John Russell Bartlett, long secretary of State, acting governor (1861-62), author, distinguished in literature of Rhode Island, and as well useful in the nation; and the late Rear Admiral John Russell Bartlett, retired, whose career in his country's service, covering two wars, was one of distinction and large usefulness, of which both his native State and his country can justly be proud.

Rear Admiral Bartlett's descent from Abner and Abigail (Arnold) Bartlett—whose children of Glocester town record were Rufus, born Nov. 16, 1739; Elisha, born Sept. 7, 1742; and Caleb, born June 19, 1745—is through Rufus, Smith and John Russell Bartlett, the details of which descent, as far as known, follow in chronological order.

Rufus Bartlett, son of Abner and Abigail (Arnold) Bartlett, born in 1736 or 1739, of Glocester town record, married Margery Smith, of Chepachet, R. I., and died in 1798. His wife died in 1794. Their six children were; Anna, Alpha, Philadelphia, Mary, Abner and Smith.

Smith Bartlett, son of Rufus and Margery

(Smith) Bartlett, born April 24, 1780, in Cumberland, R. I., married (first) Nancy, born July 17, 1782, in Providence, daughter of John and Martha (Martin) Russell and a descendant of John Russell, who was one of the earliest inhabitants of Woburn, Mass., being a subscriber to the town orders drawn up for it at Charlestown, in 1740, her lineage from him being through John (2), Joseph, Thomas and John Russell (3). Nancy (Russell) Bartlett died Feb. 11, 1819, in Kingston, in the Dominion of Canada, and Mr. Bartlett married (second) Feb. 1, 1824, Mrs. Sarah Gladding, widow of Benjamin Gladding, daughter of John Russell and sister of his first wife.

Early in life Smith Bartlett was engaged in mercantile business in Providence, R. I. In 1806, after the birth of his two elder children, William and John, he removed to Kingston, then in Upper Canada, where he resumed business. He remained in that town during the war between Great Britain and the United States (1812-15), his mercantile operations becoming among the most extensive of any house in the Province. He continued to reside in Kingston until the breaking out of the Canadian rebellion in 1837, when he removed to the village of Cape Vincent, on the opposite shore of the St. Lawrence, in Jefferson county, N. Y., where he passed the remainder of his life. Mrs. Bartlett died at Cape Vincent, Oct. 4, 1851, and Mr. Bartlett passed away there Nov. 11, 1867, in the eighty-eighth year of his age.

To the first marriage of Mr. Bartlett were born children as follows: William Russell, born Dec. 7, 1803, in Providence, R. I.; John Russell, born Oct. 23, 1805, in Providence, R. I.; Smith, born May 13, 1808, who died Aug. 22, 1868; Martha Russell, born June 6, 1810, who died Oct. 24, 1865; George Francis, born Aug. 23, 1812; and Robert Coleman, born May 10, 1815, who died Dec. 15, 1853—the four last named all born in Kingston, Canada.

JOHN RUSSELL BARTLETT, son of Smith and Nancy (Russell) Bartlett, born Oct. 23, 1805, in Providence, R. I., married (first) May 15, 1831, Eliza Allen Rhodes, daughter of Gen. Christopher Rhodes, of Pawtuxet, R. I., and a descendant of Zachary or Zachariah Rhodes, one of the early settlers of the Colony of Rhode Island, his name first appearing as a resident of Seekonk, among the proprietors of the contemplated town of Rehoboth, Mass., in 1643, and in the following year he was among those who formed a compact for town government. Mrs. Bartlett dying at Pawtuxet, Nov. 11, 1853, Mr. Bartlett married (second) at New York, Nov. 12, 1863, Ellen, daughter of Nelson S. Eddy, of Providence, Rhode Island.

His father having removed in his early childhood to Kingston, then in Upper Canada, John Russell Bartlett there attended school. He also furthered his studies at Montreal and in the Somerville Academy, Somerville, N. Y. He was prepared for mercantile life in his native city, and in 1831, upon the organization of the Globe Bank at Providence, he was chosen its cashier. This relation he sustained to the bank until 1837, when, owing to the impairment of his health by the close confinement, he sought more active employment, resigning his office. On giving up banking, in 1837, he for a time was engaged in a commission house in New York City. The house, however, soon failing, he, in partnership with Mr. Charles Welford, opened a book store for the importation and sale of choice foreign works. These men were authorities on almost every subject treated in the works they collected, and their store soon became the popular resort for literary men. Mr. Bartlett continued in business in New York until 1849, and from 1837 until that time resided there.

While quite a young man Mr. Bartlett became interested in the cultivation of literature and science. He joined the Franklin Society, in Providence, before which he occasionally read papers. He was an officer of the Rhode Island Historical Society and later became a member of the New York Historical Society. He was the original projector of the Providence Athenaeum, and, calling in the aid of the Rev. Dr. Frederick Farley and Dr. Thomas H. Webb, they became the founders of this excellent institution, which now possesses upward of fifty thousand volumes and hundreds of members.

After his retirement from business in 1849, Mr. Bartlett was in June, 1850, appointed to establish the boundary between the United States and Mexico, under the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, and for the next three years, aided by experts, he made surveys and explorations, supplemented by astronomical, magnetic, meteorological, geological and botanical observations. While on this service he made extensive explorations in Texas, New Mexico, Chihuahua, Sonora, California, and the country now known as Arizona, the particulars of which were published in two volumes under the title of "Personal Narrative of Explorations and Incidents in Texas, etc., connected with the United States and Mexican Boundary Commission."

In 1855 Mr. Bartlett was elected secretary of State of Rhode Island, to which office he was annually re-elected until 1872, holding the office for seventeen years. By virtue of his office Secretary Bartlett was acting governor of Rhode Island in 1861-62, during the absence of the State Governor Sprague in the Civil war, his service continuing one year. During his service as secretary Mr. Bartlett became deeply interested in the history of Rhode Island, and for ten years occupied himself arranging and editing the State records. The results appeared in ten volumes (1856-65), entitled "Record of the Colony of Rhode Island and the Providence Plantations."

In 1867 Mr. Bartlett visited Europe, on which occasion he was made a delegate, by the American Antiquarian Society, to attend the International Congress of Archaeology, at Antwerp; and the American Ethnological Society to the International Congress of Anthropology and prehistoric Archaeology, at Paris. On his return he presented a report of their doings, which was printed. He again visited Europe, and was one of the United States Commissioners to the International Prison Congress, at London, and attended their meetings. He was a member of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries, Denmark; the American Antiquarian Society; American Geographical Society; Academy of Natural Sciences; National Institute for the Promotion of Science, Washington; and one of the vice-presidents of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. He was a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society; the Newport Historical Society; and an honorary or corresponding member of the Historical Societies of Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Western Reserve, Ohio, Maryland, Georgia, New Mexico and Arizona. Together with Albert Gallatin Mr. Bartlett founded the American Ethnological Society, to the proceedings of which he contributed extensively.

Mr. Bartlett devoted much of his time to literary pursuits, particularly to the field of archaeology, philology and bibliography. Among his published works not mentioned in the foregoing are: "Index to the Acts, etc., of the General Assembly of Rhode Island, 1758-1862" (1863); "Bibliography of Rhode Island, with Notes, Historical, Biographical and Critical" (1864); "Memoirs of Rhode Island Officers in the War of the Rebellion" (1867); "History of the Norton Family of Newport, R. I." (1878); "Naval History of Rhode Island" (1880); a "History of the Destruction of His Britannic Majesty's Schooner Gaspe in Narragansett Bay, June 10, 1772" (1862); "Literature of the Rebellion" (1866); "Bibliotheca Americana," a catalogue of books relating to America in the John Carter Brown Library at Providence (4 Vols., 1865-67); Genealogy of the Russell Family (1878); "Primeval Man and his Associations" (1868). He illustrated for his own private library John Marshall's "Life of Washington" (8 Vols.).

The children born to Mr. Bartlett and his wife Eliza Allen (Rhodes) Bartlett were as follows: Elizabeth D., born June 1, 1833, in Providence, died Oct. 8, 1840, in Pawtuxet; Anna R., born Oct. 19, 1835, married J. Antoine Duvillard, and both have died leaving one son, Henry Anthony; Henry A., born Aug. 19, 1838, in Pawtuxet, R. I., married Edith E. Blankman; George F., born Nov. 26, 1840, in New York, died in Pawtuxet, Sept. 8, 1842; John Russell was born Sept. 26, 1843, in New York; Leila, born July 11, 1846, in New York, died Oct. 4, 1850, in Providence; Fannie O. was born April 28, 1850, in Pawtuxet.

Mr. Bartlett died May 28, 1886, in Providence, R. I., and on the occasion the Providence Journal said editorially:

"In the death of John Russell Bartlett Rhode Island loses a citizen long familiar to the public as a writer, an official, a man of letters, and a citizen always interested in whatever pertained to the public welfare. Perfectly unassuming, with a nature which shrunk from notoriety, pleasant in social intercourse, but not courting popularity, Mr. Bartlett did a great deal of literary work and performed a vast amount of public service which redounded to the advantage and to the dignity of the State. And in all his contributions to the press, which were many and long continued, it will, we apprehend, be impossible to find a bitter or ungenerous word.

"Born in Providence on the 23d day of October, 1805, and living in this city for the greater part of his life, he was not merely by birth, but in sentiment and purpose, a Rhode Island man. He loved her institutions, he studied and illustrated her history; he lived among her most illustrious men as one of them. He knew them as he knew the traditions, the elements of social and political strength, the characteristics and the fundamental, the inner, the determinate life of the people of Rhode Island. And he was in many respects a faithful exponent of that type which is not appreciated by a mere surface survey of casual acquaintance.

"Mr. Bartlett did not long engage in commercial pursuits; his mental energies ran in other directions; the fact that in conjunction with Mr. Gallatin he founded the American Ethnological Society shows the bent of his mind, and his subsequent career is proof of the wisdom which led him to study and to literature. But Mr. Bartlett was not wholly a student; as commissioner for the survey of the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, in pursuance of the provisions of the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, he performed a most valuable public service, and his three years' labors in that expedition, beginning in 1850, gave to the nation an amount of information as novel as it was valuable.

"Mr. Bartlett was secretary of State of Rhode Island from 1855 to 1872. To him the State of Rhode Island is indebted for such recognition, and preservation and collation of its archives as have made them accessible to the student and to the statesman. We shall not enumerate the many works published by Mr. Bartlett, but it is noticeable that they were such as were calculated to afford useful knowledge and stimulate patriotism. His 'Bibliography of Books and Pamphlets Relating to the Civil War,' his 'Literature of the War,' his 'Memoirs of Rhode Island Officers in the War of the Rebellion,' manifest his intense regard for his State and for the nation.

"One of the most valuable labors of his life was the assistance he gave to the late John Carter Brown, in the creation of that unique and valuable library of books relating to the history of America, which could only have been gathered through and by the combination of great wealth unstintedly used, and a sound literary judgment, but supplemented by a zealous purpose.

"It will readily be seen that the work of Mr. Bartlett will long remain to do him honor. He has lived an active and useful life in a sphere which certainly is not crowded. He has added to the mental wealth of the State, as he has incited those sentiments which are essential to the culture and the proper pride and patriotism of a Commonwealth. He will be held in grateful recollection, not only for his personal worth, but for his high rank as a scholar and a public servant."

JOHN RUSSELL BARTLETT (2), son of Hon. John Russell and Eliza Allen (Rhodes) Bartlett, born Sept. 26, 1843, in New York City, married Feb. 6, 1872, at Lonsdale, R. I., Jeanie R., daughter of the late Hon. Thomas A. Jenckes, a lawyer of great distinction and a representative from Rhode Island from 1863 to 1871 in the United States Congress, and a descendant of one of the first families of the old Colony of Rhode Island. Mrs. Bartlett died in March, 1907, at Naples, Italy, while on an extended trip abroad.

On Nov. 28, 1859, Mr. Bartlett entered the Naval Academy, being appointed an acting midshipman. On May 30, 1861, he was detached from the academy and ordered to active service afloat. He went on the United States ship "Mississippi." In July, 1861, he assisted Master George Dewey in landing Wilson's Zouaves from the blockade of Mobile. On Dec. 2, 1861, he was transferred to the United States steamer "Brooklyn," Capt. Thomas T. Craven, being made watch, division and drill officer. He had charge of the fourth division of guns on the "Brooklyn" at the passage of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, below New Orleans, on April 24, 1862. He assumed charge of the first division when Lieutenant O'Kane was wounded during the fight. He was especially mentioned in the reports of the executive and commanding officers for his bravery. He was in the attack on Chalmette batteries, below New Orleans, and again mentioned by his superiors in their reports. He remained on the Mississippi river five months on the "Brooklyn," in charge of the first division of guns.

At the passage of Admiral Farragut of Vicksburg the "Brooklyn" remained below and Midshipman Bartlett took dispatches to the Admiral through the Confederate lines. On the blockade of Galveston and Mobile he had charge of the cutter on the cutting out expedition of Point Isabel, Texas. Midshipman Bartlett was promoted to ensign on July 22, 1863, and ordered to the staff of Admiral Dahlgren. He was frequently under fire while on the picket monitors. On Feb. 22, 1864, he was commissioned second lieutenant and was transferred from the United States steamer "New Ironsides" to the United States steamer "Susquehanna," on July 2, 1864. He had charge of the 200-pound Parrott at both bombardments of Fort Fisher, and was with the landing party at the assault in charge of the second command of the 1st Division. Lieutenant Bartlett, with his classmate Lieut. Benjamin Porter, led the charge. They remained in the ditch until dark, and Lieutenant Bartlett assisted to carry the then Ensign Robley D. Evans down to the beach and also helped the surgeon to care for him. He was especially mentioned by Admiral Porter, Commodore Gordon and Lieut.-Commander Blake and also received a vote of thanks from the State of Rhode Island.

On July 25, 1866, Lieutenant Bartlett was promoted to lieutenant-commander. He was executive officer on the United States steamer "Nipsic," Brazil Station. From Dec. 23, 1867, to April 26, 1869, he was assistant to Lieut.-Commander George Dewey at the United States Naval Academy.

Lieut.-Commander Bartlett began work on the survey of the seas that made him famous. He started on the United States steamer "Sabine" on Sept. 9, 1870, under Commander John G. Walker. He did the instrumental work on the survey of the Isthmus Tehuantepec under Capt. R. W. Shutfeldt. On his return to the United States he relieved that office and prepared the maps and reports of the survey.

Lieut.-Commander Bartlett was assigned to ordnance duty at the Boston Navy Yard from 1872 to 1873. He secured several three months' leaves of absence after his Boston duty, and in 1876 he was assigned to duty at the Hydrographic Office, and in 1877 went to the Bureau of Equipment. He compiled and arranged a watch, quarter and station bill for the use of the service.

On April 25, 1877, Lieut.-Commander Bartlett was made a commander, and he was placed in command of the coast survey steamer "Blake." On Oct. 26, 1878, and from that time till September, 1882, he was investigating the Gulf Stream, and made many discoveries.

Commander Bartlett took charge of the Hydrographic Office on June 30, 1883, reorganizing that office and enlarging its sphere. He established branch offices in the principal maritime cities, published a pilot chart of the Atlantic Ocean, advised the use of oil to calm the seas and published a number of pamphlets on icebergs, steamer routes and other matters of interest to seamen. Commander Bartlett was retired from active service July 12, 1897, for incapacity resulting from incidents of active service, under the act of Aug. 3, 1861.

When the war with Spain broke out Captain Bartlett reported at the department and volunteered his services, April 20, 1898. He was refused sea duty, but was made chief intelligence officer, in charge of the naval intelligence office.

He had charge of the attaches abroad and all correspondence, also the fund for secret agents in Spain. On May 9th he was appointed superintendent of the Coast Signal Service in addition to his other office. In telegraphic correspondence alone he sent 8,000 and received 28,000 words. Captain Bartlett carried out the scheme already planned and made a success of the service, spending $72,000 of the total $350,000 appropriated. He had 2,000 men on the lookout along the coast. It was through this service that the battleship "Oregon" reported her arrival at Jupiter Inlet and received orders to proceed to Key West.

On July 9, 1898, Captain Bartlett was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy Chief of the United States auxiliary naval forces, with headquarters at the Navy Department. This duty brought the command of fifty-nine vessels, with a personnel from the naval militia of about 3,000 men and an appropriation of over $3,000,000. Captain Bartlett performed this duty to the satisfaction of the department, and all bills were settled and audited at the time of his detachment, Oct. 31, 1898.

Capt. Bartlett's last appointment, in December, 1902, to the Advisory Board with Admiral Dewey, was an honor that he richly deserved for his untiring devotion to duty. On Feb. 18, 1903, he was confirmed as Rear Admiral, the bill providing for the appointment by President Roosevelt being passed by both branches of Congress and reading as follows: "Be it enacted, etc., that the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is hereby authorized to appoint John Russell Bartlett, a captain on the retired list of the Navy, to be a Rear Admiral on the retired list of the Navy with the rank of said office provided that no pay, bounty or other emolument shall accrue by reason of the passage of this act."

To Captain Bartlett and his wife were born children as follows: John Russell, born Nov. 17, 1873, in Cambridge, Mass., who died in Lonsdale, R. I., Sept. 30, 1875; Ida Russell, born Aug. 10, 1875, in Lonsdale, R. I.; and Eleanor, born May 8, 1882.

Rear Admiral Bartlett died Nov. 22, 1904, in St. Louis, Mo., and on the occasion the Providence Journal said editorially:

"In the death of Rear Admiral John Russell Bartlett, Rhode Island loses a useful and distinguished citizen. Coming of a deservedly prominent family, he served the nation as well as the State in a calling in which Rhode Islanders have played a conspicuously honorable part for more than one hundred years. His service has been long as well as worthy. He bore himself gallantly under Farragut and other leaders during the Civil war, and when called out of retirement upon the outbreak of our recent war with Spain he discharged important duties in the Navy Department at Washington to the entire satisfaction of President McKinley and Secretary Long. Within a month he was summoned by the Government to another responsible post. His death is in every sense untimely, for advancing years had brought no impairment of his characteristic energy. But his life was well ordered and well spent and he leaves behind him a record that his State will be proud to remember and honor."

HOXIE FAMILY (of Kent County, R. I.), one of the oldest in the State, is descended from Lodowick Hoxie (Hawksie), the founder of the family in New England. The name for over fifty years has been well known in the Pawtuxet valley, in which section of the town of Warwick the late Nathan E. Hoxie and his brothers, Stephen J. and Presbary Hoxie, have been engaged in the mercantile business. A record of this old and honored family is herewith given, the Roman numerals indicating generations.

(I) Lodowick Hoxie (name variously spelled Hawksie, Hoxsey and Hoxsie) came to America probably soon after 1650. He was a hatter, and is of record at Sandwich, Mass., as early as 1657. He was a freeman in 1675, and his name was in the list of townsmen in 1702. In 1664 he married Mary, born May 10, 1641, daughter of John Presbary, of Sandwich as early as 1643. Their children were: Bashua, Joseph, John, Ann, Gideon, Hezekial, John (2) and Solomon.

(II) John Hoxie, son of Lodowick, born March 3, 1677, married (first) Mary, daughter of Joseph and Experience (Harper) Hull, and (second) Ann, born Nov. 1, 1706, daughter of John and Elizabeth Richmond. His children, all born of the first marriage, were: John; Joseph; Solomon, born in December, 1710; Stephen, born Nov. 28, 1713; and Benjamin.

(III) Stephen Hoxie, son of John, born Nov. 28, 1713, married Elizabeth Kenyon, and their children, the eldest born in Westerly, the next six in Charlestown and the others in Richmond, were: Barnabas, born Sept. 1, 1735; Stephen, March 8, 1738; Elizabeth, May 13, 1740; Edward, Nov. 9, 1742; Hannah, Nov. 7, 1744; Samuel, June 13, 1747; Ruth, Nov. 4, 1749; John, May 28, 1752; Edward (2), Nov. 11, 1754; Mary, March 23, 1757; Gideon, Sept. 9, 1759; Presbary, Jan. 14, 1762. The father of these died Oct. 24, 1793, aged eighty years within twenty-six days, and was buried in the Friends' burying ground in Richmond, R. I. He was clerk of the Friends' meeting in Richmond. His wife, Elizabeth, died Oct. 25, 1778, aged fifty-nine years.

(IV) Presbary Hoxie, youngest son of Stephen, was born Jan. 14, 1762, in the town of Hopkinton, Washington Co., R. I., where he owned and operated land, following the occupation of a farmer. He also owned land in the town of Richmond, where he made his home in his later years and where he died. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was buried in their cemetery at Richmond. . On Feb. 27, 1791, he married Alice Perry, born in Charlestown, and their children were: Elizabeth, born Sept. 9, 1792; Stephen, born June 24, 1795; Susannah, born Jan. 2, 1798 (married Barker Brown); Alice, born Jan. 2, 1800 (married Peter Brown); and Mary, born Aug. 10, 1803.

(V) Stephen Hoxie, only son of Presbary, was born June 24, 1795, in the town of Hopkinton, R. I., and removed with his parents to Richmond, where he became engaged in farming, settling on land owned by his father, near the homestead of Dr. Nathan Knight, his father-in-law. He was quite successful in his agricultural labors, which he made his life work, dying on his farm in 1870, when seventy-five years of age. He was interred in the Friends' cemetery at Richmond, having been connected with the Society of Friends. He was first a Whig and later a Republican, and served as treasurer of the town of Richmond for some years. Stephen Hoxie married Mary Baker Knight, born Dec. 25, 1798, daughter of Dr. Nathan and Sarah (Anthony) Knight, and to them were born fourteen children, two dying in early infancy. The others were: (1) Anthony P., born March 28, 1815, died Aug. 1, 1816. (2) Elizabeth, born March 8, 1817, married Horace Greene, and resided in Richmond. (3) Robert Knight, born March 10, 1819, married Lydia Hoxie and resided at Shannock, R. I., where he died July 23, 1907. (4) Mary A., born April 8, 1821, married Isaac Andrews and resided in Charlestown, where she died March 15, 1893. (5) Nathan E. was born March 29, 1823. (6) Stephen J. was born Oct. 27, 1827. (7) Alice A., born Sept. 22, 1829, married Samuel Kingsley, and died in Richmond. (8) Sarah A., born Sept. 17, 1831, married Joseph Kenyon and died in Richmond, March 31, 1897. (9) Susan A., born Oct. 10, 1833, married Henry Lassel and resides in Grand Blanc, Mich. (10) Adelia P., born Oct. 30, 1835, married (first) Charles Lathrop and (second) Daniel Briggs. She is now a widow, residing in Georgiaville. (11) Marcella, born March 21, 1838, married Charles Kendall, and resided at Phenix, where she died May 4, 1895. (12) Presbary was born Feb. 19, 1840.

(VI) NATHAN E. HOXIE, son of Stephen, was born March 29, 1823, on the home farm, in the town of Richmond, where his boyhood days were spent, and where he attended school, later going to Colchester Academy, at Colchester, New London Co., Conn., after which he taught school for some years in the town of Exeter. After giving up teaching Mr. Hoxie began selling dry goods and notions, traveling from place to place, principally in New England towns, until 1860, when he located in Phenix, in the Pawtuxet valley. In partnership with his brother, Stephen J. Hoxie, he engaged in the grocery business, buying out the firm of the late William C. Ames and establishing the firm of N. E. & S. J. Hoxie. In 1872 they took into partnership their brother Presbary, the style becoming Hoxie Brothers, and branches were opened at Harris, Lippitt, Arkwright and Quidnick, making five stores. The business grew to be the largest of its kind in the Pawtuxet valley, and the Hoxie brothers became known all over the State as able and substantial business men, of sterling character. At the time of the death of Stephen J. Hoxie, in 1894, Nathan E. retired from the firm, which was taken up by a new management. After his retirement Nathan E. Hoxie settled in Phenix, where his death occurred April 18, 1905. He was interred in Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Hoxie was noted for his quiet but genial manner, and was respected by all with whom he had dealings of any kind. Fraternally he was connected with Warwick Lodge, No. 16, A. F. & A. M., and Landmark Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M. He attended the Episcopal Church, but was a firm believer in the doctrines of Swedenborg.

Mr. Hoxie was married (first) in Sterling, Conn., to Sarah A. Peckham, daughter of Rev. Peleg Peckham, of the Baptist Church, and one child, Sarah Peckham, was born to this union; she is the wife of Frank E. Marchant, a farmer of South Kingstown. Mrs. Hoxie died at the home of her parents at Sterling, Conn., and Mr. Hoxie was married (second) Nov. 27, 1862, at South Scituate, R. I., to Jane P. Richardson, a native of Portsmouth, daughter of Dr. William and Jane (Lawton) Richardson. Mrs. Hoxie is a faithful member of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church at Phenix, and a member of the Daughters of the King, at this place. She has spent much time in travel in this country.

(VI) STEPHEN JEROME HOXIE, son of Stephen, was born Oct. 27, 1827, on the home farm in Richmond, where he grew to manhood. Becoming, like his brothers, interested in the mercantile business, he engaged therein as a member of the firm of Hoxie Brothers, with which he continued until his death, Oct. 17, 1894. He was a man of considerable business ability, and much of the success of the well-known firm was due to his excellent management. He was well known and much respected. He married Martha A. Sweet, and they had two children: Frederick J., of Phenix, and Susie C., wife of Frank G. Smith, also of Phenix.

(VI) PRESBARY HOXIE, son of Stephen, now living retired at Phenix, was born in the town of Richmond, Feb. 19, 1840, was educated in the local schools, and worked on the home farm until eighteen years of age. At this time he started out selling dry goods and notions, traveling through different sections of Rhode Island for two years. In 1860, when his brothers started in business at Phenix, Mr. Hoxie became a clerk in the store, later becoming manager of the branch store at Lippitt. In 1872 he was taken into partnership, the firm becoming Hoxie Brothers, and he continued with the business until it was sold, in 1894, after the death of his brother, Stephen J. Since that time he has lived retired, making his home in Phenix, where most of his life has been spent. Mr. Hoxie is one of the most highly respected men of his locality. Broad-minded and liberal in his views, public-spirited to a high degree, he has won the esteem of the people of his community, who recognize and appreciate his sterling traits of character. He attends the Episcopal Church at Phenix. In political opinion he is a Republican, but he has never been an office seeker. Fraternally he is connected with Warwick Lodge, No. 16, A. F. & A. M., and Landmark Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M. He is a director in the Phenix Trust Company, of Phenix, formerly the Phenix National Bank; he was one of the organizers of the Pawtuxet Valley Water Company, serving for fifteen years after its organization as treasurer of the board, and he has been a member of the board of directors from the very beginning.

On April 29, 1886, Mr. Hoxie was united in marriage in Johnston, R. I., with Etta Gould Richardson, who was born in Johnston, daughter of Henry Laurens and Mary M. (Place) Richardson, and granddaughter of Dr. William and Jane (Lawton) Richardson. Mrs. Hoxie was educated in the public schools of Johnston, and at Lapham Institute, North Scituate, after leaving which she taught school in Johnston and Cranston for some time. She attends the Episcopal Church, and with her husband enjoys the esteem of a wide circle of acquaintances. Mr. and Mrs. Hoxie have had one child, Mary, born June 4, 1903.

The Lawton family, of which Mrs. Nathan E. Hoxie and Mrs. Presbary Hoxie are descendants, is one of the oldest of Newport County. Thomas Lawton, the first of the name here, was at Portsmouth as early as 1639, and was one of the twenty-nine who signed the compact. He was twice married, his second wife being Grace Parsons, daughter of Hugh and Elizabeth Parsons, and widow of William Bailey. She died in 1677, Mr. Lawton's death occurring in 1681. Their children were: Elizabeth, Daniel, Ann, Sarah and Isaac.

Isaac Lawton, son of Thomas, born Dec. 11, 1650, married March 3, 1673, Elizabeth Tallman, daughter of Peter Tallman, of Portsmouth. He died Nov. 23, 1731, his wife May 20, 1701. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Feb. 16, 1674, who married Edward Smith; Sarah, born Oct. 20, 1676; Ann, born April 20, 1678, who married Joseph Kenny, of Newport; Isaac, born May 26, 1681; Mary, born April 3, 1683; Isabelle, born March 12, 1684, who married William Corey, and died Jan. 24, 1722; Thomas, born April 25, 1686-87; Susanna, born April 3, 1689; Job, born April 28, 1691; Ruth, born April 9, 1694; and John, born Sept. 2, 1696.

John Lawton, son of Isaac, born Sept. 2, 1696, married March 10, 1719-20, Abigail Abbott, daughter of Josiah Abbott, of Newport, R. I., and their children of Portsmouth town record were: Elizabeth, born Jan. 19, 1720-21; Lydia, Sept. 15, 1722; Sarah, July 5, 1724; Isaac, Aug. 5, 1726; Abigail, April 1, 1729; Anna, Nov. 30, 1731; Mary, Aug. 2, 1733.

Isaac Lawton, son of John, born Aug. 5, 1726, married Oct. 18, 1749, Mary, daughter of David and Jemima Fish, of Portsmouth, R. I., and their children were born as follows: John, May 2, 1750; David, April 18, 1751; Abigail, Oct. 22, 1752; Sarah, April 7, 1754; Elizabeth, Dec. 2, 1755; Isaac, July 27, 1757; Hannah, Feb. 15, 1759; James, Nov. 27, 1760; Mary, Sept. 9, 1762; Stephen, June 15, 1764; Philip, Jan. 19, 1766; Nathan, Sept. 15, 1767; Susanna, Sept. 12, 1768; Peter, Sept. 3, 1770; Moses, July 10, 1772; Ruth, March 11, 1776.

Isaac Lawton (2), son of Isaac, born July 27, 1757, married Oct. 16, 1783, Elizabeth Gould, daughter of John and Sarah Gould, of Middletown, R. I., and their children were: Thomas, born July 23, 1784; Josiah, born April 5, 1786; Suttonias, who located in South Carolina; Phebe, born Jan. 26, 1790; Solomon, born Feb. 28, 1792; Mary, born July 27, 1794; Jane, born April 27, 1797; Charles, born Sept. 21, 1799; John Gould, born Feb. 25, 1802; and Sarah, born Nov. 25, 1804.

Jane Lawton, daughter of Isaac (2), born April 27, 1797, married Sept. 5, 1827, Dr. William Richardson, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Michael Eddy, of Portsmouth. Dr. Richardson had been married previously, May 8, 1815, by Rev. C. John Gibson, to Mary Almy, also of Portsmouth. Dr. Richardson was a well-known physician of Portsmouth and Newport, where he had an extensive practice, and later removed with his family to the town of Johnston, Providence county, where he continued his practice, and there spending the remainder of his life. The children of the Doctor's first marriage were as follows: Margaret, born Feb. 15, 1816, married William Henry Underwood; Mary Lawton, born June 1, 1817, died young; Elizabeth, born Nov. 9, 1818, also died young; William, born March 29, 1820, died unmarried; Charlotte, born in January, 1822, married Henry A. Lawton, of South Scituate; Frances Potter, born Aug. 16, 1823, died young; and Joseph Sewell, born March 12, 1825, died at Knightsville, R. I., married Adeline A. Bailey. To the second marriage of Dr. Richardson came children as follows: Henry Laurens, born June 6, 1828; Sarah Almy, who died unmarried; Charles Lawton, who died unmarried, at Victor, Colo., March 11, 1906; James Chaplin, who married (first) Mary A. Phillips and (second) Sarah B. Scott, and died in Phenix Feb. 13, 1902; and Jane Phebe, widow of Nathan E. Hoxie, residing at Phenix.

Henry Laurens Richardson, son of Dr. William Richardson, was born in Portsmouth, R. I., June 6, 1828, and made his home in Johnston, R. I., where he died April 2, 1902. He married Mary M. Place, and their daughter, Etta Gould Richardson, became the wife of Presbary Hoxie, of Phenix.

BUCKLIN (Rehoboth-Providence family). The Providence Bucklins under consideration are a branch of the Rehoboth family, descendants of Joseph Buckland or Buckline. Here, in and about that ancient town and in the parts of Rhode Island adjacent thereto, generation after generation of the name, in turn, have continued to live through a period of approximately 250 years. A true statement would be perhaps that since not far from the middle of the eighteenth century the Rhode Island branch of the family has been active and more or less prominent in the business life of this section, or in their communities elsewhere.

Some of the early Bucklins here, in addition to farming, operated grist mills on the banks of the Seekonk river, and were owners of land in the vicinity of Pawtucket Falls, upon which have since stood large and most valuable manufacturing interests. The Bucklin family, too, was represented in the struggle for independence, as the records of Massachusetts and Rhode Island give evidence. Of the Rhode Island branch of the Bucklins of more recent generations, there are recalled: the late James C. Bucklin, the architect and designer, long of the firm of Tallman & Bucklin, builders and lumber merchants of Providence; the late Thomas Peck Bucklin, of the firm of Bucklin & Crane, of New York City, extensive merchants in foreign trade and who retired with a large fortune to a house built by him on the site of the old homestead in the near-by town of Seekonk; Samuel S. and William Bucklin, of Providence, well and favorably known business men of that city, and of a still younger generation, several of the sons of these men just mentioned, are now active and prominent in business. Among these may be mentioned Edward Carrington Bucklin, long prominently officially identified with manufacturing interests in this section; and Col. James J. P. Bucklin, a veteran of the Civil war, whose gallantry on the field of battle led to his advancement to the command of a regiment, and who, since the war, has repeatedly been honored by his fellow citizens and has served in the responsible position of harbor master of the port of Providence.

It is interesting both to a family and to a community to learn something of those who have been identified in years gone by in the upbuilding of both and in the case of the Bucklin family this is unusually true. Beginning with their progenitor in the line of the old Rehoboth stock, the genealogy is as follows:

(I) The Bucklin family record, as shown by the town records of vital statistics, begins with the marriage of Joseph Bucklin (Buckline) and Deborah Allen, Nov. 5, 1659. The children of Joseph and Deborah (Allen) Bucklin, of Rehoboth town record, were: Deborah, born Sept. 16, 1660; Joseph, Feb. 16, 1663; Barak, Aug. 1, 1666; John, May 10, 1668; James, July 3, 1669; Isaac, Jan. 31, 1672; Nehemiah, Sept. 16, 1675; Nehemiah, March 31, 1678; and Lydia, Sept. 5, 1680.

(II) Joseph Bucklin (Buckland), Jr., born Feb. 16, 1663, son of Joseph and Deborah, was married June 30, 1691, to Mehitabel Sabin. They had children as follows: Deborah, born May 5, 1692; Joseph, Sept. 20, 1694; Martha, Sept. 6, 1696; Benjamin, Jan. 30, 1697-8; John, March 30, 1701; Rachel, Dec. 1, 1703; Nehemiah, June 6, 1706; David, Oct. 31, 1708; Esther, Oct. 3, 1710; Jonathan, Sept. 13, 1713; and William, Feb. 23, 1716-17.

(III) John Bucklin, son of Joseph and Mehitabel, born March 30, 1701, married Dec. 3, 1724, Frelove Smith, born April 4, 1698, daughter of Daniel and Abigail Smith, of Rehoboth, and their children were: Daniel, born Oct. 24, 1725; Abigail, 1728; Abigail (2), Jan. 12, 1730-31; John, Feb. 12, 1732-33; Frelove, Jan. 7, 1734-5; Esther, July 4, 1736; Sarah, July 18, 1740; and Joseph, Feb. 21, 1742-3.

(IV) Capt. John Bucklin, son of John and Frelove (Smith) Bucklin, born Feb. 12, 1732-3, married Jan. 5, 1764, Jemima Peck, born May 19, 1744, daughter of Thomas and Deliverance Peck, and their children were: Frelove, born Dec. 30, 1764; George, Dec. 6, 1766; Sarah, Feb. 10, 1768; John, Oct. 26, 1770; Thomas, Sept. 27, 1772; Deliverance, Dec. 2, 1774; Huldah, Oct. 6, 1778; Esther, Sept. 17, 1782; and Sylvester Fuller, July 2, 1784.

From "Massachusetts in the War of the Revolution" we take the following: "John Bucklin, private in Capt. James Hill's company, Col. Carpenter's regiment; enlisted Dec. 8, 1776, discharged Dec. 13, 1776; service six days on alarm at Bristol; reported as belonging to the alarm list; roll sworn to at Rehoboth; also Capt. Nathaniel Ide's company, Col. Thomas Carpenter's regiment, marched from Rehoboth Aug. 7, 1780, service nine days under Gen. Hieth."

(V) George Bucklin, son of John and Jemima, born Dec. 6, 1766, married Jan. 20, 1799, Hannah Bennett, of Cumberland, and died at Seekonk, Feb. 14, 1850, aged eighty-three years, two months and eight days. Mrs. Hannah Bucklin died at Seekonk, Nov. 16, 1851, aged seventy-seven years, one month and four days. Their children were: John, born Nov. 4, 1799; George Augustus, May 1, 1801; Hiram, Feb. 14, 1803; Thomas Peck, Sept. 25, 1804;

Virgil Bennett, Nov. 23, 1806; and Jane Elizabeth, Nov. 13, 1813.

(VI) THOMAS PECK BUCKLIN, son of George and Hannah Bucklin, born Sept. 25, 1804, married Eliza Comstock, and their children were: Thomas P., Jr., Eliza Comstock and Hannah Bennett, all deceased; George; Mary Collins, who married Nov. 26, 1867, Charles D. Owen, and had children, Thomas B. (born Sept. 17, 1873), Charles Dexter (Sept. 26, 1875) and Evan Bucklin (Nov. 10, 1883); William Comstock, deceased; Katherine A.; Edward Carrington; Julia Bullock, deceased; and Jane Wells.

Thomas P. Bucklin was born at Seekonk, R. I., where he grew to manhood and entered the employ of Edward Carrington, subsequently going to New York. There he engaged in a tea business very successfully, and became a large owner of vessels engaged in the trade with China and foreign ports. He was a member of the firm of Bucklin & Crane, one of the founders of the great business. The firm owned the clippers "Comet," "Celestial," "Black Hawk," "Intrepid" and others, all being famous vessels of their time. He amassed a large fortune, probably aggregating a half million, and was one of the wealthiest men of his day. His last years were passed on the site of the old homestead, where he had erected a new house. The land had descended in the family from the days of Queen Anne. A self-made man almost entirely, he was one of the eminent business men of his generation. Although he retired from active participation in the business of the firm in the sixties, he remained a silent partner for some years.

(VII) EDWARD CARRINGTON BUCKLIN, vice president and treasurer of the Interlaken Mills, which now include the Arkwright Company and the Harris Manufacturing Company, was born at Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1850. His education was pursued at the Lyons Grammar School in Providence, at a boarding school in Vermont, and in Mowry & Goff's English and Classical School at Providence. After completing this very liberal education, Mr. Bucklin lived for two years on the frontier of Colorado, where he was a member of the Governor's Guard in Denver, in 1871. For some eighteen months he was in a commission house in New York, and also received a practical training in a cotton mill. On Oct. 14, 1876, he was elected treasurer of the Arkwright Manufacturing Company, and in 1877 treasurer of the Harris Manufacturing Company, and in 1882 treasurer of the Interlaken Mills. Upon the reorganization of these large industries and their combination, he became vice president and treasurer as mentioned above.

Mr. Bucklin has numerous other important business interests. He is vice president of the Providence Land and Wharf Company; was formerly a director of the National Bank of North America; is a director of the Providence Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of the Mercantile Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Textile Fire Insurance Company. His social, business and fraternal connections are numerous. He is a member of the Providence Art Club; the Rumford Polo Club; the Agawam Hunt; the Providence Athenaeum; and the New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

On Feb. 4, 1874, Mr. Bucklin was united in marriage at Providence, with Miss Jessie Howard, daughter of ex-Gov. Henry Howard and a granddaughter of ex-Gov. Elisha Harris. They have had the following children: Henry Howard, born Oct. 26, 1874, died July 11, 1878; Edward Carrington, Jr., born Dec. 30, 1876, died Nov. 20, 1883; Harris Howard, born May 21, 1879; Thomas Peck, born July 23, 1881; Janet, born Aug. 6, 1885; and Dorothy, born May 18, 1888.

FELIX AUGUSTUS WARD, one of the enterprising and progressive young business men of Newport, R. I., junior member of the well-known firm of J. W. Horton & Co., furniture dealers and upholsterers, is a descendant of one of New England's oldest settled families.

The name Ward is one conspicuous in Rhode Island annals, one of the two early Newport families furnishing several men of distinction through the Colonial period, among them several secretaries of the Colony for long periods, a deputy governor, two governors and a colonel in the Revolution. These were descendants of John Ward of Gloucester, England, and Newport, R. I., who served as an officer in Cromwell's army.

Another John Ward, who may have been a son of Marmaduke Ward, whose name appears in a list of inhabitants admitted to Newport, R. I., after March 18, 1636, appeared at Portsmouth, R. I., of which town he was deputy in 1699, 1701 and 1703. Mr. Ward married Sarah Nicholson, born March 1, 1653, daughter of Joseph and Jane Nicholson. He died in 1705, and she after that year. Their two children were: Elizabeth, who married Jeremiah Gould; and Joseph, who married Sarah Weeden, and through whose several sons the name has been perpetuated. The home of Joseph and Sarah Ward was in the town of Portsmouth, R. I., and their children were: Elizabeth, born June 29, 1725; John, born Dec. 1, 1727; Joseph, born Nov. 26, 1729; Richard, born Aug. 7, 1731; Sarah, born March 19, 1734; Philip, born Aug. 13, 1735; and Marmaduke, born June 6, 1737.

For generations the towns of Portsmouth, Middletown and Newport have been the home towns of the posterity of John Ward of Portsmouth, but the vital records of both town and church are so fragmentary and incomplete as not to enable the tracing of lineage. The especial family with which this article deals, some of the descendants of the late Abner Ward of Middletown, have been residents of that town for generations and latterly at Newport, where now resides Felix Augustus Ward, son of Adoniram Judson, grandson of Abner, great-grandson of John Barker, and great-great-grandson of Philip Ward.

Philip Ward was a farmer by occupation, and a native of Middletown, where he spent his entire life. Among the children born to him and his wife Martha was John Barker Ward, also a native of that town. He married Elizabeth Barker, of Middletown, daughter of Jeremiah Barker, and their children were: Abner, was the grandfather of Felix A. Ward. Henry, a carpenter by trade, and later a boat-builder, died in Providence. John, who in early life was engaged in farming in Middletown, and was later employed on the construction of the locks on the Erie canal, died in Providence, where he was connected with the Corliss Engine Works for a number of years. William, also a farmer, died in Saratoga county, N. Y. Martha, died unmarried. Elizabeth, also died unmarried.

Abner Ward, grandfather of Felix A., was born in April, 1800, and died in December, 1876, in Newport. He followed farming throughout a long and useful life, was a well-known and highly respected citizen, and was considered well-to-do for his day. He married Margaret Pike Peckham, daughter of Felix and Tryphena (Stockman) Peckham, of Middletown, and she died at the age of eighty-two years, in Newport. Their children were: Martha married William F. Peckham, of Middletown, and there died; Ann Maria married Aaron Coggeshall, of Newport, and also died in Middletown; John B., who died in Middletown, married Sarah Ann Sherman, of that place; Gilbert L., who married (first) Sarah Weaver and (second) Harriet Smith, followed farming throughout his life and died in Middletown; Adoniram Judson is mentioned further on; Jacob S., who married (first) Harriet Barker and (second) Harriet Smith, followed farming all of his life in Middletown, where he died.

Adoniram Judson Ward was born April 16, 1830, in Middletown, R. I., where his early education was received. This was supplemented by a course at the East Greenwich (R. I.) Academy. In early life it was his intention to learn the tailor's trade, and he apprenticed himself for two years to that calling, but gave it up to teach school, a vocation which he followed for four years, first in Portsmouth and later in Middletown. In September, 1855, he embarked in the book, stationery and music business in Newport, at No. 99 Thames street, the site now occupied by A. C. Landers & Co., and there he remained for about three years, when he removed to the store now occupied by Col. John Rogers. There he conducted a book and stationery store for several years, during which time he was in partnership with the late Felix Peckham, under the firm name of A. J. Ward, Agent. In 1879 Mr. Ward went out of business, but later opened a store on Clarke street, being in the stationery business in all for about thirty years. Mr. Ward was for a time in business with his son Remington, but in later years lived retired.

Mr. Ward was a member of Rhode Island Lodge, No. 12, I. O. O. F., of Newport, of which he was a past grand, was a charter member of Aquidneck Encampment, No. 5, I. O. O. F., of which he was past high priest, and was a member of Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of Newport. He was connected with the Central Baptist Church, having formerly been a member of the First Baptist Church, which body he served three years as Sunday-school superintendent. In politics he was a stanch Republican.

Mr. Ward was married Jan. 8, 1855, to Harriet Field Gould, daughter of Thomas Gould, of Portsmouth, and to them were born these children: Thomas Gould died when twenty-two months old; Remington, who is engaged in the job printing business in Newport, married Lucy Helena Myrtle Bull, of Woodstock, N. B., and has two children, Albert Hartley Gould Ward and Elizabeth Josephine Ward; Felix Augustus is mentioned further on; Howard Gould, engaged in the job printing business in Newport, married Elizabeth Maude Dunham, of Newport; Adoniram J., Jr., died aged eleven months; Mabel Lacey married William Newell Gould, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., where they reside. The father of this family passed away in Newport, April 28, 1906, aged seventy-six years.

Felix Augustus Ward was born Nov. 30, 1863, in Newport, and acquired his education in the public schools of his native city. Leaving school at the age of fifteen years, he became a clerk for Gould & Son, the then well-known merchant tailoring firm, in whose employ he remained about two and one-half years, after which he became assistant librarian of the People's Free Library, in which capacity he spent the next two and one-half years. He was then employed by Henry A. Young & Co., publishers, of Boston, Mass., but after about five months in that company's employ he returned to Newport and on April 28, 1884, became a clerk in the furniture store of Hazard & Horton. He continued as a trusted employe for about eight years, and on Feb. 2, 1892, became a member of the firm of J. W. Horton & Co., which succeeded Hazard & Horton.

Mr. Ward is very prominent in the fraternal circles of the city, his Masonic relations being with St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., of which he is past master; Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M., of which he was scribe; DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. & S. M., of which he has been principal sojourner; Washington Commandery, No. 4, K. T., of Newport; and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine; he was grand sword bearer of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Rhode Island, and is now junior grand steward of the Grand Lodge of the State of Rhode Island. He is also a member of Aquidneck Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, of Newport, of which he is past worthy patron. Further, he holds membership in Rhode Island Lodge, No. 12, I. O. O. F., which organization he joined in 1885, and in which he is a past grand; and in Newport Camp, No. 7677, Modern Woodmen of America, of which he was first venerable consul, was also the first State banker and is at present State consul of the State organization. Mr. Ward was a member of the Business Men's Association, later becoming connected with the Miantonomi Club, which succeeded the Business Men's Association. He was also formerly a member of the Newport County Club and for several years was a member of the Newport Artillery Company. In politics Mr. Ward is a staunch Republican. He has served his native city as a member of the common council from the Second ward, during the administration of Mayor Garrettson. He was formerly a member of the Central Baptist Church (now the Second Baptist), the society of which church he served for seven years as treasurer. He has since become a member of the First Presbyterian Church and is now secretary of its board of trustees.

On Oct. 16, 1889, Mr. Ward was married to Grace Olivia Tibbetts, foster-daughter of William H. Baxter, of Portland, Maine, and to this union was born one son, Baxter Gould, who died in infancy.

Mr. Ward is an energetic and enterprising business man, and enjoys the friendship of a very large circle of friends.

HON. WILLIAM WINTHROP BLODGETT, for many years a leading figure in the legislative and judicial annals of Rhode Island, and for more than half a century an honored resident of Pawtucket, R. I., is a son of Eli and Irene Blodgett, born in Randolph, Vt., July 8, 1824. He is a descendant from a long line of English ancestors, the founder of the American branch of the family being Thomas Blodgett, who emigrated from London with his wife and two children, in 1635, and settled in Cambridge, Mass. From their second son, Samuel, born in England, the genealogy is traced through Samuel (2), of Woburn, Mass., Joshua, of Monson, Mass., Joshua (2), of Stafford, Conn., and Benjamin and Eli, both of Randolph, Vermont.

(I) Thomas Blodgett, an Englishman, thirty years of age, in 1635 departed from London in the ship "Increase," being accompanied by his wife,

Susanna, aged thirty-seven, and their two children, Daniel, aged four years, and Samuel, an infant, one and a half years old. In Cambridge there were born to them: Susanna, born in June, 1637; and Thomas, who died Aug. 7, 1639. Thomas Blodgett probably died in 1642, as according to the records, his will was probated July 8th of that year, and by it his widow and three children were provided for. On Feb. 15, 1644, the widow married James Thompson, of Woburn, Mass. Her daughter, Susanna, on Nov. 28, 1655, became the wife of Jonathan Thompson, son of James Thompson by his first wife. Thomas Blodgett was a glover by occupation. The children born to the marriage of James Thompson and Susanna Blodgett were: Daniel, who removed to Chelmsford, Mass.; Samuel and Susanna, who were lifelong residents of Woburn, Mass. [Benjamin Thompson (Count Rumford), the famous scientist, was a descendant of the Jonathan Thompson, mentioned above.]

(II) Samuel Blodgett, second child of Thomas and Susanna, was, as stated, born in England, and brought to the United States by his parents when an infant of but one and a half years old. He removed from Cambridge to Woburn at an early age, and on Dec. 13, 1655, married Ruth Iggleden (or Eggleiden). The following seven children were born to their union: Ruth, Dec. 28, 1656; Samuel, Dec. 10, 1658; Thomas, Feb. 26, 1661, married Rebecca Tidd, on Nov. 11, 1685; Susanna (twin sister of Thomas) married Dec. 29, 1685, James Simonds; Sarah, born Feb. 17, 1668; Martha and Mary, twins, born Sept. 15, 1673, the former of whom married Joseph Winn, in 1696. Samuel Blodgett, the father, died July 3, 1687, and his wife died Oct. 14, 1703.

(III) Samuel Blodgett (2), of Woburn, son of Samuel and Ruth, married Huldah, daughter of William Simonds, and died Nov. 5, 1743. It is of record that he represented Woburn in the General Court of Massachusetts in 1693. His widow died March 14, 1745-46. They were the parents of the following children: Samuel, born Dec. 21, 1683; Daniel, March 24, 1685; William, Jan. 11, 1686-87; Huldah, Feb. 9, 1688-89, married Ebenezer Reed; Caleb, Nov. 11, 1691; Joshua, Feb. 26, 1693-94; Josiah, March 27, 1696; John, April 19, 1699; Benjamin, March 4, 1701; and Nathan, March 15, 1704.

(IV) Joshua Blodgett, sixth child of Samuel Blodgett and Huldah Simonds, settled in Monson (then a part of Brimfield), Mass., in all likelihood prior to December, 1724, since one of his sons was born there on the 21st of that month. Mr. Blodgett left his wife and five children in Monson in 1735, and departed for England to claim property to which he believed he was entitled. No trace of him could afterward be obtained. His widow subsequently married a Mr. Warner. Joshua Blodgett left two sons, James and Joshua, Jr., and three daughters. Stafford, Conn., was founded about 1720, and among the first dozen settlers were Daniel and Josiah Blodgett, who are believed to be brothers of Joshua.

(V) Joshua Blodgett (2), of Stafford, Conn., son of Joshua, married a Miss Alden, and was the great-grandfather of Judge Blodgett. Records regarding him are very defective.

(VI) Benjamin Blodgett, son of Joshua (2), was born in Stafford, Conn., about 1760, and when some twenty years of age removed to Randolph, Vt. By occupation he was a farmer, and he served in the war of the Revolution. He married Mary Riddel, and died at Randolph, Dec. 12, 1843, at the age of eighty-three years. He had nine sons and three daughters. Of these there is definite record of the following: Luther graduated from the University of Vermont, was a lawyer and practiced his profession in Royalton and Bethel, Vt.; Joseph, a tanner of Randolph, Vt., removed to Geneva, Wis., where he died; Benjamin was editor and publisher of a newspaper in Geneva, N. Y.; Dan, a graduate of Dartmouth, and Andover Theological Seminary, settled as a clergyman in Fairlee, Vt., and married Pamela Child, but had no children; Eli, the father of Judge Blodgett, is mentioned below.

(VII) Eli Blodgett, son of Benjamin and Mary (Riddel) Blodgett, was born in Randolph, Vt., in 1798, and became a farmer. He married Irene, daughter of John Blodgett, and died in August, 1876. They had five children, as follows: (1) Elijah Dickinson, born in May, 1820, at time of his death, June, 1904, was town clerk and town treasurer of St. Johnsbury, Vt. He was in early life a merchant at Royalton, Vt., and later for many years was in the employ of the Fairbanks Scale Works in St. Johnsbury. He married (first) Augusta Maxham, of Randolph, by whom he had one daughter, and (second) Eliza Wood, of Montpelier, daughter of Zenas Wood, by whom he had one son Herbert Wood Blodgett, a resident of St. Johnsbury. Both wives and his daughter are deceased. (2) William Winthrop is mentioned below. (3) Miss Elizabeth Mandane, born in 1826, is a resident of Crete, Neb. (4) Pearl Davis, born at Randolph, Vt., in May, 1828, served during the Civil war as captain of the 10th Vt. V. I., and afterward was an insurance agent at St. Johnsbury. He died in Burlington, Vt., May 22, 1903, leaving a wife (Laura Freeman) and five children, namely: Pearl Freeman, with the National Life Insurance Company at Montpelier, Vt.; Ernest, assistant postmaster at St. Johnsbury; William Winthrop, with the Fairbanks Scale Works, at St. Johnsbury; Harriet, wife of a Mr. Belnap of Minneapolis; and Elis W., manager of a music store in Burlington, Vt. (5) Harriet, is the widow of Rev. William P. Bennett, late of Crete, Nebraska.

(VIII) William Winthrop Blodgett, son of Eli and Irene, born July 8, 1824, in Randolph, Vt., married Oct. 9, 1855, Salome W. Kinsley of Pawtucket, R. I., and the union was blessed with seven children.

Judge Blodgett was prepared for college at the Orange County Grammar School of his native town. In 1843 he entered the University of Vermont at Burlington, from which institution he was graduated with the highest honors in 1847. Following a brief period of teaching in that same year, as principal of the Keene (N. H.) Academy, young Blodgett was prepared for the legal profession under the direction of, respectively, the late Hon. William P. Wheeler, in Keene, N. H., and Hon. Isaac F. Redfield, then Chief Justice of the State of Vermont, and Messrs. Wires & Peck, at Burlington. Soon after his admission to the Bar in Orange county, Vt., Mr. Blodgett removed to Pawtucket, then in Massachusetts. He was admitted in November, 1850, to practice in the courts of Massachusetts, by the Supreme court then sitting at New Bedford. This was the beginning of a long, honorable and useful professional and public career.

The long pending controversy between Massachusetts and Rhode Island relating to the eastern boundary line of Rhode Island was brought to a satisfactory close through the wise counsel and proposal of Mr. Blodgett in 1861. He had been a member from Attleboro and Pawtucket of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1859-60, and in the year following the boundary controversy culminated in a compromise line agreed upon by the counsel of the respective States, and submitted to their legislatures for ratification. This proposed line of division was unsatisfactory to Rhode Island and would have been rejected by that State. A new line was proposed by Mr. Blodgett, and finally adopted, and on March 1, 1862, the town of Pawtucket and that part of Seekonk, now East Providence, became a part of Rhode Island. On the day of the transfer Mr. Blodgett was elected to the Rhode Island Senate. He has since frequently and of later years continuously been honored with positions of public trust and responsibility. He, too, has continuously practiced his profession in Rhode Island. For twenty-seven years he has represented Pawtucket in the House of Representatives. In 1868 he was elected Judge of Probate for North Providence, which office he held by annual election until 1874, when the village of Pawtucket was consolidated into one town of the same name. This office he held continuously until 1879, when he resigned, but after a period he was again chosen to the same office, and in all probably has served for more than thirty-five years. He was commissioner of insolvency for the State of Massachusetts and was a Rhode Island Bank Commissioner.

Judge Blodgett is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and has served as one of the Diocesan convention, and on the Standing committee of the Diocese for a number of years.

The children born to Judge Blodgett and his wife were: Ellen Hobert, born July 30, 1856, married Dr. Frederick J. Beckwith, of New London, Conn.; Edward Wilkinson was born Sept. 27, 1857; William Constantine died at the age of ten years; Lloyd Morton, deceased, born Feb. 23, 1863, was a clergyman; John was born April 15, 1865; Chauncey Hayden, born March 23, 1870, is rector of St. John's Church, Fall River, Mass.; and Kinsley, born Feb. 3, 1874, is a clergyman at Menlo Park, California.

EDWARD WILKINSON BLODGETT, son of William W. and Salome (Kinsley) Blodgett, was educated in the public schools of Pawtucket and at Yale University, graduating from the latter institution in the class of 1878. He studied law with his father, was admitted to the Bar in 1881, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession in Pawtucket, and in the discharge of various public functions connected with it. In 1882 the General Assembly of Rhode Island elected him clerk of the Tenth Judicial district and by successive elections, every three years, he held the position until 1889, when he resigned to engage in the active practice of his profession at Pawtucket. He is now conceded to be one of the most able lawyers on the local Bar, and accordingly has come into prominent notice.

As an able lawyer and stalwart Republican actively interested in municipal affairs, Mr. Blodgett has held the office of city solicitor by annual elections since February, 1900. For five years he was also a member of the school board, being its chairman during the last years of his incumbency. He is identified with the A. F. & A. M., and with St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Pawtucket, of which he is one of the vestrymen.

Edward W. Blodgett married Caroline Alden Morgan, daughter of Theodore M. and Caroline (Dodge) Morgan, and their children are: Morgan, Caroline, William Winthrop and Edith Kinsley.

REV. LLOYD M. BLODGETT, deceased, third son of Judge Blodgett, was a graduate of Brown University, and of Cambridge Theological Seminary. He was ordained to the ministry and for three years was a curate of a church in Nice, France. He then became rector of the church in Wilkinsonville, Mass., and died in January, 1898.

JOHN BLODGETT, fifth child of Judge Blodgett, was graduated from the Institute of Technology in Boston, Mass., and is a civil engineer in the employ of the American Bridge Company, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

REV. CHAUNCEY H. BLODGETT, son of Judge Blodgett, graduated from Harvard University (1892) and from the Cambridge Theological School. He was deacon of Grace Episcopal Church of New York City, under Dr. Huntington; later, for three years, he was assistant rector of St. Paul's Church, Rochester, N. Y., and since 1900 has been rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, of Fall River, Massachusetts.

REV. KINSLEY BLODGETT, son of Judge Blodgett, was a student at Harvard University for a time, and for three years was in attendance at the Institute of Technology, Boston, Mass. He was employed as a civil engineer at Harrisburg, Pa., for about two years, but the profession was not to his liking, and he subsequently entered Hobart College, at Geneva, N. Y., from which he graduated. Still later he pursued a theological course at the Cambridge School, of which he is also a graduate. He served as deacon of Grace Episcopal Church, New York City, for three years, and in August, 1904, departed for the scene of his present rectorship, at Menlo Park, California.

SMITH. One of the best known and most prominent of New England families is that of Smith, members of which may be found throughout various sections of the country, and particularly in the State of Rhode Island, where reside Orin Smith, Amsden H. Smith, Orin Smith, Jr., and Frederick W. Smith—all in Pawtucket and vicinity. The following is a genealogical record of the family from the progenitor, the Roman numerals signifying generations.

(I) Henry Smith, of the County of Norfolk, England, came to New England in 1638 in the ship "Diligent," with wife, three sons, two daughters, and three men and two maid servants. He was made a freeman March 13, 1639; was a representative in 1641; removed to Rehoboth, Mass., in 1643, and there died in 1649. His will, of Nov. 3, 1647, gives his wife his house and makes her the executrix of the document, names brother Thomas, cooper, and sons Henry and Daniel, and daughter Judith. The will of Judith, his wife, dated Oct. 24, 1650, names her son Henry, daughter Judith, son and daughter Hunt, son John's three children, son Daniel and three children of her son Hunt.

(II) Daniel Smith, son of Henry, married Oct. 20, 1659, Esther Chickering, and the following children are assigned to this union by Arnold in his Vital Statistics of Rehoboth, Mass.: Sarah, born Nov. 19, 1660; Hester, Feb. 7, 1661; Paul, Oct. 16, 1663; Elizabeth, Oct. 24, 1664; Mary, Aug. 13, 1666; Solomon, Sept. 2, 1668; Sarah, Aug. 8, 1670; Daniel, Aug. 28, 1672; Nathaniel, Aug. 7, 1674; Ebenezer, July 23, 1676; Judith, Feb. 7, 1678; Rebecca, April 26, 1680. The mother of these children was buried June 6, 1687, and the father, May 1, 1692.

(III) Daniel Smith (2), son of Daniel, born Aug. 28, 1672, married June 23, 1696, Abigail Preston, of Dorchester, Mass., and their children of Rehoboth town record were, according to Arnold: Frelove, born April 4, 1698; Abigail, April 19, 1700; Daniel, March 27, 1702; Solomon,

Henry A. Smith

Dec. 27, 1704; Nathaniel, April 19, 1708; Esther, June 6, 1712; Elizabeth, Oct. 12, 1715; John, Jan. 28, 1718-19. The father of these died March 31, 1724. "Abigail (Smith), widow, died Nov. 9, 1732."

(IV) Daniel Smith (3), son of Daniel (2), born March 27, 1702, married Feb. 29, 1727-28, Judith Robinson, of Rehoboth, Mass., and their children of Rehoboth town record were: Daniel, born March 3, 1728-29; Judith, April 19, 1732; Rachel, Jan. 13, 1735-36; Jonathan, Oct. 26, 1739; and Freelope, Nov. 25, 1743. Two additional children are recorded to this couple in the town of Cumberland, R. I., namely: John, born Nov. 3, 1745; and Freelope (2), June 13, 1750, and there is a record to the effect that Freelope (1), born in Rehoboth, died in Cumberland Sept. 16, 1747.

(V) Jonathan Smith, son of Daniel (3), born Oct. 26, 1739, likely in Rehoboth, Mass., as his birth is recorded there, married April 7, 1768, likely in Cumberland, R. I., as his marriage is of record there, Rebecca Nichols, of Rehoboth, Mass., and their children of Cumberland town record were: Jesse, born Jan. 6, 1769; Sylvester, Dec. 15, 1772 (located in Maine); and Rebecca, Aug. 31, 1776. He may have previously been married, to Robe, to whom one child, Jonathan, is given as born Feb. 20, 1760, and may have subsequently married, April 2, 1777, Margaret Read, of Rehoboth, as there is a record in that town of such marriage, "Jonathan Smith of Cumberland." Two children are assigned in Cumberland to Jonathan and Margaret, namely: Jacob, born April 18, 1779; and Margaret, born Dec. 13, 1781.

(VI) Jesse Smith, son of Jonathan, born Jan. 6, 1769, in Cumberland, R. I., died Dec. 26, 1864, in Pawtucket, R. I. For many years he was engaged in farming. After retiring from business he made his home twenty-five years with his son Orin, where he died. He married May 19, 1808, Lorua Wilbur, daughter of Daniel Wilbur, of Smithfield, R. I., where she died, and to this union were born children as follows: Leonard Nichols, born March 21, 1809, died in young manhood, unmarried; Irene, born April 15, 1810, married William Cunliffe, and resided at Auburn, where they both died; Jacob, born Feb. 10, 1812, died Aug. 16, 1814; Rebekah, born Dec. 4, 1813, married James Pitcher, of Pawtucket, and died in Smithfield, R. I.; Arnold, born Feb. 27, 1815, was killed by a yoke of oxen; Levi, who was born June 3, 1816, married Adeline Lane, and died Dec. 20, 1892, in Pawtucket, was engaged in teaming from Providence to Woonsocket before the railroads were built; George, born Jan. 10, 1819, married Susan Hawkins and died in 1905, in Lincoln, R. I. (he was engaged in teaming); Caroline, born Nov. 21, 1820, died Jan. 21, 1894, unmarried; Orin was born Nov. 8, 1822; Martin Sayles, born Aug. 16, 1824, died young.

(VII) ORIN SMITH, son of Jesse, born Nov. 8, 1822, in Smithfield, R. I., received his education in the common schools of his native town, and later was a student in a private school at Bolton and Oxford, Mass., leaving at the age of seventeen years. At the age of six years he left home and for a number of years lived with an aunt. After leaving school he went to work at farming, receiving for his services twelve dollars per month, and finally became farm foreman for George Carpenter, of North Providence, in whose employ he remained three years. He then became foreman on the farm of Dr. A. C. Hawes and brother, of North Providence, continuing in that capacity for about seven years. In 1865 Mr. Smith purchased the farm of Joseph Fletcher, in what is now the town of Lincoln, which at that time comprised about 100 acres. He has since sold part of the place, and purchasing other land now has about fifty acres. Upon this farm Mr. Smith took up agricultural pursuits, in which he has since been actively engaged. For about three years he also conducted a milk route in Providence. During the construction of the Pawtucket gas works and pipe lines Mr. Smith was employed on the same as a foreman of construction, and this position he held for over a year. In July, 1879, he was appointed overseer of the Pawtucket waterworks reservoir, which is situated on land adjoining his, and this position he has filled ever since. Mr. Smith is a stalwart Republican, and has served the town of Lincoln as highway surveyor for several years and as a member of the school committee for a like period. He and his wife attend the Baptist church.

On May 19, 1844, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Sallie Hutchinson Williams, daughter of Benjamin and Freelope (Hutchinson) Williams, she born Feb. 10, 1825, in Smithfield, R. I. To this happy union have come children as follows: Henry Almon, born May 8, 1845, in North Providence, is mentioned further on; Amanda Augusta, born Nov. 5, 1851, in Smithfield, R. I., married William J. Kent, of Lonsdale, R. I., who was for several years superintendent of the Wamsutta Mills, at New Bedford, Mass., where he died leaving one son, Philip; Alice Hawes, born July 19, 1853, in Smithfield, R. I., married Daniel L. Willmarth, who is one of the leading builders and contractors of Pawtucket, and they have one son, Daniel Luther; Walter Franklin, born Jan. 19, 1857, in Smithfield, died in infancy; Amsden Hilton, born Jan. 23, 1863, in Smithfield, is mentioned further on; Orin, Jr., born July 9, 1866, in Smithfield, is mentioned further on. The parents of these children have spent a wedded life of over sixty-three years and both are exceptionally active, in possession of their faculties and strength to a remarkable degree. They are well known in the vicinity in which they have spent so many years, and are esteemed and respected by all.

(VIII) HENRY ALMON SMITH, son of Orin, was born May 8, 1845, in North Providence, and after receiving his early educational training in his native town acquired a thorough and practical knowledge of the carpenter's trade from experience at the business. He first engaged in that line on his own account in the spring of 1870, his first contract being the building of a barn for Dr. James L. Wheaton. From a small beginning, through his energy, ability and ambition, his business rapidly grew, and he became one of the leading contractors and builders of Pawtucket. At the age of forty-five years Mr. Smith retired from active life with a good competence, and removed to his summer home at Nayatt, in the town of Barrington, R. I., where the remainder of his days was spent in retirement. His death occurred July 22, 1903, in his residence at Nayatt Point. During his active career Mr. Smith as a contractor erected many of the leading buildings in Pawtucket and vicinity, many of which still stand as monuments to his skill; among them are the Music Hall, St. George's church and parsonage at Central Falls, R. I., and various manufacturing and educational buildings in that vicinity.

When still a young man Mr. Smith took a deep and active interest in public affairs and was later a member of the town council of the town of Pawtucket, serving in that body for several years. He was a member of the committee appointed by the town council in 1883, when the first steps were taken toward the accomplishment of the excellent system of sewers with which the city is now furnished. This committee witnessed the practical inception of the work which had been intrusted to it. Mr. Smith was also chairman of the board of tax assessors of the city for three years, and during this time there was a revaluation of the property of the city which increased the revenue considerably. Mr. Smith was public-spirited to the point of self-sacrifice, being ever ready to give of his time or substance to movements that had for their object the welfare of his city. He was connected with various business enterprises, being for several years president of the Blackstone Stocking Company, of Central Falls, and a director of the Franklin Savings Bank at Pawtucket, until that institution's consolidation with the Slater Trust Company.

On May 18, 1870, Mr. Smith was married to Amey T. Payne, daughter of the late Charles Payne, of Pawtucket, and his wife Keziah Bindley, and to this union came two children: Frederick Williams, born April 25, 1876, in Pawtucket; and Jessie Payne, born Aug. 6, 1883, in Pawtucket, who resides at home with her widowed mother, unmarried.

(IX) FREDERICK WILLIAMS SMITH, son of the late Henry A. and Amey T. (Payne) Smith, was born April 25, 1876, in Pawtucket. His education was commenced in the common schools of his native city, after leaving which he became a student at the University Grammar School of Providence. After leaving the latter he took a course in A. G. Scholfield's Business College, Providence, and during that time he was also serving as a clerk in the office of the Blackstone Stocking Company at Central Falls. After completing his education Mr. Smith entered the employ of the Berlin Iron Bridge Company, where he continued for about one year as paymaster on construction work, then engaging with the General Electric Company, at Lynn, Mass., where he remained for two and one-half years, during which time he acquired a very comprehensive knowledge of electricity and electrical appliances. Returning to Pawtucket, Mr. Smith entered the employ of the Pawtucket Steam and Gas Pipe Company, remaining with this firm for three years. In July, 1902, in company with A. C. Sisson, he engaged in the machine and electrical business, this association continuing until November, 1905, when Mr. Smith bought his partner's interest in the business, which has since been conducted as the New England Machine and Electric Company, Mr. Smith being the sole proprietor. On Jan. 1, 1908, it was incorporated under that title with Mr. Smith as president and treasurer. Under his able management the business has grown rapidly, employment now being given to from fifteen to thirty men, who install anything in the electrical line, from an electric bell to an electric plant. Mr. Smith is a member of the Business Men's Association and the To-Kalon Club of Pawtucket. He is a Republican in politics, and his religious affiliations are with the Congregational Church.

On Aug. 20, 1898, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Elizabeth Nelson McKinley, daughter of William and Jessie (Nelson) McKinley, of Pawtucket, and by this union there is one daughter, Muriel Elizabeth, born July 14, 1902, at Pawtucket.

(VIII) AMSDEN HILTON SMITH, son of Orin and Sallie H. (Williams) Smith, was born Jan. 23, 1863, in Smithfield, R. I., and received his education in the district schools of his native town and at Nowry & Goff's English and Classical School, Providence, graduating from the latter in 1881. He then entered the machine shop of the Border City Cotton Mills, at Fall River, Mass., where he was employed for a short time, when he came to Pawtucket, there entering the employ of the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, with which he remained two and one-half years. Returning to Fall River he became an employee in the Grinnell Cotton Mills' machine department, where he remained about one year, when, on account of ill health, he was compelled to resign his position, and during the following year he was not engaged in business of any kind. He then entered the employ of his brother, the late Henry A. Smith, and for about five years acted as foreman and draftsman for the latter. After spending about six months as foreman for the Blackstone Knitting Company, of Central Falls, Mr. Smith was for one and one-half years in the knitting department of the E. Jenckes Manufacturing Company, at Pawtucket, after which he became superintendent of the Rhode Island Hosiery Company of Central Falls, remaining in that capacity for about one year.

In 1892, in company with George H. Lumb, Mr. Smith organized the Blackstone Stocking Company of Central Falls, and in 1902, upon the incorporation of the company, with a capital stock of $150,000, Mr. Smith was elected treasurer and general manager. The following year, on the death of his brother, Henry A., he was elected president. The company manufactures wool and cashmere hosiery of all kinds, employing about two hundred hands. Mr. Smith is a member of Barney Merry Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., and Pawtucket Council, No. 2, R. & S. M. He is a Republican in politics and served as a member of the Lincoln town school committee for five years, during two years of which time he was chairman of the board. He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Pawtucket.

In March, 1887, Mr. Smith was married to Annie J. Doran, of Pawtucket, and three children were born to this union: Warren Hutchinson, Gertrude Webster and Alice Winslow.

(VIII) ORIN SMITH, JR., son of Orin and Salie Hutchinson (Williams) Smith, was born July 9, 1866, in Smithfield (now Lincoln), R. I. He acquired his early education in the schools of Pawtucket, after which he became a student at Mowry & Goff's English and Classical School, Providence, from which he was graduated in 1884. He then entered the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, of Pawtucket, where he served a two years' apprenticeship to the trade of machinist, and from there went to Lynn, Mass., where he spent one year in the machine shop of the Thompson & Houston Company. Mr. Smith next served a three years' apprenticeship to the trade of electrician with the same company. Thoroughly equipped with a knowledge of electricity in its various branches, Mr. Smith then returned to Pawtucket and entered the employ of the Pawtucket Electric Company, as electrician, and by close application to his work proved his worth to this company, in 1896 being made superintendent of the company and in 1904 promoted to the position of general manager. Mr. Smith was also for about five years proprietor of a floral establishment, which, however, he has since disposed of.

Mr. Smith is a member of the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Barney Merry Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., Pawtucket Council, No. 2, R. and S. M., and Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T., of Pawtucket. In political matters he is a Republican. He and his wife attend the Park Place Congregational Church, to which they give their liberal support.

On Jan. 6, 1892, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Eleanor T. Edgar, daughter of the late Leonard P. Edgar, of Pawtucket, and they have had one son, Earl Everett, born June 23, 1894, in Pawtucket.

LEE. The Lee family of Newport is one of over an hundred years' standing in that community, and the branch of which this article treats has been a numerous one. Many of its members have been identified with the varied interests of the city.

Samuel Lee, the grandfather of the present generation of this family, married Sarah Jouvett, who was of French extraction, and to this union were born the following children: Samuel was a whaler in early life, was later engaged in the coasting trade, and died in Newport; William, who left Newport in early life, was never heard of again; Henry, who was a sea captain, was drowned in Newport harbor; Thomas followed the sea in early life, and was later engaged in the fishing business in Newport, where he died; Susan married Norris Lawton, and died in Natick, R. I.; Sarah, who married (first) William Weeden and (second) Erastus Williams, died in Lebanon, Conn.; Peter J. was the father of Frederick P. Lee, of Newport.

Peter J. Lee, son of Samuel and Sarah (Jouvett) Lee, was born in Newport, R. I., April 18, 1825, and passed away in the same city on Dec. 17, 1899, aged seventy-four years, seven months, and twenty-nine days. After acquiring his early educational training in the public schools of his native city he became apprenticed to the trade of spar-making, and for several years was employed at the Herreshoffs' shipyard, at Bristol, R. I., after which for a number of years he was engaged at his trade in the J. & S. Cottrell shipyard, at Newport. He then became interested in the occupation of trap-fishing, and continued at this vocation during the remainder of his life—a period of nearly fifty years. In early life he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and for a number of years was captain of Hercules Engine Company, No. 7, of the volunteer fire department. In political faith he was a Republican. He married Margaret Wallace, who was born in Augusta, Maine, the daughter of Patrick Wallace and Margaret Cahill, granddaughter of Richard Wallace and Ellen Gorman, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Wallace and Lady Catherine Butler, the latter the sister of the Duke of Ormond. Mrs. Lee died in Newport Aug. 9, 1889, aged sixty-two years, four months. To this union were born children as follows: Sarah Weeden, who is the wife of Harwood E. Read, of Newport; Samuel, who died at the age of twenty-three years, and who was a clerk in a Boston bank; Ella, who married N. B. Thompson, of Long Island; William Henry, superintendent of letter carriers at the Newport postoffice, who married Martha Spencer; Thomas, who married Elizabeth Barker, and is engaged in fishing in Newport; Robert Proud, who is superintendent of the Street Railway Company, at Meriden, Conn., married to Helen Buchanan; Frederick P.; and Lillian, who married William P. Kelly, superintendent of the public schools of Meriden, Connecticut.

FREDERICK P. LEE, son of the late Peter J. and Margaret (Wallace) Lee, was born Jan. 11, 1865, in Newport, and in the public schools of his native city received his early educational training. He then became apprenticed to the cabinet-making trade with the late George E. Vernon, in whose employ he remained for several years, when he became electrician on the steamer "Pilgrim," plying between New York and Fall River, in which capacity he remained for a period of five years. In March, 1894, he accepted the position of assistant undertaker with Robert C. Cottrell, in which capacity he has since continued. Mr. Lee is a member of the Masonic organization, holding membership in St. Paul's Lodge, No. 14, A. F. and A. M.; Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. and S. M.; and Washington Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar. He is also a member of Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum. For a number of years he has been a member of the Newport fire department, connected with Torrent Engine Company, No. 1. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lee are members of the United Congregational Church. In political faith Mr. Lee is a Republican, and in 1907, at the second election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, he was elected a member of the representative council for the term of three years from the Third ward.

On Oct. 12, 1893, Mr. Lee was united in marriage with Miss Clara Elizabeth Peabody, the daughter of the late Charles H. and Hannah (Ailman) Peabody, of Newport, and this union has been blessed with two children: Frederick Morton, born Sept. 7, 1894, and Katherine Rawson, born Nov. 12, 1903.

DARWIN RUSH MOWRY. The late Darwin R. Mowry, in his day one of the well-known business men of Providence, successfully conducted for many years a hay, grain and flour business. He was a descendant of one of the oldest and most numerous families of Northern Rhode Island, the early records of which are given elsewhere.

Darwin Rush Mowry was the eldest son of Daniel A. and Mary J. (Harris) Mowry, and was born Jan. 13, 1820, in Smithfield, being about twelve years of age when his parents removed to Providence. His education was received in the district schools of his native town, the public schools of Providence, and a private school. After leaving the latter he became connected with his father in business, at the latter's death succeeding him, and so continued until his own death. He was very well-known throughout the State as a dealer in hay and grain. The business had been located at the corner of Smith and Canal streets since 1845, and he was the oldest man in his line in the city. He was very active in his business until his death, April 18, 1889, and he was buried at Swan Point cemetery. In his political faith Mr. Mowry was a Republican, but he never took interest in politics, beyond the casting of his vote. He was not a member of any secret organization, being a great lover of his home and family, and of quiet, domestic tastes. He was keen, careful and conservative in all business relations, a man of high integrity, thoroughly honest in all his dealings, and he commanded the esteem of all who knew him. He was a successful man, and the architect of his own career. His home was for forty years on Smith Hill, and his home at No. 48 Jefferson street was erected by him.

On May 26, 1844, Mr. Mowry was married to Mary E. Steere, born April 29, 1825, daughter of Major Asa and Susan (Burlingame) Steere, and a representative of the seventh generation from John Steere, the progenitor of the family in America. Mrs. Mowry died July 14, 1901. The children of this union were: Mary Jenckes, Ada Isabel and Florine Holbrook, the latter being the only one to reach adult age, and she occupies the homestead on Jefferson street.

STEERE. Mrs. Mowry was a descendant of John Steere, the ancestor of the family in Rhode Island, the lineage being as follows:

(I) John Steere, of Providence, married Hannah Wickenden.

(II) Lieut. John Steere, eldest son of John, married Esther Whitman.

(III) Hosea Steere, son of Lieut. John, born about 1702, married Sarah, and took up his residence in Glocester. His children were: Enoch, Noah and John.

(IV) Enoch Steere, son of Hosea, married April 14, 1762, Alice Place, and resided in Glocester, where he followed farming. His children were: Thomas, Daniel, Joseph, Hosea, Zebedee, Ann and John.

(V) Zebedee Steere, son of Enoch, born Jan. 9, 1771, resided in Glocester, where he was engaged in farming, and there died Dec. 19, 1852. He married Mary Wood, daughter of Jonah Wood, of Vermont, and she died Oct. 23, 1851. Their children were: Enoch, born Oct. 4, 1794; Jonah, in 1795; Willard, in 1796; Daniel, March 29, 1798; Asa, April 19, 1800; Rachel, in 1804; Almon, in 1806; and Elsie, in 1808.

(VI) Major Asa Steere, son of Zebedee, was born April 19, 1800, in Glocester, and after his marriage located at Centredale, his estate being that immediately south of the present home of Frank C. Angell. Major Steere was engaged in butchering, disposing of his product in Centredale and neighboring villages, as well as in Providence. He was successful in his business operations, and for the last twenty-five years of his life was not engaged in active business. He received his title by holding rank in the old Militia. Major Steere died May 6, 1882, and was buried in the cemetery at Centredale.

Major Asa Steere married Susan, daughter of Olney Burlingame, born Sept. 26, 1806, and she died June 11, 1879. Their children were: Mary, Mrs. Darwin R. Mowry; Catherine J., who married (first) Thomas Davis (a tailor of Providence, who died at Centredale) and had one daughter, Lillian, who died young, and (second) Benjamin F. Whipple, and both died in Providence; and Elizabeth A., widow of William Cunliff, a cotton manufacturer in Providence, by whom she had two children: Lillian M. (who died at the age of six years) and Truman A. (who married Mrs. Emma A. (Lincoln) Haskins, and resides in Providence).

GORHAM. This family has been well represented in Bristol for many years by William M. Gorham, who for fifteen years served that town as postmaster and has held various other official positions.

(I) Ralph Gorham, of Benefield, England, son of James, was the first ancestor of this line in America, emigrating before 1637.

(II) Capt. John Gorham, second son of Ralph, was born in Benefield, England, and was baptized Jan. 28, 1621. He was married in 1643 to Desire Howland, who was born at Plymouth about 1623, daughter of John Howland and Elizabeth Tilley, of the original "Mayflower" company. Capt. Gorham was buried at Swansea Feb. 5, 1675-76, and his widow died at Barnstable, Massachusetts, Oct. 13, 1683.

(III) Jabez Gorham, fourth son and seventh child of Capt. John Gorham, was born at Barnstable Aug. 3, 1656, and married Hannah Sturgis (Widow Gray), daughter of Edward Sturgis, of Barnstable and Yarmouth. They removed from Barnstable to Bristol, R. I. He died between March 16, 1724-25 (the date of his will) and May 18, 1725, when his son Isaac gave a receipt for his portion of the estate. His wife died Oct. 17, 1736. Their children were: Hannah, born Dec. 23, 1677 (died March 28, 1682); Samuel, born April 15, 1682 (died Nov. 24, 1735); Jabez, born Jan. 31, 1683-84; Shubel, born April 12, 1686; Isaac, born Feb. 1, 1689; John, born Nov. 8, 1690 (died in January, 1717); Joseph, born Aug. 22, 1692 (baptized in Christ Church, Bristol, Aug. 11, 1695); Hannah, born Feb. 21, 1693-94 (baptized at Christ Church, Bristol, Aug. 11, 1695); Benjamin, born Dec. 11, 1695 (died in 1771 or 1772); Thomas, born Oct. 30, 1701; and Elizabeth.

(IV) Isaac Gorham, born Feb. 1, 1689, died in 1739-40. He married (first) Mary, who died Sept. 11, 1716. He married (second) Aug. 6, 1717, Hannah Miles, daughter of Richard Miles, of New Haven, Conn. Two children were born to Isaac and Mary Gorham, both born in Bristol: Isaac, born May 28, 1713, died Dec. 1, 1760; Hezekiah, born Feb., 1714-15, died Dec. 15, 1715. The children of Isaac and Hannah Gorham were: John; Mary, born Oct. 10, 1721; Timothy, born Nov. 13, 1723; Hezekiah, born Dec. 15, 1725; Samuel; Elizabeth, and Hannah. Isaac Gorham, the father, bought land in New Haven March 1, 1719-20. He is described as a cooper. He was admitted as an inhabitant of the town Dec. 26, 1720.

(V) Isaac Gorham, born in Bristol May 28, 1713, died there Dec. 1, 1760. He was married Oct. 19, 1742, to Jemima Potter, daughter of Hopestill and Lydia (Hubbard) Potter. She died Oct. 10, 1806. Children: Mary, born July 28, 1743; Hannah, born Sept. 25, 1745; Isaac, born in 1747; Althea, born in 1751 (died June 17, 1823; married in 1774 Gilbert Richmond); Lydia, baptized in St. Michael's Church May 9, 1759 (died May 10, 1759); William, baptized Dec. 9, 1759, at St. Michael's (shipwrecked at Martha's Vineyard Dec. 26, 1778, and perished with the cold).

(VI) Isaac Gorham, born in 1747, was baptized March 17, 1748-49, at St. Michael's Church, Bristol. He died at sea in September, 1795, aged forty-eight years. On Sept. 4, 1774, he married Sarah Thomas, of Warren, who died Feb. 25, 1835. They had children as follows: (1) Jemima was born Aug. 28, 1775. (2) Isaac, born in 1777, died at sea Aug. 21, 1798. (3) Sarah, born May 17, 1780, died Dec. 16, 1869. She married Feb. 2, 1800, Nicholas Peck. (4) Hannah, born July 25, 1782, died Aug. 1, 1846. She married Oct. 28, 1803, Lemuel Clarke Richmond, who was born in Bristol Sept. 25, 1781, and died June 23, 1876. He was a son of Gilbert and Althea (Gorham) Richmond. (5) Susan, born March 11, 1785, died Aug. 4, 1868. On Nov. 8, 1807, she married Abram Hathaway, of Raynham, Mass. (6) William, born July 10, 1788, died at sea June 6, 1809, aged twenty-one. (7) Mary, born Dec. 10, 1791, died Sept. 26, 1881. She married July 9, 1814, Rev. John P. K. Henshaw (father of Charles Henshaw of Providence, R. I.), who was born Jan. 19, 1792; he was afterward Bishop of Rhode Island. (8) Ruth, born in April, 1793, died in 1880. On Feb. 8, 1815, she was married to Dr. Jabez Holmes, of Stonington, Conn. (9) Amos Thomas, born Aug. 20, 1795, died March 12, 1861.

(VII) Amos Thomas Gorham, born Aug. 20,

1795, died March 12, 1861. On June 18, 1820, he married Fanny Rutan Sanford, daughter of Ellery and Sally Sanford. She died June 7, 1878. To this union came children as follows: (1) Sarah Thomas, born Aug. 9, 1821, died Nov. 10, 1898. On May 31, 1857, she was married to William Mumford Coit, who died Jan. 31, 1895. They had no children. (2) William Thomas, mentioned below, was born July 23, 1824. (3) Isaac, born Sept. 11, 1826, died Aug. 1, 1863. On Dec. 14, 1852, he married Julia F. Franklin, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Case) Franklin; she died Nov. 16, 1886. They had three children, Isaac Hobart, of Bristol; Emma Frances, who married William Blye; and Elizabeth Bradford, who married Herman Kupfer. (4) Ruth Holmes, born Feb. 9, 1829, died July 2, 1876. (5) Frances Thomas, born July 25, 1831, died Nov. 20, 1886. (6) Amos Thomas, born Oct. 18, 1833, was married March 20, 1856, to Mary Eunice Waldron, born Oct. 1, 1837, and they had three children: Richmond Holmes; Mary Richmond, born Aug. 28, 1860, who married Jan. 26, 1887, William Entwistle, born May 16, 1855, overseer of the machine shop of the Charles L. Seabury Company, Inc.; and Elizabeth Osborn, born Dec. 12, 1862, who married Jan. 26, 1887, Charles Lincoln Seabury, born Aug. 4, 1860, vice-president of the Charles L. Seabury Company, Inc., builders of steam yachts, launches and marine machinery and naphtha yachts, launches and tenders, and they have had two children, Lincoln Gorham (born Nov. 26, 1887, died Nov. 26, 1887) and Mary Richmond (born March 28, 1889). (7) LaFayette, born Jan. 31, 1836, died Oct. 7, 1838. (8) Washington was born July 2, 1838. (9) Mary Hannah, born Sept. 6, 1840, was married Nov. 26, 1872, to Edward W. Spencer. (10) LaFayette, born Feb. 26, 1843, is mentioned below. (11) Sanford was born May 22, 1845.

(VIII) LAFAYETTE GORHAM, born Feb. 26, 1843, married Oct. 25, 1877, Elizabeth McNutt, who died May 12, 1903. They had one child, Amos Sanford, born Nov. 21, 1879, who is now in the Bristol Branch of the Industrial Trust Co. Mr. Gorham was educated in the schools of Bristol, in which place his entire life has been passed. For a number of years he was a coachman for Bishop Howe and Miss Codman, and for thirty years has been engaged in the express business in Bristol. He keeps six horses and three men the year round, and does all the business in that line in town. His success is the result of his own individual effort. He has always taken an interest in local matters. He belongs to the Bristol Artillery, and is a member and treasurer of the Veteran Artillery Association. Mr. Gorham is a consistent churchman, belonging to St. Michael's Episcopal Church. On Oct. 4, 1870, he joined the I. O. O. F., and has been through all the chairs, taking a great interest in the work.

(VIII) WILLIAM THOMAS GORHAM, born July

23, 1824, died Oct. 4, 1866. He was married Oct. 20, 1847, to Mary Theresa Spencer, who was born in October, 1829, and died March 4, 1870. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gorham were of the eighth generation in descent from John Howland, of the "Mayflower" company. They had three children, namely: William Spencer, born July 1, 1850, who died Feb. 27, 1854; William Merrill, born Aug. 2, 1854; and Lulie Burnside, born Jan. 24, 1863.

Lulie Burnside Gorham, born Jan. 24, 1863, was legally adopted by Jeremiah Sheldon, of Providence, becoming Hattie Gorham Sheldon. She was married Oct. 10, 1883, to Wayland A. Wheaton, who was born Oct. 19, 1846, and they have two children: Childs Sheldon, born July 31, 1884, and Linda Gorham, born Dec. 24, 1885. Mrs. Wheaton has been active in the work of the Woman's Relief Corps, and served as Senior Vice-President of the Rhode Island Department, and in 1907 was elected Department President.

(IX) WILLIAM MERRILL GORHAM, son of William T. Gorham, was born Aug. 2, 1854, and grew to manhood in Bristol. He attended the public schools, and had gone as far as the high school when obliged to leave on account of his father's death, in 1866. It being necessary for him to commence work without delay, he entered the store of James A. Miller, who paid him three dollars a week for his services at first. He continued to work there and in other stores until the death of his mother, which occurred in 1870, after which he went to live with his great-aunt, Mrs. Sally (Merrill) Dyer. In 1872 he obtained a position with the American Screw Company, of Providence, as an assistant in the shipping department, applying himself to his work with such good results that within a year he had the second position in the department. However, in the spring of 1873 he came back to Bristol, where he went into the employ of the National Rubber Company, learning the trade of painter, which he followed under Mr. Burnham. After the latter's death he was made boss painter, and was engaged thus for a number of years, remaining with that company in all fourteen years.

Mr. Gorham has always been a strong Republican and active in the workings of his party, and was appointed postmaster of Bristol under Benjamin Harrison, taking office in March, 1890. He served until April, 1895, his retirement being one of the results of the change of administration. For some time following he was surveyor of highways for Bristol, on July 10, 1899, being again appointed postmaster, by President McKinley. The appointment was confirmed by the Senate Dec. 13, 1899, and on Dec. 19, 1903, he was reappointed by President Roosevelt, the appointment being confirmed the same day. His services have been eminently satisfactory, and he has gained high standing in the community by his efficiency and fidelity. He has given ample evidence of high executive ability, and with the same qualities which brought him success in previous positions has justified his long retention in office.

Mr. Gorham is an energetic man, and has many interests, being active in every cause with which he is identified. He has always been a reliable worker in the ranks of the Republican party, and was a member of the town committee when Isaac F. Williams was chairman. Fraternally he belongs to the I. O. O. F., holding membership in United Brothers Lodge, at Bristol, has passed all the chairs, and is a member of the Grand Lodge. He also belongs to the Sons of Veterans, and served one term as lieutenant-colonel of Rhode Island. He is a member of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Mr. Gorham was married, June 26, 1884, to Annie M. Boetcher, who was born Dec. 23, 1862, daughter of John and Meta Boetcher, and two children have been born to them: Marguerite Merrill, on March 20, 1886, and Mildred Usher, on June 6, 1890.

THE MERRILL FAMILY, from which Mr. Gorham is descended through his mother, who was a daughter of Simmons Spencer and Hannah Graves Merrill, is descended from Nathaniel Merrill, of Newbury (1591-1665), who was perhaps a son of John Merrill, who went to Stafford. Of the sixth generation in descent from Nathaniel was Spencer Merrill, of Killingly, Conn. On Jan. 26, 1770, he married Desire Slocum Greene, daughter of James and Desire (Slocum) Greene, and they had three children (order of birth uncertain): Elizabeth, who was married in January, 1795, to Thomas Bateman, of East Greenwich, a descendant of Thomas Bateman, of Boston; Hannah, who was married Aug. 9, 1801, to Aaron Bowen, a descendant of Philip Bowen, of Coventry; and William Greene.

William Greene Merrill, son of Spencer, was born Dec. 27, 1774, and died Nov. 24, 1860. On Jan. 20, 1794, he married Sabra Nichols, who was born April 19, 1772, and died April 17, 1837. She was of the sixth generation in descent from Thomas Nichols, of Newport. Thirteen children were born to this union, of whom we have the following record: (1) Phoebe Merrill, born July 21, 1795, died Feb. 9, 1868. On May 10, 1812, she married Daniel Whelock, who was born July 1, 1793, son of Philetury and Avisie Whelock, of Uxbridge, and died Sept. 8, 1872. (2) William Brown, born Jan. 23, 1797, died March 22, 1867. He married Oct. 9, 1825, Catherine L. Manchester, who was born in 1796 and died Sept. 11, 1833. (3) Josiah, born Dec. 5, 1799, died Aug. 2, 1876. He married Nov. 23, 1820, Phebe Ann Greene, who was born March 15, 1799, daughter of Lloyd Greene, and of the sixth generation in descent from John Greene, of Shawmut. She died May 8, 1885. (4) Sally Colburn, born Oct. 31, 1800, was married Dec. 27, 1829, to Daniel Dyer (of the eighth generation from William and Mary Dyer, of Newport), who was born Nov. 6, 1808. She died April 21, 1881, and Mr.

Dyer survived until Dec. 7, 1894. (5) Hannah Graves, born March 17, 1803, became the wife of Simmons Spencer. (6) Eliza Jane, born May 4, 1805, died Jan. 2, 1806. (7) Isabella Maria Flagg, twin of Eliza Jane, born May 4, 1805, died March 9, 1891. She was married June 24, 1828, to Samuel G. Allen, seventh in direct line from William Allen, of Prudence Island. Mr. Allen was born Aug. 5, 1805, and died April 24, 1887. They had two children: Henry Byron, born Feb. 24, 1837, died Aug. 30, 1842; and Isabella Jane, born July 3, 1843, married Richard G. Howland (born at Centreville, Sept. 19, 1840, eighth generation in descent from Henry of Duxbury), and she died Feb. 12, 1884, the mother of five children—Richard Allen (born June 27, 1869, died April 17, 1872), Anna (born Oct. 1, 1871, died Dec. 29, 1878), Alice Merrill (born May 1, 1874, educated at Vassar), Daniel (born June 9, 1878, Brown University, 1900) and Abigail Susan (born June 17, 1882, died Aug. 25, 1882). Mr. Richard G. Howland married (second) Alice Sisson. (8) Almy Greene, born July 5, 1807, died Feb. 20, 1877. On Oct. 10, 1825, she married Nicholas W. Cook, who was born Nov. 8, 1800, son of Daniel and Mary (Waterman) Cook, and died in December, 1871. (9) Sylvester Knight, born Jan. 29, 1809, died Feb. 10, 1855. On July 4, 1830, he married Almy R. Tillinghast (of the sixth generation from Rev. Pardon Tillinghast, of Providence), who was born Aug. 24, 1808, and died July 13, 1872. (10) Ellery Spencer, born Dec. 19, 1810, was married Jan. 9, 1837, to Amanda Malvina Bowen, who was born Jan. 23, 1817, daughter of Brown Bowen, of Seekonk, Mass. He died July 18, 1867, and she survived until Nov. 16, 1893. (11) Lewis Chandler, born Feb. 21, 1812, died in April, 1885. On Oct. 10, 1831, he married Sarah Caroline Bowen, who was born Oct. 29, 1812, and died April 6, 1875. (12) Ann Frances, born April 1, 1814, died March 7, 1854. She was married Feb. 22, 1833, to Spalding Newell Ross, who was born May 8, 1815, and died Dec. 4, 1894. (13) Maria Theresa, born Sept. 12, 1816, died Sept. 20, 1822.

Hannah Graves Merrill, daughter of William Greene Merrill, born March 17, 1803, was married March 26, 1826, to Simmons Spencer, who was also born in 1803, and who was of the fifth generation in descent from John Spencer, of East Greenwich. Simmons Spencer died Sept. 12, 1854, and Mrs. Spencer passed away Jan. 14, 1879. The record of their children is as follows: (1) Richard B. S. Spencer. (2) Almy Spencer, born in November, 1831, married Benjamin Mawney, of East Greenwich, of the sixth generation from Moses Le Moine, and they had one child, George S. (3) Edward William Spencer, born March 11, 1833, married Nov. 26, 1872, Mary Hannah Gorham, who was born Sept. 6, 1840, and is of the eighth generation from Ralph Gorham, of Benefield, England. They had one child, Fanny Merrill Gorham, born Oct. 4, 1873, who died Feb. 19, 1890. (4) Mary Theresa Spencer, born in October, 1829, died March 4, 1870. On Oct. 20, 1847, she married William Thomas Gorham.

Gov. William Greene, from whom Mr. Gorham is descended through his great-grandmother, Desire Slocum (Greene) Merrill, was of the seventh generation of his family in this country. He lived on Division street, in Warwick. He filled many public positions, being surveyor, 1728; for many years clerk of court; deputy, 1740-43; and governor, 1743-46 and 1748-58, dying in office Feb. 22, 1758. His son William (1732-1809) twenty years later occupied his father's place as governor, serving from 1778 to 1786, and like him transmitted an honorable name to a numerous posterity.

