

A BACHELOR'S DILEMMA.—Bachelors are styled by married men who have put their foot into it, as only half-perfected beings, cheerless vagabonds, but half a pair of scissors, and many other titles are given them; while, on the other hand, they extol their state as one of perfect bliss, that a change from the earth to heaven would be somewhat of doubtful good. If they are so happy, why don't they enjoy their happiness and hold their tongues about it? What do half the men get married for? Simply that they may have some one to darn their stockings, sew their buttons on their shirts, and trot their babies; that they may have somebody, as a married man once said, "to pull off their boots when they are a little balmey." These fellows are always talking of the loneliness of bachelors. Loneliness, indeed! Who is pelted to death by ladies who have daughters? invited to tea and evening parties, and told to drop in just when it is convenient? The bachelor. Who lives in clover all his days, and when he dies has flowers strewn on his grave by the girls who couldn't entrap him? The bachelor. Who strews flowers on the married man's grave! his widow? Not a bit of it; she pulls down the tombstone that a six weeks' grief has set up in her heart, and goes and gets married again—she does. Who goes to bed early because time hangs heavily on his hands? The married man. Who has wood to split, house-hunting and marketing to do, the young ones to wash, and the lazy servants to look after? The married man. Who is taken up for whipping his wife? The married man. Who gets divorced? The married man. Finally who has the Scripture on his side? The bachelor. St. Paul knew what he was talking about when he said, "He that marries does well; but he that marries not does better."

One of the unhappy fraternity, a bachelor editor, has lately married a pretty girl, and talks as follows of his bliss: "A pair of sweet lips, a pressure of two delicate hands, and a pink waist ribbon, will do as much to unhinge a man as three fevers, the measles, a large sized whooping-cough, a pair of lockjaws, several hydrophobias, and the doctor's bill."

Printers sometimes make some ludicrous blunders. In a piece of manuscript handed to the "devil" to "set," in a Western office, there occurred the following phrase: "There stood the martyr with his sheet of fire." The editor was astonished in looking over his next issue, at the following: "There stood the martyr with his shirt on fire."
