Honorary Degree Doctor of Humanities

James McGill Buchanan

For four decades Nobel laureate James McGill Buchanan has shared his perspectives on society and economics with students in universities throughout the world. Born in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, in 1919, Dr. Buchanan graduated from Middle Tennessee State College in 1940 with a bachelor of science degree in mathematics, English literature, and social science and from the University of Tennessee in 1941 with a master of arts degree in economics. He earned a doctorate in economics from the University of Chicago in 1948. In that same year Dr. Buchanan began a long and distinguished career in education as an associate professor at the University of Tennessee.

Besides holding professorships at Florida State University, the University of Virginia, the University of California at Los Angeles, the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, and the London School of Economics and Cambridge University, Dr. Buchanan served as chairman of the Departments of Economics at Florida State University and the University of Virginia. Since 1983 he has been Holbert L. Harris University Professor and general director of the Center for Study of Public Choice at George Mason University.

In 1986 Dr. Buchanan was awarded the Nobel Prize in Economic Science for his pioneering development of new methods for analyzing economic and political decision making. Credited as "the father of the public choice theory," he makes the case for constitutional limits on the domain of government, an intellectual heritage rooted in the philosophies of Madison, Jefferson, and the Founding Fathers.

Dr. Buchanan has written or co-written more than twenty books focusing on economic and social philosophy and has been a contributing author to more than one hundred fifty books dealing with economic and political theory; his books have been translated into several languages.

Among Dr. Buchanan's honors have been the Frank E. Seidman Distinguished Award in Political Economy, the Certificate of Honor from the Freedom Foundation, the Distinguished Service Award from the Virginia Social Science Association, and the Prize in Law and Economics from the University of Miami's Law School for his book The Limits of Liberty. The University of Zurich, Switzerland, and the University of Giessen, West Germany, have given him honorary degrees.

Organizations throughout the world seek Dr. Buchanan's counsel, including the Reason Foundation, the Scientific Council of Vienna, Austria's Carl Menger Foundation, Scotland's David Hume Institute, the Pacific Institute for Public Policy Research, the National Academic Advisory Board of the University of Miami's Law and Economics Center, Washington D.C.'s Commission for Competitive Currency, the International Center for Economic Policy Studies, and the Hoover Institution's Domestic Studies Program.

Graduation with Academic Honors

Baccalaureate degree recipients with outstanding scholastic records are graduated with Academic Honors. Exceptional students with cumulative ratios of 3.9 or better (where A = 4.0) are graduated summa cum laude. If the scholastic ratio is at least 3.8 but less than 3.9 the degree is granted magna cum laude. Persons with cumulative scholastic ratios of at least 3.6 but less than 3.8 graduate cum laude. The scholastic ratios are calculated for all work taken at Ball State University and for work transferred from other institutions of higher learning. Since the academic honors are computed before all grades are submitted, those whose final records raise them into graduation with academic honors, or into a higher category, will ultimately be so designated on their diplomas and transcripts. If the grades fall below academic honors, however, the honors designations will be altered downward or removed.

Honors College Graduates

Now in its third decade of service to Ball State University students, the Honors College is dedicated to providing special educational opportunities for undergraduates who show promise of high academic achievement. Entering freshmen are invited to enroll in the Honors College on the basis of SAT scores, high school grades and class rank, personal references, and academic background. Students who are not invited to enroll as high school seniors may qualify for admission once they have established a university grade-point average of at least 3.25. In addition to their major and minor concentrations, Honors College students complete a required core curriculum that includes symposia in science and social science, a year-long humanities course, honors colloquia, and a senior honors thesis. Students must also present a final grade-point average of not less than 3.25 in all of their university courses.

Academic Attire

As early as the twelfth century the first modern universities, at Bologna and Paris, were the centers of European learning. The usual garb of the time, for both churchmen and laymen, was a long gown—necessary for warmth in the unheated buildings of the day. Scholars, generally members of church orders, wore such robes, as well as hoods to protect their shaved heads. Later, skull caps were worn on the head, and the hood became a cape that could be pulled over the head in unpleasant weather. The hood was also sometimes used to collect alms from the more affluent members of the community. As more universities were founded, distinctive forms of the gown and hood were adopted by their faculties. Variations indicated various ranks within the institutions. Strict rules were published, and sometimes tailors who departed from the authorized design were punished.

The academic hat was a later development adapted from the headdress of the ordinary people. Academically it was originally worn as a symbol of the master's degree and existed in various forms: some were round, some square, and some had a tuft in the center. The flat, square "mortar board" of today originated in Oxford.

Academic costume came to America in 1754 with the founding of King's College, now Columbia University. Styles became quite varied, as they were in Europe, but in 1895 a group of American college and university representatives met to establish a uniform system of academic apparel for this country. This system led to the establishment in 1902 of an "Intercollegiate Code of Academic Costume." The American Council on Education formed a committee in 1932 to review the 1895 code, and it was again reviewed and revised in 1960.

There are today three basic types of gowns and hoods. The bachelor's gown has pointed sleeves and is designed to be worn closed. The master's gown is designed with an oblong sleeve, open at the wrist, with an arc cut away at the front of the sleeve. It may be worn either open or closed. The doctoral gown is a full design with voluminous sleeves, and it also may be worn open or closed. Unlike the other two, the doctoral gown is faced down the front with velvet and has three velvet bars on the sleeves. These may be black or of a color related to the subject of the degree. Thus, arts, letters, and humanities may use white, business degrees may be drab or sapphire blue, education uses light blue, fine arts and architecture are brown, music is pink, nursing is apricot, and science is golden yellow.

The caps are always black, with a black tassel for baccalaureate degrees and a tassel of the color indicated above for master's degrees. Doctoral caps usually have a tassel of metallic gold color.

Exceptions to the above are the recipients of associate (two-year) degrees, who wear gowns designed like the bachelor's gown but gray in color, the members of the University Board of Trustees, who wear scarlet doctoral gowns trimmed in black, and certain faculty members who wear distinctive gowns indicating degrees awarded by foreign universities.

The hoods worn by those who hold the master's degree are lined with the official color of the institution awarding the degree. The binding or edging of the hood is of silk or velvet in the color pertaining to the subject area. Doctoral hoods are longer and somewhat fuller, but the colors of the lining again are those of the institution granting the degree, and the wide edging bears the color of the subject. There exists a small bachelor's hood, but it is generally not used in this country.

The Mace and Medallion

The university mace was created by Patricia A. Nelson, Ball State University associate professor of art. The mace was cast and constructed of sterling silver, parcel gilt, enamel, and wood; its design was inspired by some of the architectural elements of the older campus buildings. It consists of about fifty separate units, fastened together by about thirty sterling silver rivets and screws; it may be broken down for repairs or cleaning into about ten major components.

Originally the mace was a weapon made from metals capable of penetrating the strongest armor of an opponent. The earliest ceremonial maces were used to protect kings and were carried by royal bodyguards or sergeants-at-arms. By the fourteenth century the maces were decorated, and silver maces were common in Exeter by 1387. In this country today, the most common use of maces is in academic processions.

The mace, along with the presidential medallion—also the work of Patricia A. Nelson—with which it shares elements of design, are on display in Bracken Library when they are not in use.