James Greene, of Centreville, son of Gov. William, born Sept. 8, 1713, died March 30, 1792. On Jan. 15, 1737, he married Desire Slocum, who was a descendant of Anthony Slocum, of Newport, in the fifth generation, through Giles, Ebenezer and Giles. They had ten children, namely: William, born Jan. 7, 1738 (died Jan. 23, 1778); Mary, born Jan. 5, 1739; Sarah, born Aug. 17, 1742; Giles Slocum, born March 25, 1745 (married Sept. 13, 1774, Phebe Rhodes, daughter of John Rhodes); Elizabeth, born July 15, 1748 (died Sept. 12, 1751); Desire Slocum, born Jan. 6, 1750 (married Spencer Merrill); Almy, born May 27, 1752 (married Jan. 1, 1774, Jabez Comstock, of Chatham, Conn., fifth in descent from William Comstock, of New London); Capt. James, born in 1754 (he died Oct. 14, 1825; married Rebecca Pitman, who was born in 1763, daughter of Sanders Pitman, of Providence, and sixth in descent from William Sanders, of New London; she died in July, 1806, and Capt. Greene afterward married Mercy Waterman, who was born in 1780, daughter of Capt. Richard Waterman, and sixth in descent from Richard Waterman, of Salem, and died Feb. 28, 1851); Rachel (who married in December, 1786, Thomas Whitaker, of Haverhill, N. H., sixth in descent from Abraham, of New Hampshire); and Agnes.

JEREMIAH K. SULLIVAN. While there are numerous cases where men attempt to establish themselves in a business enterprise with no capital other than a willingness to work, combined with a goodly amount of pluck, energy and perseverance, yet many of these meet with failure, and few, indeed, are they who succeed in increasing their trade to the volume of business achieved by Jeremiah K. Sullivan, who is one of Newport's best known citizens, and a native of that city in which he has acquired his remarkable success.

John Sullivan, father of Jeremiah K., was born in County Kerry, Ireland, and came to America from his native land settling in Newport in about 1850. As he had no regular trade he worked at whatever he could find to do, passing the years thus until his death, which occurred in Newport in 1883. Mr. Sullivan was married to Miss Eliza Coffey, who died in Newport, the mother of four children who survived her, namely: Jeremiah K.; Margaret, wife of Michael P. Vaughan, a mason of Newport; John J., who married Miss Julia Issler, of Newport, and is manager for his brother, Jeremiah K.; and Miss Elizabeth, who resides in Newport.

Jeremiah Kirrian Sullivan was born in Newport, Nov. 28, 1857. Until he had attained the age of thirteen years he was receiving his early training in the schools of his native city, and during the following summer, as a boy, was employed by Mr. St. John, who was one of Newport's summer residents from New York, in caring for the latter's children's pony. For the next two years he was employed in the livery stable of Sullivan & Sheehan. He decided to learn a trade, and accordingly became apprenticed to learn carpentry under William E. Tripp, in whose service he remained for a period of three years. Having acquired a thorough knowledge of the carpentering business he continued to follow that trade as a journeyman for about two years. At the end of that time, about 1878, he had saved from his earnings enough money to purchase a horse and express wagon, which humble beginning proved to be the nucleus of his present large and extensive business. For four or five years he continued in the express business, driving his wagon himself, but meantime his business increased so that in 1880 he started a livery stable. This business has grown to such an extent that to-day he has the largest livery business in the city, requiring from seventy-five to ninety horses and over one hundred wagons and vehicles to accommodate his large and extensive patronage.

Besides his extensive livery business, with its various branches, Mr. Sullivan is also largely engaged in heavy teaming and in contract work of all kinds. From general contracting he gradually launched out into the wrecker and lighter business, and has added thereto at various intervals until now his equipment in this department of his business consists of the tug, "Solicitor," three lighters and a water boat, the latter being used to supply fresh water to the vessels of all kinds and sizes which frequent Newport harbor. His equipment in this department is very complete, and he is fully prepared to do all kinds of wrecking, building of sea walls, break-waters, etc., in which line he has met with pronounced success. Since Jan. 1, 1901, Mr. Sullivan has held the position by appointment of the city council of wreck commissioner of the harbor of Newport. In politics Mr. Sullivan is independent, giving his influence and support to the man whom he considers best fitted to fill the office. Although he has never aspired to political office himself, he was in 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city, elected a member of the representative council for the one year term from the Third ward and at the first meeting of the representative council, held in January, 1907, he was elected by that body as street commissioner of the city for the ensuing year, being re-elected in 1908, for another year. In 1907 he was re-elected to the representative council for a term of three years. Also, in 1907 he was elected a director of the Newport Water Works, to succeed the late T. Mumford Seabury. He is also a director of the Puritan Life Insurance Company, of Providence.

On Jan. 5, 1885, Mr. Sullivan was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude May, daughter of Jacob Issler, of Newport, and this happy union has been blessed with two daughters, Gertrude May and Helen Louise. Mr. Sullivan and his family are consistent members of St. Mary's Catholic Church of Newport, to which they are liberal in their support, and Mrs. Sullivan is especially active in the church work. Their present handsome residence on Pelham street was completed March 24, 1898, the anniversary of the date upon which Mr. Sullivan started in business for himself.

The success which Mr. Sullivan has attained has been due to his energy and ability to take the initiative, combined with a natural born business acumen, and he has earned for himself a high place in the confidence of the business circles of his native city as well as in all circles in which he is known. He was one of the incorporators of the Newport-Nevada Mining Company, and holds the office of president of this corporation. As is shown by the foregoing, Mr. Sullivan is in the truest sense of the word "a self-made man," and the architect of his own remarkable and successful career, showing what may be accomplished by one who possesses those qualities so essential to achievement—self-reliance, pluck, energy, thrift and determination. He is generous in his impulses, and charitable to those who have been less fortunate than he. He is Democratic in his manner, and unpretentious in his nature. He has just cause to feel a pride in his life's achievements, acquired in the city of his birth, where he holds the respect and esteem of the entire community.

HENRY C. GLADDING, one of the most widely known machinists and master mechanics in Rhode Island, and now engaged in Providence at his life long occupation, is a member of an old and substantial family which figures prominently in the history both of that State and of Massachusetts. His American progenitor was John, who, according to the records of Newbury, Mass., was residing in that town as early as 1666. The ancestry is then traced through five successive Johns to Benjamin, the father of Henry Coggeshall Gladding, many of whose earlier forefathers were residents of Bristol, R. I., where the first decade of his career as a machinist was also passed. His direct line of American ancestors is traced below:

(I) John Gladding (Glading) is of record at Newbury, Mass., in 1666, as marrying on July 17th of that year Elizabeth Rogers, and their children, of record in Newbury, are: Susanna, John, William, Elizabeth, Mary and Hannah. Additional children, of record in Bristol, were: Joshua, Daniel and Sarah. According to family manuscripts Mr. Gladding died April 27, 1726, aged eighty-four years.

(II) John Gladding (2), born Oct. 11, 1670, married Alice, born Oct. 31, 1663, daughter of Uzell Wardwell. Their children were: Mary, John, William, Jonathan, Ebenezer, Joseph, Alice, Elizabeth, Nathaniel, Sarah and Sarah (2). The mother of these children died March 3, 1720.

(III) John Gladding (3), born Sept. 8, 1694, married July 12, 1716, Martha Smith. The children of John Gladding and wife were: John, Charles, Daniel, Martha, George, Samuel, Phebe and Mary.

(IV) John Gladding (4), born Jan. 30, 1717, married (first) Mary Drown, who died April 14, 1759, aged forty years, and he married (second) Sept. 6, 1759, Hannah Short. His children were: John, Josiah, Peter, Martha, Daniel, Martha (2), Mary, Solomon and Josiah (2). Capt. Gladding died Nov. 8, 1785, in his sixty-ninth year.

(V) John Gladding (5), born Jan. 3, 1739, married Sept. 17, 1761, Lucretia Smith. His wife died May 5, 1813, in the seventieth year of her age. Mr. Gladding died Sept. 25, 1820. Their children were: John, Hannah, Lucretia, Samuel, Richard, Benjamin, Polly, Richard (2), Rebecca, Sarah and Lucretia (2). In his day John Gladding (5) had no equal as a boat builder.

(VI) John Gladding (6), born Nov. 19, 1762, married Rachel, daughter of Edward Tolbee, of Bristol, R. I., and to them came the following children: John, Edward T., Lydia, Benjamin, Hannah, Samuel (died at sea aged twenty-two), Rachel, Stephen and James N. Mr. John Gladding owned and occupied an estate on Union street, a little east of High street, where several of his children were born. This property he exchanged for a lot and dwelling, the former bounded by High, Valley and Water streets, also the windmill and shore lot. Mr. Gladding was one of the best citizens of the town, always just and a lover of righteousness. For many years he served efficiently as deputy sheriff of Bristol county, and the only thing that prevented his being sheriff was that he was afraid that he might have to hang some poor wretch. He died Oct. 20, 1821, aged fifty-eight years, and was buried in Bristol.

(VII) Benjamin Gladding, born Feb. 9, 1792, married Sept. 27, 1814, Mehitabel Coggeshall (daughter of James and granddaughter of Newby), and there were born to them the following children: Benjamin F., Oct. 19, 1815; Mehetabel Ann, Jan. 28, 1818, married Thomas Coats; George W., April 9, 1820; Ellen B., Nov. 11, 1822, married Aug. 13, 1855, John Huyk; Charles G., Jan. 8, 1825; Henry Coggeshall, Jan. 11, 1827; Maryett, Jan. 19, 1829, married P. Palmer; Anjanett, March 26, 1831, married George L. Buckingham; James N., Jan. 21, 1834; Lydia W., Oct. 8, 1838; and William who died in infancy.

In boyhood Benjamin Gladding was apprenticed to a man in Providence to the carpenter's trade. In about 1815 he with his brother, John, and their families removed from Bristol to Chenango county, N. Y. In 1827 Benjamin and his family removed to Waterville in Oneida county, same State, where he spent the balance of his life, his death taking place Sept. 13, 1847. Although a carpenter's apprentice in boyhood, he later mastered the millwright's trade, and engaged in that occupation until 1835. He then became a cord manufacturer and continued in that line for the succeeding twelve years, or until his death. Both he and his wife were buried in Waterville. Mr. Gladding was a very religious man, extremely active in the local work of the M. E. Church. He was also earnest in his political beliefs, being a strong Abolitionist and Whig, although never a politician.

(VIII) Henry C. Gladding, son of Benjamin and Mehitabel Gladding, was born Jan. 11, 1827, and was apprenticed to the machinist's trade at Waterville, N. Y. His term expired within six months of his majority, and he then decided to establish himself in a more important industrial center. In 1847, therefore, he located in Bristol, R. I., the home of his early ancestors, where with the exception of one winter, he remained for the succeeding decade. Until the fall of 1849 he was engaged in the installation of new machinery for the Pokanoket Cotton Mill, and in the winter of that year he was employed at Oriskany Falls, Oneida county, N. Y. On account of ill health he returned to Bristol, where he assumed charge of the machinery, patterns, etc., of the Bristol Butt Foundry. As the plant was burned in the summer of 1850, he was thrown out of employment and formed a partnership with J. Gladding in the tin, sheet-iron and general merchandise business. The partnership continued until Sept. 18, 1851, when it was dissolved in order that Mr. Gladding could join his brother, who was engaged in constructing a plank road from Petersburg to Boydton and Clarksville, Va. The road was ninety miles in length and embraced a number of substantial bridges. In the building of the latter it was necessary to get out considerable extra lumber, and Mr. Gladding was appointed the master mechanic in charge of the sawmills which were engaged in this work. The position called for great energy, mechanical skill and ingenuity; and he fully met all the requirements. He returned to Bristol in the early summer of 1852, and became an employe of J. Gardner, thus continuing until his works were burned in 1854. In that year the Burnside Gun Works were established and Mr. Gladding was connected with that concern until 1858, when the business was transferred to Providence. During that period his duties were of the utmost importance, including a general supervision of boiler, engines and machinery in general. He also made the hand tools required and invented a number of valuable labor saving devices. Among the latter were ingenious mechanisms used in the manufacture of several parts of the gun lock, and in the forging department generally, which reduced the cost of labor all the way from 5 to 100 per cent. When the works were removed from Bristol to Providence, in 1858, Mr. Gladding also located in the latter city, establishing with his brother the firm of H. C. and J. N. Gladding, general machinists. In 1861, in connection with J. Ralph, he secured a government contract for the manufacture of a large quantity of gun locks, but, as they were both practical machinists and not business men, they turned the contract over to Walter Coleman & Sons. In this new arrangement Mr. Gladding was master mechanic. Later he was appointed foreman of the machine department of the Union Screw Factory, and when this establishment was absorbed by the Eagle Screw Company, about two years afterward, he founded an independent business, which he conducted up to 1897. He then retired from active business and has since given his time to looking after his estate. He is quite active for his years.

Henry C. Gladding married (first) Emily P., daughter of Capt. Samuel Eldred, who died in May, 1852, in Petersburg, Va. He married (second) Sarah, daughter of Capt. Allen and Martha (Gladding) Waldron. She died Nov. 20, 1906, aged eighty-two years, and was buried in Bristol. One daughter was born to the first marriage, Emily, now the wife of Levi D. Nelson, a well known jewelry dealer at Providence.

LYMAN R. HOPKINS. Industry and enterprise owe much to the subject of this sketch, not only for the helpful influence of his example as a successful manufacturer, but also for what he has done to advance the interests of practical technical education in the process of textile fabrication. Though well past the age of threescore and ten, he is active in both mind and body, and maintains a close personal supervision over his varied and extensive private interests, in an able manner which would become a capable business man twenty-five years his junior.

Mr. Hopkins was born in West Greenwich, R. I., April 2, 1824, son of David and Sarah (Franklin) Hopkins. The Hopkins family ancestry dates back to a connection with Oliver Cromwell. The mother of Mr. Hopkins's earliest ancestor known by name, Theophilus Whalley, was an aunt of that very notable personage, the Great Protector; while Edward Whalley, a brother of Theophilus Whalley, was one of the judges who condemned Charles I.

L. H. Hopkins

to suffer the penalty of death. After the death of Cromwell, and at the succession of Charles II. to the throne, Theophilus and others who had taken part in the execution of Charles I. fled for their lives. Theophilus came to America and hid himself in the Narragansett woods. Later he became possessed of the farm on Hopkins hill, where he died about 1722, aged one hundred and three years, and was buried with military honors.

Stephen Hopkins, whose signature is conspicuous among the brave and patriotic men whose names added strength to the Declaration of Independence was a connection of the family of Mr. Hopkins, and it may be said that Stephen Hopkins was the only man who did not take off his hat while signing that immortal document.

Lyman R. Hopkins is a representative in the sixth generation from Joseph Hopkins, who is believed to have been the son of William and Hannah (Goffe) Hopkins, residents of Roxbury, Mass., and members of Rev. John Eliot's church of that place. William Hopkins married for his second wife Martha Whalley, daughter of the noted Theophilus Whalley, and after a few years of residence in Kingstown, R. I., removed about 1713 to the locality now known as Hopkins Hill, in West Greenwich, R. I., where he resided until his death, May 15, 1735. The line of descent from Joseph Hopkins is through the latter's son Samuel (who was known as "Judge" Samuel), Samuel, Rufus, and David, who was the father of Lyman R. (Additional ancestral history of the Hopkins family will be found elsewhere in this work).

The early education of Lyman R. Hopkins was obtained during the winter months at the public schools, and at his own fireside, for he worked in his father's cotton factory during the summer season until he was sixteen years of age, when at the instance of his brother-in-law he became a clerk in his store, receiving for his services the munificent salary of one dollar per week. When twenty years of age Mr. Hopkins started out in business on his own account. He erected a small cotton mill at Robin Hollow, R. I., and ran his little factory for five or six years, and was getting along nicely when, to his utter dismay and serious loss, the New York house to which he had consigned his whole product met with financial disaster, and the young and enterprising manufacturer was left absolutely penniless. But "never say die" was one of Mr. Hopkins's characteristics. He persevered in his vocation, and in the meantime had won to so great a degree the confidence and respect of the community in which he dwelt (West Greenwich) that he was elected a member of the Rhode Island General Assembly, which honor was followed by his election as State senator, in which position he served with distinction and added further laurels to his name and fame. It was at this period that the afterward United States Senator Henry B. Anthony was first elected as a representative in Congress, and in his hotly contested canvass Mr. Hopkins was one of his most ardent supporters.

In 1858 Mr. Hopkins concluded to visit New York City and embark in the activities of a mercantile and manufacturing career in that great metropolis. In accordance with this determination he secured part of a store at No. 46 Beekman street, to sell goods he continued to manufacture in Rhode Island—cotton twine and wicking—as well as goods on commission for others; but like a burnt child who dreads the fire he resolved to do a strictly cash business. He prospered accordingly, soon recuperated his finances, and in 1865 was enabled to purchase an interest in the Merrick Thread Company, soon after becoming its president, which position he held for twenty-five years, until the company was merged into the American Thread Company, when he became president of that concern. As the first president of the largest industrial organization in its line in the United States, Mr. Hopkins did much toward getting the company into the working order which had so much to do with its later prosperity. He retired from the presidency of the American Thread Company in 1902.

It is almost needless to add that Mr. Hopkins did not reach the top round of the ladder without many hard struggles. He had courage combined with perseverance and energy, a combination which gives force and impulse to effort and permits of no retreat. Indefatigable industry and great decision of character have always been dominant forces in his make-up, and by turning his first gains into second advantages he advanced by degrees into larger transactions and thus achieved well merited success. He is a director in the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company, of New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Mr. Hopkins resides in his commodious and beautiful cottage at Lake View, Maine, a place of his own erection, in the vicinity of which he built up a town. Cutting two miles into a dense forest he there erected a factory where birch wood is converted into spools by the tens of thousands for the American Thread Company. A great lover of outdoor life, he spends his time in summer in hunting and fishing, recreations which he heartily enjoys. A long tramp through the forest has no terrors for him, his advanced years seeming in no way to have lessened his powers of endurance. A naturally strong and robust constitution, preserved by regular habits, gives him a vigor and vitality that are remarkable. He manifests a keen and substantial interest in the welfare of the inhabitants of the village he founded. A handsome hall for entertainments and popular enjoyment generally is but one expression of his public spirit and interest.

Mr. Hopkins was first married at the age of twenty to Miss Eunice Gardner, who bore him three children, as follows: (1) Charles died young. (2) Mary L. married Bryant Drew, and died leaving one daughter, Elsie G., who married Benjamin T. Peck, of Edgewood, R. I., and has one son, Benjamin T. Peck, Jr. (3) George L. has two children, George Stuart (who is married and has two sons, David and Lyman R.) and Gertrude Lavinia.

Mr. Hopkins's second marriage was to Rosalie Merceine Gilmore, of Brooklyn, New York.

DIMAN. According to tradition this family is of French Huguenot origin, and the name was spelled Diamond or Diamant until 1750. It was changed by some of the Bristol family in the seventh generation from the settler to Dimond, and is also written Diman by one branch of the family. For quite two and a half centuries the branch of the Bristol family of this name has dwelt in New England, and for two centuries and more in the town of Bristol, where it has figured prominently in the town's social and business life and as well in the public affairs of the State. A number of the name have represented the town in the General Assembly of the State, among these Hon. Hopestill P. Dimond; Hon. Byron Diman, who was for many years in the Lower House, served as Senator, Lieutenant-Governor and Governor; Hon. Francis M. Dimond, who also served as both Lieutenant-Governor and Governor, and as well was United States Consul at Port au Prince and at Vera Cruz, Mexico; and Hon. Henry Wight Diman, who also served as United States consul, at Oporto, Portugal. This Bristol stock of Dimans, too, has given to the State one of the country's eminent scholars and educators, the learned divine and late professor of history and political economy in Brown University.

It is the purpose of this article to refer briefly to the lives of these men and to their pedigree, and as well to their posterity, some of whom are yet in the old Plymouth town of Bristol and in other portions of the State. The arrangement of matter is in simple Roman characters, used to indicate each generation treated and its remoteness from the first known American ancestor.

(I) Thomas Diamont moved from Farmington, Conn., to East Hampton, L. I., in 1660. In 1645 he married Mary Sheaffe, and he had three sons and four daughters, the sons being named James, Thomas and John. He died in 1682.

(II) James Diamont, son of Thomas, born in 1646, married Hannah James, daughter of Rev. Thomas James, of Charlestown, Mass., in 1677. He died in East Hampton, L. I., Dec. 13, 1721. His sons were: Nathaniel, who married Lois Hedges, in 1721; Thomas, born in East Hampton, L. I., about 1680; and John, born in 1690, who died in 1764.

(III) Thomas Diman, born about 1680, in East Hampton, L. I., left that place in 1712, and became a resident of Bristol, R. I. In 1706 he married Hannah Finney, who died in 1744, and their children were as follows: John; Rebecca;

Jonathan, deacon of the First Church of Plymouth, Mass., who died Feb. 25, 1797; Jeremiah, of Bristol; James (Rev.), born Nov. 29, 1707, who was a minister of the Second Church, Salem, and died Oct. 8, 1788; Phebe, born in 1717, who died Sept. 14, 1789; Lucretia, born in 1719, who married Richard Smith, and died Jan. 31, 1790; Daniel, who died Dec. 16, 1797.

(IV) Jeremiah Diman, son of Thomas, married May 13, 1733, Sarah Giddings, and they had eight sons and two daughters, namely: Nathaniel, born Jan. 29, 1734; James, born Oct. 9, 1735, married Anna La Favor, who died Jan. 4, 1791; Sarah, born Feb. 11, 1738, married John Lawless; Jeremiah, born July 13, 1740, died in November, 1760, at Albany, while serving in the French war; Jonathan, born Oct. 19, 1742, married Oct. 12, 1771, Dorothy Fales; Hannah, born Oct. 19, 1742, married Oct. 29, 1761, George Oxx; William, born Dec. 10, 1744; Joseph, born about 1748; Thomas, born in 1748, married (first) Saloma Foster, and (second) Elizabeth Waldron; Benjamin, who married Hope Turner, was a major in the Rhode Island Revolutionary forces, and died Dec. 31, 1777. The parents were admitted to the Congregational Church in Bristol May 13, 1741, and died, Mrs. Diman Oct. 13, 1790, aged eighty-one years, and Mr. Diman Nov. 10, 1798, aged eighty-eight years.

(V) Joseph Diman, born about 1748, married Nov. 26, 1767, Margaret, eldest daughter of Capt. Mark Anthony De Wolf, of Bristol, who was a descendant of Balthasar De Wolf, of Hartford, 1656 (the first known ancestor in America of the Rhode Island De Wolfs), through Edward and Charles De Wolf (2), of Guadeloupe, one of the French West Indies. They had children: Royal, born May 26, 1768; Jeremiah, born March 26, 1770; Margaret, born Dec. 27, 1773, who married Capt. Isaac Liscomb, and has a grandson in Providence, Mr. Isaac Liscombe; Joseph, born in 1780, who died in July, 1784; Joseph (2), born in 1785, who died in June, 1804; and Marian, born Oct. 19, 1789, who died in 1799. Mrs. Diman died Jan. 7, 1811, and Mr. Diman passed away Oct. 19, 1821.

(VI) Capt. Royal Diman, son of Joseph, born May 26, 1768, married Nov. 22, 1789, Mrs. Elizabeth (Martin) Moore, baptized Sept. 3, 1758, whose mother was a sister of Capt. Simeon Potter, a conspicuous character in Bristol, and whose sister Abigail married Mark Anthony De Wolf and became the mother and ancestress of the conspicuous De Wolfs of that town. Capt. Diman was a cooper by trade, later kept a grocery store, also followed the seas, and at the time of his death was extensively engaged in navigation and commerce. He died Aug. 17, 1820. Mrs. Diman passed away May 21, 1855, surviving him almost thirty-five years. Their children were: Hopestill Potter, born Nov. 16, 1790; Margaret De Wolf, in 1793; Francis Moore, June 8, 1796; Royal, April 4, 1798 (died Sept. 22, 1819, unmarried); Henry Wight, Oct. 1, 1801; and Fannie Moore, Oct. 2, 1803 (married Peleg Jones, of Warren, and had a son, Peleg Jones).

(VI) Capt. Jeremiah Diman, son of Joseph, born March 26, 1770, married June 10, 1794, Abigail Munro, daughter of Edward and Sarah, and had children: James, born March 15, 1795; Harry, March 24, 1798; Mary, April 17, 1800 (married Aug. 6, 1822, Capt. John Smith); Abigail, Sept. 3, 1802 (married Jan. 26, 1822, Henry Fales); Margaret, April 1, 1809 (married in 1833 Allen Taylor Bradford); and Sarah, Sept. 15, 1811 (married Oct. 17, 1830, Capt. Bliffin, and died Dec. 17, 1899, leaving no issue).

Capt. Jeremiah Diman also followed the sea. At the time of his birth and those of the other children of the family his parents lived in a house that stood on the southeast corner of Hope and Constitution streets. His mother, however, at the time of her death, was living in a house which is still standing on the southwest corner of Hope and Court streets. The fine residence known as the "Diman Mansion," which once stood upon Thames street, just north of the store of William R. Taylor, was built by one of the two sons, Capt. Royal Diman or Capt. Jeremiah. Of the "Diman Wharf," which extended from this place, little now remains. Capt. Jeremiah Diman died June 30, 1831. From him and his brother, Capt. Royal Diman, have descended the numerous Bristol families of that name, and the blood has been also perpetuated through their sister, Mrs. Margaret Liscomb.

(VII) Hon. Hopestill Potter Dimond, son of Capt. Royal, born Nov. 16, 1790, married April 17, 1815, Eliza Nichols Attwood, born April 15, 1797. Says the work on the De Wolf Family by Rev. Dr. Perry: "This marriage was solemnized in the old Dyer homestead (now owned by Gov. A. O. Bourne, of Rhode Island), in North Canton, now called Elmwood, by Rev. 'Paddy Wilson,' the celebrated pastor of the 'Round Top Church, Providence,' who pronounced them the handsomest couple he had united during the forty years of his ministry."

Mr. Dimond was a representative in the Lower House of the State Assembly from Bristol in 1819. For upward of thirty years he filled a responsible office in the United States custom house at Bristol, and as a public officer and citizen was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He died Oct. 15, 1857. His widow passed away Feb. 14, 1888. Their children were: Montgomery P., born March 14, 1816, died in 1863, unmarried; William F., born April 6, 1818, died Feb. 16, 1893, unmarried; Mary N., born Oct. 31, 1820, died Oct. 1, 1822; Hopestill P., born Sept. 10, 1823, died June 10, 1853, unmarried; Charles Wesley, born May 6, 1829, died April 21, 1880; Francis Moore, born Dec. 1, 1833, married June 25, 1875, Ann Scott;

John Nichols, born Jan. 16, 1836, died Dec. 10, 1880; and Elizabeth, born in 1839, who died in 1899, married George F. Foster, and had a son, Frank, of New York.

(VIII) Hopestill Potter Dimond, son of Hon. Hopestill Potter, born Sept. 10, 1823, died June 10, 1853, on his way home from New Orleans as first officer for Capt. James Lawless, on the steamship "Charles Morgan." He was a brave fellow, and during a storm in 1852 he saved the lives of the passengers and crew of the steamship "Independence" on Matagorda bar. In the effort to reach the ill-fated ship his boat was swamped three times. The rescue was made against the judgment of his superior officers, and when no one else would make the attempt. Francis M. Dimond, his brother, has a solid goblet given to his brother by the rescued passengers in recognition of his heroism and as a testimonial.

(VIII) Charles Wesley Dimond, son of Hon. Hopestill Potter Dimond, born May 6, 1829, married Mary Catharine Church, daughter of Samuel W. Church, of Pappoosequaw. Their children were: Mary, Samuel C., Millie, Hopestill, Lizzie, Charles, Frank M. and Katharine.

(IX) SAMUEL CHURCH DIMOND, son of Charles W., was educated in the Bristol school, going through the Grammar department and spending nearly two years in the high school. Leaving school at the age of fifteen years he went to work for John Lake, for whom he worked until July, 1901, when he became the manager of the business, and has continued as such. He has been quite successful in business, to which he has devoted himself, never taking any active part in public matters. He attends the Baptist Church. He is an associate member of the G. A. R.

(VIII) FRANCIS MOORE DIMOND, born Dec. 1, 1833, son of Hon. Hopestill Potter Dimond, spent his boyhood in Bristol, where he was educated in the public schools. However, he did not pass through the high school of his native town, but when quite young he went into the store of James Madison Gooding, in Bristol, for one year as a clerk. Then he went to Providence, apprenticing himself to Sacket, Davis & Potter, to learn the jeweler's trade, at which he served three years. He had with him as an apprentice in the same work Lieut.-Gov. William T. C. Wardwell. During this time Mr. Dimond was able to put in considerable extra time after his regular work was done, and from that work was enabled to save $1,000, which he used in paying off the mortgage on his father's place. In 1857, when only about twenty-four years of age, he was appointed United States surveyor under President Buchanan for the ports of Bristol and Warren, holding this office for four years. He was then with Col. Samuel Norris for one year. In 1862 he went to Chicago as agent, for his cousin, Theodore W. Phinney, who was engaged extensively in the manufacture of lime, and there remained for thirteen years. He was in Chicago during the great fire of October, 1871, and spent the night on the lake front in charge of the trunks of many ladies who had left them there. After that he came to Providence and married, and becoming interested in Providence real estate took up his home there. He has since been engaged in the real estate and mortgage loan business in Providence, and has been very successful in that line. He has had considerable to do in the settlement of estates. Mr. Dimond attributes his success in business to industry and careful management of everything he has undertaken. He is in every sense of the word a self-made man. Prior to the war and up to the assassination of President Lincoln he was a Democrat, but he has since been a Republican. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs, having been one of the city councilors of Providence in 1880, a warden in Elmwood for fifteen years, and in 1902, without his knowledge, was made warden for the Fourth Ward of the City of Providence. He is a member of the Congregational Church.

On June 25, 1875, Mr. Dimond married Ann Scott, who died in 1893. No children came to this union.

(VII) HON. FRANCIS MOORE DIMOND, son of Capt. Royal, born June 8, 1796, married, in 1820, Mrs. Maria Eustis (Parker) Greene, and their children were: (1) Cornelius R., born in 1821, married Adela Carler, and their children were: Frances, Florence (married Charles Wingate), Cornelius and Henry P. (2) Isabella E., born in 1827, married in 1850, Samuel Norris, and their children were: Maria D., born in 1852; Isabella E., in 1858 (died in 1863); and Samuel, in 1862. (3) Virginia, baptized in 1830, died in 1837. (4) Rosa, born in 1832, married Nov. 19, 1856, Theodore W. Phinney, and died in Newport, being burned to death. Their children were: Rosa D., born July 30, 1857 (married a Grosvenor); Anita A. M., Aug. 8, 1860; and Caroline D., Oct. 25, 1868 (died March 23, 1876). (5) Francis M., born in 1834, died in 1837.

Gov. Dimond, though born in Bristol, R. I., went to Cuba in early life and there lived for some years. Later he became United States consul at Port au Prince, and afterward held the same position at Vera Cruz, Mexico. His thorough knowledge of the country and government, and as well of the language, on the breaking out of the war between Mexico and the United States, made him of great service to his country. It is stated that "when the expedition against Vera Cruz was planned he was summoned to Washington, where his accurate memory quickly supplied the greatly needed chart of the Mexican harbor." It was his intention to have been an eye-witness of the bombardment of the place, but on leaving Havana, enroute, the vessel in which he embarked was wrecked and he did not reach the place of his destination until the day after the bombardment. For his valuable services, and because of his being so beloved and respected by the inhabitants, he, having reached the harbor in time, was assigned the honor of entering the city with the victorious American army, and acted as the official interpreter. He was appointed collector of the captured city, and the United States Government, in recognition for his services and great kindness to Texas prisoners, awarded him a tract of land. During his earlier life for a time he resided in New Orleans. Returning in later years to his native town, he was elected lieutenant-governor of Rhode Island from 1853 to 1854. On the resignation of Gov. Philip Allen Mr. Dimond became his successor for the unexpired part of his term of service. Gov. Dimond later became interested in the building of the Southern Pacific railroad and was president of the company which had started the enterprise. He passed his declining years in his beautiful home, one of the former houses of the De Wolf family, and which is still the home of one of Gov. Dimond's daughters, the wife of Col. Samuel Norris, and her children, Samuel Norris, Jr., a successful member of the Rhode Island Bar, and his sister. Here Gov. Dimond died in 1858, aged sixty-three years.

(VII) Henry Wight Dimond, son of Capt. Royal, born Oct. 1, 1801, married Sept. 23, 1823, Martha Lindsay, and their children were: (1) William H., born Dec. 26, 1824, died Dec. 12, 1842. (2) Martha M., born Aug. 25, 1826, married William H. Warren, and to them were born children as follows: William H., U. S. N., born in 1845, was drowned in 1860; Mary E., born in 1843, died in 1849; Henry D., U. S. N., born in 1850, died in 1881; and Salmon D., born in 1868, died in 1889, unmarried. (3) Charles. (4) John is captain of police of Bristol.

(VII) James Diman, son of Capt. Jeremiah, born March 15, 1795, married Jan. 2, 1816, Martha Munro, and their children were: Martha J., born Oct. 20, 1816, married Nov. 6, 1848, John Gardner, and died April 5, 1894; Lydia, born in October, 1818, died Nov. 6, 1821; Mary A., born March 3, 1821, died March 20, 1822.

James Diman was educated in Bristol. He was captain of a New York packet, and for forty years kept a store on Hope street. He always manifested great interest in the affairs of his town and State, and filled many offices of trust and responsibility, including that of member of the town council. He was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the county of Bristol for several years, and was generally known as Judge Diman. He was presiding officer of the Justice Court for several years, until the Court was abandoned. He was a great reader, and was especially well versed in history, both ancient and modern. He died June 8, 1877.

(VII) Capt. Harry Diman, son of Capt. Jeremiah, born March 24, 1798, married March 27, 1817, Elizabeth Gray, and their children were: Henry, born Aug. 3, 1818, died Feb. 23, 1902; Capt. Francis LeBaron, born Sept. 7, 1819, died in 1900; Elizabeth, born June 26, 1822; and Marion, born Jan. 8, 1824, married James Pearce, and died Nov. 13, 1844.

(VII) MARGARET DIMAN, daughter of Capt. Jeremiah, born April 1, 1809, married in 1833, Allen T. Bradford, and their children were: Mary Abby, born July 7, 1835, married in 1853 A. Winsor Gooding, and had a son, James Gooding, who was born March 27, 1857, married Oct. 8, 1885, Lillian M. Wall, and had William B. and Marguerite S. Sarah was born Aug. 25, 1837. Allen T., born Aug. 5, 1840, died in Matanzas, Cuba, Aug. 14, 1857. Margaret D., born May 13, 1843, married, in 1871, George F. Stanton, and had a daughter, Emma B., born Nov. 3, 1873; she prepared for Brown University, took the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1896, and the Master degree in 1900, and was elected a member of the Brown Phi Beta Kappa Chapter in 1903, and is now Registrar of the Woman's College, Brown University.

(V) Nathaniel Diman, son of Jeremiah and Sarah (Giddings) Diman, of Bristol, born Jan. 29, 1734, married Oct. 18, 1756, Anna Gallup (or Gallop), daughter of Samuel and Mary Gallup, and granddaughter of Samuel Gallup, one of the first settlers of Bristol, and his wife Elizabeth Southworth, daughter of Constant Southworth, treasurer of the Plymouth Colony. Nathaniel Diman died May 24, 1812, and Mrs. Diman March 7, 1791. Among their children were: William, born Nov. 1, 1759, served in the Revolutionary army; Mary, born Sept. 18, 1764, married Nathaniel Ingraham; Jeremiah, born Jan. 4, 1767; Nancy, born in 1775, and died Sept. 13, 1821, married John Richardson; and John who went to sea from Bristol and was never heard from.

(VI) Deacon Jeremiah Diman, son of Nathaniel, born Jan. 4, 1767, was a cooper and gauger, and was interested in shipping. He married Nov. 6, 1794, Hannah Luther, daughter of Barnaby L., of Swansea. Mr. Diman died Aug. 10, 1847, and Mrs. Diman June 7, 1840, aged seventy years. Their children were: Byron, born Aug. 5, 1795, is mentioned below; George Howe, born Aug. 19, 1797, died from an accident Dec. 2, 1815. The father was deacon of the First Congregational Church.

(VII) HON. BYRON DIMAN, born Aug. 5, 1795, married June 1, 1823, Abigail Alden Wight, who was born Oct. 21, 1802, daughter of Rev. Henry Wight, D. D., for more than forty years pastor of the Congregational Church in Bristol, and Clarissa (Leonard), his wife, who was a daughter of Zephaniah Leonard, of Raynham, Mass. Mrs. Abigail Alden (Wight) Diman was a descendant in the fifth generation of John Alden, of Plymouth, Mass. To Mr. and Mrs. Diman were born children as follows: (1) George Byron, born May 16, 1824, died Feb. 4, 1903. (2) Clara Anna, born Aug. 8, 1826, died Aug. 25, 1826. (3) Clara Anna (2), born April 1, 1828, was married June 30, 1847, to A. Sidney DeWolf, the father of the late Mrs. Nathaniel G. Herreshoff. (4) Jeremiah Lewis, born May 1, 1831, is mentioned below. (5) Henry Wight, born April 2, 1835, was paymaster in the United States gunboat "Kineo" during part of the Civil war, and was consul to Oporto and Lisbon, Portugal, for about twenty-four years, dying in September, 1884, at Lisbon. (6) Abby Byron, born May 7, 1838, died Aug. 10, 1838.

Byron Diman married for his second wife May 2, 1855, Elizabeth Ann Wood, who was born in Warren Oct. 11, 1816, daughter of Thomas Baker and Sarah (Hawkins) Wood. Mrs. Diman died Oct. 13, 1881. By this marriage there was one daughter, Elizabeth Byron, born June 22, 1857, who married Jan. 8, 1890, Harry Hyde Cabot, son of Joseph Clarke and Catharine (Wales) Cabot, born in St. Louis, May 11, 1857.

Byron Diman received his early education in excellent private schools, principally under the tuition of the late Bishop Griswold. At sixteen years of age he entered the office of the late Hon. James DeWolf, where he continued until that gentleman's death in 1837, and until after the settlement of his estate. For years he was extensively engaged in commercial business, both in the whale fisheries and West Indies trade. He was also largely concerned in cotton manufactures, and was an extensive owner and director in both of the cotton manufacturing concerns of Bristol. He was at one time treasurer and subsequently president of the Bristol Steam Mill. He was a director of the Pokanoket Mill, and for many years president of the Bank of Bristol. In various ways he was closely identified with the business interests of Bristol. Mr. Diman was an enthusiastic Whig of the Henry Clay school. For many years he was a member of the General Assembly, and was a delegate to the Harrisburg Convention of 1840, which nominated Gen. Harrison for the Presidency. He was a member of the Lower House from Bristol for the years 1829, 1837 and 1838, and of the Senate for 1850, 1851 and 1852. During the Dorr troubles in 1842 he was a member of the Governor's council and was one of a body of men who shouldered a gun and marched to Chepachet. He was Lieutenant-Governor of the State for the years 1843, 1844 and 1845, and governor in 1846. "No persuasion could induce him to hold the office longer than a year, and he was deaf to all solicitations to accept a higher position, even that of United States Senator." The only official connection that he retained with the State was as commissioner of the indigent blind, deaf and dumb. Mr. Diman issued the call for the first meeting held in Bristol for the organization of the Republican party, and he gave to the policy of President Lincoln a cordial and unhesitating support.

Gov. Diman always took an interest in church affairs and was remarkably punctual in his attendance on public worship. He was for several years president of the Catholic Congregational Society. He was a man of open hospitality, the poor who appealed for a share of his bounty never being sent away empty handed. He was a genial, kind-hearted man, a prudent counsellor and a true friend. He retired from active life at sixty and passed his remaining years in the quiet of his family, library and native town. "Up to a late period in his life he was a diligent reader, and few men not belonging to the class of professed students possessed more varied and accurate information. He was well versed in English literature and general history, and especially at home in topographical and antiquarian lore." He died Aug. 1, 1865.

(VIII) PROF. JEREMIAH LEWIS DIMAN, son of Hon. Byron, born May 1, 1831, in Bristol, married May 15, 1861, Emily Gardner Stimson, who was born March 4, 1837, daughter of John J. and Abby M. (Clarke) Stimson, of Providence, the former a son of Dr. Jeremy Stimson, a physician of Hopkinton, Mass., the latter a daughter of Rev. Pitt Clarke, of Norton, Mass. To this marriage came one son and three daughters: Maria Stimson, born Feb. 12, 1862, met with an accidental death, dying April 29, 1881; John Byron (Rev.), born May 24, 1863, is the founder and head master of St. George's school, in Newport, R. I.; Louise was born Dec. 23, 1869; and Emily, April 8, 1873. Mrs. J. Lewis Diman died March 21, 1901.

J. Lewis Diman was prepared for college under the direction of Rev. James N. Sikes, a Baptist minister settled over the church at Bristol, entered Brown University at sixteen, and was graduated in the class of 1851. As a boy in his native town he prepared a number of historic articles entitled "Annals of Bristol," which were published in the Phoenix of that town. During the later years of college course, it was evident that in literary, historical and philosophical studies, his tastes and superior abilities would in after life assert themselves. At the time of his graduation there was assigned to him "The Classical Oration." His theme was "The Living Principle of Literature."

While in college Mr. Diman united with the Congregational Church in Bristol. He chose the Christian ministry as his life work, and he went to reside as a pupil in the family of Rev. Dr. Thatcher Thayer, of Newport, R. I., under whom he pursued a course of philosophy, theology and classics. For two years, beginning in the fall of 1852, he was a student in Andover (Mass.) Theological Seminary. Deciding to further his studies in the German universities he went abroad in the summer of 1854, traveled on the Continent and studied theology, philosophy and history under the great teachers of Halle, Heidelberg and Berlin, and for a short time during one of his vacations was a student of art at Munich. Returning to America in the spring of 1856, he again took up his studies at Andover and was graduated that summer. In that same year he was installed pastor of the First Congregational Church at Fall River, Mass., where he remained until 1860. He declined in 1858 an invitation to become the colleague of the celebrated Dr. Horace Bushnell over a Congregational Church at Hartford, Conn. In 1860 he accepted a call to the Harvard Congregational Church at Brookline, Mass. In 1864 he returned to Providence to fill the chair of History and Political Economy, in Brown University, and this position he held until his death, receiving from his Alma Mater the degree of D. D. in 1870. In this new and important position he soon distinguished himself by devotion to his work and by his rare scholarship and attainments, being, in the words of his eulogist, "the embodiment of what the occupant of the chair of history in our leading colleges should be." Possessing an enlarged and comprehensive conception of the philosophy of history and of the relation of divine to human affairs, and being withal "apt to teach," he magnified his office until his department became without question the best and most effective of any chair of history in all the institutions in the land.

Prof. Diman's work was not confined to the class room. For many years he was a contributor to the Providence Journal, the New York Nation, the North American Review, the monthly Religious Magazine and other periodicals. He was elected a corresponding member of the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1873. Among his published sermons, addresses, etc., may be mentioned a sermon delivered Oct. 16, 1867, in the chapel of Brown University, at the request of the Faculty, in commemoration of Rev. Robinson Potter Dunn, D. D., for many years Professor of Rhetoric in the University; "The Method of Academic Culture," an address delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Amherst College, July 6, 1869, and afterward published in The New Englander; "Historical Basis of Belief," one of the Boston lectures delivered in 1870; "The Alienation of the Educated Class from Politics," an oration before the Phi Beta Kappa Society at Cambridge, Mass., delivered June 29, 1876, and afterward published by Sidney S. Rider; an address delivered at Portsmouth, R. I., July 10, 1877, at the Centennial Celebration of the capture of Gen. Prescott by Lieut.-Col. Barton, which was afterward published, with notes, forming No. 1 of Rider's Rhode Island Historical tracts; an address delivered Oct. 16, 1877, at the request of the municipal authorities of Providence, upon the occasion of the dedication of the monument in commemoration of the life and services of the venerated founder of the State, in Roger Williams Park; an address at the dedication of the Rogers Free Library, at Bristol, delivered Jan. 12, 1878. He delivered before a great gathering the historical address at the two hundredth anniversary of his native town, in 1880, which address has since been published with the proceedings. He was frequently called upon to supply pulpits in both his own and the Unitarian denominations. For some years before his death he was an attendant at St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, Providence, though he never left the Congregational denomination. In 1879 he delivered a course of lectures before Johns Hopkins University upon the subject of the Thirty Years War, and the following year's course before the Lowell Institute of Boston on "The Theistic Argument as Affected by Recent Theories." The latter lectures were edited after his death by Prof. George P. Fisher, of Yale, and were published in 1881. In 1882 appeared his "Orations and Essays with Selected Parish Sermons," with the commemoration address by Prof. James O. Murray, of Princeton, and in 1887 his "Memoirs, Compiled from his Letters, Journals and the Recollections of his Friends," by Caroline Hazard, now president of Wellesley College, including a complete list of his publications.

Prof. Diman died after less than a week's sickness, Feb. 3, 1881. A memorial service in honor of him, under the auspices of the University, was held in the First Baptist Meeting-house on May 17, 1881, when an impressive commemorative discourse was delivered by his intimate friend and associate in college, Rev. James O. Murray, D. D., Professor in the College of New Jersey at Princeton.

BUCKLIN. The first record of the Bucklin family in Rehoboth is that of the marriage of (I) Joseph Bucklin (Buklin) and Deborah Allen, Nov. 5, 1659. Their children were: Deborah, born Sept. 16, 1660; Joseph, Feb. 16, 1663; Barak, Aug. 1, 1666; John, May 10, 1668; James, July 3, 1669; Isaac, Jan. 31, 1672; Nehemiah, Sept. 16, 1675; Nehemiah (2), March 31, 1678; and Lydia, Sept. 5, 1680.

(II) James Bucklin, son of Joseph, born July 3, 1669, married Mary, and their children were: James, born April 26, 1709; Naoma, Nov. 3, 1710; Timothy, Dec. 7, 1712; Mary, April 12, 1715; and Nehemiah, July 22, 1719.

(III) James Bucklin (2), son of James, born April 26, 1709, married Marcy, and their children were: James, born Nov. 30, 1743; Nehemiah, Nov. 11, 1745; John (Cumberland), Oct. 25, 1747; Benjamin, Jan. 20, 1749; Anne, Sept. 26, 1751; Susannah, Aug. 18, 1754; Ruth, July 26, 1756; Mary, April 12, 1758; Sarah, Aug. 9, 1760; Henry, Aug. 5, 1762; Amelia, Sept. 5, 1766; and Asa, July 2, 1764.

(IV) John Bucklin, son of James (2), born Oct. 25, 1747, married Amey Arnold, of Smithfield, R. I., and their children were: Mary, born March 14, 1771, married S. Bentley; James, born May 8, 1773; Amey, born March 19, 1775, married W. Jenkes; Joseph, born March 10, 1777, married Mary Slater; Sarah, born June 16, 1779; Nancy, born Oct. 31, 1781; Ruth; Charlotte; Minerva and John.

(V) James Bucklin, of Rehoboth, Mass., son of John, born May 8, 1773, married Jan. 7, 1796, Loriania Pearce, of that town. He died Dec. 6, 1802.

(VI) JAMES C. BUCKLIN, son of James and Loriania (Pearce) Bucklin, born July 26, 1801, in Pawtucket, was taken to Providence by his widowed mother, and there he received a good education. At the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed to Mr. John H. Greene, an architect and builder of that city. With a natural taste for this kind of work, and fond of study, he purchased with the first money he earned after completing his apprenticeship, a book on architecture and he soon advanced in the profession. He eventually gave his attention almost entirely to this branch of contracting and building, though the latter business engaged his attention in his early years. At the age of twenty-one years he commenced that business in partnership with Mr. William Tallman, the style of the firm being Tallman & Bucklin, a firm that was for many years one of the most prominent and successful among the builders and dealers in lumber in Providence. For perhaps the last twenty-five years of his active business life, Mr. Bucklin gave his attention to architecture, and designed many of the finest buildings of his day in Providence, among them the Arcade, the Westminster Congregational Church edifice, the Butler Hospital for the Insane, the Hoppin homestead, Music Hall, Howard Block and the Reynolds Building. He was the architect of some 300 mill structures and many fine residences as well as business buildings in various parts of the country. His varied experience as an architect and builder gave him a high and extended reputation in that line, so that he was looked upon as one of the leaders of his profession in New England.

Mr. Bucklin was a man of simple and modest tastes, led a quiet and unostentatious life, and enjoyed in full the confidence, esteem and respect of the community in which he lived. He took a deep interest in the people of his town and city, and he was one of the heartiest supporters of any measure that his good judgment showed him was for their welfare. His word carried influence and inspired confidence. He was a great reader of good books, and was fond of his home and family. He was one of the original members of the Squantum Club. In his early life he took considerable interest and was very active in military affairs, and served a period as first lieutenant in the First Light Infantry of Rhode Island.

On March 16, 1829, Mr. Bucklin was united in marriage with Lucy Dailey, daughter of Captain Daniel Dailey, of Providence, and the following children were born to this union: Helen Dailey, who became the wife of Mr. Caleb Seagrave, and makes her residence in Providence; Loraine Pearce, also of Providence; James Albert and Daniel Dailey, both deceased; and William Tallman. Mr. Busklin died in September, 1890; his wife passed away in November, 1888.

DR. CLASSEN MOWRY, one of the successful physicians of Providence, belongs to a family resident in Rhode Island for two and a half centuries.

(I) Roger Mowry married Mary Johnson, and came to Providence in 1649.

(II) Nathaniel Mowry, son of Roger, born in 1644, died March 24, 1717. He married Johannah Inman.

(III) Capt. Joseph, son of Nathaniel, married Alice Whipple.

(IV) Capt. Daniel Mowry, son of Captain Joseph, was born Sept. 6, 1697, and was an influential man of his time. Two of his sons, Judge Daniel and Colonel Elisha, took a prominent part in town and State affairs during the long period comprised in the French and Indian wars, the Revolutionary war and the intervening years. Lawyer Joseph, his eldest son, was a very prominent man. Captain Daniel Mowry lived to an old age, dying May 27, 1787, and his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Steere, died Jan. 2, 1776, in her seventy-fifth year. Their children were: Joseph, born Nov. 10, 1723; Thomas, May 27, 1726; Daniel, Aug. 17, 1729; Elisha, March 28, 1735; Mary, Sept. 7, 1737; and Alice, Dec. 27, 1739.

(V) Joseph Mowry, born Nov. 10, 1723, son of Captain Daniel, was a lawyer and captain of the Third Company or Train Band of the town of Smithfield. He died in 1764. He married Feb. 12, 1743, Ann Whipple, and their children were: Job, born Jan. 24, 1744; Thomas, born March 15, 1746, married Rhoda Aldrich; Richard, born Feb. 11, 1748, married (first) Phebe Smith, (second) Huldah Harris, and (third) Isabel Chase; Andrew, born April 4, 1751; Ruth, born Aug. 13, 1753, married Jeremiah Hawkins; Anne, born Dec. 14, 1755; Phebe, born Nov. 14, 1758; and Augusta, born Aug. 9, 1761.

(VI) Job Mowry, son of Joseph, was born Jan. 24, 1744, in Smithfield, and was a prominent man of his native town for many years. He held the offices of constable, tax collector and town sergeant, and in addition to his farming business carried on saw milling. He died Jan. 11, 1803. Job Mowry married Mrs. Hannah (Appleton) Smith, widow of Nathaniel Smith. Their children were: Nathaniel, born June 23, 1772; Dorcas, born Oct. 3, 1774, married Lewis Place, of Gloucester; Ephraim, born Dec. 23, 1777, married Achsah Harris, and removed to Chenango county, N. Y.; and Anne, born Dec. 1, 1784, married Job Mowry.

(VII) Nathaniel Mowry, son of Job, was born June 23, 1772, in Smithfield. He successfully followed farming, and conducted a sawmill. A useful and public spirited citizen, he became prominent in the affairs of the town, holding a number of local offices. He died July 17, 1841, and was buried in a private yard on his farm, the same farm now being occupied by his grandson, Lilley B. Mowry. Nathaniel Mowry was married to Asha Aldrich, born Sept. 30, 1770, daughter of Daniel Aldrich, of Smithfield; she died May 8, 1848. Their children were: (1) Waity Ann, born Feb. 15, 1796, in early life was a school teacher. (2) Daniel A. was born Aug. 31, 1797. (3) Samuel, born Sept. 27, 1799, attended the academies at Amherst, Mass., and Dudley, medical lectures at Boston in 1825 and 1826, and was admitted a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society in 1838. For thirty years he was engaged in practice with marked success at Chepachet, after which he removed to Providence, where he continued in practice until his death, Aug. 5, 1879. He married, July 31, 1839, Roby Bellows, and they had one daughter, Asha Annie Elizabeth, born July 31, 1840, who married Franklin P. Branch, and had three children, Roby B., Waity Angell and Annie. (4) Burrill R., born April 25, 1802, was a millwright and farmer, and died March 20, 1884. His wife, Phebe T. Chace, died April 6, 1896. Their children were: Lilley B., born April 7, 1840, a school teacher in early life, and later a millwright, following the latter trade quite actively until 1895, married Ellen E. Esten, and has one son; Erswell, born Aug. 12, 1863 (he enlisted early in 1865 at Worcester, Mass., in Company F, 2d Massachusetts Cavalry, was assigned to the Quartermaster's department as an assistant, and was mustered out of the service in the fall of 1865); and Samuel R., born Aug. 18, 1848, who received his literary education at the Swedenborgian Academy at Waltham, Mass., Friends school, Providence, and graduated from Lapham Institute at North Scituate, studied medicine with Dr. John C. Budlong, of Graniteville, and Dr. Isaac Sawin, of Olneyville, afterward graduating at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1873, and was engaged in practice with Dr. Budlong at Graniteville, when he died, unmarried, Sept. 18, 1876. (5) John B., born March 18, 1804, left home when a young man and went to sea, becoming captain of a New Orleans packet, at which city he died. (6) Manton W., born March 11, 1806, was a machinist, and died unmarried. (7) Nelson H., born May 20, 1808, was a farmer and mason, and for some years he followed the sea, going to California, where he remained a year or more in the mining district, but most of his life was passed in a mercantile business in Providence, where he died April 8, 1868. He married Lydia Ann Dyer, and they had one son, Nelson, who early emigrated to California, and became a noted horseback rider, touring the country giving exhibitions, and died at New Orleans in 1878. (8) Jonathan, born Dec. 14, 1811, died unmarried, Oct. 27, 1856.

(VIII) Daniel A. Mowry, son of Nathaniel,

Classen Mowry M.D.

Daniel A. Mourey

Wm. W. W.

Daniel A. Munroe

was born Aug. 31, 1797, in Smithfield, and was reared to farm work. When about twenty-one years of age he was injured by an accident on general muster day, which lamed him for life, and he therefore could not perform manual labor. He was gate-keeper for several years upon the Douglas turnpike, and the Woonsocket and Scituate road. He removed to Providence, April 1, 1832, and bought out the Lyman Arnold store on Canal street, and there kept groceries, grain and flour. About 1845 he removed his store further up the street, and continued the grocery business either alone or with his sons until a few years previous to his death, which occurred July 20, 1877. In all, he carried on the business in Providence for more than thirty years, and was a good business man, active, intelligent and enterprising. He was generous, benevolent, kind to the poor and unfortunate; large hearted, sympathetic, a good husband and father, and a useful citizen.

On Oct. 15, 1818, Daniel A. Mowry married (first) Mary J. Harris, daughter of Jonathan, of Smithfield, born Dec. 8, 1796, died Sept. 8, 1830, leaving two children: Darwin R., born Jan. 13, 1820, is mentioned at length elsewhere; and Daniel A., born Nov. 15, 1828. Mr. Mowry, for his second wife was married, Feb. 24, 1833, to Abigail Harris, born June 13, 1803, sister of his first wife; she died in Providence, Nov. 7, 1878, the mother of two children, Emor H. and Nathaniel S. (1) Emor H., born Oct. 20, 1833, is a farmer by occupation, residing on the old homestead farm near the Smithfield station, in the town of Smithfield, and he is one of the esteemed citizens of the town and has been active in public matters, holding at this time the office of assessor, and serving as overseer of the poor. He married, Jan. 23, 1862, Amanda M. Slocum, of Smithfield, born June 14, 1841. Six children were born to them: Daniel A., born Feb. 19, 1863, died March 4, 1865; Emily Isabel, born July 27, 1865, died July 19, 1877; Abby H., born March 19, 1867; Emor H., born Sept. 18, 1870, died July 5, 1877; Amanda M., born March 15, 1872; and Annie Louise, born May 10, 1875, died July 11, 1877. (2) Nathaniel S., born April 18, 1839, was married (first) Dec. 16, 1860, to Mary E. Irons, to whom two children were born: Job Shaw, born in January, 1864, died June 26, 1866; and Chelsey Beach, born Jan. 4, 1869, resides in Boston. Mr. Mowry's second wife, whom he married June 12, 1878, was Isabelle Standish. He died in Providence, Oct. 7, 1885.

(IX) DANIEL A. MOWRY (2), son of Daniel A., was born Nov. 15, 1828, in Smithfield, and was a small boy when his parents removed to Providence. His education was acquired in the public schools of that city, after leaving which he was connected with his father in the store until 1849, when he went to California, sailing from New York around Cape Horn, enroute to San Francisco. For some time he was engaged in prospecting, but later with a Mr. Classen, who was from New York City; he began the making of soda, carbonized water and soft drinks, under the name of the Pacific Soda Works, being pioneers in that line. Their establishment was situated on the corner of Second and Jessie streets, San Francisco, the site now being occupied by large buildings. They did a large and profitable business in their line, some of the product supplying the Pacific Mail Company. Mr. Mowry disposed of his business holdings there in 1857, and returned to Providence, engaging in the same business at Pine and Richmond streets, and after a number of years successfully spent in this line, disposed of his interests, and with H. S. Knight engaged in dealing in diamonds and other precious stones, under the firm name of Mowry & Knight. They also manufactured solid gold rings, stick-pins, etc. Their establishment was located at the corner of Westminster and Mathewson streets, where the Gladding store is now located. After about three years, Mr. Mowry bought his partner's interest and continued the business alone until the early seventies, when he disposed of it. From that time until his death Mr. Mowry was engaged as a money broker, and devoted his time to the management of his own private business matters. He died Aug. 11, 1901, and was buried at Swan Point. Mr. Mowry was a Republican in political matters, but took very little interest therein. He was a man of quiet tastes and manners, was a shrewd business man, of the strictest integrity, and was honest and upright in all of his dealings.

Mr. Mowry was married in Providence, Dec. 28, 1859, to Isabella Maria Fletcher, born March 18, 1839, in Providence, daughter of Joseph and Mary Elizabeth (Cushing) Fletcher, and the children born to this union were: Myra Buffum, born Sept. 16, 1860; Mary Fletcher, born Jan. 7, 1864, died May 18, 1902; and Classen, born March 19, 1868.

(X) Dr. Classen Mowry was born March 19, 1868, and his early education was acquired in the public schools, and Bryant and Stratton's Business College, Providence. For some years thereafter he was manager of some of his father's business interests, acquiring a sound, practical business education. He began the study of medicine with Dr. James Morton, on Benefit street, and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Boston, graduating therefrom, with the degree of M. D., June 17, 1896. Previous to his graduation, Dr. Mowry took the trying and difficult examination for non-graduates, by the Board of Registration in Medicine in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and passed this severe test, receiving a certificate from that board which he later, after his graduation, exchanged for a graduate's certificate. He began practice with Dr. I. D. Carl, a well known physician of Boston, remaining there until October, 1896, at which time he received a certificate from the

(VI) William H. Child, born June 11, 1789, married Betsey Bowen, and their children of Warren town record were: Joseph Bowen, born March 16, 1812; Henry W., born Sept. 13, 1814; Jonathan Bowen, born Aug. 18, 1817; Moses Tyler; Cyril Martin; Edward Tyler; Harriet; and Charles.

(VII) Joseph Bowen Child, born March 16, 1812, son of William Henry and Betsey Child, married July 16, 1840, Elizabeth Carr Drown [See Drown family]. They had children: Charles Henry, born July 24, 1841; Joseph Bowen, born July 17, 1843; Mary Elizabeth, born July 15, 1851, who married Charles West Hazard; Nellie Maria, born Nov. 11, 1853, who married Eugene A.
Vaughan.

(VIII) Charles H. Child was born July 24, 1841, in Warren, R. I., where he was educated in the public schools, which he left at the age of fifteen years to engage as a clerk for Thomas G. Turner and his son, Daniel L., remaining with that house for ten years. Then he removed to Providence and was engaged as traveling salesman for Salsbury, Anthony & Co., remaining five years in that line,

Charles H. Child

going from there to Sargent Bros. & Co. of Boston, for six years. He retained his home in Providence. Starting at a salary of $50 for the first year, with Mr. Turner, he closed with a salary of $2,500 with Sargent Bros. & Co.

After leaving Sargent Bros. & Co., at the death of Mr. Butler, of Butler, Brown & Co., general mill furnishers, Mr. Child became a member of the firm of Brown Bros. & Co., on Jan. 1, 1878, remaining as treasurer of the company for almost twenty-two years. In October, 1899, he left that firm and associated himself with the Standard Mill Supply Company, having connected with him, at that time, twelve persons formerly with the firm of Brown Bros. & Co., these individuals having founded the firm three years before Mr. Child came into it, as stated.

The Standard Mill Supply Company is now the largest house of the kind in New England and is also connected with the Charlotte Supply Company, of Charlotte, N. C., in that connection doing the largest business of any concern in its line in the United States. Mr. Child is also connected with other important and successful business enterprises, being a director of the Warren Manufacturing Company, of Warren, in which position he has served since 1895; of the Textile Mill Supply Company, and of the Charlotte Mill Supply Company, of Charlotte, N. C., in all of his connections bearing the reputation of an able man of business and one of unquestioned integrity. The fact that he has risen by his own efforts makes his position all the more notable.

In political affiliation Mr. Child has always been a staunch Republican, having voted that ticket since the age of twenty-one. On many occasions he has served as a delegate to county and State conventions and was alternate to the St. Louis convention in 1896 and a delegate at large from Rhode Island to the Philadelphia convention of 1900. In 1904 he was a delegate to the Chicago convention. He has frequently been urged to accept office, but has steadily refused, not desiring to mingle in politics as an officeholder. He is an active member of the Young Men's Republican Club, and a director of the Home Market Club of Boston, being on the reception committee of the latter, and has been often privileged to introduce to the city such public men as Postmaster-General Smith, of the late President McKinley's cabinet, and in 1902 had the satisfaction of introducing President Roosevelt to Providence. He is gifted socially and is a highly appreciated member of Hope Club, of the Squantum Club of Providence, and of the New England Cotton Manufacturers Association, and esteemed in all.

In spite of absorbing business interests, and political and social claims, Mr. Child has found inclination and time to attend to his religious duties and to set an example of Christian good fellowship and upright living. In March, 1858, he united with the Warren Baptist Church, and in 1869, by letter, joined the Central Baptist Church of Providence. For twenty-one years he was chairman of the Weekly Offering committee; has been a member of the standing committee of the church for a number of years; and for twenty-five years has been chairman of the church committee on Ways and Means—the committee which has charge of the raising of funds, making up deficiencies, etc. At various times he has served the Sunday-school as secretary and treasurer, and as assistant superintendent. He is treasurer of the Relief Fund for the Warren, Providence and Narragansett Association for the relief of indigent ministers or their widows, and has held that office for twenty years. From the variety of his duties and their great responsibilities it may well be judged that his heart is in the work, and that the foundation of his religion is both broad and deep. He is a regular attendant upon church services.

Mr. Child married, on Dec. 27, 1864, Miss Eldora Frances Salisbury, daughter of Martin Luther and Susan Armstrong (Cottrell) Salisbury, and two children were born to them: (1) Gertrude Salisbury, born March 9, 1868, married in June, 1889, Cornelius Barrows. (2) Clara Drown, born in November, 1874, married in November, 1899, Walter S. Hackney, and has had two children, Dorothy, born Oct. 17, 1900, and Helen, born Aug. 7, 1903.

(VIII) JOSEPH BOWEN CHILD was born in Warren, R. I., July 17, 1843. He attended the public schools of his native place, and at the age of fifteen years entered the dry goods store of ex-Gov. Thomas G. Turner, of Warren, as clerk, where his brother, Charles H., was also a clerk. In 1867 he went to Providence and entered the employ of Jacob Martin, then one of the leading dry goods merchants of Providence, with whom he remained until 1873. In that year he became a clerk in the dry goods store of Benjamin H. Gladding, when his business was located in the Brownell building. He remained with Mr. Gladding until his death, when he formed a partnership with Mr. William Armour and Charles E. Hill and purchased the Gladding business. He continued as a partner until 1897, when he sold out his interest to Mr. Armour, remaining with the firm, however, until 1901, when he went with the Shepard Company. He was with them for nearly three years, retiring Jan. 2, 1904, since which time he has been engaged in a brokerage fire insurance business. He is a member of the East Providence Business Men's Association. Mr. Child is, and has always been, a staunch Republican in politics, casting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He is a member of the Warren Baptist Church, and has been treasurer of the Benevolent Baptist Association since 1888.

Mr. Child married Sarah Reck Howe, daughter of John R. and Sarah T. Howe, the former of Philadelphia, and the latter of Warren, R. I., a daughter of Jabez Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Child have no children.

PAYNE. The Payne family of Pawtucket, R. I., has been a leading one for a number of years in the city, where members thereof have been prominently identified with the manufacturing, political and social circles.

William Payne was born March 12, 1797, in Warwickshire, England. In his native country he learned the trade of color mixer for calico printing, and equipped with a thorough knowledge of that occupation, came early in life to America, settling in Pawtucket, where he followed his trade until his death at his home on High street, Central Falls, Dec. 21, 1851. He was a rugged, robust man, and stood six feet, one inch, in his stocking feet. Mr. Payne married Hannah Cooper, born in England, Oct. 11, 1797, who died in Pawtucket, March 28, 1873, in her seventy-sixth year. They were the parents of the following children: Charles; John, who was an engraver for calico printers; William, who married Martha Flower; Hannah, who married James Hunt; Mary Ann, who died unmarried; Martha, who died unmarried; and a daughter (twin to Martha), who died in infancy.

CHARLES PAYNE, eldest child of William and Hannah (Cooper) Payne, was born in Nuneaton, Warwickshire, England, Dec. 29, 1819, and when a mere child was brought to America by his parents. After acquiring a meager education he was bound out to Samuel Lord to serve an apprenticeship as engraver for calico printers, and when this term was completed, he was for several years engaged in business on his own account as an engraver. In company with the late Jude Taylor he established, in 1849, the firm of Payne & Taylor, engravers for calico printers. The firm carried on this business for many years, until the coming into use of the pantograph engraving machines, when the engraving was done on the premises of each print works. Payne & Taylor, however, branched out in their own factory on East avenue, in the manufacture of hair cloth in about 1863, and they continued to carry on this industry until 1893, Charles B. and James R. Payne having taken their father's interest in the business. In 1893 the business of Payne & Taylor was consolidated with the Pawtucket Hair Cloth Company, under the name of the American Hair Cloth Company, which is still in existence in Pawtucket, extensively engaged in manufacturing. Before going into the manufacture of hair-cloth, Messrs. Payne & Taylor were engaged in manufacturing cotton yarns, which they largely sold to Littlefield Bros. Mr. Payne was a thoroughly capable business man, of a very industrious nature. His early death removed him from a field of activity in which there was a very promising future for him. He was a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F.; Union Lodge No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; and Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T. He was for a number of years a member of the school committee, and took a great interest in the schools and their advancement. In politics he was a Republican, and he served very efficiently in the town council.

On Sept. 25, 1842, Mr. Payne was married to Keziah Bindley, who was born in England, daughter of John Bindley. The Payne and Bindley families lived in the same neighborhood in England, and as children Mr. and Mrs. Payne were playmates. Mr. Payne passed away in Pawtucket, Oct. 27, 1869, and is survived by his widow, who still resides in Pawtucket. The family home on the northwest corner of Brown and Garden streets, Pawtucket, was erected by Mr. Payne in 1855, at a time when that was a wooded section, and is still occupied by the family. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Payne. (1) George W. (2) Charles Bindley, born March 26, 1845, was in the hair-cloth business with Payne & Taylor, and later with the American Hair Cloth Company, of which he is still a director, but he is now retired from active business. He married (first) Feb. 18, 1869, Charlotte J. Robinson, of Pawtucket, where she died March 26, 1903, leaving a son, George Milton, born May 11, 1870, who married Emily D. Bennett, of Barrington, R. I. Charles B. Payne married (second) Aug. 18, 1905, Celesta Hathaway, of Providence. (3) James Robinson, born in 1847, in Pawtucket, was with the firm of Payne & Taylor and later with the American Hair Cloth Company; he died Nov. 24, 1904, unmarried. (4) Amey Taylor, born in 1849, married Henry A. Smith (deceased), who was one of the leading building contractors of Pawtucket (mentioned in full elsewhere); she resides in Providence. (5) William Elijah, born in 185—, was formerly in business in Pawtucket, where he now lives retired. (6) Byron C. (7) Annie Naomi, born Dec. 9, 1854, married Feb. 7, 1877, Frank Mitchell Hodge, of North Adams, Mass., son of William Dean and Eliza Ann (Drew) Hodge; he died March 6, 1893, in North Adams, Mass. At the time of his death he had a photographic studio in Troy, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Hodge had children, Della Aletha, at home; and twin daughters who died in infancy. (8) Ella Maria, born in 1857, married George B. Olney, of Providence, a member of the firm of Olney & Payne Bros., coal dealers of Pawtucket. (9) J. Milton. (10) Keziah, born in 1863, died in infancy.

GEORGE WITHERIDGE PAYNE, eldest son of the late Charles Payne, was born June 30, 1843, in Pawtucket, and attended the public schools of the city until thirteen years of age. He then entered the employ of Payne & Taylor, in their engraving establishment, where he remained about two years, next becoming employed in the jewelry shop of Benjamin Hood, where he was at work at the outbreak of the Civil war. In the spring of 1861 he began a three years' apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with Andrew R. Slade, continuing at the same until 1865, when, in company with Sanford E. Holmes, under the firm name of Holmes & Payne, he began the manufacture of cotton machinery, located where the Littlefield Manufacturing Company is now situated, then owned by Payne & Taylor. The firm continued for one year, when Mr. Holmes sold out, and the firm became Payne & Mathewson, under which name it was conducted for fourteen years until the death of Mr. Payne's partner, Thomas A. Mathewson. The style then became George W. Payne & Co., George M. Fanning purchasing the interests of Mr. Mathewson.

The shop in 1865 was located on the bank of the Blackstone river, on the West side, between the upper and lower dams, where the Littlefield Manufacturing Company now stands, and was a room 45x90 feet. After two years a larger shop was secured in a building which stood on a portion of the ground now occupied by the electric power station, and here this thriving business was carried on for fourteen years. For two years thereafter rooms in the Payne & Taylor factory on East avenue were occupied, and in February, 1883, the firm removed to its present spacious quarters, No. 106 Broad street. The shops now occupy a floor space of 150x50 feet, and an ell 50x30 feet, about fifty men being employed. Cotton and woolen machinery are manufactured, and their specialties are spoolers, hosiery winders and quilters. In 1903 the business was incorporated as the George W. Payne Company, and since that time Mr. Payne has lived retired. He is a director of the George W. Payne Company, the Coleman Nail Company, and of the Broad Street Power Company, all of Pawtucket, of which latter he is also serving as treasurer. He is a member of Good Samaritan Lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F., which he joined Sept. 24, 1869. In politics he is a Republican, but in town matters is neutral.

On Sept. 14, 1865, Mr. Payne was married to Julia McQuestin, who died March 14, 1876, in Pawtucket, daughter of Joseph McQuestin. To this union there were born children as follows: Lillian K. died at the age of six years; Charles, born Aug. 22, 1868, a mining expert residing in Portland, Ore., married Josephine Tennant, of Providence; Carrie, born in April, 1870, married Harry Bliss, of Pawtucket, who died, leaving these children: Marian, Raymond (who died young) and Joseph; and James Manton, born in 1872, died in infancy. George W. Payne was married (second) Nov. 22, 1877, to Sarah Frank Balkcom, of Central Falls, daughter of John Balkcom, and to this union there were born: Jude Taylor, born Oct. 21, 1878, is associated with the Coleman Nail Company, is married, and has one son, Leroy Payne; Clinton Fanning, born Sept. 7, 1882; and Miss Alice, born Nov. 8, 1888.

CLINTON FANNING PAYNE, son of George W., was born in Pawtucket and received his education in the common schools and the private school of Prof. Charles Cole of Pawtucket. Leaving school at the age of eighteen years, Mr. Payne learned the machinist's trade under his father in the plant of George W. Payne & Company, continuing with this firm until 1903, when, on its establishment as the George W. Payne Company, he was elected secretary. In January, 1906, Mr. Payne was also elected treasurer and general manager of this thriving industry, which gives employment to nearly fifty skilled mechanics. Much credit is due to Mr. Payne in his management of this business. He married Nov. 17, 1906, Evangeline Newman Roe, daughter of Charles W. Roe, of Pawtucket.

BYRON COOPER PAYNE, son of Charles and Keziah (Bindley) Payne, was born April 20, 1853, in Pawtucket, and in the public schools of his native city received his educational training. Leaving school at the age of fifteen years he became apprenticed to Bliss & Carpenter, of Pawtucket, to learn the carpenter's trade, and after serving his term of three years continued in their employ as a journeyman carpenter for two years. Mr. Payne then engaged in business on his own account, starting a meat market at the corner of Brown and Garden streets, where he continued for about two years. At the end of that time he took into partnership his brother, William E. Payne, the firm name becoming Payne Bros. This firm continued in business for about eight years, during which time the brothers met with marked success. Byron C. then sold his interests to his brother, and March 1, 1884, with his brother-in-law, George B. Olney, and his brother J. Milton Payne, engaged in the coal business under the firm name of Olney & Payne Bros., which has since grown to large proportions. The firm are now the largest dealers of coal in the city of Pawtucket, their business requiring fifty teams and over 100 horses. They handle from 125,000 to 150,000 tons of coal annually. In 1903 this company was incorporated, Byron C. being elected treasurer of the corporation.

During the days of the volunteer fire department, Mr. Payne was an active member of the Fairmount Company, No. 3, and is now connected with the Veteran Firemen's Association. He is a director in the Coleman Nail Company, of Pawtucket, a director of the Carbon Coal & Coke Company, of Huntingdon, Pa.; and a director of the Broad Top City Supply Company, of the same city. He is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but has never cared for public office. Mr. Payne attends St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Pawtucket, to which he gives his liberal support.

On June 21, 1880, Mr. Payne was united in marriage with Miss Carrie F. Foss, daughter of Francis Foss, who was engaged in the grocery business in Pawtucket for a number of years.

JOHN MILTON PAYNE, born Sept. 22, 1859, in Pawtucket, son of Charles and Keziah (Bindley) Payne, acquired his early education in the Church Hill grammar school of Pawtucket, and at Mowry & Goff's English and Classical school, classical department, Providence, class of 1878, and later attended Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1882, with the degree of A. B. After graduation he became a clerk in the office of the American Hair Cloth Company, of Pawtucket, where he remained until 1884. On March 1st of that year, in company with his brother, Byron C., and brother-in-law George B. Olney, he organized the firm of Olney & Payne Bros., which has become one of the largest firms dealing in coal, brick, lime, cement and mason's supplies in Pawtucket. This firm has large coal pockets and docks on the wharf of the Conant Thread Co., on the west side of the Blackstone river. In 1903 the company was incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000, and since that time Mr. Payne has served as a director of the corporation. He is a staunch Republican, and as such was elected to the Rhode Island State Senate in 1905, from Pawtucket, and is a member of the Finance committee and the committee on Printing. He is connected in an official way with many of the manufacturing and financial institutions of Pawtucket and vicinity. He was for several years director of the Pacific National Bank of Pawtucket and upon its being merged with the Industrial Trust Company, of Providence, he became a director of the latter institution. He is a member of the board of managers of the company's Pawtucket branch, and is vice-chairman of the board. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings, and a director of the Pawtucket Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He is a director of the Narragansett Machine Company, the American Yarn Manufacturing Company, the Broad Street Power Company, director and treasurer of the William H. Haskell Company, and director, secretary and treasurer of the American Hair Cloth Company, all of Pawtucket. In business and financial circles, Mr. Payne not only wields a strong influence in his city, but is regarded as highly capable and straightforward.

Senator Payne is a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association, of which he served as vice-president for several years, and was elected president of the association, but declined to serve. He is also a member of the To Kalon Club of Pawtucket. He is a trustee of the Pawtucket Free Library. Mr. Payne attends St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Pawtucket. For years he has been active in secret societies. He joined Good Samaritan Lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F., in October, 1883, and was grand master of Rhode Island in 1893, and is now past grand of the State Lodge. He is a member of Union Lodge No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Pawtucket Royal Arch Chapter, No. 4; Pawtucket Council No. 2, Royal and Select Masters; Holy Sepulchre Commandery No. 8, Knights Templar, of Pawtucket; Providence Consistory, thirty-second degree, and Palestine Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Providence. While at college Mr. Payne took an active part in athletic sports and was a member of the 'varsity base-ball club in 1882. He also holds membership in fraternal societies of Brown University.

On June 24, 1883, Senator Payne was united in marriage to Miss Eva L. Spink, daughter of Rev. George R. Spink, of Providence, and to this union there has been born one son, Howard H., born in 1886, who is attending Brown University as a student in the class of 1909. Mr. Payne finds great pleasure in travel, and has made frequent trips abroad, visiting many foreign points and places of interest. He is possessed of a large circle of warm friends, attracted to him by his many sterling qualities of character.

EDWIN W. HOPKINS, a retired manufacturer of Providence, residing at No. 529 Broadway, is a descendant of one of the prominent and early settled families of Kent county, and one that has by its enterprise and integrity contributed in no small degree to the welfare and prosperity of that section of the State.

(I) Joseph Hopkins, the ancestor of this branch of the family, is believed to have been the son of William and Hannah (Goffe) Hopkins, residents of Roxbury, Mass., and members of Rev. John Eliot's Church at that place. William Hopkins married for his second wife Martha, daughter of the noted Theophilus Whalley, of Narragansett, and after a few years residence at Kingstown, R. I., removed about the year 1713 to the locality now known as Hopkins Hill, in the easterly part of the town of West Greenwich. There he resided until his death, which occurred May 15, 1735.

(II) Samuel Hopkins, second son of Joseph, was born in Kingstown, Jan. 6, 1703-04, and died in West Greenwich April 14, 1790. He resided at the homestead on Hopkins Hill and was familiarly known as "Judge Sam." Aside from his farming interests he was actively engaged in public matters, being at various times, from 1743 to 1767, elected a member of the General Assembly from West Greenwich, and was for a number of years a justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Kent county. Samuel Hopkins married April 23, 1729-30, Honor Brown, daughter of Alexander and Honor Brown of North Kingstown, and granddaughter of Beriah and Abigail (Phenix) Brown and Alexander and Elizabeth (Wightman) Huling, families of wealth and influence. Beriah Brown was a prominent man in the Society of Friends, and the Wightmans, according to tradition, were the descendants of Edward Wightman, who was the last to suffer death by martyrdom in England; in 1611.

(III) Samuel Hopkins, son of Judge Samuel, was born Oct. 15, 1734. He represented the town of West Greenwich as deputy to the General Assembly, and was appointed to fill various other town offices.

(IV) Rufus Hopkins, son of Samuel Jr., was born in 1773. He was one of the pioneer manufacturers of cotton goods in this section of the State, operating for many years a mill in the town of Exeter. He lived to an old age, and died in the town of Coventry, where he had resided for a number of years. He married Amey Shippee, and they had nine children, who were somewhat remarkable for their vigorous constitutions and long life, the youngest having nearly reached the age of sixty years before the eldest died. They were: Phebe, Layton, Halsey, David, Elizabeth, Mercy, Samuel, Cynthia and Polly.

(V) David Hopkins, son of Rufus, was born in Exeter, Feb. 10, 1797, and his early life was spent on his father's farm. At the age of fifteen years he entered a cotton factory which his father had just purchased in the northeastern part of the town of Exeter, but in 1818 removed to Nooseneck Hill, in West Greenwich, and commenced business on his own account as a manufacturer of cotton yarn, remaining here as long as he prosecuted cotton manufacturing. He was almost in every respect a self-educated and self-made man. His application to business and his economy and integrity gave him a good reputation. Until 1840 he shunned political life, but was called out during the Harrison presidential campaign. His support was first given to the Whigs, but later to the Republicans. West Greenwich had been for a long period a very Gibraltar of Democracy, but Mr. Hopkins and a few friends began a spirited battle, and after a few years completely routed the Democratic forces. He repeatedly filled town offices and represented the town in the State senate, and whatever his capacity he was always the same diligent, careful, honest, faithful man that he was in his home or his factory. In his business he steadily prospered, and he became successful in the accumulation of property, and in gaining the confidence of his fellow men. Rhode Island had no better type of self-reliant, laborious, steadfast, consistent citizen. He made no boasts or professions which he did not fill. Having acquired a competence, during his last years he withdrew from active life, and removed to Cranston to enjoy the rest that he had earned and the quiet he needed. He died on New Fenner street in that town, March 17, 1881, and was buried in the family cemetery in Nooseneck Valley, in which vicinity most of his life had been spent. In accordance with his wishes, expressed in his later years, he was buried in Nooseneck cemetery, but his remains were afterward interred in the cemetery at Coventry. He had planned the details of his own funeral, and everything was done as he desired.

On Aug. 11, 1818, Mr. Hopkins married Sarah, daughter of Joshua and Laurana (Allen) Franklin, and she survived her husband some years, dying in Cranston, and being buried beside him. Their children were: Julia A., who married Robert K. Sunderland, and died in West Greenwich; Caroline W., widow of William S. Harris, residing in California; Lyman Rhodes, born April 2, 1824 (sketch of whom appears elsewhere); Marcy M., who married Charles Tripp, and died in Providence; Edwin W.; and Mary M., wife of Hon. Ezra K. Parker, of Providence.

(VI) Edwin W. Hopkins, son of David, was born in West Greenwich, May 7, 1831. He received his education in the public schools of the town, and this was supplemented by a course of study at the East Greenwich Academy and the Worcester Academy. At the age of twenty-one years he formed a partnership with his father, who was engaged in the manufacture of cotton warps at the village of Nooseneck, R. I., in which business he continued until 1865, when the manufacturing property was sold to Jonathan L. Spencer & Co. In 1866, with his father, Mr. Hopkins commenced the manufacture of cotton warps and twine in a new mill at Nooseneck village, later making sash cord the chief product of the mill. He continued to operate until 1898, when he retired from active business and leased the building to other parties.

In political faith Mr. Hopkins is a Republican, and in 1860 was elected Senator from the town of West Greenwich, being re-elected each succeeding year until 1866, when he removed to Providence and was succeeded in office by his father, David Hopkins. On Feb. 23, 1852, Mr. Hopkins was married to Celia Edith Woodmansee, daughter of Samuel, Jr., and Alice Mahala (Franklin) Woodmansee. Mrs. Hopkins was born June 9, 1834, in Groton, Conn., and was about one year old when brought to West Greenwich by her parents. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins: (1) Byron Sumner, born Dec. 5, 1852, married Kate Chadwick, a native of Wisconsin, and they have two children: Celia Elizabeth, born Jan. 1, 1883, who graduated from the Manual Training School at Providence and Dr. Sargent's School of Physical Culture at Boston, and is now a teacher of physical culture; and Edward Byron, born March 8, 1887. (2) Julia Annabel, born July 5, 1857, married Fred A. Sutton, and resides in Brooklyn, N. Y.; they had one child, Edith, born in August, 1881, who died in September, 1882.

Edwin W. Hopkins is a charter member of the Pomham Club, and for many years was a member of the West Side Club. He was made a Master Mason in Manchester Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at Anthony, and is a member of Calvary Commandery, Knights Templar. He is also a member of the Providence Board of Trade. For several years, until it was amalgamated with the American Thread Company, he was a director of the Merrick Thread Company. He has a wide acquaintance throughout the State, and he enjoys the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends.

PARSONS (Providence Family). For the last fifty years there have resided and figured prominently in the professional, social and business life of Providence several generations of one branch of the New England Parsons family—some of the posterity of the late Hon. Anson Virgil Parsons, jurist of Philadelphia, who, however, was a Pennsylvanian only by adoption, being a native of the Bay State; whose son, the late Hon. James Hepburn Parsons, a graduate of Brown University, became a lawyer of prominence in his adopted city of Providence, where he was either appointed or elected to several public trusts of honor and responsibility; and where now for years the latter's son, George Richmond Parsons, has figured prominently in the industrial life of the city and vicinity, being connected with the Crompton Company and the Richmond Manufacturing Co., the former concern manufacturing print cloths, corduroys and cotton velvets, and the latter manufacturing cotton goods for print cloths.

The Parsons family of England have resided for a long period in the several counties of Devon, Buckingham, Nottingham, Oxford, etc. The first of the name in New England was Joseph Parsons, of Springfield, 1636, where he appears as a witness to the deed from the Indians of the lands of that place and vicinity to William Pynchon and others on the 15th of July. There appear, however, soon after, at the same place, Hugh and Benjamin Parsons. The family tradition relates that Joseph and Benjamin were brothers, that they were born in Great Torrington near Exeter, Devonshire, England, and, with other children, accompanied their father to New England, about the year 1630. It is probable that they came over with Mr. Pynchon. Joseph Parsons probably remained at Springfield until 1655, in which year he removed to Northampton. On the incorporation of the town he was elected townsman or selectman. He was a principal founder of Northampton, was extensively engaged in the fur trade, and acquired a large estate. He married Nov. 26, 1646, Mary, daughter of Thomas Bliss, of Hartford. They resided in Northampton till 1679, in which year they returned to Springfield, where they both died.

From this Joseph Parsons the lineage of George Richmond Parsons of the Crompton Company is through Samuel Parsons, born in 1652, who settled in 1706 at Durham, Conn.; Ithamar Parsons, born in 1707, who died in 1786; David Parsons, who about 1760 removed to Granville, Mass., and Joel Parsons, the father of Hon. Judge Anson V. Parsons, alluded to in the foregoing.

Brief sketches of the lives of Hon. Judge Parsons, Hon. James H. Parsons and the present George R. Parsons, grandfather, father and son, follow.

ANSON VIRGIL PARSONS, son of Joel, was born in 1799, in Granville, Mass. He studied law in Litchfield, Conn., under James Gould, was admitted to the Bar in 1826, and settled in Harrisburg, Pa., where he practiced until his appointment in 1840 as president judge of the court of Common Pleas of the Dauphin judicial district. In 1842 he became secretary of the Commonwealth. He returned to the Bench as judge of the court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia in 1843. During this service the firemen's riots occurred, and as Judge Parsons, by his rigorous dealing with the cases before him, incurred the enmity of the lawless element, his life was frequently threatened. He resumed practice in 1851, when the judiciary became elective. Judge Parsons, with Judge Edward King, published "Select Cases in Equity" (2 vols., Philadelphia, 1851-53).

Judge Parsons married Mary Hepburn, and there were born to them eleven children, of whom the following lived to years of maturity: James H.; Henry Cooley; Emma Hepburn, wife of Howard Richmond, of Providence; and F. W. Judge Parsons died Sept. 23, 1882, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

JAMES HEPBURN PARSONS, son of Judge Anson V. and Mary (Hepburn) Parsons, was born May 30, 1832, in Jersey Shore, Pa., and died June 16, 1876, in Providence, R. I. He pursued his studies preparatory for college at the Philadelphia high school, under the tuition of Prof. John S. Hart, at that time the principal of the school. He then entered Brown University, from which he was graduated with the class of 1854. After graduating he studied law in Philadelphia under the direction of his father, and was admitted to the Bar. Returning to Providence, R. I., where he had decided to settle, he spent six months in the office of the late Hon. Thomas A. Jenckes, and then commenced practice in Rhode Island. He resided in Providence to the end of his life.

Mr. Parsons possessed unusual aptitude for the profession upon which he had entered, and devoted himself more especially to equity practice. He was employed in causes of great importance and was distinguished for the thoroughness with which his briefs were prepared. Early in his career he served for a time as a member of the City Magistrates, was a member of the General Assembly from May, 1862, to May, 1863, and was appointed by President Johnson, in 1866, District Attorney of the United States, an office which he filled with credit for the few months in which he held it. Fraternally he was a member of St. John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of the Commandery, Knights Templar.

On Oct. 25, 1859, Mr. Parsons was married to Ellen Richmond, born May 14, 1832, at Providence, R. I., daughter of the late George M. and Anna (Eddy) Richmond, he a prominent business man, engaged in manufacturing at Providence, and she a daughter of Hon. Samuel Eddy, jurist and statesman, at one time Chief Justice of the Supreme court of Rhode Island and for years a member of the United States Congress.

To Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were born two children, namely: George Richmond, born April 10, 1861; and Mary Hepburn, born April 18, 1862.

Mrs. Ellen (Richmond) Parsons is a direct descendant of a number of the early and prominent families of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. On her father's side she is in the eighth generation from John Richmond, who left England about 1635 for New England, coming from Ashton Keynes, Wiltshire. He was one of the purchasers of Taunton, Mass., in 1637, from whom her lineage is through Capt. Edward and his wife Abigail (Davis) Richmond, of that part of Dartmouth, Mass., now Little Compton, R. I.; Col. Sylvester and his wife Elizabeth (Rogers) Richmond, of what is now Little Compton, R. I., she the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Pabodie) Rogers, granddaughter of John Rogers, of Duxbury, Mass., and great-granddaughter of Thomas Rogers, of the "Mayflower"; Col. Sylvester Richmond (2) and his wife Elizabeth (Talbot), of Little Compton and Dighton, Mass., he for many years high sheriff of Bristol county, Mass., a representative in the State Assembly, etc.; Lieut.-Col. Sylvester Richmond and his wife Abigail (Nightingale), of Dighton, Mass., he a patriot soldier and officer of the Revolution, moderator of town meetings, selectman, etc.; Samuel Richmond and his wife Amey (Martin) Richmond, of Providence, R. I.; and George M. Richmond and his wife Anna (Eddy) Richmond of Providence.

G. RICHMOND PARSONS, of the Crompton Company, was born in Providence, R. I., April 10, 1861. He was educated in the Providence schools, and at Phillips-Exeter Academy, graduating in 1882. He entered Harvard with the class of 1886, but left in the Junior year on account of illness in the family. He began his business life with the Richmond Manufacturing Company, of which he is now president, and later became associated with the Crompton Company, to the success of which he has devoted his entire attention ever since.

Mr. Parsons married Oct. 23, 1889, Laura Turner Brayton, daughter of Lodowick Brayton, the first president of the Union Railway Company, of Providence, and to them came one daughter, Laura Turner Parsons.

Though a business man Mr. Parsons has given much of his time to public affairs. He is a Republican, and has faithfully served the city as a member of the council since 1898, during which time he has served on a number of the important committees, among others the committees on Finance and City Property. He has ever manifested independence and public spirit, especially in regard to the East Side Approach. In this matter from the first he contended practically alone and in the face of strong opposition, that the solution of the problem was a tunnel to be used by electric cars only and to be built without expense to the city; that for the city to construct a viaduct or easy grade street to be used by all classes of traffic was an unnecessary and unwarranted extravagance. He has furthermore contended that if the city loans its credit to build such a tunnel it must have the title. Public opinion has since endorsed the views fought for by Mr. Parsons. He is a member of the Agawam Hunt Club.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BOWERS BOURN, for more than half a century one of the best known men in the business life of Providence, was a descendant in the seventh generation of one of the earliest settlers in New England, his line of descent from Jared Bourn, the pioneer progenitor of the family, being as follows:

(I) Jared Bourn, it is thought probably, came from England in the fleet with Gov. Winthrop, in 1630. He was admitted to the church in Boston April 22, 1634, and made a freeman May 6, 1635. He had some grants of land made to him, and also bought land there. He was later at Roxbury, and still later removed to Portsmouth, R. I., where he was a representative (1654-55) in the Colonial Legislature. His wife, whose Christian name was Mary, died the 30th of 3d month, 1644, and he had a second wife, Frances. He finally removed to Swansea, Mass., where he is credited with having built a block house at Mattapoiset, now Gardiner's Neck, which was the refuge of the inhabitants at the beginning of King Philip's war, and they were rescued from there by troops principally from Bridgewater. Tradition says this was a stone block house, and the only one in that section, and it was said to have been located on what was known a number of years ago as the Sandy Sherman place.

(II) Jared Bourn (2), baptized March 7, 1651, married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis and Mary Brayton, of Portsmouth, R. I., and to them came the following children: Mary Chase, Elizabeth, Francis, Patience, Martha and William.

(III) Francis Bourn married Feb. 23, 1715-16, Charity, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Thurber) Wheaton, of Rehoboth, Mass. Mr. Bourn died in 1758. The children of this couple, all born in Swansea, Mass., were: Jared, born April 3, 1718; Sarah, June 26, 1721; Stephen, Oct. 25, 1724; Rachel, Nov. 20, 1725; Francis, in 1730; Nathaniel; and Content.

(IV) Francis Bourn (2), born in 1730, in Swansea, Mass., married Nov. 2, 1755, in Salem, Mass., Elizabeth Sterns, of Salem, born May 20, 1726, daughter of John and Rebecca (Gillingham) Sterns, of Salem, Mass. They died, Mr. Bourn in 1792, in Swansea, Mass., and Mrs. Bourn, Jan. 29, 1803. Their children were: Eunice, born in 1757; Joshua; Hannah, born Dec. 24, 1761, in Swansea, Mass.; Deborah, born Feb. 26, 1763, in Swansea, Mass.; Francis, born in 1766, in Swansea, Mass.; and Sarah.

(V) Francis Bourn (3) born in 1766, in Swansea, Mass., married Mary Bowers, daughter of Philip and Mary Bowers, of Somerset, Mass., and they were residents of Somerset, where Mr. Bourn died Sept. 15, 1815, and Mrs. Bourn June 29, 1830. Their children, all born in Somerset, were: Francis, born Dec. 8, 1802; Mary Ann, Sept. 21, 1804; Eliza Jane, Nov. 17, 1807; Philip Bowers, Feb. 17, 1809; Benjamin Mason, March 5, 1811; William Bowers, June 21, 1813; and Hannah Bowers, July 18, 1821.

(VI) Francis Bourn (4), born Dec. 8, 1802, in Somerset, Mass., married Nancy Bartlett, of Cumberland, R. I. She died Nov. 11, 1828, and he married (second) in December, 1832, Almira, daughter of Ephraim and Ruth Gifford, of Bristol, R. I. The second Mrs. Bourn died Feb. 10, 1834. His children were: George Washington Bowers, born May 21, 1825; Mary Ann, May 10, 1827 (both to the first marriage); and Almira, born Sept. 21, 1833, and died March 10, 1837. The father of these married (third) March 8, 1836, Peace, daughter of Dr. John and Hope Turner, of Fall River, Mass., and they resided in Bristol, Rhode Island.

(VII) George Washington Bowers Bourn, born May 21, 1825, married March 24, 1858, Caroline Maria Barrows, daughter of Milton and Mary A. (Guild) Barrows, of Attleboro, Massachusetts.

Mr. Bourn, though born in Providence, R. I., passed much of his early life in Bristol, this State. For many years he was associated in business with his uncle, the late Benjamin Mason Bourn, who was engaged in the provision business in Providence, at the corner of Ship and Richmond streets, where George W. B. Bourn amassed quite a fortune. For a number of years before his death he was not actively engaged in business, having retired in 1875. He was a man of kindly disposition, genial and ever ready to assist in every good work. He was a lover of out-door life, and was an enthusiastic fisherman, and to gratify this taste, passed seventeen summers in Maine, and twenty at Falmouth, Mass. He was a communicant of All Saints Memorial Church in Providence, to which Mrs. Bourn also belongs, and he was a member of the Churchman's Club of Rhode Island.

Mr. Bourn died at Providence, R. I., Oct. 8, 1899, and was buried at Swan Point.

SIMEON DAVIS (deceased), for many years one of Newport's highly honored citizens and successful business men, was born in Newport, April 28, 1830, son of Nathaniel Davis, a native of New York State.

Nathaniel Davis, father of Simeon, was a sea captain, and for many years was master of vessels running between Providence and Newport. He was a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church, and was rather religiously inclined. He married Hannah Howard, who died in February, 1878, aged eighty-two years. His death occurred Feb. 29, 1872, when he was seventy-eight years of age. To Nathaniel and Hannah Davis were born: George, who died in Newport, where he was superintendent of the carriages at the "Ocean House" for over thirty years; Rebecca, who married (first) Charles Tilley, and (second) Benajah Barker, of Lebanon, Conn.; Charles, who died in Providence; William, H., who operated a livery business in Newport, and died there; Nathaniel, Jr., who died in Newport; Mary, who married (first) Robert Pingley, and (second) Judson Gager, of Lebanon, Conn.; Simeon; and James, who was a baker by occupation, and died in Newport.

Simeon Davis was born in Newport, R. I., April 28, 1830, and received his educational training in his native city. After leaving the public schools he received a friendly tuition under the late Gen. John Newton, who was at that time making a marine map of Narragansett Bay, and who in after years opened up Hell Gate in New York harbor. Mr. Davis then went to learn the baker's trade with Nathaniel Greene, and later went into business with Isaac Boss, with whom he was associated for about three years, at the end of which time he became foreman for the late Robert M. Franklin, in the bakery business. He finally opened a place of his own on Broadway, later removing to Thames street, and at the latter location continued in business for over forty years. He retired from active business in 1899, a very successful, self-made man. Mr. Davis was a member of the Knights of Pythias, holding membership in Redwood Lodge, No. 11, and in Davis Company, Uniform Rank, No. 8, K. of P. (this rank being named for him), and he was very active in these bodies, being past chancellor commander of the former, and was the first captain of the latter; and he was also a member of the State and Grand Lodges. He attended the Central Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Davis was a member, and to which they were liberal in their support. In politics Mr. Davis was a staunch Republican, but was never an office seeker.

