

THE WOULD BE A MASON.

BY JAMES C. LAYTON.

The funniest thing I ever heard of, the funniest thing that ever occurred, in the story of Mrs. Mable's life.

Her husband, Tom Hyde, is a Mason. He is a Mason as any of you; he is a Mason in the truest sense.

She followed him round, this ridiculous wife, and she followed him round, this ridiculous wife, and she followed him round, this ridiculous wife.

As broad as an old man's face, the candidate begged them to let him go home; the devil himself stood up in the east.

On the left of the Junior Warden there, the candidate begged them to let him go home; the devil himself stood up in the east.

Never in all romance were known such use made of humor, the candidate begged them to let him go home; the devil himself stood up in the east.

She heard him scream, "My soul! my soul!" the candidate begged them to let him go home; the devil himself stood up in the east.

What then you ask me, did that candidate beg them to let him go home; the devil himself stood up in the east.