Simeon Davis was married, Oct. 30, 1851, to Mary Jane Easton, daughter of John and Frances Ann (Franklin) Easton, and she died Dec. 28,

Simeon Davis

1896, in Newport, aged sixty-four years, the mother of the following named children: (1) Augustus Boss, born Aug. 26, 1852, in Newport, was with his father in the bakery business until his death, which occurred Jan. 20, 1899; he left a widow, formerly Fannie S. Shaw, of Newport. They had children: Minnie Frances (who died aged six years), Fannie T. (who married Howland Burdick, of Kingstown, R. I., and has two children, Evelyn Augusta and Helen Shaw Burdick), Maude (who died in infancy), Simeon (who died aged six months), and Augustus Boss, Jr. (who is now living in Kingstown, R. I.). Like his father, Augustus B. Davis was also active in various societies, and was captain of Davis Company, No. 8, Uniform Rank, K. of P., which was named for his father, and was serving in that capacity at the time of his death. He was one of the most prominent Knights of Pythias in the State, and also held membership in Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum. (2) Florence Mathewson, born Dec. 10, 1855, married Feb. 28, 1878, George W. Barlow, son of Frederick N. Barlow, of Newport, and their children, Simeon Davis and Augustus LeRoy, twins, both died when six months of age. (3) Fannie Tillinghast, born Sept. 27, 1859, died June 16, 1873. (4) Miss Jennie, born Sept. 26, 1861, is at home.

Mrs. Frances A. (Franklin) Easton, mother of Mrs. Simeon Davis, was an original member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, holding membership in William Ellery Chapter, of Newport, of which her granddaughters are also active members.

Simeon Davis possessed a genial, social manner, and as a result had a host of staunch friends. In his death, which occurred April 11, 1901, the city of Newport lost one of its substantial and highly honored citizens, and his family a devoted husband and an affectionate father.

HUMPHREY (Tiverton family). For an hundred and more years there has resided in the town of Tiverton a branch of the old Weymouth-Rehoboth or Swansea Humphrey family, a family long conspicuous in what is now the town of Barrington, this Commonwealth. Here the name appears frequently of record in high public office and useful citizenship. The name in Barrington, and as well in Rehoboth and Swansea, was frequent on the list of patriots during the Revolution. Maj. William Humphrey, of Rehoboth, afterward a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, was a prominent character in the war; Major Josiah Humphrey took an active and prominent part in the legislature of that period; while the latter's son and a number of others served in the war. Here in the town of Tiverton the name has been one of substantial, useful and influential citizenship, since the coming hither from the Rehoboth-Swansea region, after the Revolution, of one William Humphrey, some of whose direct descendants are at this time worthily wearing the family name, among them Peleg Duffee Humphrey, former member and president of the Tiverton town council; David D. Humphrey, son of the late Joseph D. Humphrey; and at Providence, George Humphrey, a veteran and officer of the Civil war who saw long and active service and who wears the scars of the enemy's shot upon his person, and who is now a retired successful merchant of Providence.

As to the antecedents of Major William Humphrey there is some doubt. There is a family tradition, coming through his granddaughter, Mrs. Lucy Monroe, of Seekonk, Mass., who wrote about the year 1886 to the effect that all she knew was that her grandfather, William Humphrey, was an orphan, that he fell to the care of her great-grandfather Monroe; that the latter bound the boy out to a man in Swansea, Mass., and after a time, as it seemed he had not received proper treatment at the hands of the one to whom he had been entrusted, he was taken into the family of Mr. Monroe and reared as one of his own children. From these circumstances and others in evidence that he belonged to the Humphrey stock indicated in the foregoing, one being a deed in the possession of one of the Tiverton Humphreys which conveys land to William from Josiah Humphrey—one half of the latter's farm in Rehoboth, Mass.—it is assumed that he was a son of John and Mary (Penny) Humphrey, of Weymouth, Mass., and a direct descendant of Jonas Humphrey, of Dorchester, from whom his lineage is through Jonas (2), Jonas (3), Jonas (4), and John Humphrey. These generations in the order given and in detail follow:

(I) Jonas Humphrey, a native of Wendover, County of Bucks, England, a glove maker by trade, came to New England with his family in 1637, and settled in Dorchester, where he seems to have been a man of standing and respectability, and united with the church there in 1639. The Christian name of his first wife was Frances. He married later Jane Clapp, widow of George Weeks. Mr. Humphrey died March 19, 1662, in Dorchester. His children, all born to Frances, were: James and Jonas, both born in England; Elizabeth; Susanna, and Sarah.

(II) Jonas Humphrey (2), born about 1620, in Wendover, England, removed with his father in 1637 to Dorchester, New England, and for a time resided there but later settled in Weymouth, Mass., perhaps not permanently, about 1653. He resided in the northern part of the town, and the old homestead was kept in the family name for upwards of two centuries. Mr. Humphrey was a man of capacity and influence, one of the leaders of the town. He was for many years a selectman, and a part of the time chairman of the board. He was a deacon in the church. The Christian name of his wife was Martha. Mr. Humphrey died Feb. 11, 1698-99, aged seventy-nine years. His children were: Samuel, Nathaniel, Jonas, John, Sarah and James.

(III) Jonas Humphrey (3), son of Jonas (2), born Feb. 24, 1655, in Weymouth, Mass., married Mary, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Phillips, of Weymouth, and they resided in that town. He served in the Indian campaign in 1675, against King Philip, being a member of Capt. Johnson's company. He was industrious and provident, and left quite a good estate. He died Oct. 30, 1689. His children were: Jonas, James and Mary.

(IV) Jonas Humphrey (4), son of Jonas (3), was born Sept. 3, 1684, in Weymouth, Mass. His first wife, Martha, died in 1712. He married (second) in 1716, Mary Neal, of Braintree, Mass. Mr. Humphrey lived and died in Weymouth, the latter event occurring in 1761; his widow passed away about five years later. One son, John, was born to the first wife, and the following named children to the second: Mary, Martha, Samuel, Hannah, Samuel (2) and James.

(V) John Humphrey, son of Jonas (4), born Feb. 17, 1710, in Weymouth, Mass., married (published Oct. 15, 1738) Mary Penny. They lived in Weymouth, not in affluent circumstances, and there he died. But little is known of him. His children were: Hannah, Betty, John, William (born March 22, 1747), James, Eunice, Jonas (served in Arnold's expedition to Quebec; afterward re-enlisted and was killed in the battle of White Plains, N. Y., in the Revolution), Mary and Hannah, Martha and Silence.

(VI) William Humphrey, son of John, born March 22, 1747, in Weymouth, Mass., was reared, says tradition, in the family of one Monroe of Seekonk, Mass. He married in that town Dec. 4, 1783, Lydia, daughter of Nathan and Hannah (Allen) Monroe. He removed to Tiverton, R. I., about 1787, and bought the north end of Nanaquakett. At least a portion of this land is still owned and occupied by some of the descendants of Mr. Humphrey. He made Tiverton his home for the remainder of his life. He was a soldier in the Revolution, a member of the First Regiment, becoming captain and later major. He went with Arnold on the Quebec expedition, holding a captaincy, and was a prisoner of war for five months, during which time he kept a journal. It is a family tradition that he was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati. He was for several years a senator, and was a deacon in the Baptist Church. His death occurred in July, 1832. His widow died Sept. 26, 1843. Their children of Tiverton town record were: William, born Nov. 26, 1784; Nathan, Feb. 16, 1787; Squire, Sept. 20, 1788; Harriet, Oct. 10, 1790; Sarah, Dec. 25, 1792; Lydia, Oct. 10, 1794; Cyrus, Nov. 21, 1796; Hannah, Dec. 11, 1798; Thomas Jefferson, July 7, 1801; and George Washington, April 15, 1804.

(VII) George Washington Humphrey, son of Major William, born April 15, 1804, in Tiverton, R. I., married Jan. 2, 1831, Mary, daughter of Joseph and Ruth Durfee, who died Feb. 8, 1844, and he married (second) Nov. 10, 1844, Caroline M., daughter of Wanton and Elizabeth Manchester. Mr. Humphrey lived in Tiverton, R. I., was a successful farmer, held various town offices and represented his district several terms in the State Legislature. He was a man of good judgment, never wavering in the time of duty, and his advice was always respected. He died at Tiverton, Rhode Island, July 21, 1882. Caroline (Manchester) Humphrey died Nov. 2, 1878. Mr. Humphrey's children were: Ruth, born Oct. 9, 1831, who married Amos Cragon; William H., born Oct. 10, 1832; Caroline, born May 22, 1835, who died June 1, 1864; Joseph D., born Sept. 26, 1837, who married Elizabeth Holt, and died in 1905; George, born Dec. 29, 1839; Horatio N., born Nov. 6, 1841, and died Jan. 29, 1863; Peleg Durfee, born Dec. 30, 1843 (all to the first marriage); Mary, born March 7, 1846, and died in March, 1878, wife of Capt. Nathaniel B. Church; and William, born Sept. 5, 1851, and died Aug. 22, 1896.

(VIII) PELEG DURFEE HUMPHREY, son of George Washington, was born on the Humphrey homestead Dec. 30, 1843, and attended the Brown district schools of his native town and Lapham Institute, North Scituate, R. I. He grew to manhood on the home farm, and made farming his occupation for a number of years on what was once a part of the Major William Humphrey homestead. In 1891 he began the coal and lumber business in Tiverton, forming a partnership with his brother-in-law, Hon. Nathaniel B. Church, buying out the business owned by S. Gilman Bowen. The business for three years was conducted under the firm name of Humphrey & Church. Capt. Church sold out his interest in 1894 to his brother, Hon. George L. Church, and the business was conducted under the same name until 1897, when Mr. Humphrey bought out the interest of Capt. George L. Church, and since that time has conducted the business alone with marked success, becoming one of the largest coal and lumber dealers between Newport and Fall River. He also handles all kinds of building material, and conducts a hardware store. He is a thorough business man, and gives his affairs his careful attention, being thoroughly familiar with all the details. He is now assisted by his two sons, both young men of good ability and steady habits.

Mr. Humphrey's father built a comfortable home on the old homestead farm at Nanaquakett where Mr. Peleg Durfee Humphrey was born and where he now lives, and in this place he takes much pride and comfort. He is a man of progressive ideas and while the demands of his business are great, he nevertheless finds time to be conversant with public affairs. He is a Democrat of the old school, and for several years has been a member of the Tiverton town council, and for three years was president of the body; for several years a member of the school committee; and for a short time a member of the police commission by appointment of Governor Garvin, to succeed Capt. N. B. Church, the appointment later being confirmed by the Senate. He and his family attend the Congregational Church at Tiverton Four Corners. He has been active in church work for many years, has served as deacon for a number of years, teacher in the Sunday school for over a quarter of a century, superintendent of the Sunday school for over fifteen years, and also as president of the church corporation.

In 1868 Mr. Humphrey married Elizabeth G. Estes, daughter of the late Capt. Clark Estes, and they had two children: Josie, who married Rev. Joseph Williams, a minister of the Methodist Church at Swansea, Mass.; and George, at home. Mrs. Humphrey died Dec. 16, 1872, at the age of twenty-four years, nine months and twenty-five days. Mr. Humphrey married (second), in 1875, at Johnston, R. I., Ida A. Winsor, daughter of the late Ira Winsor. To this marriage came children as follows: Ira Winsor, who married Myrtha M. Gear, and is in business with his father; Irving Durfee, who married Eunice Hazel Lawton Hambly, and is also with his father; and Anna F., at home.

GEORGE GARDNER HALL, one of the best known hotel men of New England, and for over a quarter of a century proprietor of the "Adams House," Boston, is a native of Rhode Island, born at Bristol Nov. 16, 1843. He is a descendant of one of the oldest families of the State, and of whom additional mention will be found elsewhere.

Gardner Hall, his father, was born at the old Hall homestead, Oct. 10, 1815, and he was the son of Judge David and Hannah (Dennis) Hall. He attended school in his home section, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed during a long and useful life. After his marriage Mr. Hall farmed for a short time in Bristol on rented land, and then removed to Fall River, which was then a part of Tiverton, R. I., continuing there for seven years, on the Benjamin Barker farm. He then removed to Little Compton, later carrying on operations in Bristol county, where he continued until he removed to Acushnet, at which place he bought a home and lived for a time. Subsequently he removed to New Bedford, Mass., where he lived retired until his death, which occurred Dec. 29, 1886, when he was aged seventy-one years, two months. He was buried in the Friends cemetery, where had been interred many of his relatives. In politics Mr. Hall was a Republican; but he never sought office. Honest and upright in his dealings with his fellow-men, he had the esteem of the entire community, and was considered an upright, Christian gentleman. Mr. Hall was married in Portsmouth, R. I., Jan. 7, 1841, to Catherine Sowle Hall, who was born in Portsmouth, daughter of Judge Parker Hall, and to this union were born two children, George Gardner and Anthony Dennis. The mother of these children died at her home in New Bedford, and was buried in the Friends cemetery at Portsmouth beside her husband.

George Gardner Hall attended the public schools at Tiverton and the district schools of Bristol county, Mass. During his earlier years he worked at home on the farm with his father, but on reaching manhood went to Fall River to learn the trade of blacksmith. This occupation not proving congenial, however, after a short time he returned home, and about the close of the Civil war started out to make his own way in the world, going to Boston. His first object being to gain a commercial education, he took a course in a school in that city, and subsequently secured a position as bookkeeper in a livery stable, remaining there for a year and a half. At the end of this time he became clerk at the "Parker House," a position he filled acceptably for ten years, at the end of which time, having saved a little money, he formed a partnership in 1876 with Mr. J. R. Whipple and leased the "Young's Hotel." This venture proving such a success, the partners in 1883 leased the "Adams House," and they conducted both hotels until 1886, when the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Hall taking the "Adams House," while Mr. Whipple retained the "Young's Hotel." For the past twenty years Mr. Hall has continued to conduct this well-known hostelry successfully, and during this period has made many improvements, including the extension of the hotel to Mason street, the building of two large dining-rooms and other necessary improvements, entailing a cost of practically half a million dollars. Mr. Hall has made the "Adams House" one of the leading hotels in New England, being able to accommodate over six hundred guests. He is a thorough hotel man, and leaves nothing undone that will add to the comfort of his patrons. In the management of the "Adams House" he is assisted by his two sons and his brother, who like himself are all capable men.

Mr. Hall has a kind and genial manner, and a quiet disposition. His hobby may be said to be his love for good horses. In politics he is liberal, and he is a member of the Society of Friends, to which his wife also belonged. Mr. Hall was married in New Bedford, Mass., to Miss Belle Martha Robinson, a native of New Bedford, daughter of James Robinson, and a descendant of an old and honored Massachusetts family. Three children were born to this union: George Robinson and Frank Gardner, who are assisting their father in conducting the hotel, and Catherine, who died in infancy. Mrs. Hall died Aug. 10, 1907.

Mr. Hall's country place is in Portsmouth, R.

I., where he owns one of the most picturesque locations along Narragansett Bay, in a locality replete with landmarks of historic interest.

ANTHONY DENNIS HALL, brother of George Gardner Hall, was born at Tiverton, R. I. (now Fall River, Mass.), Jan. 13, 1845. He was educated in the district schools of Rhode Island and at New Bedford, Mass., and continued on the home farm, working with his father, until seventeen years of age, when he accepted a position as clerk in a grocery store in New Bedford. After fifteen years spent there Mr. Hall located in Boston, and on April 15, 1882, accepted a position as clerk in the "Young's Hotel," then conducted by his brother and Mr. Whipple. Since the "Adams House" was leased by the partners, Mr. Hall has taken a prominent part in its management, and like his brother he is well known, and very popular because of his genial manner. In politics Mr. Hall is a Republican, and stanch in his support of the principles of his party. While a resident of New Bedford he took an active part in public affairs, serving as a member of the city council. He is fraternally connected with Star of the East Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and Sutton Commandery, K. T., both of New Bedford, Mass., and is very popular in Masonic circles.

Mr. Anthony Dennis Hall was married in New Bedford to Mary E. Soule, who was born in New Bedford, daughter of Thomas and Margaret D. Soule, and a descendant of one of New England's prominent families. Mrs. Hall is a member of the South Church, Boston, and a prominent member of the D. A. R. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hall: (1) William T. Hall graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and subsequently took a course at Goettingen, Germany, after which he became an instructor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is at present engaged. He married Miss Agnes D. Allen, and to them three children have been born, Catherine Soule, Mary E. and Margaret D. (2) George Anthony, a student at Yale Divinity School, married Faith Pomeroy, daughter of Dr. H. Sterling Pomeroy, of Boston.

SCOTT. For nearly half a century the name of Scott has been a prominent one in connection with the grocery trade of Newport, where for a number of years Captain Henry D. Scott conducted a successful business, and, on his retirement from active business life, he was succeeded by his son, William C. Scott, who has since conducted the business with equal success.

Consider Scott, father of Captain Henry D., and grandfather of William C. Scott, was for a number of years prior to his death engaged in the hotel business in Charlemont, Mass. He was also a man of public affairs, holding various public offices. For a number of years he was justice of the peace and also held the rank of ensign in the State militia, taking an active part in military affairs. He married (first) Amanda Keith, by whom he had nine children. After the death of his first wife, he married (second) her sister, Louise Keith, and to them were born two children: Henry D. and Louise, who married a Mr. Bradford. Consider Scott died in 1831, in Salina, N. Y., aged fifty-three years, and his widow passed away in 1858.

CAPTAIN HENRY DWIGHT SCOTT was born Jan. 24, 1825, in Charlemont, Mass. His father died when he was six years old, and until the age of seventeen years he lived with Rothens Read, in Easton, Mass., and received his schooling there, attending school during the winter months, while in the summer time he worked on the farm. When seventeen years old Mr. Scott went to learn the trade of carpenter with Marshall Wilbor, at Fair Haven, Mass., and with him he served four years. He continued at his trade in Fair Haven until 1849, when he joined a company and sailed around Cape Horn for California, on the ship "Florida," arriving in California Jan. 1, 1850. He remained there in the mines for a time, and later worked at the carpenter's trade at Stockton, Cal. On account of ill health he finally sailed from San Francisco on the ship "Hibernian," for Liverpool, England, around Cape Horn, as carpenter, at $13 per month, after having worked in Stockton for from ten dollars to fourteen dollars per day. From Liverpool, England, he sailed for America, and returned to Fair Haven, Mass., where he again took up his trade, continuing in this occupation until 1860. He then removed to New Bedford, and worked but a short time when war was declared against the South. Captain Scott enlisted in September, 1861, as a private in the 5th Massachusetts Battery, commanded by Max Effendy, and went into camp at Readville, Mass. The Battery left Readville, Dec. 25, 1861, their destination being near Washington, where Mr. Scott was made sergeant. He was then promoted to second lieutenant, and in 1862 to first lieutenant. He served in nearly all of the engagements which took place under General G. K. Warren, and March 11, 1864, Lieutenant Scott was promoted to Captain of the 16th Massachusetts Battery. He later saw considerable service under General Gambol. Captain Scott was engaged chiefly in the defences at Washington, and was mustered out after the close of the war, in 1865. At the battle of Gettysburg, Captain Scott was shot in front of the left ear, the bullet coming out just below his right eye. At the battle of the Wilderness he had the fore finger of his left hand badly lacerated, being struck by a piece of shell.

After the war Captain Scott located in Newport, where his wife had removed during his absence, and there he bought out the grocery store of Captain Oliver Potter, his wife's uncle. This was in December, 1865, and he continued this store at Nos. 313-315 Thames street until 1891, when he sold out the business to his son. After that time Captain Scott lived retired from business. Captain Scott was a member of General G. K. Warren Post, No. 21, G. A. R., of Newport, of which he was past post commander. He was formerly a member of the Royal Arcanum. In politics he was a Republican, and served in the Newport common council, and was also a representative to the State Assembly from Newport. His religious connection was with the Central Baptist Church of Newport.

Captain Scott was married (first) in 1846, to Lydia Ann Chapman, of Rhode Island, and she died Dec. 7, 1865, being accidentally burned to death, her clothes catching fire from a stove. She bore him these children: (1) Henry W., a railroad conductor on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, between Newport and Boston, married (1st) Lenora Morris, of Ind., who died in Fall River, Mass., without issue; he married (2nd) Carrie A. Macomber. (2) Mary Louise married Frederick A. Clarke, of Newport, now deceased, and she has children, William H. L. and Susan B. Clarke. (3) Alice Roslyn, married Joseph B. Tompkins, of Newport, a grocer of New York City, and they have three children, Joseph B., Jr., Frank E., M. D., and Alfred T. (4) William Chapman, is mentioned below. (5) Rebecca Chapman, married Elmer E. Nickerson, of Newport, a broker, and they have these children: Ellsworth C. and Alice L. (6) Amanda Bacon, died in infancy. (7) Jennie Boardman, married William Bovee, of Providence, but they have no children. (8) Horace, passed away in infancy. Captain Henry D. Scott married for his second wife, in 1867, Grace Patterson, of Carlyle, England, and she died Dec. 28, 1870, leaving one son, Charles Philip, a musical director, now living in Boston, who married Maud Ladd, and has no children. Captain Henry D. Scott's third wife was Sarah Taylor, of Newport, daughter of Joseph Taylor, who survives him, he having passed away at his home in Newport, March 26, 1907.

WILLIAM CHAPMAN SCOTT, son of Henry D. Scott, was born Aug. 10, 1856, in Fair Haven, Mass., and when a little over six years of age accompanied his mother to Newport, whither she removed while her husband was in the army. Young Scott received his education in the common schools of Newport, attending there until about fifteen years of age. After leaving school he became a clerk in the drug store of the late William H. Cotton, and there he remained for two years, when he entered his father's grocery store as a clerk, continuing in the latter's employ until 1891. The father then retired from active business, and Mr. William C. Scott purchased the business, and he has since continued to conduct it at the same stand, with much success, carrying a complete and well-selected stock of provisions, meats and groceries.

Socially Mr. Scott is a member of Coronet Council No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of Newport. He attends the United Congregational Church, to which he gives his liberal support. In political views he is a Republican, but has never sought public office. For several years Mr. Scott has been a member of the board of directors of the Newport Co-Operative Association for Saving and Building.

On Feb. 23, 1882, Mr. Scott married Laura E. Tew, daughter of Thomas Tew, of Newport, and to them have been born three children: Harry Tew, a clerk in the employ of his father; and Laura Tew and Ida Tew Scott, both at home.

COOKE (Providence families). Through some six generations the Providence branch of the Cookes of which we write—descendants of John Cooke of Saybrook and Middletown, Conn., respectively—have been most closely as well as prominently identified with the business growth and development of Providence and vicinity, especially in mercantile and commercial lines and as well in some generations a number of the name have been as conspicuous in public life. The review of the lives of Daniel, Governor Nicholas, Jesse, Joseph Sheldon, Rev. James Welch, Hon. Joseph Jesse, and, of a still later generation, the late Henry Williams Cooke (son of Hon. Joseph Jesse), is to present a somewhat remarkable succession of men of achievement in one lineage.

Something of the lives of these men, of their family history and genealogy follows, the arrangement being chronological from the emigrant ancestor.

(I) John Cooke is of record at Saybrook, Conn., in 1690, on Oct. 8th of which year he bought land and built a house upon it, etc. This he subsequently sold. He was twice married, his second wife being Hannah, born Feb. 11, 1669-70, daughter of Capt. Daniel Harris (of Middletown, Conn.) and his wife, Mary (Weld), both of whom were born in England. John Cooke, presumably the American ancestor, died at Middletown, Conn., Jan. 16, 1705.

(II) Daniel Cooke, son of John and Hannah (Harris) Cooke, was born Sept. 19, 1691, at Saybrook, Conn. Becoming a resident of Providence, R. I., he married Feb. 4, 1713, Mary, born March 29, 1696, daughter of the third Nicholas Power by his first wife, Mary Haile, of Swansea, Mass. Daniel Cooke and Mary (Power) Cooke died Feb. 7, 1738, and Dec. 11, 1741, respectively.

(III) NICHOLAS COOKE, son of Daniel and Mary (Power) Cooke, born Feb. 3, 1717, in Providence, R. I., married Sept. 23, 1740, Hannah, born

March 13, 1722, daughter of Hezekiah Sabin, and the union was blessed with twelve children. Mr. Sabin was the first settler of that portion of north-east Connecticut where his "Red Tavern" was the favorite hostelry of travelers for a long period of years; he was of Huguenot extraction.

The early life of Mr. Cooke was passed as a seafaring man, and in this line as a shipmaster, and later as a merchant and manufacturer, he was successful. He acquired a handsome property, becoming an extensive land holder, not only in Rhode Island, but also in Massachusetts and Connecticut. He was essentially a man of affairs.

Mr. Cooke was twice chosen to the office of deputy governor, and though in somewhat advanced life and of retired habits he seemed to be the very man wanted by those high in the councils of Rhode Island, at a critical period in its history, as their chief executive officer, at the time of the displacement of Governor Joseph Wanton by the vote of the General Assembly in the autumn of 1775. He was then made governor and served until May, 1778, declining a re-election. At the time of his selection he was waited upon by Stephen Hopkins, Congressman-elect, and Joshua Babcock, the oldest member of the House, who made plain the urgency of the case and that duty required him to report favorably. Nothing but the critical state of the country at the time led him to accept the honor. The event fully justified the wisdom of the choice of Governor Cooke. He was a sincere patriot and discharged the high duties of the office with great ability. Said the venerable John Howland that "Rhode Island history, if faithfully written, will hand his [Gov. Cooke's] name down to posterity in connection with the most eminent public characters of which our country can boast." Said another writer, "None surpassed him in determined opposition to the arbitrary measures which occasioned the American Revolution; and immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities he was loudly called to the helm of the Rhode Island government."

Mr. Cooke was appointed a trustee of Brown University in 1766, and continued in office until his death, which occurred Nov. 14, 1782. His widow passed away March 21, 1792. Gov. Cooke was a member of the Congregational Church.

(IV) Jesse Cooke, son of Gov. Nicholas and Hannah (Sabin) Cooke, born Dec. 19, 1757, in Providence, married (first) Aug. 25, 1783, Rosanna Sheldon, daughter of Capt. Christopher Sheldon, a prominent citizen of Providence, who was descended from John Sheldon, the emigrant ancestor, through Nicholas and Joseph Sheldon. Mrs. Cooke died Nov. 20, 1789, and he married (second) Hannah, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Sheldon) Warner, who as his widow became the wife of George Hudson. Jesse Cooke died Sept. 13, 1794. By his first marriage he was the father of Joseph, and by his second, of Rosanna

Sheldon, born Aug. 30, 1792, and died Dec. 20, 1808.

(V) JOSEPH SHELDON COOKE, son of Jesse and Rosanna (Sheldon), born Oct. 27, 1784, married Sept. 21, 1807, Mary Welch, and the children, nine in number, were born in Providence.

On attaining manhood, Joseph Cooke procured the insertion of "Sheldon" in his name by act of the legislature. Soon after his marriage, in October, 1807, he entered upon business life as a dry goods dealer in his native city. In November of the same year he was joined by the late Charles Potter, who had recently relinquished the same line of business. After the dissolution of the firm of Cooke & Potter, in January, 1809, Mr. Cooke remained in the same trade until the spring of the next year, when he became the business agent, as well as one of the original proprietors, of the Lyman Cotton Manufacturing Company, a pioneer in an industrial interest which has now attained such extensive proportions. During the long term of eighteen years, he retained his position in its affairs, retiring from it in 1828. He soon after joined Job Angell in the transaction of a wholesale dry goods business, at first in Providence, then in New York also, and finally in the latter city only. Notwithstanding changes of firm occurred in what became one of the best known establishments of the kind in the country, he retained his interest in it until his death, Oct. 10, 1841. During his manhood and middle age Mr. Cooke was part owner of several vessels. He lent a helping hand to more than one enterprise into which public considerations largely entered—as the Providence and Taunton Turnpike and the Blackstone Canal, taking stock in the latter for himself and each of his children. He was also a considerable stockholder in the Blackstone Canal Bank. In 1821 he was made a director of the Providence Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and in 1831 was chosen one of the three trustees, both of which official connections ended only with his life. When a city government superseded the old town regime of Providence, in June, 1832, he was the first member elected to the common council from the Third Ward, continuing to serve in that capacity during the term of 1832-33. His probity and sound judgment, joined to an urbanity and kindness of heart almost exceptional, from time to time occasioned his selection for other positions of honor and trust, most of which his native preference for retirement led him to decline.

The children of Joseph S. and Mary (Welch) Cooke, all born in Providence, were: James Welch, born March 5, 1810; Rosanna Elizabeth, born Oct. 3, 1811, died Dec. 8, 1815; Joseph Jesse, born June 1, 1813; Christopher Sheldon, born July 28, 1815, died Oct. 1, 1816; George William, born Dec. 6, 1816, died Jan. 27, 1817; Albert Russell, born Aug. 15, 1819, married Phoebe ———; George Lewis, born Sept. 16, 1821; Mary Elizabeth, born June 27, 1823, married Henry B. Williams, and lived in California; and Nicholas Francis, born Aug. 25, 1829.

(VI) JOSEPH JESSE COOKE, son of Joseph Sheldon and Mary (Welch) Cooke, born June 1, 1813, in Providence, R. I., married (first) at Lonsdale, R. I., Feb. 18, 1834, Adelaide Martha Baker, of Providence, daughter of John and Avis (Tillinghast) Baker, formerly of Newport. She died Feb. 9, 1865, at Elmwood, and he married (second) Sept. 12, 1865, Maria Adelaide Salisbury, daughter of John and Abby Wilson (Foster) Salisbury.

After a somewhat limited school education young Cooke was prepared for business in Providence, whence he went as a clerk to the business house of his father in New York. He became and remained for a time an interested party in the establishment. Then, after a short business connection with another house, he purchased in 1842 an estate then in the town of Cranston but now in the city of Providence. Upon this he settled. Later on when the tide of emigration set in toward the Pacific coast he with his brother George Cooke and Robert S. Baker established the business house of Cooke, Baker & Co., which later became that of Cooke Brothers & Co. Through the early fifties these men, at least in part, had extensive business establishments at San Francisco and at New York, conducted under the name of Joseph J. Cooke & Co., and of these Mr. Cooke was from 1852 to 1854 the resident partner at New York.

Mr. Cooke was prominently identified with one of the great public improvements of Providence—the Providence Water Works. At the inception of this extensive improvement in 1869, he was appointed one of the three commissioners to carry out the work, and on the death of the first president of the company, Mr. Moses B. Lockwood, Mr. Cooke became his successor and most satisfactorily directed its affairs until the practical completion of the work in 1876.

Mr. Cooke owned an estate in Newport and for a time especially through the summer months was a resident of that city, passing, however, the rest of the year at his Elmwood estate in Providence. This latter or a great portion of it, in 1872, he sold for upwards of a million dollars, but in 1878 he again became its owner, transactions in that day of considerable magnitude.

Mr. Cooke became somewhat actively interested in politics with the formation of the Republican party and with it affiliated thereafter. He was president of the Rhode Island Republican State Convention of 1857, and chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for that same year. In 1855 and 1856 he was president of the Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry. Mr. Cooke accumulated one of the largest and finest libraries at the time in this country, comprising something like 25,000 volumes, in every department of literature. He gave portions of his library to the Redwood Library of Newport, the Public Library and the Historical Society of Providence. He was the one who had the foresight to see the need of trees, and he laid out the streets and then set out the trees which now afford such beautiful and pleasing shade.

The children born to the first marriage of Mr. Cooke were: Joseph Sheldon, born March 12, 1838, died Aug. 1, 1839; Adelaide Baker, born Sept. 8, 1840, married May 22, 1862, Scott Allen Smith; Ellen Goddard, born Dec. 24, 1847, died Aug. 16, 1849; Alice Elizabeth, born March 18, 1853; and Edith, born March 8, 1854, died Sept. 6, 1854. The children born to the second marriage were: Arthur Elmwood, born June 9, 1866, died the same day; and Henry Williams, born June 26, 1867. The death of Mr. Cooke occurred July 8, 1881.

(VII) HENRY WILLIAMS COOKE, son of Joseph J. and Maria A. Cooke, was born June 26, 1867, in Elmwood, Providence, R.I. He received his education in the Mowry & Goff English and Classical School, and at Brown University, graduating from the latter institution in 1891. After this event for approximately a year he was in the office of Spencer Trask & Co., stock brokers of Providence. In 1892 he opened a small real estate office at No. 1 Custom House street in the same city, and continued business there until 1894, when he became associated with Francis M. Smith, their firm name being as at the time of Mr. Cooke's death, Henry W. Cooke & Co. The place of business was first located at No. 3 Custom House street, later in the Banigan building, and when the Hospital Trust Company building was opened the firm secured commodious quarters in that place, where the business has since been carried on.

For a brief period Mr. Cooke was active in public life, being a member of the common council from the First ward from 1896 to 1898. His ballot was cast in support of the Republican party. He was a member of Brown Chapter of the Psi Upsilon Greek Letter fraternity, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Hope, Elmwood and West Side Clubs.

Mr. Cooke died at his home on Elmwood Avenue, Providence, May 20, 1904. On the day following this event the Daily Journal said in part: "In the untimely death of Henry W. Cooke, who passed away at his late residence, 572 Elmwood avenue, late yesterday afternoon, the city has lost a valuable and enterprising citizen and the local real estate field one of its ablest leaders. * * * Although a young man Mr. Cooke's genial disposition and familiarity with real estate property made him a very popular and able man. He was exceedingly conversant with local realty conditions, and his integrity and judgment were so recognized that upon many occasions he had acted as an appraiser, while he had been a trustee in a number of estates. He had built about him a very large business and was considered by his associates as an honor to the field in which his life duties were performed."

On Nov. 6, 1894, Mr. Cooke was married to Alice H. Robinson, daughter of the late Edward H. Robinson, who was at one time a well known dealer in oil at Providence. Besides his widow, Mr. Cooke was survived by two daughters, Margaret Howard and Adelaide Welch. Mr. Cooke was a member of the Church of the Epiphany of Elmwood, and for many years a vestryman therein, but at the time of his death he was a member of the parish of Grace Church.

Descended from an honorable ancestry, inheriting the cardinal principles of honesty, industry and probity, Henry Williams Cooke fulfilled in public, civil and private life the highest ideal of American citizenship.

MASON (Providence and Pawtucket families). Through two and a half centuries the name of Mason has been identified with that region of country originally Rehoboth and its vicinity, and for perhaps an hundred years with the city of Providence, where, and at Pawtucket, through the last seventy-five years, that branch of the old Rehoboth-Swansea stock of the several generations in the line of Pardon Mason have been men of achievement, making for themselves in the business world, especially, reputations of the first quality and contributing largely to the material growth and advancement of their communities. Contemporary with Pardon Mason, and though not in line with him, but of the same stock, here in Providence, figured Amasa Mason, merchant and manufacturer, whose reputation as a sagacious business man was second, perhaps, to none of his day in Providence; then another of the same stock here of that day was Hon. James Brown Mason, a graduate of Brown University, legislator, Speaker of the Rhode Island House of Representatives, member of the United States Congress and closely identified with one of the famous merchants, the four Brown brothers.

In the line of Pardon Mason were his several sons John Hale, Pardon, Coomer E., William B., Robert Durfee and Earl Potter Mason, the latter of whom, perhaps, linked his name with more of the great enterprises of Providence of his day than any of his business contemporaries. Then, in the succeeding generation, one who was long active and prominent in business circles and worthily perpetuated the name and family reputation, was the late Robert D. Mason, one of the leading citizens of Pawtucket, president of the extensive dyeing and bleaching establishment bearing his name at Pawtucket, the latter now being conducted by his son Fred-eric R. Mason, one of the well-known and esteemed citizens of Pawtucket.

The family history and genealogy following is in regular order from the American ancestor.

(I) Sampson Mason is first of record in this country at Dorchester, Mass., in 1649. In a History of the Baptists in America, it is stated, presumably founded on family tradition, that he had been a soldier in Cromwell's army, and upon the turn of times came to America and settled in Rehoboth. He married Mary Butterworth, thought to have been a daughter of John Butterworth, of Weymouth, Mass., and about this time, 1650-51, bought land in Rehoboth, and also sold land there in 1655-56. As early as 1657 he and his wife and three children were in Rehoboth, and in that town is a record of ten others of their children, all likely born there. Mr. Mason was engaged in extensive land speculation. He was a land holder in Rehoboth North Purchase, which later became Attleboro; and he was one of the proprietors of Swansea, in which town his descendants for many years were prominent—an original proprietor on the town's incorporation in 1668. It was about this time probably that he united with the First Baptist Church, but he probably never moved to Swansea. He died in 1676, and at that time was the owner of several hundred acres of land. His widow died in 1714. Their children were: Noah, born in 1651-52; Sampson, born about 1654 (both in Dorchester); Samuel, born Feb. 12, 1656-57; Sarah, born Feb. 15, 1657-58; Mary, born Feb. 7, 1659-60; James, born Oct. 30, 1661; Joseph, born March 6, 1662-63; Bethiah, born Oct. 15, 1665; Isaac, born July 15, 1667; Pelatiah, born April 1, 1669; Benjamin, born Oct. 20, 1670; and Thankful, born Oct. 27, 1672 (all in Rehoboth).

(II) Isaac Mason, son of Sampson, born July 15, 1667, in Rehoboth, married and for some years resided in Rehoboth. He removed to Swansea about 1706. He was chosen a deacon of the Second Church of Swansea soon after its organization in 1693, and continued in that office until his death, which occurred in January, 1741-42. His wife Hannah was living when his will was made in 1741. Their children were: Hannah, born Jan. 9, 1694; Mary, born Jan. 26, 1695; Isaac, born Dec. 26, 1698; Sampson, born Feb. 24, 1700; Hezekiah, born June 6, 1704; Nathan, born May 10, 1705; Oliver, born Aug. 20, 1706; Hannah, born in March 1710; Benjamin, born April 10, 1711; and Mary, born July 21, 1713, the four younger born in Swansea.

(III) Nathan Mason, son of Isaac, born May 10, 1705, in Rehoboth, married Aug. 26, 1731, Lillis Hale, born Oct. 21, 1714, in Swansea, daughter of John and Hannah (Tillinghast) Hale, and they resided in Swansea during the greater part of their lives, until about 1750. Mr. Mason died in May, 1758. His widow remarried, and died in December, 1797. His children were: Sampson, born Sept. 27, 1732; Barnard, born March 15, ness and was considered by his associates as an honor to the village which his late father was permitted to found.

Robert A. M.

On Nov. 1, 1700, he was married to Alice (1680-1710), daughter of John and Hester (1660-1700), of Pawtucket. He died in 1710, and was buried in the old burying-ground in Pawtucket. His wife died in 1710, and was buried in the same place. Their children were: John, born 1701; Mary, born 1703; and Sarah, born 1705.

John, the eldest son, was born in 1701, and was married to Mary (1702-1710), daughter of John and Hester (1660-1700), of Pawtucket. He died in 1710, and was buried in the old burying-ground in Pawtucket. His wife died in 1710, and was buried in the same place. Their children were: John, born 1701; Mary, born 1703; and Sarah, born 1705.

Mary, the second daughter, was born in 1703, and was married to John (1704-1710), son of John and Hester (1660-1700), of Pawtucket. He died in 1710, and was buried in the old burying-ground in Pawtucket. His wife died in 1710, and was buried in the same place. Their children were: John, born 1701; Mary, born 1703; and Sarah, born 1705.

Sarah, the youngest daughter, was born in 1705, and was married to John (1706-1710), son of John and Hester (1660-1700), of Pawtucket. He died in 1710, and was buried in the old burying-ground in Pawtucket. His wife died in 1710, and was buried in the same place. Their children were: John, born 1701; Mary, born 1703; and Sarah, born 1705.

John, the eldest son, was born in 1701, and was married to Mary (1702-1710), daughter of John and Hester (1660-1700), of Pawtucket. He died in 1710, and was buried in the old burying-ground in Pawtucket. His wife died in 1710, and was buried in the same place. The family history and genealogy follow in regular order from the American ancestry.

(I) Sampson Mason is first of record in the country at Dorchester, Mass., in 1649. In the History of the Baptists in America, it is stated that he had been a soldier in Cromwell's army, and upon the turn of times came to America and settled in Rehoboth. He married Mary Burdett, thought to have been a daughter of John Burdett, of Weymouth, Mass., and about this time, 1650-51, bought land in Rehoboth, and also sold land there in 1655-56. As early as 1650, he and his wife and three children were in Rehoboth, and in that town is a record of ten other of their children, all likely born there. Sampson Mason was engaged in extensive land speculation. He was a land holder in Rehoboth North Purchase, which later became Attleboro; and he was one of the proprietors of Swansea, in which town his descendants for many years were prominent—an original proprietor on the town's incorporation in 1608. It was about this time probably that he united with the First Baptist Church in Rehoboth, and he probably never moved to Swansea. He died in 1676, and at that time was the owner of several hundred acres of land. His widow died in 1676. Their children were: Noah, born in 1651; Sampson, born about 1654 (both in Dorchester); Samuel, born Feb. 12, 1656-57; Sarah, born Feb. 15, 1657-58; Mary, born Feb. 7, 1650-60; Joseph, born Oct. 30, 1661; Isaac, born March 6, 1663; Bethiah, born Oct. 15, 1665; Isaac, born Oct. 15, 1667; Pelatah, born April 1, 1669; Benjamin, born Oct. 20, 1670; and Thankful, born Oct. 1672 (all in Rehoboth).

(II) Isaac Mason, son of Sampson, was born July 15, 1667, in Rehoboth, married at some years resided in Rehoboth. He removed to Swansea about 1700. He was chosen a member of the Second Church of Swansea soon after its organization in 1603, and continued in that office until his death, which occurred in January, 1741-42. His wife Hannah was born when his wife was made in 1741. Their children were: Hannah, born Jan. 6, 1694; Mary, born Jan. 26, 1695; Isaac, born Dec. 20, 1698; Samuel, born Feb. 24, 1700; Hezekiah, born Feb. 24, 1704; Nathan, born May 10, 1705; Oliver, born Aug. 20, 1706; Hannah, born in March, 1708; Benjamin, born April 10, 1711; and Mary, born May 21, 1713, the four younger born in Swansea.

(III) Nathan Mason, son of Isaac, was born in 1705, in Rehoboth, married Aug. 20, 1725, in Swansea, to Hannah (Tillinghast), daughter of John and Hannah (Tillinghast) of Swansea, who lived in Swansea during the greater part of his life, until about 1750. Mr. Mason died in 1758. His widow remarried, in 1758, for the second time, in 1758, in Rehoboth, where he died in 1758. His children were: Nathan, born Sept. 27, 1732; Barnard, born Aug. 1734; and Hannah, born Aug. 1736.

Robert L. Mason

1735; Jesse, born March 21, 1737; Lillis, born May 8, 1739; Nathan, born Feb. 21, 1741; Free-love, born April 25, 1743; Innocent, born Aug. 20, 1745; Mary, born June 30, 1748; Aaron, born June 29, 1749; Rosanna Sibbel; Levi, born Oct. 15, 1752; and Pardon, born Aug. 14, 1758, the ten elder in Swansea, and all the sons and some of the daughters later settled in or near Lanesboro, Massachusetts.

(IV) Pardon Mason, son of Nathan, born Aug. 14, 1758, married (first) April 24, 1785, Anna Hale, born Aug. 24, 1762, in Swansea, daughter of John and Bethiah (Bosworth) Hale. Mr. Mason settled first in Lanesboro, Mass., probably about 1775, but later removed to Providence, R. I. His wife Anna died Oct. 6, 1823, and he married (second) Sept. 24, 1837, Mrs. Elizabeth Potter, daughter of John Stafford, and they died, he May 18, 1845, and she June 9, 1856, aged seventy-six years. His children, all born to the first marriage and in Providence, were: Mary, born Jan. 22, 1787; Edward, born April 19, 1788; John Hale, born Nov. 26, 1789; Pardon, born Jan. 10, 1792; Coomer E., born Aug. 6, 1794; William B., born June 5, 1797; Anna Hale, born April 15, 1800; Robert Durfee, born March 7, 1802; Earl Potter, born March 10, 1804; and John Hale (2), born May 26, 1809.

Pardon Mason served in the army in the Revolution, and, it is said, was one of the six brothers whose names appear so frequently on the rolls of that war, four of whom were participants of the battle of Bennington. From the Archives of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, it is learned that Pardon Mason, of Providence, was a private in Capt. Daniel Brown's Company, Massachusetts Continental Line, Aug. 14, 1777, marched on the alarm from Lanesboro to Melcomseyneck; served six days; Sept. 5, 1777, in the same company marched on the alarm from Lanesboro to Pawlet; served twenty-seven days; participated in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777.

(V) Robert Durfee Mason, son of Pardon, born March 7, 1802, in Providence, R. I., was engaged as a merchant tailor at Pawtucket, and there died July 26, 1832. He married Nov. 18, 1828, Mehetabel Tyler Merry, born in Pawtucket, Mass. (now Rhode Island), Nov. 26, 1810, daughter of Barney and Phila B. (Tyler) Merry. Two children were born to this marriage, namely: (1) Pardon, born March 4, 1830, became a captain in the Civil war, and died in Providence. He married May 29, 1853, Esther H. Baker, who survives him, and resides in New York. They had three children: George A., who died in his twelfth year; Robert E., who resides in Brooklyn; and Helen E., now Mrs. James W. Bruce, of Brooklyn, N. Y. (2) Robert Durfee was born March 10, 1832.

(VI) ROBERT DURFEE MASON (2), son of Robert Durfee, born March 10, 1832, in Pawtucket, then in Massachusetts, but now in Rhode Island, married (first) in 1852, Mary Bicknell Nicholas, born Dec. 31, 1834, and died Aug. 20, 1890. Mr. Mason married (second) Oct. 28, 1893, Mary Adeline Havens. Two children were born to the first marriage, namely: Frederic Robert and Ella Frances.

Mr. Mason was but a babe of five months when his father died, and the widowed mother with her two sons returned to the home of her father, where for many years Robert D. and his brother were under the care of their grandfather. The latter, Capt. Barney Merry, a native of Scituate, R. I., had followed the sea for years, but later became established in the dyeing and bleaching business at Pawtucket. Young Robert in boyhood attended the public schools of Pawtucket, and at sixteen entered the establishment of his grandfather, which soon passed into the hands of his son, Samuel Merry, and in it and under the latter's instruction, began a business career which has been a most honorable and, as well, a successful one. It may be here stated that Capt. Barney Merry was the first in Pawtucket, and one of the earliest in the country, to establish a dyeing and bleaching works. He began the business in 1805, and continued it very successfully until his death, in 1847. The business then passed into the hands of his son, Samuel Merry, who conducted it until 1870, the last four years of which period he had associated with, as a partner, his nephew, Robert D. Mason. At this time, in 1866, the firm name became Samuel Merry & Co. Samuel Merry retiring in 1870 left Mr. Mason to carry on the business, and the firm name was then changed to Robert D. Mason & Co. In 1889 Frederic R. Mason, son of Robert D., was taken into the firm, and it so continued until in 1892, when the business was incorporated as the Robert D. Mason Company, with a capital stock of $100,000, at which time father and son became president and treasurer, respectively, of the corporation.

Robert D. Mason, growing up from boyhood into an experience of the inherited family industry, as the years passed became possessed of all the details and a thorough practical knowledge of the business, and through this knowledge and his careful management of its affairs it steadily grew in magnitude and favor with the trade until it is one of the most substantial concerns of Pawtucket, its proprietors becoming men of means and influence.

From the start the dyeing and bleaching works were located in the rear of the Merry homestead on the present East avenue, Pawtucket, the plant from time to time being enlarged. In 1892 the present modern plant on Esten avenue, rear of No. 1077 Main street, was occupied. These works give employment to about 150 hands, and the business amounts to about $200,000 annually. When Mr. Mason started in the business about 1,500 pounds of yarn were treated daily. When he died the amount treated daily was 20,000 pounds, and at this time (1908) about 30,000 pounds are treated daily.

Robert D. Mason was one of the highly respected and esteemed citizens of Pawtucket. His political affiliations were with the Republican party, though he was in no sense a politician. For about fifteen years he was a member of the Pawtucket Water Board; and he was one of the original members of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association. He was a lifelong attendant of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. His death occurred suddenly from heart disease at his home on Pawtucket avenue, Pawtucket, Jan. 22, 1898. "The news of his sudden death," said the Pawtucket Gazette and Chronicle of Jan. 28th, "was not generally known until the next day, and an unusual degree of sadness prevailed throughout the community where he had lived all his life, and where he was so well known and so highly esteemed. His was one of the most familiar figures of Pawtucket's daily life, and that he will be sadly missed from the midst of his fellow citizens is not a mere truism. He was of a liberal mind and a generous open heart. He lived well, and he was never happier than when entertaining his friends whom he delighted in making to feel, with himself, that life was well worth living. His memory will ever remain precious to the family and his hosts of friends and acquaintances.

"The funeral of Mr. Mason took place at his late residence on the afternoon of Jan. 25th. It was a large and notable gathering. It was a striking tribute to the memory of the dead, and attested far greater than words can express the loyalty and love of his friends, and the esteem in which he was held. Many of the prominent people of Pawtucket and from out-of-town were present—men who had been associated with him in business, in political life, in social and fraternal organizations, all of whom recalled the many sterling qualities of the dead and the characteristics which had endeared him to all with whom he came in contact. There were present members of the Business Men's Association, the American Legion of Honor, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, members and attendants of St. Paul's Church, his employes, and men in all ranks of life.

"How we shall all miss this genial, generous, whole-souled gentleman! How many of the old guard of Pawtucket's citizenship have passed to the other side within the past decade! Their places are taken by new comers, and the world rolls on as of yore, but to the minds of those of us who remain, and who are 'native here and to the manner born,' none can precisely fill the places as did our departed co-workers, and among them all, as a good citizen, an honorable man of business, a steadfast friend and an exemplar of the social elements of life, none will be more warmly and pleasantly recalled than Robert Durfee Mason."

(VII) FREDERIC R. MASON, son of Robert Durfee (2), born March 11, 1859, in Pawtucket, R. I., married June 6, 1894, Annie E. Boon, daughter of Charles E. Boon, of Providence. They have one son, Robert Boon, born May 12, 1902.

Mr. Mason attended the public schools of his native town, and the private school of Rev. C. M. Wheeler, of Providence, and completed his education at Brown University, taking a two years' course in chemistry. In 1880, he became assistant to his father in the management of his manufacturing establishment, and in 1889 was admitted into partnership, the firm then becoming R. D. Mason & Co. When the business was incorporated under the name of the Robert D. Mason Company he was elected its treasurer, and after the death of his father, he succeeded him as president, now holding the offices of president and treasurer, and having, in fact, the entire management of the business which enjoys a steady growth.

In politics Mr. Mason is a Republican. He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and a member of the vestry. He was for several years secretary of the T. K. Club. He is a member of the board of managers of the Pawtucket branch of the Industrial Trust Company of Providence, and he is a member of the Pawtucket Business Men's Association.

GREEN (Providence family). The old Massachusetts Green family from the earliest Colonial times allied itself with the first families of that and adjoining Commonwealths and produced many strong and forceful characters. From a marriage between members of that family and the Arnold family of Rhode Island was born the late Arnold Green, lawyer and scholar, who was widely known as a man of broad culture, a student of both ancient and modern languages, and an authority in many branches of learning. Mr. Green himself was a graduate of Brown University as are also his four sons, and, as he was, so continues one of his sons, a trustee of that institution. It is with this family this article is to treat.

Born Feb. 27, 1838, in the City of New York, Arnold Green was the son of the late Timothy Ruggles and Cornelia Elizabeth (Arnold) Green, and descended in various lines from the first and among the oldest families of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Among his ancestors may be mentioned John Carver, the "Mayflower" emigrant and first Governor of Massachusetts Colony (also several other "Mayflower" emigrants), Thomas Dudley, Governor of Massachusetts (1634 and later), Walter Clarke, Governor of Rhode Island Colony (1676 and later), William Greene, Governor of Rhode Island (1743 and later), Samuel Gorton, founder of Warwick, and General Timothy Ruggles, leader of the American Royalists, Chief Justice of Massachusetts and President of the Stamp Act Congress. Through the two direct lines, Green and Arnold, his first American ancestors, were Thomas Green, of Malden, Mass., who came to America from Leicestershire, England, about 1636; and Thomas Arnold, of Cheselbourne, Dorsetshire, England, who came to America in 1635 in the ship "Plain Joan," and soon settled at Watertown. Thomas Arnold was the son of Richard Arnold, whose descent, it is claimed, was through Richard Arnold, of Somersetshire, England, from the ancient and illustrious Arnold family, which, according to a pedigree recorded in the College of Arms, was one of great antiquity, having its origin among the ancient Princes of Wales, tracing from Ynir, King of Gwentland, who flourished after the middle of the twelfth century.

From Thomas Green, the American settler, Arnold Green's lineage is through Thomas Green (2), Samuel, Thomas (3), John, Timothy and Timothy Ruggles Green; and from Thomas Arnold, the American settler, his lineage is through Richard, Thomas (2), Jonathan, Welcome and Samuel Greene Arnold.

Mr. Green, too, sprang from a race of lawyers; his paternal great-grandfather, his grandfather and his father all were of the legal profession, as, too, is one of his sons. Timothy Ruggles Green, his father, was born March 16, 1806, and married Oct. 20, 1835, Cornelia Elizabeth Arnold, born Oct. 7, 1814, a woman esteemed for her intellectual endowments. She descended through her mother, Frances (Rogers) Arnold, from Lieut. John Rogers of the Revolution, and through her grandmother, Patience (Greene) Arnold, from Surgeon John Greene, who came from Salisbury, county Wilts, England, in 1635, to Boston, thence to Salem and later to Providence, where he was prominently identified with its public affairs.

Timothy Ruggles Green practiced his profession in New York City, and although he died on his thirty-fourth birthday, he had attained high standing in his profession and in useful citizenship. He was a member of the American Tract Society, a trustee of Brown University, and was actively interested in benevolent causes. His death occurred March 16, 1840, at "White Hall," the plantation of his wife's uncle, Richard J. Arnold, in the State of Georgia. After his death his widow returned with her family to her girlhood home in Providence, and occupied the old family mansion on John street, which was ever afterward her home and that of her distinguished son, Arnold. She died Dec. 27, 1897.

The children of Timothy Ruggles and Cornelia Elizabeth (Arnold) Green were Arnold and Frances Mary Green, the latter of whom was born May 20, 1840, and married Rev. Heman Lincoln Wayland, of Philadelphia, a son of Francis Wayland, a former President of Brown University.

It is worthy of note as interesting to the family that it was a near relative of Timothy Ruggles Green—a cousin—the late Hon. Andrew Haswell Green, of Worcester and New York, a prominent lawyer of New York, who is called the "Father of Greater New York." In 1868 he conceived the plan for the amalgamation of the cities and towns which in 1897 were constituted the Greater New York, and for this he in 1899 was presented by the city with a gold medal.

Arnold Green, son of Timothy Ruggles, grew up in Providence. He attended the public schools in that city, and was graduated from Brown University in the Class of 1858, with John Hay, the former Secretary of State, and Col. R. H. I. Goddard, of Providence. He studied abroad in Germany and Greece, and was later a law student at Harvard University. He held the degree of LL. D., and was authority in many branches of learning. Greek was his especial hobby, and he was a student of both ancient and modern tongues. He was the author of "Greek and What Next?" an address, "Solomos' Hymn to Liberty," a poem read before the Alumni of Brown University, at the First Baptist Church in Providence, June 17, 1884. In college he was a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity. Botany and conchology were studies of special interest to him, and he was quite widely known as a naturalist.

In 1861 Mr. Green went out with the 1st Regiment Rhode Island Volunteers, and served three months. He was in the battle of Bull Run. He was a member of the Veteran Association of the regiment, and was its president for two years. After the war he settled down to the practice of law in Providence, which was afterward his chief occupation. For many years he was counsel for the old Boston & Providence Railroad, and he became a recognized authority on difficult points of law.

Mr. Green's literary tastes were manifested in a number of addresses that won a measure of fame. He delivered the address at the opening of the new Public Library in Providence, and spoke on other occasions of similar importance. He was president of the board of trustees of the Public Library, and was a trustee of Brown University, and of the Rhode Island Hospital.

Mr. Green in many respects was a wonderful man. "He was not to be ranked as a specialist," said one of the court officials, "in any particular branch of legal lore, because he was so sound in every branch. And not alone as a lawyer was he pre-eminent among his fellows; he was skilled as a botanist, made the study of the higher mathematics a pastime, possessed a deep and broad knowledge of rare languages, and was so proficient in modern Greek that he subscribed for a daily Greek newspaper, which he read for years with much interest. He also had a profound knowledge of Roman law."

For many years Mr. Green was the official reporter of the opinions handed down by the Supreme Court. An eminent jurist and close friend of Arnold Green at the time of Mr. Green's death related several characteristics incident in his career, and spoke of his attainments and qualities at some length. "It was said that when he was graduated from Brown University the authorities had great difficulty in deciding between Arnold Green and one of his classmates as to which was entitled to become valedictorian of his class. Finally the deeper generosity of his nature arose to the surface, and he somewhat gruffly ended the controversy by saying, 'Give it to the other fellow, he expects to teach and it will help him at the start to get a good position.' And so Mr. Green became salutatorian." This same authority continued, "If it were possible for a man to become over-educated, perhaps he was. He was pre-eminent among his associates in the versatility and profundity of his knowledge. Possibly it was owing to this fact that he sometimes seemed to lose their sympathy. He had no patience with littleness or ignorance. He was like a chestnut burr—one first felt the superficial harshness without seeing the meat inside. He never pursued popularity or position, but rode roughshod over obstacles that presumed to interfere with his desire to gather knowledge. He used the English language with directness and without gloss. He wrote but little, although no one who knew him doubted his qualifications and ability to treat almost any subject he might choose with the pen of a master. His fame, though great, will be legendary as he left little in the shape of preserved writings for men to look upon."

On Jan. 14, 1865, Mr. Green was married to Cornelia Burges, born March 21, 1837, daughter of Judge Walter S. Burges, of the Rhode Island Supreme Court, and Eleanor Burrill, the daughter of Hon. James Burrill, Chief Justice and United States Senator of Rhode Island, after whom the town of Burrillville, R. I., was named. Mrs. Green died Jan. 8, 1901. Seven children were born to this marriage, namely: (1) Arnold Burrill Green, born Aug. 21, 1866, died Feb. 18, 1872. (2) Theodore Francis Green, born Oct. 2, 1867, was graduated from Brown University in 1887, with the degree of A. B., later receiving the degree of A. M. He studied law at Harvard Law School and at the Universities of Bonn and Berlin, Germany, 1890-94, and was Instructor of Roman law in Brown University, 1894-98. He became associated in the practice of law with his father in 1894, succeeded him at his death and is now a member of the law firm of Green, Hinckley and Allen. He is a trustee of Brown University, of Butler Hospital, of the Providence Public Library, and of the Rhode Island School of Design. He is also trustee or member of the corporation of other institutions. (3) Eleanor Burges Green, born March 3, 1870, was graduated from Wellesley College in 1892, with the degree of A. B. (4) Cornelia Elizabeth Green, born Feb. 24, 1872, died June 16, 1901. She was graduated from Wellesley College with the degree of A. B., in 1892. She was a portrait painter of marked ability. (5) Ronald Conrad Green, born March 20, 1874, was graduated from Brown University in 1896 as A. B., and is in business in Indianapolis. (6) Erik Hastings Green, born Jan. 16, 1876, was graduated from Brown University in 1898 with the degree of A. B. In 1900 he was appointed graduate scholar in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and in 1901 "Fellow" in that same institution. He then furthered his studies abroad at the University of Heidelberg, Germany, where he was given the degree of Ph. D., magna cum laude, in 1903. He has written a number of scientific treatises, some of which have been published by the United States Government. He is now president of Las Islitas Irrigation Company, at Laredo, Texas. (7) Herlwyn Ruggles Green, born Feb. 22, 1877, was graduated from Brown University in 1897, with the degree of A. B. During the war with Spain young Green served with the 1st Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry as hospital steward. He then studied medicine in the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1903. After spending two years as an interne at the Rhode Island Hospital, he settled in Providence, where he is now practicing.

Mr. Arnold Green passed away at his residence, the old Arnold homestead, in Providence, Feb. 17, 1903.

PETER BINGHAM MACMANUS, one of the leading business men of Pawtucket, R. I., late president and treasurer of the Home Bleach and Dye Works, Incorporated, was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, born March 24, 1837, son of Daniel MacManus.

Daniel MacManus was born in Glasgow, and spent his entire life there, engaged in carpentering. He died in his native city, aged sixty-three years, leaving a widow, who had been Margaret Bingham, of Olden, England, and five children, as follows: Daniel, a boot and shoe maker, who died in Glasgow; Margaret, Katherine and Ellen, who died in Scotland; and Peter B.

Peter Bingham MacManus attended the schools of his native city until he was eight years of age, and then entered the bleaching and dyeing establishment of John Gettis & Son, Glasgow, to learn the business, receiving three pence a day—thirty-six cents a week—salary, with which he clothed himself and purchased food. Mr. MacManus continued with this firm for about eleven years, being advanced on various occasions, and attended night school during this period when he could manage to do so. After becoming a proficient workman he was employed in Paisley, Scotland, for the J. & P. Coats Company, Limited, and various others, in the dyeing of silk and cotton goods, for six or seven years, and then returned to Glasgow, becoming overseer for the Anderson Manufacturing Company. Mr. MacManus then went to Perth, being employed by Garvey & Davis for two years, and at this place had charge of the works. He then was employed by John Thompson, at Belfast, Ireland. Returning to Scotland, Mr. MacManus remained there a short time, and then sailed for America on the old ship "St. Patrick," which had been built about eighteen years before. He landed at Quebec, whence, in 1870, he came to the United States. He worked one year for the Lewiston Manufacturing Company, at Lewiston, Maine, and then spent three months in the Everett Mills, Lawrence, Mass., after which he removed to Walpole, Mass., being overseer of Smith, Grey & Co.'s mills for ten years. In 1881 Mr. MacManus located at Pawtucket, R. I., on his arrival here becoming manager of the Union Wadding Company's bleachery, a position which he continued to hold for three years. At the end of that time he took over the business, leasing the plant, which he conducted under the name of the Home Bleach & Dye Works. On April 15, 1905, he purchased the business, which he ever after continued with great success, his product finding a ready market all over the country. In 1889 Mr. MacManus leased the Valley Falls Dyeing and Bleaching Works, but in February, 1892, the buildings of this plant were destroyed by fire, his loss being about $20,000. One year later his Pawtucket plant burned, and this also occasioned a considerable loss. At this time he leased a portion of the Cranston Print Works, in Cranston, and at a heavy expense converted the property for his own use, but after one year he returned to Pawtucket, and at once rebuilt his plant there, transferring the Valley Falls business to this place. The plant is now one of the largest and best-equipped in New England. Under Mr. MacManus' able and capable management the business steadily and rapidly grew from a small beginning, when only a few hands were necessary, to its present proportions, 125 persons now being employed. The capacity is 25,000 pounds per day. In 1904 the business was incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000, as the Home Bleach & Dye Works, and Mr. MacManus was elected president and treasurer, which offices he held until his death.

About two years before his demise, Mr. MacManus was taken ill, and from that time devoted little or no time to the conduct of his business. He passed away on the morning of Feb. 29, 1908, at his home, No. 870 North Main street, Pawtucket, after serious illness of several weeks. In his long connection with the dyeing and bleaching business Mr. MacManus was widely known throughout the State.

Mr. MacManus was connected with the Masonic organization, holding membership in Union Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., Pawtucket Council, No. 2, R. & S. M., Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T., and Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Providence. He was an honorary member of Tower Post, G. A. R., of Pawtucket, was connected with the Veteran Fireman's Association, the Business Men's Association of Pawtucket, and for several years was a member of the Chess Club of Pawtucket. He was independent on public questions, and never sought office, the only public office he ever held being as member of the grade crossing commission, to which he was appointed when the commission was organized. He was a man of wide sympathies and many charities, but his gifts of such nature were made very quietly.

In August, 1859, Mr. MacManus was married to Mary Hunter, of Glasgow, Scotland, daughter of John Hunter. She died April 22, 1902, in Pawtucket. To this union were born: (1) Hugh, met his death at Lewiston, Maine, where he was drowned at the age of ten years. (2) Peter B., Jr., born Dec. 31, 1871, in Lewiston, Maine, is a graduate of Bryant & Stratton's Business College, of Providence, and now assistant treasurer of the Home Bleach & Dye Works. He married Carrie Powers, of Pawtucket, by whom he has one son, Donald Hunter. They reside at No. 870 North Main street, where Peter B. MacManus, Jr., built the excellent home they occupy, and where he has made his residence for a number of years. (3) Mary, born July 1, 1873, in Walpole, Mass., married William F. Roberts, of Pawtucket, and they have two children, Franklin and Mary Hunter. (4) John, born May 29, 1876, in Walpole, Mass., married Adelaide Davis, and has two children, Mary Elizabeth and Louise Bingham. John MacManus is superintendent of the Utica Willowvale Bleaching Company, of Chadwicks, N. Y., having learned the business at the Lonsdale mill, where he spent three years. He received his preparatory education at the Pawtucket schools, graduating from the Pawtucket high school, and then entered Brown University, of which he is also a graduate.

ELISHA CLARKE PECKHAM, one of the oldest residents of that name in the town of Middletown, where he was born Nov. 23, 1823, is a descendant of one of the oldest families of Newport county.

(1) John Peckham, the founder of the family in America, came from England, and was at Newport in 1638. He was twice married and was the father of twelve children. His son, (II) William Peckham, born in 1647, married Susannah or Elizabeth Clarke, daughter of Joseph Clarke, and lived in Newport, R. I., where he was deputy to the General Assembly in 1696-98. He was ordained pastor of the First Baptist Church of Newport, and is supposed to have been the first Baptist minister ordained on this Continent. His second wife was Phebe Weeden, daughter of William Weeden, and she died in Middletown, in 1745. His children, born to the first marriage, were: William, Samuel, Mary, Phebe and Deborah.

(III) William Peckham (2), son of William, was born Aug. 30, 1675, and engaged in farming all of his life in Middletown, dying Jan. 18, 1764, in his eighty-ninth year. He was admitted a freeman of Newport, R. I., in 1704, and was a member of the First Baptist Church of Newport in 1751. He was deputy to the General Court that met in May, 1707. He was married Jan. 10, 1703, to Mary Tew, born Oct. 12, 1680, daughter of Henry and Dorcas Tew, and she died May 3, 1753, in her seventy-third year. She was the mother of five children: Mary, born Sept. 7, 1704; William; Dorcas, born July 3, 1709; Henry, born Feb. 26, 1711, and Elisha, born May 8, 1716.

(IV) William Peckham (3), son of William (2), was born Sept. 3, 1706, and on June 22, 1736, married Phebe, born Nov. 14, 1717, daughter of James and Mary (Cook) Barker. They resided in Middletown, R. I. Mr. Peckham died April 12, 1784, his wife Nov. 10, 1757. Their children were: William, born Feb. 3, 1737, who died June 10, 1813; Elisha, born in 1738; Peleg, born in 1739; Mary, born in 1741, and Phebe, born in 1743, who married Nov. 8, 1767, Elisha Barker.

(V) Peleg Peckham, son of William (3), was born in 1739, and married Oct. 25, 1772, Elizabeth Smith. Their children of Middletown town record were: Edward Smith, born Aug. 1, 1773; Henry, Dec. 27, 1780; Mary, April 4, 1783; Peleg, Oct. 13, 1785; Elizabeth, Sept. 10, 1788; Elisha, May 5, 1790, and Phebe, June 21, 1792. Peleg Peckham was quite active during the Revolution, giving signals to the American army at Little Compton from Middletown. He suffered much loss on the occupation of Middletown by the British, his exact loss being estimated at 306 pounds, one shilling.

(VI) Elisha Peckham, son of Peleg, was born at Middletown, May 5, 1790, and there grew to manhood. He received a good country school education, and taught school for seventeen years in the schools of Middletown and North Providence, and after giving up teaching made farming his life work. During the war of 1812 he was quite active in aiding the Americans. Later he removed to North Providence, and was keeper of the toll-gate on the Douglas and Centreville turnpikes, where he also conducted the half-way house. When the construction of the Erie canal was undertaken Mr. Peckham removed his family to Providence and himself accepted a position on the construction of the canal, where he spent some time, returning home when his health failed. He died with his family in Providence, Oct. 16, 1839, aged forty-nine years, in the faith of the Christian Church, of which he was an organizer. He was buried in the Middletown cemetery. In politics he was a strong Whig. Mr. Peckham married in Newport, R. I., Elizabeth Dunham Sylvester, born Aug. 29, 1796, daughter of John Sylvester, and she died March 3, 1881, in her eighty-fifth year, and was buried beside her husband. Ten children were born to them: John, born March 18, 1816, died March 19, 1816; Phebe Catherine, born April 16, 1817, died Nov. 24, 1837; Eliza Almy, born Jan. 3, 1819, died March 28, 1822; John Sylvester, born June 14, 1820, resides in Providence; Eliza Almy (2), born May 20, 1822, is residing in New York; Elisha Clarke, born Nov. 23, 1823, is mentioned below; Joseph Andrew, born Aug. 7, 1825, is a harness-maker of Providence; Julia Maria, born Sept. 12, 1827, married James Crosby, of New York, where she died; Harvey Sullings, born Jan. 7, 1829, died Feb. 24, 1834; and William Coe, born Aug. 16, 1831, died March 2, 1883, in Newport.

(VII) Elisha Clarke Peckham attended the district schools of Middletown at North Providence. At the age of thirteen years he started out to work, first as a clerk with Page & Co., in the "Arcade," Providence. There he spent a few months, but preferring out of door life he returned to the home of his childhood, where he hired out as a farmer boy, working in that capacity for some time, until he settled down to farming for himself.

Mr. Peckham was married May 23, 1848, at the homestead of Gideon Peckham, by Dr. J. O. Choles, Baptist minister, to Ardelia Peckham, born May 3, 1830, daughter of the late Gideon Peckham. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Peckham settled down to farming on the homestead of Gideon Peckham, where our subject continued for two years. In 1851, hearing of the gold discovery in California, he, with others, embarked for the gold fields, under the leadership of Captain Harrington, of Westerly, R. I. Others of the party were Robert Allen, Daniel Allen, David Brown and William Brown, of Middletown and Portsmouth. They made their way by land and water as far as St. Joseph, Mo., where they got ox-teams and crossed the Rockies, the journey taking five months and seven days, at the end of which time Mr. Peckham arrived at Bear Valley, Cal. Here he set out to prospect for gold along the Bear river, and met with fair success, remaining two years and four months. Having secured some good claims, he returned home, sailing to Panama, and from there to New York by steamer. After returning home he purchased a farm in Westport, Bristol Co., Mass., consisting of ninety acres, upon which he spent fourteen years in general farming. In 1865 he made a second trip to California to look after his claims, but was not successful in locating them. Returning home, he remained on his farm in Westport until 1868, when he came to Middletown, locating on the farm which he now owns, and which was a part of the Gideon Peckham homestead, and here he has been farming and raising poultry ever since. His operations in poultry raising have been very extensive, as he supplies the leading hotels and families in Newport. At the "Ocean House" he sold in three weeks over $2,100 worth of poultry. He is also a well-known sportsman, and has for years supplied birds and game for hotels, shooting from Maine to Illinois. He is still very active, and takes great pleasure in relating experiences in California in its rough days. In political sentiment Mr. Peckham is a Republican, and has been a justice of the peace for many years. He is a broad-minded, liberal man, well read. His wife, who has been his devoted helpmate for sixty years, is still quite active, and is much devoted to her husband, home and children. Like her husband she is broad-minded in her religious views. They celebrated their Golden Wedding May 23, 1898, at their home, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Peckham as follows: Sarah, born May 11, 1849, died Jan. 5, 1856. Clara, born July 2, 1850, married Robert Jason Grinell, a mason of Middletown, where he died. Phebe Catherine, born Dec. 12, 1851, married William Harvey Taber, a mason of Westport, Mass., now deceased. Eliza Maria, born June 8, 1854, is a nurse and resides at home. Ardelia Ermina, born Feb. 7, 1856, married Charles L. Farnum, a mason of Fall River, Mass. Elisha Angel, born Dec. 25, 1857, a mason of Middletown, married Lilla Pierce. Lewis Eugene, born Nov. 7, 1859, is a mason of Jamestown, R. I. Joseph Andrew, born Dec. 14, 1861, a market gardener of Middletown, married Ella Remembrance Farnum, of Peru, Vt. Cynthia Louise, born June 1, 1864, married George E. Perry, of Long Island. Annie Laurie, born Oct. 16, 1867, married Benjamin W. H. Peckham, a carpenter of Middletown. Elizabeth Amelia, born March 25, 1871, educated at the Middletown public schools and the Providence Normal School, is now a school teacher. Reuben Wallace, born Sept. 12, 1873, a farmer of Middletown, is also an artist, having studied in this country and in Paris; he married Adelaide Greenman. Mr. and Mrs. Peckham have had twelve children, twenty-eight grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren.

WILLIAM H. GOLDSMITH, a well-known business man and inventor, who has resided in Central Falls since 1893, was born in Stockport, N. Y., Nov. 16, 1845, son of Ovid Goldsmith.

Ovid Goldsmith was born about 1806 in Co-pake, N. Y. His mature years were spent in several New York towns, where he followed the trade of carpenter and wheelwright. He died in Valatie, N. Y., in 1865, leaving behind him the memory of a quiet and unostentatious but useful life. By his wife Catherine, daughter of Hiram Oakley, he had eleven children, five of whom are still living.

William H. Goldsmith attended school in Stuyvesant Falls, N. Y., until he was sixteen years old, after which he went into the cotton-mill owned by A. A. Van Allen and worked there for a year. The following year he spent helping his father on the home farm and then, Dec. 7, 1862, enlisted in Company E, 16th N. Y. Heavy Artillery. He served until the close of the Civil war, was in a number of skirmishes, and did garrison duty on the James river, but for quite a long time during his period of service he was in the hospital. On Aug. 7, 1865, he received his honorable discharge.

On resuming work Mr. Goldsmith took a place in the cotton-mill owned by the Chicopee Manufacturing Company, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., where he was promoted three years later to the position of overseer in the carding department. Afterward he had a similar position in mills located in Webster, Mass., and in the America Linen Mills, at Fall River, Mass. Then he spent two years traveling for Riley & Gray, of Boston, Mass., selling cotton machines, next worked some time in mills at Berkeley, R. I., owned by the Berkeley Company, and then, in 1893, settled in Central Falls.

Mr. Goldsmith had always been of an inventive turn and his long experience in mills suggested to him various devices that would mean great improvement in machinery. After locating in Central Falls he became a stockholder in the Atherton Machine Company, of that city, and commenced the manufacture of his now celebrated Goldsmith Thread Extractor, which is used all over the world. His relations with the Atherton Machine Company continued until 1896, when he became superintendent for the Greene & Daniels Company, of Central Falls, with whom he remained two years, being succeeded by Alfred Clarke. In 1895 he organized a company for the manufacture of his drawing roll, which was incorporated under the name of the Pawtucket Metallic Drawing Roll Company. Mr. Goldsmith was made president of the company, and still holds the office, combined with that of treasurer, as the company still has some corporate interests, although it has ceased business operations. He has also made a number of minor inventions. In 1905 Mr. Goldsmith established himself in the real estate and insurance business, although his own private interests command a considerable part of his time.

Of late years Mr. Goldsmith has been quite active in politics, supporting the Republican party. Since 1904 he has been a councilman for Central Falls, and has worked hard for municipal ownership of the electric plant. An enthusiastic Mason, he is a member of Belcher Lodge, Chicopee Falls; the council at Fall River; the chapter at Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Godfrey De Bouillon Commandery, K. T., of Fall River; and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Providence. He is also a member of Richard Borden Post, G. A. R., of Fall River, Mass. In his younger days Mr. Goldsmith was a member of the fire department in Holyoke and Chicopee Falls, and he has never lost his interest in that field, being now a member of the Veterans' Association of Central Falls, Rhode Island.

On June 13, 1869, Mr. Goldsmith married Miss Lillias M. Marchesault, of Holyoke, Mass., a lady of French extraction. They have had children as follows: Lillie M., who married L. G. Thackeray, of Fall River; Mabelle B., who married James Rankin, of Pawtucket; William H., Jr., who married Miss Alice Gabbitt, of Fall River; George H., who married Miss Gertrude Rankin, of Pawtucket; and Phoebe, who married J. L. Lapalm, of Waterbury, Connecticut.

WEAVER (Newport family). The Weavers of Newport and vicinity have been a continuous family there for over two and a half centuries. In the earlier generations were men active and influential in the public affairs of the Colony, one of the sons of the settler serving repeatedly in the Colonial Assembly. Later generations as well have taken a conspicuous part in the business, social and public life of their town and region of country, among whom in the past century have been the late Hon. Benjamin Weaver of Newport, and in turn his sons, Hon. Joseph Briggs and Hon. John Goddard Weaver, of whom all were men of high standing in their community, prominent and influential citizens, often called to positions of honor and trust by their fellow-citizens; and some of their children yet remain in the old home city, representatives of the citizenship thereof to-day.

(I) Clement Weaver is found in the list of freemen of Newport, R. I., 1655. He was jurymen in 1671 and deputy in 1678. He married Mary Freeborn, born in 1627, daughter of William and Mary Freeborn. His death occurred in 1683. His children were: Elizabeth, Clement, William, John and Thomas. Mr. Weaver, it is believed, lived some three miles from Newport, in what is now the town of Middletown, Rhode Island.

(II) Thomas Weaver, son of Clement, married Mary and resided in Newport and Middletown, R. I. He was deputy in 1696, 1710, 1715, 1721, 1722 and 1723. His death occurred in 1753, his will being proved June 18th, of that year. His children were: Thomas, Clement, Mary, Benjamin, Elizabeth, Comfort and John.

(III) Benjamin Weaver, son of Thomas, married Hannah Coggeshall, and was a resident of Newport and Middletown, R. I. His father gave him by will "certain land in Middletown, and buildings where he liveth." Benjamin Weaver died in 1754, and his widow Hannah in 1763. Their children were: Benjamin, born Jan. 18, 1717; Thomas, born May 1, 1718; Hannah, born March 18, 1720; Avis, born May 26, 1725; Mary, born Oct. 10, 1726; and Rebecca, born July 7, 1734.

(IV) Thomas Weaver (2), son of Benjamin, born May 1, 1718, married Ruth Ann Bailey, and their children of Middletown town record were: Joseph, born Nov. 29, 1746; Jacob, born Nov. 22, 1748 (died Aug. 31, 1754); Hannah, born July 26, 1750; Benjamin, born Feb. 3, 1754; and Perry, born May 5, 1755. The father of these died in 1802.

(V) Perry Weaver, son of Thomas (2), married Catherine Goddard, born April 20, 1757. They settled in Newport as early as 1780. They died, Mr. Weaver June 27, 1827, and Mrs. Weaver March 24, 1816.

(VI) Benjamin Weaver (2), son of Perry, born March 4, 1781, in Newport, R. I., married Hannah Spooner Briggs, born in January, 1783, daughter of Joseph Briggs. Their children were: Joseph Briggs, born Nov. 7, 1810; John Goddard, born Nov. 25, 1812; Mary Briggs, who died unmarried at the age of eighty-three years; George Briggs, born in 1820; Catherine Goddard, who died at the age of eighteen years, and Marion, who died in infancy.

Benjamin Weaver was one of the prominent and influential men of Newport. He was a member of the Newport Artillery Company and filled positions of honor and trust. He was a member of the Rhode Island Assembly in 1819, again in 1837-1843, and again in 1845-46, being in the years last mentioned a member of the Senate. He also held various other offices. He was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1834, and a Presidential elector in 1844. His death occurred May 11, 1863. His wife passed away Oct. 9, 1847.

(VII) Joseph Briggs Weaver, son of Benjamin and Hannah Spooner (Briggs) Weaver, born Nov. 7, 1810, in Newport, R. I., died at his home in Newport, Jan. 20, 1873. His wife, Abby Dyer Marsh Weaver, was born July 27, 1811, daughter of Benjamin Marsh, of Newport. They were married June 9, 1833. Mr. Weaver was a prominent and influential citizen of Newport, where for a number of years he was proprietor of the "Atlantic House." He was often elected to positions of trust and honor, serving as a member of the city council, and also represented Newport in the State Assembly. His widow died in Providence, May 6, 1878. Their children were as follows: Benjamin, a resident of Orange, N. J., an expert draftsman; Clement, living in Philadelphia, Pa.; Annie Lawton, Mrs.

(VII) JOHN GODDARD WEAVER, son of Benjamin and Hannah Spooner (Briggs) Weaver, born Nov. 25, 1812, in Newport, R. I., married in 1832, Susan Bliven, daughter of Ray and Susan (James) Bliven, of Newport, and the union was blessed with seven children. Mr. Weaver in boyhood attended the common schools of the town, later attending the Friends' School, at Providence, receiving therein instruction in the common English branches. His father and grandfather before him having been hatters it was but natural for him to drift into the same channel, and so he became a hatter by trade and for a brief time that was his occupation. However, on reaching his majority the state of his health was such that a less sedentary life seemed desirable if not imperative for the enjoyment of health, so that he abandoned work in that line and sought a position which would give him more outdoor employment. The result was that he engaged in the livery business, and as time passed he became well established and widely and favorably known, not only in this but in lines of business akin to it. For a dozen or more years he was one of the proprietors of the Providence Stage and Mail Line, and in 1843, associated with Abram Potter, he engaged in the hotel business, becoming landlord of the "Bellevue House," on Catherine street, at Newport. After a season's experience in the "Bellevue," he in company with others built in 1844 the original "Ocean House," which on Aug. 3, 1845, was destroyed by fire. They immediately rebuilt, completing in 1846 the spacious and attractive structure which for so many years contributed to the comfort and pleasure of the many summer visitors to Newport for their outing season. This old "Ocean House," commodious and well arranged and adapted for the comfort of its many summer patrons, located on Bellevue avenue, imposing in its early days and commanding a magnificent view of the ocean and many of the palatial residences that adorn Bellevue avenue, which is unsurpassed in its beauty, together with its old-time courteous and genial host formed a picture indelibly stamped upon the memory of the thousands who came and went from it through the more than fifty years of its existence. Two of the sons of Mr. Weaver were for many years associated with him in the conduct of this historic Newport hostelry, and succeeded him in its management. This spacious hostelry was destroyed by fire on Sept. 9, 1898.

During the long residence of the senior John G. Weaver in Newport, in his younger and more active life he was for fifteen and more years, from the incorporation of Newport as a city, a member of the board of aldermen and the common council. His early political affiliations were with the Whig party, and, zealous in its political faith, upon the formation of the Republican party he espoused its cause with as much zest, and continued in the belief of its principles. In 1863 and 1864 he was a representative from Newport in the State Assembly, serving with rare good judgment and efficiency in the lower house. In his younger days he was a member of the I. O. O. F.

Mr. Weaver was a Unitarian in his religious belief. He was the president of the board of trustees of the Channing Memorial Church at Newport for a number of years. He died in Newport Aug. 10, 1892, his estimable wife preceding him Nov. 19, 1889.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Weaver were the parents of the following children: (1) Benjamin, who was associated with his father in the hotel business, was a fine horseman, and during the Civil war was a member of the 1st Rhode Island Cavalry. He was unmarried and died in New York Nov. 26, 1863. (2) Joseph Briggs, who was a member of the firm of Kerner & Weaver, proprietors of the "Everett House," New York, died in that city unmarried April 9, 1882. (3) Marian Jones died at the age of sixteen years. (4) Susan died in infancy. (5) John G., Jr., was first associated with his father in the management of the "Ocean House," Newport, and later proprietor of the "Everett House," New York City, where he died Feb. 7, 1894. In 1865 he married Wealthy More Townsend, daughter of Edmund J. Townsend, of Newport. Their son, Benjamin, married Eleanor Whipple, of Newport, and to them has been born one daughter, Eleanor Weaver. (6) Susan James, unmarried, resides in Newport. (7) Hannah Briggs died unmarried in 1894.

In the death of Mr. John G. Weaver, which occurred in 1892, the city of Newport lost one of its best known and most highly respected citizens. Although in the eightieth year of his age he remained active to the last, and was always found a liberal supporter of all good objects for the betterment of his native city. Possessed of an affable, courteous manner, and a generous and kindly disposition, he gained and easily held the respect and esteem of the entire community in which his long and useful life had been spent.

ALFRED SMITH, deceased. To no one citizen does the city of Newport owe a deeper debt of gratitude than to the late Alfred Smith, who passed away there Oct. 26, 1886, and to whose single energies is almost wholly due the development of the spot into its present place among the famous residential cities of the world. Mr. Smith, who was among the best-known men of the State and the wealthiest resident of Newport, was himself a native of the city, born Dec. 6, 1809, the only son of Benjamin Whitehead and Hannah Howard (Peckham) Smith.

On the paternal side Mr. Smith was a lineal descendant of Edward Smith, who accompanied John Clarke in procuring the charter of Rhode Island from King Charles II. Edward Smith and his wife, with Obadiah Holmes, were indicted in October, 1650, for holding meetings from house to house, and for refusing to attend upon the regular place of worship in Rehoboth, Mass. Mr. Smith through his mother descended from Rev. William Peckham, who was one of the early pastors of the first church of Newport.

Alfred Smith in boyhood received such an education as was ordinarily imparted in the common schools of his native town. At an early age he began to learn tailoring with Messrs. Isaac Gould & Son, in Newport, later was employed as a cutter by a house in Providence, and afterward entered the tailoring establishment of Wheeler & Co., then located on Broadway, New York, and regarded in those days as the most fashionable in the country. In the employ of this company Mr. Smith exhibited such skill and energy in his calling that during part of the time mentioned he received a salary of six thousand dollars a year, which, in that day, was an enormous amount. While Mr. Smith was in New York he made trips home and was in the habit of making purchases for the people of Newport, for which he always received a commission. On one of these trips a wealthy New York customer entrusted to him the purchase of some property for him in Newport. This was his initial step in the real estate brokerage business in Newport, and, with the shrewd foresight that was always one of his chief characteristics, Mr. Smith gave up his situation in New York, and coming to Newport about 1840 entered upon the new departure.

At this time Mr. Smith's wants were limited, and as he had acquired by hard work and strict economy a considerable property he at first merely contemplated doing a moderate commission business, and leading a life of comparative leisure, enjoying a garden with flowers and plants, of which he was exceedingly fond. His business gradually increased, from the care of places and from the oversight of planting grounds, to the purchase and sale of real estate on commission and for speculation, until he became eventually one of the most successful real estate brokers in the United States. In his transactions he was remarkably successful. His wants were not much increased by his success in business and he acquired property with rapidity, judiciously caring for his earnings and collecting what was his due.

At length hotel life in Newport began to wane in popularity and real estate and cottages were in demand. Newport people built fine residences which they occupied with their families winters and rented in the summer at good prices. The business was done mostly through Mr. Smith. He foresaw a fortune for himself and pointed out for others fortunes then latent in old fields and pastures. Hundreds of acres of pasture and tillage land were cut into house lots, he planted thousands of trees, and inaugurated and successfully carried forward improvements which greatly enhanced the beauty of the city. Many of his townsmen enjoyed wealth which came because of the increased value of their lands. He laid out all the fashionable driveways of Newport, his greatest work in this direction being the famous driveway of over eleven miles, including Bellevue and Ocean avenues. It was chiefly due to his skill that it was undertaken and completed by the city. To get Ocean avenue open to the public Mr. Smith himself assumed the entire expense of constructing the substantial stone bridge which crosses the creek beyond Bailey's beach. The late Thomas Winans, of Baltimore, an extensive traveler and railroad builder in Russia, pronounced this the finest shore driveway in the world. It affords to visitors a panoramic view of unsurpassed beauty, and is indeed one of the greatest attractions of the far-famed city of health and pleasure. The value of real estate continued to grow and house lots were sold at what a few years before would have been fabulous prices. During five years of the time Mr. Smith was engaged his sales amounted to a million dollars annually and in one year they were one million, eight hundred thousand, the aggregate amount of his sales, from 1850 until 1884, being near twenty-one million dollars, a record probably never equalled up to that time.

Mr. Smith was an excellent business man, and evinced the same care in executing a five dollar commission as he did in one involving five hundred thousand dollars. He was not only exact, but he was prompt. He used to say that he intended "to settle his estate daily." If he owed anyone, he paid what he owed at once; and if anyone owed him, he expected payment as promptly. He was a man of exhaustless energy, industry and perseverance, strong in his friendships, decided in his convictions, and positive in his dislikes. He was ever elert to protect his past patrons by excluding undesirable intending purchasers and therefore his patrons had no fear of an undesirable neighbor. When he refused a would-be customer on this account no amount of money offered for his property could induce him to change his mind or methods, and it was perhaps partly due to this confidence in him that few transactions of real estate for the building of summer residences were made except through Mr. Smith. It may well be doubted if any other man did as much to promote the growth and business prosperity of Newport, and he could well feel proud of the honor of being foremost in making his native city the most noted and exclusive residential city of the world.

In February, 1843, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Ann Maria Talbot, daughter of Capt. Allen Talbot, of Dighton, Mass., a lady who possessed every virtue belonging to her sex. To this union came four children: (1) Howard S. was a resident of Newport, and there died. (2) Ellen married A. Prescott Baker, of Boston. (3) Harriet Fisher married Seth H. Brownell, of Providence. (4) Mary Luther married Thomas A. Lawton and died in Newport. Mrs. Ann Maria (Talbot) Smith died at Newport, Feb. 28, 1884. She was a very superior woman, and of her noble life and character we present an article which appeared in the Newport Mercury of March 1, 1884, over the signature of C. W. W., under the heading, "In Memoriam": "The mournful tolling of the Channing Memorial Chimes, late Thursday evening, was the first intimation to our community that one of its most widely known and deeply beloved members, the donor of the church of these very chimes, had ended her gentle, beneficent life. Mrs. Ann M. Smith, wife of Alfred Smith, was the daughter of Allen Talbot, of Dighton, where she was born on the 15th day of April, 1820, and was thus at the time of her death something less than sixty-four years old. The family removed to Providence, where she was married, and since that event has made her home in Newport.

"Mrs. Smith was a woman of refinement and character, whose life was spent in doing good. Probably no single person in our city was so constantly occupied with deeds of friendliness and charity. Her slight figure and pure, sweet face were a familiar and dear sight to our people as she went about the city at all hours and in all weathers on missions of reconciliation and goodwill. She had a genius for sympathy. Her love for her fellow-beings was as opulent and inexhaustible as the heat of the sun. In time of trouble she was an angel of comfort; she relieved the distressed, and had a word of tenderness for the outcast and the bad. Now that she is gone, hundreds in our midst will feel that they have lost their most sympathizing friend and helper. The humblest of women, she shrank from publicity or even private recognition of her bounty. Nobody ever had a greater power of self-effacement. Her last act on earth was to aid in relieving the distress of the sufferers by flood at the West. A loyal helpmate, a mother blessed in her children's love, she never failed in her home duty, and yet found—because she sought—abundant opportunities for a larger helpfulness to her kind.

"In her death the Channing Memorial Church suffers the most severe loss, next to the late removal of its revered pastor, the Rev. Charles T. Brooks, which it has met within its history. She was the soul of its charities, the center of its hospitalities. A constant church goer, to behold her saintly face at the service was to many of her fellow-worshippers in itself a sermon and a prayer. Her Christianity was after the pattern of the Mount. In thought and word and deed a humble disciple of the great teacher, like him she went about doing good, like him bore the crosses which life brought her with meek resignation, and died leaving an example that we should follow in her steps.

"At her funeral service, which takes place tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the Channing Memorial Church, many of her friends will doubtless be present in person, and all in spirit, to unite in tributes of affection and the utterances of undying hope."

The funeral was one of the most impressive and largely attended ever solemnized in Newport. The church was crowded, and people of every denomination, class and position gathered there to pay their last respects to one who in life had been the friend of all.

SETH H. BROWNELL (deceased), the founder of the wholesale grocery house of Brownell, Field & Co., was one of the best-known of the younger business men of Providence. He was able, genial and popular, thoroughly trained in business principles, and endowed with an energy which, unfortunately, proved too great a strain upon his somewhat delicate constitution. Born in Providence in the year 1849, Mr. Brownell was the son of Stephen and Henrietta (Hunt) Brownell. He received the bulk of his education at the University Grammar School, supplemented by a partial course at Brown University.

Soon after leaving school Mr. Brownell entered a woolen-mill at Olneyville, near Providence, for the purpose of learning the business in all its departments. Later, after he had studied the details of manufacturing, he engaged as a dealer in the raw material, meeting with encouraging success. But becoming convinced that the wholesale grocery trade had a greater future for him, in 1880 he became a member of the firm of Bugbee & Brownell, and the business continued under that name until the retirement of Mr. Bugbee, in 1888. Thereafter until Jan. 1, 1890, the house was known as S. H. Brownell & Co., and upon the date mentioned Frank O. Field was admitted to the partnership, under the style of Brownell, Field & Co., wholesale grocers, which is the present name of the firm.

Mr. Brownell's close and constant application to his business interests, which rapidly developed under his able superintendence, so undermined his health that in 1892 he took a trip to California with the hope of regaining strength. Seemingly much improved, in May he started for home, but on the 22d, while on his return, and having reached Raton, N. Mex., he was taken suddenly with a fatal illness. The remains were brought to Providence and interred in the North burying-ground, his death, under the circumstances, being a severe shock and a poignant grief to his relatives and wide circle of friends.

Mr. Brownell was married at Newport, R. I., to Miss Harriet Fisher Smith, daughter of Alfred and Ann Maria (Talbot) Smith, and they had six children, as follows: Hope (who died in infancy), Alice, Mary, Esther (who died an infant), Alfred and Warren.

Mrs. Brownell, who is a woman of unusual business talents, retains the interest in the establishment of Brownell, Field & Co. She possesses a decidedly artistic temperament and is especially interested in antiques. Among her other studies and collections she has entered a peculiar field, but one in which she probably is supreme. She has now a collection of nearly two thousand old teapots, many of them of great rarity and value, constituting the largest array in America, if not in the world.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WILLIAMS, treasurer of the W. E. Barrett Company, manufacturers of agricultural implements, is a representative of the numerous Williams family, all descended from Roger Williams.

(1) Roger Williams, founder of Rhode Island, was born in 1599, and died in 1683 in Rhode Island. Little is known of his family or of his early life. His parents were James and Alice (Pemberton) Williams, the former being a merchant tailor in London, England, where he died in 1621. Roger was employed in some capacity, it seems, by the great lawyer, Sir Edward Coke, who placed him at the Charterhouse School in 1621, and afterward at Pembroke College, Cambridge, where he took a degree. He was admitted to orders in the Church of England, but soon becoming the friend and companion of John Cotton and Thomas Hooker adopted the most advanced views of the Puritans. He embarked at Bristol, Dec. 1, 1630, in the ship "Lion," and on Feb. 5, 1631, arrived at Boston. He had then been recently married, but of his wife's early history but little is known. Her Christian name was Mary. Mr. Williams was distinguished as an eloquent preacher and ripe scholar, and soon after his arrival in Massachusetts he was invited to the church at Salem, as assistant to the pastor, Mr. Skelton. He was settled April 12, 1631, as assistant or teacher in the Salem church. He had been a disturbing element, and found his position at Salem so uncomfortable that before the end of the summer he sought shelter under more tolerant jurisdiction in the Plymouth Colony. Here he was settled in August, 1631, as assistant to the pastor, Ralph Smith. About this time he was first suspected of the "heresy of Anabaptism." He returned to Salem in 1633, followed by several members of the congregation who had become devotedly attached to him. In 1634 he was settled as pastor of the church in Salem. Here he soon got into trouble by denying the validity of the charter granted in 1629 by Charles I to the Company of Massachusetts Bay. He maintained that the land belonged to the Indians, and not the King of England, who therefore had no right to give it away. The settlers of Massachusetts condemned Mr. Williams and his views. This purely political question was complicated with disputes arising from Mr. Williams's advanced views on toleration. He maintained that "no human power had the right to intermeddle in matters of conscience; and that neither church nor state, neither bishop nor king, may prescribe the smallest iota of religious faith." For this he maintained "man is responsible to God alone." He denounced the law requiring every man to contribute to the support of the church. The ministers with his friends, Cotton and Hooker, at their head sent a committee to Salem to censure him; but he denied the spiritual jurisdiction, and declared his determination "to remove the yoke of soul-oppression." In July, 1635, he was summoned before the General Court to answer to charges of heresy. In October he was ordered to quit the Colony. It was about this time that it was reported many of the followers of Mr. Williams meditated withdrawing from Massachusetts and founding a colony on Narragansett Bay, in which the principle of religious toleration should be strictly upheld. Mr. Williams was granted a tract of land on the Seekonk river by Massasoit, chief of the Pokanoket Indians, who dwelt between the Charles river and Mt. Hope Bay. There in the spring he was joined by friends from Salem, and they began to build; but in order to avoid any complications with the Plymouth Colony they moved to the site of Providence, where they made their first settlement in June, 1636. This territory was granted to Mr. Williams by the Narragansett chiefs Canonicus and Miantonomoh. His influence over these Indians was great, and it soon enabled him to perform for the infant colonies a service that no other man in New England could have undertaken with any hope of success.

In 1643 Mr. Williams went to England and obtained the charter for the Rhode Island and Providence settlements, dated March 14, 1644. Through his executors a treaty was made with the Narragansetts Aug. 4, 1645, which saved New England from the horrors of an Indian war. Mr. Williams again went to England in 1651 on business pertaining to the government of the Island of Rhode Island and Conanicut. He returned to Providence in 1654, and took part in the re-organization of the Colonial government in that year. He was chosen, Sept. 12, 1654, president of the Colony, and held that office until May, 1658. During this time he secured the toleration of the Quakers, who were beginning to come to New England, and on this occasion he was again brought into conflict with the government of Massachusetts.

On July 8, 1663, a new charter was granted

George M. Williams

to Rhode Island under which Benedict Arnold was first governor and Roger Williams one of the assistants. In 1663 Mr. Williams was appointed commissioner for settling the eastern boundary, which had long been the subject of dispute with both Plymouth and Massachusetts. For the next fourteen years he was for most of the time either a representative or an assistant. In 1672 Mr. Williams was engaged in his famous controversy with the Quakers, of whose doctrines and manners he strongly disapproved, though he steadfastly refused to persecute them. He was the author of a number of works. In King Philip's war he accepted a commission as captain of militia, though his advanced age prevented him from taking the field. The home of Mr. Williams was in Providence, and he was there buried. He was "a man of wonderful strength and activity. In private life he was as gentle and kind as he was undaunted and pugnacious in controversy. His opinions and conduct in regard to toleration entitled him to a place among the foremost men of the world in the seventeenth century." The children born to Roger and Mary Williams were: Mary, Freeborn, Providence, Mercy, Daniel and Joseph.

(II) Daniel Williams, born in February, 1642, married Dec. 7, 1676, Rebecca, widow of Nicholas Power, and daughter of Zachariah and Joan (Arnold) Rhodes. Mr. Williams lived in Providence. He was juryman in 1675, 1679, 1685 and 1709. He was surveyor of highways in 1680, and hay warden in 1695 and 1698. He died May 14, 1712. His widow passed away in 1727. Their children were: Mary, Peleg, Roger, Daniel, Patience, Providence and Joseph.

(III) Joseph Williams married Feb. 19, 1716, Sarah, born Jan. 26, 1696, daughter of Valentine and Sarah (Bartlett) Whitman. Mr. Williams lived in Providence and Scituate. It is stated on the records of the latter town that he "was killed by the Spaniards near the Bay of Campeachy." The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Williams were: Benoni, born Nov. 15, 1716; and Goliah, born Sept. 17, 1724.

(IV) Benoni Williams, born Nov. 15, 1716, married in 1739, Abigail Smith, and they resided in Scituate, Mass. Mr. Williams died July 11, 1782. Their children were: Joseph, born Dec. 5, 1739; Benjamin, Feb. 1, 1741; John, Dec. 27, 1742; Sarah, March 24, 1744; Benoni, Nov. 16, 1745; Jeremiah, Oct. 19, 1747; William, July 27, 1749; Oliver, Aug. 5, 1751; and Squire, May 20, 1753.

(V) William Williams, born July 27, 1749, died Sept. 27, 1825. He married Dorcas Shipper, who died July 18, 1817. He was a farmer in Foster, R. I. His children were: Otis, Stephen, Elijah, Thomas and Larned.

(VI) Larned Williams, born Feb. 14, 1810, in Foster, R. I., married Sarah Ann Cranston, born Nov. 22, 1809, died April 7, 1872, daughter of Caleb Cranston, who died Sept. 5, 1829, aged fifty-seven years. Caleb Cranston was a son of Caleb, who died in 1790, aged seventy years; who was a son of John Cranston, who died Oct. 15, 1745, aged eighty-one years; who was a son of Governor Samuel, who died April 26, 1727, aged sixty-eight years; who was a son of Governor John, who died March 12, 1680, aged fifty-five; who was a son of James, chaplain to King Charles I; who was a son of John, Esquire of Bool, England; who was the son of James; who was the son of William, Lord of Cranston of Scotland, who was titled by James VI, of Scotland, Nov. 19, 1609.

Larned Williams spent his early life on the farm in Foster. For thirty years, between the ages of twenty and fifty, he was overseer of the weave shop in the Sprague mills and the Waterman mills. But he always liked farming and at various times bought farms and engaged in that business. His children were: Emily C., born June 12, 1830, at Natick, R. I., married Valours P. Westcott, had two sons, Frank W. and Henry C., and died June 1, 1862; Abby Ann, born May 29, 1832, at Pawtuxet, married Albert G. Henly, and died Jan. 26, 1905; Alfred A., born Nov. 7, 1834, at Providence, is a farmer in Johnston, R. I.; George W. was born at North Providence May 16, 1836; Francisco C., born Jan. 9, 1839, at North Providence, resides in Pawtuxet, and has a son, Frank; Sarah Amanda, born May 28, 1843, died Dec. 19, 1877; William L., born May 16, 1845, died Aug. 11, 1845.

(VII) George Washington Williams, son of Larned, received his education in the public schools, Belding's Classical Institute on Fruit Hill, and Scholfield's Business College in Providence. In 1854 he entered the employ of the seed and agricultural implement firm of Burdick & Barrett, which was established in 1844. In 1862 Mr. Williams bought Mr. Burdick's interest in the business, and the firm name was changed to W. E. Barrett & Co. For a time Amos Fuller and George F. Fuller, manufacturers of plows, were members of the firm. In 1878 Wilbur A. Fisk became a member of the firm. In 1891 W. E. Barrett died, and subsequently the business was incorporated under the name of "The W. E. Barrett Company," with Wilbur A. Fisk, president; George W. Williams, treasurer; and George F. Williams, secretary.

During the days of the old State Fair Mr. Williams was treasurer of the Association. He is a member of What Cheer Lodge; Calvary Commandery; Palestine Temple of the Mystic Shrine, and of the Scottish Rite bodies to the thirty-second degree. He is vice-president of the Warwick Club, a member of the board of governors of the West Side Club, vice president of the Rhode Island Business Men's Association, and treasurer of the Prudence Land Company. He owns some four hundred acres of land on Prudence Island, where for more than twenty-five years he has resided during the summer season.

Mr. Williams has been twice married. On April 16, 1857, he married Amy Ellen Westcott, born June 30, 1836, at New Bedford, Mass., and she died Oct. 26, 1876. Of the children born to this marriage (1) Eugene Burdick, born Jan. 8, 1860, died April 5, 1860. (2) George Francis, born Feb. 16, 1861, married June 20, 1883, Verena Byron Nickerson, and has children: Amey Westcott, born Oct. 6, 1884; Roy Baker, born March 25, 1886; Gladys, born May 12, 1887; Leila Matthews, born Oct. 13, 1890; Curtis Fay, born Aug. 25, 1892; Verena, born Jan. 24, 1901; and Chester Walcott, born June 12, 1902. (3) Leila Anthony, born Feb. 9, 1865, died May 3, 1872. (4) Leon Johnson, born Sept. 24, 1874, married Grace Miner.

On Jan. 30, 1878, Mr. Williams married (second) Elizabeth Darling, who was born Dec. 20, 1852, and who died Dec. 16, 1895. The children of this union were: Edward Brown, born Nov. 27, 1878; Clinton Nickerson, born March 3, 1880; and Ralph Emerson, born Feb. 17, 1882, who married Annie White, of Providence.

HAMMETT. For something like two hundred years the name of Hammett has been identified with the affairs of Newport, and for much of the time through the life of the financial institutions of that city it has been more or less prominently connected with the city's financial affairs. The name does not appear to have been by any means a common one or the family numerous in early New England history. Savage gives some little information of one Thomas Hammett, Hamot or Hammatt, of Scarborough, who owned allegiance to Massachusetts in 1658, and was made a freeman in that year, but renewed his subjection to the King in 1663. He married the widow of John Burrage. In the town records of Newport is recorded the marriage of John Hammett and Sarah Carr, daughter of Gov. Caleb Carr, as having taken place Jan. 10, 1705, the ceremony being performed by Gov. Samuel Cranston. The children of this couple, as of record in the town records of Newport, were: John, born Oct. 10, 1705; Mary; and Thomas, born April 11, 1712. There may have been other children as the town records are often incomplete. John Hammett was admitted a freeman of the Colony of Rhode Island at the May session of the General Assembly, 1708. He was chosen clerk of the Assembly June 28, 1711 (likely of the House, as he is later referred to in that connection), to serve until the next election of general officers. He was succeeded in this position by Nicholas Carr, in May, 1714. On June 30, 1712, he was chosen attorney-general.

Family tradition has it that the ancestor of the Hammett family came from Liverpool, England, and settled at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., whence two brothers came to Newport, R. I., the younger returning to Martha's Vineyard, and the elder settling at Newport. From the latter have descended the Hammetts of Newport and vicinity.

Edward Hammett, great-great-grandfather of Fred M. Hammett, of the Newport Daily News, and Lincoln Hammett, plumber, gas-fitter, electrician of Newport, was born in Newport, April 15, 1704, and there his death occurred May 9, 1775. He married Sarah Waldron, who was born in 1705, and who died in 1777. Their children were: Susannah, born in 1730, died in 1794; Rebecca, who died in 1776, was the wife of a Mr. Hart; Edward, born in 1742, died in 1754; Lydia married Billings Coggeshall; Nathan, born in 1748, died in 1816; and Benjamin, born in 1750, died in 1814.

Benjamin Hammett, son of Edward, born in Newport in 1750, was twice married. His first wife, Elizabeth Viall, was born in 1755, and died in 1803. He married (second) Leah Fairbanks, and he died in 1814. His children, all born to the first marriage, were: Nathan B., born in 1778, married Mary Billings, and died in 1858; Mary, born in 1782, married Rev. John Ferguson; Robert M., born in 1784, married Nancy Risbrough, and died in 1857; Benjamin M., born in 1786, died in 1819; John Viall, born in 1788, was united in marriage with Lois Davenport; Charles E. was born in 1790; Eliza Rebecca, born in 1793, married John Stevens; and Caroline L., born in 1795, died unmarried.

Charles E. Hammett, son of Benjamin, was born in Newport, R. I., July 7, 1790, and his death occurred in the same city in 1878. He was a sea captain in early life, engaged in the coastwise trade. Later he was in the grocery business on Spring street, and for a number of years met with marked success in that line. He was a quiet, unassuming man, and although he was always active in work for his preferred political party—the Republican—he had no ambition to hold public office. He attended the Congregational Church, and his only fraternal connection was with the Newport Marine Society. He married Betsey Wood Davenport, who bore him seven children, as follows: Benjamin Mason, born in 1821, died in 1830; Eliza Rebecca died in 1904, unmarried; Charles E., born June 29, 1823, for over fifty years engaged in the book and stationery business in Newport, married (first) Elizabeth Shaw Reynolds, and (second) Parthenia Griggs Jones, and died Oct. 31, 1902; James Hart is mentioned below; Hannah Davenport, unmarried, died in 1866; Sarah D., born in 1829, died in 1863; and Benjamin Mason (2), who died in 1903, married Mary Tisdale.

James Hart Hammett, son of Charles E., was born in Newport, Feb. 12, 1825, and he died there Dec. 30, 1900. After obtaining a fair education in the public schools of his native city, he became a clerk in the dry goods store of Edward Sherman, in whose employ he remained several years. He afterward engaged in the dry goods business on his own account, his place of business being located on the west side of Thames street, later on the opposite side of the street, where he continued successfully for a period of nearly fifty years. He then retired with a goodly competence, selling out to the firm now known as the Newport Dry Goods Company. Through his long active busy life in that one community he was prominent not only among the business men, but in general citizenship and in social life. His influence was for good in every walk of life. In any measure he espoused or affair with which he was identified he generally led. He was kindly and generously disposed and took pleasure in directing and aiding young men in getting a start in life's journey. The influence of his life was an inspiration to more than one young business man of Newport whose early manhood was passed within its rays. Although never a candidate for office Mr. Hammett was ever alert and deeply interested in all matters and measures affecting the welfare of the community in which he lived. He was a stalwart supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and served efficiently as commissioner of the Newport Asylum for some years. For some time prior to his death he was a trustee of the Savings Bank of Newport. He attended the United Congregational Church. On Oct. 31, 1849, Mr. Hammett was united in marriage with Elizabeth Rogers Tilley, who was born Feb. 26, 1828, daughter of Deacon George and Mary (Lawton) Tilley, of Portsmouth, R. I. In 1899 they celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, but both have since passed away, Mrs. Hammett dying in October, 1900. Six children were born of their marriage, as follows: Sarah Tilley and Louisa Davenport, both unmarried and residing in Newport; Fred Mason, mentioned below; Elizabeth, who died aged three years; Lincoln, mentioned below; and Bessie Wood, who died at the age of twenty.

FRED MASON HAMMETT, son of the late James Hart, was born Oct. 1, 1858, in Newport, and he received his early educational training in the public schools and the Rogers high school of his native city, graduating from the latter in 1876. He then entered Brown University, and was graduated therefrom in 1880 with the degree of A. B. But a short time after he left the University he became associated with the Newport Daily News, and with that paper he has since been identified in various capacities, now being, as he has been for several years past, a member of the editorial staff. His long experience with newspaper work has made him familiar with every detail of modern journalism. He is an energetic and capable news-gatherer, and is a forceful, logical and fluent writer.

In his political faith Mr. Hammett is a staunch Republican, and as such has served his native city as a member of the common council and of the board of aldermen, serving in each for a number of years, and also serving each as president. While president of the aldermanic board he was acting mayor for six weeks. He then became a candidate for mayor of the city, but was defeated by Patrick J. Boyle, the first time the latter was elected mayor of the city. In 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, Mr. Hammett was elected a member of the representative council from the Third ward for the three-year term. Mr. Hammett is a member of Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, which organization he has served as orator, vice regent and regent, the last named in 1907; and of Newport Camp, No. 7677, Modern Woodmen of America. He is a member of the United Congregational Church, and was treasurer of the society for a number of years.

On Feb. 21, 1896, Mr. Hammett was married to Miss Emily Sherman Crandall, daughter of William H. and Mary Elizabeth (Sherman) Crandall. To this union have come six children, namely: Elizabeth Ellery, Mary Sherman, Emily Frances, Catherine Tilley, Ruth Davenport and Fred Mason, Jr. Mr. Hammett is thoroughly progressive and up-to-date, and as a public-spirited citizen is ever interested in every enterprise tending toward the well being of his city and State.

LINCOLN HAMMETT, son of James Hart, was born in Newport, April 18, 1865. He received his education in the public schools and the Rogers high school of his native city, leaving the latter when about eighteen years of age. He then became a clerk for William A. Stedman, superintendent of the Newport Gas Light Company, with whom he remained for three years. He next became interested in electrical work in the employ of Henry W. Cozzens, with whom he remained for nine years, gaining a practical insight into the workings of electrical appliances. In 1889 he became superintendent of the Warren (R. I.) gas works, remaining in that capacity about two years. In 1895 he established himself in business, opening a plumbing and electrical establishment in Newport, in company with J. Fred Wagner, under the firm name of Lincoln Hammett & Co. This partnership continued until 1900 when Mr. Hammett purchased his partner's interest, and he has since conducted the business alone. This includes plumbing, gas fitting, steam and electrical work in all their various branches.

In his politics Mr. Hammett is a Republican, but is independent of party affiliations in local issues. He was connected with the Newport Fire Department for one year while engaged in installing the original still alarm system.

On Feb. 9, 1899, Mr. Hammett was married to Miss Lillie Beaverstalk Westall, of Newport, daughter of Simeon E. and Annie E. (Langley) Westall. One daughter has blessed this union, Bessie Westall.

ARNOLD. The ancestry of Miss Emily L. Arnold, of Cranston, is as follows:

(I) Stephen Arnold, born in Leamington, England, in 1613, married Sarah, daughter of Edward Smith, of Providence.

(II) Elisha Arnold, son of Stephen, born in 1662, died in 1712. He married Susannah Carpenter in 1682.

(III) Elisha Arnold (2), son of Elisha, born in 1694, died in 1759.

(IV) Simeon Arnold, son of Elisha (2), born in 1730, married Harriet Carpenter.

(V) Cyrus Arnold, son of Simeon, married Abigail Warner, and had children: Cyrus, Edmund, John, Sion, Abigail, Sophia and Waity.

(VI) Sion Arnold, son of Cyrus, born in Warwick, R. I., in 1817, married Oct. 4, 1837, Caroline Foster, daughter of Calvin Foster, of Barre, Mass. He was a carpenter by occupation, and lived on the Cyrus Arnold homestead in Warwick, R. I., dying in 1842. His children were: Malfred A., born Aug. 29, 1838, living in Phenix, R. I.; and Emily Louise, born Nov. 8, 1840. After the death of her husband Mrs. Arnold married (second) Henry Holland, by whom she had these children: Elizabeth C., born June 28, 1845, deceased; Francis H., born Aug. 9, 1847; Addie F., born Oct. 9, 1850; and Calvin, born May 4, 1856, deceased.

STEERE. (I) John Steere, born in England in 1634, came to America some time between 1658 and 1660. The name of the founder of the family in America is mentioned in the town record under date of May 9, 1660, when he was granted land on the west side of the Mohassuck river. He took an active part in the public affairs of the town of Providence, and died Aug. 27, 1724. He married Hannah, daughter of the Rev. William Wicken-den, and their children were: John, Sarah, Dinah, Thomas, Jane, Ruth, William, Ann and Samuel.

(II) Samuel Steere, son of John, was born about the year 1673, and married Hannah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Everdon) Field. To this union were born the following children: Urania, a son, Anthony, Jonah, Jeremiah, John and Samuel.

(III) Jonah Steere, son of Samuel, was born in Glocester, R. I., in January, 1720, and married Dec. 10, 1741, Lydia, daughter of John and Lydia (Harding) Whipple. She was born in 1725 and died in 1779, her husband surviving until April 14, 1798. Their children were: Hannah, born April 25, 1743; Samuel, born Jan. 13, 1745; Simeon, born Feb. 26, 1747; Job, born March 21, 1749; Lydia, born Feb. 14, 1751; Anne, born Jan. 21, 1753; Drusilla, born Oct. 10, 1754; Asa, born

Sept. 28, 1757; Abigail, born Oct. 27, 1759; Nicholas, born Jan. 27, 1763, and Nehemiah, born April 27, 1765.

(IV) Deacon Asa Steere, son of Jonah, born Sept. 28, 1757, married Mary Irons, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Waterman) Irons. She was born Oct. 25, 1762. Asa Steere was a deacon of the Baptist Church, and lived about three miles from Harmony, within the town of Glocester. He died Jan. 21, 1835. His children were: Riley, born Jan. 17, 1783; Abigail, born April 15, 1785; Lucinda, born Dec. 22, 1786; Jonah, born Dec. 14, 1788; Lydia, born March 25, 1790; Hannah, born July 20, 1792; Samuel, born Jan. 29, 1795; Whipple, born Oct. 16, 1796; and Job, Nov. 16, 1799.

(V) Jonah Steere, son of Deacon Asa, born in Glocester Dec. 14, 1788, married May 15, 1825, Alice, daughter of Nebediah Smith. She was born Aug. 18, 1788, and died March 5, 1863, aged seventy-four years, he surviving until Sept. 25, 1871, when he passed away aged eighty-two years. He came to Providence about 1824, in which year he was residing with Col. James Burr, with whom he learned the trade of saddlery and harness-making. Mr. Steere was engaged in this trade and in business for himself throughout a long and most useful life, and was also largely interested as a stockholder in the American Screw Company. He was known as a man of sterling integrity and strong mind, became connected with the Beneficent Congregational Church shortly after coming to Providence, during the ministry of Rev. James Wilson, and was a consistent member thereof until his death. His children were: A daughter who died in infancy, and Henry Jonah, born April 11, 1830.

(VI) HENRY JONAH STEERE, son of Jonah, died at his residence, No. 101 Benefit street, Oct. 28, 1898. His death was caused by one of those incurable maladies which afflict human-kind, but his end was as brave and courageous as his life had been helpful and beneficent. Mr. Steere received an excellent training as a boy, first in his home, and then in the various grades of the public schools of Providence, and after graduating with much credit from the high school became engaged as a clerk in the Merchants' Bank. His experience in this field was considerable, as during his younger days his capability and fidelity secured him position and advancement in the Traders', the Grocers' and Producers' Banks, and later on in life he held the position of director in the Northern, Globe National, Fifth National and City Savings Banks, as well as the Providence Washington Insurance Company, and the Economic Insurance Company. His early banking career was terminated by his entrance into the firm of Olney & Metcalf (Stephen T. Olney and Jesse Metcalf), the firm which was then, as it is now, so well known as the Wanskuck Company. The business was then confined, however, to a sample trade in wool. This was gradually enlarged to include the manu-

(IV) Deacon Asa Steere, son of Jonah, born Sept. 28, 1757, married Mary Irons, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Waterman) Irons. She was born Oct. 25, 1762. Asa Steere was a deacon of the Baptist Church, and lived about three miles from Harmony, within the town of Gloucester. He died Jan. 21, 1835. His children were: Riley, born Jan. 17, 1783; Abigail, born April 15, 1785; Lucinda, born Dec. 22, 1786; Jonah, born Dec. 14, 1788; Lydia, born March 25, 1790; Hannah, born July 20, 1792; Samuel, born Jan. 29, 1795; Whipple, born Oct. 16, 1796; and Job, Nov. 10, 1799.

(V) Jonah Steere, son of Deacon Asa, born in Gloucester Dec. 14, 1788, married May 15, 1825, Alice, daughter of Nebediah Smith. She was born Aug. 18, 1788, and died March 5, 1863, aged seventy-four years, he surviving until Sept. 25, 1871, when he passed away aged eighty-two years. STEERE. (I) John Steere, born in England in 1634, came to America some time between 1658 and 1660. He was a member of the family in America for many years, even record under date of May 16, 1670, when he was granted land on the west side of the Narragansett river. He took an active part in the settlement of the town of Providence, and in 1674 he married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary Wickenburg, of England. They had four children, three sons and one daughter. The first son, John, was born about 1675, and died in 1700. The second son, Asa, was born about 1678, and died in 1700. The third son, Stephen, was born about 1681, and died in 1700. The daughter, Abigail, was born about 1684, and died in 1700.

John Steere, born in Gloucester, England, Dec. 10, 1760, married Mary Irons, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Waterman) Irons. She was born Oct. 25, 1762, and died in 1799. Their children were: Riley, born Jan. 17, 1783; Abigail, born April 15, 1785; Lucinda, born Dec. 22, 1786; Jonah, born Dec. 14, 1788; Lydia, born March 25, 1790; Hannah, born July 20, 1792; Samuel, born Jan. 29, 1795; Whipple, born Oct. 16, 1796; and Job, Nov. 10, 1799.

Sept. 28, 1757; Abigail, born Oct. 27, 1759; Nicholas, born Jan. 27, 1763, and Nehemiah, born April 27, 1765.

(IV) Deacon Asa Steere, son of Jonah, born Sept. 28, 1757, married Mary Irons, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Waterman) Irons. She was born Oct. 25, 1762. (VI) HENRY JONAH STEERE, son of Jonah, died at his residence, No. 101 Benefit street, Oct. 28, 1898. His death was caused by one of those incurable maladies which afflict human-kind, but his end was as brave and courageous as his life had been helpful and beneficent. facture of woollen goods, and several mills were operated by the company until 1862, when they established, in the Tenth ward of the city of Providence, what is known now as the Wanskuck Mills. In 1869 Mr. Steere was appointed treasurer of the company, and on the death of Mr. Olney the affairs of the firm passed almost entirely into the hands of Mr. Metcalf and Mr. Steere.

Being naturally of a quiet disposition, and having plenty to attend to within the limits of his business, Mr. Steere never showed any inclination to accept offices of a political nature. Notwithstanding this, he leaves a praiseworthy record behind him of interest in public matters, especially those of a monetary and benevolent character. There are many charities and institutions in the city of Providence which felt the mark of his death. He was a member of the Franklin Society, of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and a trustee of the Rhode Island Hospital. The 1st Light Infantry claimed in him a kindred spirit, for during the Civil war he performed his share of duty as lieutenant at Portsmouth Grove, near the Lowell General Hospital. He accompanied the corps in 1860 when, on the occasion of the dedication of Commodore Perry's monument, they visited Cleveland, Ohio.

Among the many monuments which Mr. Steere left behind him, perhaps the most prominent is the Beneficent Congregational Chapel, which beautiful edifice he constructed as a memorial to his father, at a cost of more than $30,000. The treasuries of this and many other churches not in very affluent circumstances, as well as several charitable institutions, miss the gifts of his generous hand. Mr. Steere was a large property holder, receiving a nucleus for his wealth in real estate which his parents had secured by hard toil and prudent living. His home on Benefit street was one of the city's most beautiful buildings, and contained a wealth of rare paintings, statuary and books.

The Providence Journal, speaking editorially, said of Mr. Steere at the time of his death: "Mr. Henry Steere has left his name associated with many philanthropic gifts, in which the generosity was equaled by the practical judgment which will prolong their usefulness, while the record of his private benefactions was almost as large as that of his public donations."

CLAPP. Many of the name of Clap or Clapp came early to the American colonies, a number settling at Dorchester and vicinity. It is not within the province of this article to follow the history of the Claps of New England, it being the intention to refer only in brief to one branch of the family—that of the lineage and some of the posterity of the late Hon. Bela P. Clapp, long prominent in the town of Westhampton, Mass., several of whose sons settled in Rhode Island, where they arose to positions of prominence and wealth through discoveries in chemistry, success in industrial enterprises, and in lines of science through their adaptation to the uses of man, and as well made for themselves a name and fame in the world at large. Reference is made to Bela Parsons Clapp, Esq., long at the head of the corporation bearing his name at Pawtucket, R. I., with branches in various American and European cities.

(I) Capt. Roger Clap, born at Salcombe Regis, England, April 6, 1609, joined in the Church Colony organized at Plymouth, England, in March, 1629. He came to America in the ship "Mary and John," arriving at Nantasket May 30, 1630. Mr. Clap settled at Dorchester, where he was a proprietor, town officer, etc.; was made a freeman May 14, 1634; was captain of militia; deputy; was authorized to solemnize marriages, etc. Mr. Clap was for twenty-one years captain of the Castle, beginning in 1665. He removed to Boston in 1686.

On Nov. 6, 1633, Capt. Clap was married to Johanna, daughter of Mr. Thomas Ford, a fellow passenger in the "Mary and John." She was born June 8, 1617, in Dorchester, England, and died in January, 1695. Capt. Clap passed away Feb. 2, 1690-91, and was buried in the old burying place in Boston now called the Kings Chapel Burying Ground. Their children were: Samuel, born Aug. 11, 1634; William, born in 1636; Elizabeth, born April 22, 1638; Experience, born in 1640, died the same year; Waitstill, born Aug. 22, 1641, died in 1643; Preserved, born Sept. 23, 1643; Experience, baptized Dec. 21, 1645; Hopestill, born Nov. 6, 1647; Wait, born March 17, 1649; Thanks, born July 1, 1651; Desire, born Oct. 17, 1652; Thomas, born in April, 1655, died in 1670; Unite, born Oct. 16, 1656, died March 20, 1664; and Supply, born Aug. 30, 1660, died March 5, 1685.

From this Capt. Roger and Johanna (Ford) Clap, the lineage of Bela P. Clapp, of Pawtucket, R. I., is through Preserved, Samuel, Ebenezer, Sylvanus and Bela P. Clapp, the latter of whom married Cynthia Carr, and with this branch of the family, the name since the time of Sylvanus has been spelled with an additional "p," as Clapp.

(II) Preserved Clap, son of Roger and Johanna, born Nov. (or Sept.) 23, 1643, married June 4, 1668, Sarah, daughter of Benjamin Newbury, of Windsor, Conn., who went from Dorchester to that place. During the first twenty years or more of his life Mr. Clap lived in Dorchester, Mass., then removed to Northampton, then a far distant settlement in the western limits of the Colony, and comprising with Springfield, the whole inhabited portion of western Massachusetts. Here he soon became one of the leading men in civil and ecclesiastical affairs, and his usefulness continued during a long and active life. "He was," says Blake, "a good instrument and a great blessing to the town of Northampton, where he lived." He was a captain of the town, and their representative in the General Court, and ruling elder in the Church. He died at Northampton, Sept. 20, 1720. His wife died in 1716. Their children were: Sarah, born in 1669; Wait, in 1670; Mary, in 1672; Preserved, April 29, 1675; Samuel, in 1677; Hannah, May 5, 1681; Roger, May 24, 1684; and Thomas, June 16, 1688.

(III) Samuel Clap, son of Preserved, born in 1677, married (first) in 1697, Sarah Barrett. She died Aug. 7, 1703, and he married (second) Sept. 15, 1704, Thankful King. She died Sept. 18, 1705, and he married (third) March 17, 1708, Mary Sheldon, born in 1687, in Northampton, Mass., daughter of John and Hannah Sheldon. Mary was carried into captivity by the Indians to Canada from Deerfield in 1704, and at the time was engaged to be married to Jonathan Strong. He later, supposing her to be dead, married some one else, and on her return she was married to Samuel Clap. She outlived her husband, and when between seventy and eighty years of age was married to her former intended husband, Mr. Strong. Samuel Clap's children were: Mary, born March 13, 1699 (only child of the first marriage); Sarah, Sept. 9, 1705 (only child of second marriage); Samuel, Oct. 30, 1711; Mary, Sept. 21, 1713; Seth, July 14, 1716; Thomas, Nov. 13, 1724; and Ebenezer, Oct. 13, 1726.

(IV) Ebenezer Clap, son of Samuel, born Oct. 13, 1726, married Catherine Catlin, who died April 21, 1798. They lived in Northampton, Mass. Mr. Clap was a soldier in Capt. Phineas Stevens's company in 1746, and was in the fight with the French and Indians at "No. 4," now Charlestown, N. H. He was also in Capt. William Lyman's company, and was out in the service in the month of November, 1747. He died Sept. 22, 1797. The children of Ebenezer and Catherine Clap were: Ebenezer, Esther, Oliver, Dorothy (born March 15, 1757), Elihu (born June 21, 1761), Thomas, Sylvanus (born in 1764), Cephas (born Feb. 17, 1766), William (born Jan. 14, 1767) and John.

(V) Sylvanus Clapp, son of Ebenezer and Catherine (Catlin) Clap, of Northampton, Mass., born in 1764, married Jan. 2, 1792, Charity Pierce, and settled in Westhampton, Mass. Mr. Clapp was a very popular man, and though a Democrat himself, was often chosen by a union of both parties to the State Legislature. He was of a remarkably pleasant and genial disposition, possessed of fine conversational powers, and had the faculty of indulging in story telling to universal acceptance. He died April 14, 1847. The children born to Sylvanus and Charity Clapp were: Bela P., born Nov. 6, 1792; and Ralph, born Aug. 11, 1795.

(VI) Bela P. Clapp, son of Sylvanus and Charity (Pierce) Clapp, born Nov. 6, 1792, married March 2, 1815, Cynthia Carr, of Stonington, Conn. Mr. Clapp acquired his education in the Westfield Academy. He was later for a few years a merchant in Westhampton, but gave up this occupation for that of farming. He was for several years one of the selectmen of his town, and for five or six successive years he represented it in the State Assembly, one of which years his vote was an unanimous one. In 1834 he removed to Chesterfield, and there again engaged in the mercantile business. He was elected a member of the Assembly from Chesterfield. After a few years residence there, he purchased a farm in the town of Williamsburg, again turning his attention to agricultural pursuits. He was chosen a member of the Legislature from this town, but declined to serve. He was often chosen to settle estates and perform the many duties of justice of the peace. He occupied various other positions of honor, trust and responsibility in the different towns in which he lived. His death occurred Sept. 4, 1856, in Williamsburg, Mass. The children born to Bela P. and Cynthia (Carr) Clapp were: Sylvanus, born Nov. 22, 1815; Mary P., born Jan. 15, 1817; Francis, born Sept. 15, 1818; Franklin, born Oct. 17, 1820; Laura Ann, born Oct. 15, 1821; Willard S., born July 18, 1824; Lyman, born July 18, 1827; and Bela Parsons, born May 24, 1830.

(VII) BELA PARSONS CLAPP (2), son of Bela P. and Cynthia (Carr) Clapp, was born May 24, 1830, in the town of Westhampton, Mass., being their eighth child. He was reared in his native town, acquiring his education in the schools of Chesterfield and Williamsburg, Mass. While yet in his teens, deciding upon learning the drug business, he went to Providence, R. I., where for about two years he was employed in the drug store of Samuel Green. From there he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was likewise employed for a period of two years, for the purpose of preparing himself for that calling. He located in the drug business in 1854 in Pawtucket, purchasing there a business at No. 181 Main street, in partnership with his brother Lyman, which they conducted some eight or nine years. In time, having interested himself in a process of extracting ammonia from the ammoniacal waters of gas works, in which he made many experiments, he perfected a method which became widely known under the name of the Clapp process. After that time his active years were given to the business resulting from his investigations and discoveries.

In the year 1889 the business of Mr. Clapp just alluded to was incorporated under the name of the B. P. Clapp Ammonia Co., and at that time Mr. Clapp was chosen general manager of the business of the corporation. The product of this concern in the form of manufactured ammonia has a market and is used the world over. The main works of the company are located on River street, Pawtucket, R. I., with the principal office in New York City; there are branch offices and establishments at Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City, Bayonne, N. J., Washington, D. C., and London, England. It goes without saying, that in this great business, one of real magnitude and large profit, the mind that conceived the bringing about of this form of ammonia and directed the development of the business, was one masterful in a large sense, and Mr. Clapp's achievement great along the line of science.

Mr. Clapp in his political affiliations was a Republican, but further than performing the duties devolving upon a good citizen he was not a politician—not one caring for the emolument of public office. He was a Mason, being a member of Union Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M.; Pawtucket Council, No. 4, R. & S. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; and the Rhode Island Consistory, 32d degree.

Mr. Clapp was a devout member of the First Baptist Church, of Pawtucket, of which he was deacon for several years. Mr. Clapp was an extensive traveler, having been abroad a number of times, and during the memorable earthquake in California in 1906 was a sojourner in that State. After a lingering illness, he died Oct. 11, 1907, in his seventy-eighth year.

In 1856 Mr. Clapp was married to Eliza M. Hopkins, of Coventry, R. I. She died in 1860, leaving no issue, and Mr. Clapp, in 1863, was married to Sarah A. Hopkins, sister of his first wife, also of the town of Coventry, R. I. The marriage was blessed with the following children: (1) Bela Carlyle, who was night editor of the New York Journal of Commerce for several years, resides in New York. (2) Ralph R., born Nov. 22, 1867, now in charge of the branch office of the B. P. Clapp Company, in London, England, married Alice L. Tillinghast, daughter of the late Chief Justice Pardon E. Tillinghast; they have two children, Roger T. and Kenneth J. (3) Edith L., born Jan. 17, 1871, married Lincoln C. Haywood, of Pawtucket, now deceased; they had one daughter, Hortense C. (4) Samuel H., born Sept. 18, 1876, is a graduate of the Yale Scientific School, and is now a chemist located in New Haven, Conn.; he is unmarried.

Mr. Clapp descended in maternal lines from one of the earliest Rhode Island settlers, Robert Carr, of Newport, R. I., who, in 1635, embarked at London, England, in the ship "Elizabeth and Ann," with his younger brother Caleb Carr for the American Colonies. He was admitted an inhabitant of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1639, became an inhabitant of Newport and admitted a freeman in 1641.

WALTER H. SWEET, a well-known business man of Providence and son of the late William Sheldon Sweet, who, for many years was identified with the produce commission business of the same city, is descended from old Rhode Island stock, notably the Sweet, Mathewson, Mowry and Sheldon families.

In direct line Mr. Sweet is descended from John Sweet. John and James Sweet, brothers, were sons of Isaac and Mary Sweet, and were of Welsh birth. There was also a brother Thomas who died leaving no descendants. The father Isaac did not come to America, but the widow with three sons were early emigrants. The Rhode Island Sweets are for the most part descendants of the son John. It is well established that he was a man of some years beyond youth when he came to America, and quite likely that he was or had been married, for his son James is recorded as having been born in 1622, in Wales. John is of record as of Salem, Mass., as early as 1632 when his land there was referred to. He had a grant of land in Providence, R. I., in 1637, in which year he died, and his widow then received a grant. Her Christian name was Mary, and after the death of Mr. Sweet she married a second time and returned to Massachusetts (Salem) where she died in 1681. The children of John and Mary were: (1) John is recorded a resident of Warwick, R. I., as early as 1648. He was a freeman there in 1655, and commissioner in 1660. While a resident of Warwick he seems to have resided a portion of the time at Newport, where his will was made in 1677. (2) James, is mentioned below. (3) Renewed married John Gerardy.

(II) James Sweet, son of John and Mary, was born in 1622, and likely in Wales. He married Mary (baptized May 19, 1633, in St. Thomas Church, Salisbury, England), daughter of John Green, surgeon, who came to New England in 1635. Mr. Sweet was made a freeman in 1655, and settled on Ridge Hill, North Kingstown. He was commissioner in 1643, 1658 and 1659. Their children were: Philip, born July 15, 1655; James, May 28, 1657; Mary, Feb. 2, 1660; Benoni, March 28, 1663; Valentine, Nov. 1, 1667; Jeremiah, Jan. 6, 1669; Renewed, July 16, 1671; and Sylvester, March 1, 1674.

(III) Philip Sweet, son of James, born July 15, 1655, married Elizabeth, and had children as follows: Elizabeth, born April 7, 1712; Philip, Nov. 22, 1713; Pentecost, Oct. 30, 1715; Welthian, Jan. 4, 1717; Benjamin, Nov. 4, 1721; John, Nov. 3, 1723; Valentine, Jan. 12, 1725; James, Aug. 20, 1728; and Samuel, Dec. 7, 1730.

(IV) John Sweet, son of Philip, born Nov. 3, 1723, removed to East Greenwich, R. I., where he married and reared a family of children, among whom were John, Philip and Valentine.

(V) Valentine Sweet, son of John, born Feb. 27, 1758, married Mary, who was born March 2, 1764. With the two brothers above mentioned he settled in Johnston. His children were: Thomas, born Nov. 15, 1782, went to Pascoag, R. I., where he married and had a family: Anne, born Aug. 16, 1785, married Stephen Bellknap; Pardon, born Feb. 2, 1787, never married; Olive, born June 21, 1789, never married; William, born Oct. 4, 1791; Valentine, born Feb. 9, 1800, married and had two children, Chester and Dexter, who became residents of California; Mary, born April 3, 1805, never married.

(VI) William Sweet, son of Valentine, born Oct. 4, 1791, married Sarah Sheldon, and to them were born three children, as follows: Ephraim, who is now (1907) a resident of Johnston, R. I.; William Sheldon; and Sarah Sheldon, who became the wife of George Brown, and is now deceased. William Sweet, the father, was a well-known farmer of Johnston, where he passed all of his life. He was a man of much probity of character, and a credit to his posterity.

(VII) William Sheldon Sweet, son of William and Sarah (Sheldon), was born in the town of Johnston, and his youth was passed in assisting his father with the work on the farm and attending such schools as the community afforded. His first business venture was in the retail milk business (in which he was successful) for a short time. He then entered the employ of John N. Francis in the old city market, Providence, and continued in this capacity until about 1855, when he engaged in the wholesale produce business on his own account. In 1856 he formed a partnership with George W. Arnold, a former fellow workman with the Francis firm, and they engaged in the business established by Mr. Sweet under the firm name of Sweet & Arnold. Their limited capital and resources necessitated a small beginning, and their slow but certain growth was due to the ability, care and industry of the firm members. In 1880 the partnership was terminated by the retirement of Mr. Arnold and the firm then became W. S. Sweet & Son, Walter H. Sweet becoming the junior member. The business continued to prosper and several changes of location were necessitated. In 1904, fourteen years after the death of the senior member of the firm, the business was incorporated, and became William S. Sweet & Son, Incorporated, and under this name the business continues. They are now one of the largest, if not the largest, wholesale dealers in domestic fruits and produce in Rhode Island, and are widely and favorably known in business and commercial circles.

William Sheldon Sweet died April 26, 1890, at his home in Providence and with his passing there went a man and citizen of many sterling qualities. His entire life was inconspicuous to a very great degree since he aspired to no political or social distinction. By his friends and business associates he was much esteemed, and by his family, to whom he was devoted, he was much beloved. As a citizen he was of the honest, law-abiding, progressive type, and any project tending toward the moral or material advancement of the city was certain of his hearty endorsement and assistance. He attended the Church of the Mediator, and was liberal in his support of religious causes. Most domestic in disposition he was deeply attached to his family and found his greatest pleasure in his home associations. His most marked characteristic was his methodical and fixed habits and mode of life, his every movement displaying care, caution, and thoughtful consideration.

Mr. Sweet married Patience O. Mathewson, descended from an old Rhode Island family, mentioned elsewhere in this publication. To them were born: Charlotta A., who married Cushing F. Brown; and Walter Herbert. The widow resides at the family home on Bridgman street, Providence.

(VIII) Walter Herbert Sweet, only son of William Sheldon Sweet, was born in Providence Feb. 1, 1856. He was educated in public and private schools, completed his education with a thorough commercial course, after which he became identified with his father's business. As stated above he became a partner in 1880, since which time he has devoted his energies to the business. Ever since his father's death he has been the head of the firm and has directed its course with ability and success. Mr. Sweet is much like his father in his love of home and retiring disposition, though he possesses many warm friends and is well known throughout the city of Providence, as well as in the portions of country wherein he has traveled on business or pleasure. In his citizenship he has well emulated the example of his father, and he has made every effort to do his full duty.

On Oct. 26, 1881, Mr. Sweet married Eliza F., daughter of David and Abby (Mowry) Leonard, of Smithfield, R. I. Their children are: Charlotta Leonard; William Sheldon; Grace Mathewson, and Walter H., Jr.

SYLVESTER SAYLES, in his lifetime one of the best known citizens and successful business men of the town of Burrillville, and a man respected and esteemed by all who knew him, was a descendant of one of the oldest families in that section of the State. Mr. Sayles was born Sept. 10, 1825, in the house that was his home all his life, the eldest of the children born to Welcome and Maria (Sayles) Sayles. His education was acquired in the district schools and at Smithville Seminary, which later became Lapham Institute, at North Scituate. He was reared to the hard work of the farm, and after the death of his father he bought out the interests of the other heirs. He also bought other land, and as a result of his energy and business sagacity he accumulated a good sized property. His home farm, now occupied by Mrs. Catharine Butler, was the old Sayles homestead, and had been in the family for several generations.

At one time Mr. Sayles did an extensive business in lumbering, getting out heavy timbers for bridge and ship building, but a few years before his death he retired from active work, and passed his time in looking after his private interests, and in placing his money as a money broker. His death occurred Jan. 24, 1901, and his remains were interred in the Acotes Hill cemetery at Chepachet.

In his political faith Mr. Sayles was a stanch Democrat, although in former years he had been a Republican. He always took a deep interest in politics, and was well posted on current events. In 1860 and 1861 he represented the town in the General Assembly. For two or three years he was president of the town council, a member of the town school committee, and he also served as collector of taxes. In his religious belief he was a Universalist, and he was always a generous contributor to religious causes. He was a man of high business principles and his advice was frequently sought, and freely given, and he was often called upon to settle estates. For many years and until a short while previous to his death, he was a director of the Pascoag National Bank. Thoroughly honorable and reliable in all his dealings, he had the merited respect of all men.

Mr. Sayles never married. When she was seven years old he adopted Lizzie Butler, daughter of John and Catharine (Talbot) Butler, and upon her bestowed every care and affection. She attended the Burrillville public schools, and the Rhode Island Normal School, afterward teaching at Wallum Pond, Jackson district, and Bridgeton, all in Burrillville. She married Fred E. Fuller, of Providence. Her musical education was acquired from Providence instructors, and she has developed considerable talent as an artist in both oil and china painting.

BOWEN. The Bowen family of Pawtucket, which is here considered, is a branch of the Rehoboth (Mass.) family, one of the most ancient and honorable of that region. The name appears as early as 1643, when Richard Bowen is mentioned as one of the early settlers there, while three years later the vital records of the town show that he was married to Esther Sutton. An Obediah Bowen also appears as one of the settlers, later residing in Sawnsea, of which he was elected representative. He was an active member of the Baptist communion. According to the Rehoboth records, his children, all born there between 1651 and 1674, were Obediah, Mary, Sarah, Samuel, Joseph, Thomas, Hannah, Lydia, Nancy and Isaac. In Salem, Mass., there lived in 1648 one Thomas Bowen, who afterward lived in New London, Conn., from 1657 to 1660, and in 1663 located at Rehoboth. His wife's name was Elizabeth and in his will are mentioned two sons, Richard and Obediah.

Of the branch immediately under consideration, the great-grandfather of B. Frank Bowen, Jeremy by name, was born in Rehoboth in 174—. He was a farmer with a large and well-cultivated property which absorbed his whole attention. Married in May, 1772, to Zerviah Briggs, of Rehoboth, they had children born as follows: Jeremiah, April 3, 1773; Zenas, July 18, 1775; Zerviah, Aug. 18, 1777; Rebekah, March 13, 1781; David, Feb. 6, 1784; Jonathan Nov. 29, 1786; Polly, Aug. 8, 1789; Obediah, March 21, 1792; Sally, Dec. 26, 1794; and Ruth, April 26, 1798. Jeremy Bowen died in Rehoboth.

Zenas Bowen, son of Jeremy, was born in Dighton, Mass., 1775, and died in Dorchester, Mass., Aug. 17, 1820. A farmer in his early life, he later went into the cotton-mills in Rehoboth and then in Dorchester as a dyer. He was possessed of considerable ability in various mechanical lines, particularly as a shoemaker, and he made and repaired all the shoes for his family. Zenas Bowen married Avis Hale, who was born in Swansea, Mass., Dec. 26, 1780, a daughter of Job and Mary Hale. She died in Dorchester, Nov. 12, 1850, the mother of twelve children, viz.: Zenas, born Aug. 6, 1798; Isaac, June 25, 1800; John H., Feb. 1, 1802; Nathan, Jan. 20, 1804; James and Nancy, twins, June 29, 1806; Mary, July 27, 1809; Matilda, Feb. 9, 1812; Benjamin, March 29, 1814; Rebecca, Aug. 7, 1816; Betsey E., Dec. 19, 1818; and one who died in infancy.

Benjamin Bowen, son of Zenas, was born in Rehoboth in 1814, and was only three years old when his parents moved to Dorchester. Until he was eight he was sent to school, but after his father's death even the children had to work and Benjamin was employed in a cotton factory for two years. At the age of ten he was taken out of the mill to become a "handy boy" to a physician, Dr. Thaxter of Dorchester, who had promised to let him attend school, the boy's great desire. But the doctor did not keep that part of the agreement, and after a few months the arrangement ended. From that time till he was sixteen the boy worked in a paper-mill. In 1830 he went to Randolph, Mass., and learned to "bottom" shoes, remaining there one year and then returning to Dorchester. His desire for an education had never died, and while working at his trade nights and mornings he managed for several years to attend school with considerable regularity. He finally built a shop in Dorchester and kept on with his shoemaking till he was twenty-three years of age.

Shoemaking, however, proved a slow way to independence and in 1837 Mr. Bowen entered upon a two years' apprenticeship to the cabinet-maker's trade, at the end of which he established himself in his new line of work in Dorchester and continued so engaged till 1868, a part of the time having a shop of his own. In March of that year he moved to Central Falls, R. I., bought land, and built a house which was designed to serve both as a residence and a shop for cabinet-making, upholstering and dealing in furniture. He met with satisfactory results financially, but nevertheless in 1873 he gave up the furniture business and with his son James E. formed the grocery firm of B. Bowen & Son, with a location on Central street. After five or six years he sold out to his son and resumed his former occupation, with his shop built in the rear of his residence. In a couple of years he gave up this business again and in 1881 went to work in the shop of the Fales & Jenks Machine Company. After four years there Mr. Bowen met with a severe fall which necessitated his giving up work and from which he never fully recovered. However, he enjoyed life and retained his faculties to a remarkable degree, though he lived to reach his ninety-fourth year. He died April 3, 1907.

Benjamin Bowen was twice married. He was first wedded, Nov. 8, 1838, to Miss Lydia Matilda Lewis, of Griswold, Conn., who was born Aug. 8, 1819, and was a daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lewis) Lewis. Mrs. Bowen died while in Attleboro, Mass., visiting her parents, Aug. 7, 1856, aged thirty-seven years. She left three children, of whom Benjamin Franklin was the oldest, and James Edward the second. A daughter, Lydia Augusta, was born in Dorchester April 8, 1852, and on Feb. 10, 1886, was married to Joseph B. Patterson, of New York. They located in Central Falls. Mr. Patterson, who was a member of the firm of Coombs & Patterson, jewelry manufacturers, died Jan. 13, 1898.

On Aug. 4, 1857, Mr. Bowen married for his second wife Susanna, daughter of Abner and Hannah (Briggs) Crocker, of Tiverton, R. I., later of Attleboro, Mass. Mr. Bowen was a member of the Congregational Church, of Central Falls (to which his widow also belongs), having first united with that denomination in March, 1852. In his political views he was at first a Whig, but supported the Republican party from the time of its formation. In Dorchester he served two terms as school committeeman.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN BOWEN was born in Dorchester April 26, 1840, and was educated there in the public schools. After graduation from the high school, in 1856, he began to learn his father's trade, but finished his apprenticeship in it under Captain Aver. He worked at this till the war broke out and then enlisted, in May, 1861, in Company K, 11th M. V. I., the only Massachusetts regiment that was in the first battle of Bull Run and also finished at Appomattox Court House. Mr. Bowen was under Grant at Spottsylvania Court House, in Joseph Hooker's brigade, and during the engagement was wounded. In all he took part in seventeen battles, and was finally discharged June 24, 1864.

The business career of Mr. Bowen was varied in its character. When he went home from the war he resumed cabinet-making till 1872, the year in which he moved to Central Falls. There he worked one year in the wood department of the Fales & Jenks Machine Company, after which he was in the grocery business with his brother three years. The following three years he was again with Fales & Jenks, and then until 1898 did carpentry work for various contractors, including B. F. Smith & Co. From 1898 till 1901 he ran a shop of his own for repairing, etc. After that time he was occupied chiefly with duties of a public nature. On Feb. 1, 1900, he had been appointed truant officer (and served till his death), while the following year he was made secretary of the school committee. A strong Republican in his views, he had previously served for twenty-one years as census enumerator of Central Falls, or Lincoln, as it was formerly called, and during the Prohibition movement in Rhode Island he acted three years as prosecuting officer of the town. He was also prominent in the G. A. R. circles, being a member of Ballou Post, No. 3, of Central Falls, for twenty-four years. He has served as post commander and for several years prior to his death was department inspector of the State. As a member of the Veteran Fireman's Association he had been recording secretary almost from its organization, and for years belonged to the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Bowen was a member of the Broad Street Baptist Church, in which his wife is still an active worker.

On Aug. 13, 1865, Mr. Bowen was married to Miss Louisa M. Trask, a daughter of Frederick A. and Rhoda (Nightingale) Trask, of Quincy, Mass. After forty years together their union was ended by the death of Mr. Bowen, Aug. 3, 1906. He left three children, Emily F., Fred E. and Charles A., all at home. Mr. Bowen commanded the respect and esteem not only of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, but also of those above him in his official position, who all regarded him as a faithful and efficient servant of the city.

JAMES EDWARD BOWEN, brother of B. F., was over a year younger, born Nov. 5, 1841, in Dedham, Mass. Before he was ready to begin study the family settled in Dorchester and there he attended school till he was about fifteen years old. During the Civil war he enlisted, becoming a private in Company H, 39th M. V. I., Aug. 12, 1862. He was promoted, Feb. 20, 1864, to be first lieutenant, and was appointed to the Army of the Potomac with the 30th Regiment of United States Colored Troops. He was in very active service, and June 3, 1864, was in a cavalry charge at Cold Harbor and received severe injuries from being tramped upon by the horses of the cavalry. He was discharged Sept. 16, 1864, and going to Readville, Mass., was made clerk in the dispensary department of a hospital there. The following year he went to Weymouth, Mass., and clerked in a grocery till 1868, thereby gaining an experience of value to him afterward. For the next two years he was employed by N. D. Whitney & Co., manufacturers of hosiery and knit goods, and the following three as a clerk for S. W. Hayden, of Dorchester.

In 1873, Mr. Bowen went into business on his own account, establishing himself in Central Falls at the corner of Hawes and Central streets, where he had bought out John Newell. He and his father, as mentioned above, were partners for some years, and in 1879, soon after they separated, Mr. James E. Bowen sold out in his turn to George C. Stillman. Removing to Brockton, Mass., as his headquarters, he spent two years as traveling salesman for F. B. Washburn & Co., confectioners, and finally in 1883 returned to Central Falls, where he was deputy town clerk from 1884 to 1889. Mr. Bowen was always a loyal Republican and April 13, 1889, was appointed postmaster by Harrison, continuing in that position till 1894. He was then employed as clerk of the city council, and had the task of transcribing all the records of the town of Lincoln. With the election of President McKinley, Mr. Bowen was again made postmaster, appointed in June, 1898, and as he was re-appointed by Roosevelt, he is still discharging the duties of the office with the efficiency he has displayed from the first. He has established the free delivery of mail in the city and has materially increased the business of the office.

By marriage Mr. Bowen is connected with many of the oldest New England families, notably that of Standish, for Mrs. Bowen is in the eighth generation from Miles Standish. She was Miss Fannie E. Wilbur, daughter of Jason and Sarah Emily (Standish) Wilbur, of Middleboro, and was married to Mr. Bowen, Feb. 5, 1874. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen are both active members of the Broad Street Baptist Church, in which they have worked for twenty-eight years. He was librarian a long time, and Mrs. Bowen was teacher of a class for over eighteen years, and is also prominent in the Foreign Missionary Society. Mr. Bowen belongs to Ballou Post, No. 3, G. A. R., was quartermaster four years, and is now a trustee of that post. He is also a member of Delta Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of Pentalfa Chapter, R. A. M., both of Weymouth.

PHILIP STEVENS. Among a list of the representative citizens and business men of Newport no name would be more familiar to the people of the community than that of Philip Stevens, not only in that he has been actively identified with the business interests of that locality for a number of years, but also from the fact that his ancestors were for many years numbered among the thrifty and energetic business men of the city.

Since the early part of the eighteenth century there have resided in Newport families bearing the name of Stevens or Stephens. One John Stevens, of Newport, was admitted a freeman of the Colony in May, 1708, and John Stevens, Jr., in May, 1726. Thomas Stevens, of Newport, was admitted a freeman of the Colony in May, 1716, and Thomas Stevens, Jr., in April, 1723. George Stevens, of Newport, was admitted a freeman in May, 1731.

Arnold's vital statistics of the State of Rhode Island show that Nicholas and Rachel Stevens had a son, John, born April 30, 1725; that Robert Stevens was married Sept. 21, 1738, to Anstress Elizabeth Wignel, and that their children were: Mary, John, Robert and Robert (2). Then follows the family of William and Ann Stevens and of Thomas and Ann Stevens.

Philip Stevens is a worthy representative of this ancient family, being a descendant of John Stevens, who was an officer in the 3d Company at Newport, having been appointed a lieutenant by the Colonial Assembly in the May session, 1735. From this Lieut. John Stevens, who is no doubt the first John referred to in the foregoing, the lineage of Philip Stevens is through John (2), John (3), Philip and Lysander Stevens.

John Stevens (3), the great-grandfather of Philip Stevens, was a stone-cutter by trade, and for many years operated a stone-yard in Newport, where he was an honored and respected citizen. He married Elizabeth Wood, and to this union were born children as follows: James; John, who married Susan Brightman; William, who married Elizabeth Williams; Philip, mentioned below; and Mary, who married Edward Stanhope.

Philip Stevens, the grandfather of Philip Stevens, of Newport, early in life learned the trade of marble-cutter, an occupation he followed during his life, for many years prior to his death being engaged in the monument business as a member of the well-known firm of P. Stevens & Son. This firm was established in 1709 by John Stevens, and was carried on in the direct line of descent and under the Stevens name for nearly two hundred years, during that time building many of the landmarks of Newport and vicinity. About 1760 they erected the Jewish synagogue on Touro street, which is still standing, a testimonial of the builders' skill and workmanship.

Philip Stevens married Priscilla Bradford Norman, who was in the sixth generation from Gov. William Bradford of the "Mayflower," as follows: (I) Gov. William Bradford; (II) Maj. William Bradford and Alice (Richards); (III) Samuel Bradford and Hannah (Rogers); (IV) Gershom Bradford and Priscilla (Wiswald); (V) Priscilla (Bradford) and Moses Norman; (VI) Priscilla Bradford (Norman) and Philip Stevens.

To Philip and Priscilla Bradford (Norman) Stevens were born children as follows: Susan, who married George Burrows; Lysander; Philip, who married Lucinda Stoddard; Charles, who married Mary Bateman; Edwin, who married Mary Kate Burdick; Sarah, who married Dr. Barrows, of Boston, Mass.; and Mary, who is living in Boston, unmarried.

Lysander Stevens was born Aug. 7, 1822, in Newport, and died in his native city May 24, 1895. In early life he learned the trade of stone and marble cutter under the efficient instructions of his father, and as he grew to manhood became a member of the firm of P. Stevens & Son, continuing successfully in the business until his death. He was a careful and capable business man, and was possessed of marked industry and energy. He was quiet and unostentatious in manner, but withal courteous and affable, consequently winning for himself many stanch friends. In his political views he was a Republican, but he never cared for nor sought public office. He was a member and regular attendant of the Central Baptist Church.

On Oct. 3, 1845, Mr. Stevens was married to Sally Stacy Simmons, daughter of Joseph Simmons, of Newport, and she survives her husband. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stevens: Mary Kate, who resides in Newport, is unmarried; George Burrows, a machinist by trade, who died in April, 1896, aged forty-eight years, married Mrs. Meyers, a widow, and to them were born Caroline Marguerite and Marie Ellen; Philip is mentioned below; Louise Brown married George A. Slade, of Stonington, Conn., where they reside, and they have one son—Allen Chace, who married Grace Chesebrough; Abby Bradford died at the age of nineteen years.

Philip Stevens, son of Lysander and Sally Stacy (Simmons) Stevens, was born Nov. 3, 1850, in Newport, and received his early education in the schools of his native city. At the age of eighteen years he became apprenticed to the stone-cutting trade under his father and grandfather, who were then conducting the business of P. Stevens & Son, and after remaining in their employ for about eight years embarked in business on his own account, continuing therein for about two years as a letterer in marble. In 1878 Mr. Stevens engaged in a grocery, meat and provision business at Nos. 48-50 Thames street, continuing successfully therein until June 1, 1903, when he sold out to White & Gladding. In 1890 Mr. Stevens established the Newport County Creamery Company, whose plant is located in Portsmouth, R. I., and successfully conducted this business until 1897, since which time he has leased the plant. In about 1885 Mr. Stevens engaged in the charcoal, wood and sawdust business, in which he has continued actively engaged to the present time. He was the first to introduce bundled kindling wood in Newport, and his business in this line has greatly increased, the demand for this product being great. In 1890 he also established a novelty store at the junction of Cross, Bridge and Thames streets, which he has conducted to the present time.

Mr. Stevens is a member of Newport Lodge, No. 104, B. P. O. E., is past exalted ruler, and has served as trustee for a number of years. In political belief he is a stalwart Republican, and as such has been elected to serve his native city as alderman for three years; he was a member of the Fire and Burial Ground committees, and chairman of the latter. As a business man Mr. Stevens is enterprising and progressive, and as a citizen bears the respect and esteem of the entire community. He is very popular, his genial, kindly manner winning him many warm friends.

On May 2, 1880, Mr. Stevens was married to Helen Eudora Chace, daughter of Henry C. and Mary A. (Lyon) Chace, of Newport. Mrs. Stevens was born in Middletown, and died in Newport in September, 1904. She was also a descendant of one of New England's early settled families, members of which family were early settlers of Rhode Island.

CARL JURGENS, florist and proprietor of one of the largest bulb-forcing establishments in the world, and for more than thirty years a resident of Newport, R. I., one of that city's substantial and honored citizens, was born in Holstein, Germany, Feb. 26, 1844, son of Wulf and Catherine (Horn) Jurgens, his father also a native of Holstein.

Mr. Jurgens received his literary education in the common schools of Holstein, and at the age of sixteen began to learn the florists' business at Hamburg. After an apprenticeship of five years in that city, he went to Paris and served as a pupil in the Imperial Gardens of the Tuileries. The year which he passed there was of great advantage to him professionally, as the court of Napoleon III was then in its zenith, and no expense was spared in maintaining the great botanical gardens up to the most modern standard. The castle of the Tuileries and garden were afterward destroyed during the reign of the commune. From Paris Mr. Jurgens removed to London, where for two and a half years he was employed in the largest floral establishment of that metropolis. From England he was called home for military service, being placed in the Reserve, as Germany was then expecting war with France; but hostilities did not commence until several years later.

Deciding that the United States offered a better field than any European country, Mr. Jurgens sailed for New York in 1869, landing in that city in October. At first, for about two years, he engaged with a florist of Astoria, Long Island, and then perceived his opportunity for making a departure which was a novelty to the American public. In 1872 he established his business at No. 35 Mill street, Newport, his specialty being the raising of lilies of the valley for the wholesale markets. When he founded this industry he was obliged to make a European trip every summer in order to lay in a supply of bulbs, as at that time the European dealers did not grow them for export. The business has since increased to such proportions that Mr. Jurgens' annual sales now amount to several million lilies of the valley and more than a million other bulbs. He has invented a new process of freezing the roots of the bulbs, and then, by keeping them in cold storage and bringing them into the greenhouses as required, he is enabled to have the lilies in flower throughout the year. The natural season of blossoming is only toward the latter end of May. In conducting the different operations which constitute the complete process he utilizes a special system of water works, and his own ice houses (capacity, 1500 tons) and cold storage buildings.

Henry Jones

In 1881 Mr. Jurgens purchased a tract of land in Middletown, R. I., and added the cultivation of roses to that of lilies of the valley. The greenhouses devoted to the more recent industry now cover three acres of ground and the area has since been greatly increased. The product of the rose houses is sold by agents in wholesale quantities. There are two agencies in New York; the one in Boston covers New England, and that in Philadelphia the entire south. The southern territory is especially large, extending even to Palm Beach, Florida.

Mr. Jurgens now has over fifty men in his employ, and his bulb-forcing establishment is the second largest in the world. His reputation in this field, which he has made peculiarly his own, is certainly international; but it has not been established without many drawbacks. Perhaps his most serious business set-back was occasioned by the great hail-storm which swept through Newport on July 13, 1894. The hail stones were as large as tomatoes or turnips—resembling them also in shape—and broke every glass in his greenhouses, as well as destroying the growing plants. The loss was $22,000, with no insurance.

On April 10, 1877, Carl Jurgens was united in marriage to Miss Louise Kuhn, of Newport, R. I., and three children have blessed this happy union; namely: Katherine, born Feb. 3, 1878, married F. C. Scheerer, of New York, and they have two children; Louise, born Oct. 14, 1879, married Charles H. Parker, of Providence; and Carl, Jr., born April 10, 1882, married Florida Hubbard, of Tampa, Florida. Mr. Jurgens is a self-made man, whose success has been due to his energy, pluck and perseverance, coupled with the natural business acumen with which he is amply endowed. Although having always been interested in the welfare of the city of his adoption, and ever ready to lend his assistance to any project which has had for its object the material betterment of Newport, Mr. Jurgens has never cared for nor sought public recognition, preferring to devote his entire time to his thriving business. He is of a quiet, unpretentious disposition, and very domestic in his habits, although possessing an affable and courteous manner, which has won for him many friends. As a citizen of Newport Mr. Jurgens commands and enjoys the respect and esteem of the entire community.

CHACE (Providence lines—Hon. Benjamin G. Chace). In that part of Rhode Island bordering on the State of Massachusetts, and as well in the latter State, have lived since the early settling of that territory for two hundred and fifty and more years the Chase or Chace family, the earlier spelling of the name being Chase, and for a number of generations, including the present with some, Chace. Those of this locality of the old stock descend from William Chase, those about Swansea, Somerset, Fall River, Pawtucket, Valley Falls and Providence coming through Joseph Chase, a grandson of the settler, and those about Middletown, Newport and vicinity through William Chase, another grandson of this settler, as outlined elsewhere in this work. The earlier generations of this Chase family were Friends, or Quakers as sometimes called, and as well many in later generations have adhered to this faith. Among them have been some noted ministers in that Society. The family, too, has produced some strong, forceful and intellectual characters who have acquired distinction in Rhode Island and elsewhere, and their achievements are noted elsewhere in this work, this article being devoted to the life of the late Hon. Benjamin G. Chace, long a substantial man and citizen of the territory named, including the city of Providence. The Chase lineage from the American ancestor and in chronological order follows:

(I) William Chase, born about 1595, in England, with wife Mary and son William came to America in the ship with Governor Winthrop and his colony in 1630, settling first at Roxbury. He soon became a member of the church of which Rev. John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, was pastor. On Oct. 19, 1630, he applied for freemanship and was admitted a freeman May 14, 1634. In 1637 or thereabouts he became one of the company who made a new settlement at Yarmouth, of which town he was made constable in 1639. He resided at Yarmouth the rest of his life, dying in May, 1659. His widow died the following October. Their children were: William, born about 1622, in England; Mary, born in May, 1637, in Roxbury; and Benjamin, born in 1639, in Yarmouth.

(II) William Chase (2), son of William and Mary, born about 1622, in England, came to America with his parents, married and was a resident of Yarmouth. He died Feb. 27, 1685. His children were: William, Jacob, John, Elizabeth, Abraham, Joseph, Benjamin and Samuel.

(III) Joseph Chase, son of William (2), became a resident of Swansea, Mass. He married Feb. 28, 1694, Sarah, daughter of Sampson and Isabel (Tripp) Sherman. His will was proved Jan. 10, 1725. Their children were: Abigail, born July 6, 1695; Lydia, Oct. 18, 1696; Job, Jan. 21, 1698; Alice, Nov. 16, 1700; Ruth, April 15, 1702; Sampson, April 1, 1704; Isabel, Oct. 6, 1705; Joseph, July 11, 1707; Stephen, March 21, 1709; Sarah; Silas; George; Ebenezer; and Moses.

(IV) Stephen Chase son of Joseph, married (first) 9th month, 11th day, 1728, Esther Buffum; (second) in 1751 Bashaby Stafford; (third) 8th month, 2d day, 1769, Abigail Porter; and (fourth) 1st month, 28th day, 1776, Nancy Bushnell. His children were: Hannah, born 12th month, 22d day, 1729; Sarah, born 9th month, 31st day (sic), 1731; Esther, born 8th month, 5th day, 1733; Susanna, born 11th month, 1st day, 1735; Benjamin, born 11th month, 29th day, 1737; Stephen, born 2d month, 3d day, 1740; Joseph, born 2d month, 13th day, 1742; Asa, born 6th month, 4th day, 1744; Jethro, born 2d month, 13th day, 1746; Peace, born 6th month, 5th day, 1748; and Comfort, born 5th month, 10th day, 1750.

(V) Asa Chase, son of Stephen, born 6th month, 4th day, 1744, married 1st month, 8th day, 1769, Deborah Baker, and their children were: Stephen, born 5th month, 23d day, 1770; Lydia, born 2d month, 24th day, 1773; Asa, born 9th month, 14th day, 1778; Clark, born 11th month, 16th day, 1780; Sarah, born 8th month, 3d day, 1782; and Joseph, born 2d month, 20th day, 1785.

(VI) Clark Chase, son of Asa, born 11th month, 16th day, 1780, married (first) 8th month, 13th day, 1807, Nancy Gibbs, daughter of Benjamin Gibbs, and (second) Patty Gardner. His children were: Leonard, born Jan. 29, 1809; Nancy, born Feb. 2, 1810; Benjamin G., born Feb. 24, 1812; Clark, born Feb. 7, 1814; Lydia, born Aug. 24, 1816; Robey, born Feb. 21, 1819; Patience, born July 27, 1821; Sarah B., born June 6, 1824; and Robey.

(VII) BENJAMIN G. CHACE, son of Clark, was born Feb. 24, 1812, in the town of Somerset, Mass. His father was engaged in the pottery business in that town and the son's boyhood was a practical one, for when not at school he was at work in the pottery. He was an apt pupil, and, as the schools in his locality were not of the best, he himself in his own case was often both scholar and teacher, as outside of the schoolroom he also prosecuted several branches, including surveying. He taught for some time in Swansea and Somerset, Mass. His father was also engaged in agricultural pursuits, and Benjamin G. remained at home until he was of age, assisting his father both in the pottery and on the farm. For the next two years he taught school each winter, following which for several months he was employed in a pottery at Charlestown, Mass. Returning to his native town after his experiences just given, and being then in his twenty-third year, he became associated with his father and his brother, Leonard Chase, in the business of manufacturing fire-brick and stone ware, continuing with them until 1854. From 1854 for a time he was occupied in the business of shipbuilding, in which he was not successful owing to the then general business depression the country over. In his failure he found himself badly involved, due to the absconding of his partner. He went to work and paid every dollar that he owed. Following this until 1857 he was occupied as a journeyman in the manufacture of pottery ware.

From 1857 to 1861 he was occupied for a portion of the time in shipping apples east from the southern shore of Lake Erie, and from 1858 in shipping produce—butter, etc.—to the Fall River, Taunton and Providence markets. In the fall of 1861 he located in Providence, where he engaged in the produce and stone ware business, his location being first on Canal street, whence he removed to what afterward was the site of the business house of Waldron, Wightman & Co. At the time of making this change in location Mr. Chace also made some change in his business; associating with his son, he began the wholesale grocery business under the firm name of B. G. Chace & Son. Mr. William F. Brooks was soon thereafter admitted to the firm as a partner in the business, at which time the firm style became B. G. Chace & Co., which did business for years at Nos. 87 and 89 Dyer street.

Through the close and careful attention given by Mr. Chace to his several lines of business, and through his tact and good management, and as well enterprise, he prospered, accumulating a competence.

During his residence in Providence Mr. Chace took an active interest in the city's welfare, and was prominent in advancing its business interests. In his early life he was active in public affairs, taking considerable interest in politics. He served for several years beginning with 1839 as a member from the town of Somerset, Mass., of the lower branch of the State Assembly. He was also a strong candidate for Congress, but did not allow himself to become the nominee of his party. He was a Democrat in political belief and was the candidate of his party in one campaign for the office of governor of Rhode Island. His name also headed the Democratic city ticket on one occasion as candidate for mayor of Providence, and the day before election a city paper made the following comment on his nomination: "At the polls tomorrow our citizens will have an opportunity to demonstrate the sincerity of the continued complaints they have preferred against the government of our city for a few years past. The Democracy present a candidate for mayor—Benjamin G. Chace—in whom our people have confidence, and whose character is a sufficient guaranty that his administration will be characterized by economy and fidelity. Mr. Chace is a far-seeing, practical business man, and well comprehends and appreciates the commercial and social relations of our community. He is not a politician; has no 'entangling alliances'; but in his nomination the party evinced their recognition of a demand which has long been emphatically preferred—a demand for an upright, straightforward, sterling man, who would represent the entire city, and not a group of favorite connections; who would, at any cost and at all times, act impartially and disinterestedly; who would labor to lighten the burden under which our tax-payers groan, without discouraging such public improvements as our growth will warrant; who, while a Democrat, has a personal record that has secured the endorsement of all his associates; and as a partisan has never been identified with any of the chicanery, instances of which have too often determined our political contests, and given victory to those who have on too many occasions demonstrated their unworthiness."

The Fall River (Mass.) Monitor took advantage of the occasion to speak in the highest terms of Mr. Chace, who had formerly been a citizen of Bristol county, Mass., and said among other things: "Though Mr. Chace has been nominated by the Democracy he is entitled to that honor by being a supporter of Democratic principles in their best sense. He is not a partisan in the ordinary sense of that term, but an advocate of what is right in itself, from whatever source it may arise, or by whatever name it may be called. But above all, Mr. Chace stands pre-eminently as a candidate of the people. He is brought forward by no clique or special family influence, but solely upon his individual merits and qualifications for the office. He is not in a situation to be controlled by family interests, but to seek the best, equal and just interests of all, the welfare, progress and honor of the city, which will do itself honor by the election of so worthy a chief magistrate."

Mr. Chace wrote articles on the Greenback and later on the Silver question. He died April 10, 1896.

In January, 1838, Mr. Chace was married to Eunice Weaver Gibbs, daughter of Capt. Robert Gibbs, of Somerset, Mass., and four children blessed the union, namely: Benjamin Franklin, who married Georgiana Phetteplace, and has one son, Howard P.; Nancy E., who married Francis Pond, and had one daughter, L. Corine (wife of George Bowen); Elizabeth N.; and Geraldine A.

EDMUND DENISON CHESEBRO, M. D., of Providence, is descended in the eighth generation from one of the oldest families of New England, his line of descent from the pioneer progenitor of the family being as follows:

(I) William Chesebrough, who is credited with being the first white man to make what is now Stonington, Conn., his permanent abode, was born in 1594, in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, and was there married Dec. 6, 1620, to Anna Stevenson. In 1630 he came to America with John Winthrop and party, located at Boston, Mass., and soon united there with the First Church. He was admitted a freeman of the Massachusetts Colony in 1631, and afterward took an active part in public affairs. Prior to 1640 he removed to Braintree and that year was deputy to the Massachusetts General Court. Soon thereafter he removed to Rehoboth and took an active and prominent part in organizing that town. Later on he settled at the head of Wequetequock Cove, in the Pawcatuck region in Connecticut, and brought to this locality his entire family, which consisted of his wife Anna and four sons, namely, Samuel, Nathaniel, John and Elisha. Mr. Chesebrough was several times deputy to the General Court at Hartford. He became the possessor of between 2,000 and 3,000 acres of land and a portion of this region of country became known as South Town, in 1658, Mystic in 1665, and Stonington in 1666. He died June 9, 1667. The children of William and Anna Chesebrough were: Maria, Martha, David, Jonathan, Samuel, Andronicus, Junice, Nathaniel, John, Jabez, Elisha and Joseph.

(II) Nathaniel Chesebrough, son of William, was baptized Jan. 28, 1630, in Boston, England, and was married in 1659 to Hannah Dennison, of Stonington, Conn. He served in the Colonial Indian war; was one of the first nine members of the Stonington Church; and died Nov. 22, 1678. His children were: Anna, Sarah, Nathaniel, Bridget, Hannah, Samuel, Margaret and Mary.

(III) Samuel Chesebrough, son of Nathaniel, born Feb. 14, 1674, married Jan. 4, 1699 or 1700, Priscilla Alden, great-granddaughter of John and Priscilla (Mullens) Alden. Their children were: Mary, Priscilla, Nathaniel, Amos, Hannah, Sarah and Prudence.

(IV) Col. Amos Chesebrough, son of Samuel, born Feb. 2, 1700, married Dec. 2, 1729, Desire Williams, both being of Stonington, Conn. Their children were: Amos, Desire, Lydia E., Priscilla, Mary, Samuel, Hannah, John, Joshua and Elizabeth.

(V) Samuel Chesebrough, son of Col. Amos, born April 3, 1743, married April 26, 1772, Mary, daughter of William Slack, both of Stonington. Mr. Chesebrough died Oct. 11, 1825, and his wife Aug. 25, 1814. Their children were: Amos, Abigail, Desire, Elizabeth, Mary, Priscilla and George.

(VI) Amos Chesebro, son of Samuel, born Dec. 14, 1773, married July 20, 1801, Phebe Denison, of Knox, N. Y., and their children, all born in Stonington, Conn., were: Grace, born July 13, 1803, died in 1893; Edmund D., born Aug. 26, 1805, died April 30, 1878; Henry D., born Dec. 5, 1807, married Sophia Williams and died March 16, 1871; Richard C., born March 14, 1810, married Nancy Chesebrough, and died May 25, 1849, at Red Creek, Wayne Co., N. Y.; there was a child born in 1811; Samuel, born Oct. 8, 1814, died aged eighteen years; Amos was born Dec. 22, 1816; Gideon Perry, born Aug. 17, 1823, married Ann Adelia Lisher.

(VII) Amos Chesebro (2), son of Amos, born Dec. 22, 1816, married Sept. 24, 1851, Eunice Denison Gates, born April 23, 1827, daughter of Zebediah and Mercy (Denison) Gates, and their children, all born at Stonington, were: Amos G., born Jan. 14, 1855, married Nellie M. Bartlett; Samuel Z., born Sept. 10, 1858, married Mary J. Bartlett; Mercy Anette, born April 1, 1861, married Austin Everett Potter; Dr. Edmund Denison, born March 26, 1863, married Grace Laura Mansfield.

(VIII) Dr. Edmund Denison Chesbro, son of Amos (2), was educated in the Wequetequock district school, the Stonington high school, A. J. Foster's private school, the Mystic Valley Institute, and graduated from Brown University with the degree of A. B. in 1887, in 1890 receiving the degree of Master of Arts. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Phi Beta Kappa Society. In 1890 he received the degree of M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and in that year began practice in Providence, R. I., where his great success is known to all. Dr. Chesbro is a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society, the Providence Medical Association, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Medicine and the Providence Medical Improvement Club. He is attending physician to the Rhode Island Hospital and to the Children's Department of St. Joseph's Hospital. Socially he is connected with Orpheus Lodge, No. 36, of the Masonic fraternity.

On Nov. 26, 1890, Dr. Chesbro married Grace L. Mansfield, daughter of Jacob Mansfield, of Providence, and to them have been born three children: Mildred, May 30, 1894; Edmund Denison, May 2, 1898 (who died Jan. 8, 1899); and John Alden, Oct. 18, 1899. In 1900 Dr. Chesbro erected the modern home, at Elmwood avenue and Hawthorne street, where he has since resided.

GEORGE OLNEY GORTON, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Providence, now living retired, not only descends from one of the old Rhode Island families, but is connected with many of those that have been prominent in the State's history from its earliest period, including the Potters, Holdens, Remingtons, Mathewsons, Budlongs, Lippitts, Olneys, Watermans, Jacksons, Richmonds, Hawkins, Burlingames, Carders and others.

(I) Samuell Gorton, the progenitor of this family, was born in Gorton, England, about 1592, and came to America in 1636. He was one of the first settlers of Warwick, R. I., and occupies a prominent place in the early history of that town. He is not only referred to as "Samuell Gorton the first settler of Warwick" by writers whose compilations bear evidence of careful and intelligent research, but as a man whose firm stand, at the time, did much toward preventing Rhode Island from becoming a part of Massachusetts. At the time of the raid of the Massachusetts soldiers upon Shawomet, the English flag was raised over Samuell Gorton's house, and is probably the first instance where the flag of England was fired upon in America by a white man. Samuell Gorton's wife was Mary Maplet, and their three sons were Samuell, Benjamin and John. The father died between Nov. 27 and Dec. 10, 1677. Both the first Samuell and his son Samuell spelled their names with two ls.

(II) John Gorton lived and died on land given him by his father. This land is located on the western edge of Gorton's Pond (named for John Gorton) near Apponaug, in the town of Warwick. The Indian name of this pond was Coweset. An ancient house now standing there is said to contain some of the old hewn timbers from John's house. His marriage is the first recorded of a Gorton in Warwick. His wife is spoken of by some writers as Margaret Wheaton, possibly Weeden, yet careful research shows it to have been Weston.

(III) Samuel Gorton, born July 22, 1672, son of John and Margaret (Weston) Gorton, was made a freeman in 1696. He married, May 9, 1695, Elizabeth, daughter of Lieut. "Elizur" Collins (who was a physician of Warwick) and his wife Sarah (Wright). Samuel Gorton died June 5, 1721. His wife Elizabeth, born Nov. 1, 1672, died Sept. 9, 1724.

(IV) William Gorton, youngest son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Collins), was born in Warwick in 1708, and was a well-to-do farmer, as well as a prominent man of his time. He married, Jan. 7, 1731, Mercy Mathewson, daughter of Zachariah and Sarah. William Gorton died Dec. 3, 1789, and his wife Oct. 3, 1788. They were both buried in the old Gorton burial ground on the Buttonwoods road in Warwick. Their graves were marked by rude stones, his bearing the inscription "W. G. 1789" and hers "M. G. 1788." The wife of William Gorton died in her seventy-sixth year, after a few hours' illness. She had been for more than thirty years a noted midwife. She was survived by all her six children, twenty-seven grandchildren, and nineteen great-grandchildren. William Gorton died intestate, and his property was divided between his six children, namely: William, Nathan, Elizabeth (wife of William Wood), Patience, Mercy (wife of Oliver Gardner) and John.

(V) Nathan Gorton, son of William and Mercy (Mathewson), was born Oct. 12, 1734, and when about eighteen years of age apprenticed himself to Preserved Pierce, of East Greenwich, to learn the tailor's trade. He served in the Revolutionary army as private in Capt. Thomas Rice's company, Col. John Waterman's regiment. His wife was Mary Pierce, daughter of Rev. Benjamin and Mary (Budlong) Pierce, and great-granddaughter of Capt. Michael Pierce, the noted Indian fighter, also the great-great-granddaughter of Isabel Potter (wife of Robert), who perished from exposure in the woods at the time of the invasion of Shawomet by the Massachusetts soldiers. Nathan Gorton's home was along the Apponaug road, and was noted for its immense chimney, built of stone and outside the building proper. So great was its size that, when his son Joseph erected his home it was on the opposite side of the chimney, and the one served the two families. The original building was a very ancient one and the sash in the windows was of lead. Nathan Gorton died in 1809, and both he and his wife are buried in the Budlong burial ground in Warwick. His children were: Hulda, Joseph, Elder Benjamin, Nathan and Isabel.

(VI) Joseph Gorton, son of Nathan, was born May 29, 1760, and died in 1814. He first married, Sept. 15, 1781, Cynthia, daughter of William and Deliverance (Stafford) Havens, who was born Oct. 5, 1760. Their children were: (1) Zachary, born Nov. 13, 1782, died May 9, 1783. (2) Nathan, born Aug. 8, 1784, died when young. (3) William, born March 16, 1786, died Jan. 8, 1789. (4) Mercy Mathewson, born Jan. 22, 1788, died Feb. 11, 1866. She married Capt. William Wood, son of Capt. Olney and Rosannah (Remington) Wood. (5) John H. and (6) Caleb, twins, were born March 15, 1789. The latter died in infancy. John H. married and settled in Delaware, where he died. He served in the war of 1812. (7) Joseph, born Sept. 11, 1790, married Sarah, daughter of Whipple and Sarah (Greene) Andrews. (8) Julia, born Dec. 7, 1792, died Nov. 24, 1836; she married, March 22, 1813, James Budlong, of Pawtucket. (9) Oliver and (10) Gardner were born April 23, 1794. Oliver was an expert mechanic, and was employed on the first looms operated in America, by Samuel Slater, of Pawtucket; he married Charlotte Sweatland, and died in 1836. Gardner, who died March 27, 1830, married Zuriel Covill. (11) Caleb, born Feb. 17, 1796, died Aug. 25, 1876. He married Sarah, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Carter) Hall, and she died in 1876, in her eightieth year. (12) Sarah Ann, born July 5, 1797, died in June, 1838; she was the wife of Olney Wood, Jr., son of Capt. Olney and Rosannah (Remington) Wood. The mother of these children, Cynthia (Havens) Gorton, died, and Joseph Gorton married (second) Rosannah Remington, widow of Capt. Olney Wood, Sr. (who was lost at sea). She was born Jan. 13, 1769, and died Feb. 3, 1858. To this second marriage were born: (1) Capt. Nathan, father of George Olney Gorton; and (2) Cynthia Havens, who was born July 28, 1807, married Robinson Place, and died Dec. 30, 1886. The place at the corner of Apponaug and Buttonwoods road, where Joseph Gorton was born and where he died, had been in the possession of his Gorton ancestors from Samuell (I) down. After Joseph Gorton's death the land passed out of the family. The old house was painted red, had lead sash, small panes, and the above-mentioned huge chimney. Joseph Gorton fell dead while in the act of removing a rail in a gateway that his son Nathan might pass through.

(VII) Capt. Nathan Gorton, son of Joseph, was born at the old homestead in Warwick, Nov. 5, 1805. Bereft of his parents at an early age, he was thrown upon his own resources. At the age of sixteen he took to the sea. He brought the first cargo of Pictou coal to Providence. For a number of years, as seaman, mate and captain, he made voyages to many parts of the world, largely in trading trips to the West Indies. Early in the forties he retired from a seafaring life, and engaged in the lumber business in Providence, and also in partnership with Capt. Caleb Harris engaged in the importation of Pictou coal. "Though of late years he had led a retired life, he was at one time one of the most prominent men in the city in both public and private affairs. He was one of the most upright and benevolent of men, and noted for his kind-heartedness." That prominent feature of the first Samuell Gorton was strongly exemplified in him—from the right as he viewed it he could not be swerved. He died in Providence June 4, 1896. His wife, Rhoba, to whom he was married Oct. 22, 1831, was born April 19, 1801, and died Dec. 12, 1889. She was a daughter of Major Samuel and Elizabeth (Richmond) Jackson, a descendant of John Richmond, one of the incorporators of Taunton, Mass., of John Rogers and of John Alden, who both came over in the "Mayflower." To Capt. Nathan Gorton and wife were born six children: Charles, born July 27, 1832, who died Oct. 12, 1836; George Olney; Susan Jackson, born May 9, 1838, who died Feb. 14, 1895 (she married, Nov. 10, 1870, Millens Burt, and had three children: William A.; Leah M. and Louis M.); Charles and Martha, born March 25, 1841, the former deceased, the latter residing in Providence, and Mary E., born March 7, 1844, who died July 3, 1845.

(VIII) George Olney Gorton was born in Providence Jan. 27, 1835, and received his education in the public schools of that city. Upon leaving school he began his business career, first as a clerk in a shoe store, after which he served a three years' apprenticeship with John Bradford, as a chaser of jewelry, which business he followed during his active business life, or until his retirement a few years ago.

Mr. Gorton early manifested much interest in military affairs and in such circles for more than fifty years his name has been prominent both in time of war and in time of peace, as will be seen by his honorable war record and by his active part in local military organizations. He was a charter member of the old Mechanic Rifles (now the Slocum Light Guard), in which he served on the staff as adjutant, and he is a member of the Veteran Association of the same. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted, April 17, 1861, becoming a private in Company C, 1st Rhode Island Detached Militia, Colonel Burnside, which regiment responded to the first call of President Lincoln for troops. He was appointed first sergeant of the Carbineers (sharpshooters), and as such was mustered out with the regiment. With them he took part in the first battle of Bull Run. He was commissioned second lieutenant, 3d Rhode Island Heavy Artillery, promoted to first lieutenant and appointed adjutant; commissioned captain, and tendered the position of major, declining both, having attained the height of his ambition as regimental adjutant. He is a member and ex-president of the 3d Rhode Island Heavy Artillery Veteran Association. For a number of years Adjutant Gorton has been much interested in genealogical and historical research, and is a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society. Since his retirement from active business pursuits he has been able to pursue more closely such work, in which his thoroughness and reliability have become marked characteristics. His genealogical contributions and investigations have been wide and valuable, not only among his own family connections but many others as well. As an authority on the history of the Gorton family he stands foremost, and rendered most valuable service in the compilation of the "Gorton Family Genealogy." In such work, like general historical research, his interest is simply that of one whose remuneration is found in his love for the work. In fact, one of his greatest pleasures is to do for others gratis the valuable service that his thorough knowledge of such matters makes possible.

Adjutant Gorton's disregard for legends or traditions has often been shown, and by his "inclination to dig" he has more than once proved this antipathy in order to be justifiable and intelligent. He possesses many of the prominent characteristics of the family, noticeable among which is his frankness and detest of deceit. Outspoken and never misunderstood, his position is usually well defined. He is firm in his stand for what he considers right, though open to conviction, and ready to yield when in error. Probably no one characteristic is any more prominent in his make-up than that of being thorough in whatever he undertakes. No matter how seemingly unimportant the task, or how humble the position, there is shown that natural desire to do or fill it thoroughly.

For many years Adjutant Gorton has been interested in archaeology. A student and reader, his information is wide and varied. In political and public affairs he manifests the interest of a good citizen, but is not bound by party ties, selecting the candidate and supporting the issues which to him seem most worthy. In national affairs his support is usually given to the Republican party.

Adjutant Gorton married (first) Jan. 21, 1864, Mary M. Carter, daughter of Henry and Maria (Richmond) Carter, of South Boston. She was born Sept. 29, 1836, and died May 14, 1902. Their children were: Henry Foster, born Sept. 18, 1871, died June 12, 1872; Walter Jackson, born Aug. 14, 1873, died Nov. 9, 1895. At the time of the latter's death the Providence Journal said: "A young architect of great ability. * * * An alumnus of the School of Design and Providence Technical School. * * * He was a water colorist of some note. As an evidence of the high regard in which he was held by his employers (Stone, Carpenter & Wilson) their place of business was closed on the occasion of the funeral services, and they and their assistants attended in a body * * * He was a young man of unblemished character and of a very generous nature." The present wife of Adjutant Gorton, to whom he was married June 15, 1905, was Mrs. Lillie (Brayton) Tew, daughter of Samuel H. and Harriet (Drew) Brayton. Mrs. Gorton descends from some of the oldest and most prominent Rhode Island families, including the Braytons, Knights, Gortons and a number of others.

CHARLES GORTON, son of Capt. Nathan and Rhoba (Jackson) Gorton, was born in Providence, where he lived his entire life, and in the public schools of that city received his education. He subsequently became closely associated with many of the most important societies in Providence, and always took a deep interest in city and State history. He started business life as an accountant, having been employed at the Merchants' Bank, at R. E. Hamlin & Co.'s, and at G. and H. Works. He was a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and the Veteran Citizens Historical Association; president of the local Numismatic Society; member of the 1st Light Infantry during the Civil war. Throughout his life he was greatly interested in antiquities and his collection of coins was one of the finest owned by any individual in the city. He also had a number of Indian relics and rare books. Early in life he became a Freemason, and at the time of his death belonged to the Rhode Island Consistory: St. John's Commandery, No. 1; Providence Council, No. 1; Providence Arch Chapter, No. 1, and St. John's Lodge, No. 1. He was the first to propose and the first to avail himself of the by-law creating life membership in Masonry. At his funeral, the officiating clergyman said: "His was an original nature. His self-control amounted nearly to a divine patience. There was an individualism, a strength of character, about the man that verged upon, but never reached, eccentricity, as seen in his life and occupation. Always allowing others to form their own opinions, he still held his own convictions. With his work he found time to make friendships, not many, perhaps, but strong ones." In his latter years he lived retired from active life.

Mr. Gorton married Leah F. Sweet. His death occurred April 15, 1898.

NATHANIEL GREENE CARPENTER. The name of Carpenter is one which runs through the whole history of the State of Rhode Island. It antedates the history of the Revolution over a century and a half and the bearers of the name in this State have won distinction in practically every field of labor and achievement. The family is of English extraction, and the line of descent of Nathaniel Greene, Carpenter follows.

(I) William Carpenter, born in England in 1605, there married Abigail. On coming to America he settled first in Weymouth, where he became a freeman in 1640. He was a representative from Weymouth in 1641 and 1643, and from Rehoboth in 1645, having been admitted an inhabitant of the latter town in 1645. He was also made a freeman in that same year. From 1643 to 1649 he was proprietor and town clerk. He died Feb. 7, 1659, in Rehoboth, Mass., his widow Abigail, dying Feb. 22, 1687. Three of their seven children were born in England, the next three in Weymouth, and the youngest in Rehoboth. They were: John, born about 1628; William, about 1631; Joseph, about 1633; Hanna, April 3, 1640; Abiah and Abigail, twins, born April 9, 1643; and Samuel, born about 1644.

(II) Samuel Carpenter, born about 1644, married, May 25, 1660, Sarah Readaway, of Rehoboth. He was one who bought land in the North Purchase, and also had land allotted to him in the division in 1671. He died Feb. 20, 1682, or 1683, and his widow Sarah remarried. He and Sarah had a family of ten children, all born in Rehoboth, viz.: Samuel, Sept. 15, 1661; Sarah, Jan. 11, 1663-64; Abiah, Feb. 10, 1665-66; James, April 12, 1668; Jacob, Sept. 5, 1670; Jonathan, Dec. 11, 1672; Solomon, Dec. 23, 1677; David, April 17, 1675; Zachariah, July 1, 1680; and Abraham, Sept. 20, 1682.

(III) Solomon Carpenter was born Dec. 23, 1677.

(IV) Daniel Carpenter, son of Solomon, had a son Daniel (2).

(V) Daniel Carpenter (2), born Sept. 8, 1744, married Ruth Cornell, and they resided at Royal Grant, New Brunswick, where he was a farmer. He probably died at New Brunswick, though one account states that he removed to Vermont. His children, all born in North Kingstown, R. I., were: Abigail, born April 2, 1770; Samuel, Dec. 5, 1771; Edward; Nabby; Sarah; Nathaniel; Richard; Susan; Peggy; Polly; George; Asahel; Arnold; Daniel; Benjamin; and William.

(VI) Nathaniel G. Carpenter married in 1805 Martha Tarner, and they were residents of North Kingstown, where he engaged in farming. Their children, all born in North Kingstown, were: Daniel, born Aug. 7, 1805, who married May 25, 1828, Ann Green, and lived in Providence; Samuel, born Jan. 17, 1807, who married, Oct. 25, 1829, Betsy Pierce, and was a farmer of North Kingstown; Christopher G., born Sept. 12, 1809, who married in April, 1840, Hanna Baker; Nathan T., born Oct. 3, 1811; John B., born April 22, 1813, who married Eliza Davis, and lived in Providence; Harriet W., born March 13, 1816, who married Peleg S. Sanford, and resided in Providence; Eliza A., born Feb. 13, 1818, who married Oct. 21, 1849, Daniel H. Brown, of Bristol, R. I.; and Catherine, born May 22, 1823, who married William Taylor, and resides at Wakefield, Rhode Island.

(VII) Nathan T. Carpenter was born in North Kingstown, Oct. 3, 1811. All of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, and he took no active interest in political or public affairs. His wife, whose maiden name was Lydia Gorton, died in 1890, and he followed in 1892, after a long life of unostentatious usefulness to the community in which he lived. He had issue as follows: Daniel E., born in 1843; Nathaniel Greene; William, 1849, unmarried; and Lydia, who married Esquire Spink, of North Kingstown.

(VIII) Nathaniel Greene Carpenter was born in the town of North Kingstown, April 20, 1845. He received a common school education in the town of East Greenwich, and his early days were spent in the usual routine of a farmer's son. At the age of about twenty Mr. Carpenter took up his residence in East Greenwich and was made manager of the "Updike Hotel," previously managed by the owners, the Updike sisters. Upon the death of one of them, Mr. Carpenter assumed the entire control of the hotel, in which he remained for about thirty-two years. He also owned a large grocery store on Main street, and after he finally sold out his interest in the hotel he devoted his time more exclusively to this business, in which he was very successful. On Aug. 1, 1904, he sold his grocery business and has since given his attention to overseeing his varied interests.

On Dec. 15, 1874, Mr. Carpenter married Delia B. Shippee, daughter of Mancie C. and Harriett (Dawley) Shippee. Mr. Carpenter has long been one of the most substantial citizens and prominent business men of his town and vicinity, often serving his town in an official capacity. In the later seventies he became overseer of the poor and remained as such for thirteen consecutive years, filling the position with marked efficiency. He has served eight years as a member of the town council, and he was a member of the General Assembly in 1897, and in May, 1898, he became a representative and served until 1903. He has always been identified with the Republican party. His career has been eminently successful, and shows the just rewards of honesty and unflagging effort. Mrs. Carpenter is a member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Z. HERBERT GARDNER, one of the well-known citizens and substantial farmers of southern Rhode Island in his life time, descended from one of the oldest families in the State. His great-grandfather was

(IV) Ezekiel Gardner, son of Nicholas, born Dec. 6, 1710, in South Kingstown. He removed to Exeter, and reared his family on what has since been known as the Gardner homestead.

(V) Zebulon Gardner, son of Ezekiel, like his father was a tiller of the soil. During the Revolutionary war he gave his services to the cause of his country.

(VI) Robert Gardner, son of Zebulon, occupied, after the death of his father, the homestead property, where with his wife, Mary Tillinghast, of West Greenwich, he spent the closing days of his life in the enjoyment of the fruition of his former toil. His sound judgment, sense of equity and position as magistrate of the local court are preserved in the title of "Judge" Gardner, by which he was then known and is still remembered. He was also a representative in the Legislature from the town of Exeter. He died in 1845. All his children were born in Exeter, viz.: John T., Hannah, Olive, Marcy, Zebulon, Robert, Dorcas, Fannie, Mary A., Catherine and Ann W.

(VII) Zebulon Gardner, the father of Z. Herbert, was born in 1810, and married (first) Sarah Sweet, and (second) Eliza B. Lawton, of Fall River, Mass. To this second marriage were born children as follows: Robert, born March 17, 1842, married Lottie Dukesbury, of Maine, and resided in Oakland, Cal., where she died; Fannie, born in 1844, died in infancy; Mercy T., born in 1846, married William R. Dutemple, and died at Auburn, R. I.; Ann Eliza, born in 1847, married William P. Gardiner, and died April 6, 1880; Z. Herbert, was born June 22, 1849.

In 1850 Zebulon Gardner went to California, his family remaining in Fall River, where his wife died soon afterward. In California he married (third) Mary Reddish, of Missouri, and to them were born two sons: John, who died in youth, and Charles F. Zebulon Gardner was killed on the Sacramento river in a steamboat disaster, Aug. 25, 1861. His son, Charles F. Gardner, has since become one of the leading attorneys of Sacramento.

(VIII) Z. Herbert Gardner was born in Exeter, June 22, 1849. He was but two years old when his mother died, and he was taken into the home of his father's brother, John T. Gardner, and has lived all of his life on the Gardner homestead in Exeter, part of which he inherited from his uncle at the latter's death, in 1878. While in his uncle's home he had such meager chances for an education as the small rural school afforded until old enough to attend the seminary at East Greenwich, after which he attended Scholfield's Commercial College in Providence, from which he was graduated in 1868. On Jan. 30, 1879, he married Martha A. Crandall, who was born Sept. 19, 1858, daughter of Thomas A. and Marv (Sweet) Crandall, of Exeter, and children as follows were born to them: John T., born Aug. 31, 1882, is employed in the Providence post office; Z. Herbert, Jr., born Feb. 4, 1884, conducts the home farm; Thomas C., born Feb. 7, 1887, died Sept. 6, 1895.

On political questions Mr. Gardner was always active with the Republican party, and was frequently chosen to fill positions of trust, serving several years as chairman of the Republican town committee. For three years he was commissioner of the town asylum, and in 1879-80-81 represented Exeter in the Lower House of the State Legislature. In 1883 he was honored by his fellow townsmen with a seat in the State Senate, and was re-elected in 1884. For three of these five terms he was chosen without opposition. In 1884 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in Chicago. Mr. Gardner was an officer in the Exeter Grange of P. of H., and a director in the National Landholders' Bank of Kingston, R. I., at the time of his death.

In agricultural methods he usually preferred to operate in tested rather than in experimental lines, and while engaged exclusively in the arts of agriculture he found that the duties of a husbandman were entirely consistent with a style of living in the home which, in earlier days, would have been considered the height of extravagance. He died of heart failure Jan. 19, 1904. Mr. Gardner was one of the best known men of Exeter, and his funeral, at which Rev. David Taylor officiated, was attended by many of the most prominent men of the State, among them being Governor Brown, Sheriff Cundall, General Brayton, Hon. George Carmichael, and Hon. E. W. Walker. The burial services were conducted by the Grange, and he was interred in a lot in the homestead cemetery.

Mr. Gardner's widow and sons still live on the homestead farm, and enjoy the unstinted esteem and respect of all who know them. Mrs. Gardner is a direct descendant on her mother's side of the famous Capt. Ebenezer Adams, of North Kingstown, whose heroism and valor during the Revolution have been commemorated by a tablet erected to his memory by the D. A. R. Mrs. Gardner is a member of Narragansett Chapter, D. A. R., and State organization of the D. A. R. She is an active is at present treasurer of the State organization of the D. A. R. She is an active member of the local Grange, and since its organization, in 1887, has been its secretary.

JUDE TAYLOR, deceased. In the death of Jude Taylor, which occurred Feb. 7, 1902, the city of Pawtucket, R. I., lost one of its most prominent and influential business men and substantial and highly respected citizens. Mr. Taylor was born March 14, 1822, in Edenfield, Lancashire, England, son of Jude and Elizabeth (Crook) Taylor.

Jude Taylor, Sr., was born in Bury, near Manchester, England, and in his native country learned the trade of cloth finisher. In the early part of the nineteenth century he came to America, and, settling in Bridgeport, Conn., was under contract with manufacturers of woolen goods, as a finisher of broadcloths, flannels and blankets. He was engaged in this capacity for a number of years, and finally settled in Pawtucket. He died in Ware,

Lude Taylor

Mass., at an advanced age. Mr. Taylor married Elizabeth Crook, and to them were born children as follows: John, who died in Providence; James, who died in England; Robert; Mary; Alice, who married John Brierley; Ellen; Peter; Jude, Jr.; Hannah, who married Nathaniel McKinstry; Betsey; and Jonathan, who died in Amesbury, Massachusetts.

Jude Taylor, Jr., came to America when fifteen years of age, landing in Boston, Mass., Aug. 12, 1837. He at once joined his father in Pawtucket, where his first occupation was that of tier-boy in the Dunnell Print Works, in which he remained six months, leaving there to learn engraving for calico printing with Samuel Lord, in the LeFavour building, to the rear of the stone building on North Main street. Here he served a seven years' apprenticeship and then worked four years as a journeyman. In 1849, in partnership with the late Charles Payne, he established himself in business as a calico print engraver under the firm name of Payne & Taylor, in the LeFavour building, but so rapid was the growth of the enterprise that in four years they were obliged to seek larger quarters, removing to Dr. Manchester's building, rear of North Main street, where they remained until 1856. They then removed to their own building on East avenue (then Pleasant street). At that time they employed a large force of engravers and designers. They continued to prosper until new methods superseded the old and the demand for their work ceased. In the meantime, Payne & Taylor became interested in the manufacture of haircloth, and in 1863 purchased the plant of the Boston Hair Cloth Company. This business was continued until March, 1893, when the firm was consolidated with the Pawtucket Hair Cloth Company, of which Mr. Taylor was the president at the time of his death. He was also president of the American Hair Cloth Company at the time of his death, was treasurer of the American Yarn Manufacturing Company, vice-president of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings, and a director of the Pacific National Bank.

Mr. Taylor served on the Pawtucket town council from 1876 to 1881, and always took a deep and active interest in the welfare of his adopted city. He was a member of Samaritan Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., of Pawtucket, for fifty years, and at the time of his death his family were presented engrossed resolutions by that body. Mr. Taylor was a devout member of the Church of the New Jerusalem in Pawtucket. The following resolutions, showing the deep regard in which he was held by those with whom he had business dealings, were passed by the board of trustees of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings:

"At a regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings, held Feb. 18, 1902, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"WHEREAS, it has pleased Providence to remove from our midst our esteemed friend, Jude Taylor, the late vice-president of this institution,

"Resolved, that we, the trustees of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings, desire to and do hereby record our appreciation of the benefit that has resulted to this institution from his long and faithful services as trustee and vice-president, covering a period of over twenty-five years, and we desire also to add our personal testimony to his many excellencies of character, which have endeared him to his associates.

"Resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Institution, and that a copy thereof be transmitted to his family, to whom we hereby tender our sincere sympathy in their affliction.

"CHARLES B. MOIES, Secretary."

On July 4, 1846, Mr. Taylor was united in marriage to Amey Thomas Jenks, daughter of Deacon Talbot and Rosanna (Coffin) Jenks, and to them were born children as follows: Thomas B., who died in infancy; Alice Louisa, who died at the age of three years; Cathleen, who is unmarried and residing in Providence; and Emma Florence, who married James W. Hallett, and had one daughter, Amey Taylor Hallett, now the wife of George E. Foster, of Providence.

The Taylor homestead at No. 186 East avenue, Pawtucket, where Mrs. Taylor still resides, occupies ground which was originally used as a burying ground by the Indians, and a number of Indian relics have been unearthed therefrom.

BOYDEN. The Woonsocket Boyden family, one of distinction there since prior to the middle of the nineteenth century, where have resided three generations of the name, is a branch of the ancient Massachusetts Boyden family, the emigrant ancestor of which was Thomas Boyden, who came from Ipswich, England, in 1634, in the ship "Francis," being at the time twenty-one years of age. He was a member of the church at Scituate in 1635. He afterward went to Watertown, where he lived some years and was made a freeman in 1647. In 1650 he sold land in Watertown, and, says Bond, in his work on Watertown, probably soon after removed to Groton, but returned to Watertown about 1666 and bought property there. This he sold in 1670. His wife Frances died in 1658, and in that same year he married Hannah, widow of Joseph Morse. His children by his first wife were: Thomas, born Sept. 26, 1639; Mary, Oct. 15, 1641; Rebecca, Nov. 1, 1643; Nathaniel, 1651; Jonathan, Feb. 20, 1652; Sarah, Oct. 12, 1654—all after Nathaniel born in Boston.

From this emigrant settler, (I) Thomas Boyden, descended the Sturbridge family of Boydens, the home town of the Woonsocket family, the head of which was the late Rev. John Boyden, whose birthplace was in Sturbridge, though much of whose career was passed in the town of his adoption, where his citizenship was one of honorable distinction and usefulness, and where was reared and partially educated his son, whose career was one of promise, but was cut short in his early death; and here the name is perpetuated through his grandson and namesake, John Richmond Boyden, now one of the active business men of Woonsocket. Of this family more presently. The lineage from the emigrant settler, Thomas Boyden, is through Thomas Boyden (2), Joseph, Lieut. John, Capt. John, John Boyden (3), and Rev. John Boyden. These generations in detail follow in regular order.

(II) Thomas Boyden (2), born Sept. 26, 1639, in Watertown, Mass., married Martha Holden, born Jan. 15, 1646, daughter of Richard and Martha Holden, he a fellow passenger with the senior Thomas Boyden in the ship "Francis." Mr. Boyden died Nov. 15, 1719, in Groton, Mass. His wife died March 18, 1687, in Charlestown. Their children were: Martha, born July 14, 1667, in Watertown; Elizabeth, May 24, 1670; John, Dec. 6, 1672, in Groton; Jonathan, Sept. 27, 1675; Joseph, April 24, 1678; and Benjamin, March 29, 1683.

(III) Joseph Boyden, born April 24, 1678, in Groton, married Rebecca, probably in Groton, as the eldest child was born there. Mr. Boyden removed to that part of Dedham which later was set off as the town of Needham. He was chosen a selectman of Needham in 1721, and also, the same year, one of three custodians of a fund for the use of the town and school. On Aug. 12, 1735, he was a tavern-keeper in Sutton, and in 1736 he and his wife were dismissed from the church in Needham and recommended to the church in Sutton. In 1738 he removed to Worcester, where he had bought a tract of about one hundred acres of land on the south side of the town. This land he conveyed in 1740 to his sons, Daniel and John. This property has since been known as the old Boyden place. He died April 17, 1748. His children were: Joseph, born Oct. 6, 1705 (in Groton); Daniel, March 1, 1708; John, Aug. 16, 1710 (both in Dedham); Nathan, June 3, 1714; Rebecca, March 6, 1716; and John (2), Aug. 7, 1719 (all in Needham).

(IV) Lieut. John Boyden, born Aug. 7, 1719, in Needham, married Elizabeth, daughter of Gershom Rice, Jr., of Worcester. Mr. Boyden settled on a farm located on Pakachoag Hill, which was deeded to him by his father, in August, 1740, and where he remained until his death; it was located in the south part of Worcester, now the town of Auburn. He was a lieutenant in the French and Indian war. He died about 1773, in Auburn. His widow died Jan. 6, 1814, aged eighty-seven years, in Auburn. Their children were: Peter, born July 28, 1745; John, Jan. 7, 1748; Elizabeth, July 30, 1750; Hannah, baptized May 13, 1753; Joseph, baptized Dec. 11, 1757; Dorothy, baptized Aug. 10, 1760; Samuel, baptized March 20, 1763; and Darius, baptized Sept. 1, 1765.

(V) Capt. John Boyden, born Jan. 7, 1748, in Auburn, married Feb. 26, 1776, Abigail (Hobbs) Brown, widow of Elias Brown, of Lincoln. Mr. Boyden was a faithful friend, a Christian and patriot, a soldier of the Revolution. He died Feb. 22, 1795, in Sturbridge, Mass. His children, all born in Sturbridge, were: John, born Jan. 11, 1777; Elizabeth, May 16, 1783; Peter, Oct. 13, 1784; and Abigail, July 31, 1786.

(VI) John Boyden, born Jan. 11, 1777, in Sturbridge, Mass., married Nov. 10, 1796, Elizabeth Adams, of Brookfield, Mass., born Aug. 19, 1774. They died, he, Dec. 3, 1856, in Brookfield, Mass., and she, July 26, 1858. Their children, all born in Sturbridge, were: Caroline, born Aug. 7, 1797; Sally, born Dec. 12, 1799; Charles, born Nov. 8, 1801; Abigail, born Nov. 4, 1803; Maria, born Aug. 4, 1805; an infant, born Jan. 15, 1808, who died the same day; John, born May 14, 1809; Julia, born April 6, 1812; Charlotte, born April 6, 1815; and Loring, born Aug. 24, 1817. John Boyden was a farmer and land owner in Sturbridge, where he made his home. He was an old-line Democrat, and was a firm believer in the doctrine of the Universalist Church.

(VII) Rev. John Boyden, born May 14, 1809, in the town of Sturbridge, Mass., married Sept. 20, 1831, Sarah Church Jacobs, daughter of Richmond and Clarissa Jacobs, of Scituate, Mass. They had one son, John Richmond, born in Dudley, Mass., Aug. 22, 1838.

Rev. Mr. Boyden passed his youth upon the home farm with his parents, alternating between assisting with the farm work in season and attendance at the neighborhood schools. He furthered his education in the academies at Sturbridge, Brookfield and Dudley, Mass. For a period through the winters following the termination of his school days he himself taught school until his convictions led him into the Christian ministry. He prepared for his calling under the direction of the Rev. Hosea Ballou, of Boston. He began his ministry as pastor of a church at Berlin, Conn., and following a pastorate there of three years he was similarly identified with a church at Dudley, Mass., for five years. In 1840 he became pastor of the church at Woonsocket, which was the field of his labors through the remaining years of his life.

The early labors of Rev. Mr. Boyden were mostly of a polemical character, were various and widely bestowed, he often preaching eight or ten times a week. It is said that he was possessed of that fineness of nature, delicacy of sentiment, justness of apprehension and sound common sense which secured a perpetual inspiration, and wherever he went he exerted an influence for good. The advocate of universal interpretations of the Scriptures Rev. Mr. Boyden often met with bitter opposition, but never did equanimity or magnanimity fail him. It is said that men whom his reasoning, which was always clear and natural, could not convince were often persuaded by the sweetness of his temper. He took an active interest in the various reformatory movements of the day. He was among the foremost to advocate total abstinence and prohibition. The cause of anti-slavery enlisted all his sympathies, and to its advancement he devoted his utmost energy. He recognized the injustice done to women by restricting the sphere of her activity, and in the small remuneration paid for her labors, and persuasively pleaded for her relief.

Mr. Boyden rendered much valuable service to his adopted community and to the State. He several times represented the town of Woonsocket in the lower house of the General Assembly. He was one of the original members of the Rhode Island Universalist Convention, and for years served as its honored president. For some twenty-five or more years he was superintendent and member of the school committee, rendering most important service. The town of Woonsocket was highly favored in having so judicious and efficient a servant in this relation, and at the close of his long connection with the school system the schools of Woonsocket compared favorably with the best in Rhode Island.

In his own denomination the name of Rev. Boyden was revered, and he was respected by other branches of the Christian Church, and more than that he was beloved by all who knew him. He died Sept. 28, 1869, at his home in Woonsocket.

(VIII) JOHN RICHMOND BOYDEN, son of Rev. John, born Aug. 22, 1838, in Dudley, Mass., married, in 1862, A. Olivia, daughter of the late Hon. Willis Cook, of Woonsocket, mentioned in full elsewhere in this work. To this marriage was born one son, John Richmond (2).

Mr. Boyden acquired his education in the Woonsocket high school, from which he was graduated, and at Tufts College. He then engaged in educational work, teaching school both in Woonsocket and at Great Falls, N. H. Subsequently he entered the employ of the Woonsocket Rubber Company, having been chosen treasurer of that corporation, a relation he sustained to it most satisfactorily until the time of his death, in 1867. Mrs. Boyden still resides at her home in Woonsocket with her son, John Richmond (2). She is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, and is well known socially. Her religious faith is that of the Universalist Church.

(IX) JOHN R. BOYDEN (2), only son of the late John Richmond Boyden, was born in the city of Woonsocket, R. I., in 1867. He received his education in the public and high schools of that city, and at the age of nineteen he became agent for the estate of his late grandfather, Hon. Willis Cook, and for the past twenty-one years he has faithfully performed the duties of that position of trust and responsibility. In 1905 he became clerk in the People's Savings Bank, at Woonsocket, of which his venerable uncle, Reuben G. Randall, is secretary and treasurer. Mr. Boyden is a member of the board of directors and assistant treasurer. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and he has always supported the men and measures of that party. In 1905 he was elected a member of the city council, representing the Fourth ward, and he is still serving as a member of that body, taking an active and public-spirited interest in the city's progress and welfare. He is a member of the Woonsocket Business Men's Association, and is a member of its executive committee. His fraternal connections are with Morning Star Lodge, A. F. & A. M., the Chapter and the Council. He is a member of the Universalist Society (of which he is president), in which his grandfather was such a leading light, and he, too, is active in its work, bearing with honor and distinction his proud family name.

Mr. Boyden married Miss Gertrude Warfield, who was born in Woonsocket, daughter of Aaron B. Warfield, mentioned in full elsewhere. Mrs. Boyden is a descendant of some of New England's oldest and best families—the Warfields, Chilsons, Burdens, etc.

(VII) LORING BOYDEN, youngest brother of the late Rev. John Boyden, and one of Woonsocket's oldest citizens, was born Aug. 24, 1817, at Sturbridge. He was educated in his native town and at Spencer, Mass., and Dudley Academy. He taught his first school at Charlestown, during the winter season, and he worked at farm work during the remainder of the year. Later he came to Woonsocket, and for ten years taught in the public schools. At the end of that time he became interested in the grocery business with the late Edwin Ballou Miller, at the Social Store, which business was conducted for eighteen years. After he resigned his position there he became assistant librarian at the Harris Library, remaining twelve years, when he retired from active work and has lived quietly ever since. He is quite active for his years, and takes a deep interest in everything pertaining to Woonsocket. He is honored and respected by all. In his political principle he is a Republican, but he has never aspired to official position. He is strictly temperate in his habits. Like all his people he is a Universalist.

On Sept. 5, 1845, Loring Boyden married, in New York City, Elizabeth C. Arnold, who was born in Cumberland, R. I., Aug. 7, 1828, daughter of Joseph P. and Rosina (Jencks) Arnold, and granddaughter of Joseph and Patience (Wilbur) Arnold and of Judge George and Sarah (Aldrich) Jencks. Mrs. Boyden is a lady of refined taste, and though now in her eightieth year is quite active and devoted to her home. This happy couple, to whom have been given sixty-two years of wedded life, have many, many friends. The four children who blessed their union all died young, namely: Charles, born Feb. 11, 1847, died May 25, 1848; Madora, born Dec. 28, 1849, died Feb. 11, 1863; Clara Stenton, born May 11, 1856, died Dec. 5, 1864; and Emily S., born May 29, 1862, died June 16, 1862.

EDWARD PETERSON MARSH. In the death of the gentleman whose name introduces this article there passed away one of the substantial and honored citizens of Newport, which city was the place of his birth and where the greater part of his active business life had been spent.

The Marsh family of Newport and its vicinity is descended from Jonathan Marsh, of Jamestown, R. I., who served as deputy from that town in 1702. From a record of the year following, when he and John Carr, ferryman, are named in connection with some ferry matters, he is supposed to have been engaged in that line of work. Jonathan Marsh married (first) Sarah Reape, who was born April 17, 1664, and who died Sept. 26, 1687. She left two sons, William and John, the latter born Sept. 11, 1687. On Jan. 17, 1700, Mr. Marsh married (second) Phoebe, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Havens) Cook and widow of Oliver Arnold. One son, Jonathan, Jr., was born to this marriage, and two years later, June 10, 1704, the father died in Jamestown.

Benjamin Marsh, born in Little Compton, R. has been perpetuated in Rhode Island, was born Jan. 27, 1702, and was married Oct. 3, 1728, to Mary, daughter of Daniel and Ruth (Sheffield) Gould. She was born Dec. 20, 1708, and became the mother of children born as follows: Phoebe, June 16, 1729; Daniel, Oct. 7, 1731; Jonathan, Dec. 17, 1733; Mary, Aug. 24, 1735; Gould, July 12, 1738; James, Sept. 27, 1740; Nathaniel, July 26, 1742; William, July 22, 1743; Jeremiah, Aug. 17, 1744; Carr, Jan. 11, 1746-47; Ruth, Sept. 4, 1748; Phoebe (2), Feb. 1, 1750; and Ruth (2), June 1, 1752. Jonathan and Mary Marsh made their home in Newport, where he became a free-man May 6, 1729. He died Feb. 18, 1770, and his remains were interred in the Clifton burial-ground.

Benjamin Marsh, born in Little Compton, R. I., was for many years a shoemaker in Newport, and there died. On May 5, 1793, he married Miss Fannie Peterson, and they had children as follows: Sallie; Benjamin, Jr.; Joseph W.; Mary, wife of Capt. Joseph Sherman; Samuel J.; Frances, wife of James Burdick; Abby, wife of Joseph Weaver; and Ann, who married Samuel H. Lawton, of Newport, and there died.

Samuel Johnson Marsh was born Nov. 4, 1798, in New Bedford, Mass. As a young man he took up carpentering for a number of years, but later he went into the furniture business, opening a store in Newport which he conducted for the rest of his life. Besides carrying full lines of stock, he made a specialty of repairing all kinds of furniture. Of a quiet, retiring nature, Mr. Marsh was never active in political work, but nevertheless took a keen interest in all things affecting the city's welfare. Originally an old line Whig, after the formation of the Republican party he supported that organization. He was a regular attendant at the Second Baptist Church, and was a liberal supporter of all charitable and benevolent projects.

Samuel J. Marsh married Mary C., daughter of Charles Williams. She died in Gardner, Mass., aged fifty-four years, but her husband lived to the good old age of seventy-five years, nine months, twenty-nine days, passing away Sept. 3, 1874. They were the parents of six children: (1) Samuel J., Jr., died March 17, 1863, aged thirty-nine years, in Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa. During the Civil war he was a member of an Iowa regiment, and his death was the result of illness contracted in the service. His wife was Miss Mary Prentice, of Plainfield, Conn. (2) Sallie W., born Nov. 13, 1825, married Edward Barker of Newport, where she died March 5, 1905. (3) William E., born Feb. 13, 1828, married Miss Nancy Putnam, of Gardner, Mass. He was for many years chief of police of Bridgeport, Conn., where he is now living retired. (4) A sketch of Edward P. is given below. (5) Phoebe died young. (6) Phoebe (2) became the wife of Charles Barker, of Newport, where she died.

Edward Peterson Marsh was born Nov. 29, 1835, in Newport. The first fifteen years of his life were spent there, attending school, after which he went to Gardner, Mass., and became a chair finisher under Haywood Brothers, remaining in their employ about six years. He then returned to Newport and went to work in his father's shop, located on Thames street, at the foot of Pelham. Several years passed thus, after which he went to New York, and about the time of the Civil war was employed there as a chair finisher, under contract with his brother, William E., then engaged in the wholesale chair business. When the business was removed three years later to Bridgeport, Conn., he accompanied his brother and worked for him there four years more.

Returning to Newport in about 1867, Edward P. Marsh became again associated with his father, and shortly after became a member of the firm, then known as Samuel J. Marsh & Son. After the death of the elder Mr. Marsh, in 1874, the son continued the business alone for several years and then went into partnership with George B. Smith, in the same line. The firm of Marsh & Smith continued only till the spring of 1880, and July 1st of that year Mr. Marsh again opened a furniture establishment in the old building on Thames street, the present site of the "Boston Store." In 1884 he removed to No. 101 Thames street, where in January, 1890, he added to the original establishment the undertaking department, which received most of his attention until his death. On March 1, 1896, in company with his son, Samuel W., and Thomas W. Freeborne, Mr. Marsh organized the firm of T. W. Freeborne & Co., in the furniture and auction line, but this association lasted only till Jan. 1, 1898, after which time Mr. Marsh had no business interests outside of his Thames street undertaking establishment.

Mr. Marsh had always been an active worker in fraternal organizations, and was a member of Union Lodge, No. 668, Knights of Honor, of which he was trustee for several years; of Malbone Lodge, No. 93, New England Order of Protection; and of Miantonomi Commandery, No. 114, United Order of the Golden Cross, in which he was past noble commander. In politics he was a strong Republican and was chosen by his party to the city council for seven years, during two of which he was president of that body. Mr. Marsh had always been a devout Baptist and active in church work. Formerly a member of the Second Church, he was deacon for a long time and superintendent of the Sunday-school for over twenty years. Later he united with the Central Baptist Church (now the Second Baptist), where July 29, 1903, he was made deacon, serving in that capacity until his death.

On Nov. 27, 1856, Edward P. Marsh and Mary C. Hull were united in matrimony. Mrs. Marsh was the daughter of Hanson and Catherine (Cook) Hull, of Newport. They had only one child, a son, Samuel Williams Marsh, born Dec. 10, 1868, in Newport, who is now conducting the undertaking business established by his father. He was educated in the public schools, graduating from the Rogers High School of Newport, in 1885. In November, 1889, he received his diploma from the United States College of Embalming, in New York City, after which he became associated with his father in business. He also is an active member of the Central Baptist Church (now the Second Baptist), of which he has served as clerk for a number of years. On June 26, 1907, Samuel W. Marsh was married to Mrs. Isabel Sanford Richardson, of Providence, formerly of Newport.

Edward P. Marsh passed away at his home on Cranston avenue December 27, 1906, in the seventy-second year of his age, after an illness caused by heart failure, which had confined him at home for several weeks. On Nov. 27th preceding, he and Mrs. Marsh had the pleasure of celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, but as Mr. Marsh was not strong at that time it was observed in a quiet way, although many of their friends called during the day and evening to pay their respects in honor of the occasion. In the death of Mr. Marsh the city lost one of its esteemed and respected citizens, one whose memory will ever be honored by those who knew him.

COGGESHALL. The early Coggeshall family of Rhode Island was one of the more wealthy and prominent of the founders of the Providence Plantations. John Coggeshall, the progenitor of this family, was born in 1599 in the County of Essex, England. The family there was of Norman origin, and was possessed of large estates in Essex and Suffolk, including the Manor of Little Coggeshall and Codham Hall, Wethersfield, in the vicinity of Coggeshall-on-the-Blackwater. The oldest families, following the usages of the Normans, wrote their names with the preposition, as Thomas de Coggeshall, who was the owner of these vast estates in the reign of King Stephen of Bloss, grandson of the Conqueror, 1135-1154. Five of the family, several of whom were Knights, were sheriffs of Essex, which until 1556 included Herefordshire. Coggeshall Abbey, the most famous of the Cistercian order, was built by King Stephen, 1142, and endowed by his Queen Matilda of Boulogne and his son, Eustace, with their lands in France.

(I) John Coggeshall, who was a merchant, immigrated to New England in 1632, arriving in Boston on the ship "Lion," and bringing with him his wife, Mary, and three children, John, Joshua and Ann. He and his wife soon joined the church at Roxbury, formed that year. He removed to Boston in 1634, and in April became a member of that church, with which his wife also became connected, and he was soon chosen a deacon. He was one of the first board of selectmen of Boston, 1634, was also a deputy that year, and he served in the same capacity seven times. He was one of the seventy-five supporters of Anne Hutchinson, who were disarmed. He was one of sixteen persons, who in 1638 went to Providence and bought from the Narragansett Indians the island of Aquidneck, subsequently called Rhode Island. They soon became incorporated in a body politic, and began the settlement of Pocasset (Portsmouth). Mr. Coggeshall was one of the leading men of Portsmouth who settled in Newport in 1639. In 1640 Portsmouth and Newport were united, and Mr. Coggeshall was chosen one of the assistants. He had been one of the elders in Portsmouth chosen in 1639. In 1644 the several establishments were united, becoming Providence Plantations, but the organization was not effected until 1647. Mr. Coggeshall became president of Providence Plantations, and died in office Nov. 23, 1647. His widow died Dec. 19, 1684.

(II) Joshua Coggeshall, born in 1623, married (first) Dec. 22, 1652, Joan West, born in 1631. She died in 1676, and he married (second) June 21, 1677, Rebecca Russell. Mr. Coggeshall was of Newport and Portsmouth, R. I. He was a member of the Society of Friends, was deputy much of the time from 1664 to 1672, and was assistant much of the time from 1669 to 1676. He died May 1, 1688. His children, all born to the first marriage, were: Mary, born in 1655; Joshua, 1656; John, 1659; Josiah, 1662; Daniel, 1665; Humility, 1671; Caleb, 1672; and Isaac.

(III) Joshua Coggeshall (2), son of Joshua, born in May, 1656, in Portsmouth, R. I., married (first) May 13, 1680, Sarah. She died March 20, 1697, and he married (second) Aug. 26, 1697, Sarah. Mr. Coggeshall was a resident of that part of Newport which became Middletown, and near Portsmouth. His children were: Joshua, born May 13, 1681; John, Dec. 14, 1683; Thomas, March 29, 1684; Elizabeth, March 29, 1686; Thomas, June 24, 1688; Josiah, Dec. 12, 1690; Richard, Feb. 11, 1692; Mary, March 15, 1695; Caleb, July 25, 1698; Sarah, March 22, 1700; James, March 17, 1701; a daughter, Jan. 15, 1703; Benjamin, Jan. 31, 1705; Ann, Nov. 18, 1707; Waite, Jan. 11, 1709; Comfort, April 22, 1711; and Benjamin (2), Nov. 15, 1714.

(IV) Thomas Coggeshall, born June 24, 1688, in Newport, R. I., married March 11, 1708, Mercy, born in 1691, daughter of Gideon Freeborn, and they resided in Middletown, R. I., he being occupied in farming. He died Jan. 26, 1771, and she passed away May 26, 1776; both are buried in the Coggeshall burying ground in Middletown. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Aug. 30, 1710; Comfort, Sept. 17, 1712; Mercy, June 30, 1714; Sarah, Aug. 20, 1715; Wait, Jan. 4, 1717; Mary, March 27, 1720; Joshua, March 11, 1722; Mercy, Feb. 23, 1724; Gideon, April 20, 1726; Thomas, Aug. 26, 1728; and Hannah, May 20, 1731.

(V) Joshua Coggeshall (3), born March 11, 1722, in Middletown, R. I., married (first) Jan. 12, 1743, Sarah Bailey. She died Nov. 4, 1750, and he married (second), Jan. 2, 1752, Ann, daughter of Joseph Dennis. Mr. Coggeshall was a farmer of Middletown, R. I. He died Sept. 24, 1786. His children, the first two only born to the first marriage, were: Thomas, born Aug. 30, 1744; Ruth, June 26, 1747; Sarah, Sept. 26, 1752; Joseph, Aug. 16, 1754; Elizabeth, Oct. 14, 1756; George, March 17, 1759 (died Nov. 16, 1762); Mary, July 14, 1761; Mercy, Sept. 14, 1762; Ann, June 1, 1764, and George (2), June 10, 1767.

(VI) Joseph Coggeshall, son of Joshua and Ann, born Aug. 16, 1754, in Middletown, R. I., married Elizabeth Horswell, of Little Compton, R. I., and their children were: Noel, born March 31, 1777; Ruth, Aug. 27, 1780; Joseph, June 5, 1783; Anne, Jan. 28, 1786; Joshua, Dec. 26, 1788; Sarah, Sept. 18, 1791; John P., April 13, 1794; and Abraham C., March 15, 1797.

(VII) Joshua Coggeshall, son of Joseph and Elizabeth, born Dec. 26, 1788, on the old Coggeshall homestead in Middletown, R. I., married, Nov. 26, 1815, Deborah, daughter of John and Hannah Allen, of Middletown, R. I. Mr. Coggeshall through an unusually long life was one of the most useful, influential and prominent men of his town.

When in the twenty-fourth year of his age, in August, 1812, he was elected second deputy to the State Assembly, at which period the deputies were chosen twice a year, and the sessions held in May and October of each year. He was three times elected to that position, serving from the October session, 1812, to the October session of 1814. He was again elected to this body in 1832, and at this time he was the oldest official connected with the State government. In 1816 he was elected a member of the town council of Middletown, and sustained such relation to the town until 1839. He was then chosen town clerk, serving from 1839 to 1873-74 with "exemplary precision and correctness." His record was a model one. His fellow townsmen often sought his counsel and advice in the adjustment of their difficulties, domestic differences and business relations, and through his wise and sagacious management were saved from many unpleasant feuds and from unprofitable litigation, and the town of Middletown no less enjoyed and profited by the prudent foresight and conservative teachings of him who for nearly fifty years apparently gave a leading direction to the course of the administration of municipal affairs.

Mr. Coggeshall as he grew up on the farm assisting his father with its work received a good elementary education. After his marriage he removed to the property afterward owned by his son, David. This property he bought and improved. Later in life he became owner of a portion of the more recent Albert L. Chase farm. Here he built the house in which he died. In his early life he was a well known Whig, but subsequently became a Democrat. He worshiped with the Friends, but was liberal toward all denominations. Mr. Coggeshall died April 7, 1879, in the ninety-first year of his age. His children were: (1) George C., born Oct. 7, 1816, is mentioned below. (2) David, born Oct. 28, 1818, married Sarah C. Bailey, and is mentioned below. (3) Hannah M., born Jan. 6, 1820, married George G. Chase. (4) Anna E., born Nov. 2, 1822, died at the age of eighteen years. (5) Sarah D., born Sept. 21, 1824, married James Chase, and died at her home in Middletown, Nov. 30, 1906.

(VIII) George C. Coggeshall, son of Joshua and Deborah, born Oct. 7, 1816, on the old Coggeshall homestead, in Middletown, R. I., married Dec. 19, 1849, Mary A., daughter of Pardon Brown, of Middletown. Mr. Coggeshall received the benefit of a good education with the excellent Oliphant School of his neighborhood. He was reared amid agricultural pursuits under the direction of his father, and by inheritance and association became possessed of many of the fine traits of character which distinguished the father. Soon after his marriage Mr. Coggeshall removed to the farm upon which he ever afterward lived, and which was later the home of his widow, and is now owned and operated by his son Francis J. Like his father

Mr. Coggeshall was one of the most useful men of his community, active in the duties of citizenship and prominent in the public affairs of his town. He was for seven years a member and president of the town council of Middletown, the duties of which office he performed with signal correctness. In politics he was a staunch supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, as laid down by Jefferson and Jackson. He was treasurer of the Aquidneck Agricultural Society from its organization, in which he took an active part, until the time of his death. He served as captain of the Home Guards of Middletown, which was raised as an emergency organization for service at a critical period in the Civil war. His religious faith was that of the Baptist denomination, and he was a consistent member of the First Baptist Church at Newport. "By the constancy and purity of his Christian character, by his faithfulness and fidelity in his discharge of public trusts, and by his fair, honorable and courteous intercourse with his fellows, he won the confidence, esteem and brotherly regard of his church, his townsmen and all who knew him."

Mr. Coggeshall died at his farm in Middletown, R. I., Jan. 31, 1873, in the fifty-eighth year of his age, and was buried in the old Coggeshall cemetery in Middletown. His children were: Joshua, married Elizabeth C., daughter of Stephen P. Weaver; George, who died Nov. 4, 1906, married (first) Alzada J. Weaver, and (second) Sarah G. Weaver, both of whom were daughters of Stephen P. Weaver; Fillmore, who resides in Portsmouth, married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Brown; Francis J.; and Lucy, who married George Anthony, died in Portsmouth. The mother died on the farm April 18, 1900, and was buried in the same cemetery in which the father rests.

(IX) FRANCIS J. COGGESHALL, youngest son of George C., was born Aug. 14, 1859, on the old homestead, and has passed all his days there. He received the advantages afforded by the Oliphant school, acquiring an excellent common school education, but he has worked from an early age, as he was only fourteen when his father died. He worked out for farmers, receiving $14 a month for his services, which was at the time considered good wages, and when he was of age commenced farming on his own account on the old home place, which he now owns and cultivates. He has about forty acres of valuable land, on which he carries on general farming and stock raising, giving special attention to market gardening. This line, though it requires closer attention and incessant industry, is one of the most remunerative branches of farming, and Mr. Coggeshall has found a ready market for his excellent products in Newport. He is enterprising and intelligent in his work, and by industry has attained an honorable position among the substantial and respected citizens of his locality.

Mr. Coggeshall was married April 3, 1881, to Sarah A. Thurston, daughter of Peleg Thurston, of Portsmouth, and one child has been born to them, Jeannette, a graduate of the Rogers high school of Newport, who, April 24, 1907, was married to Laurence A. Goffe, of Newport, an inspector in the Engineering Department of the United States Government. The family attend Holy Cross Episcopal Church, in Middletown. Mr. Coggeshall is a Democrat in political sentiment, but he is independent in his support of candidates and measures he deems important to the public welfare and advancement.

(VIII) DAVID COGGESHALL, son of Joshua and Elizabeth Coggeshall, was born Oct. 28, 1818, on the old Coggeshall homestead in Middletown, R. I. Here he was reared to the life of a farmer under the direction of his father, one of the most capable tutors, whose exemplary life was a model one and gave shape to the lives of many of the young men of that region who had the privilege of a knowledge of the man. Young David worked on the farm and attended schools of the neighborhood, and before reaching his majority was well fitted for the duties of life. Agricultural pursuits were congenial to his tastes and so his life was that of a farmer all through. He finally, in 1877, came into possession of the homestead farm by inheritance, and successfully continued in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred July 11, 1906, after a brief illness at the venerable age of nearly eighty-eight years. Unlike his distinguished and honored father and his brother, Mr. Coggeshall rather shrank from holding public office, and although solicited, almost invariably declined the use of his name in that connection. He did, however, at one time serve as assistant United States assessor. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party, although in town affairs he always took a neutral stand. He was a regular attendant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and gave liberally to its support. Mr. Coggeshall served for a number of years as a member of the board of directors of the Newport National Bank, continuing in that capacity until his death.

On March 20, 1851, Mr. Coggeshall was married to Sarah C. Bailey, daughter of George I. Bailey and Mary S. Chase, of Middletown, R. I. This union was blessed by children as follows: (1) George Bailey was associated with his father in the management of the homestead. He is unmarried and resides at home. (2) Elizabeth Horswell, married John L. Simmons, of Newport, Sept. 3, 1879. They reside in Middletown, where Mr. Simmons is engaged in farming and poultry raising, and also assisted the late David Coggeshall in the conduct of his farm. Their children are: Sarah Coggeshall, wife of Clarence Thurston, of Newport, and the mother of one son, Benjamin Marshall; George Alvin; Julia Collins, who married Oct. 2, 1907, James Robert Chase 2d, of Middletown; David Coggeshall; John L., Jr.; and Elizabeth. (3) Harriet Bailey married Arthur C.

Chase, a farmer of Portsmouth. They have no children.

David Coggeshall was one of the substantial farmers of Newport County, and a man of exemplary as well as positive traits of character. He won general respect and warm esteem, and was one of the best known of the older inhabitants of Middletown. He was not only kind, sympathetic and generous in his impulses, but was a man of many charitable and helpful deeds, who will be long and affectionately remembered.

WILLIAM LARNED, late of Woonsocket, was a descendant of one of the oldest and best families of New England, his first ancestor in America being William Learned (Larned or Larnet), one of the earliest of the name on this side of the Atlantic.

(I) William Learned and his wife Goodith (Goditha), from Bermondsey Parish, County of Surrey, England, probably came to New England in 1632. They are of record that year in Charlestown, Mass., and he was admitted a freeman May 14, 1634. Their names are the first two on the list of the members of the present First Church of Charlestown, to which they were admitted "1632, 10 mo., day 6." Mr. Learned figured in public affairs, and was selectman in Charlestown in 1635-36. He was highly esteemed for his intelligence and virtue, as is evidenced by his appointment with others of the church to "consider some things tending towards a body of laws." He was a subscriber to the town orders from Woburn, drawn up at Charlestown, Dec. 16, 1640; was one of the seven original members of the church in Woburn, which was gathered Aug. 14, 1642-43; was one of the first board of selectmen chosen in 1644, and was re-elected the following year. He was also elected constable from 1644 to 1645. He died in Woburn March 1, 1645-46, leaving a widow. His children were: Sarah, born about 1608; Bethia, baptized Oct. 29, 1612; Mary, baptized Sept. 15, 1615; Abigail, baptized Sept. 30, 1618; Elizabeth, baptized March 25, 1621; and Isaac, baptized Feb. 25, 1623-24.

(II) Isaac Learned, bapt. (born?) Feb. 23, 1623, in Bermondsey Parish, County of Surrey, England, was probably seven or eight years old when he came to New England, and when about seventeen or eighteen went with his father to Woburn. He married at Woburn, July 9, 1646, Mary, daughter of Isaac Stearnes, of Watertown. She was a native of England, baptized Jan. 26, 1626, in the Parish of Nayland, Suffolk. Mr. Learned sold his property in Woburn in 1652 and removed to Chelmsford, where he died Nov. 27, 1657. He was chosen selectman of Chelmsford in 1654, sergeant of the train band in 1656, and served on committees, etc. His widow, Mary, was married June 7, 1662, to John Burg, and died probably within a year and a half afterward. Isaac Learned's children were: Mary, born Aug. 7, 1647; Hannah, Aug. 24, 1649; William, Oct. 1, 1650 (all born at Woburn); Sarah, Oct. 18, 1653; Isaac, Sept. 16, 1655; and Benoni, Nov. 29, 1657. (all born at Chelmsford).

(III) Isaac Learned (2), born at Chelmsford Sept. 16, 1655, died Sept. 15, 1737. He married, July 23, 1679, Sarah Bigelow, who was born Sept. 29, 1659, daughter of John and Sarah (Warner) Bigelow, of Watertown; she was descended from William the Conqueror. They settled in Framingham, near Learned's Pond, which was so named from him. As a soldier he took part in the Narragansett fight, and was wounded. He served in Captain Davenport's Company. He was received as an inhabitant of Sherborn, Mass., in April, 1679—Framingham not then being a town; he figured in the incorporation of Framingham in 1699-1700. He was selectman in 1698, 1706 and 1711, and fence viewer in 1681-82. His children were: Isaac, born May 10, 1680; Sarah, March 16, 1682; Abigail, March 11, 1684; Mary, April 12, 1686; William, Feb. 12, 1688; Ebenezer, Aug. 31, 1690; Samuel, Oct. 4, 1692; Hannah, Sept. 16, 1694; Elizabeth, July 27, 1696; Moses, April 29, 1699; and Mattha, May 21, 1702.

(IV) William Learned (2), son of Isaac (2), born Feb. 12, 1688, in Chelmsford, was the ancestor in direct line of the branches of the family in Rhode Island and Connecticut. On Nov. 24, 1715, he married Hannah Bryant, born in 1696-97, daughter of Simon and Hannah Bryant, of Killingly, Conn. (formerly of Braintree, Mass.) Mr. Learned had removed from Framingham to Killingly, purchasing land in what is now Putnam, in 1712. Later he removed to Sutton, where he lived for a time, being one of the original members of the church there in 1720. He later (1721) bought land in Killingly, and probably removed there. He was admitted to the church in Thompson, Conn., in 1731 (Thompson Parish had formerly been the North Society of Killingly). He was chosen a deacon in 1742. He was surveyor of highways in 1729; selectman from 1740 to 1744, and town treasurer from 1742 to 1746. He died June 11, 1747. His widow, Hannah, married Oct. 17, 1755, Joseph Leavens. Mr. Learned's children were: Hannah; Samuel, born Dec. 28, 1718; Simon, Feb. 10, 1721; Ebenezer, March 11, 1723; William, April 15, 1725; Abijah, April 26, 1729; James, Dec. 24, 1733; and Asa, March 29, 1736.

(V) William Learned (3), born April 15, 1725, married Dec. 12, 1754, Mrs. Elizabeth (Davis) Mayo, of Oxford, Mass. Mr. Learned received from his father's estate half the house, but sold out in a few years to Isaac Park and removed to Oxford, where all his children were born. He finally settled in Dudley, Mass., where he died May 15, 1806. He held the rank of major in Col. Jonathan Holman's Regiment, on the alarm list, 1776. His children were: Lucy, born Oct. 6, 1755; William, born Feb. 11, 1758; Lucy, born Dec. 9, 1759; Thomas, born Jan. 5, 1762; Ruth, born Jan. 5, 1764; Dolly, born Dec. 15, 1766; and Elizabeth.

J. M. Cook

J. M. Cook

(VI) Thomas Learned, born Jan. 5, 1762, married May 12, 1785, Hannah, daughter of Benjamin Morris, and they resided in Dudley, Mass. Mr. Learned enlisted July 10, 1779, in Capt. Thomas Fish's Company; again joined a company at Springfield, July 1, 1780, under Ensign Joseph Miller. He died June 15, 1848. His children were: Morris, born May 23, 1786; William, born in December, 1789; Hannah; Eliza; and Dolly, born about 1797.

(VII) Morris Learned, born May 23, 1786, married Nov. 25, 1810, Elizabeth, born Jan. 7, 1790, daughter of Dr. John Elliot Eaton, of Dudley, Mass., and they were residents of that town. Mr. Learned was over ninety years old when he died, and his wife lived to be over a hundred, dying in Pawtucket, R. I. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Sept. 12, 1811; Elizabeth Davis, born Feb. 16, 1813; Thomas Morris, born Dec. 8, 1814; John Elliot Eaton, born Aug. 31, 1816; Hannah Maria, born Sept. 3, 1818; Ursula Paine, born Oct. 7, 1820; William, born Sept. 5, 1822; Cordelia Waldo, born Dec. 27, 1826; Harriet Knight, born May 10, 1828; Sarah Williams, born Dec. 25, 1829; Frederick, born Nov. 26, 1830, and George Bowen, born April 28, 1834.

(VIII) William Larned, son of Morris and Elizabeth (Eaton), was born at Dudley Sept. 25 (or 5), 1822. He grew to manhood in his native place and there received his education. When a young man he went to Webster, Mass., entering the counting-room of Samuel Slater & Son, where he remained for some time, later finding employment in Providence, R. I. During the gold fever of 1849 he followed the example of the thousands who went to California to engage in prospecting, and spent a short time there, returning to New England. But later he again went West, this time to Colorado, locating at Denver, where he remained for a quarter of a century or more, during which he was agent for the California Powder Company and also had mining interests. In 1899 he came back to New England, and thereafter made his residence at Woonsocket; which had been the early home of his wife. There he died April 23, 1904, and he was buried in Oak Hill cemetery.

Mr. Larned was a man who won friends and respect in every community in which he lived, and though not long a resident of Woonsocket had a wide circle of acquaintances who esteemed him for his high character and honorable life. He was a good citizen, a devoted husband and father, and an attendant of the Universalist Church, in whose doctrines he believed thoroughly, endeavoring to practice them in his daily walk in life.

In 1853 Mr. Larned married Elizabeth Cook, who was born in Woonsocket, daughter of James Madison Cook, and a member of one of the best families of that town. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Larned, a son that died in infancy and a daughter, Mary Cook. The latter received her education in the Woonsocket high school and at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., and was married June 26, 1901, at the Larned home in Woonsocket, to David Lyman. They reside with Mrs. Larned at the old home of the family on Social street, Woonsocket, originally the Cook homestead, the house having been built in the early twenties during the last century by Smith Arnold. It is a fine double house, and was one of the first dwellings on the street. Mrs. Larned and her daughter are both charter members of the Woonsocket Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. Lyman was the first register. She served as regent of the chapter, in 1898, 1899 and 1900, and as such represented it in national convention; attending the one held at Washington, D. C., as well as other national meetings. Mrs. Larned and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman are all attendants of the Universalist Church and much respected members of the community in which they reside and in the social life of which they take a prominent part. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman have traveled extensively in Europe, visiting all the places of interest to the tourist and student, and satisfying their artistic tastes and love for the beautiful in exploring the treasures of the old world.

JAMES MADISON COOK, the father of Mrs. Larned, was throughout his life one of the best known citizens of Woonsocket. He was a member of a prominent family of this section, being a brother of the late Willis and Lyman Cook, formerly the most widely known business men of northern Rhode Island. A complete history of the family appears elsewhere in this work.

Mr. Cook was born in 1809 on Cumberland Hill, Cumberland, R. I., and was the youngest of six children—three sons and three daughters—born to Levi Cook. He received his education in the local public schools and a select school; and when a young man taught school in his native town for some little time. After giving up that profession he moved to the village of Woonsocket Falls, in 1830, and entered the employ of Smith Arnold & Co., cotton manufacturers, working in the carding room. He soon acquired a knowledge of the manufacturing business, and after holding the position of superintendent of a cotton mill became a manufacturer himself, becoming interested in the manufacture of cotton goods with his brothers. He served many years as superintendent of the mill. He finally retired from business, and afterward filled the position of collector of internal revenue during the Civil war.

Mr. Cook was originally a Whig and afterward a Republican in political opinion, and he was influential in the councils of his party and a popular candidate for office on several occasions. He served in the town council and as representative to the General Assembly of the State. Progressive and public-spirited, he took an active and conspicuous part in the early growth and prosperity of Woonsocket, and was identified with a number of projects intended to promote the advancement of that place. He was a prominent member of the board of directors of both the Producers' Savings Bank and the old Woonsocket Institution for Savings. He was a well-known member of the Universalist Society and at one time served as vice-superintendent of the Sunday-school of that denomination. Active in every cause or undertaking in which he became interested, he always used his influence for good, and thus he was one of the best known and most respected men of his day, doing his full duty in every relation of life as he saw it. To those who knew the full meaning of this to a man of his sterling character and broad outlook it was apparent that when Mr. Cook endeavored to do his best it meant that the best possible would be done.

In 1833, in Woonsocket, Mr. Cook married Susan Hall Arnold, daughter of Smith and Mary (Earle) Arnold, the former a well-known merchant of Woonsocket. Mr. and Mrs. Cook moved at once into the house at what is now No. 58 Social street where they ever afterward remained, and there Mr. Cook died Nov. 23, 1890, reaching the ripe age of eighty-one years, nine months, seven days. Mrs. Cook survived him, passing away at the old home July 2, 1899, and both are buried in Oak Hill cemetery. Mrs. Cook was a noble Christian woman, noted for her kindness of heart and benevolent disposition, and she had many friends in the community in which her life was spent. To Mr. and Mrs. Cook were born seven children, namely: Elizabeth Earl, born April 1, 1835, the widow of William Larned; Smith Arnold, born Feb. 19, 1837, who died in infancy; Mary A., born Sept. 24, 1838, who died in infancy; James Smith, born Oct. 27, 1842, deceased; Theodore M. (deceased), born Oct. 22, 1839, who was a well-known banker of Woonsocket; Joseph A., born Oct. 25, 1841, who died young; and Susan Hortense, born June 4, 1844, who married Lyman Boynton, both being now deceased.

In the death of James Madison Cook Woonsocket lost one of its most prominent citizens and able business men. One who knew him well said of him: "Mr. Cook had a noble presence, nature having been generous toward him. He was tall, erect, vigorous, manly. His dark eye beneath a jutting forehead always beamed with the light of a proud and genial good-heartedness. Whether you met him at his home, or on the street, or in the banking room, he was the same cordial, dignified, intelligent gentleman, ready with a happy greeting, ready with the latest news, or some bright word of current wit or good humor. His full and accurate information ever made him a valuable counselor. He was enterprising, but he was conservative, desiring to move on safe lines. Kindly, merry with his friends, he could not be turned a hair's breadth from the course that seemed to him just and right. He was honest, inflexible, incorruptible. When one speaks of such a man it is hardly possible to refrain from language which to strangers will seem like extravagance, and yet were I to say all I know, and all there is in my heart of loving and honorable memory, I am sure no one could rise up on earth and mention any defect in the integrity of this man. Fearlessly his friends lay the laurels of a life well lived upon his grave. He bore amongst us a spotless reputation and all the years he seemed to us to be climbing to new heights of excellence. Since his son, Theodore M., and his daughter, Mrs. Boynton, died, all who met Mr. Cook could see he carried a bleeding heart. His home, his wife and children were unspeakably dear to him. There he was happy, entirely happy. No trace of wrong or unkindness could anyone ever discover there, and when death entered those doors and bore his dear ones away it left an anguish that words cannot describe. To this great sorrow has been added these last three or more years almost intolerable physical sufferings, and yet he has borne up with a surprising, almost a pathetic, fortitude. If commended for his patience or courage, he has depreciated it with a gentle modesty and humility. He has seemed to say, it is our duty to suffer and trust, if called to do so, and not complain. He has tried to be cheerful and let his suffering cloud as little as possible the lives of the beloved around him, and he has wonderfully succeeded, so that it is a delight and an inspiration to think of him in these later and supposedly darker days like a victor, going up to the 'many mansions' heroically, beautifully. How largely Mr. Cook's self-control, serenity, grace and goodness were the outcome of his faith I dare not attempt to say. His motto was not exactly that of the old Greek and Roman school, 'one world at a time,' but rather 'Do your duty in this world; and it must be well.' What sentiment reveals a nobler mind than this? It was his firm purpose that shone in his business, in his home, in his life, and gave it consistency and beauty, kept him in the hour of temptation and supported him in affliction.

Death had no terrors for him. Just a little before the silver cord was loosened he said to the daughter, who sat by his side, 'Oh, how I would like to lift the curtain and see what is beyond. Would it not be comforting?' The curtain has been raised by angel hands and he has passed behind it. His home, the church which he loved, the city which he honored, are left to mourn his loss. But in his memory we have much to be thankful for. If in modern days, if in such a press and throng of temptations, he could resist the evil, could keep up his integrity, and win such a life, assuredly we, our young men and our young women may make of this eager life an arena of victorious moral combat, a theatre of noble acting, a field of triumphant strength and noble victory. Earnestly do we commend to his bereaved wife and daughter and the sorrowing family circle the consolation of religion, and to them extend the expression of our profound sympathy."—W.

CROSS (Providence family). The early home of the Rhode Island Cross family was in the town of Westerly and one of the towns coming out of that territory—Charlestown, and in those towns the family has been continuous to the present, and prominent. One or more branches of the family of the locality named removed to Providence, where a number of the name have given a good account of themselves.

It is a family tradition that the Crosses from the locality named spring from John Cross, who, with his brother Ralph, came from Scotland. In the town of Westerly are recorded the births of Samuel, Joseph, John, William, Susannah and Edward Cross, as born between the years 1724 and 1735, respectively, their parents' name being omitted; while in the town of Charlestown the vital record of the family begins with the family of Peleg Cross and his wife Mary. The former was born Dec. 6, 1723, and died Dec. 27, 1812; and the latter was born July 30, 1735, and died May 27, 1812. Their children of town record were: Mary, born May 1, 1755; Thankful, born Sept. 7, 1757; Peleg, born June 24, 1759; Mercy, born April 28, 1761; Anna, born Dec. 8, 1763; and Rubamah, born July 27, 1767. Peleg Cross, the father, was admitted a freeman of the Colony at the April session of the General Assembly, 1745, and his name appears as a member of the Colonial Assembly from Charlestown in 1767.

Peleg Cross (2), son of Peleg and Mary, born June 24, 1759, of Charlestown town record, married in 1781, Catey, daughter of John Congdon, of Charlestown, and their children of town record were: Mary, born Nov. 29, 1781; Sarah, born March 31, 1783; Peleg, born Dec. 17, 1784; Catey C., born Dec. 26, 1786; John C., born March 26, 1789; Nathaniel L., born March 21, 1791; Benjamin C., born March 26, 1793; Joseph H., born May 28, 1797; Celia, born May 31, 1800; and George W., born Oct. 22, 1802.

Nathaniel L. Cross, son of Peleg and Catey (Congdon) Cross, born March 21, 1791, in 1813 married Dorcas Cross.

William J. Cross, son of Nathaniel L. and Dorcas, born March 1, 1814, in the town of Westerly, R. I., married Frances Ellison. He died in Providence July 15, 1885, aged seventy-one years, and she died Oct. 30, 1901, aged eighty-six years.

During his early childhood Mr. Cross lived with his grandparents in Charlestown, R. I. At the age of fourteen years he entered the Plainfield Academy, a famous institution in those days, and was graduated at the age of eighteen. He then came to Providence, where he passed the remainder of his life in active business as a merchant and manufacturer. For a time after his arrival in the city he worked for William A. Robinson, dealer in sperm oil, on South Water street; subsequently he was of the firm of Hill, Carpenter & Co., wool dealers and mill stockers. He first engaged in woolen and worsted manufacture with William Hudson and Joseph Carpenter in the Elm Street Woolen Mills, and later as a member of the firm of Carpenter & Cross, running the Valley Worsted Mills on Eagle street. Mr. Cross was an active member of the Richmond Street Congregational Church, and later with other residents of the East Side was a charter member of the Central Congregational Church, of which he was a deacon for many years.

To William Jones and Frances (Ellison) Cross were born two sons and one daughter: (1) William Ellison, born Sept. 5, 1852, was during his active life connected with the Valley Worsted Mills. He died at Asheville, N. C., April 23, 1891. (2) Frances Maria, born Aug. 9, 1854, died July 25, 1885. On Nov. 27, 1877, she was married to Rev. Thomas D. Anderson, Jr., and they had two sons, Clifford Spence and Francis Maurice. (3) John Alexander.

JOHN ALEXANDER CROSS, born Feb. 2, 1857, was educated in Providence, attending the public schools, University Grammar School and Brown University, where he was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity. He then became engaged in the manufacturing business at the Valley Worsted Mills, and there remained until 1898, being secretary of that corporation. Mr. Cross in 1898 became interested in the Diamond Machine Company, of Providence, R. I., of which he was treasurer until 1902, when he became the New England manager of the Manufacturers' Commercial Company of New York. In May, 1906, he organized the Mercantile Advance Company, of which he is president and treasurer.

On Nov. 12, 1884, Mr. Cross married Grace Lillian Reed, daughter of Amos Newton and Sarah Elizabeth Reed, of North Abington, Mass. To Mr. and Mrs. Cross have come one son and one daughter, born as follows: Marguerite, Dec. 25, 1885; and Ralph Newton, June 16, 1892. Mr. Cross is a member of the Central Congregational Church, University Club, Providence Art Club and the Sprague House Association, of which latter he is a director.

SPOONER (Providence family). An ancient Massachusetts family, one of approximately two hundred and seventy years' standing, the Spooners have been for generations numerous and prominent in that part of the State adjacent to Rhode Island; and from it have sprung many prominent and distinguished descendants in other states. For several generations there has been a Providence family, descended from the same American ancestor, prominently identified with both the city and the State of Rhode Island. Reference is made especially to the late Joshua Spooner, for years one of the leading wholesale merchants of Providence, and to his son, Hon. Henry J. Spooner, one of the leading lawyers of the State, citizen soldier and public man, of a long and honorable career as legislator, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Rhode Island General Assembly, member of the United States Congress, etc. It is with this Providence branch of the Spooner family that this article deals. The arrangement in the following genealogy and family history is chronological, beginning with the immigrant settler.

(I) William Spooner is of record at New Plymouth, Mass., in 1637, then probably in his minority. He was admitted a freeman June 6, 1654, and at that time was appointed a surveyor of highways. About 1660 he removed from Plymouth to the new settlement at Acushnet, in the Dartmouth Purchase, in which he held lands. He married (first) Elizabeth Partridge, who died April 28, 1648, and (second), March 18, 1652, Hannah Pratt. One child was born to the first marriage, and eight children to the second. Mr. Spooner died in March, 1683-84.

(II) William Spooner (2), a farmer and resident of Acushnet, married in 1690, Mrs. Alice Blackwell, who was born in 1656, widow of John Blackwell and daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Walker) Warren. Mr. Spooner was frequently chosen to town offices. He was a lieutenant in the militia, and with his wife was a member of Rochester Church. He was living Oct. 27, 1735; his wife died prior to that time. Their children were eight in number.

(III) Benjamin Spooner, born March 31, 1691, married Nov. 29, 1716, Joanna Tobey, born May 22, 1697, daughter of Samuel and Abia Tobey. His second wife's name was Zeruiah. Eight children were born to the first marriage and three to the second.

Benjamin Spooner's early educational advantages, it is said, were limited to what could be had in the schools of the neighborhood during the winter months and confined to his early boyhood years. However, they were sufficient to lead him to a higher self-culture; and reading, observation, adaptability to apply and use, made him in manhood one of the most cultured men of the places in which he lived. His influence through life was given to all enterprises that looked to the welfare of his fellowmen, and carried with it the high respect of all who knew him. Soon after attaining his majority he went to Sandwich, Mass., where he was married. About 1720 he removed from Sandwich to Middleborough, Mass., where he purchased a large tract of land bordering on what has since been known as Elder's pond, in that part of the town now known as Lakeville, and there he lived a long and useful life. He died in 1783.

(IV) Samuel Spooner, a native of Middleborough, Mass., married Abby Wilkinson and lived in the town of his birth. He was a man of fine scholarly attainments, and gave his life to teaching, making mathematics a specialty. He taught in Plymouth and Bristol counties, Mass. His death occurred prior to 1793. His children were Joshua and James, born, respectively, July 26, 1772, and July 27, 1774.

(V) James Spooner, born July 27, 1774, married Nov. 2, 1797, Sally Luther, born May 3, 1775, daughter of Capt. Benjamin and Rebecca Luther. Mr. Spooner was a farmer, of Dighton, Mass. He died Oct. 9, 1822, his wife Sally on Oct. 7, 1851. Their children were: Jonathan, born Aug. 20, 1798, was lost at sea when a young man; Joseph T., born June 21, 1801, died Aug. 21, 1809; Joshua was born Nov. 8, 1803; Sally, born Dec. 10, 1805, died Sept. 18, 1808; Maria, born July 5, 1808, died Aug. 31, 1811; Sally M., born Oct. 29, 1811, married Rufus D. Carver, and died at an advanced age in New Jersey; Charles, born April 25, 1813, died Oct. 13, 1828; Abby, born Oct. 3, 1815, married George Waters, and died at Somerset, Mass., April 10, 1904; Eliza, born Nov. 24, 1819, died Dec. 8, 1843.

(VI) Joshua Spooner, born Nov. 8, 1803, in the town of Dighton, Mass., became a wholesale dry-goods merchant of Providence, where for many years he was engaged in mercantile pursuits, being successively a member of the firms of Watson & Spooner, Spooner & Draper, and Larned, Carr & Spooner. He was a man of great probity of character, prudent and honorable in business, and greatly respected and esteemed for his many virtues. Mr. Spooner married Dec. 7, 1831, Ann Crawford Noyes, who was born in Providence, R. I., May 6, 1808, daughter of Capt. John Miller and Abijah (Udike) Noyes, and died April 20, 1876. She was a woman of intelligence and of fine literary taste and culture, descending maternally from the distinguished Udike family of Rhode Island, her grandfather being John Udike, who married Ann Crawford Nov. 13, 1760. Abijah (Udike) Noyes was born Nov. 27, 1778, and died Nov. 29, 1834. John Miller Noyes, the father of Ann Crawford Noyes, was a sea captain, owning and commanding ships voyaging to foreign parts—Europe, the East and West Indies, South America, etc., and was a man of much ability and culture, and of marked musical and artistic tastes and accomplishments. By his wife Abijah he had eight children, one of whom—Samuel Miller Noyes, born Aug. 22, 1812, and died June 10, 1888—was a prominent citizen of Providence. John Miller Noyes married (second) Jessie McAuslin, of Wilmington, N. C., by whom he had two sons: John Miller, who died in infancy, and Charles McWalter B. ("Charles Mc" was subsequently dropped by him from his name), born May 10, 1837, and died Dec. 5, 1885, who was an Episcopalian clergyman, living in Providence (where he graduated from Brown University in 1858), in New York City, and in Venice, Italy, where he was United States consul at the time of his death. John Miller Noyes died in Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 21, 1842.

Henry J. Spooner

Joshua Spooner died Oct. 20, 1869, at his home in Providence, R. I. The children of Joshua and Ann C. Spooner were: (1) James N., died in infancy. (2) Emily N., born Feb. 12, 1835, died Oct. 10, 1859, unmarried. (3) Charles J., born July 6, 1837, died May 17, 1856. (4) Henry J., born Aug. 6, 1839. (5) Frederic C., born Feb. 20, 1844, died May 20, 1893; he never married. He resided at different times in Providence, R. I., Dighton, Mass., and Warren, R. I. (6) Frank A., born Dec. 12, 1845, a resident of Warwick, R. I., has been twice married, and is the father of three sons and two daughters.

(VII) HENRY JOSHUA SPOONER, son of the late Joshua and Ann Crawford (Noyes) Spooner, was born Aug. 6, 1839, in Providence, R. I., and received the greater part of his preliminary education in the public schools of his native city. He entered Brown University in the fall of 1857, and was graduated therefrom in 1860, with the degree of A. B. He possessed marked aptitude for debate, with a decided taste in that line, and his favorite studies while in college were those relating to history, literature, rhetoric and logic. While a sophomore he was president of his class. In the fall following his graduation he became a student at the Albany (N. Y.) Law School, from which institution he was graduated in 1861, with the degree of LL. B., and was therefrom admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. Returning to his native city he continued his law studies in the office, and under the direction of the well known law firm of Thurston & Ripley until late in the summer of 1862.

The stirring times of 1861-62 called from the various walks of life many of the youth of the land in defense of their country, young Spooner among them. In the summer of 1862, not content to longer remain simply a looker-on, he accepted a commission as second lieutenant in the Fourth Regiment, Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry—a regiment which had been in active service for some months. He was commissioned as such Aug. 27, 1862, and joined his regiment near Washington, D. C., just before the Maryland campaign. The Fourth Rhode Island was at that time in the 2d Brigade (under command of Col. Harland), 3d Division, 9th Army Corps, and shared in the spontaneous ovation bestowed by the citizens of Frederick upon the Union forces as they entered the city; and in the battle of South Mountain, fought Sept. 14th, it sustained the honor already gained in North Carolina. In the battle of Antietam, on the 17th of September, the "Fourth" engaged with a valor second to no other on the field, and closed the sanguinary day with the loss of 102 killed and wounded and seven captured. It was here that Col. William H. P. Steere—commanding the "Fourth"—fell severely wounded, and that the regiment was called to mourn the loss of its former commander, Gen. Isaac P. Rodman, commanding the division, who received a mortal wound in the bloody contest. On Oct. 5, 1862, Lieut. Spooner was promoted to first lieutenant and adjutant. In November, 1862, the Fourth, with the Army of the Potomac, under Gen. Burnside, was in front of Fredericksburg, and in the battle of Dec. 13th was actively engaged. Here fell the brave Lieut.-Col. Joseph B. Curtis, then in command of the regiment—Col. Steere being still disabled by his wound—killed by a ball from a shrapnel shell; Adjutant Spooner was at his side. Later on the Fourth was respectively in another brigade, under command of Col. Dutton, in the 9th Army Corps, engaged in the active operations attending the siege of Suffolk, and in several skirmishes and engagements in that vicinity; and in the 3d Brigade of the 2d Division, 7th Corps, under Gen. Naglee. In June, the Fourth formed a part of the expedition to King William Court House, for the purpose of threatening Richmond, destroying the railroad bridges over the South and North Anna rivers. From July, 1863, to March, 1864, the Fourth was in the vicinity of Portsmouth, Va., where it was engaged in erecting substantial earthworks and completing a line of fortifications. Later on it was at the front with the 9th Corps, before Petersburg, and almost constantly under fire. In the assault upon the Rebel works, immediately upon the explosion of the Mine, July 30th, the regiment, led by Lieut.-Col. Buffum, advanced upon the enemy's line and under a galling fire entered the crater of the fort, caused by the explosion, where a hand to hand conflict ensued, with great slaughter on both sides, the Fourth sustaining a total loss in killed, wounded and missing of ninety-four, among them Lieut.-Col. Buffum and several other officers and twenty-one enlisted men captured.

In the foregoing narrative no attempt has been made to follow in detail the movements of the Fourth, but to refer only to those of greater importance. The last battle in which the regiment took part—the operations on the Weldon railroad, Sept. 30, 1864,—was on the eve of the expiration of its term of service. The Fourth returned to Providence, and was mustered out of service Oct. 15, 1864. But Adjutant Spooner and several other officers, and 172 of the original three-years men, who had re-enlisted as veterans, together with recruits, remained in the field, and were subsequently consolidated with the 7th Rhode Island Infantry, to be known as the 7th Rhode Island Volunteers, Adjutant Spooner, however, being mustered out, Feb. 3, 1865, upon such consolidation.

After the battle of Antietam, as stated above, Lieut. Spooner was promoted to first lieutenant and adjutant, which position he continued to occupy, except during several months while he served on the brigade staff as acting commissary of subsistence, until his final muster out, in February, 1865.

After the war, returning to Providence with an honorable war record, young Spooner resumed the study of law, and early in June of the same year, 1865, was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, from which time, excepting while absent at Washington in his official capacity, he was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession at Providence until his retirement, in recent years, from active practice.

For much of the time since the middle seventies, through a period of thirty years, Col. Spooner has been prominently before the people of his city and State. From May, 1866, to May, 1869, he was justice and clerk of the Court of Magistrates of the city of Providence. From 1875 to 1881, inclusive, he was a member of the Lower House of the General Assembly, from the city of Providence, and a member of the Judiciary committee from 1876 to 1879. In May, 1879, he was chosen Speaker of the House, and re-elected to that office in May, 1880. At a special election for representative from the 1st Rhode Island District to the United States Congress held Nov. 22, 1881, Col. Spooner was chosen, as a Republican, his majority over Charles C. Van Zandt (Republican) and Henry T. Sisson (Democrat) being 1,788. This election was to fill the unexpired term of Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, who had been elected United States Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ambrose E. Burnside. Col. Spooner was returned by successive re-elections to the XLVIIIth, XLIXth, Lth and LIst Congresses. He was again chosen from Providence as a representative in the Lower House of the Rhode Island General Assembly in 1903.

Col. Spooner has been actively identified with the Republican party for many years, though in more recent years he has been independent in State politics, acting with the Democratic party for reforms in State and city government. In 1868 and 1872 he delivered speeches throughout Rhode Island in favor of the election of Gen. Grant, of Hayes in 1876, of Garfield in 1880, of Blaine in 1884, and of Harrison in 1888 and 1892. In 1876 and 1880 he was a member of the Executive Committee of the State Central Republican Club; and from 1879, for a number of years, chairman of the Republican Committee of the city of Providence.

Col. Spooner was president of the Franklin Lyceum, an old and well-known literary and debating society of Providence, in 1866 and 1867. For two years, from May, 1875, to May, 1877, he served as aid-de-camp on the staff of Gov. Henry Lippitt of Rhode Island, with the rank of colonel. He was department commander of the Department of Rhode Island, Grand Army of the Republic, in 1877; president of the Fourth Rhode Island Veteran Association in 1878; and senior vice-commander of Massachusetts Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, in 1904-05. His post membership in the Grand Army of the Republic is with Rodman Post, No. 12, Department of Rhode Island. He is a member, and was president in 1904 and 1905, of the Soldiers and Sailors Historical Society of Rhode Island, and a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society. He is a Freemason, belonging to St. John's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., of which he served one year as master, and to St. John's Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar. At Brown he became a member of the Theta Delta Chi; and he is now a member of the Hope University and Squantum Clubs, and an honorary member of the Rhode Island Yacht Club.

On Nov. 16, 1868, Col. Spooner was married to Mary Slack Brown, daughter of David A. and Abby E. Brown; and they have one son, Henry Joshua, Jr., born Nov. 13, 1869.

Mary Slack (Brown) Spooner, wife of Henry Joshua Spooner, is a lineal descendant of Rev. Chad Brown, one of the earliest settlers in Providence,—the line of descent being as follows:

(I) Chad Brown, who came from Salem to Providence in 1637, was ordained as pastor of the First Baptist Church in 1642. He died about 1665.

(II) John Brown, son of Chad, born about 1630, in England, married Mary Holmes.

(III) James Brown, son of John, born 1666, was pastor of Baptist Church and died 1732. He married Mary Harris.

(IV) Elisha Brown, son of James, born 1717, died 1802. He married (first) Martha Smith, and one of their sons was Jeremiah, born 1746. Elisha Brown was deputy governor of the Colony of Rhode Island, 1765-67.

(V) Jeremiah Brown, son of Elisha, born 1746, married (first) Mary Cushing. One of their sons was Cushing, born 1777.

(VI) Cushing Brown, son of Jeremiah, born 1777, died 1834. He married Nancy Arnold.

(VII) David A. Brown, son of Cushing, born 1815, died 1886. He married Abby E. Winsor, born 1821, and died 1877.

(VIII) Mary Slack, daughter of David A., born May 12, 1844.

(VIII) Henry Joshua Spooner, Jr., was born in Providence, and prepared for college at the University Grammar School, graduating from Brown University in 1891. Soon afterward he became connected with the Burdon Wire & Supply Company, becoming superintendent, and continued in that capacity, after it was consolidated with the Standard Seamless Wire Company, under the name of the United Wire & Supply Company, until 1903, when he resigned to engage in the wholesaling of heavy Southern timber. He is a junior member of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion, and a member of the Theta Delta Chi at Brown. On Dec. 12, 1894, he married Helen Newell Smith, daughter of James N. Smith, of Dighton, Mass., and they have one son, Henry Joshua Spooner 3d, born April 10, 1896.

PELEG SMITH BOSWORTH. For many years the name of Bosworth has been actively identified with the business interests of Newport, where for years the firm of Smith Bosworth & Co. was known in the line of manufacturing of doors, blinds, sash, moldings, etc. Of this well-known firm Peleg S. Bosworth was a member during the greater part of its existence. Mr. Bosworth is a descendant of one of New England's earliest settled families, the record of his ancestry, in chronological order following.

(I) Edward Bosworth and his wife, Mary, embarked for New England in the ship "Elizabeth and Dorcas," in 1634. Mr. Bosworth dying as the vessel was nearing the port, his remains were interred in Boston. His widow and children were next heard of in Hingham, Mass., as early as 1635, where Mrs. Bosworth died, May 18, 1648. The children, all probably born in England, were: Edward, Jr.; Jonathan, born about 1611; Benjamin, born in 1613; Mary, born in 1614, and Nathaniel, born in 1617.

(II) Jonathan Bosworth, son of Edward, was born about 1611. Among his children was Jonathan, Jr.

(III) Jonathan Bosworth, Jr., son of Jonathan, married Hannah Howland, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Tilley) Howland, both of whom came to this country in the "Mayflower."

(IV) Jonathan Bosworth (3), son of Jonathan, Jr., married Sarah Rounds, and their children were: Ichabod, born in Swansea, Mass., May 31, 1706; Christian, born in Rehoboth May 16, 1708; Jonathan, born in Rehoboth, Feb. 10, 1711, and Elisha, born July 8, 1713.

(V) Ichabod Bosworth, son of Jonathan (3), born May 31, 1706, married (first) Jan. 12, 1726-27, Mary Brown, and had children: Bethia, born Nov. 6, 1727; Mary, Oct. 22, 1735; Ichabod, Jr., Oct. 14, 1739; and Elizabeth, Dec. 17, 1742. Ichabod Bosworth married (second) in Warren, R. I., Nov. 19, 1748, Bethia Wood, of Swansea, Mass., and they had children: Peleg, born May 6, 1754; Joseph, April 10, 1756; Charity, April 21, 1758, and John, June 14, 1760.

(VI) Peleg Bosworth, son of Ichabod, was born May 6, 1754, and married Sept. 1, 1774, Mary Smith, who was born in August, 1749, in Rehoboth, Mass., and died in 1818.

(VII) Peleg Bosworth, Jr., son of Peleg, was born March 5, 1779, and married Feb. 7, 1803, Susannah Rounds, who was born Jan. 3, 1782, daughter of Deacon Rounds, of the Presbyterian Church. She died on the old home farm in Rehoboth Aug. 7, 1863. Peleg Bosworth was a carpenter and builder, as well as a farmer, and lived at Bristol Neck, Smithfield and Providence, R. I., doing the greater part of his work in the latter city, where he at various times employed a large force of men. Finally, returning to Rehoboth, he became engaged in farming, in which he continued until his death, which occurred April 29, 1829, at the age of fifty years. His children were: Susannah Rounds, born Sept. 9, 1803, died Nov. 21, 1877; Peleg (3), born Sept. 28, 1805, died Feb. 12, 1887; Mary Ann, born Nov. 1, 1807, died Oct. 17, 1809; Electa Ann, born Nov. 17, 1809, married Elisha Paddleford, and died June 5, 1880; Smith, born Nov. 21, 1811, is mentioned below; Stephen Smith, born Jan. 4, 1814, died Sept. 21, 1814; Ann Eliza, born Aug. 27, 1815, married John Allen Buffinton, of Providence; Simeon, born July 5, 1817, died Dec. 4, 1820; Mary Potter, born Nov. 24, 1820, died Dec. 1, 1820; Henry Alonzo was born Dec. 19, 1821; George Smith, born July 2, 1824, died July 26, 1881; Edwin Ruthven, born March 16, 1826, died July 18, 1887.

(VIII) Smith Bosworth, son of Peleg, Jr., was born Nov. 21, 1811, in Rehoboth, Mass., and received his education in the public schools of his native town, as was customary with the farmers' sons, attending the schools winters and working on the farm during the summer months. In 1829 he went to Providence with Tallman & Buckland, remaining with them at the trade of carpenter until twenty-one years of age. He then returned to his home and in the following spring went to New Bedford, Mass., where he followed his trade until the next winter. In the spring of 1834 he located in Newport, and worked about two years at his trade for William Weeden, after which he located in business for himself, becoming associated, about two years later, with Henry Bull, in his sawmill on Bull street, and there continued until the mill was closed. In 1851 he removed a portion of the machinery and tools from the latter mill to West Broadway, where he continued for many years under the style of Gideon Lawton & Co., until in about 1873, when Mr. Bosworth's sons purchased the interests of their father's partners, and the style of the firm was then changed to Smith Bosworth & Co. This firm operated a sawmill and sash and blind factory, manufacturing stairs, blinds, doors, sash, moldings, etc., until 1903, when the business was practically discontinued, after which time Mr. Bosworth was not actively engaged in business. Smith Bosworth passed away at his home in Newport, May 16, 1907, in the ninety-sixth year of his age.

Mr. Bosworth attended the Channing Memorial Church (Unitarian), to which his family belong, and of which they are supporters. In politics a Republican, Mr. Bosworth was a member of the city council for two years.

In 1837 Smith Bosworth was married to Rebecca Kaighn Taylor, of Newport, daughter of Capt. Edward Easton Taylor, and she passed away in 1889 in Newport, aged seventy-five years, after a wedded life of over fifty-one years, the mother of these children: Rebecca, who has been engaged in teaching since nineteen years of age; Peleg S., mentioned below; and Edward T., who was born Aug. 22, 1844, in Newport. Edward T. Bosworth was during its existence a member of the firm of Smith Bosworth & Co., and has since been following the trade of carpenter. In May, 1862, he enlisted in Company L, 9th Rhode Island Regiment, for three months' service, and re-enlisted in September, 1862, in Company D, 12th Rhode Island Regiment, for nine months. On Feb. 1, 1876, he married Emma I. White, daughter of William H. and Sarah Jeannette (Smith) White, of Providence.

(IX) Peleg Smith Bosworth, the subject proper of this review, was born in Newport April 12, 1839, and received his education in the public schools of his native city, after which he became associated with his father, and in about 1873 was admitted a member of the firm of Smith Bosworth & Co., with which he continued until its dissolution. He had been active manager after his father's retirement, and very successful in the place in which his father labored for so many years, proving himself an able and capable business man, energetic and enterprising, of strict integrity. He is fraternally connected with Coronet Council, No. 63, Royal Arcanum, of Newport; and with Miantonomi Commandery, Order of the Golden Cross. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never been an office seeker. He has been connected with the fire department for many years, being foreman of engine No. 4. In religious matters he is connected with the Second Baptist Church.

Mr. Bosworth was married in May, 1861, to Annie Waters, of New York and later of Tiverton, R. I., and these children have been born to the union: Elizabeth, who is unmarried; Rebecca, who married Philip McVickar, of Newport; William, unmarried, who is connected with the Newport Illuminating Company; Annie W., who married Philip Simmons, both of them being connected with the post office service; and Edward T., an inspector in the telephone exchange, of Newport.

NATHANIEL GREENE STANTON, M. D., an old resident, highly honored citizen, and well-known medical practitioner of Newport, R. I., was born in New Shoreham, Block Island, July 8, 1835, son of George Augustus Stanton, and grandson of Marlboro Stanton. The Stanton family is an old one in New England, and was founded in this country by Thomas Stanton, the emigrant.

(I) Thomas Stanton, known as Capt. Thomas Stanton, the first ancestor of this branch of the family in America, was of English birth. He was educated for a cadet, but not liking the profession of arms, and taking a deep interest in the religious principles of the migrating Puritans, he came to the Colonies in the ship "Bonaventura," in 1635, embarking at London, England, Jan. 2d. He landed in Virginia, thence going to Boston, Mass., where he was recognized by Winthrop and his associates as a valuable man, worthy of their unlimited confidence. The next year he was selected by the Boston authorities to accompany Mr. Fenwick and Hugh Peters as interpreter on a mission to Saybrook, Conn., to hold a conference with the Pequot Indians relative to the murder of Captains Stone and Newton. He possessed an accurate knowledge of the language and character of the Indians, which gave him prominence in the new settlements of Connecticut. In 1637 he took up his home at Hartford, where the General Court declared he should be a public officer to attend the court upon all occasions, either general or particular, at the meetings of the magistrates, to interpret between them and the Indians, at a salary of ten pounds per year. He became the intimate and special friend of Governor Winthrop of Connecticut, acting as interpreter in all of his intercourse with the Indians. He was the first white man who joined William Chesebrough in the new settlement in the Pawcatuck valley, and in the spring of 1650 or 1651 he established a trading house in Stonington, on the west bank of the Pawcatuck river. For a few years his family resided in New London before permanently locating at Stonington, in 1657. After this he took an active part in the town affairs, becoming prominent, and he was elected to almost every position of public trust in the new settlement; he served as magistrate from 1662 until his death, was appointed a judge of the court in 1666, and was a deputy to the General Court, 1666-1675.

Mr. Stanton married in Hartford, in 1637, Anna, daughter of Dr. Thomas and Dorothy

Nathaniel G. Stanton

Lord, and they had ten children, namely: Thomas, John, Mary, Hannah, Joseph, Daniel, Dorothy, Robert, Sarah and Samuel. Capt. Thomas Stanton died Dec. 2, 1677, aged sixty-eight years, and his wife passed away in 1688. Before removing from Hartford he had come into possession of considerable property, and was considered well-to-do for those times.

(II) Joseph Stanton, son of Capt. Thomas, was born March 21, 1646, in Hartford, Conn., and removed therefrom with his parents to Stonington, Conn. In 1669 he was appointed assistant magistrate to hold court in New London, his father being then magistrate. He married June 19, 1673, Hannah, daughter of William Mead, of Roxbury, Mass., and she died in 1696, he surviving until 1714. Their children were: Joseph, born in 1674; Hannah, born in 1676; Thomas, born Dec. 16, 1678; Rebecca, born in April, 1681; Thomas (2), baptized April 5, 1691; Daniel, baptized April 1, 1694; and Samuel, baptized July 17, 1698.

(III) Joseph Stanton (2), son of Joseph, was born in 1674, and married Jan. 3, 1705, Esther, daughter of Benadam and Hester (Prentice) Gallup. They were residents of Westerly, R. I. Mr. Stanton was a justice of the peace. His children were: Esther, born in 1708; Mary, born in 1711; Hannah, born in 1714; Nancy, born in 1716; Joseph, born April 23, 1717; Sarah, born in 1719, and Lucy, born Sept. 22, 1722.

(IV) Col. Joseph Stanton (3), son of Joseph (2), was born April 23, 1717, in Westerly, R. I., was an officer in the French and Indian war, and assisted in taking Louisbourg in 1745. He married (first) Aug. 9, 1738, Mary Champlain, born July 13, 1722, daughter of William Champlain. She was admitted to the Stonington Church, July 11, 1742, and died in 1750. Their children were born as follows: Joseph, July 19, 1739; Esther, Nov. 23, 1741; Mary, June 18, 1743; Augustus, March 22, 1745; Hannah, Feb. 24, 1746, and Lodowick, May 27, 1749. Colonel Stanton married (second) in 1752 Abigail Gardiner, daughter of Henry Gardiner, of South Kingstown, R. I., and there came to them children as follows: Gardiner, Marlboro, Henry and Abigail.

(V) Augustus Stanton, son of Col. Joseph Stanton (3), born March 22, 1745, in Westerly, R. I., married Feb. 6, 1765, Eunice Crandall, born Jan. 23, 1745, daughter of James and Damaris (Kenyon) Crandall. They were residents of Hancock, Mass., where Mr. Stanton died April 10, 1822. Their children were: Gen. Joseph, born about 1766; Robert, born Aug. 14, 1768; Oliver; Ethan; Marlboro; Esther; Lucy; Cynthia; Damaris and Charlotte.

(VI) Marlboro Stanton, son of Augustus, was born in 1779 in Rhode Island, and married Martha Hazard, born Jan. 25, 1782, daughter of

George W. and Martha (Babcock) Hazard, he a descendant of Thomas Hazard, who is first of record in this country at Boston in 1635, through Robert, George, Gov. George and Hon. George Hazard, at one time mayor of Newport. Marlboro Stanton died Dec. 21, 1835, at Charlestown, R. I. His children were: Albert Wanton, born in 1807, and George A., born Jan. 24, 1809, both in Charlestown, Rhode Island.

(VII) George Augustus Stanton, son of Marlboro, born Jan. 24, 1809, in Charlestown, R. I., married (first) March 8, 1834, Catherine Sands, who was born Nov. 9, 1813, daughter of William P. Sands, of Block Island, R. I., and died Sept. 30, 1846, at Charlestown. Mr. Stanton married (second) June 5, 1848, Sarah M. Brown, who was born Dec. 16, 1822, at Stonington, Conn., and died April 16, 1849. He married (third) Feb. 14, 1857, Bridget Babcock Browning, born Jan. 10, 1832, in Charlestown, R. I. George A. Stanton was a merchant, conducting a general store in Charlestown, and later went to Westerly, where he opened a boot and shoe store, continuing in that business until his death. A Democrat in politics, he served his native town as a member of the Legislature and as senator. His children were: By the first marriage—Nathaniel Greene; Kate Sands, a graduate of the Woman's College of New York, and residing in that city; Mary, who died in Providence, the wife of Nathan Hale; George A., a resident of Newport, who married (first) Hattie Mann and (second) Amy Elizabeth Dickinson; Benjamin F., a resident of Providence, in the employ of the Narragansett Broom Company, married to Emma Harris of Providence; and Martha, who died in infancy. There were no children to the second marriage. To the third marriage were born: Hattie, who is a school teacher of Westerly; Fannie, who married William Gavitt and resides in Westerly; and Anna, who married Daniel Champlin, and resides in Chicago.

(VIII) Nathaniel Greene Stanton was born July 8, 1835, in New Shoreham, and there began his schooling. Thence he went to the Suffield (Conn.) Institute for three terms, and then to Allegany county, N. Y., spending one year at the Alfred Center Academy. Locating in Providence, he took up the study of pharmacy in the office of Dr. Wadsworth Burrington, also taking lessons in the laboratory of Brown University for three years. Mr. Stanton was at Harvard when the war broke out, and he enlisted in the 1st Rhode Island Cavalry, as hospital steward, later being promoted to first lieutenant assistant surgeon; he was then brevetted captain, being in the service in all two years. After being mustered out Captain Stanton returned to Harvard and graduated therefrom in 1866, with the degree of M. D., later studying in Paris, London and Dublin for about one year. Returning to America at the end of that time, he took up practice in Providence in partnership with Dr. Thomas Potter, with whom he remained two years. At the end of that time Dr. Stanton went to Newport and became associated in practice with his cousin, the late Dr. Nathaniel Greene, this partnership continuing for seven years. His next partnership was with Dr. A. F. Squire, with whom he continued for a period of fourteen years, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his chosen profession alone, being now the oldest practicing physician in Newport. He is a member of the Chi Psi college fraternity. Dr. Stanton was a member of the Newport Artillery for fourteen years, being surgeon for that body, with the rank of major. In politics he is independent. He is a director and vice-president of the Island Savings Bank, and has numerous other business interests.

In manner Dr. Stanton is cordial and genial. He has a generous nature, and in his practice is painstaking and sympathetic, in the sickroom being cheerful and always gentle, to which qualities his large practice is due in a great measure. His politeness and cordial manner are inborn. During his long residence in Newport he has won the esteem and respect of the entire community.

GORHAM (Providence family). The family bearing this name in Providence and vicinity—the Bristol-Providence Gorhams—is a branch of the old Cape Cod family which is of two hundred and sixty and more years standing in New England, and of long, honorable connection in England. The family, it is said, accompanied William the Conqueror thither from Normandy, and members of the family, for services at the battle of Hastings, received a manorial estate at a place afterward called Gorhamsbury. Gorham, Maine, is named for a branch of this old Cape Cod family, among whose posterity have been many noble men and women of achievement and great usefulness. Here in Rhode Island, at Providence particularly, have figured in the last century some strong, forceful characters. Reference is especially made to the late Jabez Gorham and his son, the late John Gorham, whose names, in connection with the manufacture of jewelry, as founders and developers of the great Gorham Manufacturing Company of Providence, are world-wide.

This article deals briefly, in chronological order, with the genealogy and families of some of the Bristol-Providence Gorhams.

(I) James Gorham, born in 1550, died in 1576. In 1572 he married Agnes Bennington.

(II) Ralph Gorham, son of James, born in 1575, came to New England before 1637. His children were: Ralph and John.

(III) Capt. John Gorham, son of Ralph, born in Benefield, England, baptized Jan. 28, 1621, married in 1643, Desire Howland, born at Plymouth, about 1623, daughter of John Howland and Elizabeth Tilley, of the "Mayflower." He was buried at Swansea, Feb. 5, 1675-76. She died at Barnstable, Oct. 13, 1683. Their children were: Desire, born April 2, 1644, in Plymouth; Temperance, May 5, 1646, in Marshfield; Elizabeth, April 2, 1648, in Marshfield; James, April 28, 1650, in Marshfield; John, Feb. 20, 1651-52, in Marshfield; Joseph, Feb. 16, 1653-54, in Yarmouth; Jabez, Aug. 3, 1656, in Barnstable; Mercy, Jan. 20, 1658, in Barnstable; Lydia, Nov. 16, 1661, in Barnstable; Hannah, Nov. 28, 1663, in Barnstable; and Shubael, Oct. 21, 1667, in Barnstable.

(IV) Jabez Gorham, son of Capt. John, born Aug. 3, 1656, in Barnstable, Mass., married Hannah (Sturgis) Gray, daughter of Edward Sturgis, of Barnstable and Yarmouth. They removed from Barnstable to Bristol, R. I. He died between March 16, 1724-25, and May 18, 1725. Their children were: Hannah, born Dec. 23, 1677; Samuel, born April 15, 1682; Jabez, born Jan. 3, 1683-84; Shubael, born April 12, 1686; Isaac, born Feb. 1, 1689; John, born Nov. 8, 1690; Joseph, born Aug. 22, 1692; Hannah, born Feb. 21, 1693-94 (the last two baptized in 1695, in Christ's Church in Bristol); Benjamin, born Dec. 11, 1695; Thomas, born Oct. 30, 1701; and Elizabeth. In the census of Bristol in 1689 Jabez Gorham is mentioned with wife and four children. His widow passed away Oct. 17, 1736, at Cape Cod, whither she had returned after her husband's death.

(V) Jabez Gorham (2), son of Jabez, was born Jan. 31 (or 3), 1683-84. His first wife, Leah, died May 13, 1739, and he married (second) July 31, 1744, Mary Maxfield. He died Nov. 21, 1745. His children, all born to his first marriage were: Samuel, born Nov. 27, 1707, in Newport; Elizabeth, born April 9, 1710, in Newport; Shubael, born March 29, 1713, in Bristol; Hannah, baptized Oct. 27, 1717; Mary, baptized Oct. 10, 1721; Rebecca, baptized Jan. 5, 1723; Nathan, baptized Jan. 30, 1725-26; and Deborah, baptized Sept. 24, 1732 (last five baptized at Bristol).

(V) Isaac Gorham, son of Jabez, born Feb. 1, 1689, was twice married. His first wife bore the Christian name of Mary. She died Sept. 11, 1716, and he married (second) Aug. 6, 1717, Hannah Miles, daughter of Richard Miles, of New Haven, Conn. His children were: Isaac, born May 28, 1713; Hezekiah, born February, 1714-15 (both in Bristol and to Mary); John; Mary, born Oct. 10, 1721; Timothy, born Nov. 13, 1723; Hezekiah, born Dec. 5, 1725; Samuel; Elizabeth; and Hannah (all born in New Haven, Conn., and to Hannah).

(V) Benjamin Gorham, son of Jabez, born Dec. 11, 1695, married Bethiah Cary, born Dec. 9, 1696, daughter of David Cary, of Bristol. Mr. Gorham settled in Providence and is without doubt the first of the family to settle there. He died between Oct. 18, 1771, and Feb. 1, 1772. His wife Bethiah died probably before 1753. Their children were: Benjamin, born Aug. 22, 1718; Bethiah, baptized Aug. 5, 1722; Sarah, born Sept. 15, 1723; Elizabeth, baptized Jan. 21, 1727-28; Jabez; Samuel; and Jemima.

(VI) Jabez Gorham, son of Benjamin, married Oct. 4, 1753, Abigail Field, born Jan. 27, 1730, daughter of Jeremiah and Abigail (Waterman) Field, and their children were: Jabez, born July 15, 1760; Samuel, born Dec. 11, 1763; and John.

(VII) Jabez Gorham, son of Jabez, born July 15, 1760, followed the occupation of harness maker in Providence, his establishment being on North Main street. He married, Oct. 26, 1782, Catherine Tyler, born November, 1762. He died May 27, 1802, and she passed away, March 29, 1807. Their children were: Hannah, born Feb. 19, 1784, married Dexter Thurber; Benjamin, born March 2, 1786, married Emma Angell; Field, born July 27, 1787; Bethiah, born March 16, 1789, married William Comstock; Sarah, born Jan. 27, 1791; Jabez, born Feb. 18, 1792; Catherine, born June 30, 1793, married Dec. 24, 1810, Enos Angell; John, born June 4, 1795, married Jan. 15, 1816, at Smithfield, R. I., Marcy Mason; Sarah, born Feb. 2, 1797, married Dec. 29, 1819, Samuel Olney; William Field, born April 30, 1798.

(VIII) JABEZ GORHAM, son of Jabez and Catherine, born Feb. 18, 1792, in Providence, R. I., married (first) Dec. 4, 1816, Amey Thurber, daughter of Samuel and Mehetabel (Dexter) Thurber. She was born Jan. 30, 1795, in Providence, R. I., and died Nov. 26, 1820; and he married (second) April 16, 1822, Lydia Dexter, daughter of Lewis and Lydia (Comstock) Dexter. She was born in Smithfield, R. I., Nov. 11, 1797, and died Sept. 4, 1873. His children were:

(1) Benjamin, born Sept. 24, 1817, died Oct. 6th of that year.

(2) Amanda, born Dec. 11, 1818, married (first) May 14, 1838, William Gladding Price, and they had one child, William, now deceased, who had two sons, Raymond and Wayland. She married (second) Nov. 28, 1842, John Clark Harris, and their children were: Joseph, of Boston, who has two sons, Joseph Roy and Gorham W., and Jabez G., who resides in Providence and has Herbert C., Mary Amanda (now Mrs. Randolph T. Ode), and Edith. She married (third) April 22, 1889, Benjamin Comstock. She died March 17, 1897.

(3) John, born Nov. 18, 1820, in Providence, married Sept. 4, 1848, Amey Thurber, born Sept. 1, 1827, daughter of Isaac and Lucy (Brown) Thurber, and their children born in Providence, were: Lucy, deceased; Herbert, who was drowned at the age of fifteen; Amey Thurber, deceased; John Henry, deceased; Charles Isaac, of Buffalo, N. Y.; and Jabez, of Chicago. John Gorham died June 26, 1898.

(4) Benjamin, born Feb. 2, 1823, died Dec. 5th of the same year.

(5) Amey, born May 7, 1824, married Dec. 1, 1845, Henry Aborn Webb, and their children were: Harriet Raymond, who married Benjamin Greenwood, of Providence; and Amey, wife of Benjamin Ide Wheeler, President of the University of California, Berkeley, Cal.; the mother died Jan. 30, 1864.

(6) Susan, born July 3, 1825, married Nov. 15, 1865, Caleb Farnum, who died in Providence Feb. 1, 1898. Mrs. Farnum lives on Wesleyan avenue, Providence.

(7) Charles Field, born March 5, 1834, married (first) Feb. 27, 1854, Marianna Towne, and their one child, Ella, is now Mrs. George Messer, of North Attleboro, Mass. He married (second) April 19, 1860, Catherine B. Yerrington. Charles Field Gorham died Aug. 16, 1906.

Jabez Gorham, father of the above named children, attended the common schools of the town of his birth until fourteen years of age. On the death of his father, he was apprenticed to Nehemiah Dodge, a jeweler, and with him remained until twenty-one years of age. Not long thereafter, associated with Christopher Burr, William Hadwin, George G. Clark and Henry G. Mumford, he engaged in the manufacture of gold jewelry, their location being on the second floor of a building on the corner of North Main and Steeple streets, Providence. This firm did an extensive business, and after five years was dissolved, Mr. Gorham becoming sole proprietor of the business; he carried it on at the old stand until about 1828, when he purchased property on Steeple street which formed a part of the later establishment of the Gorham Manufacturing Company, and moved to it. The original firm made a variety of jewelry; later Mr. Gorham manufactured also what was styled the "Gorham Chain," which became celebrated, and later he, in addition, made silver spoons and associated with him Henry L. Webster, of Boston. The firm was styled Gorham & Webster until 1839, when Mr. Gorham retired from the establishment, but continued himself to make the "Gorham Chain." In 1841 he repurchased the silver business of the old concern, associated with him his son John, and under the firm name of J. Gorham & Son they manufactured spoons and silverware. The senior member of the firm retired from active business in 1847, leaving the son continuing it alone.

The senior Mr. Gorham in his political affiliations was a Whig and later a Republican. He served the public in a number of official relations; for several years he represented the city of Providence in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and from 1842 to 1844 he was a member of the common council of Providence from the First ward. In his early life for several years he commanded a military company. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of the Charitable Mechanics Society.

Mr. Gorham was one of the original proprietors of the Eagle Screw Company, and was influential in promoting the interests of that corporation. In his earlier life he resided at the corner of Benefit and Star streets, and in about 1858 built his brick dwelling at the corner of Benefit and Bowen streets, which was thereafter his home. He died March 24, 1869, aged seventy-seven years.

(IX) John Gorham, son of Jabez and for years his business partner, remained at school until perhaps eighteen years of age, then, until he joined his father in business in 1841, in Providence, he was occupied in clerical positions in Providence, Boston and New York. Father and son remained together in the manufacture of silver spoons, forks, thimbles and a small variety of other articles under the name of J. Gorham & Son, until the former's retirement from active business in 1847. The son continued the business alone and under the old name, but soon after purchased the five-story brick building on Canal street, since occupied by the Gorham Manufacturing Company. At about this time Mr. Gorham made a radical change in his manufacturing by introducing steam-power, which is believed to have been its first application to the manufacture of silverware. He also at this period commenced the introduction of those labor saving machines and appliances which ever thereafter were a distinguishing feature of his establishment. In 1850 Mr. Gorham Thurber was admitted to a partnership in the concern, and in 1852 Mr. Lewis Dexter became an associate in the business, the firm style changing respectively to Gorham & Thurber and to Gorham & Co. The senior member of the firm in 1852 visited Europe for the purpose of acquainting himself with the manufacture of silverware in other countries, returning the following fall, having engaged several skilled workmen in branches not well understood in this country. From year to year the business rapidly increased, and in 1860 Mr. Gorham again visited Europe on a similar errand and again brought operatives to this country, among whom were designers and modelers. The business increased, and with it additional accommodations in the way of buildings were afforded, and in the early sixties it was giving employment to some three hundred persons. The concern was incorporated in 1865 under the name of the Gorham Manufacturing Company, and Mr. Gorham was chosen president of the corporation. Two years later Mr. Gorham visited the French Exhibition, paying especial attention to the department of silverware. Again in 1869 he visited Europe, traveling more extensively in the interest of the company. The business continued to increase and outgrow its accommodations until in 1868 additional buildings were provided, and under Mr. Gorham's wise management the company became eminent for the excellent quality and artistic finish of its product. He built up a great institution in the thirty-six years of his connection with the business, retiring from it in February, 1878. During this long period he never permitted any article to pass as second quality or below the highest standard which it was capable of being made, and adopted in the beginning the one-price system.

In his earlier life Mr. Gorham was interested in military matters, and in the forties was active in public affairs. He was in part instrumental in organizing the Providence Horse Guards, and attained the position of lieutenant-colonel in the organization. As a Whig he represented Providence in the State Assembly. He was one of two members appointed for New England on the Centennial Board of Finance in 1876. He possessed in an eminent degree those qualities which insure success in the formation of large enterprises. He was a practical mechanic of artistic taste, and had an unusual ability to organize and contract. His views were broad and honorable. He was capable, persistent, patient and always self-controlled. He died at Chase City, Va., June 26, 1898.

STEDMAN. The branch of the Stedman family represented in South Kingstown is first mentioned in the vital statistics of that place in the early part of the eighteenth century, when the children of Thomas and Hannah McCoon Stedman are recorded as follows: John, born Sept. 21, 1725; Samuel, Dec. 4, 1726; Daniel, Oct. 10, 1728; Thomas, Oct. 10, 1730; Enoch, Nov. 5, 1734; Hannah, Feb. 6, 1736; James, March 3, 1738; Sarah, Aug. 30, 1742; and William, May 4, 1745. It is a family tradition that Thomas Stedman was of Scotch origin. He lived and died in South Kingstown, and his posterity have been among the substantial and useful men and women of the town; notably has this been shown in the lives of Hon. William T. Stedman and his brothers, the late Louis W., and Daniel, Oliver E. and Arthur W.

Oliver Stedman, grandfather of William T., was born in 1795, at Wakefield, R. I. He spent all his life in South Kingstown, a shoemaker by trade, but he also farmed and worked at carpentering and boat building. He married Frances Sweet, sister of Dr. William Sweet, and they had two sons: the eldest, Samuel, was a carpenter like his father. This son married Sarah Knowles and became the father of William Harrison, Samuel F. and James G. (deceased), all three generations residing in South Kingstown. The second son of Oliver and Frances Stedman was William.

William Stedman was born in South Kingstown, Jan. 29, 1818. He spent his life in that town, and attended the public schools of Wakefield, where his teachers were Edward H. Hazard and Mr. Gayno. After leaving school, he engaged in farming and fishing most of his life. He died Oct. 16, 1886. He married (first) in 1842, Elizabeth Tucker, and to this marriage there were born two daughters, Sarah and Ellen, both now deceased. He married (second) Jane Clark, daughter of Christopher Clark, and they had seven children: (1) William Thomas was born in Wakefield, R. I., March 20, 1852. (2) Daniel, born Feb. 26, 1854, was a baker in Wakefield. (3) Laura married Capt. Henry A. Whaley, lighthouse keeper at Point Judith. (4) John E., of Wakefield, married Helen, daughter of James W. Brown, and had one son, William E. (5) Louis W. died Dec. 24, 1904. (6) Oliver E. is a dentist at Wakefield. (7) Arthur W. is the postmaster at Wakefield.

HON. WILLIAM THOMAS STEDMAN was born at Wakefield, R. I., March 20, 1852. He attended public and private schools in Wakefield and Peace Dale, and the Kingstown Seminary. In 1870, at the age of eighteen years, he entered the employ of the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company as assistant bookkeeper, and through fidelity to his duties he was soon advanced to the position of bookkeeper, and later to that of secretary and assistant treasurer of the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company, and also of the Narragansett Pier Railroad Company. In politics Mr. Stedman is a Republican, and from 1895 to 1900 he was a member of the town council, being president of that body for four years. From 1901 to 1906 he was a representative in the State Legislature, in 1901 and 1902 serving on the committee on Charities and Corrections, and in 1903, 1904, 1905 on the Finance committee. He is a member and treasurer of the Peace Dale Congregational Church, and also treasurer of the Union Fire District.

On Feb. 29, 1888, Mr. Stedman married Sarah Clark, daughter of James B. Clark, and to them have come two children, Lucy Ripley, born Feb. 2, 1889; and Oliver Hazard, born July 7, 1891.

DANIEL STEDMAN was born in Wakefield, R. I., Feb. 26, 1854. He spent his earlier school days in Wakefield, and then for two years worked in Providence and attended school there. For some time he worked in the Peace Dale Mills and the Wakefield Mills, but about 1885 he engaged in the grocery business for himself on Main street, continuing there until 1896, when he sold out to Louis W. Stedman, his brother. In September of that year he went into a grocery and bakery on Robinson street, where he is still successfully engaged. His wife was a Miss Abby Ann Thomas, daughter of George P. Thomas of Wakefield. Mr. Stedman has been a Republican in politics and his fraternal connections are with Hope Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and Columbia Lodge, I. O. O. F.

LOUIS W. STEDMAN, who died Dec. 24, 1904, was for many years an active and prosperous business man of Wakefield. He was born March 10, 1865, and his education was acquired in the Wakefield schools. When he left school he went to work in the Peace Dale mills, and after some twelve years there he went into partnership with his brother Daniel in a grocery and market, and was associated with him till 1896, when he bought out his brother's interest and conducted the business alone till his death. In addition to this property he held stock in the Wakefield Manufacturing Company. Like the other members of the family he was an active Republican, and at the time of his death was chairman of the Republican town committee. He married Miss Rebecca Russell, daughter of Isaac D. Russell, of South Kingstown.

DR. OLIVER E. STEDMAN was born in Wakefield Aug. 27, 1866, and attended the public schools and the high school there. He engaged in business in 1886 with his brother Daniel under the firm name of Stedman Bros., but in 1892 he gave this up and went to the New York Dental College, graduating in 1895. He returned to Wakefield and practiced with Dr. Barbour, of that place, until January, 1906, when he opened an office in the Stedman block. In politics he is also a Republican. Dr. Stedman was married at Wakefield, April 13, 1895, to Phebe C. Sheldon, daughter of Jonathan Sheldon, of Wakefield. They have three children, as follows: Olive Evangeline, born Jan. 12, 1896; Madeline Parthenia, April 18, 1897; and Frederick Sheldon, April 6, 1904.

ARTHUR W. STEDMAN, a merchant and postmaster at Wakefield, was born in that town, Feb. 17, 1868, and was educated in the public schools. During early manhood he worked for half a year in the Peace Dale mills, and for two years in the mills at Wakefield. For some years afterward he was with the firm of Stedman Brothers and later with his brother Louis W., and upon the death of the latter became proprietor of the business, one of the best equipped groceries and markets in the town. He has always taken an active interest in all public movements, and in politics has been a staunch Republican. On June 20, 1898, he was appointed postmaster at Wakefield by President McKinley, and Dec. 9, 1902, was re-appointed by President Roosevelt. He is a member of the Postmasters' Association of New England.

Mr. Stedman married Neomi Thomas, daughter of George P. Thomas, of Wakefield, and they have one daughter, Helen Adeline.

HON. WILLIAM S. HAYWARD (deceased), long one of the leading business men of Providence, for several years its chief executive officer, for a dozen or more years officially connected with the city's municipal affairs and active and prominent in all that makes up good citizenship, was a fine type of American manhood—the product of his own business creation under American opportunities. Born and reared a poor boy, practically self-educated and surely self-made, he rose through the force of his make-up, his determination and ambition to high and honorable public station.

William S. Hayward was born Feb. 26, 1835, in the town of Foster, R. I., and began his life on a farm, attending school until he was twelve years of age. At this early age he obtained work on the farm of Mr. Bennet L. Holden in the town of Old Warwick, same State, where he remained several years, during which period he attended the public schools four terms. In 1851 he came to Providence and obtained a position in the bakery of Rice & Hayward, the members of the firm at that time being Mr. Fitz James Rice and Mr. George W. Hayward. Young Hayward remained with these gentlemen one year, when he accepted a position with Mr. Calvin Rockwood at an increased salary. He remained with Mr. Rockwood until 1853, then returned to his former employers, becoming their salesman, in which capacity he continued until 1858. In this last named year he purchased the delivery department of their business to supply the trade, they retaining the right to supply out-of-town customers. In 1860 the two branches united, and Mr. Hayward became a member of the firm, the style being Rice, Hayward & Company.

The breaking out of the Civil war in 1861 suggested a new avenue of business, and on the first of November of that year Mr. Hayward went to Washington City, where, in connection with the late L. H. Humphreys, he established what was known as the "Rhode Island Bakery." For several years the business was remarkably successful. It was confined principally to sutlers and others dependent upon the army for patronage, but when the army in its forward movement crossed over into Virginia, the "Rhode Island Bakery" was left without patronage, and the owners, sharing in the general belief that the war was nearly over, sold out their business at considerable loss and returned to Providence.

In 1863 Mr. Hayward bought the entire business of Messrs. Rice, Hayward & Co., and assumed full management. Under his wise conduct of affairs, his energy and enterprise, the business rapidly increased through the patronage solicited from the troops encamped in Rhode Island during the war. In 1865 Mr. Fitz James Rice again became a partner of Mr. Hayward, the partnership continuing until the death of Mr. Rice in 1893.

The public life of Mr. Hayward began in 1872. His career had been watched by his fellow citizens and neighbors who had seen him gradually rise in the business world, conducting his own affairs in that safe, careful, business-like manner that prompted their calling him to public station. He was elected a member of the common council from the Sixth ward in 1872, and was annually re-elected until 1876, when he took a seat in the board of aldermen representing the same ward and filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. N. F. Potter, Jr., who was elected Water Commissioner in that year. He served as a member of the board until 1878, and as president of the board from 1878 until 1880, when he was chosen mayor of Providence, which office he filled for three years in succession. Mr. Hayward was also for a long time a member of the board of State Charities and Corrections, resigning some three or four years before his death. He was commissioner of the City Sinking Fund and a commissioner of Dexter Asylum. He was president of the Union Trust Company of Providence, and a director of the Eagle National and Citizens Savings Banks. He was also chairman of the Standing Committee of the Union Congregational Church. Among fraternal orders he belonged to What Cheer Lodge of Masons and Calvary Commandery, Knights Templar; the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and the Knights of Pythias. He, too, was a member of the First Light Infantry, of the Franklin Society and other organizations.

On Nov. 9, 1859, Mr. Hayward was married to Miss Lucy Maria, daughter of the late Fitz James Rice, Esq., of Providence. Mr. Hayward was a man of fine physique, and of commanding presence, standing over six feet, two inches in height, and weighing two hundred and twenty pounds.

Mr. Hayward died at midday Nov. 5, 1900, at his home on Broad street, with Bright's disease, after an illness of only eight days. His funeral took place at the Union Congregational Church on Broad street, Providence, the services being conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Nutting, and Dr. W. W. Woolley. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, business associates and friends of the deceased, among whom were many of the prominent men of the State, among the latter being Senator Aldrich, Chief Justice John H. Stiness and Judge Pardon E. Tillinghast, later made Chief Justice and now deceased, and Governor Gregory. The pall bearers were: James H. Smith, G. W. R. Matteson, Mr. Sampson, C. D. Sellew, Dutée Wilcox, Albert W. Smith, Henry Z. Green and A. E. Allen.

Mr. Hayward needs no eulogy, his life work—what he accomplished, what he made of himself—is the highest standard of his measurement. One has only to read between the lines of this brief outline of his career, and to note the expression of the press of the city in which that career was passed, while yet he was among the living, to know his size.

On the retirement of Mr. Hayward as the chief executive of the city the local papers paid him deserved compliments. On this occasion said The Providence Journal of Jan. 5, 1884: "The pleasant words of thanks to Mayor Hayward which accompanied the close of his legislative functions, have much more than an official and perfunctory significance. They indicate not only the warm feeling of personal respect and regard of the associates, won by unflinching kindness and impartiality, but that of the community as well for a high order of administrative ability, sincere devotion to the public welfare, and a graceful courtesy and dignity worthy of the chief magistrate of the city."

On the same occasion another of the local papers, The Providence Evening Press of Jan. 7, 1884, said editorially among other things: "The valedictory address of Mayor Hayward delivered before the city council, today, very properly is confined to a brief summary of some of the more important operations of the various departments of the city government during his term of office, which has embraced the past three municipal years. It informs us that the net city debt has been decreased during that period $593,646.43." After referring to other matters in the address it sums it up as follows: "Such is a brief summary of the matters treated in the valedictory address of His Honor, Mayor William S. Hayward, now ex-mayor of the city of Providence, than whom no more honest, upright, well-meaning man ever occupied the mayoral office of this or any other city in the land. He has given twelve years of an honest man's life to the service of the city in one and another of the different branches of its municipal government, and retires today to private life crowned with the enviable unperishable honor of a well-spent public career, and laden with the grateful thanks of his fellow citizens."

And still another of the local papers, The Providence Evening Telegram of Jan. 7, 1884, on the same occasion remarked: "At noon today Mayor Hayward performed the last official act of his administration, and bade farewell to the halls of municipal legislation. There was a tinge of sadness to his final parting words, for during the three years he occupied the mayoral office he had endeared himself to all officials of the city government, and to our citizens generally, by his faithful discharge of duties, and courteous and affable manners."

Mr. Hayward was always a supporter of all measures for the benefit of the city and people, and contributed much of his time and means to the furtherance thereof. The beautiful fountain which adorns the center of Hayward Park was his present to the citizens of the city of Providence in 1889.

After Mr. Hayward's death his widow carried on the business for upwards of a year, when it was disposed of. Mrs. Hayward was married Dec. 10, 1903, to James Henry Smith, of Providence, and she died July 5, 1906, at Bethlehem, New Hampshire.

FITZ JAMES RICE (deceased), of Providence, was late senior member of the firm of Rice & Hayward.

While born and bred in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and representing a family of approximately two hundred and seventy years' standing there, the late Fitz James Rice became through the nearly sixty years of his residence here a true Rhode Islander, one among the leading business men and substantial citizens of its capital city, Providence. He descended through seven generations of a worthy race of people, men and women of high resolve and noble purpose, who left their impress upon society. Mr. Rice sprang from Edmund Rice, the emigrant ancestor of the family, from whom his lineage is through Henry, Jonathan, Hezekiah, Jonathan (2), Phineas and Micajah Rice. These generations in detail follow in the order named.

(I) Edmund Rice, born about 1594, came from England to New England. He settled at Sudbury in 1639, removed to Marlboro, and died there, May 3, 1663.

(II) Henry Rice, son of Edmund, born about 1617, was admitted a freeman in 1658. He married at Sudbury, Feb. 1, 1643, Elizabeth Moore, and resided at Sudbury, and lastly at Framingham, where he died Feb. 10, 1710-11. His wife Elizabeth died Aug. 3, 1705.

(III) Jonathan Rice, son of Henry, born July 3, 1654, married March 23, 1674-75, Martha Eames, and resided at Sudbury, where she died Feb. 2, 1675-76. His second wife was Rebecca Watson, of Cambridge, whom he married Nov. 1, 1677. She died at Sudbury, Dec. 22, 1689. His third wife was Elizabeth Wheeler, whom he married Feb. 12, 1690-91. He removed to Framingham after 1705, where he died April 12, 1725.

(IV) Hezekiah Rice, son of Jonathan, born in 1694, married April 23, 1719, Mary Haynes, of Sudbury, and resided at Marlboro and Framingham. He was for many years selectman at Framingham. He died Dec. 16, 1761, and his widow Mary passed away Dec. 16, 1785.

(V) Jonathan Rice (2), son of Hezekiah, born Oct. 8, 1725, married Oct. 29, 1746, Ruth Eames, and died at Framingham, in 1780, aged about fifty-five years. His widow Ruth died May 16, 1805, aged seventy-eight years.

(VI) Phineas Rice, son of Jonathan (2), born Nov. 23, 1761, married June 3, 1784, Ruth Perry, of Natick. She died at Framingham Oct. 28, 1832, in her seventieth year. His second wife was Susanna, widow of Ebenezer M. Ballard, and daughter of John and Abigail (Howe) Fiske. Mr. Rice died May 17, 1842, aged eighty-one. Mr. Rice was a patriot of the Revolution, serving as an officer in the army. On the closing of the ports of Boston to commerce and navigation just before the war, by the English Parliament, he rendered valuable service to the country by transporting, by means of ox teams, merchandise from New York to Boston.

(VII) Micajah Rice, son of Phineas, baptized in June, 1787, married April 24, 1810, Lucy Bannister, and resided at Framingham, where she died March 28, 1835, and he married (second) June 30, 1842, Abigail Paige, born in Hillsboro, New Hampshire.

(VIII) Fitz James Rice, son of Micajah and Lucy (Bannister) Rice, born July 14, 1814, in Barre, Mass., married Dec. 25, 1837, Elizabeth Borden Cooke, of Fall River, Mass. She died in 1872, and he married (second) in 1874, Mrs. Rebecca R. (Lewis) Cooke, widow of William B. Cooke, of New Bedford, Massachusetts.

While yet in his infancy the parents of Mr. Rice removed to the town of Framingham, Mass., his father's birthplace. Here young Rice passed his early boyhood. At the age of seventeen years he went to Medfield in the same State and there for four years was occupied in learning the baker's trade in the well-known establishment of Mr. W. P. Balch. After the completion of his trade he worked at it for one year at Fall River, Mass. Coming to Providence in 1837 he was engaged for the next five years in the bakery of Mr. Benjamin Balch of this city, following which he began business for himself. Associated with George W. Hayward in 1849, whom he had known well when both were apprentices in Medfield, Mr. Rice established the business which was so long and so favorably known, and as well which proved so extensive and profitable, conducted under the name of Rice & Hayward, and becoming one of the largest establishments of its kind in North Carolina.

In 1860 Mr. William S. Hayward, who had had for some years a business connection as salesman, etc., with the concern, and who had married a daughter of Mr. Rice, was admitted as a member of the firm, the style of which then became Rice, Hayward & Co. Three years later the partnership was dissolved, Mr. William S. Hayward becoming the sole owner of the business. He conducted it alone for two years, when in 1865, Mr. Rice again became associated with him in the business which was conducted under the old firm name of Rice & Hayward, the senior member remaining a partner through the remainder of his life.

Mr. Rice was a good type of the New England citizen. He was industrious and frugal, and so managed his business affairs as to lay by a competence. He was simple in his manner of life, yet gave liberally to worthy causes and ever manifested an interest in such lines as tended to elevate mankind and advance his city and town. He was chosen a member of the common council of Providence in 1868, and re-elected in 1869, giving to that body efficient service. In 1856 he united with the High Street Congregational Church, at the time under the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Woolcut, the church later uniting with the Richmond Street Church and the two becoming what is the Union Congregational Church. He was particularly interested in missionary work, and for a number of years was a member of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions. He became a life member of the Y. M. C. A. at Providence in 1877. He had taken a deep interest in this organization for many years, and to it gave liberally, both of his time and means. He became a member of What Cheer Lodge of Masons at Providence in 1857, and later on was made Commander of Calvary Commandery, Knights Templar, and in this same order held other high official stations.

To the first marriage of Mr. Rice were born five children, namely: Lucy M. (deceased), who married (first) Hon. William S. Hayward, and (second) James Henry Smith; George A., a resident of Providence; Arthur G., who died when young; Carolina C. and Lizzie J., both of whom also died when young.

During his long residence in Providence of more than fifty years, Mr. Rice was highly appreciated and esteemed for his business acumen and capacity, for his social qualities and benevolent disposition. The old family homestead was on Christian Hill, where he resided nearly all of the time after coming to Providence. The latter ten years of his life were spent where his widow now resides, No. 382 Trinity Square. His sudden death from apoplexy occurred Aug. 10, 1893, at the home of Capt. George W. Conley on Block Island, where he was temporarily sojourning.

WILSON. The East Providence Wilsons with which this article deals rank as one of the early and historic families of New England. One Roger Willson, of Scrooby, England, was one of those persons, who, in 1608, fled with the Puritans from religious persecution, and settled in Leyden, Holland. From his connection with the "Mayflower" expedition his descendants are really entitled to be classed among those of the Pilgrim Fathers, although he never realized his intention of coming to the New World. His youngest son, Lieut. John, and the only one to come to America, was the founder of a branch of the Wilsons of the old Rehoboth and Seekonk region of Massachusetts. The following sketch of Roger Willson and much of the data pertaining to the earlier generations are taken from an authentic sketch and genealogical chart prepared in October, 1862, by Mr. S. C. Newman, member of the Rhode Island Historical Society, under the patronage of Mr. George F. Wilson.

"Roger Willson was born in the village of Scrooby, County of Nottingham, England, about 1588. He was of Rev. John Robinson's Church, whose members fled from persecution in 1608, and finally settled in Leyden. He was a prominent member of the church, and of the secular organization of that Pilgrim body of Puritans. Although most of that little society were poor, being stripped of much of their substance before leaving England, he was more fortunate than most of his associates, and in Leyden was a woolen and silk draper. He was one of the joint stock company which fitted out the May Flower for the first band of Pilgrims. He did not come with them, but from allusions to him in the Leyden records it is inferred that he intended to join them at some later period, as was the case with Rev. Mr. Robinson.

"Mr. Robinson died March 1, 1624, and that event about broke up their organization. They were like sheep without a shepherd and hearing of the great suffering of their friends, the Pilgrims, they continued to drag out a few more years at Leyden, and as the persecution had died away in England a portion of them returned thither, and the remainder became absorbed in the Dutch population, and were no more known as a distinct people. Whether Mr. Willson returned to England is not certainly known, but from the fact that his youngest child, Lieut. John, at the age of twenty emigrated to America in 1651, it is conjectured that his father had returned to England and died there, as there is no record of his death at Leyden.

"There have been a great number of families, and individuals giving rise to families here, by the name of Willson, which have, at various periods of our Colonial and State history, emigrated from England, Ireland and Scotland to America; but the family here sketched, and which came so near becoming extinct, so far as America is concerned, is the only portion of the race, whose ancestry held any connections with the Puritans at Leyden, and assisted in fitting out that immortal band with the first Pilgrim ship in 1620, which has laid the foundation for a great Western Empire. * * *

"The light now thrown upon the origin of this race cannot fail to excite a deep and permanent interest in the present and coming generations, inasmuch as the descendants of the venerated Roger Willson are as indissolubly connected with the origin and success of the first Pilgrim ship that reached our shores as any descendants of the actual passengers of the May Flower now living in our country. * * *

"The wife of Roger Willson was sister to Dr. Samuel Fuller, the surgeon and physician who came in the May Flower. Mr. Willson was a deacon in the Rev. Mr. Robinson's Church at Leyden, before the Pilgrim ship sailed for America. Dr. Fuller died at Plymouth in 1633, and his will is the first on record in America, and is the oldest will made on this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

"From all that can now be gathered and known concerning Roger Willson, the ancestor of the race here sketched, and the connections of his wife, it is fairly and historically inferable that he occupied a first class position among the ever memorable band of Pilgrims, at Leyden, and that without his energetic co-operation the first ship of the Pilgrims might never have sailed and landed on our shores. He was bondsman for the only three men who ever obtained the freedom of the city of Leyden—William Bradford, the first Governor of Plymouth Colony, Isaac Allerton, and Deggory Priest—men whose names will be remembered and honored as long as there shall be any remembrance of the Pilgrim Fathers, and their settlement at Plymouth."

In this article especial reference is made to the posterity of the late Benjamin Wilson, who lived at Uxbridge and East Douglass, Mass., and whose sons, the late Hon. George Francis Wilson and the present Hon. Benjamin Wilson, both long identified with one of the large and important industries of East Providence, have been substantial men and prominent citizens of the town, and as well their sons, several of whom are carrying forward to still greater success the work established and fostered by their fathers, and are worthily perpetuating the family name.

(I) Lieut. John Wilson, the first of the line in America, born in 1631, was the youngest son of Roger Willson and his wife Mary (Fuller), and the only one who came to America. He made the journey in 1651, fought as a lieutenant in the Indian wars, and proved himself a most worthy man. He died in 1691. He was twice married, and his second wife was buried in the old Seekonk cemetery. His children were born in Woburn, Mass., as follows: Samuel, Dec. 29, 1658; Abigail, Aug. 8, 1666; Elizabeth, Aug. 6, 1668; Benjamin, Oct. 15, 1670; Hannah, May 31, 1672 (died young); John, Jan. 3, 1674; Hannah, Dec. 28, 1674 (died young); Hannah, March 11, 1677; Susanah, March 12, 1679.

(II) Benjamin Wilson, born Oct. 15, 1670, son of Lieut. John, moved to Rehoboth after the death of his father in 1691, became a man of property, and is often alluded to in the records of Rehoboth. He was twice married there, and had eighteen children, all born in Rehoboth, namely: By first wife—Jonathan, born Nov. 8, 1698 (died young); Rebecca, Jan. 20, 1701; Hannah, Oct. 7, 1702; Frances, Sept. 7, 1704; Elizabeth, July 8, 1706; Samuel, Jan. 5, 1708; Ruth, April 7, 1710; Bethiah, Dec. 4, 1711; Abigail, Aug. 30, 1713; Mary, Oct. 17, 1714; Sarah, Feb. 23, 1729; by second wife—John, Oct. 29, 1733; Lucas, Aug. 10, 1735; Ammi, April 26, 1737; Benjamin, April 11, 1739; Jonathan, April 7, 1741; Ezekiel, May 11, 1744; Chloe, June 23, 1746.

(III) John Wilson, son of Benjamin, was born Oct. 29, 1733, and lived to be ninety-three years old. All his days were passed at Rehoboth except for the period he served in the French and Revolutionary wars. He was a soldier in the old French war under Gen. Putnam, and also served in the Revolutionary war, enlisting in a company of infantry raised in Rehoboth. He was a large, powerful man, and many anecdotes of his daring deeds, while in the armies, are interspersed through the annals of Rehoboth, and tradition still tells of his great strength and activity in the athletic trials of the days in which he lived. In these he never met his equal. His children were all born at Rehoboth, as follows: Molly, Dec. 2, 1764 (married Abel French); Sarah,* Sept. 15, 1766 (died young); Joseph, June 25, 1768; Sarah, Oct. 15, 1770 (married Job Knapp, of Douglass); John, Feb. 15, 1773; Miles, Jan. 27, 1775; Abigail, April 6, 1777 (married Richard Olney); Betsey, Sept. 23, 1779 (married Abraham Ormsbee); Benjamin, March 23, 1783; Lucretia, April 24, 1785 (never married).

(IV) Benjamin Wilson, son of John, born March 23, 1783, was three times married, his first wife being ——— Perry, his second Mercy Cragin, and his third Elona Carpenter, daughter of Nathaniel Carpenter, of Rehoboth, Mass. To the second marriage were born three children—George Francis, Laura Maria and Mary Ann—and to the third four—John, Joseph, Benjamin and Harriet Elona.

(V) GEORGE FRANCIS WILSON, eldest son of Benjamin and Mercy Wilson, born Dec. 7, 1818, in Uxbridge, Mass., married in 1844, Clarissa Bartlett, daughter of Prescott and Narcissa Bartlett, of Conway, Mass., a lady of fine culture and intelligence and of lovely character.

Mr. Wilson lived upon a farm, attending district schools winters, until at the age of seventeen he injured his hip, while at the plow, so as to affect his gait for life, and was apprenticed to Welcome and Darius Farnum, of Waterford, Mass., to learn the trade of wool sorting. The reason he gave for selecting this trade was characteristic of the man. "That kind of work cannot be done in the night, and I shall have all my evenings for study." At the end of three years he had mastered his trade and also had made drawings of every machine in the mill, and fully understood the entire business. Frederick M. Ballou, Esq., and John W. Wheelock were apprentices with Mr. Wilson, and they fitted up a room, where they passed their evenings together in study. Of the three, his lifelong friend, Mr. Ballou, alone survived Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson received recommendations from his employers and a valuable testimonial, but he wished for a better education before commencing in earnest the work of his life, and having added to previous savings by a year of bookkeeping for Squire Bezeleel Taft, of Uxbridge, he entered the academy at Shelburne Falls, Mass., as a pupil, and afterward became a teacher there.

In 1844 Mr. Wilson went with his newly married wife to Chicago, traveling by canal to Buffalo and by schooner through the lakes. Here they opened the Chicago Academy, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the corner of Clark and Washington streets, commencing with three scholars, and ending in 1848, when they decided to return East, with 225 pupils, including many who have largely contributed to the progress of the wonderful city, among these John B. and Charles Farwell. From 1848 to 1854 Mr. Wilson was successively in the employ of the late Gov. Jackson, the elder Sprague, at Quidnick, and the Atlantic Delaine Company, at Olneyville. In January, 1855, he entered into a partnership with Prof. E. N. Horsford, of Cambridge, Mass., who then held the Rumford Professorship at Harvard, for a purpose which is best expressed, perhaps, in one clause of their agreement made at that time, somewhat quaint for these modern days, and well worthy of record. This clause declares their purpose to be that of "building up a chemical manufacturing establishment of respectability and permanency, such as shall be an honor to ourselves and our children, and a credit to the community in which it is located, and which shall afford us a reasonable means of support." How well their intentions were realized all know who are familiar with the manufacturing interests of this vicinity. In 1856-57 the business was moved from Providence to what was then Seekonk, but which, by change of the State line, has since become East Providence, and the firm of George F. Wilson & Co. became, and has since continued to be, the Rumford Chemical Works, and the names of its productions are now household words in this country from one ocean to the other.

The business of the Rumford Chemical Works as stated was established by George F. Wilson and Professor E. N. Horsford in 1854-55. In 1858 (or 1859) the concern was incorporated as the Rumford Chemical Works, the name being given to the works and village where one of its plants is located, in honor of Count Rumford, the eminent authority on the means of supplying nutritious food, who had founded at Harvard University a professorship for the purpose of teaching the utility of science, a chair which was occupied by Professor Horsford from 1847 to 1863. At these works are manufactured culinary and medical preparations of the phosphates, including Rumford Baking Powder, Horsford's Bread Preparation, Rumford Yeast Powder, Horsford's Acid Phosphates, etc. At the time of the beginning of the manufacture of these phosphatic products, under the patent of Professor Horsford, the only virtue of any baking powder, yeast or other preparation for the raising of bread was its power to make the dough light, none of them contributing anything of nutritious value. Professor Horsford's object was to produce a powder that would not only raise the dough, but also supply the nutritious elements so essential to the healthy condition of the human body which are removed from fine white flour during the process of bolting, and how well he succeeded in accomplishing his object may be judged by the statement of the late Baron Liebig, of Germany, one of the leading chemists of his time, who in commenting upon this preparation said, "I consider this invention as one of the most useful gifts which science has made to mankind. It is certain that the nutritive value of flour will be increased ten per cent by this phosphatic preparation."

Of Professor Horsford's profound knowledge and research as a chemist were born the preparations which bear his name, while to Mr. Wilson's genuine and indomitable energy are due the credit of inventing the unique apparatus and machinery for their practical production, the creation of a demand for articles hitherto unknown, and the building up of a successful business in their manufacture.

Mr. Wilson resided in Providence from 1852 to 1861, during which time he was for many years a very prominent member of the school committee, and for two terms served the city in the House of Representatives, in 1860 and 1861. In 1861 he removed to East Providence, where he ever afterward resided. He was four times elected a member of the school committee, and was also one of the town council of 1873, the other members being Hon. William Whitcomb and Hon. E. D. Pearce, all of whom died within a year of each other—the latter gentleman dying within a few hours of Mr. Wilson. Their long controversy over the red bridge question is well known, and the characteristic energy which each threw into the contest; but perhaps only those who were intimate with them know that during the whole of it they were frequent visitors at each others' houses, and always met and greeted one another as "George" and "Ned," and their friendship afterward seemed to be rather strengthened than impaired.

Mr. Wilson's thorough knowledge of mechanical principles and appliances was well known, and was practically exemplified in his own business. His opinion was constantly sought upon new inventions and his advice by inventors struggling with mechanical difficulties in their road to success, many of whom left with substantial assistance in addition to advice. His own inventions, both of process and appliances, were numerous, as the files of the Patent Office will show. Outside of the business of the works, some of the most important are an improvement in the manufacture of steel, a revolving boiler for paper manufacture, and important discoveries in illuminating apparatus for lighthouse use.

In 1872 the honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred on Mr. Wilson by Brown University. He was a member of the Franklin Lyceum, the Franklin Society and the Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry, and for many years actively participated in the proceedings of all of them. His interest in agricultural matters was always great and the contributions of the works under his direction to the affairs of the latter society, both of stock and farm products, were remarkable for excellence and quantity. He was an extensive reader, a deep thinker, possessed of a mind and memory of no common order, and his universal and thorough acquaintance with all current and scientific subjects, and with literature, astonished all who knew what a busy life he led.

It has been stated that the wife of Mr. Wilson was a woman of fine culture and intelligence and of lovely character. To her is attributed a large measure of the success of the Academy at Chicago, in which they were both teachers, and she was, indeed, a helpmate to him in the days of his early struggle as a manufacturer. Her memory is held in loving reverence by many of the employes of her husband, among whom she went with open hand, and to whose necessities in sickness and trouble she so often ministered. Her death occurred in 1880. Five children, two sons and three daughters, survived Mr. Wilson. The six children of George F. and Clarissa (Bartlett) Wilson were born as follows: Clara Frances, March 13, 1847; Ellery Holbrook, Sept. 20, 1848; George Francis, Oct. 10, 1850; Mary Augusta, July 25, 1852; Ella Narcissa, Aug. 23, 1855 (died young); Alice Louise, Sept. 2, 1859.

Mr. Wilson died at his home in East Providence (formerly a part of the ancient Seekonk, Mass.) Jan. 19, 1883. In his will he bequeathed to Dartmouth College the sum of $50,000 for the erection of a library building, and to Brown University the sum of $100,000 for the erection and equipment of the Physical Laboratory known as Wilson Hall.

The Providence Journal at the time of his death prefaced its remarks with these lines:

"The death of George F. Wilson will recall many reminiscences of a man not more distinguished as a successful manufacturer than for general culture and energetic discharge of duty in business and official life," and closed them with the following:

"Thus ends a life full of lessons to the young, a practical exemplification of the great truth that in this country a man's life may be what the boy resolves it shall be."

(V) BENJAMIN WILSON, son of Benjamin and Elona (Carpenter) Wilson, and a half-brother of George Francis Wilson, born March 15, 1833, in East Douglass, Mass., married Julia Emeline, daughter of Elijah K. Dickinson, of Barre, Mass. He was educated in the common schools and high school at East Douglass, Mass., but left school when about seventeen years of age. By careful reading of standard works he has overcome his earlier deficiency, and is a thoroughly educated and cultured man, and he takes great pride in his fine private library. When about twenty years of age he was employed as bookkeeper at Northbridge, Mass., for Deacon Joel Batchelder, a boot and shoe manufacturer. He then came to Rhode Island and entered the employ of the Atlantic Delaine Mill, Olneyville, where his brother George F. was employed, and in 1854 or '55, when the business of George F. Wilson was established, began as an employe in the concern. Two years later, in 1856, he went to Chicago, Ill., and engaged in the business of brick making. Owing to impaired health he returned East in 1864, and again identified himself with the Rumford Chemical Works, being made superintendent of the plant, a position he has held for over forty years, during which time he has contributed his portion to the success of this great industry by his careful attention and management of its affairs.

Mr. Wilson for many years has taken an active part in the public affairs of East Providence. He is a Republican and has been active in his party, was for more than twenty-one years a member of the town council and its president for eighteen years, was three years judge of probate, and was elected a second time in November, 1905. He is well known in the Business Men's Association, having served the association as first vice-president, and was its second president. He is a member of both the Athletic and Pomham Clubs, and fraternally of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and at one time took an active part in the latter order. Like his brother Mr. Wilson is a man of excellent mental equipment. Largely self-educated, he is well read and a most entertaining conversationalist. He is a close student of human nature, and meets men in all the various relations of life with rare good judgment.

To Benjamin and Julia Emeline (Dickinson) Wilson have been born four children: Fred W. died at the age of seventeen, of scarlet fever. Clarence E. is a graduate of Brown University and Columbia College and is now a chemist at the American Smelting & Refining Co., at Perth Amboy, N. J. Benjamin died of scarlet fever. Jessie, who lives at home, is a graduate of Brown University, having taken two degrees.

ATWOOD. The Atwood family has been one of considerable prominence and consequence in England, where nearly fifteen different families of the name had, up to a generation ago, entered their coats of arms in the Herald's office. It has been a numerous family on both sides of the Atlantic. Here in New England the name appeared earliest in Massachusetts. One John Atwood, gentleman, from London, was in Plymouth as early as 1636, and was assistant in the Colony two years later; he left no issue. Dr. Thomas Atwood, said to have been captain of a troop of horse under Cromwell, settled first in Plymouth and later removed to Wethersfield, Conn. Harmon Atwood, of Sanderstead, Surrey, England, son of John and grandson of Nicholas Atwood, is of record at Boston in 1642, in which year he was admitted an inhabitant. His descendants have, since early in the seventeenth century, been somewhat numerous in Rhode Island and Connecticut, where in each generation they have been citizens of worth and stability.

Charles Walton Atwood, of whom and of whose lineage and posterity this article treats, was for many years one of the most substantial of Providence citizens, and in his business connections was identified with the growth and prosperity of the city to as great a degree, perhaps, as any other of his day. He descended from Harmon Atwood, above mentioned, the lineage being as follows:

(I) Harmon Atwood, son of John and grandson of Nicholas and Olive Atwood, appears first of record in this country at the time of his admission as an inhabitant of Boston, Mass., in 1642, in which year he was in the employ of Thomas Battolph, a leather dresser or Glover. In 1642 he was a member of the artillery company, and the next year he was made a freeman. On Feb. 24, 1644, he was admitted to the Church, and on Aug. 11, 1646 he was married to Ann, daughter of William Copp, who came to America in the ship "Blessing" in 1635. Harmon Atwood died in 1650. His two children were: John, baptized Sept. 5, 1647 (aged four days), and Sarah, baptized May 26, 1650.

(II) John Atwood, son of Harmon, born Sept. 1, 1647, was, in 1673, a member of the artillery company, of which he became lieutenant in 1695. He was admitted to the First Church in 1675, and was deacon in the old North Church (Second) in 1693. He was twice married. His first wife, Sarah, died in 1689, the mother of four children, namely: John, born May 23, 1671; Joshua, June 3, 1673; Samuel, May 13, 1687; and Sarah, Nov. 11, 1688. On Oct. 27, 1690, he married (second) Widow Mary Smith, daughter of Zachariah Long, of Charlestown, Mass., who bore him the following children: Mary, born Sept. 1, 1691; John, Feb. 16, 1693; Samuel, March, 1696; Abigail, Nov. 17, 1699; and James, April 10, 1701. John Atwood died Aug. 24, 1714, and his wife Mary passed away March 18, 1728. Many of his children died in youth or infancy, the sons, John and Joshua, perpetuating the name. The descendants of John are elsewhere mentioned.

(III) Joshua Atwood, born June 3, 1673, died while still a young man, leaving a son Francis, whose mother married a second time, and became a resident of Providence, bringing with her the son Francis.

(IV) Francis Atwood married Mary, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Hearndon) Williams, granddaughter of Joseph and Lydia (Olney) Williams, and great-granddaughter of Roger Williams. Their children were: Charles, Nathaniel, Thomas, John, William, Lydia and Anna.

(V) Charles Atwood, son of Francis, married in 1746, Mary Green, born Dec. 18, 1718, daughter of Jabez Green, who was a son of James and grandson of Surgeon John Green, of Salisbury, County Wilts, England, who came to New England and to Providence, becoming one of the founders of the Providence Plantations. The children of Charles and Mary were: Nehemiah, an old time merchant, married, Dec. 31, 1786, Joanna Snell; Charles married Mary Brayton; Caleb; Elizabeth married Daniel Brayton; and Mary married Benjamin Brayton. Charles Atwood, the father, purchased a large tract of land in the town of Warwick, R. I., which included the present site of the Lippitt and Phenix Mills. In 1783 the Lippitt mill site passed into the hands of his son Nehemiah, who used the water power to operate a grist mill.

(VI) Caleb Atwood, son of Charles and Mary, married July 29, 1781, Meriam, daughter of John Walton, and their children were: John Walton, born April 12, 1786; Rayward, born April 16, 1789, was a captain in Kent county militia, and was twice married, his second wife being Frances Slocum; Catherine, born May 22, 1792; Charlotte, born Aug. 22, 1796, married Rev. Potter. Caleb Atwood was a resident of the town of Warwick, where all of his children were born and reared, and he was well and favorably known in his day and generation.

(VII) Capt. John Walton Atwood, son of Caleb and Meriam, was born April 12, 1786, and was a patriot in the war of 1812. He was a resident of Phenix, in the town of Warwick, and was always much interested in military affairs, serving in the Fourth regiment, Kent County Militia, as ensign, lieutenant and captain. He was of tall and commanding presence and his snow white hair attracted much attention. His character was as sturdy and rugged as was his constitution, and tradition relates much of his physical prowess and moral goodness. His wife, Catharine Budlong, who is remembered as a lady of mild and motherly manner, also lived to advanced years. Both are buried at Phenix. His children, all now deceased, were: Charles Walton; George Brayton; Alma, who married a Dr. Cooper; George M., who married Caroline Wilbur, and of their sons William Herbert now lives in New York City, and George B. in Providence.

(VIII) CHARLES WALTON ATWOOD was born in the village of Phenix, town of Warwick, Jan. 10, 1828, and was there reared. His schooling was confined to the district schools, and his advantages in an educational way were decidedly limited. He was employed in various ways in the vicinity of his birth until he was about twenty-two years of age, when he came to the city of Providence, and with the limited capital of two hundred and fifty dollars established himself in the lumber business. His beginning was in a most modest way, and his equipment consisted of one old horse and wagon with which he delivered his previously solicited sales of rough lumber. He was thoroughly industrious and frugal, and as his small capital was increased by his profits, he re-invested, sold and delivered. When there came a time when business as a retail dealer was slow, and he had a surplus stock in his small yard, he bought a lot and erected a dwelling thereon. This found immediate sale, and he afterward combined building with his general lumber business.

During his career it is estimated that he built buildings the total value of which would aggregate more than a million of dollars. Many of the buildings he retained and rented, owning at one time something more than one hundred and sixty tenements of various sorts. His active business career began in 1846, and ended with his death in 1877. During this time, when under his able guidance his business grew to great proportions, he insisted upon giving his personal attention to every detail, keeping his own books and accounts, and to this rigid business rule, combined with his honesty and fair dealing, his clear foresight of conditions and opportunity, and to his perseverance and wonderful industry, was due his success. His business grew to be one of the largest of its kind in Rhode Island and his lumber yards were situated on Pond street, extending through Cranston street. An old school building located on the property was converted into an office, and there his two sons received their first business training from their father whose teaching founded their later recognized excellent ability. As will be seen, Charles Walton Atwood was truly a self-made man, from the very outset depending upon himself alone. He achieved nothing by chance or brilliant accident. Opportunity never especially favored him. Only by employing the means and bringing to bear the qualities necessary for the accomplishment of it, did he acquire what he possessed. There were no splendid financial passages in his life, no bold and hazardous speculations. He had self trust, self command and relied on his own individuality, on his cool caution, his placid calculating mind, his considerate discriminating judgment. There was no ostentation or show about him, as he preferred reticacy and the superintendence of his private interests. He was neither rash nor excitable, and in all his enterprises he "hastened slowly." In short, his life is illustrated by "patience and work" and this Sir Isaac Newton is said to have defined as "genius." He was a man of principle, and his private life was without stain, his name carried no blemish. In his social relations he was plain and agreeable, disliking flattery and pretense. In disposition kindly and charitable, he performed many a kindness to the needy in the most unostentatious manner. His end came while he was comparatively a young man, and his early demise was directly due to over exertion, mental and physical. His death occurred Nov. 10, 1877. Some four years previous he had practically retired from business, his sons assuming the responsibilities.

Mr. Atwood married Caroline Frances Reynolds, daughter of Ezekiel and Hannah (Hazzard) Reynolds, descendants of old and notable Rhode Island families. She was born at Warwick, Jan. 10, 1838, and she died at her home in Providence, July 21, 1895, a lady of many virtues who assisted in no small degree in the success of her husband. Their children, all reared in an atmosphere of refinement and moral culture, were: John W., Anna Josephine, Mary E., Charles, Frederick Eugene (died in infancy), and Caroline Frances. Of these

(IX) John W. Atwood, son of Charles Walton, was born in 1846, in Phenix, R. I., and received a good common school education, which was concluded in the public schools of Providence. Taking up a business rather than a professional career, he was but a young man when he entered the lumber business with his father, and he early secured a practical knowledge in that line, which was of material assistance to him when, a few years later, he branched out in business for himself. In the real estate and building business he began in a modest way, and met with success from the start. Shrewd and careful, as well as straightforward, with a good knowledge of prospective values, his business and own personal holdings increased until he became well known in such circles. For some few years previous to the death of his father he managed his extensive business, and later that of his father's estate, subsequently confining his attentions to his private affairs. He was a business, rather than a public man, and while a Democrat his interest in politics was that of a public spirited citizen, and not an office seeker. As a citizen he stood high, and as a business man was successful and honorable. He passed away in Providence, March 16, 1894, leaving no descendants.

(IX) MARY E. ATWOOD, born Nov. 12, 1850, married, June 20, 1872, William Read Johnson, son of Reuben and grandson of George Johnson. He was born Aug. 29, 1841, in the town of Scituate, R. I., a descendant from an old family long prominent in the western part of the State, and in the city of Providence. Mr. Johnson has for some years been well known in real estate circles in the city. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, namely: Susie Josephine, born Jan. 10, 1872, who married Charles H. Mathewson, of Edgewood, and has children: Mildred (born Jan. 2, 1897) and Ethel (born July 29, 1900); William Carter, born Dec. 2, 1875, who was educated in Providence and in Brown University, class of 1901, and is engaged in the real estate business; James Luther, born in 1883, who died in 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson occupy the former homestead of her father, Charles W. Atwood, on Broad street, Providence.

(IX) CHARLES ATWOOD, second son of Charles Walton, was born in Providence, May 10, 1858, and received his business training under the able teaching of his father. Upon the latter's retirement from active business in 1873, the two sons, John W. and Charles, assumed charge, the first attending to the outside work and the latter giving his attention to the clerical details. At the death of the father in 1877, the elder son, John W., became administrator of the estate. In 1883 a division of the estate was made, and Charles assumed entire control of that portion which became his, and immediately became active in building and real estate movements for and on his own account. Among others he built the Atwood Block containing thirty-six rooms, the first modern tenement house on "Christian Hill." The death of the brother in 1894 and the mother in 1895 (July) added further to Mr. Atwood's business cares as it devolved upon him to settle and care for the estates. This obligation was successfully consummated, and Mr. Atwood afterward accepted the supervision of real estate and property interests of others, and conducted one of the most successful and extensive agencies in the city of Providence. Mr. Atwood was a member of the Central Club of Providence, and the New England Order of Protection. Mr. Atwood married, Dec. 19, 1878, Miss Ellura, daughter of Rev. Preston B. Hopkins, of Sterling, Conn., and descendant of one of the oldest families of New England. Mrs. Atwood is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution. Mr. and Mrs. Atwood had one son, Ernest Preston Brown, born Dec. 3, 1879; he is a graduate of Brown University and of Boston Law School, the former with the class of 1902, and the latter of 1905, and he is associated with a well known law firm of Providence. Mr. Chas. Atwood erected his home at the corner of Harvard avenue and Broad street, and resided there until his recent death, March 13, 1908.

(IX) CAROLINE FRANCES ATWOOD, youngest of the children of Charles Walton Atwood, was born in Providence, Nov. 17, 1867, and in June, 1888, she married Raymond Harris Price, son of William G. Price, a native of Holland Patent, N. Y., but of an old Rhode Island family—the Harris. He is connected with the General Fire Extinguisher Company, and is also interested in real estate. Their children are: Laurence Atwood, born April 12, 1889; Milton Harris, Oct. 30, 1893; William Gladding, May 15, 1897; Madeline, Nov. 23, 1902.

GORHAM. The Gorhams of Providence are a branch of the old Cape Cod family, which has been of record in New England for more than two hundred and sixty years, besides being of long and honorable connection in England. The family, it is said, accompanied William the Conqueror thither from Normandy, and certain members of it, for services at the Battle of Hastings, received a manorial estate at a place afterward called Gorhamsbury. Gorham, Maine, is named for a branch of the old Cape Cod family, among whose posterity have been many noble men and women, of achievement and great usefulness. The line of the family followed out in this article is that to which belongs Samuel Gorham, of Providence, now retired, but for a third of a century a merchant there, and his two sons, Prof. Frederic Poole Gorham, Associate Professor of Biology at Brown University, and Howard Bowen Gorham, a successful attorney and judge at Providence.

(I) Ralph Gorham, son of James and Agnes Bennington Gorham, was born in 1575 and came to New England before 1637. His children were Ralph and John. His father, James Gorham, was born in 1550, married in 1572, and died in 1576.

(II) Capt. John Gorham, son of Ralph, was born in Benefield, England, and was baptized Jan. 28, 1621. He married in 1643 Desire Howland, born at Plymouth about 1623, daughter of John Howland and Elizabeth Tilley, of the "Mayflower." He was buried at Swansea, Feb. 5, 1675-76. She died at Barnstable, Oct. 13, 1683. Their children were: Desire, born April 2, 1644, in Plymouth; Temperance, May 5, 1646, in Marshfield; Elizabeth, April 2, 1648, in Marshfield; James, April 28, 1650, in Marshfield; John, Feb. 20, 1651-52, in Marshfield; Joseph, Feb. 16, 1653-54, in Yarmouth; Jabez, Aug. 3, 1656; Mercy, Jan. 20, 1658; Lydia, Nov. 16, 1661; Hannah, Nov. 28, 1663; and Shubael, Oct. 21, 1667. The last five were born in Barnstable.

(III) Jabez Gorham married Hannah (Sturgis) Gray, daughter of Edward Sturgis, of Barnstable and Yarmouth. They removed from Barnstable to Bristol, R. I., where he died after March 16, 1724-25. Their children were: Hannah, born Dec. 23, 1677; Samuel, April 15, 1682; Jabez, Jan. 3, 1683; Shubael, April 12, 1686; Isaac, Feb. 1, 1689; John, Nov. 8, 1690; Joseph, Aug. 22, 1692; Hannah, Feb. 21, 1694 (who with Joseph was baptized in 1695, in Christ's Church, in Bristol); Benjamin, Dec. 11, 1695; Thomas, Oct. 30, 1701; and Elizabeth. In the census of Bristol in 1689 Jabez Gorham is mentioned with wife and four children. He died in 1725, and his widow passed away Oct. 17, 1736, at Cape Cod, whither she returned after her husband's death.

(IV) Benjamin Gorham married Bethiah, born Dec. 9, 1696, daughter of David and Elizabeth Cory, of Bristol. She was a granddaughter of John Cory, who came from England and in June, 1644, married Elizabeth Godfrey. He died Nov. 2, 1681, aged sixty-nine, and his wife died in 1680. His wife was a daughter of Francis Godfrey, a carpenter, who settled in Bridgewater, Mass., and there died between 1666 and 1669. David Cory, son of John and Elizabeth, was born in 1658.

Benjamin Gorham made his home in Providence, without doubt the first of the family to settle there. He died between Oct. 18, 1771, and Feb. 1, 1772. His wife Bethiah died probably before 1753. Their children were: Benjamin, born Aug. 22, 1718; Bethiah, baptized Aug. 5, 1722; Sarah, Sept. 15, 1723; Elizabeth baptized Jan. 21, 1727-28; Jabez; Samuel; and Jemima.

(V) Jabez Gorham, son of Benjamin, married Oct. 4, 1753, Abigail Field, born Jan. 27, 1730, daughter of Jeremiah and Abigail (Waterman)

Field. Their children were: Jabez, July 15, 1760; Samuel, Dec. 11, 1763; and John.

(VI) Samuel Gorham was a blacksmith and iron worker and resided for a number of years at Hope, R. I. He died Sept. 19, 1817, and was buried in the North cemetery at Providence. He married (first) Sarah Earl, who was born Dec. 5, 1771, and died Nov. 8, 1804. Their children were: Abigail, born Aug. 25, 1791, who died May 26, 1797; Daniel, Nov. 8, 1792, who died March 14, 1829; Sarah, Jan. 13, 1795, who died Aug. 31, 1834; Benjamin E., Oct. 12, 1798, who died in Ohio in 1843; Samuel, Nov. 27, 1801, who died Feb. 19, 1802; Mehetabel, who was born June 15, 1803, and died same day; and Almira, July 2, 1804, who died May 27, 1805. Samuel Gorham for his second wife married, May 10, 1807, Sarah Callender, born June 29, 1776, who survived him and died in Providence. They had two children: Jabez, born Feb. 9, 1808; and Mary, born Oct. 19, 1810, who married Henry Dunham, and died March 27, 1853.

(VII) Jabez Gorham learned the trade of a jeweler, which occupation he followed all his life in the city of Providence. He died there Feb. 7, 1871, and was buried in the North cemetery. Mr. Gorham was a member of the I. O. O. F. He married Eliza Ann Poole, a native of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., who survived her husband, and died in Boston, Mass. They had two sons: (1) William H., born Oct. 18, 1832, married Annie M. Moffitt. He was a jeweler and resided at Providence. His death occurred Jan. 2, 1901, in Dighton, Mass., to which place he had gone on a visit. (2) Samuel was born Sept. 3, 1834.

(VIII) SAMUEL GORHAM was born in Providence, and received his education in the public schools there. For a time after leaving school he was employed as a clerk in a grocery store on Benefit street, receiving wages of one dollar per week. At the age of sixteen he began to learn the trade of a jeweler, apprenticing himself for four years to Church & Metcalf, manufacturing jewelers at Providence, with whom he remained for several years after completing his apprenticeship. He then gave up his trade and was employed as a clerk for W. S. Huntoon & Son, wholesale and retail cigar and tobacco dealers. About three years later Mr. Gorham became a partner and the firm name became Huntoon & Gorham, the partnership continuing for over thirty-two years. For thirty years the establishment was located on Westminster street, and was then moved to Pine street, where they remained for two years before Mr. Gorham sold out his interest. The firm was the largest and the leading one in that line of business in the city. Since disposing of his business interest Mr. Gorham has lived retired.

Mr. Samuel Gorham was married, Nov. 20, 1862, in Providence, to Miss Abby H. Fish, a native of Providence, born Jan. 5, 1839, daughter of Daniel and Sophronia (Tobey) Fish. Two sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gorham, Frederic Poole and Howard Bowen. In political matters Mr. Gorham is a Republican, but has never sought public office. He is a man of quiet and retiring manner, has had an honorable business career, and is respected by all who know him.

(IX) PROF. FREDERIC POOLE GORHAM was born April 29, 1871, in Providence, and attended the public schools, being graduated from the Providence high school in the class of 1889. He then entered Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1893. He accepted the chair of biology there at the beginning of the next school year, also teaching geology in addition to biology for a few years. Later, in 1902 and 1903, he took a course of lectures in biology at Harvard Medical School, going there in addition to teaching his class three days each week at Brown.

Prof. Gorham was married June 24, 1897, in Burrillville, R. I., to Miss Emma M. Lapham, a native of Providence, daughter of Simon S. and Mary J. (Mowry) Lapham. Two children were born to them, viz.: Mary Emma, Aug. 10, 1898; and Sayles Gorham, Sept. 14, 1900.

Prof. Gorham is a Republican in his political views. During his college course he was made a member of the Chi Phi fraternity at Brown, and since graduating has connected himself with the American Society of Naturalists; American Association for the Advancement of Science; Society of American Bacteriologists, of which he has been secretary and vice-president; American Society of Pathologists and Bacteriologists; American Public Health Association; the Entomological Society of America; Washington Academy of Science and Society of Sigma Xi; Boston Society of Medical Sciences; Boston Bacteriological Club; Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health; the University Club; Art Club; and Anawan Club, of Providence; and the St. Botolph Club of Boston, composed mostly of medical men and artists. He is a director of the Audubon Society of Rhode Island and an honorary member of the Providence Medical Association and the Rhode Island Medical Society.

Prof. Gorham is the author of two valuable text-books, "A Laboratory Guide for the Dissection of the Cat," "An Introduction to the Study of Anatomy," and "A Laboratory Course in Bacteriology for the use of Medical, Agricultural and Industrial Students" (1901). Besides his professorship at Brown University he also holds the position of bacteriologist to the city of Providence.

(IX) HOWARD BOWEN GORHAM was born Feb. 10, 1876, and was graduated from the Providence high school in the class of 1894. He then entered Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1898. Soon afterward he began the study of law in the office of William H. Sweetland, now presiding justice of the Superior court, and was admitted to the bar in August, 1900. He then engaged in the practice of law, in which he has met with success. In April, 1906, he was elected clerk of the Sixth District court, with judicial power. He is a Republican and a member of the City Republican Committee, of which he has been for the past six years assistant secretary. He served two years as a member of the city council, in which he was chairman of the committee on Accounts, and a member of the committee on Ordinances. In 1906 he was elected a member of the board of aldermen, and in the same year was elected a member of the city School Committee. He is a member of St. John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; of Manufacturers Lodge, I. O. O. F.; of the Chi Phi fraternity at Brown University; also belongs to the West Side Club and the Anawan Club, and is a member of the Rhode Island Bar Association; he was elected secretary of the latter body in September, 1905.

Mr. Gorham was married, June 1, 1905, to Helen A. Whittemore, of Boston, Mass., a descendant of David Keniston, who was the last survivor of the famous "Boston Tea Party." They have one son, David Keniston, born June 9, 1906.

WILLIAM HENRY SHELDON. The late William Henry Sheldon, of Pascoag, at which place he conducted for many years a large and prosperous lumber and planing-mill business, was a self-made man and one who rose from a humble beginning to the foremost ranks of the honored and successful business men of his section.

Mr. Sheldon was born May 11, 1837, in the town of Glocester, son of George and Marana (Kelley) Sheldon. Two children were born to his parents, the other being Lucy, wife of Benedict Burlingame, of Glocester. George Sheldon was a farmer all his life, and died in Glocester. William Henry Sheldon was reared to the arduous work of the farm and his opportunities for an education were decidedly limited. He had to work hard from his early boyhood, and when a young man learned the trade of carpenter, following that occupation as a journeyman for a number of years. In the latter fifties, wishing to engage in business for himself and feeling the lack of education, he attended Scholfield's Business College, at Providence, for a time. In 1860 he entered into a copartnership with Almon Smith, and together they operated a power wood-working shop near A. Hopkins & Co.'s machine shop at Laurel Hill. This partnership was dissolved after a few years, Mr. Sheldon carrying on the business alone there until 1872, when he built a small shop on Sayles avenue, Pascoag, the building still standing. He remained in this small shop until 1881, when he erected the three-story stone building in which he was ever after located. Shortly after the completion of his new shop he commenced putting in wood-working machinery and had one of the best appointed and most complete establishments of its kind in the State. His business as a contractor and builder was very extensive and he constructed the major portion of the buildings in Burrillville, as well as many in adjoining towns. This was a very profitable part of his business operations. Mr. Sheldon was a staunch Republican in politics, and, while he never sought public office, he was the type of man to be called upon to hold positions of trust; he served as a member of the town council, as highway commissioner, and in other minor offices. He was a member of Friendship Lodge, No. 7, A. F. & A. M., at Chepachet; Pascoag Chapter, A. O. U. W., and the United Order of the Golden Cross. He attended the Free Baptist Church and contributed freely to the support thereof. Mr. Sheldon suffered a decline in health covering a period of two years, and died Feb. 17, 1896; he was buried in the Acotes Hill cemetery at Chepachet.

Mr. Sheldon was married (first) to Mary Preston, daughter of James Preston, of Foster, R. I. She died in 1865. On March 23, 1873, he married (second) Nancy E. Baker, who was born in Grafton, Mass., daughter of Thomas M. and Bathsheba (Brown) Baker, and by this union there was one son, William Russell, born Dec. 15, 1880. He married Pauline Kurtz, of Boston, Mass. He was educated in the public schools of Pascoag and the Bryant and Stratton Business College at Providence, and after completing his education assumed the management of the business established by his father, continuing it until March, 1905, when the stock was disposed of to Myron D. Lapham. The family have been residents of Providence since July, 1906. William R. Sheldon is a member of Granite Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at Harrisville, the chapter, council and commandery at Woonsocket, and Palestine Temple, Mystic Shrine.

William H. Sheldon's record as a business man was one which reflected great credit upon him. He won his honors fairly, and not by trickery or deceit, for he most heartily detested both. He had a thorough and complete knowledge of the lumber business, having few equals as a judge of timber, and was a man of uncommon native business ability and judgment, possessing the qualifications for success in almost any line of business he might have chosen to undertake.

PEARSE (Pierce, Pearce). The Pearce family is both ancient and historic in the annals of England, the lineage of Richard Pearce, the immigrant to New England and founder of the American family, being traced to the time of Galfred. In more recent English generations were Peter Percy, standard bearer of Richard III. at the battle of Bosworth Field (1485). and Richard Percy, the founder of Pearce Hall. From Richard Pearce, the immigrant settler, the lineage of the children of the late Albert S. Pearce, of Bristol, R. I., is through Richard (2), Richard (3), Richard (4), Nathaniel, Capt. Richard and Nathaniel Pearce.

For nearly two and a half centuries the Pearce family has been identified with the political, judicial and legislative history of Rhode Island and Bristol. During both the Colonial and Revolutionary periods the name constantly recurs either in legislative or military affairs. Capt. Nathaniel Pearce commanded an artillery company at the burning of Bristol by the British, during the Revolution, and covering the period from 1757 to 1849 different members of the family represented the town in the State Legislature. Hon. Dutee J. Pearce, in the early portion of the century, served as a member of Congress from Rhode Island for more than a decade; the late Edward Pearce was for many years a leading figure in the commerce and finances of Bristol, a number of his sons following in his footsteps. In more recent years figured the late Alfred S. Pearce, Richard S. Pearce, John S. Pearce, and the son of the last named, the late John Bowen Pearce, who was for many years high sheriff of Bristol county, succeeding his father to that office, and also for many years postmaster of Bristol.

(I) Richard Pearce (named changed from Percy in this generation), born in England in 1590, married in England—his wife's name being Martha—and was a resident of Bristol, England. He was a son of Richard, who resided on the homestead of his father, grandson of Richard Percy, the founder of Pearce Hall, in York, England, where he lived and died, and great-grandson of Peter Percy, who was standard-bearer to Richard III at the battle of Bosworth field, in 1485.

Richard Pearce came to America in the ship "Lyon," from Bristol, England, his brother, Capt. William Pearce, being master of the ship. His children were: Richard, John, Samuel, Hannah, Martha, Sarah, William and Mary. [Capt. William Pearce, of the ship "Lyon," was a distinguished shipmaster. He was killed by the Spaniards at Providence, in the Bahamas, 1641. He is credited with being the author of the first almanac, for 1639, published in North America.]

(II) Richard Pearce (2), son of Richard the settler, born in 1615, in England, married in 1642, in Portsmouth, R. I., Susannah Wright, born in 1620. Mr. Pearce died in 1678 in Portsmouth, and Mrs. Pearce was dead at that time. He was at Portsmouth as early as 1654, and was admitted a freeman of the Colony from Portsmouth. His children were: Richard, born Oct. 3, 1643; Martha, Sept. 13, 1645; John, Sept. 8, 1647; Giles, July 22, 1651; Susannah, Nov. 22, 1652; Mary, May 6, 1654; Jeremiah, Nov. 17, 1656; Isaac, December, 1658; George, July 10, 1662; Samuel, Dec. 22, 1664.

(III) Richard Pearce (3), born Oct. 3, 1643, in Portsmouth, R. I., was a freeman of the Colony of Portsmouth in May, 1663. He removed to Bristol, R. I., probably soon after his father's death, and there both he and his wife, Experience, died, his death occurring July 19, 1720. Their children, born in Bristol, were: Jonathan, Richard, Abigail, Mary, Jeremiah, Annie, Benjamin, and a son.

(IV) Richard Pearse (4) married (first) Sarah and (second) May 22, 1723, Susannah Lawton, of Portsmouth, R. I., daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Tollman) Lawton. Susannah Lawton was born April 3, 1689, and died July 29, 1768. Mr. Pearse died Oct. 28, 1744. His widow married, in September, 1746, John Burden, of Portsmouth. Richard Pearse was a resident of Bristol. His children were: Samuel, Nathaniel, Sarah, Richard, William, Experience, Mary, Susannah, Ann and Elizabeth.

(V) Nathaniel Pearse, born Nov. 23, 1708, married April 6, 1732, Mary Lindsay, and was a resident of Bristol. Their children were: Samuel, born Oct. 25, 1733; John, March 28, 1735; Richard, Jan. 15, 1737; Nathaniel, Aug. 5, 1739; Christopher, July 5, 1741; Elizabeth, Feb. 17, 1743; Thomas, March 6, 1744; Mary, April 3, 1747; Thomas (2), March 24, 1749; William, April 2, 1753; and Sarah, Aug. 26, 1754.

(VI) Capt. Richard Pearse, born Jan. 15, 1737, married Phebe Monroe, born June 16, 1743, and they were residents of Bristol, R. I., and Rehoboth, Mass. He died in 1809. Their children were: Phebe, born Oct. 5, 1760; Richard, Oct. 27, 1762; Nathaniel, Oct. 4, 1764; Lydia, Feb. 13, 1767; Mary, July 2, 1771; Timothy, Feb. 14, 1775; Robert, July 18, 1777.

(VII) Nathaniel Pearse, born Oct. 4, 1764, married Dec. 25, 1787, Lucy Rogerson, born in 1764, daughter of Rev. Robert Rogerson, a native of Great Britain, a graduate of Harvard College, 1765, and for upward of forty years pastor of the Congregational Church at Rehoboth, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Pearse resided in Rehoboth. He died Nov. 28, 1810, and she passed away Jan. 22, 1805. Their children were: George A., born Oct. 18, 1788; Lucy, July 12, 1790; Nathaniel, Nov. 7, 1793; William H., Sept. 5, 1797; Betsey R., Aug. 28, 1799; and Albert Smith, April 1, 1804.

(VIII) ALBERT S. PEARSE, born April 1, 1804, in Rehoboth, Mass., married Sept. 1, 1831, Mary Smith Bradford, born June 29, 1813, and they were residents of Bristol, R. I. She was a daughter of Capt. William and Mary (Smith) Bradford, of Bristol, and a descendant of William Bradford, of the "Mayflower."

Mr. Pearse learned the trade of a house carpenter, and for some years followed it. When a young man he went to what was then considered the far West, to the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he worked at his trade. Descending from a pious ancestry, he early espoused the cause of religion and good morals, and was active in those lines through life. While in Cincinnati he was superintendent of a Sunday-school there. He was the first among his fellow workmen in that city to sign a temperance pledge, and to advocate that cause, and at a time, too, when one in such a position brought upon himself ridicule and opposition. Mr. Pearse was a sincere and consistent Christian and a most estimable man and citizen. He possessed decided musical talent, and was a leader in the choir of the Congregational Church at Bristol, of which he was a member. For a time he was superintendent of the Sunday-school of that church. He possessed a rich vein of humor, which exhibited itself in anecdote. He was a man of tender heart and fine feelings. His death occurred at Bristol Aug. 20, 1878. The children born to the marriage of Albert S. Pearse and Mary S. (Bradford) were: William B., born Sept. 30, 1832, died Sept. 2, 1834; Marion, born Nov. 11, 1834, died Dec. 11, 1835; Marion Rogerson, born March 5, 1837, married Oct. 23, 1872, Prof. Edward W. Robbins, a graduate of Yale (1843), a lawyer and a teacher by profession (pedagogical career embracing Kensington, Meriden, New Britain, Conn., Normal School, Baltimore, Md., and the State of Virginia), who died at Bristol, Nov. 7, 1899; Albert S., Jr., of Erie, Pa., was born May 15, 1840; Edward Bradford is mentioned below; Frederick P., born Aug. 11, 1848, married July 19, 1873, Ellen F. Wilson, born Dec. 15, 1851; J. Russell, born Dec. 30, 1850, married Isabella Kirkwood, and became the father of William Bradford, Mabel Russell, James Frederick and Anna Marion.

(IX) Edward Bradford Pearse, born in Bristol, R. I., Feb. 1, 1843, married Mary J. Coffin, daughter of Reuben and Mary (West) Coffin. Her mother was a daughter of Ansel West, who was formerly the operator of the Stonington & New York Line of steamers running between the points mentioned. Mr. Pearse was educated in the public schools of his native city, attended the high school for two years, and when twenty years of age commenced to learn his trade as a machinist in New York and Bristol. He then settled on the place where he now resides, having lived there since 1869. From that year until 1894 he was employed at his trade by the National Rubber Company, since which time he has served on a committee of five in the construction of three new school-houses for the town. Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pearse have one daughter, Nellie Philips, born June 10, 1869, now the wife of Eber Hill, of Bristol. To Mr. and Mrs. Hill were born two sons—Carlton Bradford, Aug. 20, 1890, and Harold Eber, Jan. 23, 1896. Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pearse were also the parents of one son, Frank Bradford, who was born Dec. 12, 1874, and died in November, 1875.

FRANK T. PEARCE, one of the most widely known manufacturing jewelers of New England, and a leading citizen of Providence, R. I., is a member of the historic family first definitely mentioned in the person of Peter Percy, standard-bearer to Richard III at the battle of Bosworth Field, in 1485. From Richard, the immigrant American settler, the direct descent of Frank T. Pearce is through (II) Richard (2), (III) George, (IV) James, (V) James (2), (VI) Right, (VII) Thomas, and (VIII) Franklin; the details of the two first generations have been previously given.

(III) George Pearce, born July 10, 1662, married April 7, 1687, Alice Hart, born March 8, 1664, daughter of Richard and Hannah Hart, of Portsmouth, R. I. Their children were born as follows: Susannah, Aug. 21, 1688; James, Sept. 4, 1691; Samuel, Feb. 3, 1695; George, March 2, 1697; Mary, May 16, 1700.

(IV) James Pearce, born Sept. 4, 1691, married in 1712 Martha Wilbur, born Oct. 22, 1690, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Potter) Wilbur, of Little Compton, R. I. Children were born to them as follows: William, Jan. 19, 1713; Susanna, May 24, 1715; Martha, Aug. 4, 1717; James, Sept. 24, 1719; Giles, March 23, 1722; Mary, Oct. 17, 1724; George, Sept. 12, 1727; Alice, Jan. 1, 1729; Phebe, Sept. 21, 1731; Samuel, Jan. 29, 1733.

(V) James Pearce (2), son of James and Martha (Wilbur) Pearce, born Sept. 24, 1719, married Sept. 14, 1749, Sarah Simmons, born Jan. 27, 1730. They were of Little Compton, R. I. They had the following children: Right, born July 27, 1750; Stephen, Dec. 20, 1753; John, Aug. 24, 1755; Ichabod, Sept. 30, 1758, died Oct. 27, 1762; Ezekiel, March 24, 1760; Ezra, March 21, 1761; Ichabod (2), Nov. 24, 1762; Simeon, Jan. 26, 1766.

(VI) Right Pearce, son of James (2), born July 27, 1750, was married in 1771 to Anstris Sawyer, born Oct. 30, 1751, and resided in Little Compton, R. I. Mr. Pearce died April 8, 1829, and Mrs. Pearce passed away Oct. 12, 1835. Their children were: Godfrey, born Oct. 3, 1772; Priscilla, Sept. 28, 1776; Sarah, April 29, 1778; Timothy, July 17, 1779; Thomas, Sept. 6, 1784; Priscilla (2), July 23, 1790; and Abraham, April 12, 1792.

(VII) Thomas Pearce, son of Right, born Sept. 6, 1784, married Feb. 26, 1810, Eliphal Tompkins, born March 15, 1790, and they were residents of Little Compton, R. I. Their children were: Abner T., born Oct. 4, 1811, married Sarah R. Briggs; Frederick S., born March 30, 1813, married Nov. 11, 1839, Lois M. Lee; Louisa was born Oct. 22, 1815; Joseph, born April 22, 1818, married Phebe Pearce; Franklin, born June 19, 1820, is mentioned further on; George T. was born July 28, 1826; John T., Aug. 25, 1824; and Maria, Aug. 14, 1828.

(VIII) Franklin Pearce, son of Thomas, born June 19, 1820, married Oct. 12, 1847, Elizabeth Najac, born Nov. 7, 1823, and they resided in Providence, R. I. Mr. Pearce died May 31, 1900, and his wife June 5, 1903. Their children were: Frank T., born Nov. 13, 1848; Anna E., born Sept. 2, 1850, who married George H. Richardson, and died Nov. 7, 1877; Eleanor E., born Jan. 3, 1852, deceased; and Nellie B., born March 19, 1857.

Franklin Pearce was born in Little Compton, R. I., and came to Providence when about seventeen years of age to be apprenticed as a painter to a certain Mr. Shaw. He became first a journeyman and then a master painter, and opened a shop on the corner next to the postoffice, later removing to a place on Mathewson street, where the Lapham building now stands. At that time his paint shop was at the rear of a dwelling-house which faced Westminster street; now the handsome building of Tilden & Thurber occupies the site of the dwelling-house mentioned. For many years Mr. Pearce was one of the leading painters of Providence, employing thirty or forty hands, doing much of the work for the best families on the east side and extending his business to the mills of Blackstone valley and Fall River. His home, for more than half a century, was on Cope (formerly Trinity) street, and was quite a social center, since the head of the household was especially domestic, generous, whole-hearted and hospitable. While never active in politics, Mr. Pearce was sturdily Whig or Republican. At one time he was a member of the I. O. O. F., but was too fond of his family and home to advance far in the order. He was also a constant attendant of the Round Top Congregational Church, though never a regular member.

(IX) Frank T. Pearce, son of Franklin, born Nov. 13, 1848, married May 14, 1873, Annie R. Gardiner, born May 29, 1855, and the union has been blessed with children as follows: Aldridge G., born April 2, 1875; William H., Feb. 4, 1882 (died in March, 1882); and Anna E., Dec. 14, 1886.

Mr. Pearce was the senior member of the firm of F. T. Pearce & Co., his son, Aldridge G. Pearce, being another member. They are manufacturers of gold pens, gold-plated penholders, pencils and fountain and stylographic pens. The business was established in 1880, and is now located in the Ada building, on Sprague street, Providence, the product of the establishment going to all countries of the world.

But the senior member of the firm had many long years of struggle before he reached that position of success and prosperity. Frank Thomas Pearce received his literary education in the Fountain street primary and intermediate school and in the Providence high school. When within one term of completing his course in the latter (in 1864) he was offered such an excellent business opportunity for one of his years that he left his school days behind him forever. Entering the employ of the Kendall Manufacturing Company, he steadily advanced until at the end of seven years' service he was city salesman and in charge of the shipping. In 1871 he became connected with Richard Cross & Sons, manufacturers of gold pens, etc., his territory as traveling salesman covering the cities of New England, and New York, Philadelphia and Washington. After remaining with that firm four years he assumed a like position with the Ray Manufacturing Company, of New York City, traveling as far West as the Missouri river. In 1880 Mr. Pearce again became a permanent resident of Providence, establishing the business for the manufacture and sale of gold pens of every description, with gold-plated holders for both pens and pencils—the industry which under his untiring and able management has developed to large proportions. His original location was No. 107 Friendship street, and there he first employed six or seven hands. In 1890 the number had increased to more than one hundred employees, but subsequently labor-saving devices came into vogue, so that now, although the output is far greater than ever before, from forty to fifty people only are employed in the manufacturing department. The growth of the establishment, which is the largest of the kind in New England, is chiefly attributable to Mr. Pearce's energy, industry and business sagacity. The business was incorporated April 1, 1907, under the name of The F. T. Pearce Company, Frank T. Pearce, president, and Aldridge G. Pearce, treasurer.

Mr. Pearce has been president of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' & Silversmiths' Association, and is among the most widely known members of the Masonic Association in the East. He is a member of St. John's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., Providence; Royal Arch Chapter; Providence Council; St. John's Commandery, No. 1, K. T.; Rhode Island Consistory, A. & A. S. R., and Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of which he is potentate. He has held office in each of these bodies, was commander of St. John's Commandery, and was commander-in-chief of the Rhode Island Consistory. Finally, he has been honored with the presidency of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Association of Knights Templars Commanders. In politics Mr. Pearce has simply been a Republican voter, and outside of the domestic circle and Freemasonry his social affiliations have been chiefly with the West Side Club, of Providence, of which he was president.

HENRY A. TINKHAM, now living retired at Harrisville, town of Burrillville, after a period of nearly forty-three years of faithful service in the employ of the firm of William Tinkham & Co. and its predecessors, is a son of Nehemiah and Alzada (Andrews) Tinkham, and brother to William Tinkham, of Providence, and the late Ellison Tinkham, of Carolina, R. I., sketches of whom appear elsewhere in this publication.

Henry A. Tinkham was born Oct. 6, 1840, in Harmony, town of Glocester. He received limited educational advantages in the district schools, going to school a few months each winter, the summer seasons being spent in hard work on the farm and in his father's blacksmith shop. He remained at home until the fall of 1862, when he came to Harrisville, which place has since been his home. For many years he was in charge of the outside work, such as the teaming and farming operations, but for the last thirty years was employed as night watchman for the firm of William Tinkham & Co. He retired from active work in July, 1905.

Mr. Tinkham has always been a hard-working man, economical and careful of his earnings, and has acquired a competence. He has always lived a quiet life, not caring for any public office, and has been a faithful employee, strictly temperate, and a man respected by all who know him. Mr. Tinkham is unmarried.

ENOCH WILCOX VARS, manufacturing chemist, of Niantic, R. I., is one of the representative citizens of the town of Westerly, and probably the best known member of the old Vars family in that section of the State. He is a descendant in the seventh generation from John Vars, one of the early French emigrants to this country, and whose descendants for more than two hundred years have been more or less prominently identified with the growth and development of the town of Westerly. Not far from the village of Niantic in the eastern part of the town of Westerly, is the old Vars homestead, one of the prettiest and best farms in that vicinity, its lands lying quite high and sloping gently to the east. This tract of land for more than two centuries has been in the family, and has been the birthplace and home of seven successive generations of the Vars name.

The line of descent of Enoch Wilcox Vars, from the progenitor of the family, John Vars, is through Isaac, Theodity, Isaac (2), Isaac (3) and Charles. The generations being indicated by Roman numerals follow:

(I) John Vars, born in France about 1653, while in the country on a visit, stopped at Newport, R. I., and concluded to settle there. He returned to France for his family and belongings, sailed with them, but died on passage to America. His widow Mary and only child, arrived in Newport about 1685, and about 1700 located permanently in the town of Westerly. About this time Mrs. Vars married again, her second husband being Theodity Rhodes, of Westerly. She died in 1740.

(II) Isaac Vars, son of John, born about 1682, in France, married May 29, 1708, Rebecca Larkin, of Westerly. Mr. Vars located in Westerly about 1700. His stepfather, Theodity Rhodes, had purchased in June, 1707, from the Indians, a tract of land which he subsequently deeded to him, and in 1732 Mr. Vars himself purchased from the Indians sixty acres of land adjoining his farm on the east. On this first named tract of land near the spring, and perhaps a half mile south of the village of Niantic in the eastern part of the town, Mr. Vars built, in about 1708-09, a house which with its additions has constituted what is known as the "Old Vars Homestead." To the first cabin house an addition was made years later, and in 1776, Theodity Vars, a son of Isaac, added thereto what is now the western part of the house. Mr. Vars lived to be about eighty years of age.

(III) Theodity Vars, son of Isaac, born Oct. 5, 1710, in Westerly, R. I., and presumably the first of the Vars name born in America, married Dec. 31, 1732, Mary Dodge, born March 12, 1713, daughter of John and Elizabeth Dodge, of Westerly. Isaac Vars gave to his son Theodity the sixty acres of land referred to as that bought by him in 1732, adjoining his own farm, and upon it was probably built the house that stood where in recent years has stood the Mrs. Mary A. Peckham house. Theodity Vars was occupied in farming. He was made a freeman of the town in 1733. On selling his property later he reserved a twenty-acre wood lot, which since has been a part of the old homestead. Mr. Vars died in the homestead in 1795, and his wife passed away in 1792, aged, respectively, eighty-five and eighty years.

(IV) Isaac Vars (2), son of Theodity, born Oct. 25, 1733, married (first) in 1755, Elizabeth Burdick. She died in 1778, and he married (second) Oct. 15, 1780, Waity Gardiner, of East Greenwich, R. I., born in 1750. Mr. Vars was a farmer, and occupied the home place. He was made a freeman in 1758, became active in public affairs and held various town offices. He died in 1821, aged eighty-eight years. The second Mrs. Vars died in 1825, aged seventy-five years. The children of the first marriage were: Thomas, born Aug. 21, 1756; Elizabeth, Aug. 20, 1758; Joseph, Nov. 7, 1760; Edward, March 13, 1763; Ann, March 13, 1765; Sarah, March 25, 1768; Catherine, Oct. 19, 1770; and Lydia, March 4, 1772. The children born to the second marriage were: Polly, born Sept. 3, 1781; Isaac, July 6, 1788; and Fanny, July 11, 1790.

(V) Isaac Vars (3), son of Isaac (2), born July 6, 1788, married Jan. 9, 1811, Hannah Saunders, born Sept. 27, 1791, in Westerly, daughter of Capt. Arnold Saunders. Mr. Vars occupied the old homestead in Westerly, was a farmer and a man highly esteemed and respected in the community in which he lived. His death occurred July 31, 1870. His wife Hannah passed away in 1863, aged seventy-two. Their eleven children were: (1) Hannah, born Dec. 3, 1811, married Andrew Aikens, who was lost in the Mexican war, and (second) Alonzo Simiano. (2) John, born Feb. 22, 1813, married Mrs. Mary Ann Remington; he died in Niantic, Conn. Her daughter is Mrs. Eben Robinson, of Providence. (3) Charles, born June 5, 1814, was the father of Enoch W. Vars. (4) George W., born April 7, 1816, had a son, Charles Addison. He lives in Jamestown, R. I. (5) Lucinda, born April 15, 1818, married Gardiner Case. (6) Charlotte, born Dec. 19, 1819, married George D. Chester, and lives in Niantic, R. I. (7) Maria, born Sept. 13, 1821, died at the age of thirteen years. (8) Alfred G., born March 30, 1825, resides in Niantic, R. I. (9) Edwin, born Nov. 5, 1827, lives on the old homestead in Niantic. (10) Frances, born Dec. 25, 1829, married James M. Aldrich, of Westerly, R. I. (11) Nelson B. was born May 6, 1831.

(VI) Charles Vars was born at Watch Hill, R. I., June 5, 1814, and died Jan. 16, 1892. He attended the school formed by a number of families clubbing together, and was brought up on a farm. On Sept. 17, 1837, at the age of twenty-three years, Mr. Vars married, in Providence, Honor Gardiner, daughter of Malbro and Deborah Gardiner, the former of whom was a whaler. Mrs. Vars was born Feb. 21, 1821, and died April 22, 1846, the mother of children as follows: Abby M., born Oct. 3, 1839, married May 7, 1859, Thomas W. Potter, and lives in Westerly, R. I.; Nathan Hull, born April 27, 1841, married Lepha Anna Gavitt, and had one child, Lillian; Charles Courtland, born July 14, 1843, an engineer on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, residing in Providence, married Abby Ward, of Charlestown, and has three sons, William, Gorton G. and Edward W.; William Denison, of Saybrook Point, born March 14, 1845, was married Nov. 13, 1866, to Hattie N. Ward, and has one child, Alice Honor, born Oct. 19, 1873, now Mrs. Harry Dobson, of New York City.

Charles Vars married for his second wife, Nov. 11, 1846, Hannah L. Wilcox, daughter of Oliver Wilcox and cousin of Stephen Wilcox. She died Sept. 27, 1876, and on May 14, 1877, for his third wife, he wedded Abbie Earl Hoxie Wilcox, the widow of Dennison Wilcox. He was a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church. Six children blessed the second union: (1) Mary Honor, born May 11, 1850, married Horace Adrian Burdick, of Dansville, N. Y., who has served as Probate Judge in his district, and has two sons, Irving E. and Charles A.; the former is a graduate of Yale, scientific department, an expert electrician, and the inventor of the Hall & Burdick Submarine Arc Light. (2) Enoch Wilcox, born May 5, 1851, is mentioned later. (3) Oliver Edwin, born Feb. 3, 1853, resides at Andover, N. Y. He has successfully carried on mercantile business for a number of years, in different lines, including the drug business. He has other business interests. He married Ella Lanphear, and his children are Clifford J., Floyd C. and Mabel Irene. (4) Alice W., born May 14, 1854, died at the age of eighteen years. (5) Isaac Newton, born June 29, 1856, died in infancy. (6) Isaiah Wilcox, born July 20, 1857, married Lillian Warner, and had one child, Ethel. He was a locomotive engineer on the Connecticut River Division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and resided for some years in Middletown, Conn. He died in August, 1888, at the home of his brother Enoch W., in Niantic, Rhode Island.

(VII) Enoch Wilcox Vars, born May 5, 1851, in the town of Westerly, attended the public schools, the Hopkinton Academy, and later the academy on "Cookey Hill" in Westerly. When a young man, he began the study of pharmacy, under Dr. William Hyde of Stonington, Conn., one of the best known and most successful practitioners in eastern Connecticut in his day. Young Vars made rapid progress in learning the business, and soon won the favor and admiration of his preceptor, who not having any children of his own, wanted to adopt him, but Mr. Vars's father being postmaster and in the mercantile business at Niantic, R. I., was desirous of having his son assist him there.

In 1869 Enoch W. Vars began business with his father at Niantic as an assistant, and soon after became a partner. From the year 1869 Enoch Vars had entire charge of the drug business in his father's store, and at once added thereto the business of manufacturing chemist. Some of the first formulas put up were those that had been used with great success by old Dr. Hyde of Stonington. After a few years of partnership with his father, Mr. Vars bought that parent's interest, and has since carried on the business alone. In the line of a manufacturing chemist, Mr. Vars has for years had on the market a number of preparations that have long since been regarded as standards. The motto, "As good as the best, better than the rest" is original with Mr. Vars, and a most appropriate one, and is applicable to all his preparations. About 1888, the requirements of his business necessitated larger quarters, and that year he erected his present substantial business building. In connection with the manufacturing business he conducts a general mercantile business including drugs, and is postmaster at Niantic. In the latter capacity, Mr. Vars has since 1861 been very closely identified with the office, or has been postmaster. With the exception of three years, during Cleveland's first term, the postoffice at Niantic has been in the family for more than forty-five years. He was appointed postmaster Aug. 28, 1889, by President Harrison, and has served continuously ever since.

In pharmaceutical circles throughout the State and New England Mr. Vars is very well known. He was a charter member of the State Pharmaceutical Association of Rhode Island, and has filled almost every important office in that organization, including that of president, and he is now member of the executive committee. He was one of the signers of the application for a charter when the Rhode Island College of Pharmacy and Applied Sciences was chartered by the Rhode Island General Assembly, and is now a member of the Board of Directors of that institution. He is one of the owners of the "New England Druggist," the leading trade journal of the kind in New England. In his business Mr. Vars has made an enviable reputation for honest goods, and his practices in the management of his business, have been such as to not only create and retain an excellent reputation as a straightforward and law-abiding citizen, but to attach dignity to his profession.

In addition to the line of business already mentioned, Mr. Vars does quite an extensive business as an insurance agent, and as a broker. He is a prominent Mason, being a member of Franklin Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Franklin Chapter; Providence Council, No. 1; and Narragansett Commandery, K. T. His religious connection is with the Seventh Day Baptist Church at Niantic, of which he is clerk.

Mr. Vars married Miss Minnie E. Palmer, of Alfred, N. Y., daughter of Hosea and Mary Palmer. Two children were born to this union: (1) Arthur E., born May 24, 1877, was a graduate of the New York College of Pharmacy, and at the time of his death, March 20, 1904, was the Chicago manager, for a large New York firm of manufacturing chemists. He was an able young man, and of unusual promise. He married Susan A. Morgan, daughter of Dr. J. H. Morgan, of Westerly, R. I. (2) Effie H., born April 17, 1879, is a school teacher. On Oct. 15, 1889, Mr. Vars married, for his second wife, Miss Ruth A. Crandall, the daughter of Alanson and Ruby C. (Whaley) Crandall, a sketch of whom follows. The children born to the second marriage were: Mary C., born Aug. 22, 1891; and Clarence A. and Raymond C. (twins), born July 29, 1894.

Mrs. Enoch W. Vars is eligible to membership in the D. A. R. as her great-great-grandfather Whaley was a Revolutionary soldier. She is also eligible through the Andrews family, which her ancestry includes.

ALANSON CRANDALL, father of Mrs. Enoch W. Vars, was born Aug. 5, 1824, near the village of Rockville, R. I., son of Samuel Crandall, Sr., and he died March 13, 1903, at his home in Tomaquag Valley, in the town of Hopkinton, where he had been an esteemed citizen for more than forty years. He was one of a family of twelve children, the others being Samuel, William Clark, Nicholas, Daniel, Benjamin, Isaac, Mary Ann, Elizabeth, Julia, Hannah and Lucetta. When about twenty-two years of age during a revival of religion conducted by Rev. Alexander Campbell, after being powerfully wrought upon by the spirit of God and passing through deep exercise of mind, seeking the prayers of God's people in his behalf, he was converted, Sept. 26, 1846, received baptism at the hand of the presiding pastor of the Rockville Seventh Day Baptist Church, with which he united, and retained his membership to the end of his life. While a resident member he was prominent and active in the affairs of the church, where he served as chorister and Bible School superintendent. He was gifted in prayer, exhortation and music, and using these gifts made himself a living power for God. To him the Christian religion was an abiding reality. As a neighbor he was ever kind and obliging, often sacrificing his own convenience to accommodate others. For those in affliction and sorrow he ever had a kind word. He was possessed of tender feelings, and often shed tears of sympathy with the afflicted, never feeling that to do so was beneath his manhood.

In politics Mr. Crandall was a Republican. He represented his town in the State Legislature, and was for several years a member of the town council. He served as a member of the executive committee of the Washington County Agricultural Society from its formation to within a year of his death, when he resigned because of failing health. In Masonic circles he was affiliated with Franklin Lodge, No. 20, A. F. & A. M., of Westerly.

On May 31, 1848, Mr. Crandall married Miss Ruby C. Whaley, and to them were born three children: Albert W., of Providence, who resides at No. 13 Summit avenue, and has his office at No. 39 Smith street; Mary E., who died in 1889, in young womanhood; and Ruth A., wife of Enoch W. Vars, of Niantic, R. I. Ruby C. (Whaley) Crandall, wife of Alanson Crandall, and daughter of Albert and Ruth (Andrews) Whaley, was born in Coventry, R. I., Jan. 19, 1827, and died at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch W. Vars, in Niantic, R. I., May 11, 1903. Her early life was spent on a farm in the town in which she was born. During her childhood her father died, but the mother kept the family together and reared them in a most creditable manner. When the young girl reached the years of womanhood she found work at Phenix, and about 1844, while residing there, she accepted Christ as her Savior by the ordinance of baptism. Later she removed to Rockville, and there met and married Alanson Crandall, after which she united with the Seventh Day Baptist Church there, and remained a member all her life. For nearly fifty-five years she made a model home for her husband and children. She and Mr. Crandall were known as "Aunt Ruby" and "Uncle Lan." As a wife and mother Mrs. Crandall was noble and true, as a neighbor kind and obliging, and the memory of a sweet, loving, faithful mother is the most blessed one that we can retain through life.

(VI) ALFRED GARDINER VARS, born March 30, 1825, in Westerly, the eighth child of Isaac Vars (3), and Hannah (Saunders) Vars, spent his boyhood days, until six years old, on the home farm. His father then moved to Stonington, and there the son lived on a farm for four years, when the family removed to Quonocontaug for three years, later residing two years at Avondale, and several years at Cross's Mills, running gristmills. He returned to the old homestead for a time. At the age of twenty-one years he had gone to sea on fishing and coasting vessels, and continued in that line for twelve years and more. In 1862 he engaged in mercantile business in Niantic, R. I., and has ever since carried on that business. On July 23, 1859, he moved to his present home, building the house himself.

On Nov. 2, 1851, Mr. Vars was married in Niantic, to Jane P. Harvey, and they have had seven children, four of whom lived to adult age: John A., a resident of Niantic, is an engineer at Crumbs' Quarry; he married Mrs. Cordner Sherman. Emma Jane, of Ashaway, is the wife of Oscar Wells. Carrie Medora is unmarried. Everett L., died at the age of nineteen years. Mr. Vars has been a lifelong Whig and Republican. He is a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church at Niantic.

(VI) Nelson Byron Vars, son of Isaac (3), born May 6, 1831, in Stonington, Conn., married May 6, 1856, Lucy Ann, born April 15, 1830, daughter of William West, of Westerly, R. I. Mr. Vars is a photographer by profession, and is now a resident of East Greenwich, R. I. During the years 1852-53 he was a resident of New York City; of Albany, N. Y., 1854-55; and of Norwich, Conn., 1861-68.

MOSES POLLARD, president of the Eagle Dye Works, of Pawtucket, is one of that city's prosperous and highly honored citizens, a self-made man, who has achieved his success unaided. He was born in Cheshire, England, Jan. 1, 1853, son of Moses Pollard.

Moses Pollard, Sr., followed the trade of a paper-maker in England nearly all his life. His wife, Sybil (Wright) Pollard, died in that country at the age of sixty-five, and after her death Mr. Pollard decided to come to America. He was advanced in years, and after arriving in this country did not attempt to resume work, but settled down to a retired life with his son in Pawtucket. There he died in 1894, aged seventy-five. Of his nine children his son Moses was the only one to leave England.

Moses Pollard, Jr., received few educational advantages in his boyhood, for he was obliged to leave home when only ten years old, but he was determined to improve himself and for a long time devoted most of his evenings and other spare moments to study, so that he became a well informed man. When ten years old Moses Pollard entered the Millbank Paper Mills, at Partington, Cheshire, and remained there as an apprentice until he was twenty; in that period he acquired a thorough knowledge of every detail of the business. After thus learning his trade he stayed on with the same firm as an employee a number of years longer, but finally, in 1885, determined to leave them in order to try life in the New World. Arriving in June of that year, he located in Pawtucket, as that seemed a favorable field for his efforts. He very soon found employment in the Eagle Dye Works, but was obliged to start with the very modest recompense of $8 per week. However, his earlier experience in the mills rendered it easier for him to grasp his new work, and as he was also naturally capable, quick and reliable, his ability was soon recognized and steady promotion followed. He became assistant superintendent, then superintendent, and as such continued until 1903.

In June, 1903, Mr. Pollard formed a partnership with W. A. McCormick and Earle Brown and this new firm purchased the business of the Eagle Dye Works, which they are now conducting with most gratifying results. Mr. Pollard is president of the company, at the same time acting as general manager. They engage in the dyeing of raw cotton and have about thirty employees.

Since becoming a citizen of his adopted country Mr. Pollard has given his support to the Republican party, but has not mingled to any extent in political life. He early became interested in the work of the Knights of Pythias, and was a charter member of Charles E. Chickering Lodge, No. 20, of Pawtucket, of which he is still a loyal adherent. He has also been active in church work, belonging to the Free Baptist Church, of Pawtucket, which he has served several years as superintendent of the Sunday-school; and in the Y. M. C. A., being a director of the Pawtucket Association.

The marriage of Mr. Pollard occurred some time before he left England, the date of the event being May 20, 1872. His wife bore the maiden name of Ellen Hale, and she was a daughter of William Hale, of Cheshire. They had five children, all except Edith May born previous to their departure from England; Salina died in Pawtucket, unmarried, at the age of twenty-nine; Hannah died there at the age of twenty-two; Edith Annie died in England when only three months old; Martha is the wife of William Reid, of Pawtucket, superintendent of the Eagle Dye Works, and they have one son, William Irving; Edith May is at home.

Mr. Pollard is a man of high standing in Pawtucket, where his many fine qualities of mind and heart have been fully recognized. In his own business he has displayed marked ability, not alone in executive lines but in its practical workings. He was the inventor of the first revolving dyeing machine, which was in general use until superseded by more recent improvements.

JOSEPH HAIRE, who is engaged in the plumbing business in Newport, R. I., which business he has been carrying on successfully for a number of years, is one of that city's substantial and representative citizens.

William Haire, his father, was born April 12, 1816, in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and in his native land was engaged in agricultural pursuits, also carrying on a mercantile business. He continued in these vocations until coming to America, in 1866, finally settling at Newport, R. I., where he passed away April 28, 1868. He married in May, 1848, Elizabeth Hoey, daughter of John Hoey, and Mrs. Haire survived her husband until Sept. 27, 1905, when she passed away in Middletown, R. I. To Mr. and Mrs. Haire were born the following children: James, who is a detective in the White Chapel district, London, England; William, who was drowned at Vineyard Haven, Mass.; Joseph, the subject of this article; Margaret Anna, who is the wife of Rev. John Reynolds Mackay, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Glens Falls, N. Y.; Samuel, who is engaged in farming in Middletown, R. I.; John Thomas, mentioned elsewhere in these volumes; and Robert, who is engaged in the plumbing business in Newport.

Joseph Haire was born Feb. 6, 1857, in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and he received his early educational training in the schools of his native country, continuing his studies in the schools of Newport, R. I., after coming to the United States. He attended night school until twelve years of age, being engaged in gardening during the days. The death of his father when he was but a mere lad compelled him to early seek his own livelihood, and at the age of twelve years he went to New York, where he was engaged as a boy round the house of George Tiffany, continuing in this capacity for about three years. Returning to Newport he became apprenticed to the plumber's trade with the firm of McAdam & Openshaw, in whose employ he remained about fifteen years. In 1887 Mr. Haire established himself in the plumbing business, and from a small beginning his business has grown steadily until it is now one of the most extensive in the city, giving employment during the busy seasons to from twelve to twenty men. Mr. Haire's work has not been entirely confined to Newport, he having had several very large contracts in other localities.

Mr. Haire is a member of various fraternal societies and social clubs, among them being: St. John's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M.; Newport Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; DeBlois Council, No. 5, R. & S. M.; Washington Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, of Newport, of which he is a past eminent commander, and Palestine Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Providence. He has also been one of the members of the Newport County Club since its organization, and has served as president of the same. In political sentiment Mr. Haire is a staunch Republican, has served his adopted city as a member of the common council, and for two years was also a member of the board of aldermen; again in 1906, at the first election held under the new charter granted the city of Newport, Mr. Haire was elected a member of the representative council for the two-year term from the Third ward. In 1907 he was also elected a member of the board of health of the city for the five-year term, and in the same year he was elected president of the board for the ensuing year.

Mr. Haire and his family are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Newport, he being chairman of the board of trustees of the church.

On April 27, 1886, Mr. Haire was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Jessie McDermid, daughter of August McDermid, of Pictou, N. S., and to this union have been born four daughters, as follows: Elizabeth Morrison, Marian, Margaret Mackay and Ruth Findley Haire.

Mr. Haire is essentially a self-made man, his success in life being due to his own energy and exertions, combined with natural business acumen. He has a host of staunch friends who hold him in high esteem and respect for his many sterling traits of character.

◀ HAZARD. The Rhode Island Hazards were among the founders of the Colony of Rhode Island two hundred and fifty and more years ago, and active in the development of the subsequent Commonwealth. They have been largely a Southern Rhode Island family—long one of the most wealthy and influential of the many strong, forceful families of the old South County. The name Hazard is one conspicuous in Rhode Island annals. Several of the earlier generations were among the largest landholders of their section, and as farmers, manufacturers, professional men, men of letters and literature and science, they have left the impress of their strong personalities and achievement upon the State. Of more recent generations such names as Hon. Rowland Gibson Hazard, LL. D., Hon. Isaac Peace Hazard, Thomas Robinson Hazard, Hon. Benjamin Hazard, Gen. John G. Hazard, the late Hon. Rowland Hazard, who "stood among the leading organizers of industry in America," Rowland Gibson Hazard, and Miss Caroline Hazard, president of Wellesley College, with scores of others have an enduring place in Rhode Island history.

In the genealogy and family history following the order is chronological, the Roman numerals indicating generations from the American ancestor.

(I) Thomas Hazard, born in 1610, appears first of record in America in Boston in 1635; was admitted a freeman there in 1638, and two years later of Portsmouth, R. I. He was one of the founders and first town officers of Newport, along with Coddington, Easton, Coggeshall, Brenton, the Clarkes, Bull and Dyre. Mr. Hazard was made a freeman of Newport in 1639, and in 1640 was appointed a member of the General Court of Elections. His first wife Martha died in 1669, and he married (second) Martha, widow of Thomas Sheriff. His children were: Robert, born in 1635, in England or Ireland; Elizabeth; Hannah; and Martha.

(II) Robert, Hazard, born in 1635, married Mary, born in 1639, daughter of Thomas and Anne Brownell, who lived to be one hundred years old, dying Jan. 28, 1739, her obituary setting forth that she was accounted a very useful gentlewoman, etc. Robert Hazard was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1665, and from that time until 1698 his name often appears in the Colonial records as chosen to fill some important position. In 1671 he bought 500 acres of land in Kings Town, and in 1687 he was taxed in that town; and not long thereafter built his house there. This house was still standing in the early part of the nineteenth century. In 1695 he gave to his son George the larger part of the Kings Town purchase. In 1710, a short time before his death, Robert sold to his son Robert the remaining part of his farm, with "my manor house where I now live," and the latter, in 1718, gave it by will to his son Robert, after his mother's death, making three Roberts who had successively owned and occupied the old house. The last, upon the death of his mother in 1739, sold to his uncle George the remaining part of the farm; it went next by will in 1743 to George's son, Col. Thomas, who in 1748 sold it to John Rose. In 1695 Robert Hazard gave to his son Jeremiah 200 acres of land in Tiverton. Robert Hazard died in 1710. His children were: Thomas, born in 1660; George; Stephen; Martha; Mary; Robert; Jeremiah, born March 26, 1675; and Hannah.

(III) Thomas Hazard, born in 1660, married, it is supposed, Susannah Nichols. The land records show his name more often than that of any other of the old planters as purchaser of large tracts of land of the original purchasers and at good prices. Previous to 1746, a shipyard, "Great Pier" and warehouses, were on the farm that he gave in 1739 to his son Jonathan. This farm, situated on Boston Neck, is now known as the Governor Brown Farm and John J. Watson farm. About 1746, or some time previous, Jonathan Hazard sold to his brother George one-half of the pier and one-half of the warehouses and shipyard. Thomas Hazard was admitted a freeman from Portsmouth in 1684; after this date his name appears only twice in the Colonial records, viz.: in 1696 as freeman from Kings Town, and in 1717, as appellant in a law suit. He made the first purchase of land in Narragansett previous to 1698, buying of Samuel Sewell 900 acres for 700 pounds. In 1710 he also bought of Mr. Sewell 300 acres for 500 pounds, and other land. In 1703 and in 1708 he bought two parcels of land from Benedict Arnold, one containing 160 acres and the other twenty-six acres. This last purchase was what is called Little Neck Farm, and was afterward given to his son George. In 1727, he bought of Samuel Vial 660 acres in Boston Neck, and in 1738, 800 acres of Francis Brinley, adjoining the above purchase. He also purchased other lands in the town until he owned something less than 4,000 acres. The greater part of his land he gave to his sons before his death; and as each son attained his majority he was given a farm of several hundred acres. Mr. Hazard died in 1746, and his wife previously. Their children were: Mary, born Oct. 3, 1683; Hannah, April 11, 1685; Sarah, July 5, 1687; Robert, May 23, 1689; Thomas, May 11, 1691; Stephen, June 13, 1693; Jeremiah, June 5, 1697; George, Jan. 18, 1699; Benjamin, Nov. 2, 1702; and Jonathan, Oct. 1, 1704.

(IV) Robert Hazard (2), son of Thomas (2), born May 3 (or 23), 1689, married Sarah, born July 31, 1694, daughter of Richard and Innocent Borden. Like nearly all of the Hazard family of this generation, Mr. Hazard was a large landholder. A part of his land was given to him before his father's death, but the greater portion he obtained by purchase. In 1721, he was given by his father 150 acres on Tower Hill, known now as the Nichols farm. In 1739 he received from his father by deed 200 acres of his Boston Neck land. Mr. Hazard died May 20, 1762. His children were: Mary, born Feb. 23, 1716; Thomas, May 9, 1718; Thomas (2), Sept. 15, 1720; Jonathan, August, 1726; Richard, Dec. 31, 1730; and Sarah, June 27, 1734.

(V) Thomas Hazard (3), known as "College Tom," son of Robert, born Sept. 15, 1720, married March 27, 1742, Elizabeth, born June 16, 1724, daughter of Gov. William and Martha (Potter) Robinson, and their children were: Sarah, born Nov. 10, 1747; Robert, Nov. 17, 1753; Thomas, Nov. 13, 1755; Thomas (2), Nov. 15, 1758; and Rowland, April 4, 1763.

(VI) Rowland Hazard, son of "College Tom," born April 4, 1763, married in 1793, at Charleston, S. C., Mary Peace, daughter of Isaac Peace and his wife, Elizabeth Gibson, and lived in South Kingstown, R. I., where he set the first carding machines in the town—at Peace Dale, which village was named for his wife, and as early as 1800 the industry was established which has since developed into the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company. Mr. Hazard also had shipping interests, first at Charleston, S. C., and afterward in Narragansett. After the destruction of the Pier there in 1815, Mrs. Hazard writes him, she hopes he will not rebuild it, as it has always proved a troublesome piece of property, quoting his grandfather, Governor Robinson, as having desired that none of his children would try to maintain it. Late in life Mr. Hazard removed to Pleasant Valley, N. Y., where he died. His children were: Isaac Peace, born Oct. 3, 1794; Thomas Robinson, Jan. 3, 1797; Eliza Gibson, March 17, 1799; Rowland Gibson, Oct. 9, 1801; William Robinson, Dec. 15, 1803; Joseph Peace, Feb. 17, 1807; Isabella Wakefield, Aug. 3, 1809; Mary Peace, Aug. 15, 1814; and Anna, Oct. 27, 1820.

(VII) ISAAC PEACE HAZARD, son of Rowland, born Oct. 3, 1794, at the home of his grandfather, Thomas Hazard, in South Kingstown, R. I., died March 2, 1879, unmarried.

Mr. Hazard was educated at the Friends' School at West Town, near Philadelphia. On leaving school, about 1810, he returned to South Kingstown, R. I., and at once began to assist his father in business, passing the greater part of his life at Peace Dale. He took a most kindly interest in the welfare of his neighbors there. He was constantly appealed to for advice and assistance, and no one whom he could aid ever applied to him in vain. He possessed the confidence and esteem of all who knew him. He never sought political power or office, but in response to the earnest solicitations of his townsmen, he on six occasions represented the town of South Kingstown in the General Assembly. From the organization of the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company, in 1848, he was president of the company, until he retired in 1864. His brother Rowland G. Hazard was the treasurer, but the names of the officers do not indicate, with any exactness, the duties which each discharged. They divided the conduct of the business between them. After his retirement from active business, in 1864, he went to live with his sisters at Newport, R. I., where he died as stated above, in 1879. He lies buried in the Oak Dale Cemetery, at Peace Dale, amid scenes with which he was so familiar, and among the people whose welfare he had so much at heart.

(VII) THOMAS ROBINSON HAZARD, son of Rowland, born Jan. 3, 1797, at Tower Hill, in South Kingstown, R. I., married Oct. 12, 1838, Frances, daughter of Jonas Minturn, of New York.

Mr. Hazard was trained from early years to the business of woolen manufacturing, which his father had established at Peace Dale in the same town, and, at the age of sixteen, he engaged in the same business on his own account. In this he continued, through all the vicissitudes incident to the establishment of an infant industry on a firm basis, until 1842, when, having a few years before purchased the fine old country seat "Vancluse," in the town of Portsmouth, he retired from active business, and devoted much of his time to agricultural pursuits, of which he had always been extremely fond. In his farming operations Mr. Hazard gave especial attention to the raising and keeping of fine sheep, his flocks sometimes numbering no less than 1,200, from which fact he acquired the sobriquet of "Shepherd Tom," to distinguish him from a score or more members of the Hazard family of the same Christian name.

Although never holding political office of any kind, Mr. Hazard always took a deep interest in every movement in the direction of reform and improvement of the conditions of life, and was ever ready to use his pen, without fear or favor, in aid of any cause which he believed to be just. He was the first in the State to establish an evening school, in 1821, in his factory, and he built, largely at his own expense, in Portsmouth, the first school house on the improved plan in any country town in Rhode Island. He also joined in writing the call for the first large meeting ever held in behalf of educational interests in Providence, or the State, at which the Rhode Island Institute of Instruction was organized. He visited every public poorhouse in the State, except on Block Island, and succeeded in bringing about a thorough reform in their management. He began an agitation in behalf of the insane poor, and did not abandon the cause until after Butler hospital was in successful operation. It was through his application to the General Assembly that fixed appropriations were made for the maintenance of the insane, and for the education of the deaf and dumb and the blind. It was through his untiring efforts and the influence of a report compiled and written by him that the Legislature abolished capital punishment in Rhode Island by a majority of four in the Senate, and afterwards by more than two to one in the House.

Mr. Hazard also took an active interest in the work of the African Colonization Society, and always maintained that if the aims of this organization had been adequately aided by the general government, the great question of slavery would in all probability have been settled without bloodshed. In politics he was an ardent Whig and an earnest supporter of Henry Clay and his American system of protection to home industry; and in the wisdom and beneficence of this principle he was, to the day of his death, an unfaltering believer. In aid of the Whig campaign of 1840 he wrote and published in the Newport papers of the time a series of articles entitled, "Facts for the Laboring Man," which the New York Courier and Enquirer, then the recognized organ of commercial and financial interests, referred to as being "the best exposition of the financial policy of the present [Van Buren] administration that has appeared."

During the later years of his life Mr. Hazard spent much of his time in compiling a very thorough genealogical record of the Hazard and Robinson families, and he also published in the newspapers a series of articles entitled "Johnny Cake Papers," relating to the early customs and traditions of the State. These were afterward printed in book form, and, together with his volume of "Miscellaneous Essays and Letters," make a valuable contribution to the historical literature of the State and time.

To Mr. and Mrs. Hazard were born children as follows: Mary Robinson, born in 1839; Frances Minturn, in 1841; Gertrude Minturn, in 1843; Anna Peace, in 1845; Esther Robinson, in 1848 (married Edward J. Dunning); and Barclay, Dec. 4, 1852 (married Alida G. Blake). Mrs. Hazard was a woman of high culture and of great personal beauty. She died at "Vanclose," Newport, R. I., April 10, 1854, aged forty-two years.

(VII) ROWLAND GIBSON HAZARD, LL. D., son of Rowland, was born Oct. 9, 1801, in the house of his grandfather on Tower Hill, South Kingstown, R. I. In early childhood, he was taken to Bristol, Pa., to the home of his maternal grandfather, Isaac Peace. He attended school in Burlington, N. J. (across the Delaware), and in Bristol, and in 1813

he was sent to West Town School. Here he remained five years, and developed a strong taste for mathematics, discovering some new modes of demonstration in conic sections. This school gave him a thorough training in the branches it taught, and though he lamented his want of a classical education, yet by reading he early acquired a knowledge of classical history. In 1819 Mr. Hazard returned to Rhode Island, and, with his brother, Isaac Peace, took charge of the manufacturing business at Peace Dale, in which their father was engaged. Under the management of the brothers the business largely increased.

Mr. Hazard early became identified with all public movements. In connection with a litigation over the Union Pacific railroad he wrote a number of articles. During the Civil war he did much to sustain our national credit at home and abroad. His newspaper articles on the public finances were collected and published in pamphlet form, mainly by bankers in New York for foreign readers. Collections of them were published in London, and epitomes were translated and published in Amsterdam and had much influence there and at Frankfort-on-the-Main, and through these and Mr. Hazard's personal interviews, European bankers who at that crisis were becoming distrustful were induced to hold and increase their investments in United States bonds. This action was taken after conference with President Lincoln and the Secretary of the Treasury, in which an official position was suggested, but he preferred to act unofficially. He also opposed a suggestion made at the time of the war to increase the circulation of paper money. His arguments on this subject were published in the New York Evening Post, and other newspapers, and were subsequently reprinted in a pamphlet with other articles under the title of "Our Resources."

From 1833 to 1843 Mr. Hazard made yearly visits to the South, and had an opportunity to see the workings of slavery, an institution he abhorred. In New Orleans, through his efforts, many free negroes unjustly detained in the chain-gang were released. His speech on the Fugitive Slave Law, in the Rhode Island Legislature, in 1850, while generous and appreciative of the slave owners' position, is a powerful denunciation of the institution. In politics Mr. Hazard never exhibited fondness for the arts of the selfish politician, but his whole course was marked as one of philanthropy and well-founded moral principles. He was early identified with the Free Soil and Anti-Slavery party, and was one of the founders of the Republican party. With Edward Harris, of Woonsocket, he attended its first convention, which met in Pittsburg, and was on the Committee on Platform and Resolutions. He was a delegate to the Philadelphia Convention of 1856, and in that campaign many of the Resolutions and Addresses published in Rhode Island were from his pen. Mr. Hazard was also a member of the Chicago Convention in 1860, which nominated Abraham Lincoln, and he participated in forming the platform of that convention. In 1864 he was in Europe, but in 1868 he was again a delegate to the convention at Chicago, which nominated General Grant, where he was on the Committee on Platform, and was the author of the financial portion. In 1851-52, in 1854-55, and in 1880-81 he was a member of the Rhode Island House of Representatives, and in 1866-67 was a member of the Rhode Island Senate.

The citizens of his town acknowledge Mr. Hazard's benefactions in the support of their schools and churches, and in the erection of their valuable town-house. Mr. Hazard's Professorship of Physics in Brown University was founded by his endowment of $40,000. He three times visited Europe, where he was personally intimate with the philosopher, John Stuart Mill. Dr. Channing, referring to Mr. Hazard's "Essay on Language" said, "I have known a man of vigorous intellect, whose mind was almost engrossed by the details of an extensive business, but who composed a book of much original thought, in steamboats and on horseback, while visiting distant customers."

Mr. Hazard's chief works are: "Essay on Language" (1834); "The Adaptation of the Universe to the Cultivation of the Mind" (1840); "Causes of Decline of Political Morality" (1841), a treatise that had a great influence in abolishing lotteries from Rhode Island; "Fourth of July Oration on Temperance" (1843); "The Philosophical Character of Channing" (1844); "The Character and Works of the Late Chief Justice Durfee, LL. D., of Rhode Island" (1845); "The Relations of Railroad Corporations to the Public" (1849); "The Duty of Individuals to Support Science and Literature" (1855); "The Resources of the United States" (1864); "The Freedom of the Mind in Willing" (1866). In 1869 he published his "Causation and Freedom in Willing." The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon Mr. Hazard in 1845 by Brown University.

On Sept. 28, 1828, Mr. Hazard was married to Caroline, daughter of John Newbold, of Bloomsdale, Pa., and their two children were: Rowland, born Aug. 16, 1829, in Newport, R. I.; and John Newbold, born Sept. 11, 1836, in Peace Dale, R. I. Mr. Hazard died at Peace Dale, R. I., June 24, 1888.

(VII) WILLIAM ROBINSON HAZARD, son of Rowland, born Dec. 15, 1803, married Oct. 2, 1828, Mary, daughter of John and Lydia Wilbur, of Hopkinton, R. I. Their children were: John Wilbur, born in 1830; Mary G., born in 1833, married Samuel G. Cook; Lydia C., born in 1835, married Franklin E. Hoag; Elizabeth, born in 1837; Rowland, born in 1839, married Phoebe Ann Moore; Anna, born in 1841, married Thomas Tierney; William Wilbur, born in 1843; and Isaac Peace, born in 1847, married in 1871, Elizabeth Howland.

(VII) JOSEPH PEACE HAZARD, son of Rowland, was born Feb. 17, 1807, in Burlington, N. J., whence his parents removed to Bristol, Pa., in his thirteenth year, when Peace Dale, R. I., became his home. In 1835 he erected a woolen mill at Peace Dale, which was operated for several years, and subsequently leased, after which he abandoned business. Having a taste for travel, Mr. Hazard acquainted himself thoroughly with the land of his birth, and in 1856 made the tour of Europe spending much time in London and Rome. For many years until 1879 much of his time was spent abroad, when he returned to his native land.

Mr. Hazard was among the first to foresee the advantages presented by Narragansett Pier as a popular watering-place, and at an early day furnished means to aid in its development, and promote its growth. He was a considerable holder of land at that point, and in 1846 began the erection of what is known as the "Castle," a picturesque structure surmounted by two towers. Mr. Hazard died at the residence of his brother, Rowland G. Hazard, in Peace Dale, Rhode Island.

(VIII) ROWLAND HAZARD, son of Rowland Gibson, born Aug. 16, 1829, in Newport, R. I., married March 29, 1854, Margaret Anna Rood, of Philadelphia, daughter of Rev. Anson and Alida Gouverneur (Ogden) Rood.

The parents of Mr. Hazard removed to Peace Dale, R. I., in 1833, and this place was always Rowland's home from that time. He was prepared for college by the Rev. Thomas Vernon (B. U., 1816). He was also for a time at Haverford School (Haverford College since 1856), and came thence to Brown University, entering the Sophomore class in everything except Greek which he took up for the first time. In mathematics he was far in advance of his class, and in this way he gained time for Greek. In his Sophomore year, and again in his junior year, he won the first University premium in Mathematics; when a junior he also won the second University premium in Mathematical Philosophy and the first University premium in Astronomy. After his graduation in 1849, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he spent a year in foreign travel. In 1851 he began his career at Peace Dale as a manufacturer of woollens, in the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company, in connection with his father. There he continued to reside. From 1868 to 1884 his winters were passed in Providence, and from 1884-85 to 1898 in Santa Barbara, Cal., with the exception of the winters of 1889-90 and 1893-94, which were passed in Europe.

In 1875 Mr. Hazard became owner of a large tract of 24,000 acres of land in southeastern Missouri, known as the Mine La Motte lead mine. Into this mine, worked in a primitive manner since 1717, he introduced the most approved methods of mining, dressing and smelting ore. The "Anchor Brand" of lead (so named from the shield of Rhode Island) produced under his control, soon acquired a high reputation. In 1881 he was instrumental in organizing the Solvay Process Company, of Syracuse, N. Y., and became its president. He thus introduced into this country from Belgium the production of soda-ash. He was president of several other industrial companies. He stood among the leading organizers of industry in America. He owned much real estate in South Kingstown; he had lands in the State of New York and the far West. One of his chief recreations was the conduct of a large dairy farm.

Mr. Hazard received his degree of Master of Arts in course from Brown University. Among the offices which he held these may be named: He was a trustee of Brown University from 1875 to 1889; fellow from 1889 until his death (his father was a trustee from 1869 to 1875, and fellow from 1875 to 1888); corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; trustee of Butler Hospital; president of Washington County Agricultural Society from 1875 until his death; president of the What Cheer Insurance Company. In his own business at Peace Dale he became president of the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company in 1864, and was president at the time of his death. He served the town of South Kingstown as moderator for several years. In 1863-64 he was a member of the Rhode Island House of Representatives, and from 1867 to 1869 a member of the State Senate. In 1875 he was the Independent candidate for Governor of the State and received a plurality of votes, but failed of election by the Assembly.

Mr. Hazard was a man of large ideas and of varied interests. After studying profoundly the distribution of profits and the relation of capital and labor, and after personal inspection of the co-operative establishments of Rochdale, England, and elsewhere, he introduced the system of profit sharing into the Peace Dale mills. His generous treatment of those whom he employed made labor troubles a thing unknown among them. By the improvements which he introduced into Mine La Motte the whole place became transformed for the better in its material and spiritual condition. He also organized his great works at Syracuse, N. Y., with the most careful regard for the comfort and welfare of the workmen. He was interested in agriculture and in the improvements of breeds of cattle. As president of the Washington County Agricultural Society he annually gave an address which was of great interest and practical value.

Mr. Hazard was always active in village and town affairs. In 1854 he organized a Sunday-school in the school house. In 1857 the Second Congregational Church of South Kingstown was organized in his house, and from that time he was a deacon in that church. In 1872 he built the present stone church at the cost of about $25,000. In 1895 he added to it the Margaret Chapel, in memory of his beloved wife, who died in that year. He was largely instrumental in establishing the Narragansett Library in 1855 and in the organization of the high school, giving the land for the building and assisting in its maintenance. He did much for the improvement of the village.

With his father Mr. Hazard established the Hazard professorship of physics at Brown University, and he bequeathed to Brown University $100,000.

Mr. Hazard was fond of architecture and had much ability in the actual practice of that art. He drew the plans for the Congregational Church just mentioned. The large worsted mill of his company was built after his plans in 1872. The weaving shed at a later date, and the picturesque stone bridges of Peace Dale are all of his building. One bridge of a single stone arch, with a span of 40 feet, is said to be the largest single arch in the State. He was chairman of the building committee under whose direction was built the John Carter Brown Library of Brown University.

Mr. Hazard wrote much. His annual addresses at the South County Fair have been mentioned. He wrote a paper on the Credit Mobilier of America, published in 1881; review articles on economic subjects; papers on scientific and philosophic themes; and the memorable address at the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol of Rhode Island. He also wrote graceful verse, metrical translations from German lyrics and exquisite sonnets for his own pleasure, but never published.

Mr. Hazard was a man of simple religious faith, of a faith which was wrought by love for the betterment of his fellow men. His strength of character, his firm resolve, made him a power in the world. This power he used wisely, kindly, beneficently. He was generous with his wealth and freely gave his valuable services to good causes. He was revered by all who knew him, tenderly loved by those who were brought into personal relations with him. His death was deeply lamented. Men recognized in him one whose noble life had reflected honor on America.

Mr. Hazard died Aug. 16, 1898, and Mrs. Hazard passed away Aug. 7, 1895. The children of Rowland and Margaret Anna (Rood) Hazard were:

(IX) HON. ROWLAND GIBSON HAZARD, one of the most prominent men of Rhode Island, was born at Peace Dale, R. I., Jan. 22, 1855. He was graduated from Brown University with the class of 1876, and immediately entered the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company, of which he is president. He is also president of the Narragansett Pier Railroad Company, and besides being an official in numerous other corporations, has been at various times an active participant in State affairs. Outside of his own State he is vice-president of the Solvay Process Company, of Syracuse, N. Y. He is active in all town improvements; was elected a trustee of Brown University in 1893; was a member of the Rhode Island State House commission; a member of the Linnaean Society of New York; the Geographical Society of Washington; the American Economical Association; the Society of Colonial Wars of Rhode Island; the Royal Economical Society of Great Britain; the American Social Science Association; the American Forestry Association; and the Ornithologist Union. In 1904 he was a presidential elector, and was also a member of the executive committee of the Indianapolis Monetary Convention. He belongs to several clubs, among them being the Century and University clubs of New York; Graduates, Country and Lawn clubs of New Haven; and Hope and University clubs of Providence. He was appointed a member of the proxy committee of the New York Life Insurance Company to receive and vote proxies for the administration ticket Dec. 18, 1906. In his religious belief Mr. Hazard is a Congregationalist, and for a quarter of a century was superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and is a member of the American Board of Foreign Missions. For many years he has been president of the Washington County Agricultural Society, succeeding his father in that office, and his annual addresses to that Society, at the Fair at West Kingston, have been gems of thought, literary style and delivery long remembered by those who have had the pleasure of hearing them, and preserved by many in a printed form for further consideration. His address of 1905 on "Individuality" was a particularly sound and pleasing production. On Nov. 16, 1880, Mr. Hazard was married to Mary Pierpont Bushnell, daughter of Rev. George Bushnell of Beloit, Wis., and granddaughter of Eli Whitney Blake, of New Haven, Conn. To them have been born children as follows: Rowland, born Oct. 29, 1881; Elizabeth, April 27, 1883; Margaret, Jan. 25, 1886; Mary, April 11, 1890; and Thomas Pierpont, Oct. 27, 1892.

(IX) CAROLINE HAZARD, daughter of Rowland and Margaret A. (Rood) Hazard, born June 10, 1856, inherits her grandfather's intellectual tastes. She is the editor of a collected edition of his philosophical and economic writings under the title of "Works of Rowland Gibson Hazard," in five volumes, and is the author of a biography entitled "Thomas Hazard, son of Robert, called 'College Tom'"; "A Study of Life in Narragansett in the XVIIIth Century," a book full of Narragansett history; of a volume of poems called "Narragansett Poems;" of "South County Meeting," "Some Ideas on the Education of Women"; and numerous short stories. She is the author-editor of a volume issued as a memorial of J. Lewis Diman, of Brown University. Miss Hazard is full of knowledge and interest in what was best in Old Narragansett—helps on all that is best in the new. She was given the degree of A. M. by the University of Michigan in 1899; and the same year the degree of Litt. D. by Brown University. She is a life member of the Rhode Island Historical Society; a member of the New England Historical Society; the American Historical Society; historian of the Colonial Dames of Rhode Island; member of the Society of Colonial Governors; Massachusetts State Board of Education, 1902; and since 1899 president of Wellesley College.

(IX) FREDERICK ROWLAND HAZARD, son of Rowland and Margaret A. (Rood) Hazard, was born June 14, 1858. He graduated from Brown University in 1881, and after a year spent in studying the manufacturing of woolen goods in the Peace Dale Mills, passed the years of 1883-84 in France, Germany and England, studying the manufacture of alkali. In 1884 he became assistant treasurer of the Solvay Process Company, Syracuse, N. Y., manufacturers of alkali and its related products. In 1888 he became treasurer, and in 1898 president of that same company. He has been president of the village of Solvay since its incorporation in 1892. He is a director in the First National Bank, Commercial National Bank, Onondaga County Savings Bank; president of the Syracuse Trust Company; and vice-president of the First National Bank of Tully, N. Y. He has been president of the Syracuse Music Festival Association since its organization in 1900. Since 1884 he has made his home in Syracuse. On May 29, 1886, Mr. Hazard married Dora Gannett Sedgwick, of Massachusetts descent, and a daughter of Judge Charles B. and Deborah (Gannett) Sedgwick. To this marriage have been born children as follows: Dorothy, May 21, 1887; Sarah Sedgwick, August, 1889; Katharine Sedgwick, November, 1890; Frederick Rowland, Jr., Dec. 19, 1891; Robert Sedgwick, Feb. 17, 1895 (died Feb. 21, 1906).

(IX) HELEN HAZARD, daughter of Rowland and Margaret A. (Rood) Hazard, was born Jan. 15, 1862. On Oct. 6, 1885, she married Nathaniel Terry Bacon, of New Haven, eldest son of Leonard Woolsey and Susan (Bacon) Bacon, and they make their home in Peace Dale on a part of the old Hazard homestead. They have two children: Leonard, born May 26, 1887; and Susan, born Nov. 12, 1889. Since 1895 Mrs. Bacon has been a member of the Rhode Island Society of Colonial Dames of America and president of that society since May 5, 1904. She is State Chairman, Society of Descendants of Colonial Governors, and is National Registrar of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America.

(IX) MARGARET HAZARD, daughter of Rowland and Margaret A. (Rood) Hazard, born May 31, 1867, was married, June 24, 1893, to Dr. Irving Fisher, of Yale University, a native of Saugerties, N. Y., and a son of Rev. George W. and Ella (Wescott) Fisher, the former a Congregational clergyman. Dr. and Mrs. Fisher have three children, namely: Margaret, born April 30, 1894; Caroline, June 17, 1897; and Irving Norton, Nov. 8, 1900.

(VIII) JOHN NEWBOLD HAZARD, youngest son of Rowland Gibson Hazard, was born in Peace Dale, R. I., Sept. 11, 1836. He was educated at Brown University, where he was a member of the class of 1857. He went abroad to complete his education, taking up special lines of work, some of them in connection with the woolen manufacturing business, which afterward became his life work. Returning he assisted his father and brother in conducting the business of the Peace Dale Manufacturing Company. His father retired from the presidency of the company in 1865, and in January, 1866, John N. Hazard was elected to succeed him. He continued in that capacity until 1892 when he resigned after a continuous service of twenty-six years, continuing, however, as a director of the company until his death June 7, 1900. He was noted for his thorough knowledge of the most minute details of the manufacturing business. He was twice married. His first wife, whom he wedded in France, was Hortense De Huys, who bore him two children: Marie and Emil. In Philadelphia, Pa., he married (second) Augusta G. Gerloff, and eight children were born of this union: Ernest Newbold, born June 25, 1869, is deceased; Robert, born in 1871, died Nov. 18, 1874; Edith, born May 27, 1873; Mary Peace, born July 8, 1874, married R. R. Robinson, M. D.; Mabel, born Sept. 26, 1875, died Oct. 24, 1875; John Gibson, born in February, 1877, married Ada De Kalb, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Anna, born July 8, 1880, married May 24, 1906, Daniel Hawes Reese; and Isaac Peace, born in 1883.

RUEL S. DARLING, who during his life time was a well known business man of Pawtucket, R. I., was born in Bellingham, Mass., May 2, 1830, one of the eight sons born to the union of Samuel and Margaret (Smith) Darling.

Mr. Darling's opportunities for acquiring an education were limited, as he was obliged to make his own way from boyhood. He early learned the boat makers' trade, but later engaged in the meat business, for a time retailing meats by wagon through the country, mainly in portions of the town of Cumberland and Smithfield, R. I. Being a man of good business ability, industrious and energetic, he soon sought a larger field for operation, and in the middle fifties located at Pawtucket, where for a time he was associated in that same line of business with his brother, the late Hon. Edwin Darling. From the time of his locating in Pawtucket until his death he was prominently and successfully identified with the marketing business. His first business location in Pawtucket was in the old brick hotel building on Mill street, afterward North Main street, removing thence to the Dexter block on Main street, whither he had gone some eight years before his death. Some years prior to this removal Mr. Darling associated with him in the business his two sons, Ruel S. and Herbert C., under the firm name of Darling & Sons. The business was continued by the sons for some years after their father's death, at this last location on Main street, and also for a time at a branch market under the "Aumann House" on Broad street. In time the retail market becoming less remunerative, it was finally closed in 1892, and the wholesale business having steadily increased, the latter in that same year was transferred to New York City, constituting the nucleus of the business which became incorporated as the Metropolitan Hotel Supply Company. This remained until 1898, when it was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York under the name of the Darling Brothers Company, Ruel Smith Darling being made president of the corporation, and Herbert Cook Darling, the secretary and treasurer. The business is now conducted at West Fourteenth street, New York City. The two sons are worthily wearing the family name, and sustaining the reputation of their father and of his several distinguished brothers, all men of high honor and standing and success in the business world.

Possessing those qualities that win and retain the respect of associates, as well as their confidence, it is not strange that Ruel S. Darling was besought to represent his town in various public ways, but he was not desirous of position, and he steadily declined public office until two years before he died, when he consented to serve in the town council, and he was re-elected to that body the very month he died. This was in the town of Lincoln. His political affiliations were with the Republican party. He lived in Pawtucket for a number of years until some fifteen years prior to his death, having then purchased a fine estate at the head of Illinois street in Central Falls. He was a trustee of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings, and a director of the Slater National Bank, having held the latter position for twenty-three consecutive years.

Mr. Darling was gifted with business talent and qualities of high order, and he operated along conservative lines. He possessed a sterling character, and was of a kindly disposition, and a generous supporter of all good works. "He lived respected and died regretted by all who knew him." Mr. Darling passed away at his home in Central Falls, R. I., June 14, 1883, and on this occasion the local papers were liberal in their kindly expressions of their high estimate of the man. "Everybody knew him as a man of large business sagacity, of unsullied integrity, of downright sincerity, of courtesy, magnanimity and large humanity."

"Upright in all his dealings, his word was as good as his bond, and his life was one in all its bearings that could easily be taken as a guide for others. One universal feeling is noted among his fellow citizens and one thought expresses the voice of the entire community, 'a thoroughly good man has gone.' None knew Ruel S. Darling but to love him for his inborn goodness and to admire him for those traits of manliness which characterized all his deeds, and it is because knowing him as they did, that hundreds of citizens of Central Falls and Pawtucket will mourn his departure and remember his virtues with a profound feeling." He was a member of the Masonic Order, in which he took great interest. His funeral was largely attended, and his remains were interred in Swan Point cemetery, Providence.

Mr. Darling was twice married. His first wife, Alma E. Cook, daughter of Fenner and Maranda (Thayer) Cook, of Bellingham, Mass., died Dec. 31, 1872. Of the nine children born of this marriage, four—an infant son, Frederick W., Emma F. and Florence Myron—died young. The others were: Ruel Smith; Herbert Cook; Ellen M., who married George W. Thurston, of Providence; Sarah Burr, who married Peter H. Fowler, of Orange, N. J.; and A. Louise, who married William Quimby, a prominent lawyer at Boston. Mr. Darling married (second) Mrs. Eliza L. Walker, daughter of the late Rev. James O. Barney, of Seekonk, Mass. Mrs. Darling survives and now makes her home in Worcester, Massachusetts.

Ruel Smith Darling, president of the Darling Brothers Company, was born in Pawtucket, and in that town received his education. He early engaged in business with his father under the firm name of Darling & Sons, at Pawtucket, but he afterward went to New York City, and was in business with his brother, Herbert Cook Darling, this business being incorporated in 1898, as above stated, into the Darling Brothers Company, Ruel Smith becoming the president. He is a man of good executive ability, and he thoroughly understands every detail of the business, its success under his management being thus assured. At Foxboro, Mass., he married Susan E. Nichols, daughter of E. O. and Elizabeth (Knight) Nichols, of an old New England family. To this union has been born one child, Ruel Smith III, a graduate of New York University, and now in business with his father and uncle.

HERBERT COOK DARLING, secretary and treasurer of the Darling Brothers Company, received his education in Pawtucket, R. I., and Foxboro, Mass., and in Mowry & Goff's English and Classical School, Providence. On leaving school he entered his father's business, and later came to New York, becoming on the incorporation of the business the secretary and treasurer of the corporation. He is an able business man, far-seeing and progressive. His fraternal connections are with the Masons. The Darling Brothers are men of sterling character and of square business dealings, and have won a high reputation in the commercial world.

MRS. SARAH BURR (DARLING) FOWLER, second daughter of the late Ruel S. Darling, was married Jan. 10, 1889, to Peter H. Fowler, a well known manufacturing chemist of New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler make their home in Orange, N. J. They spent the first five years after their marriage traveling in Europe, devoting much time to London. Mrs. Fowler is one of the social leaders in the Oranges. She has one child, Dudley Fowler, a student in school.

JOSEPH FARLEY BLOOD, late of Providence, member of the well known firm of Flint, Blood & Co., manufacturing jewelers, of which he was one of the founders, was a self-made man in the fullest sense that term implies.

Mr. Blood was born Sept. 5, 1834, in Ipswich, Mass., one of three sons born to Samuel and Elizabeth (Baker) Blood. He was left an orphan at an early age, and his early life was one of toil and limited advantage for education, but by study and observation he became a well-informed man. He came to Providence Sept. 13, 1851, and learned the trade of jeweler with the manufacturing jewelers on Canal street. After learning his trade he worked as a journeyman for different jewelry firms in Providence, among them being Greene, Maura & Co., G. & S. Owen, and Wilcox, Batell & Cheney. In 1869, in company with three fellow workmen from the latter establishment, William W. Flint, James A. Young and Benjamin Holbrook, Mr. Blood formed a co-partnership which took the name of Flint, Blood & Co. This continued until 1878, when Mr. Holbrook retired, and the firm was then known as Flint, Blood & Young until 1888, when Mr. Young died and the firm was again given the old name. On March 1, 1904, the business was incorporated as Flint, Blood & Co., with Mr. Blood as vice-president, which has since continued to be the style of the firm. Mr. Blood attended to the accounts and finances of the concern, his partners devoting their attention more to the other needs of the business, but, nevertheless, it was he who invented the famous J. F. Blood stud, which at one time had a large sale and contributed much to the material prosperity of the firm. Mr. Blood remained active in the business until August, 1901, when he was stricken with a paralytic shock, and from that time until his death he was an invalid and was confined to the house. He passed away March 28, 1903, and was buried at Swan Point.

On Jan. 1, 1863, Mr. Blood was married in Providence, to Mary E. Jenks, who survives him. Her parents were George and Phebe (Clapp) Jenks. Mr. and Mrs. Blood had one daughter, Elizabeth Baker, born March 13, 1870, who was married in 1893, to Frederick S. Potter, of Providence, for many years connected with Blanding & Blanding. Mrs. Potter died Aug. 3, 1905.

Mr. Blood was a man who attended to his business matters very closely, and never took much interest in affairs beyond his business and domestic circle. He was not a member of any societies or organizations, but was a home-loving man, the head of a singularly happy family, being much devoted to his wife and daughter, who warmly returned his affection. He was ever fond of making those around him happy, and many were his kind acts that never came to light. As an employer he was just and considerate, and was popular with those under him. In his business relations he was prompt and conscientious, and was recognized everywhere as a man of exemplary character.

ALBERT F. KENYON. Few men living have the unique distinction of being original Sons of the American Revolution; Rhode Island has but two original sons according to the register, and the number in the other States is yearly becoming thinned out rapidly by the grim and merciless destroyer, Death. There is a large army of those who can trace their ancestry back to active participation in the defense of the struggle for Independence, but those who can look back through one generation to that period of stress in the nation's history are very few. When it is realized that the war of the Revolution was begun in 1775 and that the world is now in the twentieth century; that a period of over 130 years has elapsed since the day of the flintlock musket, and the first fight for the freedom of the United States from British thralldom, it becomes immediately apparent that an original son is in a distinctive class by himself. In considering the years that have elapsed since those days, and also the usual length of human life, the statement that there are two original sons in this State would be apt to create the idea that those men must necessarily be of advanced years. But when it is known that one of the two men in this State who can refer to their father's careers in the war of the Revolution is even to-day engaged in active work in this city, holding his own against his fellow-workmen in the present generation, in a manner showing beyond doubt that the days of open-air life on a large farm were such as to develop the strength and endurance necessary for long life, it seems as if time must have stood still for him.

Albert Franklin Kenyon, of No. 113 Prairie avenue, Providence, and Capt. William Howe Church, of Bristol, are the two original sons of the American Revolution in Rhode Island. Mr. Kenyon was born in Richmond, R. I., Aug. 17, 1833, being now in his seventy-fifth year. He is employed at the meter department of the Providence Gas Company, and works steadily. His father, the Revolutionary veteran, was seventy-seven years old when Albert was born, and it is to that fact that Mr. Kenyon owes his distinction as an original son of the American Revolution.

William Kenyon, father of Albert Franklin, was born Aug. 22, 1755, at Richmond, R. I. The name in those days was spelled Kinyon, but after a long period of time that spelling was changed to the present form of the name. William Kenyon was twenty years of age when the spark which started the conflagration of war against Great Britain throughout the United American Colonies was struck, and he at once enlisted. Those were the days of short term enlistments and the record of William Kenyon, as filed in the War Department at Washington, shows reenlistments through the years of the struggle of periods of from eight months down to one month. His first enlistment was on Aug. 1, 1776, for four months, and he was made orderly sergeant and was stationed in this State. Re-enlistments were as follows: December, 1776, for eight months; March, 1778, for two months; July, 1778, for one month; March, 1779, for four months. There were other short terms of service in the years 1779 and 1780, aggregating three months. Throughout his entire service Mr. Kenyon was stationed in Rhode Island and held the rank of orderly sergeant. There is no record that he engaged in any battles, although he was active in the operations about Newport and at Warwick Neck, when it was expected that the British fleet would attempt to land troops. Following the declaration of peace, Mr. Kenyon settled down in his home town, and Sept. 25, 1825, married Mercy Johnston. He died at the age of eighty-six years, Sept. 26, 1841.

Albert F. Kenyon has heard his father tell many stories of his experiences in camp, but one of the most interesting is that of the coronation of Queen Esther, as Queen of the Niantic tribe of Indians, a branch of the Narragansetts, now nearly extinct, but once the ruling tribe in the South county. Referring to the coronation, Mr. Kenyon's father has said: "I saw her crowned. She was elevated on a large rock, so that all the people might see her; the council surrounded her. There were present about twenty Indian soldiers with guns, and they marched her to the big rock, where the Indian nearest to the royal blood, in the presence of her counsellors put the crown on her head. This crown was made of cloth, covered with blue and white peage." The coronation took place on the King Tom farm, so called, near Cross' Mills, Charlestown. The rock now bears an inscription recording the event and is commonly known as "Coronation Rock." It stands in the farm yard of the house built by King Tom Ninigret, and is now owned by James S. Kenyon, of Providence. In addition to that historic occurrence, William Kenyon also took part in the inquest on the body of George, Sachem, son of Queen Esther, who was killed by the falling of a tree. George was the last king the tribe had.

Albert F. Kenyon spent his early schooldays in Richmond, R. I., and when eighteen years of age became a clerk in William Crandall's store at Shannock, R. I. For two years he sold dry goods on the road, was station agent at Shannock for fifteen months, and at Kingston for eight years. In 1864 he came to Providence as clerk and agent for the Neptune Steamship Company, remaining in that position four years. For one year he traveled for the Binghampton Oil Company, for two years was engaged in the restaurant business on Market Square, and for sixteen years was cashier and agent of the freight department of the old Boston and Providence line. He spent about ten years as foreman of the Highway department of the City of Providence.

Since 1896, despite his years, he has been the efficient foreman and inspector of the Providence Gas Co. On July 17, 1901, he became a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, and the certificate of membership occupies a conspicuous place on the wall of the sitting-room of his home on Prairie avenue. He is also a member of the United Order of American Mechanics.

On June 14, 1854, Mr. Kenyon married at Kingston, R. I., Maria Case Gardiner, daughter of Henry and Mahala (Briggs) Gardiner, and to this union were born two children: Cordelia Howard, born July 15, 1857, died Feb. 23, 1862; and Charles Henry, born April 16, 1864, died Dec. 19, 1905. For a time the son was receiving clerk at the Providence station, then station agent at New London, and later at the Henderson street depot in Providence. For the last ten years of his life he was advance agent for a theatrical company, and was highly esteemed by his associates.

MAJOR HERBERT ALLYNE CLARK (deceased), of Attleboro, Mass., who in recent years was Regimental Quartermaster of the United States Volunteer Army, and a man widely known, was the only surviving son of Samuel W. and Charity H. (Cushman) Clark, and was born in Middleboro, Mass., Feb. 22, 1859. He was descended from the earliest Puritan stock, his maternal ancestor being Robert Cushman, the financial agent of the Plymouth Colony, who joined the Pilgrims in New England in 1621. His paternal ancestor, John Clark, came to Plymouth about 1623, and besides these he was related by ancestral ties to several of the prominent families of the Massachusetts settlements, including that of Gov. William Bradford. His grandfathers, Abisha T. Clark and Elias Cushman, were both respected farmers of Middleboro, where his father, Samuel W. Clark, followed the occupation of carpenter and builder until his death, in 1883, when he was aged sixty-two years. His mother, Charity H. (Cushman), survived her husband until Jan. 28, 1905.

Major Clark was educated in the Middleboro public and high schools, graduating from the latter in 1876. On Jan. 31, 1877, he went to Attleboro, Bristol county, and entered the jewelry manufacturing establishment of Horton, Angell & Co., with which firm he was ever afterward connected. This widely-known firm was established in 1870 by Edwin J. and Gideon M. Horton and Benjamin J. Angell, under the present style of Horton, Angell & Co., and from the first has been successfully engaged in the manufacture of men's and women's gold-plated goods, such as cuff and collar buttons, sets, etc., from the first quality rolled gold plate. It has gained a national reputation for the high standard workmanship of its product. As an apprentice during the period of a little more than three and one-half years Major Clark thoroughly mastered every detail and acquired a practical knowledge of the business, and in the autumn of 1880 was made superintendent. He filled this position for several years, becoming a partner in the concern Jan. 1, 1886. Edwin J. Horton had died, and had been succeeded by Major Everett S. Horton, his brother, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere. Mr. Angell and Gideon M. Horton died in 1886 and Major Clark in 1903, but the firm name has remained unchanged.

In politics Major Clark was a staunch Republican, yet he never sought nor accepted public office. He was, however, one of the most energetic and public-spirited of citizens, taking a deep interest in all matters affecting the community at large, and liberally supporting every movement which promised reasonable benefit and general good. As a business man he displayed ability and sagacity of a high order, and was a director of the Attleboro Savings & Loan Association and of the Attleboro Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

Major Clark was prominently and actively connected with military affairs during the last decade and a half before his death. He became a member and sergeant of Company I, 5th Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, at its organization in 1887, and was elected second lieutenant in 1889, first lieutenant in 1892, and captain in 1895. In 1897 he was appointed inspector of rifle practice on the staff of Col. J. H. Whitney. The war between Spain and the United States brought him into the volunteer army as quartermaster of his regiment, which was mustered in as the 5th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, he being appointed quartermaster and mustered into service June 23, 1898. When the regiment was mustered out of the service, and Colonel Whitney was made general, Major Clark went to the brigade staff. Only a short time before his death he was offered a colonelcy on the staff of Governor Bates, but declined. Major Clark was a thorough soldier, an excellent disciplinarian, and popular with the officers and men. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, holding membership in Ezekiel Bates Lodge, King Hiram Chapter and Attleboro Council, of Attleboro; in Bristol Commandery, K. T., of North Attleboro; in Aleppo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Boston; and in the Scottish Rite bodies to and including the thirty-second degree, conferred upon him at Providence, R. I., in 1896. He was also a member of Orient Lodge and Gideon M. Horton Encampment, I. O. O. F., and of Pennington Lodge, A. O. U. W., all of Attleboro. Major Clark held membership in a number of jewelers' organizations, and was a member of several leading clubs of Providence, among them the Pomham. In social as in military circles he held the highest positions and throughout New England and the country he had many friends and admirers.

Richard C. Allen

Herbert A. Clark

Major Clark was never married, and to the close of his days was thoroughly devoted to his mother, whose comfort was his first consideration, and whose welfare and happiness received his most loving thought.

Major Clark died Feb. 16, 1903, and was buried at Woodlawn cemetery, Attleboro. The only surviving member of the family is a sister, Mrs. James J. Horton, of Attleboro.

JOHN F. CLARK, town clerk of Cumberland, and one of the most prominent men in public and fraternal circles in this section of the State, was born in Cumberland, son of John Locke and Cordelia (Titus) Clark.

The great-grandfather of John F. Clark, Seth Clark, styled Jr., was born in 1772, and married Dec. 5, 1797, according to Salisbury, Mass., record, Susanna Noyes, of Seabrook, N. H. Their children, also of Salisbury record, were: Sarah, born July 30, 1798; Seth, March 25, 1801; Edmund N., Sept. 16, 1803; Thomas J., Jan. 24, 1806; Joseph N., Oct. 17, 1808; and Susanna, June 20, 1812. Mr. Clark was one of the substantial men of the town. At the time of his death, Sept. 24, 1850, he was postmaster of the town and a bank president.

Edmund N. Clark, born Sept. 16, 1803, in Salisbury, Mass., son of Seth, Jr., died in Cumberland, R. I., in 1880. In early life he was a tanner, but later came to Cumberland as agent of the Blackstone Coal Mining Company. He was a Whig, and later a Republican, in politics, and was a member of the Rhode Island Legislature for one term. His early religious connections were with the Pawtucket Baptist Church, and he was afterward identified with the Valley Falls Baptist Church, of which he was deacon for many years. Mr. Clark married Sophronia Locke, of Seabrook, Mass., daughter of James Locke, and she died in Cumberland, the mother of these children: John Locke; Adeline, who married Jacob M. Haskell, of Boston, Mass., where she resides; Edmund, who never married, and who, at the time of his death, was treasurer of the Blackstone Coal Mining Company; and Mary S., who married James P. Johnston, of New London, Connecticut.

John Locke Clark, born July 26, 1831, in Salisbury, Mass., died Feb. 26, 1876, in Cumberland, R. I. He received his education in the public schools of Salisbury, and when a young man located in Cumberland, where he engaged in a grocery business for several years, and then became secretary of the Blackstone Coal Mining Company, continuing with that firm until his death. He was active in town affairs, being a Republican member of the State Legislature, and was highly esteemed by all for his honesty and other sterling traits of character. He was a member of the Valley Falls Baptist Church. On May 4, 1853, Mr. Clark was married to Cordelia Titus, of Cumberland, daughter of Hiram and Lucy (Crocker) Titus. Mrs. Clark, who still survives her husband, resides in Cumberland, the mother of two children: John Francis; and Lucy, who married Andrew J. Currier, of Cumberland, where she died.

Col. John Francis Clark, son of John L., was born Feb. 7, 1854, in Cumberland, where he received his early education, then attending the University Grammar school, Providence, and in 1871 entered Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1875, with the degree of A. B. He then took the business course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Providence, after which he became secretary of the Blackstone Coal Mining Company, a position he held until the firm ceased operations in 1900.

In politics Mr. Clark is a staunch Republican. In 1882 he was appointed stamp clerk at the Providence postoffice, where he remained for five years, and in 1888 was elected town clerk of Cumberland, re-elected in 1893, and since that time has held this position. From 1899-1903 he was deputy collector of Internal Revenue for the District of Connecticut. He was a representative in the Rhode Island General Assembly from 1878 to 1884, serving on the committees on Corporations, State Militia, and others. He was town treasurer for several years, tax assessor for a like period, on the school committee for six years and superintendent of schools for one year, having held a public office ever since he became of age. Mr. Clark was on Gov. Alfred H. Littlefield's staff as aide-de-camp, with the rank of colonel, for three years, and for seven years served as captain on General Rhodes' Brigade staff.

Mr. Clark is a member of Union Lodge No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Pawtucket Chapter No. 4, R. A. M.; Pawtucket Council No. 2, R. & S. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery No. 8, K. T.; Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Providence; Rhode Island Consistory, thirty-second degree of Masonry, and a member and secretary of the board of managers of the Masonic Temple, Pawtucket. In the Scottish Rite he has been at the head of the Lodge of Perfection. He is past Master of the Masonic lodge, and has passed through the chairs of all the Masonic bodies up to the Shrine. He is also a member of Canonchet Tribe No. 10, I. O. R. M., Valley Falls; Charles A. Lee Lodge, K. P., Pawtucket. He is past great sacheem of the State Lodge of Red Men, and past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. He is a member of the To-Kalon Club of Pawtucket. Mr. Clark's religious affiliations are with the Episcopal Church of Pawtucket. He is a trustee of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings.

On June 19, 1877, Mr. Clark was married by Rev. Emery Porter, to Carrie E. Jencks, daughter of Andrew and Almina (Weatherhead) Jencks, of Pawtucket, and to this union there have been born children as follows: Lucy, who married Byron L. Waterman, of Cumberland, treasurer of the River Spinning Company, of Woonsocket, lives in Pawtucket, and has two children, Helen and Richard; Louise A., who married C. Mason Parker of Saylesville, now a dentist of Cumberland, has one son, Shelton; Carmelita, who married Byron Miller, a milk dealer of Cumberland, has one son, Robert; and John L. and Wade Jencks are at school.

MOWRY (Woonsocket family). The Mowry family of Rhode Island is one of the oldest of the Commonwealth, one whose coming to New England reaches back to within eleven years of the arrival of the Pilgrim fathers themselves. Its history began in old Plymouth Colony with the year 1631, and in that of Rhode Island with about 1643; and here in both Colony and Commonwealth it has been among the substantial and prominent families. This article, however, deals only with one branch of the Mowrys, that of the family of the late Hon. Spencer Mowry, who himself was long one of the prominent and influential citizens of Woonsocket, and, too, a man of wealth.

There follows something of the line and Mowry lineage of this Woonsocket family, the order being chronological, beginning with the emigrant settler.

(I) Roger Mowry, of Plymouth, was made a freeman of the colony, May 8, 1631. He was a member of the church at Salem in 1636, and in the following year had fifty acres of land laid out. His family in this year comprised five persons. He removed to Providence about 1643, and was made a freeman of the colony in 1655. He served as commissioner in 1658. There is a tradition in the family that Roger Williams and Mr. Mowry were kinsmen. Mr. Mowry died Jan. 5, 1666. His widow Mary remarried, and died in January, 1679. His children were: Roger; Jonathan, born in 1637; Bethiah, born in 1638; Mary, born in 1640; Elizabeth, born in 1643; Nathaniel, born in 1644; John; Mehetael; Joseph, born in 1647; Benjamin, born in 1649; Thomas, born in 1652; and Hannah, born in 1656.

(II) John Mowry, son of Roger, was a resident of Providence, R. I. He and Edward Inman bought in 1666 two thousand acres of land lying from Loquesit northward, bounding partly on Pawtucket river. Mr. Mowry was made a freeman in 1672. He died in 1690, and both he and his wife Mary, were buried on Sayles Hill. Their children were Mary, John, Experience and Sarah.

(III) John Mowry (2), son of John, married (first) April 18, 1701, Margery, daughter of Eleazer and Alice (Auger) Whipple, and (second) Hannah, daughter of Nathaniel Packard. Mr. Mowry resided in Providence and Smithfield, R. I., being a member of the Smithfield town council in 1731 and 1732. He died in September, 1732. His children, all born to the first marriage excepting the last named, were: Mary, born May 2, 1702; Ananias, born in May, 1705; Philip; John; Abigail; Margery; Amey; Meribah; and Ezekiel, born Sept. 15, 1723.

(IV) Ananias Mowry, son of John (2), born in May, 1705, married Zerviah Angell, and their children of Smithfield town record were: Philip, born Oct. 30, 1738; Ananias, born Feb. 21, 1740; John, born Jan. 1, 1742; David, born Sept. 17, 1744; Gideon, born Feb. 9, 1746; Richard, born April 18, 1748; and Zerviah, born Dec. 10, 1751.

(V) Philip Mowry, son of Ananias, born Oct. 30, 1738, married Oct. 28, 1762, Elizabeth Newell, and their children of Smithfield town record were: Jonathan, born April 16, 1763; Seth, born Dec. 8, 1764; Lydia, born Dec. 19, 1765; Mary, born Feb. 12, 1768; Elizabeth, born March 5, 1769; Philip, born June 20, 1771; Zerviah, born July 14, 1772; John, born Oct. 5, 1774; Sarah, born Sept. 8, 1778; and Moses, born Nov. 25, 1779.

(VI) Jonathan Mowry, son of Philip, born April 16, 1763, married, Feb. 10, 1799, Ruth, daughter of Simeon McIntire, of Glocester, R. I., and their children, of Smithfield town record, were: Samuel, born June 20, 1800; Spencer, born Nov. 27, 1802; Nelson, born June 20, 1804; George and Phillip.

(VII) SPENCER MOWRY, son of Jonathan and Ruth (McIntire) Mowry, born Nov. 27, 1802, in the town of Smithfield, R. I., was reared on a farm in his native town. He received such education as in that day was customary for the boys of the general farmer, attending for a few years at the neighborhood school through the winters. At the age of twenty he was apprenticed to learn the carpenter's trade, and in this line of work he continued, becoming in time an extensive contractor and builder, with headquarters at Woonsocket, this State. A man careful and industrious, and conservative in his investments, as the years passed not indulging in speculation, he accumulated large means, and at his death left about two hundred thousand dollars.

Having successfully managed his own business affairs, and the people having confidence in him as a business man, one honest and honorable, Mr. Mowry's advice was often sought and his services solicited for this or that position in the affairs of others for the public. He was extensively employed in the settlement of estates, perhaps no citizen of Woonsocket having probated so many estates as he. He served his town for upward of forty years as a justice of the peace. To him was intrusted the large estate of the late George C. Ballou, which involved more than a million of money. He was chosen a director of the Smithfield Union Bank, and May 3, 1844, was elected president of the Globe Bank, and the wisdom exhibited by him as a financier attracted the attention of bankers at Woonsocket and elsewhere throughout this section children, born to the first marriage except the youngest, were: Mary, born May 2, 1705; Philip, born May 2, 1705; John, born May 2, 1705; Ancey, born May 2, 1705; Meribah, born May 2, 1705; and Ezekiel, born May 2, 1705.

John (9) Mowry, son of John (8) Mowry, married Zerviah Angell, and the children of Smithfield town record were: Philip, born Oct. 30, 1738; Ananias, born Feb. 21, 1742; David, born Jan. 1, 1742; Gideon, born Feb. 9, 1746; Richard, born April 18, 1748; and Zerviah, born Dec. 10, 1751.

John (10) Mowry, son of Ananias, born Oct. 28, 1762, married Oct. 28, 1762, Elizabeth Newell, and the children of Smithfield town record were: Philip, born April 16, 1763; Seth, born Dec. 8, 1765; Mary, born Dec. 19, 1765; Elizabeth, born March 5, 1769; Philip, born March 20, 1771; Zerviah, born July 14, 1772; Sarah, born Oct. 5, 1774; Sarah, born Sept. 8, 1777; and Moses, born Nov. 25, 1779.

John (11) Mowry, son of Philip, born Nov. 27, 1799, married, Feb. 10, 1799, Ruth, daughter of Simeon McIntire, of Gloucester, R. I., and the children, of Smithfield town record, were: George, born June 20, 1800; Spencer, born Nov. 27, 1802; Nelson, born June 20, 1804; George and Philip.

(XII) SPENCER MOWRY, son of Jonathan and Ruth (McIntire) Mowry, born Nov. 27, 1802, of the town of Smithfield, R. I., was reared on a farm in his native town. He received such education as in that day was customary for the boys of the general farmer, attending for a few years at the neighborhood school through the winters. At the age of twenty he was apprenticed to learn the carpenter's trade, and in this line of work he continued, becoming in time an extensive contractor and builder, with headquarters at Woonsocket, this State. A man careful and industrious, and conservative in his investments, as the years passed not indulging in speculation, he accumulated large means, and at his death left about two hundred thousand dollars.

Having successfully managed his own business affairs, and the people having confidence in him as a business man, one honest and honorable, Mr. Mowry's advice was often sought and his services solicited for this or that position in the affairs of others for the public. He was extensively employed in the settlement of estates, perhaps no citizen of Woonsocket having probated so many estates as he. He served his town for upward of forty years as a justice of the peace. To him was intrusted the large estate of the late George C. Ballou, which involved more than a million of money. He was chosen a director of the Smithfield Union Bank, and May 3, 1844, was elected president of the Globe Bank, and the wisdom exhibited by him as a financier attracted the attention of bankers at Woonsocket and elsewhere throughout this section of the country; and he was at various times connected with every savings bank in Woonsocket, as one of the board of investments. He was officially connected with the Mechanics Bank of Woonsocket at the time of his death, and also president of the Globe National Bank. He was one of the committee appointed to settle the affairs of the Citizen's Savings Bank, when that institution was in trouble some years prior to the death of Mr. Mowry. While not a politician Mr. Mowry was ever interested in public questions, and as a citizen shirked no duty in this line. He was several times honored by his fellow citizens with a seat in the General Assembly of the State, first in 1865, serving by re-election for three consecutive terms. From the enactment of the law until its repeal he was one of the railroad commissioners. He was prominent, too, in Masonic circles, was a member of Morning Star Lodge, of Union Royal Arch Chapter and of Woonsocket Council, Royal and Select Masters.

Mr. Mowry was twice married, first to Mary, daughter of Caleb Aldrich, by whom he had four children, Winsor, Julie, Henry and Daniel, all now deceased. On April 8, 1847, he married (second) Abby, daughter of John and Mary (Elsworth) Reynolds, who was born April 22, 1812, in North Kingstown, R. I. Mrs. Mowry is still living but her husband was called to a better world Aug. 26, 1887. His death occurred at his residence on South Main street, Woonsocket, and he was buried in Union cemetery. In religious belief he was a Friend.

Mrs. Abby R. Mowry has reached the advanced age of ninety-five years, and is the oldest person in Woonsocket, but she is still remarkably active, has a good memory, and can read and sew without glasses. She has always been skillful with her needle, and her home contains many pieces of artistic needlework, which she has made. For seventy-seven years she has been a faithful member of the Baptist Church and her life has been filled with deeds of truest Christian ministry.

SPRAGUE. The Massachusetts-Rhode Island Spragues have been a continuous family in turn in the two States for two hundred and seventy-five years and more—their coming dating back to 1628 or 1629, within less than a decade of the landing of the Pilgrim fathers themselves; and different branches of the family, too, have been among the conspicuous public men and substantial citizens of their various localities, especially so in the several Rhode Island communities where they early cast their lot. Here at Providence and vicinity were the several extensive manufacturers of the name, a family that gave to the State two United States Senators and two Governors; and another branch of which, that under consideration—the Connecticut-Rhode Island family—gave to the city the late Samuel S. Sprague, of Killingly, Conn., origin, but Providence adoption, whose mature life work here of nearly a half a century was one of large usefulness as well of pecuniary and business success. And here, too, have figured the latter's family. Reference is made to the late Charles Hutchins Sprague of the firm of C. H. & H. S. Sprague, bankers and brokers; and Henry S. Sprague, now of the firm of Sprague-Cooke & Co., wholesale grain merchants.

This Killingly-Providence branch of the Massachusetts Sprague family is descended from the old Sprague family of Upway, Dorsetshire, England, where lived Edward Sprague, a fuller, the father of several sons who came to New England, one of whom,

(I) Ralph Sprague, a native of England, became one of the earliest inhabitants of Charlestown, Mass., 1628-29, and with his wife was admitted to the Church in October, 1632. He married Joan Corbin, daughter of John Corbin, and their children were: John, Richard, Samuel, Mary, Phineas, and Jonathan, the elder two coming over from England. From this Ralph Sprague the lineage of the late Samuel S. Sprague of Providence, is through Lieut. Samuel, Samuel (2), John, John (2), Daniel and Elisha Leavens Sprague, the details of which generations follow:

(II) Lieut. Samuel Sprague, of Malden, baptized in Boston, June 3, 1632, married Aug. 23, 1655, in Boston, Rebecca Crawford. Their children were: Rebecca, Samuel, Samuel (2), Rebecca (2) and John.

(III) Samuel Sprague (2), of Malden, born in May, 1662, married Sarah, and had children: Sarah, Sarah (2), Samuel, Elizabeth, Richard, Mehetabel, Rebecca, Mary, Winefred, Abigail and John.

(IV) John Sprague, of Malden, Mass., born in 1708, married, and in 1652 removed to Killingly, Connecticut.

(V) John Sprague (2) was of Killingly, Connecticut.

(VI) Daniel Sprague was of Killingly, Connecticut.

(VII) Elisha Leavens Sprague, of Killingly, Conn., was a well-to-do farmer, and operated a forge, as did his father before him. He inherited the paternal estate. He married (first) Clarissa, daughter of Rev. Israel Day, a prominent minister in the Congregational Church and many years pastor of the Congregational Church at South Killingly, Conn. She died Nov. 2, 1831, and Mr. Sprague married (second) in November, 1833, Bathsheba Bliss. Mr. Sprague died in 1834, and his widow passed away at Providence, R. I., Oct. 23, 1884, aged ninety-six years. Two children were born to the first marriage of Mr. Sprague, namely: Elisha Rodolphus and Samuel Stearns.

(VIII) SAMUEL STEARNS SPRAGUE, son of Elisha L. and Clarissa (Day) Sprague, was born July

3, 1819, on the family homestead in South Killingly, Conn., and in the public schools there and at the Brooklyn Academy, in a neighboring town, received his education. His father dying when he was but fourteen years of age, and his elder and only brother being then in preparation for college, the management of the farm thus early devolved upon him. The father had left the farm and other property to his sons, but the latter was soon lost in the financial crisis of 1837. Samuel S. Sprague in time purchased his brother's interest in the estate in order that he might continue his college education. Samuel S. continued farming until the spring of 1852, when desiring to better his prospects in life, he sold the homestead which had been in the family for more than an hundred years.

Having thus disposed of the farm Mr. Sprague built a house in the village of Danielson, Conn., into which he moved his family and in September of that same year, 1852, commenced business operations in Providence, R. I., to which point he removed his family in May, 1853. At Providence he formed a partnership with Daniel E. Day in the flour and grain business on Peck's wharf, Dyer street. After two years the firm removed to South Water and Crawford streets, where they built up an extensive business. In 1866 they purchased the large brick store on Dyer street, formerly owned by Spellman and Metcalf.

In 1876 Mr. Sprague sold his interest in the real estate to his partner and severed his connection with the firm, to form the well known house of S. S. Sprague & Co., his partners being his sons Charles H. and Henry S. Sprague. In 1877 they built and occupied the Columbia Elevator and Grain Mills in Providence and had several elevators in the West. At the time of the death of Mr. Sprague the elevators were at East Deerfield, Mass., also three in Illinois, and the firm occupied offices in the Industrial Trust Building.

In 1879 Mr. Sprague became interested in valuable real estate investments in Minneapolis, Minn., and elsewhere. He was a large builder and owner of dwelling houses in Providence, and was interested in various manufacturing concerns, among them the Gorham Company, which he with others started on its larger career. He was in the council, or on the board of aldermen, from 1868 to 1873. He was president of the Rhode Island National Bank, and a director in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company. He stood forth, for many years, a prominent figure, in the business life of Providence, and in the administration of its trusts. He continued until the very last his active connection with the firm, and with the social and corporate life of the city.

In 1870 Mr. Sprague purchased the house at No. 128 Broad street, at the corner of Beacon avenue, where the delightful hospitality, which he knew so well how to show, was enjoyed by many of his friends. As one of the original members of the Union Congregational Church, from the Richmond Street Church, he became chairman of its building committee and then chairman of its Society committee, in which capacity he gave long and valuable service, being the care taker of the church property in an unusually full sense. His interest in benevolent work was manifest on every hand, his family having official connection with a number of charitable institutions.

In the home Mr. Sprague was gifted with a rare grace of manner and a winning geniality. His domestic relations were so kindly and tender that he furnished a fine example of the old-time gentleman, within and without the home. His business success may be attributed to a large natural capacity, supplemented by indefatigable industry, and in his death, the community lost one of its strongest men and the Union Congregational Church a prominent figure throughout its entire history. Whoever knew him felt the ripening of his character, and in the later years as his strength slightly waned no acquaintance failed to observe the kindly, almost pathetic interest he manifested in the friends and institutions that enjoyed his society or his bounty.

Mr. Sprague was twice married, marrying (first) Nov. 8, 1842, Esther Pierce Hutchins, daughter of Simon and Lydia Hutchins, of Killingly, Conn., the family to which she belonged being one of prominence in that section. She died June 29, 1865, and Oct. 22, 1866, he married (second) Adeline M., daughter of Deacon Lucius F. and Lydia E. Thayer, of Westfield, Mass. Four children were born to the first marriage, namely: Charles Hutchins, Henry Shepard, Frank Elisha, and Alida Esther, the latter of whom married Dr. Henry A. Whitmarsh, of Providence, and has two children, Esther Alida (born July 22, 1896) and Martha Sprague (born Aug. 21, 1902).

Mr. Sprague died at his home in Providence, R. I., Nov. 11, 1896, his death being due to paralysis, with which he was stricken some two weeks previously. Thus passed away one who had been for many years a prominent figure in Providence—one very active in the business, social, civil and religious life of the community.

(IX) CHARLES HUTCHINS SPRAGUE, son of Samuel Stearns and Esther P. (Hutchins) Sprague, was born Oct. 19, 1844, in Killingly, Conn., where his childhood was passed. The family removing to Providence in 1853, he entered the public schools of the city, and was later graduated from the Providence high school. After this event he began a business career with his father, who was engaged in the wholesale grain shipping business. He subsequently became a partner in the well-known firm of S. S. Sprague & Co. Soon after the death of his father in 1896, the concern went out of business, and Mr. Charles H. Sprague formed a partnership with his brother, Henry S. Sprague, in the banking business, the firm style being C. H. & H. S. Sprague, bankers and brokers.

Chas. H. Sprague

Mr. Sprague was a director in the Blackstone Canal National Bank and in the Mechanics Savings Bank. He was also connected with many other corporations and institutions, among the latter the Home for the Aged Men, of which he was president at the time of his death. He was also a member of the Central Congregational Church, and the Rhode Island Historical Society. Quiet and unostentatious in his life and demeanor, Mr. Sprague was nevertheless of a singularly genial and lovable disposition, warm hearted and sympathetic, and at his death, which occurred suddenly of apoplexy, Nov. 17, 1900, at his home on Stimson avenue, Providence, R. I., left a large circle of devoted friends, to mourn their loss in the passing of one who had so endeared himself to them. Inheriting all that was best in the thoughts and lives of his New England forebears, Mr. Sprague presented an excellent type of American citizenship.

On Oct. 22, 1873, Mr. Sprague was married to Hettie Thurber, daughter of the late Gorham Thurber, of Providence, and they had two children, Herbert Thayer, born Dec. 27, 1876, died June 3, 1884; and a daughter, born Dec. 29, 1881, died Dec. 30, 1881.

(IX) HENRY SHEPARD SPRAGUE, second son of Samuel S. and Esther Pierce (Hutchins) Sprague, was born Dec. 6, 1847, in Killingly, Conn., and was about five years of age when his parents removed to Providence. He received his education in the public schools of the latter city, and at the Mowry & Goff English and Classical School. Immediately after leaving school he became identified with his father's business interests and in 1876 became a member of the firm of S. S. Sprague & Co., with which he remained until it went out of business. He then engaged with his brother, Charles H., as before mentioned, until the latter's death. Later the present firm of Sprague-Cooke & Co., wholesale dealers in grain, was organized. Mr. Sprague is heavily interested in the real estate business, being treasurer of the Consolidated Land Company; treasurer of the Narragansett Association; treasurer of the Security Company; a director of the Gorham Manufacturing Company; and vice president of the Rhode Island Homeopathic Hospital. He is a member of no societies or organizations, devoting his entire attention to his business interests. He is a Republican in politics, but his active work ends with the casting of his ballot. He is a member of the Central Congregational Church.

On March 6, 1900, Mr. Sprague was married, in Hartford, Conn., to Miss Jessie, daughter of William Angus, of that city.

(IX) Frank Elisha Sprague, youngest son of Samuel S. and Esther Pierce (Hutchins) Sprague, prepared for Yale at the Mowry & Goff school in Providence, and graduated from the former institution. After leaving college he was for a time associated with Jeremiah Knight in the manufacturing business at Greenville, under the firm name of Greenville Manufacturing Company. Since 1888 he has been a resident of Minneapolis, Minn., where he is successfully and extensively engaged in the real estate business. He married Miss Minnie Lane, of Pittsfield, Mass., and they have two children: Esther, born in 1892; and John L., born in 1897.

EDWIN A. KENYON, collector of Internal Revenue, was born June 6, 1849, in Charlestown, R. I., and is descended from one of the oldest families of the State, his line coming through William Kenyon; Caleb Kenyon, born in 1758, died Oct. 19, 1822, served in the Revolutionary war in Capt. Alexander Thomas' company, Col. John Topham's regiment, July 16, 1778, to Aug. 16, 1778; Caleb Kenyon (2), a resident of Charlestown and a farmer; and Caleb Kenyon (3).

Caleb Kenyon (3) was a citizen of much prominence in his town, having participated actively in public affairs. He represented the town in the Legislature in 1845-46, 1857, 1859, 1866 and 1869 in the lower house and as a member of the Senate in 1859-60. In political connection he was a Republican. He married Eleanor Brown Austin, of North Kingstown, and their children were: Hugh Francis, who died Sept. 24, 1854; Sarah E., who married Leonard W. Steimer, of Westfield, Mass., and had four children, Edwin Leonard, Bessie Elaine, Mary Eleanor and William Austin; Amy Eleanor, widow of Augustus H. Wise, residing in Westfield, Mass.; and Edwin A.

Edwin A. Kenyon was born June 6, 1849, in Charlestown, R. I., and was educated in the public school at Carolina and at Scholfield's Commercial College in Providence, after which he spent four years in that city as an accountant. Returning to Charlestown, for six years he successfully engaged in the meat business, and then became the proprietor of the store at Carolina, where he soon established a growing and prosperous trade. From Aug. 15, 1878, to Sept. 6, 1880, he officiated as trial justice, and was justice of the peace, notary public and auditor of the town for several years, also serving as postmaster at Carolina from 1880 to 1889. At the present time he is assessor. In 1894 he represented his district in the lower house of the State Assembly, and in 1895-96-97-98 was a member of the State Senate. In June, 1898, he became deputy collector of Internal Revenue.

In 1889 Mr. Kenyon engaged in the whip business at Westfield, Mass., and in 1893 returned to Carolina, where he operated the store at Alton for three years. In 1896 he re-purchased the store at Carolina, which he sold out, however, in 1902.

Mr. Kenyon is a member of Charity Masonic Lodge, of Hope Valley, and the Order of the Eastern Star at Hope Valley; is connected with Friendship Lodge, I. O. O. F., with the Grand Lodge of the State, and with Niantic Encampment, as well as the Daughters of Rebekah, at Carolina, and is a member of Providence Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution. He was vice-president for Charlestown of the Washington County Agricultural Society.

On Oct. 30, 1872, Mr. Kenyon married Emma L. Brown, daughter of Pardon H. and Leora (Tourtellot) Brown, of Providence, and one son, Caleb Howard, was born to this union Oct. 13, 1878. He was connected with the Old National Bank, but is now with the Harris Oil Company, Providence. He married Veda Louise Money, daughter of David A. S. Money, and they have one daughter, Louise.

WILLIAM H. HALL. Up to 1660 some twenty-eight persons bearing the name of Hall had settled in New England, seven of whom bore the Christian name of John, and from 1660 to 1700 many others of the name settled here, which fact makes the family of Hall difficult to trace. In 1650 three John Halls were living in Dover, New Hampshire, and at that same time there were flourishing as many Johns in Middletown, Conn. John Hall, of Dover, brought Ralph, John, Stephen and perhaps other children from England very early. John Hall (2), son of the elder John, born in England, was of Dover in 1650, a man of good property, a deacon in the church in 1657, and one of many offices, dying about 1693. Hatevil, a son of the younger John, of Dover, and born there, had a son Hatevil, who was born in Dover in 1707, married Sarah Furbish, of Kittery, and about 1753 settled in Falmouth, Maine. Through this couple came a numerous posterity, among them Thomas S. Hall, the inventor and father of the American plan of electric automatic signalling apparatus for railroads. But it was from the Connecticut Hall family that descended the Hon. Lyman Hall, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

In the early part of the nineteenth century there came to Providence from the State of Maine, his native State, one James Stanhope Hall, born March 25, 1796, and who was married here, May 24, 1820, to Eleanor Ryder Snow, daughter of Capt. Stephen and Mehetabel Snow, and a descendant of an early New England family. Capt. Stephen Snow was a sea captain and was lost at sea. Mr. Hall was a cabinet maker by trade, which he followed here in Providence for a time, but some time after his marriage he returned to his native State, later, however, again taking up his residence in Providence, and here he engaged in the furniture business on Westminster street, near Dorrance. His business associate was the late George A. Howard, father of the present Jesse Howard of Providence. Later on Mr. Hall was occupied as a contractor until his retirement from active business and removal to the neighboring town of Scituate, R. I., where his death occurred, Nov. 9, 1875, aged seventy-nine years, eight months and fifteen days. Mrs. Hall passed away Oct. 23, 1867, aged sixty-five years, and the remains of both rest in the beautiful Swan Point Cemetery, Providence. Mr. Hall's life was so lived as to command the respect and esteem of his business contemporaries and his numerous acquaintances and friends.

The children born to James Stanhope and Eleanor Ryder (Snow) Hall were: (1) Almira, who married Mr. Richard Sanders, of the firm of William A. Howard & Co., and a prominent and successful business man, died Oct. 22, 1862, aged forty-one years in Providence, leaving issue. [Sketch of Richard Sanders elsewhere in this work.] (2) William Henry is mentioned below. (3) Abby C. died Jan. 25, 1865, aged twenty-two years.

The only son of this couple, Hon. William Henry Hall, is one of the most widely and favorably known, as well as one of the oldest and most successful real estate dealers and brokers of Providence, his experience and operations covering a period of forty and more years; and his long years of public service, as councilman, treasurer, legislator, senator, etc., have given him the position and standing in the business life of Providence, and as well in its social life, as his talents and efforts are deserving of, for Mr. Hall may well be classed among the self-made men of his community.

William Henry Hall was born June 12, 1837, in Providence. His early education was obtained in the public schools, which he attended until, at the age of fourteen, being desirous of learning a trade, he entered a large cigar factory, and in six months became an expert workman. But the occupation and confinement impaired his health, so much so that for two years his life was despaired of, although he retained his courage and ambition, and upon partial recovery cast about for some other active employment. When seventeen years old he borrowed from a friend a small capital of less than fifty dollars, and securing credit for the necessary materials, erected a small building and opened a store for the sale of fruits, confectionery and periodicals. His venture proved successful, and by careful methods and strict attention to business, he was soon accumulating money in a small way, while at the same time contributing to the support of his parents. With improved health came increased ambition, and deciding upon a mercantile career, he attended a course of instruction in Scholfield's Commercial College, from which he received a diploma in 1859. At once securing a position as bookkeeper with a large concern in Providence, he sold out his business in the store and rented the building to the purchaser. He retained his bookkeeping situation in Providence four years, and then took a similar position with a large wholesale lumber house in Albany, N. Y. Early in 1865, being offered the position of secretary and treasurer of the Marietta and Vinton County Coal and Oil Company of Providence, he accepted and returned to his native city, and continued in this relation until the business of

William H. C.

Point Cemetery, Providence. Mr. Hall's life revolved as to command the respect and esteem of his business contemporaries and his numerous acquaintances and friends.

The children born to James Stanhope and Anne Ryder (Snow) Hall were: (1) Almira, who married Mr. Richard Sanders, of the firm of William A. Howard & Co., and a prominent and successful business man, died Oct. 22, 1892, aged thirty-one years in Providence, leaving issue. Search of Richard Sanders elsewhere in this work. (2) William Henry is mentioned below. (3) Abby C. died Jan. 25, 1895, aged twenty-two years.

Early in 1865, being offered the position of secretary and treasurer of the Marietta and Hudson County Coal and Oil Company of Providence, he accepted and returned to his native city. He continued in this relation until the business of the company was closed up. Mr. Hall began his operations in real estate in 1866. At that time the real estate business of Providence was practically monopolized by one or two firms long established and influential, and his success in this line, established in the face of competition with the older and more powerful operators, is but little short of phenomenal, and can only be attributed to his personal qualities of unbounded energy, strict integrity, unflagging persistency and rare business judgment. His experience in the lumber trade was invaluable to him, and this, combined with his intuition and natural business abilities of a high order, enabled him in due time to establish for himself an enviable position and reputation as one of the leading real estate dealers and brokers in Providence. In 1873 Mr. Hall purchased the Joseph W. Sweet estate in Cranston, now Edgewood, and at great expense of time, labor and money, transformed the once unpretentious homestead with its spacious grounds into an imposing and elegant residence. In 1876 he erected the large business block in Weybosset street, known as the Hall Building. In 1890 he organized the Central Real Estate Company, with an authorized capital of two millions, for the purpose of bringing into reach of people of moderate means a class of investments hitherto monopolized by the wealthy. Nothing, perhaps, more favorably illustrates Mr. Hall's business energy and sagacity than the remarkable success of this company; having been its president and manager since its organization, he has been the chief factor in bringing this large business and investment enterprise to the substantial position and high standing which it today occupies.

Mr. Hall has been active and influential in public life, and has filled many elective offices, never having been defeated. He served six years as a member of the town council of Cranston, and was town treasurer one year, declining a re-election. He was a representative to the General Assembly four terms, 1880-1884, and for two years succeeding was a member of the Senate, being the first Republican Senator elected from the town of Cranston; he was again nominated, but declined a longer service. While in the Assembly he served as chairman of the joint committee on Accounts and Claims, and second on the Senate committee on Corporations, and established a reputation as an excellent debater of governmental and economic questions. Although now well advanced in years, Mr. Hall finds his favorite relaxation from the cares of business in driving fine horses, and nothing gives him greater pleasure than handling the reins over his high-spirited four-in-hand team, while taking out a party of friends on his handsome coach.

On Dec. 24, 1866, Mr. Hall was married to Miss Clara Narzette, daughter of William L. Hopkins, of Providence. Mr. Hopkins was one of the chief promoters and organizers of the Sons of Temperance Society in Rhode Island, and descended from the same line of ancestors that gave to this State Stephen Hopkins, one of the early governors of Rhode Island, a member of the United States Senate and a signer of the Declaration of Independence; and that noble patriot Esek Hopkins, the father of the United States Navy, and its first Admiral.

FARNSWORTH (Pawtucket family). Since 1844—for a period of sixty years—there have resided at Pawtucket several generations of the ancient Massachusetts Farnsworths, a name closely identified with New England annals for 250 years. And in the old home town of the family—Groton, Mass.—the family was well represented in the Revolution. Major Amos Farnsworth, an officer of one of the Massachusetts commands, and for a time under Prescott, saw active service much of the time throughout the war, falling wounded at Bunker Hill. The head of the Pawtucket family was the late Claudius Buchanan Farnsworth, who was long a leading member of the Bar there, and as well an officer in the extensive corporation of the Dunnell Manufacturing Company; and still active and prominent in the city's professional and social life is Hon. Claude Joseph Farnsworth, a son and long the business associate of his father in the law firm of Farnsworth & Farnsworth, a former representative in the Rhode Island Assembly, etc.; while another son of the elder Farnsworth, in the person of John Prescott Farnsworth, has for years worthily sustained the family name and reputation at Providence, as an officer in the extensive corporation of the Providence Dyeing, Bleaching & Calendering Company.

This article relates to the lives, family history and Farnsworth lineage of the family alluded to, and in arrangement the matter following is in chronological order from the earliest known American ancestor:

(I) The Farnsworths in the United States are of English origin, and without doubt derive their name from one of two places in Lancashire, England, and most likely from Farnworth, in the parish of Dean, not far from Manchester, in Salford Hundred. Matthias Farnworth, as first written, and pronounced "Farnoth," appears first in America in 1657, at Lynn, Mass., but he is believed to have been at Lynn some years before that. He was probably married twice, second to Mary Farr, daughter of George Farr, of Lynn. Mr. Farnworth later removed to Groton, Mass. He died Jan. 21, 1689, at which time he was about seventy-seven years of age. His widow died in 1717. Mr. Farnworth was a member of the church, as were all his children. He filled many town offices, among them those of constable and selectman. He was a weaver by occupation. His children were: Elizabeth, Matthias, John, Benjamin, Joseph, Mary, Sarah, Samuel, Abigail and Jonathan.

(II) Benjamin Farnsworth, born about 1667, married in 1695 Mary, born Feb. 3, 1674, daughter of Jonas and Mary (Loker) Prescott. Mr. Farnsworth owned considerable land in Groton. He held several town offices, among them that of selectman. Both himself and wife were members of the church, in which their children were all baptized; they were: Mary, Martha, Benjamin, Isaac, Ezra, Amos, Lydia, Aaron, Martha, Jonas and Deborah. The father died Aug. 15, 1733, and the mother passed away Oct. 28, 1735.

(III) Amos Farnsworth, born Nov. 27, 1704, married Nov. 20, 1735, Lydia Longley, born June 26, 1716, daughter of John and Sarah (Prescott) Longley, the latter of whom witnessed the murder of his parents and several of their children by the Indians, and he himself was captured, taken into Canada and retained five years. Amos Farnsworth was a man six feet, four inches in height, and of striking appearance. He was possessed of much energy, and was well educated for a farmer of his time. After the conquest of Canada, when the lands opened for settlement, he went thither, engaged in surveying and received grants of land. He erected buildings thereon and prepared to remove his family there. He placed agents on the property and returned for his wife and children, and took them on, but during his absence the agents, through certain misrepresentations to the officials of the Nova Scotia government, had had the title to the lands transferred to them. He was crowded out and he returned to Groton in 1774, with a part of his family. The Revolutionary war soon followed, in which he took great interest, but on Dec. 5, 1775, he and his youngest son, Benjamin, were both drowned by the upsetting of a boat in the Nashua river. His widow died in 1810. Their children were: Sarah, Rachel, Lydia, Susanna, Lucy, Amos, Jonas, Mary, Amos (2) and Benjamin.

(IV) Major Amos Farnsworth, born April 28, 1754, in Groton, Mass., married May 7, 1782, Elizabeth Rockwood, born April 17, 1757, in Groton, daughter of Elisha and Elizabeth (Adams) Rockwood. At the age of eleven years, Mr. Farnsworth went with his father to Nova Scotia, and returned with him in 1774. Directly on his return he united himself with a company of "minute men" that was organized in Groton under the command of Capt. Henry Farwell for the defense of popular rights. On the Lexington alarm young Farnsworth marched with the company for the scene of action, but arrived too late to participate in the fight. At the battle of Bunker Hill Mr. Farnsworth fought behind the breastworks until they were captured by the British forces; in the retreat his right arm was shattered by a ball. In 1776 he was ensign in Capt. Shattuck's company at Ticonderoga. The next winter he was in New Jersey. In 1780 he helped to organize the artillery company in Groton, with which he remained as lieutenant, captain and major until 1798. Major Farnsworth had the reputation of being an efficient and very popular officer. In addition to his military services he was for several years a deacon of the church in Groton, and he served the church in many business ways until old age diminished his powers. He died Oct. 29, 1847, in his ninety-fourth year, and his widow passed away Dec. 11th, of that same year, aged ninety years. Their children, all born in Groton, were: Luke, Amos, Elizabeth, Ralph and Walter.

(V) Luke Farnsworth, born Sept. 16, 1785, married April 16, 1814, Sarah, born Jan. 6, 1795, in Dummerston, Vt., daughter of Oliver and Hannah (Kelley) Hartwell. She died May 17, 1841, and he married (second) Nov. 25, 1841, Mrs. Hannah Field, who died July 28, 1867, aged fifty-seven years. Mr. Farnsworth was engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Groton, Mass., and died there May 17, 1876. His children were: Claudius Buchanan, born Jan. 8, 1815; Susanna Augusta, born April 29, 1816, died Jan. 15, 1824; Mary, born Oct. 2, 1818, died Jan. 15, 1824; Sarah, born Nov. 3, 1821, died Sept. 6, 1825; Mary A. S., born Feb. 20, 1825, died Sept. 16, 1825; Susan Mary, born April 13, 1827 (all born to the first marriage); George Henry, born Sept. 5, 1842; Hannah Elizabeth, born Jan. 1, 1845; Sarah Augusta, born March 24, 1846; Mary Isabella, born May 15, 1849; and Harriet Frances.

(VI) Claudius Buchanan Farnsworth, son of Luke and Sarah (Hartwell) Farnsworth, born Jan. 8, 1815, in the Province of Quebec, Canada, married Feb. 27, 1851, Marianna, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Mayberry) McIntire, of Pawtucket, R. I. Mr. Farnsworth was fitted for college at the Groton (Mass.) Academy, entered Harvard University and was graduated therefrom with the degree of A. B., in 1841. He then for a time was in attendance at the Harvard Law School, and furthered his preparation for the law under the direction of Timothy G. Coffin, Esq., of New Bedford, Mass. He was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar at Taunton, Mass., in March, 1844, and immediately thereafter located in the practice of the law at Pawtucket, which place was then under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, but since 1862 a part of Rhode Island. This city was thereafter his place of residence and field of labor, in which his death occurred, May 19, 1897, and his widow followed him to the Great Beyond, dying Aug. 10, 1904, in Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

In 1859 Mr. Farnsworth was made treasurer of the Dunnell Manufacturing Company at Pawtucket, a relation he sustained to it until 1881. He resigned his position in the year just named and resumed the practice of his profession, in which he was later joined by his son Claude J. Farnsworth, the two conducting business under the firm name of Farnsworth & Farnsworth, and building up an extensive and successful practice.

Mr. Farnsworth for years was interested in his family history and genealogy and from his researches prepared and issued in 1891 the "Monograph" of Matthias Farnsworth and his descendants in America, which formed the basis of a later larger work by another.

The children of Claudius B. Farnsworth and wife were: John Prescott, born Feb. 19, 1860; Claude J., born Dec. 15, 1862; and Abby McIntire, born Nov. 11, 1864.

(VII) JOHN PRESCOTT FARNSWORTH, the eldest son of the late Claudius Buchanan and Marianna (McIntire) Farnsworth, was born Feb. 19, 1860, in Pawtucket, R. I., and received his early educational training in the public schools of Providence, in which city he also attended the private school taught by Rev. Charles H. Wheeler. In 1877 he entered Harvard University, from which college he was graduated in 1881 with the degree of A. B. After his graduation Mr. Farnsworth entered the office of the Lonsdale Company, at Lonsdale, R. I., manufacturers of cotton fabrics. He remained in the employ of this well-known concern in the capacity of clerk until in January, 1885, at which time he went to Great Falls, N. H., where he took charge of the construction of the bleacheries of the Great Falls Manufacturing Company. He remained with this company until in July, 1885, during which time he superintended the construction of these mills, which were built under his personal supervision. In July, 1885, Mr. Farnsworth returned to his native State, where he then became agent of the Providence Dyeing, Bleaching & Calendering Company, which is one of the oldest business corporations in Rhode Island, and in this capacity he has since continued. In 1889 Mr. Farnsworth was also elected to the office of treasurer of this corporation, in which official capacity he has also continued since, and during his long and continued service with this company he has displayed a marked business acumen, and shown himself worthy of the trust that has been imposed in him. In politics Mr. Farnsworth is a staunch Republican, and as such has served the City of Providence as a member of the city council from the Ninth ward during the years 1888 and 1889.

Socially Mr. Farnsworth holds membership in various fraternal and social organizations, among them being the Masonic order in which he holds membership in Orpheus Lodge, No. 36, of which he is past master; Providence Chapter, No. 1; and Calvary Commandery, No. 13, all of Providence. He also holds membership in the Squantum Club, the University Club, of Providence, and the Arkwright Club, of New York, as well as several others. Mr. Farnsworth is an active member of St. James' Episcopal Church, of Providence, of which he has served as vestryman and clerk for a number of years, and to which he is liberal in his support.

On Nov. 25, 1885, Mr. Farnsworth was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Cowan Barbour, and this union has been blessed with three children, as follows: John Prescott, Jr., born Feb. 8, 1888; William Barbour, born Sept. 7, 1891; and Claudius Ralph, born March 25, 1895.

Mr. Farnsworth is a capable, energetic and progressive business man, and by close application and study of the business in which practically all of his life has been spent, has so thoroughly familiarized himself with every detail of the business that he has come to be recognized as an authority in his line of business. He is affable and courteous in manner, which has won for him many friends.

(VII) CLAUDE JOSEPH FARNSWORTH, the second son of the late Claudius Buchanan and Marianna (McIntire) Farnsworth, was born Dec. 15, 1862, in Pawtucket, R. I. Mr. Farnsworth was prepared for college in the private school taught by Rev. Charles H. Wheeler, at Providence, and in the University Grammar School of the same city. In 1880 he entered Brown University, where he pursued his studies in the senior year with the class of 1884, when owing to ill-health he was compelled to rest from his arduous studies for a time. After recovering his impaired health Mr. Farnsworth took up the study of law under the able instruction of his father, and upon his admission to the Rhode Island Bar in 1887, became associated in the practice of his chosen profession with the latter, under the firm style of Farnsworth & Farnsworth, their offices being located in the Cole Block, Pawtucket, and since the death of his father, Mr. Farnsworth has continued in active practice.

Mr. Farnsworth's political affiliations have been with the Democratic party, in the counsels of which party he has been somewhat active and prominent. From 1887 to 1890 he was private secretary to Gov. John W. Davis. In 1893 he represented his native city in the General Assembly of the State. Mr. Farnsworth is prominent in the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Barney Merry Lodge, No. 29; Pawtucket Chapter, No. 4; Pawtucket Council, No. 2, and Holy Sepulcher Commandery, No. 8, all of Pawtucket. He is a member of the Episcopal Church, to which denomination he is liberal in his support.

On April 29, 1894, Mr. Farnsworth was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Barber Dorler, of New York, and to this union has been born one son, Claude Joseph Farnsworth, Jr., who was born June 11, 1895. Mr. Farnsworth has gradually developed into one of the leading members of the Rhode Island Bar. He is a fluent speaker, and handles his cases with prudence and good judgment. Through his ability, his close application to his profession, and the care given to those entrusting their business to his care, he has made for himself a reputation as a lawyer and man such as has been rewarded with an extensive general practice. The successful conduct of a number of important and difficult cases by him has given him, as stated, high rank in the profession to which his life has been devoted.

PHINEAS A. CONLEY, one of Cranston's most prominent and esteemed citizens, was born Sept. 19, 1843, at Block Island, a son of George Washington and Lovice Rogers (Dodge) Conley.

Philander Conley, the grandfather of Phineas A., was a son of Edward Conley, who was a son of the founder of the family in America. This ancestor came to the Colonies from Liverpool, England, on board a British man-of-war, and he remained on Block Island. Philander Conley married Niobe Dodge, and their children were: Edward, George W., William, Dolly, Mary, Irene and Jerusha. Niobe Dodge was descended from John Dodge, one of the early settlers and one of the sixteen purchasers of New Shoreham (Block Island) in 1660.

The children of John Dodge were: John, born Jan. 6, 1680; Mary, born April 18, 1682; Nathaniel, born Nov. 3, 1684; John (2), born Jan. 3 or 18, 1686; Catherine, born March 17, 1687; Ebenezer, born Oct. 21, 1689; Josiah, born Dec. 25, 1690; David, born Dec. 26, 1691; Sarah, born April 7, 1694; Dorcas, born May 16, 1695; Elizabeth, born Nov. 7, 1696, and Alexander, born June 5, 1699.

Nathaniel Dodge, son of John, born Nov. 3, 1684, married March 3, 1706, Margaret Hulling, and they had issue: William, born May 1, 1707; Nathaniel, May 11, 1710; Nehemiah, May 9, 1712; Anne, Feb. 7, 1715; Mark, March 27, 1717; Dorcas, Feb. 11, 1722; Gideon, May 27, 1725; and Mary, Nov. 27, 1728.

Mark Dodge, son of Nathaniel, was born March 27, 1717, and married Oct. 15, 1740, Lydia Rathbun, born July 31, 1721, daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Mott) Rathbun. Thomas Rathbun was a son of John Rathbun, born Jan. 9, 1684, and a grandson of William Rathbun, the settler in New Shoreham. The children of Mark and Lydia (Rathbun) Dodge were: Simeon, born June 15, 1741; Dorcas, Oct. 15, 1743; Bathsheba, May 13, 1750; and Niobe, April 3, 1754.

George W. Conley, father of Phineas A., married Lovice Rogers Dodge, daughter of Caleb and Elizabeth (Littlefield) Dodge, and their children were: Lemuel Hastings, deceased; George Washington, a resident of Block Island; Anna Parthenie, who married Elam P. Littlefield, of Block Island; Phineas Augustus; Louisa Hazard, who married Frank Cann and resides in Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Wayland C., deceased.

Phineas A. Conley received a liberal education in the schools of his native town, where he remained until the age of eighteen years. His tastes lay in the direction of the sea, and about this time he was afforded an opportunity to engage in his desired mode of life. His ability, ready aptitude and executive ability were exemplified from the first, and his promotion was unusually rapid, for by the time he had reached his twenty-third year he was already in command of a schooner. He engaged in the inland coast trade from Maine to Florida, meeting with a great deal of success, which was a natural result of his industry and perseverance. At the age of twenty-eight years he left the sea, and in 1871 located in Cranston, leasing the Harris farm, which property was at that time known as the Cranston Coal Mines. Here he soon established a milk business and for nine years conducted a prosperous route in the city. In 1881 he purchased the William Elsberry farm, which is situated near the Rhode Island ore bed and Four Corners. It was from this mine that the ore was taken for the manufacture of the first cannon in the United States, during the Revolutionary war. This farm embraces some 200 acres, all of which Mr. Conley has placed under thorough cultivation. From this farm he conducted, for twelve years, one of the largest milk routes in Providence, disposing of 600 quarts of milk daily.

In 1885 and 1886 Mr. Conley was elected highway surveyor of Cranston, and continued as such until 1892, when he was appointed by the council highway commissioner, an office he has held continuously ever since. This is a very important position, as he has under his jurisdiction in the town of Cranston over 125 miles of roads, a large portion of which are macadamized, this work having been gradually pushed forward under Mr. Conley's management without entailing any burdensome increase in taxation. Charles Sumner once said that a good road and the schoolmaster are two most important agents in advancing civilization. In the building of good roads in the town of Cranston Mr. Conley has thus served his neighbors and fellow-townsmen not only faithfully and well, but has contributed in no small degree to their well-being. Good roads are like good streets and make habitation along them desirable. The town of Cranston is today modern, and furnishes an admirable object lesson in the building of good roads and public highways, with the result that there has been a decided increase in the value of the land made available to market by improved modern roadbeds. As a highway commissioner Mr. Conley has proved himself one of the most efficient in the State, and experts on the subject are loud in their praise and appreciation of his system of road construction. His reputation in this regard has become national, through the medium of good roads and automobile journals, and his correspondence with distant interested parties is most extensive.

Mr. Conley is a thorough Republican in politics. For the past seventeen years he has been chairman of the town Republican committee, and during that time his party has, with a single exception, elected its candidates to every town office. Previous to Mr. Conley's assuming the chairmanship Cranston had been solidly Democratic. For six years Mr. Conley was a member of the town council, and in 1886 he was elected to the State Legislature, serving throughout that and the following year. His fraternal affiliations consist of membership in Doris Lodge, No. 38, A. F. & A. M., of Auburn, in Eagle Lodge, No. 2, I. O. O. F., and Mazeppa Encampment, No. 12.

In 1867 Mr. Conley was married to Miss Josephine Maria Littlefield, a daughter of Nicholas, Jr., and Georgianna (Sands) Littlefield, of Block Island. They had two children: Georgianna Sands, who married Myron M. Newton, and Lemuel Hastings, deceased.

Mr. Conley is a man of quiet and reserved manners, but gives the impression of positiveness and self-reliance. He has a pleasing, genial cordiality about him which serves him well in the carrying on of his large business operations. His long term of service as a public official gives evidence of his efficiency. Perhaps Cranston has no more popular public citizen and it is doubtful if there are any others who have done more to bring about the material prosperity of the community.

HOLDEN. The Woonsocket family of this name, while not an old one in that community or in Rhode Island, is one of ancient and honorable standing in the neighboring State of Massachusetts. For a number of years, however, the Woonsocket family—the head of which is Hon. Frank Eugene Holden—has been identified with the business and social life of Woonsocket, Mr. Holden having been conspicuous in public affairs for the last decade and a half, representing his ward in the common council, and his city in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, occupying for a number of years the chair of honor as Speaker of the Lower House.

The early home of this Holden family, here considered, at least its home for several generations, was at Marblehead and Salem, towns in Essex county, Mass. In the former town at the close of the eighteenth century was living John Holden, who was there married July 28, 1799, to Mary Raymond, and their children, all of Marblehead town record, were: Benjamin White, baptized Aug. 30, 1801; Mary, baptized Nov. 5, 1804; Martha, baptized Sept. 20, 1807; Nathaniel, baptized Dec. 14, 1809; George Washington, baptized May 2, 1813; and perhaps John. Of Mr. Holden's antecedents nothing is known to us. One Richard Holden, of English birth, embarked at Ipswich for America in the ship "Francis," in May, 1634, and after arriving in the land of his adoption is known as living first in the town of Ipswich, in Essex county, Mass. That same year Justinian Holden, a younger brother of Richard, came to America in the ship "Elizabeth" and settled at Watertown. He was twice married and had seven children.

Richard Holden in 1640 removed to Watertown. He left Watertown in eight or nine years, and in 1655 his name appears on the tax list of Woburn. The town of Groton was established in 1656-57, and not far from this time Mr. Holden and his sons Justinian and Samuel became residents of the new town and continued there the rest of their lives. Richard Holden was a large land-holder, owning upwards of 975 acres and in time was considered a wealthy man. He had, perhaps, eleven children.

Nathaniel Holden, son of John and Mary (Raymond) Holden, was born in Marblehead, Mass., Dec. 14, 1809. His father was a man of limited means and in the early boyhood of Nathaniel was broken in health from long imprisonment and ill usage in an English ship as an impressed American sailor of the war of 1812-15, so that he could do but little toward giving his son a start in the world. The latter left the paternal roof to begin life's battle alone; but he had not gone far until he met with good luck in finding employment with Mr. John Howard, of Salem, a nearby town. Mr. Howard was a sailmaker and doing a large business. With this friend young Holden apprenticed himself to learn the trade, and went to live with him—a part of the agreement—in his family, and he was also to have school privileges through the winters. Suffice it to say that the young man had in five years given such a good account of himself that he married into the family, marrying a granddaughter of his employer. After completing his trade, with a taste for the water he shipped on an Indian voyage and soon rose from the fore-castle to cabin, and through the grades to that of first mate of an "Indian," and was offered the command of a ship, but declined the offer, as the "romance of the sea" had by this time gone. Quitting a seafaring life he returned in 1836 to Marblehead, but was induced to make one more voyage on the "Grand Banks" as a fisherman. He then formed a partnership with S. A. Porter, the two opening a sail-loft there, where they carried on the business of sailmaking until 1843. In the last named year, associated with one of his former fellow-apprentices, Thomas Oakes, he went to Salem and there carried on the business in the sail-loft formerly operated by John Howard, Jr. This was located on Derby Wharf, and the business was here carried on by these gentlemen until the death of Mr. Holden in 1858.

Mr. Holden was a sincere believer in the Christian religion and an active member of the Baptist Church. He, too, was a strong Anti-Slavery man, and at a time when it was anything but popular to be one.

Mr. Holden married, at Salem, Mass., Mary Ann Brown, born Oct. 30, 1805, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Howard) Brown, he a son of John and Elizabeth Brown, of Hamilton, Mass., and she a direct descendant of Abraham Howard, a shipmaster of London, England, living in Stepney parish of that city, in the early part of the eighteenth century, engaged in the Mediterranean trade, and who came to America as early as 1724, in August of which year he bought a house and lot in Marblehead, Mass., from whom her descent is through Joseph and John Howard.

Mr. Holden died at Salem, Mass., Sept. 2, 1858, and his wife passed away April 9, 1894. The children born to them, the first two in Salem and the others in Marblehead, were: Nathaniel Jay, born June 17, 1827; Ann Elizabeth, born Oct. 25, 1835, who died May 21, 1855; Thomas Brown, born June 18, 1837; and John Charles, born Feb. 19, 1839, who married, June 13, 1872, Harriet Frances Fogg, and (second) Lilly L. Fogg. Of these, Nathaniel Jay Holden, a lawyer by profession, has long been a prominent public man and citizen of Salem, Mass., a representative, State senator, Master in Chancery for the county of Essex, trial justice and special justice for the District Court of Essex.

Thomas Brown Holden, son of Nathaniel and Mary Ann (Brown) Holden, was born June 18, 1837, in Marblehead, Mass., and on Nov. 8, 1859, at Salem, was married to Sarah Eliza Stone, who was born Feb. 11, 1839, at Sullivan, N. H. Mrs. Holden died Dec. 31, 1896, at Pittsfield, Mass. Their children were: Anne, born Sept. 1, 1860, in Salem, Mass., who died there Aug. 11, 1861; Frank Eugene, born Nov. 17, 1861, in Salem, Mass.; Elizabeth Train, born Oct. 28, 1866, in Newton Centre, Mass.; and Adaline May, born Nov. 19, 1874, in Newton Centre.

FRANK EUGENE HOLDEN, son of Thomas Brown and Sarah Eliza (Stone) Holden, was born Nov. 17, 1861, in Salem, Mass. He attended the common and high schools of Newton, Mass., then in 1880, began working as freight clerk for the New York & New England Railroad Company. He rose to the position of cashier, which in 1888 he resigned to engage in business as a retail coal dealer. In 1890 he became a director in the Woonsocket Spool & Bobbin Company, to whom he sold his coal business. In May, 1894, he bought back the business, and in partnership with Mr. H. C. Card, Jr., conducted it under the name of the New England Coal Company, doing a large retail and wholesale business, with headquarters in Providence, until April, 1900, when he became one of the incorporators and treasurers of the Inter-State Coal Company of Providence, with Mayor William C. Baker as president, and James A. George as secretary. In November, 1901, the Inter-State Coal Company, the Pomroy Coal Company and the R. B. Little Coal Company were incorporated under the name of the Eastern Coal Company, in which Mr. Holden occupied the position of general sales agent. In January, 1903, Mr. Holden severed his connection with the Eastern Coal Company, and shortly afterward became connected with and was elected president of the Boston & Colorado Company, organized with a capital of $1,500,000. This company has since been re-organized into the South Canon Coal Company, of which Mr. Holden is now a director. He was also actively identified with the building of the Providence & Burrillville Electric railway, and is a director in the company. He is also president of the Woonsocket Gas Company, and a director in the Woonsocket Electric Machine & Power Company.

With a taste and inclination for social and public life, and as well by nature adapted and fitted for it, Mr. Holden has taken a conspicuous part in such affairs, both in the city and in the State of his adoption, and has been from the start an intensely active and busy man. Immediately on his entrance into the common council of Woonsocket, in 1890, he was chosen its president, in which office he continued during 1891. Being appointed on a special committee to investigate and report as to the best system of sewerage for the city of Woonsocket, he gave to the work his characteristic energy and application, and upon the adoption of the report he was, in 1893, elected chairman of the board of sewer commissioners, which position he has held ever since. A staunch Republican, Mr. Holden in 1894 was elected a member of the House of Representatives of the State Assembly, was continually re-elected up to 1902, and was again elected in 1903 for the session of 1904. During his legislative terms he served on a number of important committees, was three years a member of the finance committee, and one year of the Judiciary committee. In 1898 Mr. Holden was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives and was several times re-elected to that distinguished position, and while Speaker and afterward he was the leader of the House. In 1899 he received the appointment, from Gov. Elisha Dyer, of State commissioner for the Providence & Worcester Railroad Company. Mr. Holden served as one of the commissioners to re-district the city of Providence, appointed in 1900 by Governor Gregory, and he was also one of the commissioners for the re-districting of Pawtucket, appointed by Governor Kimball. In 1900, upon the creation of the State returning board, Mr. Holden was appointed a member of it by Governor Gregory and elected its chairman, which position he held until November, 1906. In July, 1903, he responded to a unanimous call on the part of the Republican party and became chairman of the Republican State central committee, in which position he continued until November, 1906. He was for two years president of the Woonsocket Choral Association, and for a like time president of the Woonsocket Business Men's Association, and for a number of years has been a director in the Citizens National Bank. He is a member of the Woonsocket Baptist Church, and was secretary of the building committee, which had in charge the erection of the new brick edifice. He is a prominent Mason, being a member of Morning Star Lodge, Union Royal Arch Chapter and Woonsocket Commandery, and of Palestine

Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Odd Fellows, Royal Arcanum, Ancient Order of United Workmen, United Order of the Golden Cross and the Elks.

On Oct. 18, 1883, Mr. Holden was married to Miss Hattie A. DeVere, of Stephentown, N. Y., and they have one child, a daughter, Grace Beatrice Holden.

JOSEPH EDWIN SPINK, Judge of the Municipal Court of Providence, R. I., is a descendant of one of the oldest families in the State.

Robert Spink, the ancestral head of the family in Rhode Island, in the spring of 1635, embarked at London, England, in the ship "Speedwell" bound for Virginia, his age then being given as twenty years. He is next of record at Newport and Portsmouth, R. I., from 1648 to 1665, at which time he settled in Quiddnessett Neck, now in the town of North Kingstown. The Christian name of his wife was Alice. He died in 1695, and his will was proved March 27th, of that year. His children were: Robert, John, Shibna, Nicholas, Samuel, Ishmael, Benjamin, Margaret, Sarah and Elizabeth.

John Spink, a descendant of the settler and a son of one Robert, was born Sept. 6, 1700. He married (first) Sarah Tibbitts, and they had one daughter, Margaret, born Sept. 11, 1725. He married (second) Hannah Carpenter, and by her had eight children: Samuel, born Dec. 31, 1729; Ishmael, Feb. 12, 1731; Oliver, Dec. 23, 1733; John, March 21, 1736; Sarah, Oct. 9, 1738; Nicholas, Jan. 24, 1743, died in April, 1807; Silas, March 3, 1745; and Hannah, July 23, 1746.

Ishmael Spink, son of John, was born Feb. 12, 1731, and on Dec. 22, 1752, he married Waity Spencer. Their children were: Samuel, born in 1763, died Sept. 19, 1831; Sarah married Thomas Eldred.

Samuel Spink, son of Ishmael, born in 1763, married Elizabeth Arnold, who died June 9, 1806, aged thirty-six years. They were the parents of four children: Arnold, born June 19, 1791; Betsey, Nov. 15, 1796, married Caleb Ladd; Joseph, born Sept. 29, 1799, died April 24, 1873; and Mary, born Aug. 16, 1801, married first a Mr. Congdon and (second) David Madden. Samuel Spink was a farmer and lived in Quiddnessett Neck, where one of his descendants, George A. Spink, now lives.

Joseph Spink, son of Samuel, was born Sept. 29, 1799, and he died April 24, 1873. He attended school winters, going to a school two miles from home on the post road. He married Mary Ann Spink, born Dec. 20, 1798 (died March 19, 1882), daughter of John and Catherine (Allen) Spink, descended from Robert through John and Nicholas [See sketch of Nicholas N. Spink for this line]. They had children: (1) Elizabeth Arnold, born Nov. 1, 1825, married Albert E. Spink, and had children: Emma F., who married John F.

Pierce; Mary, who married Rollin E. Mason; and Frank A. (2) Samuel Arnold, born March 28, 1828, married Mercy Ellen Eldred, and has two children, Henry M. and Herbert B. (3) John Harris was born Dec. 1, 1830. (4) Joseph Edwin, born Dec. 31, 1833, died young. (5) Joseph Edwin was born July 27, 1842. (6) George Albert, born Nov. 6, 1844, married Annie A. Reynolds, and has five children: Myra B., Florence R., George Alfred, Joseph Edwin (2) and Robert.

Judge Joseph Edwin Spink was born July 27, 1842, at the old homestead in North Kingstown. He attended district school in his home town, the East Greenwich Academy and the University Grammar school in Providence, R. I. In 1865 he graduated from Brown University with the degree of A. B. After reading law with James Tillinghast for two years, he was admitted to the Bar in 1867, and at once began practice in Wickford and Providence. He resided in North Kingstown until 1874, when he became a resident of Providence. While a resident of his home town he was town moderator, and took great interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the town. He has steadily advanced in his profession, his judicial mind, his wisdom and his equity having all combined to place him firmly in the front rank, winning the admiration of those who had long esteemed him for his unassailable integrity. Since 1884 he has faithfully discharged the duties of Judge of the Municipal Court of Providence.

Judge Spink became a member of Washington Lodge, No. 5, A. F. & A. M., at Wickford, and is a member of Providence Chapter, and Calvary Commandery; and he also belongs to the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

On Nov. 19, 1874, Judge Spink was married to Emma E. Hudson, daughter of Thomas D. Hudson, and to them have come five daughters: Mary, Alice G., Hope, Martha and Agatha. The family home is at No. 150 South Angell street, in one of the pleasant residence sections of the city.

THE MINER FAMILY, of the town of East Greenwich, is a branch of the ancient family of that name in Stonington, Conn., in which section of the country generation after generation have lived and flourished for upwards of 260 years, while back in old England the family lineage is traced to the period of the 13th century. The members of this old New London-Stonington family, marrying as they did into the first families of that region, have been and continue to be substantial men and women, enterprising and progressive in citizenship, and useful members of society. The representatives of the family in this section are the present merchant and successful business man, Isaac D. Miner, long one of the respected men of his community; his two sons John D. and Albert D. are prominent men of their communities, the former a graduate from Brown University. Mr.

Isaac D. Miner is a descendant in the eighth generation from Lieut. Thomas Miner, the immigrant New England settler.

(I) Lieut. Thomas Miner, son of Clement, of England, and a descendant of Henry Miner, who died in 1359, came early to this country and was an inhabitant of Charlestown, Mass. He married there April 23, 1634, Grace, daughter of Walter Palmer, and of their children, the eldest was born in Charlestown, the next four were baptized in Hingham, Mass., and the remainder were born in New London, Conn. The father removed his family from Hingham to New London, in 1646. His children were: John, Clement, Thomas, Ephraim, Joseph, Manasseh, Ann, Maria, Samuel and Hannah.

(II) Deacon Manasseh Miner, son of Thomas, was born April 23, 1647, in New London, Conn., and is said to have been the first male child born in the town. He married Sept. 26, 1670, Lydia Moore, and lived at the old homestead at Quambaug, and was buried at Wequetequock. Deacon Miner served in King Philip's war. His children were Elnathan, Samuel, Hannah, Thomas and Lydia.

(III) Deacon Thomas Miner, son of Deacon Manasseh, was born Sept. 20, 1683, and was married Dec. 26, 1706, to Hannah Avery. Their children were: Thomas, Sylvanus, Hannah, Jonathan, Lydia, Prudence, Manasseh, Ephraim and Lydia (2).

(IV) Deacon Thomas Miner (2), son of Deacon Thomas, was born Oct. 4, 1707. He married Jan. 3, 1745, Sarah, daughter of William Watson, of Nantucket. Deacon Miner died Nov. 22, 1760. His widow, who remarried, died May 12, 1803. Their children were: Thomas, Sarah, Thomas (2), William, Manasseh and Prudence.

(V) Manasseh Miner, son of Deacon Thomas (2), born June 13, 1755, married Feb. 14, 1779, Hannah Haley, and their children were: Amos, Isaac, Manasseh, Thomas and John.

(VI) Isaac Miner was the representative of the sixth generation in direct line.

(VII) Zebulon Miner, who was born in 1803, married Hulda Maine, of North Stonington, Conn. His children were: Amos Prentis, who married Susan Wilkinson; Phebe, who died in girlhood; Frances, who married Nathan Benjamin; and Isaac D.

(VIII) Isaac D. Miner, father of Albert D., was born Aug. 8, 1842. He married Susan Maine, who was born on Staten Island, N. Y., June 14, 1846. Their children were as follows: Albert D., born June 23, 1867; and John D., born Dec. 21, 1869, who married Oct. 30, 1902, Miss B. Alice Owen, of East Greenwich, and has two children: John D. Jr. (born Oct. 3, 1903), and Irving O. (born June 12, 1905).

(IX) ALBERT D. MINER, born June 23, 1867, in North Stonington, Conn., at an early age moved with his father to East Greenwich. He went to school a while before leaving Connecticut and completed his education in East Greenwich in 1885. He was for a time identified with the wholesale grocery business of Waldron, Wightman & Co., but in 1890 he purchased from his father the retail grocery store in which he is still interested, and where he has built up a flourishing trade. He also runs a store at Apponaug, and two in Westerly, Rhode Island.

Mr. Miner was married Feb. 15, 1887, to Miss Mary E. Arnold, of Scituate, R. I. She was born Aug. 7, 1867, daughter of Simeon C. and Alzada Arnold. Mr. and Mrs. Miner have the following children: Florence M., born Jan. 27, 1889; Isaac D., May 24, 1890; Harold C., Sept. 8, 1893; Ralph W., May 9, 1897; and Wilfred A., Aug. 16, 1903. Mr. Miner is a man of unquestionable honesty and true worth. He is and deserves to be one of the most highly respected men of East Greenwich.

WILLIAM SMITH GRANGER, now living retired, but for thirty-seven years engaged in the manufacturing business at Providence, is one of that city's well known and substantial citizens. Mr. Granger in paternal and maternal lines descends from many of the foremost men in early New England history, among them being such strong characters as the Rev. Peter Bulkeley, the founder of Concord, Mass.; Gershom Bulkeley, surgeon in the Colonial army; Charles Chauncey, President of Harvard University; Jonathan Prescott, captain in the Colonial army; and William Aspinwall, one of the founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He is of the seventh generation in descent from Launcelot Granger, the first of the name in America.

(I) Launcelot Granger came to America and settled first in Newbury, Mass., was later of Ipswich, where he is of record as a tax payer in 1648. He married Jan. 4, 1653-54, Joanna, daughter of Robert Adams, of Newbury, and they died in Suffield, Conn., he Sept. 3, 1689, and she, after 1701. Mr. Granger was the thirty-second actual settler or proprietor in Suffield in 1673. Their eleven children were all born in Newbury.

(II) Thomas Granger, son of Launcelot, married Mindwell, daughter of Stephen Taylor. She was born Nov. 5, 1663. Thomas Granger lived at Suffield where he was a man of much importance in the town, was selectman and held other town offices. He died March 14, 1729-30. Their ten children were born at Suffield.

(III) Samuel Granger, born Feb. 10, 1699, died June 17, 1775. He married Nov. 6, 1722, Hannah, born July 15, 1702, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Seymour) Pomeroy, of Suffield, and he himself lived in that town, where he was occupied in farming. Their nine children were born in Suffield.

(IV) Simeon Granger, son of Samuel, born Dec. 28, 1728, in Suffield, Conn., married Nov. 26,

W. S. Swanger

1757, Abigail Dudley, of Saybrook, Conn., born Sept. 17, 1737. They resided in Suffield, Conn., West Springfield, Springfield, Granville, Southwick and Sunderland, Mass. Mr. Granger was a soldier of the Revolution, serving with the Massachusetts troops. Their children, all born in West Springfield, Mass., were: Anna, Sept. 25, 1758; Huldah, Nov. 4, 1760; Hannah, Feb. 12, 1763; Thaddeus, Oct. 9, 1765; William, Dec. 13, 1768; Simeon, March 17, 1770; Persis, in 1773; and Asher, Oct. 9, 1776. The father of these children died in May, 1815, at Sandisfield, Massachusetts.

(V) Simeon Granger (2), son of Simeon, born March 17, 1770, in West Springfield, Mass., married in 1791, Phebe Couch, of Sandisfield, Mass., born Sept. 17, 1774. Mr. Granger resided in Sandisfield, Mass., until 1801, when he removed to Salisbury, Conn., remaining there until 1822, and in that year he removed to Grangerville, town of Pittsford, Vt., purchasing from Andrew Leach a blast furnace for manufacturing pig iron and stoves. With his sons, Lyman and Chester, he commenced business under the firm name of Simeon Granger & Sons. This blast-furnace, it is said, was the second in the United States, being built in 1791. The first furnace was built in Berkshire county, Mass., in 1776.

Mr. Granger was a man of great energy and self-reliance. He died Nov. 19, 1834, after a successful business career, leaving a large family and many sincere friends to mourn his loss. His widow Phebe died in 1840. Their children were: Lyman, born Dec. 22, 1794; Chester, July 5, 1797; Rensselaer D., June 3, 1803; Edward L., April 3, 1808; and Mary A., Sept. 19, 1812.

(VI) Chester Granger, son of Simeon (2), born July 5, 1797, in Sandisfield, Mass., married Dec. 5, 1827, Mary Page, born June 3, 1805, at Rutland, Vt., daughter of Cephas, Jr., and Polly (Gove) Smith, of Pittsford. Cephas Smith was a lineal descendant of Rev. Henry Smith, the first clergyman at Wethersfield, Conn., in 1636. Mr. Granger resided in Sandisfield, Mass., until his father moved to Salisbury, Conn., where his youth and early manhood were passed. At the age of twenty-nine he became a member of the firm of Simeon Granger & Sons, removing to Grangerville, town of Pittsford, Vt., at that time. He was one of the projectors and original directors in the Rutland & Burlington Railroad, also the Western Vermont Railroad, and for many years was a director in the Bank of Rutland. After the death of his father his portion of the furnace property was purchased from the heirs by Chester and his brother Edward L., and the business was conducted under the firm name of C. & E. L. Granger, until 1846, when, at the death of the younger member of the firm, the name was again changed, to Granger, Hodges & Co. Later on the concern was incorporated under the name of the Pittsford Iron Company.

Mr. Granger represented the town in the General Assembly in 1860 and 1861, and also held other offices of responsibility and trust. From 1862 to 1865 he was engaged in the iron business in Pennsylvania, after which he retired to Pittsford, to enjoy the fruits of his industrious life, dying there in his eighty-first year. Mr. Granger was a man of energy, public-spirit, and sterling integrity, and many a poor person can testify as to his private charity and benevolence.

The children of Chester and Mary Granger, all born at Grangerville, were five in number: (1) Egbert S., born Dec. 2, 1828, died May 20, 1829. (2) Charles S., born Aug. 16, 1830, died Dec. 28, 1830. (3) Lyman C., born Jan. 12, 1832, graduated from Norwich University, Norwich, Vt., and from Castleton Medical College at Castleton, Vt., and was in practice with Dr. Valentine Mott in New York. He became an assistant surgeon in the United States Navy, and saw service in the vicinity of New Orleans, being on Farragut's fleet. He later was discharged because of poor health, and died Sept. 26, 1864, at Whitehall, N. Y., cutting short a most promising career. (4) William Smith was born Sept. 19, 1834. (5) Henry Chester, born Sept. 17, 1835, died Feb. 14, 1836.

(VII) William Smith Granger, son of Chester, was born in Grangerville, town of Pittsford, Vt., Sept. 19, 1834, and his early education was acquired at Salem, New York, and in Burr Seminary at Manchester, Vt., supplemented by one year's study, at Lyon & Frieze's school in Providence previous to entering Brown University in 1854. There he pursued a two years' course. In 1890 he received from that institution the degree of A. M. in connection with his class.

Mr. Granger's practical training for active life was received at Augusta, Maine, where he spent about one and one-half years in a hardware store. Returning to Pittsford, he was employed with his father until 1866, when he came to Providence and became treasurer of the Cove Foundry and Machine Company, which was, in 1878, succeeded by the Granger Foundry and Machine Company, Mr. Granger becoming president of the latter firm. In that capacity he served until it was merged together with three other corporations, in 1903, into the Textile Finishing Machine Company. In that year Mr. Granger was in poor health, and retired from active business. The Granger Foundry and Machine Company manufactured machinery for bleaching, dyeing, drying and finishing cotton goods together with machinery for the finishing of surface coated and ledger and letter papers. Mr. Granger was the first to introduce and manufacture the cotton roll for finishing fine grades of paper, which revolutionized the business in this line and opened up a large home and foreign trade for the company and its successor. He also invented a calender roll composed of a mixture of corn husks and cotton which is in use in over 150 bleach, dye and print works in, the United States and Canada.

Mr. Granger is a Republican in his political views, but has never cared for office. He is a Knight Templar Mason, being a member of Calvary Commandery, No. 13. For many years he was a director in the Second National Bank, until it was merged with the United National Bank, where he served as director for two years, resigning on account of illness. He is a director of the American Wringer Company; the Davol Mills, at Fall River, and of the Franklin, Textile, Narragansett and Mercantile Fire Insurance companies, being president of the Textile and Narragansett companies. Socially he belongs to the Society of Sons of the American Revolution; the Rhode Island Historical Society; Society of the Colonial Wars; and the Hope, Squantum and University Clubs. When a young man he united with the Congregational Church in his native town.

On June 12, 1871, Mr. Granger was married in Providence to Miss Caroline Richmond Pitman, born July 4, 1846, in Providence, daughter of John T. and Caroline (Richmond) Pitman. To this union two children have been born: Mary Alice, July 27, 1873; and Helen Richmond, Dec. 9, 1874, who married Allen Herbert Chase, of Providence, and has one daughter, Harriet Granger, born Jan. 1, 1903. Mrs. Granger is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Mayflower Society and the Society of Colonial Dames. Miss Mary A. Granger is a member of the latter organization, and Mrs. Chase is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

ALDRICH. From the ancient Aldrich family of Massachusetts, the head of which was George, who came to the old Colony in 1631, descended the Providence-Smithfield branch of the family, and from the latter town came into the town of Scituate at the opening of the Revolution one James Aldrich who remained through many years one of the town's first citizens, filling a number of positions of honor and trust, among them that of representative in the General Court and Assembly for nineteen consecutive years; and in later years Wilmarth A. and George Aldrich for some years successively occupied a seat in that body from the town.

(I) George Aldrich, of Derbyshire, England, came to America in the fall of 1631. He was made a freeman at Dorchester in 1636, was granted land at Boston in 1640, and was of Braintree, 1644-1663. He was among the first settlers of Mendon in 1663, and there resided the remainder of his life with the exception of one or two years, 1669-1670, in Swansea, and a brief stay at Braintree, perhaps during the Indian war in 1676. On March 16, 1629, he married Catherine Seald, and died March 1, 1683. His children were: Abel, born in 1633; Joseph, born June 4, 1635; Miriam, born in 1639; Experience, born in 1641; John, born in 1644; Sarah, born in 1646; Peter, born in 1648; Mercy, born in 1650; Jacob, born Feb. 28, 1652.

(II) Joseph Aldrich, son of George, born June 4, 1635, married Feb. 26, 1662, Patience Osborne, of Braintree, Mass. He came to Mendon with his father and remained with him until about the time the latter died, when he removed to Providence, R. I., now Smithfield. He died April 24, 1701, in Smithfield, and his wife passed away after 1705. Their children were: Joseph, born July 14, 1663; Samuel; John; Ephraim; Sarah, born Oct. 27, 1677; and Mercy.

(II) Jacob Aldrich, son of George, born Feb. 28, 1652, in Braintree, Mass., married Nov. 3, 1675, Huldah, born June 16, 1657, daughter of Ferdinando and Huldah (Hayward) Thayer. Mr. Aldrich accompanied his father to Mendon, Mass., of which town he was assessor in 1694, and at the time of his death he was styled "husbandman." During King Philip's war in 1676, he went back to Braintree, but on the restoration of peace he returned to Mendon. His children were: Jacob, born in 1678; Seth, born in 1679; Huldah, born in 1680; Rachel, born in 1682; Sarah, born in 1683; David, born in 1685; Peter, born in 1686; John, born in 1688; Moses, born April 1, 1690; Mercy, born in 1692; and Rachel, born in 1694.

(III) Moses Aldrich, son of Jacob, born April 1, 1690, married, April 23, 1711, Hannah White, born Dec. 9, 1691. Their children were: Abigail, born Sept. 18, 1712; Mary, Feb. 15, 1714; George, Jan. 13, 1716; Mercy, Nov. 28, 1717; Robert, Dec. 11, 1719; Lydia, Oct. 28, 1721; Thomas, Feb. 24, 1724; Caleb, Jan. 14, 1726; Luke, Feb. 22, 1727; Alice, May 2, 1730; Moses, April 19, 1732; and Aaron, Jan. 3, 1734.

(IV) Luke Aldrich, son of Moses and Hannah (White) Aldrich, born Feb. 22, 1727, married Anna French. He died Oct. 15, 1805. To Luke and Anna (French) Aldrich were born four children: Esek, born Sept. 9, 1753, died March 2, 1830; Catharine, born Feb. 14, 1755, died Feb. 22, 1829; Seneca, born Nov. 18, 1766; and Watee, born Aug. 9, 1770.

(V) Esek Aldrich, son of Luke and Anna, born Sept. 9, 1753, was first of Mendon, Mass., and afterward of Providence. He married Amey Whipple, daughter of Stephen Whipple, of Smithfield, R. I. Their first two children were born before the removal to Providence. The children of this union were: Cynthia, born Nov. 27, 1778, died Feb. 11, 1779; Robert, born Feb. 1, 1780; Whipple, born March 21, 1782; Simon, born May 21, 1784, died Sept. 1, 1802; Amey, born July 4, 1790, died Sept. 23, 1812; Sophia, born Oct. 2, 1792, died March 9, 1795. The wife and mother died July 17, 1793, and Mr. Aldrich married (second) Susanna Mann, by whom he had children as follows: Susan, born April 6, 1795, died Oct. 20, 1818; Esek, born Jan. 16, 1798, died May 24, 1869; Edward, born Dec. 18, 1800, died May 5, 1828; Eliza, born Oct. 30, 1802, married Stephen Waterman, and died Nov. 26, 1881; and Thomas, born June 3, 1805, died Feb. 15, 1883.

(VI) Whipple Aldrich, son of Esek and Amey, born March 21, 1782, was married in St. Marys, Ga., in 1810, to Letitia Sherman, daughter of Edward Sherman, the latter a nephew of Roger Sherman, one of the framers and signers of the Declaration of Independence. To Whipple and Letitia Aldrich came children as follows: Edward S., born in 1811, was one of the "forty-niners" to California, where he belonged to the famous vigilante committee, and died in 1870 (He was a physician and served as surgeon in the Confederate army); Robert, born in March, 1813, died May 24, 1880; James, born in 1815, died in 1817; George Williamson, born in March, 1817, served in the Confederate army during the Civil war; Amey, born in 1819, died in 1821; Louis, born in June, 1821, became a Judge of the Supreme Court of California; Letitia, born Feb. 23, 1823, married a Mr. Stevens; Whipple, born in 1825, was a soldier in the Confederate army, and died in 1903; William, born July 3, 1827, was killed in 1863, while serving in the Confederate army; and Eliza Waterman, born in October, 1829, married a Mr. Statsburg. For his second wife Whipple Aldrich married Jane Johnson, who bore him three children: Albert, who died during the Civil war; Clarence, who lost an arm in service during the Civil war; and Julia.

(VII) ROBERT ALDRICH, son of Whipple and Letitia, born in March, 1813, came to Providence at the age of sixteen, and began the study of law in the office of lawyer Carpenter. After his admission to the Bar, he practiced his profession alone for a time. He then became trustee of the estate of his father-in-law, Capt. John Andrews, and as such was engaged for the balance of his life. He also became interested in the West Indian trade, having a Mr. Cady for a partner for a number of years, the firm being Cady & Aldrich. He was a good business man, yet a man of literary tastes, and in his disposition he was very domestic and somewhat of a recluse. He was a director of the Commercial National Bank for a great many years. On May 31, 1841, Mr. Aldrich married Sarah Ann Andrews, born Oct. 7, 1820, daughter of Capt. John and Elizabeth (Whipple) Andrews; she died in 1857. Captain Andrews was born in Providence, Jan. 3, 1786, and was married to Betsey (Elizabeth) Whipple, daughter of Stephen Whipple, of Cumberland, R. I., and niece of Noah Whipple, father of Commodore Abram Whipple. To Robert and Sarah Ann Aldrich were born four children: Edward S., born Oct. 18, 1843; William Fosdick, born May 31, 1846; Henry Rankin, born March 7, 1852, died March 5, 1854; Lizzie Letitia, born May 16, 1854, died Oct. 27, 1855.

(VIII) Edward Sherman Aldrich, son of Robert and Sarah A., born Oct. 18, 1843, married Emily L. Howland, daughter of John A. Howland, and they have children: Elizabeth A., born Aug. 30, 1877; Edward S., born Nov. 20, 1879; Robert, born Aug. 20, 1881; and Emily B., born March 13, 1883.

(VIII) WILLIAM F. ALDRICH, son of Robert and Sarah Ann (Andrews) Aldrich, born May 31, 1846, was married in Marion, Pa., Oct. 10, 1878, to Amy B. Hoppin, daughter of Henry Hoppin. This union was blessed with three children: Amey Hoppin, born Nov. 10, 1879, married Oct. 2, 1902, James Franklin Dyer, of Portland, Maine; William F., Jr., born Oct. 21, 1883; and Henry Hoppin, born June 1, 1889.

(III) John Aldrich, son of Joseph and Patience (Osborne) Aldrich, married Susannah Smith, of Smithfield, who died Nov. 29, 1740. He married (second) Elizabeth Stevens. To the first marriage were born: Hannah, born Jan. 13, 1728; Daniel, born Oct. 25, 1730; Samuel, born Aug. 16, 1732; Job, born June 25, 1734; Joseph, born June 29, 1738; Jethro, born March 19, 1740. To the second marriage came: Hannah, born Jan. 16, 1742; John, born Feb. 5, 1743; Susanna, born Nov. 25, 1745; James, born Nov. 7, 1747; Jane, born Nov. 4, 1749; Anne, born Dec. 23, 1751; Samuel, born Dec. 16, 1753; Amie, born March 9, 1756; and Caleb, born Feb. 28, 1758.

(IV) John Aldrich, son of John and Elizabeth (Stevens), born Feb. 5, 1743, married, March 10, 1766, Mary Smith, of Gloucester, R. I. Two children were born to them, namely: Welcome, who married Abigail Kimball; and Amarancy, who married Nicholas Bussey. John Aldrich married (second) Elizabeth Manse, who bore him three children: Betsey, who married Cronan Bowen; Moses, born Oct. 10, 1779, who married Ann Scammell Jones; and Isaac, who married Mary Jones, sister of Ann.

(V) Welcome Aldrich, son of John, Jr., and Mary (Smith) Aldrich, born in 1768, married Abigail Kimball, born June 15, 1772. He died March 9, 1808, and she Dec. 22, 1837. Their children were: Alfred, born in 1791, married Betsey Horton; Lydia married Colwell Irons, and had children, Thomas (who married a Miss Baker) and Stephen; Richard married Mary Blackman, and died in June, 1841; Esther, born in 1799, married William Atwood, and died March 19, 1860, the mother of Silas, George, James, William K., Abby Ann, Hannah, Elizabeth, Esther, John, Emory P. (born Aug. 11, 1828, died Dec. 8, 1829), and one that died in infancy in 1830; Lyman married Sally Stone; and Tamah married Otis Potter, and had children Jonathan, Stephen, Ezra and a daughter.

(VI) Alfred Aldrich, son of Welcome and Abigail (Kimball) Aldrich, born in 1791, in Scituate, married Dec. 22, 1811, Betsey Horton, daughter of Nathaniel Horton, Jr. He died May 10, 1829, and she passed away Nov. 28, 1842. Their children were: (1) Anson Whipple Aldrich, born Sept. 16, 1821, is mentioned below. (2) Welcome, born in July, 1814, died Jan. 8, 1858. He married Eliza Pratt, of Providence, born in April, 1815, died March 14, 1891. Their children were: Charles H., born Feb. 22, 1837, died Jan. 5, 1894, married Amarantha Knight; Welcome, Jr., born Aug. 17, 1843, died March 2, 1881, married Ellen Adams; Abigail E. married William H. Vandeusen, of Worcester, Mass.; Emma, born Nov. 12, 1851, died April 15, 1878, married Oscar A. Jeffers. (3) Abigail died Feb. 15, 1834. (4) Alfred Kimball, born in 1818, married Desire L. Hawkins, March 15, 1840, and died June 1, 1855. (5) Andrew, born Feb. 22, 1819, died unmarried April 19, 1887.

(VII) ANSON WHIPPLE ALDRICH, born Sept. 16, 1821, son of Alfred and Betsey (or Elizabeth), married in Rehoboth, May 15, 1843, Hannah Baker Horton, daughter of George Leonard and Ann (Baker) Horton, of that town. He died Nov. 7, 1889. His children were: Albert Whipple, born Dec. 25, 1844, died in April, 1868; Thomas Walter, born in Providence, Oct. 25, 1846, married April 10, 1895, Clara Belle Harvey; Edward Kimball; and George Anson, born in Providence, died Jan. 1, 1868, aged nine years.

Anson W. Aldrich was born in Scituate and the circumstances and conditions of his childhood deprived him of the privileges incident to boyhood, as at the tender age of six years he was obliged to shift for himself, beginning his career as a lad about a cotton mill, and later becoming an operator. As time passed he decided upon a trade, and served, as was then the custom, a seven years' apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade. In these years of preparation though but a lad and youth he evinced that tenacity of purpose which subsequently characterized him through life, and which enabled him to attain success. After the expiration of his term of apprenticeship young Aldrich at once set up in business for himself, and soon acquired the reputation of a capable and honest blacksmith, and he continued in business for himself for a number of years, making it a great success. He then became a liveryman at the present site of the City Hall in Providence, where he kept one of the best-known and best-equipped stables in the city. Here he remained conducting an extensive business until after the time he conceived the plan of building the "Aldrich House," which was begun in the spring of 1859. Of this building during its construction he was his own superintendent. This structure was completed and opened Jan. 2, 1860, and was then regarded as a most commendable effort on the part of its builder to improve, benefit and beautify that section of the city surrounding its location. It was the largest hotel in Providence until the "Narragansett" was built. In the great fire of Feb. 16, 1888, the "Aldrich House" was destroyed, and at the time its builder and owner was in failing health, having contracted the disease of which he died. Notwithstanding his constant and at times terrible suffering, his shoulders were again put to the wheel and under his personal supervision within seven months from the date of the fire he caused to be erected the beautiful and substantial business block that now adorns the site of his early pride—the "Aldrich House."

Just in all of his dealings with his fellowmen and exact in all things Mr. Aldrich insisted that others should also be so to him. This quality in his nature at times stimulated opposition in his business relations and may have made him enemies, but his word was as good as his bond. He had within a warm heart, was generous to a fault and hospitable to the needy and suffering. He was a sincere friend and an open opponent. Educated in the school of adversity and experience, he looked with pride upon the efforts that were put forth by (at the time) Ex-Mayor Doyle toward perfecting the school system of Providence. Mr. Aldrich was a Democrat of the old school, and at one time a Dorrite and for the People's Constitution.

(VIII) EDWARD KIMBALL ALDRICH, born in Providence, Oct. 6, 1849, son of Anson W. and Hannah B., married May 15, 1878, Georgianna Sayles, born in Millbury, Mass., April 21, 1857, daughter of James Monroe and Ann Eliza (Marsh) Sayles, of Providence. They have one son, Edward K., Jr., born June 16, 1879, who graduated from Brown University with the Class of 1902, and is now an attorney-at-law.

REUBEN SCOTT ROUSE, a successful merchant and well-known business man of Providence in his day, was a native of Danielson, Conn., born Dec. 1, 1825, son of William Sweet and Lydia (Scott) Rouse, whose children were as follows: Louisa, who married a Mr. Hall; Susan, Mrs. Chaffee; William; James Burrell; Mary, Mrs. Goddard; Maria, who married Daniel Loomis, of Killingly, Conn.; and Reuben Scott.

Reuben Scott Rouse was an old-time business man in Olneyville, and in the more active years of his life, during the last quarter of the last century, was largely interested in numerous business enterprises in Providence. The early years of his life were spent in the vicinity of Thompson, Conn., and Webster, Mass., and he received an old-fashioned common-school education. In his youth he engaged in the trade of cotton spinner, operating the old-fashioned spinning mules. In 1849 he married Lucy Covell, daughter of Willis and Lydia (Perin) Covell, and three years later became the proprietor of a twine mill in Woodstock, Conn. This establishment he was operating very successfully when it was destroyed by fire, in 1852. In 1854 he came to Providence and established his home on Tobey street.

For about three years Mr. Rouse was engaged in the watch and jewelry business, traveling with a trunkful of goods, but this he abandoned in 1858, purchasing from William H. Wightman the grocery business located at the corner of Manton

EDWARD KIMBALL ALDRICH, born in Providence, Oct. 6, 1849, son of Anson W. and Maria B., married May 15, 1878, Georgianna Davis, born in Millbury, Mass., April 21, 1857, daughter of James Monroe and Ann Eliza (Marsh) Smith, of Providence. They have one son, Edward K., Jr., born June 16, 1879, who graduated from Brown University with the Class of 1902. Now an attorney-at-law.

REUBEN SCOTT ROUSE, a successful merchant and well-known business man of Providence, was a native of Danielson, Conn., born May 18, 1825, son of William Sweet and Lydia Rouse, whose children were as follows: Susan, who married a Mr. Hall; Susan, Mrs. Chas. B. Hall; James Burrell; Mary, Mrs. George A. Hall, who married Daniel Loomis, of Keeler, Conn.; and Reuben Scott.

Scott Rouse was an old-time business man of Greyville, and in the more active years of his life was interested in numerous business enterprises in Providence. The early years of his life were spent in the vicinity of Thompson, Conn., and Mass., and he received an old-fashioned school education. In his youth he entered the trade of cotton spinner, operating the old spinning mules. avenue and Delaine street, in Olneyville. There he remained for a score of years, meantime being joined in that enterprise in 1866 by William H. Covell, his brother-in-law. They disposed of the grocery business in 1870, but remained together in the real estate business until 1878. Mr. Rouse became the owner of the property at the corner of Manton avenue and Delaine street and largely increased his holdings of real estate in that vicinity, greatly improving the property he acquired. He became associated with the dry-goods firm of D. & M. Salsbury, in Butler Exchange, in about 1880, and was also interested in a number of other concerns at various times. Throughout his career Mr. Rouse proved himself a keen and able business man. He was also a great lover of horses, owning several fine animals, of which he was very proud, among them being one well-known to old horsemen as "Lady Balch." Due to a most unfortunate accident, some fifteen years before his death, from driving a spirited colt, Mr. Rouse sustained severe injuries to his head, from which he never fully recovered.

In his political affiliations Mr. Rouse connected himself with the Republican party, but although his interest was keen in the success of that party he never took an active part in the political affairs of the city, his time and attention being demanded by his large business interests. He was a constant attendant of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and gave that body his liberal support. Mr. Rouse was a man of domestic tastes and was very fond of his home, his spare time being invariably spent there. He was a self-made man, and one who had recognized in early youth that the road to success and to wealth and to all of the good things of life was the hard road, but he never hesitated in his choosing. Mr. Rouse was very greatly esteemed by all who knew him, and his death, which occurred March 15, 1900, Providence lost one of its most popular citizens and energetic business men. He left no children.

EARLE. (Providence family). (I) Ralph Earle was early of Portsmouth, R. I., and was admitted an inhabitant of the island of Aquidneck in 1638. He was treasurer in 1639 and was again elected to that position in 1651, was overseer of the poor in 1649, and elected a freeman in 1655. He married Joann, and their children were: Ralph, William, Mary, Martha and Sarah. The father of these children died in 1678.

(II) Ralph Earle (2), son of Ralph, married Dorcas, daughter of Francis and Lydia Sprague, and resided in Portsmouth, R. I., and Dartmouth, Mass. He was made a freeman in 1658, and his death occurred in 1716. His children were: John, Ralph, William and Joseph.

(III) John Earle, son of Ralph (2), married Mary, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Cook) Wilcox. Mr. Earle took the oath of fidelity, a freeman's oath, in Dartmouth, Mass., before March 24, 1686, but the following October removed to Tiverton. He died in 1728, his widow surviving him until 1735. Their children were: John, born Aug. 7, 1687; Daniel, Oct. 8, 1688; Benjamin, May 25, 1691; Mary, June 1, 1693; Rebecca, Dec. 17, 1695, and Elizabeth, Sept. 26, 1699.

(IV) Benjamin Earle, son of John, born May 25, 1691, married May 28, 1726, Rebecca, born Jan. 8, 1697, daughter of Robert and Sarah Westgate, of Warwick, R. I. Mr. Earle was a farmer, and resided in Warwick, and died June 15, 1770. His widow passed away Nov. 17, 1779. Their children were: William, born Feb. 12, 1727; John, Jan. 27, 1729; Sarah, Feb. 8, 1731; and Benjamin, Nov. 25, 1733.

(V) William Earle, son of Benjamin, born Feb. 12, 1727, married Dec. 10, 1752, Mary, born Jan. 21, 1733, daughter of George Brown, of Dover, England, and Providence, R. I., and they resided in Providence. Mr. Earle died Dec. 30, 1804, and his wife passed away Aug. 20, 1800. Their children were: Mary, born Oct. 11, 1753; John, Jan. 27, 1756; William, Feb. 17, 1758; Benjamin, June 30, 1760; George, Dec. 27, 1762; Sarah, March 11, 1767; Oliver, June 8, 1770; and Sarah, July 27, 1772.

(VI) William Earle (2), son of William, born Feb. 17, 1758, in Providence, married ——— Tillinghast, and they were residents of Providence. Their children were: John; William; Sarah, born in 1799; George; Martha; Fannie, and Maria.

(VII) William Earle (3), son of William (2), born in Providence, R. I., married in 1804, Abby Greene, daughter of Benjamin G. and Mary (Dexter) Greene, of Providence, where she was born. Their children were: Benjamin, born March 9, 1809; George B., born Jan. 28, 1811; and Martha T., born in 1813, who married (first) a Mr. Tillinghast and (second) William Simmons.

(VIII) George Brown Earle, son of William (3), was with his brother Benjamin one of the founders of the express business in New England. He was born in Providence, R. I., Jan. 28, 1811. At an early age he was employed on the steam propeller from Providence to New York, and afterward with his brother engaged in the business of a ship chandler in Providence. He also acted as bank messenger between Boston and Providence for the Merchants' Bank of the latter city and the Suffolk Bank of Boston. The trips between Providence and Boston were made by stage until the opening of the railroad between those two cities in 1835. Mr. Earle and his brother performed any errands that were intrusted to them and gave special attention to the delivery of packages, thus laying the foundation for that method of transportation now carried on so extensively by the various express companies. The business proving so profitable, Mr. Earle and his brother sold their store in Providence, and gave their entire attention to this new enterprise, and on the death of his brother George B. Earle continued the business alone until, with Freeman M. Cobb, William B. Lawton and others, he organized the Earle Express Company, which was succeeded by the Merchants' Union Express Company, and finally William H. Earle, son of George B., formed a co-partnership with Henry Prew, March 1, 1868, and established the Earle & Prew Express, now doing an extensive business. Mr. Earle's sons, John D. and George W., also became partners in the business, later. Mr. Earle was a director of the old National Bank, and was otherwise identified with the business interests of Providence. He was a member of the common council from 1866 to 1868, and an alderman from the latter year until 1875. He was a member of the Marine Society of Providence, a Freemason, and a Knight Templar. He was a member of the Central Congregational Church for about forty years.

Mr. Earle married June 14, 1836, Cornelia Arnold Rhodes, daughter of Peter and Nancy Rhodes, and they had these children: John D. married Emily Wilbur, and had children—Emily W. and John D., Jr.; George W. married Belle S. White; William H. was born July 14, 1842; Charles R. married Susan C. Cook, and has children—Cortland C., Mortimer and Cornelia (they live at Northwood Narrows, N. H.); Cornelia A., born Oct. 26, 1847, is deceased; Hope A. was born Sept. 14, 1849; Benjamin D. was born Sept. 9, 1851. The father of these children died July 10, 1878.

(IX) WILLIAM HARRISON EARLE, son of George B. and Cornelia A. (Rhodes) Earle, was born in Providence July 14, 1842. He received his education in the public schools of his native place, after leaving which he became associated with his father, his uncle Benjamin, and later his two brothers, in the express business. Later this business was sold to the Adams Express Company, and Mr. George B. Earle retired from active business life. Mr. William H. Earle then became a messenger in the Adams Express Company, and on March 1, 1868, with another employe of that company, Henry Prew, Mr. Earle effected a partnership, and continued in the express business for the remainder of his active life, under the firm name of the Earle & Prew Express. He had been engaged in the business since the early sixties, but retired from the firm in 1893. This latter firm, it will be seen, was not an inheritance of his father's, but an entirely new business organized and developed by Messrs. Earle and Prew, both hard workers and keen business men, partners who were needed to make a business in the face of such competition as they were compelled to meet. Mr. Earle was at one time a director in the Standard Button Company. In political affairs he was a Republican, but although very prominent in the business circles of the city never held public office or engaged in politics. He was known among his friends as a man of genial nature and general readiness to aid in an unostentatious way those who applied to him for relief. He was a member of What Cheer Lodge of Masons, the Pomham Club, and the Providence Whist Club. Mr. Earle died June 14, 1901.

William H. Earle was married May 30, 1864, to Cecilia Ann Baker, who was born Nov. 17, 1846, daughter of Elijah C. and Clymentiah Baker, of Providence, and died March 28, 1881. Five children were born to this union: George B., born July 28, 1866, who died Nov. 19, 1882; Ralph B., born Nov. 12, 1867; M. Louise, born Oct. 17, 1869; William H., Jr., born March 20, 1871, who is with the Earle & Prew Express; and Henry A., born Dec. 2, 1875, who married Caroline A. Winter, and has one son, Kenneth H., born April 30, 1903.

(X) RALPH B. EARLE after leaving school was employed in his father's office, and when twenty-two years of age became connected with the Rhode Island National Bank. When that was absorbed by the United National he became teller of the latter institution, in which position he continued until Jan. 1, 1906, when he severed his connection with the bank. He is treasurer of the Standard Carburetor Company. A Republican in politics Mr. Earle was, in 1906, elected a member of the common council from the First ward and in 1907 was re-elected to that body.

JAMES A. PERRY, manager of the well-known firm of D. Goff & Sons, Pawtucket, is one of the well-known citizens of that place. He was born in Rehoboth, Mass., June 26, 1854, and is a descendant of one of the most distinguished families of New England.

Anthony Perry is of record in Rehoboth. He and his wife had children as follows: Samuel, born Dec. 16, 1648; Elizabeth, Oct. 25, 1650; Jahaziel, Oct. 18, 1652; Mary, Dec. 9, 1654; Mehittabell, Sept. 23, 1657; and Nathaniel, Oct. 8, 1660.

Ezra Perry, son of Daniel, born in Rehoboth May 22, 1741, married in 1762, Jemima Titus. Their children were: Mary, born Aug. 22, 1763; Jemima, Nov. 29, 1764; Ezra, Jan. 15, 1767; Abel, May 20, 1770; Molly, April 11, 1772; Esther, Feb. 21, 1774; Lydia, June 24, 1776; Oliver, Aug. 13, 1779; Elias, May 18, 1781; and Thursia, July 11, 1783.

Ezra Perry, son of Ezra, born Jan. 15, 1767, married Dec. 10, 1786, Betsy Bliss. They became the parents of the following children: Ezra, born April 11, 1788; Betsey, June 26, 1790; Hezekiah, Jan. 29, 1793; Sarah, March 16, 1795; James, June 15, 1798; Otis Thomas, Oct. 22, 1800; Daniel Bliss, Dec. 17, 1802; Mima, Jan. 31, 1805; Otis, Feb. 17, 1807; Nancy Bliss, Aug. 31, 1809; and William, Dec. 22, 1811.

James Perry, son of Ezra and Betsy, born in Rehoboth June 15, 1798, married in August, 1826, Rosella Carpenter, who was born Jan. 30, 1807, daughter of Peter and Nancy Carpenter. To this union were born two children, namely: James Henry, born June 16, 1827; and Rosella Adelia, Sept. 28, 1829.

James Henry Perry, son of James, born June 16, 1827, married Elizabeth Bullock Goff, the ceremony being performed at Providence, R. I., Jan. 6, 1850, by the Rev. Mr. Jameson. Mrs. Perry was born June 18, 1828, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth (Lee) Goff. To bless this marriage came children as follows: Emma E., born June 7, 1852; James A., June 26, 1854; one that died in infancy, Aug. 23, 1856; Harriet A., Aug. 26, 1858; Frederick Henry, Sept. 8, 1861; and Walter Carpenter, Feb. 21, 1875.

James A. Perry, son of James Henry, attended the public schools of Rehoboth, and then took a course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College in Providence. After leaving school he became a bookkeeper in the grocery house of Perry & Hardy, of Providence, where he remained three years, in 1879 entering the employ of D. Goff & Sons, as a clerk. He has continued with this house for the past twenty-eight years, during which period he has worked himself up to the responsible position of manager for that well-known firm, having served as such for the past eight years. In his political principles Mr. Perry is a Republican of the staunchest kind, but he is not a politician in any sense. He is very domestic in his tastes and temperate in his habits, and is devoted to his home and family.

On Jan. 29, 1889, Mr. Perry was married, in Pawtucket, to Miss Annie F. Hay, daughter of James H. Hay, mentioned below, and to this union have come four children: James Wheaton, born Oct. 27, 1889, at present a student in the Moses Brown school, Providence; Gladys Elizabeth, born March 22, 1891; Ruth Agnes, born July 25, 1894; and Roger Ashton, born Oct. 4, 1905.

JAMES H. HAY (deceased), Pawtucket. In the death of the late James H. Hay, citizen, soldier and manufacturer, senior member of the firm of James H. Hay & Co., which occurred at Pawtucket, this State, Dec. 22, 1898, suddenly of apoplexy, that community lost a skilled machinist, an honorable business man and upright citizen, one of the substantial men of his adopted city who in every respect was self-made, having risen through the force of his make-up from a poor boy to a man of affairs, who for some years had been at the head of one of Pawtucket's busy industries.

Born Feb. 9, 1840, in the city of Glasgow, Scotland, Mr. Hay was the son of David and Ann (Shields) Hay, and when but two years of age was brought to Providence by his parents who had previously come to America. There the family remained until 1850, then moved to Pawtucket, where James H. ever afterward resided and achieved success in the business life of that city. His educational privileges were limited to a few years' attendance at the public schools of Providence and Pawtucket. Leaving school at an early age he found employment in one of the cotton mills of that locality, from which in 1860 he entered the service of the late William H. Haskell, who subsequently became the head of the William H. Haskell Company. On the breaking out of the Civil war, in 1861, he was one of the many young men who so willingly went to the front in defense of their country, enlisting as a private soldier in May, 1861, in Company F, 2d Rhode Island Volunteers, in which he served with an honorable war record until in December, 1862. In the year following, 1863, he became an employee of the Providence Tool Company, on work for the government. Later he was in the employ of Messrs. Fales & Jenks, whom he served from 1865 to 1867. His next employment was with Mr. N. P. Hicks, who was manufacturing ring travelers in the Old Slater Mill, whose service he entered in 1867. It was with this gentleman in whose employ he was from 1867 to 1893 that he became so well equipped for carrying on that line of business on his own account, and in which he gradually became so proficient and successful. Beginning business in 1893 for himself, and under the name of James H. Hay & Co., Mr. Hay continued in the business of manufacturing ring travelers on until the sudden close of his career, the concern at the time of his death making United States standard ring travelers, its location being on Leather avenue.

On August 26, 1865, Mr. Hay was married to Miss Mary A. Burton, of Blackburn, England. Seven children blessed this marriage, namely: Annie F., now Mrs. James A. Perry; Mary, wife of Mr. Fred H. Chatterton; James E.; Margaret, now Mrs. Herbert N. Swift; Maude G.; Mabel L.; and John Burton.

The funeral of Mr. Hay occurred on Sunday afternoon following his death, at his late residence on Main street, Pawtucket, and was attended by a large assembly of friends and relatives, including many of the prominent business men, who had been associated with Mr. Hay in his lifetime. The members of the Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 8, and Manchester Encampment, No. 4, I. O. O. F., of which order Mr. Hay was for many years a member, attended in a body, nearly 100 members in command of Noble Grand Frederick Ratcliffe, escorting the procession. There was also a delegation representing Company F, 2d Rhode Island Regiment, with which command Mr. Hay went to the front during the Civil war. The officiating clergymen were the Reverends D. W. Faunce, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, and Edward L. Houghton, pastor of the High street Universalist Church, the sermon being delivered by the latter. The interment was in Oak Grove Cemetery, and the bearers were: Luther A. Eldridge, Henry Morris and George D. Chappell, representing the lodge, and Timothy C. Curran, Tisdale C. Day and Alexander Kinney, representing the encampment.

JOHN PECK CASE, a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and one of the oldest and most highly esteemed business men of the town of South Kingstown, is a worthy descendant of one of the oldest families of Rhode Island.

(I) At the General Court of Elections, held in Providence May 22, 1655, Mr. Roger Williams, Moderator, the name of William Case appears among others as being a freeman of the Colony. His name also appears in the list of freemen of Newport, 1655. [Bartlett's Rhode Island Colonial Records, Vol. I, folios 302-303.]

(II) Joseph Case, son of William, and his wife, Hannah, are recorded in the Kingstown records—1696-1700—as having children, to-wit: Joseph, born July 16, 1678; William, born May 27, 1681; Mary, born Dec. 2, 1682; Hannah, born July 6, 1687; Margaret, born Aug. 20, 1690; John, born Nov. 20, 1692; and Emanuel, born Nov. 2, 1699. Joseph Case lived to a ripe old age, dying in 1738. His wife, Hannah, died in 1712.

(III) Emanuel Case was born Nov. 2, 1699.

(IV) Emanuel Case, born in 1739, married Oct. 4, 1761, Ann H. Rathbone, who died March 9, 1778.

(V) Capt. John B. Case, born Dec. 18, 1774, died in 1828. He was a sea captain in early life and later kept a store on Kingston Hill, and was an able financier, acquiring the ownership of a large tract of land. Captain Case first married, March 17, 1799, Celinda Bullock, of Wickford, and they had two children: Eliza (who married John H. Clarke) and William Helme. By his second marriage, to Harriet Holloway, there were two daughters: Lydia, who married Capt. William Holla-ters: way and had a son Christopher; and Annie, who married Dr. William H. Shaw, of Wickford, and had two children, Elizabeth Brenton Shaw and John P. Case Shaw.

(VI) William Helme Case was born on Kingston Hill, where he spent his school days. He learned the cabinetmakers' trade with his uncle, Jabez Bullock, in Wickford, and located at Kingston. He married Sept. 10, 1829, Eliza Mumford, daughter of Nathaniel and Mercy (Helme) Mumford. She was born in South Kingstown, and they both died on Kingston Hill, and were buried in the Case burying ground in Kingstown. She was an Episcopalian. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a captain of militia. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Case were as follows: John Peck, born Jan. 5, 1831, is mentioned below. James and Nathaniel were twins; the former died while serving in the War of the Rebellion, and was buried in Arlington cemetery, Washington, D. C., and the latter, of the 3d R. I. Heavy Artillery, served three years and then re-enlisted and was killed the first night on duty of his second term, by a sharpshooter, at Pulaski. Mary died in infancy.

(VII) John Peck Case was born in the Helme house on Kingston Hill, Jan. 5, 1831, and there lived until his fifteenth year, when, after attending the academy kept by Mr. Comstock and Mr. Noyes, he went to Providence to learn the printer's trade, which he followed for three years. Because of ill health he went to work on a farm in Franklin, Conn., for four years, and then took a position in the wholesale and retail grocery house of Isaac Johnson, in Norwich, Conn., where he remained a period of seven years. In April, 1861, he left the store and enlisted in Company B, 2d Conn. Vol. Inf., for three months, and received his baptism of fire at the first battle of Bull Run. Subsequently he re-enlisted, in Company B, 26th Conn. Vol. Inf., for nine months service and was with that regiment in the battle of Port Hudson. On Aug. 17, 1863, he was mustered out of the service at Norwich, Conn. For a time he worked in the store and then returned to Franklin. After spending some time on the farm, in 1869 he returned to Kingston, and in 1871 engaged in the undertaking and marble business in the Armstrong building in Wakefield, in 1872 locating in the Columbia building, where he was afterward burned out. He then located in his present place, on Prospect street, where he continued in business until Feb. 1, 1904, when he retired.

In national politics Mr. Case has been a Whig and Republican. He is a member of Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., of which he is past commander; and of Hope Lodge, No. 25, A. F. & A. M., of which he was master in 1893 and 1894. For thirty years he has been a member of the Baptist Church at Wakefield. He has served as health officer of South Kingstown.

John P. Case

Mr. Case married (first) in Franklin, Conn., Julia A. Mason, who died the same year. Subsequently he married (second) Mary (Read) Slocum, daughter of Jason Read, and widow of James Harrison Slocum. They had two children: Frank, who died aged seventeen years; and Annie, who died when twenty-one years old. Mr. Case's third marriage was to Annie E. (Nichols) Porter, daughter of Joseph Taylor Nichols.

Annie E. (Nichols-Porter) Case, wife of John P. Case, was born July 23, 1850, and married (first) May 26, 1869, Charles A. Porter, of Westerly, R. I., by whom she had children: James Edward, a manufacturing chemist of Syracuse, N. Y.; Harriet Nichols, assistant paymaster of the International Pump Company, Harrison, N. J.; and Mariette, who was married Oct. 28, 1904, to William J. Henry, chief engineer of the Sea View Railroad Company, Wickford, Rhode Island.

Joseph Taylor Nichols, the father of Mrs. Case, was born March 27, 1822, and married Jan. 11, 1849, Marietta Hazard, daughter of Bradwin and Teresa (Clark) Hazard. Joseph Taylor Nichols was blind for many years. When a young man he followed the occupation of blacksmith, and was the owner of a fine farm on Tower Hill.

John Nichols, the grandfather of Mrs. Case, was born May 13, 1777, and died Jan. 27, 1855. He married Jan. 27, 1803, Ann Taylor, who was born Feb. 22, 1782, and died Dec. 10, 1859, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Card) Taylor. [For Revolutionary service see Taylor records elsewhere.] Their children were as follows: Benjamin, born May 10, 1804, married Mary Hutt, and died Sept. 18, 1843; Mary R., born Aug. 8, 1806, married William Brown, and died July 11, 1831; John was born March 24, 1810; William T., born May 28, 1813, married (first) Elizabeth Watson and (second) Mary Watson; Isaac, born Oct. 19, 1815, married Elizabeth Bonn; Phoebe A., born Jan. 11, 1819, married Oliver Watson, and died Nov. 30, 1904; Joseph Taylor has been mentioned; Elizabeth, born June 19, 1824, married William Watson in March, 1858.

John Nichols, great-grandfather of Mrs. Case, married Phebe Reynolds, and had John, who married Ann (Nancy) Taylor.

Andrew Nichols, great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Case, was born in Ireland, emigrated to America, and settled in South Kingstown. He married Rachel Putell, of French birth, and they had children: Andrew, who married Ann Taylor; John, who married Phebe Reynolds; Martha, married to Daniel Dyer; Eunice, who married James Corydon, and Elizabeth.

KNOWLES. Three generations of the Knowles family—Horace Browning Knowles, Ellmer F. Knowles and Horace E. Knowles, father, son and grandson—have been prominent as undertakers and funeral directors, and by the force of pleasing yet sympathetic and dignified personality have done much for the profession they have followed. In no other calling is success so largely dependent upon personal characteristics. In bearing, in speech and in appearance the funeral director must be a gentleman, and more than that he must be a man of sympathetic heart, of tact, and of deep and abiding reverence for the "things not known of man."

The American progenitor of the Knowles family was of English origin, and the name has been of record in Rhode Island since 1635. Henry Knowles emigrated from London, England, April 15, 1635, and settled at Portsmouth, Rhode Island, where he was a freeholder in 1644. He removed to Warwick in 1645, and in that town married a daughter of Robert Potter. Full genealogical record of the family may be found elsewhere in this work.

HORACE BROWNING KNOWLES, son of John and Hannah Knowles, was born in Hopkinton, R. I., Jan. 27, 1824, and died May 28, 1902, in Providence. His education was obtained in the district school in his native town, where in 1842 he began his apprenticeship at the cabinet-maker's trade. In 1854 he took charge of the undertaking department of the firm of Cleveland Brothers, in Providence, and in 1867 formed a partnership with Mr. Boyce, to engage in the business on his own account. This was dissolved in 1874, but Mr. Knowles continued in the business himself up to the time of his death. He was the first to introduce embalming in Providence, and no other man was ever so active in bringing about the progressive reforms in his profession. He advocated the education and enlightenment of those who entered upon the work, and worked tirelessly for the advance of modern practices. In 1880 he was made the first president of the New England (now merged into the Massachusetts) Undertakers' Association, the second organization of the kind in the world, and it was conceded by all that he was one of the most efficient and most intelligent men in the profession in the whole country. He was a public-spirited citizen, and ever ready to lend his influence to aid in the advancement of his town or State. He was modest without timidity, generous without extravagance, brave without rashness, grave without sternness. He was firm in his judgment and bold in achievement—one "who fortune's buffets and rewards has ta'en with equal thanks."

ELLMER F. KNOWLES, son and successor of Horace Browning Knowles, occupies a conspicuous place in the foremost ranks of the National Undertakers. He received a liberal education in the schools of Providence, and was graduated from Scholfield's Commercial College. After leaving school he entered his father's establishment, subsequently taking a scientific course of studies at the United States College of Embalming, and graduating therefrom. On his return he again entered his father's office, and assumed the duties of a funeral director. He is a member of a score or more of social, military, business or fraternal organizations, among which may be mentioned Nestell Lodge, No. 37, A. F. & A. M.; Providence Royal Arch Chapter, No. 1; Providence Council, No. 1, R. & S. M.; Calvary Commandery, No. 13, K. T.; Rhode Island Consistory; Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Swarts Lodge, No. 18, I. O. O. F.; and Moshassuck Encampment, No. 2; First Light Infantry Veterans' Association (of which he was for twelve years an active member). He seldom indulges in club life, preferring the charm of the deep woods or the quietude of an hour or so in his launch on Highland Lake, bordering his summer home at Bridgton, Maine. Mr. Knowles has never aspired to political honors, but has always taken a lively interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, State or nation.

Mr. Knowles married Ella Frances Evans, daughter of Charles Evans, a Nantucket whaler, and to this union have been born two children: Alice Ella, born July 21, 1875, now the wife of Harold F. Sanderson, of Providence; and Horace Ellmer.

HORACE ELLMER KNOWLES, of the third generation of this interesting family engaged in the same line of business, was born in Providence Oct. 6, 1878. His education was received in the public schools, and his record for scholarship was always remarkably high. He received the Anthony Medal at the Thayer street school. From the schoolroom he stepped direct into his father's office, where he soon showed remarkable ability for one of his years, and under the guidance of his father and grandfather his progress was indeed rapid. At an early age he had acquired an intimate knowledge of the essential details of the work, and he is now the junior member of the firm. Business, however, even of such magnitude has not monopolized his attention, but he has traveled much, and is exceedingly fond of out-door amusements and of social life. He is a member of Corinthian Lodge, No. 27, A. F. & A. M.; Providence Royal Arch Chapter, No. 1; Providence Council, No. 1, R. & S. M.; Calvary Commandery, No. 13, K. T.; Rhode Island Consistory; Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; the Central Club, and the West Side Club.

Mr. Knowles was married Jan. 22, 1908, to Ann Martin Parker, of Providence.

WELCH (Warren-Providence family). For an hundred and more years the towns of Bristol, Warren, Barrington and the City of Providence have been in turn the home of a branch of the old Boston (Mass.) family of Welches, in which communities the name has long stood as a synonym of a true and useful type of manhood. Reference is especially made to the late Deacon and Hon. Stillman Welch, long active in the religious life of Barrington and Warren, who used his means liberally for the promotion of good, and a public official of high standing; and to his son, the late George Welch, long one among the leading and successful business men of Providence, where several of his children now reside, one of whom, Dr. Stephen A. Welch, is worthily representing his family as a physician and surgeon.

This Warren-Providence Welch family is a branch of the Boston family bearing the name, where it has been a continuous family since the early Colonial period.

Among the early residents of Charlestown, there were three bearing the surname of Welch, all having the Christian name of Thomas. Sergeant Thomas Welch was admitted to the Church April 12, 1650, and was admitted a freeman the next month. He married Elizabeth Upham, who was admitted to the Church Aug. 9, 1656, and who died Jan. 12, 1705-06, aged seventy-four years (record). Issue: John, born Sept. 16, 1651; Deborah, who married Jonathan Caine, 1674; Thomas, born July 7, 1655; John, born July 8, 1657; John, born Sept. 26, 1658, and died Jan. 23, 1659; Jonathan, baptized Aug. 9, 1659; Jonathan, baptized Aug. 4, 1662, and died April 22, 1663; Dorcas, born Sept. 8, 1663, who married (first) Anthony Gretian, and (second) William Eagleton; Nathaniel, born Sept. 9, 1665, who graduated at Harvard College 1687, and died at Enfield July 10, 1689; Jonathan, born Sept. 15 (16), 1666; Elkanah, born Jan. 5 (19, 1667-68; Jonathan, born Dec. 23 (25), 1670; Ebenezer, born April 9 (14), 1672, who had a seat in the meeting-house (liberty to build) 1671.

Another Thomas Welch, of Charlestown, as his gravestone tells, died April 10, 1701, aged seventy-nine, and by the same testimony we may believe another Thomas there died June 15, 1703, aged fifty years.

Thomas Welch of the old Boston stock, himself a resident there and married to Lovica Hastings, was the ancestor of the Warren-Providence Welch family to which this article is devoted. Mr. Welch was a stern man of the old school and trained his five sons with a somewhat rigorous hand, requiring their services upon his lands until the age of twenty-one or otherwise demanding a suitable compensation.

DEACON STILLMAN WELCH, son of Thomas and Lovica (Hastings) Welch, born on Oct. 23, 1796, in Bolton, Mass., married in 1825, in Warren, R. I., Betsey Haile, who was born there, daughter of Barnard Haile, of that town and of Colonial ancestry.

Stillman Welch

Stephen A. Welch

George Welch

Deacon Stillman Welch passed his youth upon the farm of his father, alternating between attendance in the neighborhood school in winter and work upon the farm in season. His father being a rigid disciplinarian young Stillman learned what it was to be active and busy, and as well systematic and methodical, receiving such training as is the making of sturdy manhood and womanhood. Reared in such a school he developed a good physique, and such character and moral courage as actuated his after life. Six months before reaching his majority he arranged with his father for his time, and left the parental roof to begin his career. He first learned a trade, and there followed employment in the forests of the South and in voyaging to and from the West Indies. Frugal, industrious and saving he returned to the town of Warren, R. I., where he settled as a mechanic, in time becoming a master mechanic, and it was at about this period he was there married. With the passing of the years he gradually accumulated property, and, what was more important, gained in wealth of soul and lofty purpose, securing the confidence of the community, and as well its esteem and respect. From 1844 to 1851 he was a resident and citizen of the town of Barrington.

Deacon Welch was reared a strict Presbyterian, but about the time of his marriage his religious convictions led him to unite with the Baptist Church, and such was his religious zeal and activity that he became a leader in the local church, and one of the most earnest advocates of the principles of the Baptist denomination of his section. A man of strong conceptions, with him principle was never sacrificed to policy either religiously or politically. His business prosperity began, perhaps, when in middle life, and in this he was greatly blessed as the years passed by, and most well, too, did he use these temporal blessings. His heart was large, abounding in sympathy and love for his fellow men, but his love of acquisition, always strong, could not control him, and his means were constantly used to further good ends. He gave liberally to churches, to educational institutions, and often to worthy individuals. He seemingly bestowed upon all with a princely hand, almost regardless as to the sum remaining; the extent of these benefactions, which marked the last twenty years of his life, cannot really be estimated.

As a citizen of Barrington Deacon Welch was frequently called to serve his fellow townsmen in public positions of honor, trust and responsibility, and in them all he ever acquitted himself with honor and credit to himself and his community. He entered into public affairs with that enthusiasm and spirit that was characteristic of the man. From 1840 to 1850 he was a member of the Barrington Town Council. In 1847 and 1848 he represented Barrington in the General Assembly of Rhode Island.

Deacon Welch had a commanding personality. He stood 6 feet, 2 inches, and his moral strength was in keeping with his stature, and it was often remarked that in point of moral strength and intellectual acumen he was the peer in service to God and mankind of many of much more liberal education and culture. He was possessed of a genial nature, was well read and possessed a fund of knowledge that made him most companionable. The last decade of his life was passed in Providence, where he died full of years and usefulness, Dec. 19, 1878. Mrs. Welch died in May, 1876.

To Deacon Stillman Welch and his wife, Betsey (Haile) Welch, were born children as follows: George, James, Charles, Mary L., Elizabeth B. (who died March 10, 1907) and John.

GEORGE WELCH, son of Stillman and Betsey (Haile) Welch, born Jan. 8, 1826, in Bristol Neck, now the town of Warren, R. I., married Lydia A. J. Gladding, daughter of George W. Gladding, and sister of the late Benjamin H. Gladding, respectively founder and successor of the extensive dry goods business of the B. H. Gladding Company.

Mr. Welch was reared on the farm of his father, receiving the customary education given in his day to the sons of the general farmer, which was attendance in the neighborhood schools at such periods when not needed in the work of the farm. When sixteen years of age, in 1842, young Welch came to Providence and became a clerk in the grocery store of his uncle George Haile, which was located on what was then designated as "Cheap Side," that part of Main street between Market Square and Steeple street. After four years of business experience and training under Mr. Haile and after serving as clerk with Mr. Lorenzo Dow Anthony for some time, he was taken in as a partner by the latter, their business being in the line of small wares, and their location also being on "Cheap Side." Here they remained until about 1850, until the building by the grandfather of Governor Elisha Dyer of the block on Westminster street next east of the Brownell building, when they removed to it, where they carried on for many years quite an extensive and successful business, as both were good business men, careful and conservative. Along in 1879 after long years of prosperity, Mr. Welch desiring to retire from active business the firm as a means of closing up their business affairs went into liquidation, and thereafter Mr. Welch devoted his time to looking after his investments and private affairs, he holding interests in a number of corporations.

Through life Mr. Welch never lost his love for and interest in the home of his boyhood, its associations ever remaining dear to him, and he maintained a summer home there. Many of his financial interests were in Warren. For perhaps twenty and more years he was a director of the First National Bank, at Warren, and for several years was the bank's chief executive officer. He was also a director in the Warren Institution for Savings, and a director in the Warren Manufacturing Company. He was a member of the Veteran Historical Association, and did much to further its progress, ever taking interest in local historical matters.

As a business man and citizen Mr. Welch was held in high regard by all who knew him. He was a man of character—one of the highest integrity and honor in all business transactions, whose word was considered as good as his bond. He was of genial, social disposition and had a large circle of acquaintances and friends. His church connections were with the Central Congregational Church at Providence.

In the late years of his life Mr. Welch made his home with his son, Dr. Stephen A. Welch, of Providence, and here he died Jan. 7, 1904. One other child, a daughter, Emma G. Welch, survives at the old homestead at Warren, Rhode Island.

STEPHEN A. WELCH, M. D., son of George and Lydia A. J. (Gladding) Welch, was born in Providence, R. I., Dec. 16, 1857. His early education was secured in the public schools and the high school of his native city, he being graduated from the latter in 1857. He entered Brown University in the same year, and pursued a full classical course, graduating from that institution in 1879 (of this class he has been class secretary for about fifteen years). He subsequently became a student at the Harvard Medical School, graduating therefrom in 1884, and from the Boston City Hospital, receiving a degree of M. D. from each. He began his professional career in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he remained until 1885, when he removed to Providence, where he has since remained, engaged in a large and successful practice. Dr. Welch is a member of numerous medical societies, and has held various positions in the Rhode Island Hospital. He is a member, and was for the years 1887-90 secretary, of the Providence Medical Association, and its president in 1902; member and secretary (1902 to date) of the Rhode Island Medical Society; member of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association, and of the Boston City Hospital Club; member of the Clinical Club of Providence, of the American Medical Association, and of the American Academy of Medicine. From 1885 to 1902 he was physician to out-patients of the Rhode Island Hospital, and in 1902-03 and '04 Visiting Physician to the same institution and has been consulting physician since that time. He belongs to the Congregational Church, and to the Congregational Club. Dr. Welch is a thorough physician and during his whole medical career has concentrated his whole thought and energy along lines which make for efficiency in the profession. On April 3, 1895, he married Hattie Stannard Townsend, born March 19, 1868, daughter of Charles M. Townsend, of Lansingburg (now Troy), N. Y. Four children have blessed this union: Grace, born May 16, 1896, died Dec. 29, 1900; George Townsend, born Sept. 29, 1897; Philip Albro, born May 3, 1902; and Ruth Harriet, born Oct. 10, 1903.

SAMUEL L. PECK (Warren family). The Pecks are an ancient New England family, prominent and influential through the Colonial period and as well through the history of a number of the Commonwealths which have come out of the older Colonies. They, too, have been a numerous family. Here in Rhode Island and in that part of Massachusetts nearby—the town of Rehoboth—they have been a continuous family for two hundred and fifty and more years, and for two hundred and more years the Bristol (R. I.) branch of that stock have been among the large land holders and wealthy men of their town.

From Joseph Peck, the American ancestor of this branch of the New England Pecks, the children of the late James Monroe Peck, of Warren—among whom is the present Hon. Samuel Luther Peck, of that town, former merchant of Providence, a representative in the State Assembly from Warren, former vice-president of the Hope National Bank, and former and last president of the Warren Institution for Savings—are descendants in the eighth generation, their lineage being through Capt. Nicholas, Jonathan, Deacon Thomas, Jonathan (2), Sylvanus and James Monroe Peck. These generations in detail and in the order given follow.

(I) Joseph Peck, baptized in Beccles, County of Suffolk, England, April 30, 1587, a son of Robert and a descendant in the twenty-first generation from John Peck, of Belton, Yorkshire, England, settled in Hingham, County of Norfolk, England. He married (first) May 31, 1617, Rebecca Clark. His children were: Anna, baptized March 12, 1618; Rebecca, May 25, 1620; Joseph, Aug. 23, 1623; John, about 1626; Nicholas, April 9, 1630 (all baptized in Hingham, England); Samuel, baptized in Hingham, Mass., Feb. 3, 1638-39; Nathaniel, Oct. 31, 1641; and Israel, March 4, 1644. The first Mrs. Peck died in October, 1637, and Mr. Peck remarried. He died on Seekonk Plain Dec. 23, 1663.

(II) Captain Nicholas Peck, baptized in Hingham, England, April 9, 1630, came to New England in 1638. He married (first) Mary Winchester, who died Nov. 6, 1657, and his second wife, Rebeccah, died Nov. 2, 1704. He died May 27, 1710. His children were: Joseph, born Oct. 27, 1650; John, Aug. 8, 1660; Hezekiah, April 1, 1662; Mary, Sept. 15, 1664; Jonathan, Nov. 5, 1666; Nicholas, June 6, 1669; and Elisha, April 11, 1673.

(III) Jonathan Peck, born Nov. 5, 1666, settled upon Peck's Hill. He married Elizabeth Throop. Their children were: Jonathan, born

Samuel Luther Peck

Sept. 12, 1698; Nicholas, Nov. 11, 1700; William, in November, 1702; Isaac, in 1703; Elizabeth, in 1707; and Thomas, in 1711.

(IV) Deacon Thomas Peck, born in 1711, married Mary Kinsley, only daughter of Jonathan Kinsley, of Rehoboth, Mass., and settled in Swansea, Mass. Mr. Peck died Feb. 9, 1770, and Mrs. Peck passed away May 27, 1804, in her ninety-second year. She was a very noted and celebrated midwife, to which profession she devoted many years. Her practice was very extensive. Their children were: Jonathan, born Jan. 17, 1734; Peleg, born March 6, 1736; Mary, born Oct. 20, 1738; Thomas, born March 21, 1740-41; Aaron, born Jan. 20, 1743-44; Ambrose, born Nov. 17, 1747; and Elizabeth.

(V) Jonathan Peck, born Jan. 17, 1734, married Feb. 22, 1759, Ruth Wheeler, and resided in the south part of Rehoboth, Mass., where he kept a public house for many years. Their children were: Jonathan, born Sept. 19, 1759; Rufus, born Nov. 11, 1761; Candice, born March 25, 1764; Gideon, born Aug. 2, 1766; Ambrose, born Jan. 31, 1769; Philip, born Oct. 3, 1771; Ruth, born Dec. 10, 1776 (died Nov. 3, 1778); Noah, born April 27, 1774 (and at sea); Ruth (2), born Sept. 15, 1778; William, born Dec. 31, 1780; and Sylvanus, born April 21, 1784.

(VI) Sylvanus Peck, born April 21, 1784, married Charlotte Wright, daughter of Joseph Wright, and resided not far from what was called Orleans Factory, in the town of Rehoboth, Mass. Mr. Peck died Nov. 13, 1853, in his seventieth year and Mrs. Peck died July 24, 1878, in the ninety-first year of her age. Their children were: Albert G., born Oct. 29, 1805; Charlotte W., born March 15, 1808; Cyrus, born Nov. 24, 1809; Ruth W., born Feb. 25, 1815; James Monroe, born July 11, 1818; Sylvanus L., born March 18, 1822; and Frances A., born in September, 1832.

(VII) James Monroe Peck, born July 11, 1818, married in November, 1841, Elizabeth Luther, daughter of Samuel Luther, the latter born Aug. 24, 1788. Mr. Peck resided in the town of Warren, R. I. To this marriage came the following children: Samuel L., born Dec. 17, 1845; James C., born Jan. 29, 1850; and a daughter, born Feb. 22, 1857, who died in infancy. Mrs. Elizabeth (Luther) Peck was descended from

(I) Capt. John Luther, whose two children were: Samuel, born in Yocumtown, in 1638; and Hezekiah, born in 1640. In 1635 two Dutch vessels arrived in Boston bringing a number of Flemish mares, cattle, and some passengers, among whom was John Luther. He was a native of Germany and a direct descendant of the mother of the great Martin Luther. In 1637 he became associated with Elizabeth Poole's Company in the purchase of Taunton, Mass. In 1644 a charter was granted to certain merchants of Boston authorizing them to trade with a colony of Dutch and Swedes on Delaware bay. John Luther was sent as captain of the ship and interpreter, while William Aspinwall went to prosecute the trade. A few years after, 1658, he joined with Samuel Millitt and others in the purchase of Attleboro, Mass., but he soon sold out his interest to Boston parties, and in 1667 joined with Millitt and others in the purchase of Swansea, Mass., where he took up his permanent residence. He was captain of the Swansea militia in 1682.

(II) Samuel Luther, son of Capt. John by his wife Mary, had the following children: Samuel, born Oct. 25, 1663; Theophilus, born Oct. 9, 1665; Mary, born July 20, 1668; Joshua, born Nov. 25, 1670; Elizabeth, born Feb. 2, 1672; Experience, born March 3, 1674; Mehetable, born Aug. 26, 1676; Ebenezer, born Dec. 27, 1678; Martha, born Dec. 9, 1681; Susanna; and Joanna.

(III) Samuel Luther (2), son of Samuel, married Sarah (Chaffee), and they had children, all born in Swansea: Samuel, born Nov. 20, 1689; Caleb, born in 1692, who married Mary Cole; James, born March 8, 1693; Benjamin; Consider; Elizabeth, born June 22, 1702; Eleazer, born Feb. 28, 1704; Jabez; and Sarah, born Dec. 25, 1707. Samuel Luther (2) went in the expedition against Quebec in 1690 under Phipps.

(IV) Caleb Luther, son of Samuel (2), was town clerk of Swansea from 1736 to 1745. On March 18, 1713, he married Mary Cole, also of Swansea, and they had seven children: Freeloove, born Jan. 15, 1715; Susannah, born Aug. 20, 1717; Hannah, born Sept. 22, 1720; Caleb, born April 22, 1723; Jabez, born July 8, 1725; Samuel, born in 1727; and Frederick, born Feb. 15, 1730, who married Joanna Luther.

(V) Frederick and Joanna (Luther) Luther were married in Swansea, Feb. 16, 1751. They had eight children, five born in Swansea, and the other three in Warren, R. I.: Freeloove, born Sept. 26, 1752; Lydia, July 31, 1754; Hannah, Dec. 10, 1756; Sarah, Dec. 7, 1758; Martin, April 19, 1761; Frederick, June 8, 1763; Rebecca, April 17, 1765; and Samuel, born April 11, 1768.

(VI) Martin Luther, son of Frederick, married July 9, 1785, Rachel, daughter of Daniel and Amey (Bowen) Cole, and they had children: Polly, born Nov. 30, 1786; Samuel, Aug. 24, 1788; Nancy, May 25, 1791; Hannah, May 6, 1793; Jeremiah, March 2, 1796; Amey, Feb. 24, 1799; Martin, April 21, 1802; Alfred, March 20, 1805; Ellery Spencer, Dec. 16, 1808; and Elizabeth, Jan. 29, 1811 (married Benjamin Miller Bosworth). In 1797 Martin Luther built the house on Birch Swamp road, Wind Mill Hill, which is now occupied by his descendants. He was a Revolutionary soldier.

(VII) Samuel Luther, son of Martin, born Aug. 24, 1788, married July 7, 1811, Elizabeth

Peck, of Swansea. Their children were: Sophrona, born June 14, 1812, and Elizabeth, born Sept. 8, 1818.

(VIII) Samuel Luther Peck, born Dec. 17, 1845, in Warren, R. I., married June 23, 1870, Esther Alice Gardner, and to them came one child, a son, Howard Gardner, who died when in the fourth year of his age.

Mr. Peck attended the public and high schools of his native town, then fitted himself for business at the Commercial College of Bryant, Stratton & Mason. In 1864 he began his business career as a clerk in the establishment of Charles E. Boon & Co., in which capacity for that house he remained until 1869. From 1869 to 1872 he was bookkeeper for the mercantile house of Messrs. B. B. & R. Knight, and from 1872 to 1874 he was salesman for Messrs. Butts & Mason. In 1874 he became a member of the firm of Mason, Chopin & Co., importers, jobbers and commission merchants in chemicals, drugs and dye-stuffs, Providence, New York and Boston. Mr. Peck retired from this firm at the end of 1895, and for three years thereafter was a member of the firm of Arnold, Peck & Co., wholesale chemicals and dye-stuffs, on Dec. 31, 1898, retiring from this firm and from business altogether.

Mr. Peck, though engaged in business in Providence, has kept his residence in his native town, Warren, where he has taken an active part in citizenship and public affairs, figuring prominently in both. His political affiliations have been with the Republican party, in the councils of which he has been a leader. He served for three years as assessor of taxes for the town and has for eleven times represented it in the General Assembly of Rhode Island. In the House Mr. Peck was appointed a member of the Finance committee, and he continued in such position for eight years and was its chairman for three years. He was also ex-officio chairman of the joint Finance committee of the House and Senate when in session. After eight consecutive years as member of the Assembly he was defeated, and on his re-election, in 1903, was appointed on the committee on Judiciary, which position he now holds. Mr. Peck's record of eight consecutive years' service in the Lower House is equalled at present by only one member, a Mr. T. E. Holden, who was chairman of the State Republican Central Committee. Mr. Peck was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in Chicago, in June, 1904, and an alternate delegate to Philadelphia in 1900. In 1904 he was the Rhode Island member of the committee, chosen by the convention at large, to notify the vice-presidential nominee, Charles W. Fairbanks, of his nomination. Mr. Peck was the first chairman of the Standing Committee of the George Hail Free Library, of Warren.

Mr. Peck's religious connections are with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Warren, and for ten years he served the Sunday-school of that church as its superintendent. He is identified with a number of clubs and societies, among which are the Union Club and Rhode Island Yacht Club. He is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, holding membership with Washington Lodge, No. 3, of which he has been master. He has been vice-president of the New England Paint and Oil Club. He was vice-president of the Hope National Bank at Warren and was president of the Warren Institution for Savings, succeeding John Waterman, and he was a director and member of the Investment committee of the Warren Trust Company, and a director in the First National Bank, and is now one of the local board of directors of the Warren Branch of the Industrial Trust Company. He is a member of the Providence Board of Trade.

Mr. Peck has been a great traveler, and has visited up to the present time eighteen different foreign countries, and, as he expresses it, he is "not through yet." He is a man of pleasant and agreeable manners, is thoughtful and deliberate in conversation, conservative and careful in his business, and yet progressive. He is an up-to-date man of the twentieth century type. Starting as Mr. Peck did, empty-handed and without influence, he furnishes to the youth of to-day a splendid example of what industry and honesty, combined with a fixed purpose and high aims, can accomplish.

GEORGE BRADFORD DRAPER, secretary and general manager of the J. O. Draper Company, who is prominent in business and fraternal circles of Pawtucket, R. I., is a member of one of the old and honored families of Rhode Island, being a descendant in the seventh generation from James Draper, the immigrant progenitor.

(I) James Draper, fourth son and child of Thomas Draper, of the Priory of Heptonstall, Vicarage of Halifax, Yorkshire, England, born in 1618 in Heptonstall, married there April 21, 1646, Miriam, born Nov. 27, 1625, at the same place, daughter of Gideon and Grace (Eastwood) Stansfield, she of Wadsworth, Yorkshire. Mr. Draper came to New England and settled at Roxbury, his first place of residence. For a time he lived at Dedham, but again returned to Roxbury, where he and his wife were buried. He was also for a time in Charlestown. His death occurred July 9, 1694, and his widow, Miriam, passed away in January, 1697. Their children were: Miriam, born Feb. 7, 1646-7, in Heptonstall, England; Susanna, about 1650; Sarah, in 1652; James, in 1654 (all in Roxbury); John, April 29, 1656; Moses, Sept. 26, 1663; Daniel, May 30, 1665 (all in Dedham); Patience, Aug. 17, 1668; and Jonathan, March 10, 1670 (both in Roxbury.)

(II) James Draper (2), son of James, born in 1654, in Roxbury, Mass., married Feb. 18, 1681, Abigail, born June 7, 1663, in Roxbury, and died there Oct. 25, 1721, daughter of Nathaniel and Hannah (Dwight) Whiting of Dedham, and granddaughter of John Dwight, from whom President Dwight of Yale and other prominent men are descended. Mr. Draper had received from his father a part of the latter's Roxbury farm, which, however, he subsequently sold. He then bought the estate below Baker street, where he, and after his death, his widow, kept an ordinary. Mr. Draper was a soldier during King Philip's war in 1675. He died in the prime of life, and he and his widow were buried in the First Parish cemetery at Dedham, Mass. Their children were: Abigail, born Dec. 29, 1681; Nathaniel, April 2, 1684; William, May 15, 1686; Eunice, June 5, 1689; James, in 1691; Gideon, in 1694; Ebenezer, April 27, 1698, all in Roxbury.

(III) Ebenezer Draper, son of James (2), born April 27, 1698, in Roxbury, died June 3, 1784, in Attleboro, Mass. He married (first) May 2, 1723, Dorothy, born May 25, 1701, and died Aug. 2, 1748, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Morris) Child, of Brookfield, Mass. He married (second) Nov. 16, 1749, Sibyl, born Jan. 3, 1720, and died Feb. 16, 1816, daughter of William and Esther Avery, of Dedham, Mass. Mr. Draper and his first wife were admitted to full communion at the first church in Roxbury, Jan. 26, 1724. He was dismissed to the church in Dedham, Nov. 14, 1734. He was a farmer by occupation, and after leaving his wife's home at Roxbury pursued his subsequent life at the family place, Green Lodge, near Dedham. His children were: Dorothy, born Feb. 1, 1724; Anna, May 16, 1725; Keziah, Sept. 25, 1726; Ebenezer, March 23, 1729; Anna (2), Sept. 12, 1731; Prudence, April 13, 1734; Isaac, July 27, 1736; Miriam, March 26, 1739; Stephen, Feb. 23, 1742, all to the first marriage; Sibyl, Sept. 21, 1750; Rebecca, Sept. 17, 1751; William, Sept. 23, 1752; Rebecca (2), Aug. 19, 1754; Jemima, Nov. 7, 1756; Mary, April 5, 1760; Catherine, Dec. 16, 1761; and Anna (3), June 15, 1764.

(IV) Stephen Draper, son of Ebenezer, born Feb. 23, 1742, at Green Lodge, near Dedham, married April 4, 1764, Elizabeth, born Sept. 11, 1740, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Fisher) of Dedham, Mass. Mr. Draper went from Dedham to Attleboro, and purchased land upon which he built his house and tannery, the date of the deed of purchase being April 17, 1772. His tannery was one of the largest in the country, and he was very successful in his business, that of building other tanneries in Connecticut and Rhode Island. He also wove cloth and had nail machinery. He was a man of uncommon energy and integrity, and was a very straight-laced Puritan. The home that he built is still occupied by his descendants, although the house was taken down and another built on its site in 1885; and to this day through all the years the family have met there to celebrate Thanksgiving in large numbers. The children born to Stephen and Elizabeth Draper were: Fisher, born March 29, 1765; Paul, Sept. 19, 1767; Anna, July 11, 1770; Betty, Dec. 31, 1772; Stephen, April 29, 1775; Mary, Aug. 11, 1777; Catherine, Jan. 14, 1780; Joseph, July 24, 1782; Ebenezer, Jan. 14, 1784; and Miriam, Dec. 31, 1790.

(V) Ebenezer Draper (2), son of Stephen, born Jan. 14, 1784, married Beulah, born Jan. 20, 1790, daughter of Joel and Alsey (Mosier) Bradford, of Smithfield, R. I. Mr. Draper died May 23, 1852, and his wife Sept. 20, 1868, in Attleboro, Mass. Their children, all born in Attleboro, were: Alsey Almenia, born Oct. 6, 1807, died April 25, 1821; Joseph, born Oct. 25, 1808, married Lucilda Makepeace; Arnold, born April 27, 1810, died at Salem, April 7, 1860; Paul, born Dec. 31, 1811; William Henry, born April 17, 1813; Cornelia, born Oct. 9, 1816; James Otis, born June 29, 1818; Celia Augusta, born Aug. 13, 1820; Louisa, born July 22, 1822, became Mrs. Cushman; Charles Francis, born Nov. 6, 1824, died March 6, 1839; Elizabeth, born April 9, 1826, died May 16, 1826; Lydia Ann, born Sept. 22, 1827; Gamaliel Bradford, born May 16, 1831, never married; and Hannah Maria, born Sept. 4, 1833.

(VI) James Otis Draper, son of Ebenezer (2), born June 29, 1818, in Attleboro, Mass., married there Nov. 18, 1840, Mary G., daughter of Galen C. and Mary (George) Carpenter. She was born Nov. 18, 1817, at Wrentham, Mass., and died in Central Falls, R. I., April 10, 1866. He married (second) May 1, 1867, Emeline Babbitt, of Taunton, who died Dec. 1, 1875. He married (third) Mrs. Belinda (Salla) Mowry, daughter of Alfred Salla and Prudence A. Alexander.
